That authority is hereby conferred upon the head of each department and establishment acting on behalf of the Government of the United States to consider, ascertain, adjust, and determine any claim accruing after April 6, 1917, on account of damages to or loss of privately owned property where the amount of the claim does not exceed $1,000, caused by the negligence of any officer or employee of the Government acting within the scope of his employment. Such amount as may be found to be due to any claimant shall be certified to Congress as a legal claim for payment out of appropriations that may be made by Congress therefor.

These claims come under those two laws. The purpose of enacting the law was to prevent any of these small claims being brought before Congress and Congress having to act upon them. The department is authorized now to act upon them and report to Congress, and Congress then appropriates for the payment of the claim.

Mr. KING. The Senator sees what the amendment means. We select this department and possibly the War Department, although I am not sure of that, and we say that if a tort is committed by some officer of the Navy and a claim results against the Government, then the Navy Department is authorized to make payment for the tort up to a certain amount.

Mr. HALE. Up to a small amount.

Mr. KING. And beyond that amount they are to make an investigation and make recommendations, and that constitutes a legal claim against the Government.

Mr. WARREN. There has to be an investigation in any case by a regular board, no matter how small the amount of the claim.

Mr. KING. If a tort is committed by some official of the Department of the Interior or the Post Office Department or any other department of the Government, the claimant or person injured may not have his claim adjusted in the same way. He has to bring sult against the Government, if the statute permits it, or, in default of suit, present his claim to Congress, and it is referred to the appropriate committee and handled in the usual way.

Mr. HALE. I think the Senator was here when the laws were enacted. This is merely following out the provisions of Mr. KING. I merely said that the law is discriminatory, and it seems to me manifestly unwise.

Mr. HALE. If that is so, some steps should be taken to have the law repealed.

Mr. KING. I agree with the Senator, and I think the law ought to be repealed if it is as the Senator states.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WARREN. We have to rely upon the investigations, after they have taken place, because we have no means of going back of them. But the reports show the cases were very careline 14, after the numerals "550," to insert "and Senate Document No. 316," and at the end of line 15 to strike out "$4,400.52" and insert "$25,195.15," so as to make the paragraph read:

Damage claims: To pay claims for damages to or losses of privately owned property adjusted and determined by the Navy Department under the provisions of the act approved December 28, 1922 (Public, No. 375, 67th Cong.), as fully set forth in House Document No. 550 and Senate Document No. 316, reported to Congress at its present session, $25, 195.15.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 42, line 23, after the numerals "580," to strike out "$16,940.61" and insert "and Senate Document No. 323, $27,336.30," so as to make the paragraph read:

To pay the claims adjusted and determined by the Navy Department under the provisions of the act approved June 24, 1910, as amended by the act approved December 28, 1922 (Public No. 374, 67th Cong.), on account of damages for which naval vessels were found to be responsible, certified to the present Congress in House Document No. 580 and Senate Document No. 323, $27,336.30.

The amendment was agreed to,

The next amendment was, under the head "Post Office Department," at the top of page 47, to insert:

Reimbursement to postal employees: For reimbursement to Postal Service employees on account of fines improperly levied by local authorities for carrying arms while engaged in Postal Service duty, and for refunds of amounts collected for loss of firearms in excess of War Department value, fiscal year 1923, $1,000.

The reading of the bill was continued to page 43, line 10, the last paragraph read being as follows:

For making such changes as may be permissible under the terms of the treaty providing for the limitation of naval armament, concluded on February 6, 1922, published in Senate Document No. 126 of the Sixty-seventh Congress, second session, in the turret guns of the battleships Florida, Utah. Arkansas, Wyoming, Pennsylvania, Arizona, Oklahoma, Nevada, New York, Texas, Mississippi, Idaho, and New Mexico as will increase the range of the turret guns of such battleships, to remain available until December 31, 1924, $6,500,000.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, in connection with the item just read, I desire to have read at the desk an article by Rear Admiral Fullam, which is illuminating and instructive and deals with an important feature of our Navy.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the article will be read as requested.

The reading clerk read as follows:

[From the Washington Times, Saturday, February 10, 1923.]

United States Needs Planes and Subs, Says Fullam—Advocates Strong Navy—Day of Dreadnaughts Almost Gone, Writes Rear Admiral—Cites World War.

[By Rear Admiral W. F. Fullam, U. S. N., retired, one of the foremost naval authorities.]

In the following exclusive article for the Washington Times, Rear Admiral W. F. Fullam, U. S. N., retired, criticizes Secretary of the Navy Denby's request for $6,500,000 to modernize some of the old naval vessels, pointing out that it would be far wiser to spend the money for airplanes and submarines:

The proposition to expend $30,000,000 or more to increase the gun range and to improve the above-water and under-water protection of our present battleships in order that they may the better resist torpedoes, mines, and bombs, presents many interesting and serious problems. This policy should not be approved until it is thoroughly analyzed and its soundness demonstrated beyond question. Let us briefly examine it. FUTILITY OF PATCHING,

In the first place, the plan to spend so much money on the ships that have been declared to be the "backbone" of our Navy is tantamount to an admission of the following facts:

1. That the dreadnaught is very vulnerable to air and submarine

2. That the airplane used in controlling gunfire has increased the practicable range of big guns.

3. That the upper decks are too week to resist heavy bombs and the plunging fire of heavy guns.

4. That the under-water hull can not at present resist modern torpedoes, heavy mines, and heavy bombs that explode as depth bombs below water.

water.

5. That these weaknesses in the dreadnaught force us to the unfortunate expedients of loading the ships down with more deck armor and adding "blisters" and "bulges" under water, as a protection for the ship's hull.

6. As a result of these changes the ships will sink deeper in the water and their speed will be reduced by the defensive projecting "blisters" attached below the water line.

BATTLESHIP'S WEAKNESSES.

All these weaknesses in the dreadnaught have been known for years. Attention has been called to them repeatedly by progressive officers at home and abroad. It was demonstrated in testimony before the Naval Committees of Congress two years ago and verified by the bombing of the German ships, that the dreadnaught as now designed is so weak that its years, if not its days, are numbered. That submarines and mines in the World War had circumscribed the battleship's usefulness and that air forces, as recently developed, had jeopardized its very existence.

Despite these powerful arraignments, the political and official forces that backed the 1916 building program turned a deaf ear, pooh-poohed submarines and air forces, and would have pushed the battleships and battle cruisers to completion had it not been, most fortunately, for the decrees of the Washington conference that happily stopped the battleship race.

It is not enough to say that some of these ships, had they been completed, would have been provided with these new offensive and defensive features. The best naval minds in the world to-day are of the opinion that, before these ships are patched up, and before the new British dreadnoughts can be built, the power of the torpedo, the mine, the bomb, and the attacking skill of the submarine and airplane will be so increased as to wreck the new construction as it has the old model. The attack will again overpower the defense.

No sooner had the Washington conference adjourned than we began to hear the meanings and groanings and calamity predictions of the 1916 six-year-old out-of-date building-program advocates. They were silenced, within limits, by the fact that the present administration very properly considers the treatles to be both righteous and wise.

But their conservative behind-the-times mental processes which blind them to the inevitable future domination of air and submarine forces in naval warfare still act to shackle their minds. It may be said, therefore, that this project to attempt to patch up our battleships is a value effort to resuscitate the defunct 1916 program by some kind of naval blood transfusion.

To be sure there has been some gain in the discussion. Conservative minds have been forced, against their will, to admit the value of submarine and air forces. The Navy Department and Secretary Hughes also have stressed our need of seagoing, long-range submarines, light cruisers, airplane carriers, and airplanes. This is most fortunate, for the Navy is sadly in need of these types. Without them the Navy, even with a hundred battleships, would be powerless. It would be a weak Navy.

The writer believes in a strong Navy. The United States must have with a hundred battleships, would be powerless. It would be a weak Navy.

The writer believes in a strong Navy. The United States must have a strong Navy. But what is a strong Navy? That is the question. Patching up the slow-moving ice-wagon elements will not make it strong. We do not make it strong by first making it weaker. We must keep the battleships we now have, but we must add the new weapons that we now lack—swift, powerful, deadly weapons that have put the dreadnought between two such dangerous fires that its proponents now propose to roof it over and armor its bottom.

The fact that England may pursue this patching policy is no reason for our doing so. We must lead, not follow, in naval development. Admiral Sir Percy Scott once said that Sir John Fisher led the German admiralty, previous to the World War, into a vain and foolish battleship race, and that this blind blunder by the Germans won the war for the Allies. And this fact is admitted to-day.

Germans was the to-day.

Had Germany refused to enter the dreadnought race and developed and built a large submarine fleet, as well as a powerful air force in 1910 to 1914, she would have won the war hands down, despite the battleship fleets of England, France, Italy, Japan, and the United States. Suppose Germany had had 100 submarines and of 30 in 1914?

1910 to 1914, she would have won the very large, Japan, and the United battleship fleets of England, France, Italy, Japan, and the United States. Suppose Germany had had 100 submarines instead of 30 in 1914?

Ask Jellicoe and Sims what they think about it. Remember the first statement Jellicoe made to Sims in the spring of 1917, when Sims reached London; "We can not go on like this much longer."

The United States must not be led by the nose as stupidly as was Germany, and with the same result—to lose the next war. We must think and act for ourselves—and we must think and act right. We must look ahead, not back.

There is one more important point—the financial. Will Congress and the people give us more millions to put patches on weak battle-ships and at the same time give us the millions we really need for cruisers, submarines, and air forces? Will they do both? If not, which will they most likely do? Will they readily agree to spend money on the dying naval gladiators of the past, or will they prefer to add to the modern and powerful elements of a 1923 fighting Navy?

We may perhaps add 3 or 4 miles to the range of the battle-ship guns, making it 15 miles, or we may develop the airplane carrier, whose gun, the airplane, will have a range of 100 miles, four times as great as the 16-inch gun. And the carrier can have a speed from 5 to 10 miles greater than the patched battleships. Which?

The reading of the bill was continued.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, at the top of page 47, to insert the following:

Reimbursement to postal employees: For reimbursement to Postal Service employees on account of fines improperly levied by local authorities for carrying arms while engaged on Postal Service duty and for refunds of amounts collected for loss of firearms in excess of War Department value, fiscal year 1923, $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 47, at the end of line 19, to strike out "$1,250,000" and insert "$1,500,000," so as to make the paragraph read:

For temporary and auxiliary clerk hire and for substitute clerk hire for clerks and employees absent with pay at first and second class post offices and temporary and auxiliary clerk hire at summer and winter resort post offices, fiscal year 1923, $1,500,000.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to inquire of the Senator with respect to the items under the head of Postal Service, on page 47: First, the item of $50,682.24; secondly, the item for $2,000,000; and third, the item just read by the Secretary, of $1,500,000, being an increase of a quarter of a million dollars over the appropriation allowed by the other House; then the next item for $75,000; and the next amendment offered by the committee, : mounting to $300,000. We have made appropriations, as the Senator knows, in the general appropriation bill for the Post Office Department.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, it is not astonishing to me that the Senator from Utah should make the inquiry, because the committee was also astonished to the extent that it required a great deal of proof to induce us to insert these amendments. It was, however, found to be strictly necessary.

The fact is that the postal business has increased more than 14 per cent since we made our appropriations for these purposes. That business is increasing right along to that extent. Many articles which were formerly sent from one section to another by private transportation companies are now sent under postage stamps. That increases greatly the work of the Post Office Department, but the earnings of the Post Office Department are, of course, correspondingly increased.

It is always necessary to have auxiliary clerks for certain post offices. Take a post office, for example, at watering places in the summer, where there is practically no business in the winter,

We must enlarge the service there. We must also provide additional compensation for transportation and other matters. I will ask that the telegram which I send to the Secretary's desk be read, it being merely one telegram out of thousands which are sent in from postmasters all over the country. The declaration of the Postmaster General was that in the month of June employees would have to be suspended for one-half of the month unless we make this appropriation. The telegram which I send to the desk is from the postmaster at Los Angeles, Calif.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read as requested. The reading clerk read as follows:

Los Angeles, Calif., February 27, 1923.

FIRST ASSISTANT POSTMASTER GENERAL, Washington, D. C .:

Conditions this morning at 8 a. m. such that immediate action should be taken for additional help. There were on hand 30,000 city letters, 20,000 outgoing letters, 200 sacks outgoing papers, 150 sacks city papers. All regular clerks working nine hours daily; substitutes working only five hours; this necessary, as auxiliary allowance expended; carriers curtailing delivery, and in many cases parcels can not be delivered day received.

O'BRIEN, Postmaster.

Mr. WARREN. The condition stated in the telegram seems to be general over the country. Business is increasing in almost every post office in the United States. The expenses are increasing and the receipts of the offices are correspondingly increasing. The Post Office Department is a tremendous concern; in fact, it is the greatest business concern we have to provide for unless, perhaps, it be the Shipping Board.

Mr. KING. May I inquire of the Senator as to the first item providing $50,682.24 for compensation for postmasters. As I understand, the compensation of postmasters was fixed by law. Is this appropriation to pay for the salaries of postmasters

Mr. WARREN. The Senator from Utah, we will say, is a postmaster at some town. So long as he can put in 12 or 15 hours a day and get the work done, it is all right; but when business increases he must temporarily have some help which perhaps can not be provided under the ordinary appropriation providing for the compensation of clerks. Of course, this is nothing new, but is as old as the Post Office Department itself.

Mr. KING. But this appropriation is for compensation of postmasters, not for additional or auxiliary help, to use the expression employed by the bill.

Mr. WARREN. So far as that is concerned, almost every day there comes to the Senate for confirmation the names of postmasters in presidential post offices which had heretofore been of a lower class. It is assumed, of course, that when the offices are raised to a presidential grade the postmasters get the pay of such grade, and where their salaries had previously been a few hundred dollars they may receive $1,000 or some such sum per annum, perhaps.

Mr. KING. Is it the Senator's view, from the testimony which was taken before his committee, that the compensation for postmasters provided for in this item is because of the transfer from the lower to the higher grades?

Mr. WARREN. That is true to some extent, but the appropriations also cover new post offices.

Mr. McKELLAR. If I may ask a question, I desire to say that I notice the appropriation is for the fiscal year 1922. Is that back pay which the Government owes these postmasters?

Mr. WARREN. The Post Office Department has business almost all over the world, and its accounts often come in late.

Mr. McKELLAR. But this is to pay postmasters themselves and could not be used for any other purposes.

Mr. WARREN. Very well. If the Senator from Tennessee were a postmaster and he had not received compensation, he would want to receive his compensation later, would he not?

Mr. McKELLAR. The remarkable thing about it is that we did not appropriate a sufficient sum to pay the salaries of postmasters at the time the general appropriation bill was passed.

Mr. WARREN. We have been economizing on appropriations for the Post Office Department as closely as we could, and wherever we could cut we have cut. The consequence is that in the case of a great establishment, such as the Post Office Department, which is growing all the time, we are required to fall back on deficiency appropriations.

Mr. McKELLAR. Were all these items passed on by the Parkett Pursent.

Budget Bureau?

Mr. WARREN. Every one of them.

Mr. McKELLAR. Every item in this bill?

Mr. WARREN. Every item in the bill.

Mr. McKELLAR. The item providing for postmasters seems to be quite unusual, because we have previously had deficiency bills containing similar items. This is the third one. We made a general appropriation for the Post Office Department in 1922 for the fiscal year 1923, and have since passed several deficiency bills covering the fiscal year 1923. It is quite remarkable, therefore, that these postmasters have not been paid.

Mr. WARREN. I once had the misfortune to own a building which was rented by the Post Office Department, and I obtained what little rental I received from the Government five years after the Government had ceased to occupy the building.

Mr. McKELLAR. I can understand that, but I can not understand why postmasters who served in 1922 should not get their salaries until now.

Mr. PHIPPS. Mr. President, may I read from the testimony before the House committee in reference to this matter?

Mr. McKELLAR. I hope the Senator will do so. Mr. PHIPPS. I read from the testimony, as follows:

The CHAIRMAN. What is this compensation to postmasters, fiscal year

1922? Mr. BARTLETT, It is a similar item.

That is, similar to one previously discussed.

The CHAIRMAN. Fifty thousand six bundred and eighty-two dollars and twenty-four cents. Did we not give you a deficiency appropriation for that some time ago?

Mr. BARTLETT. You allowed a deficiency of $1,399,598.05, but the additional accounts adjusted by the Comptroller General show further sums due postmasters, amounting to $50,682.24.

The CHAIRMAN. Why is it it takes so long to find out what is due those men?

The CHAIRMAN. Why is it it takes so long to find out what is due these men?

Mr. Bartlett. The original appropriation was found to be insufficient, and, as the accounts are adjusted, the Comptroller General certifies the additional amounts found due.

The CHAIRMAN. Of course, he adjusts them if he gets them?

Mr. Bartlett. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Why does he not get them?

Mr. Bartlett. There are various reasons why we can not secure the rendition of all postmaster accounts promptly. The postmasters, sometimes, at very small offices, desert the offices.

The CHAIRMAN. You mean they go away and do not come back?

Mr. Bartlett. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Then what happens?

Mr. Bartlett. The records of the office eventually reach the central accounting office.

Mr. McKELLAR. It looks to me like a very loose manner of Mr. McKELLAR. It looks to me like a very loose manner of conducting business that the United States Government does not pay its postmasters promptly, but that we have to appropriate one year and a half after their salary was due $50,000 to pay postmasters that should have been paid promptly every month.

I think the Senator would certainly criticize Mr. PHIPPS. the department if they paid out this $50,862 before the Comptroller General had an opportunity to pass upon it.

Mr. McKELLAR. Of course. Mr. PHIPPS. This matter has to be cleaned up every year. We are dealing with very large amounts, and there is a defi-ciency in that particular item, due to the fact, as the Senator knows, because he sits on the Post Office Committee, that we try to shear the appropriations down and to prevent them from becoming extravagant. Mr. Bartlett testified that in one item alone the deficiency of $1,400,000 already appropriated was not sufficient. Fifty thousand dollars is relatively small in proportion. The Senator will recognize that,

Mr. McKELLAR. I do not ever remember of such a thing having occurred before in the Post Office Department. This is the first time I ever knew it to happen.

Mr. WARREN. The pay for post-office employees is $2,000,-000 a week

Mr. KING. Mr. President, may I say in conclusion that the statement just submitted by the able Senator from Colorado shows an appropriation in one deficiency bill quite recently of more than $1,000,000 for one particular branch of the service. I do not know the aggregate amount carried in the two preceding deficiency appropriation bills for the Post Office Department, but I doubt not that all of the items amount to several million dollars. In addition to those large amounts, we have in this bill deficiency appropriations—I have but hastily examined the items—of between $12,000,000 and $13,000,000.

Mr. WARREN. The Senator, I think, hardly realizes how small a percentage even that is to a $600,000,000 expenditure. It costs us to run the Post Office Department nearly $600, 000,000 yearly.

Mr. McKELLAR. I have before me the deficiency bill signed on January 22, 1923, last month, and it provides on page 7:

For compensation to postmasters, fiscal year 1922-

Just the words that the pending item is in-$1,399,508.03.

Mr. PHIPPS. I directed the attention of the Senator to those figures just a moment ago. The item in the pending bill is supplemental to that item of $1,399,000.

Mr. WARREN. The Senator overlooks the fact that the salaries of the low-class post offices are determined by the earnings of the office, and the earnings of the office can not be determined until the result of the business of the office for a given period is known.

Mr. McKELLAR. Missing the correct amount by $1,399, 508.03 and then missing that by $50,000 seems to me to be very poor business management. It does seem to me that the Bureau of the Budget ought to be able to submit in January a statement that would be fairly conclusive for at least a month. It has just been slightly over a month since they sent in here a request for appropriations for $1,399,508.03. It may be that next month we will have an estimate of $50,000 more, and so on.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, the amount is not a guess. The department or the Budget Bureau can not send here a guess of what amount will be required up to a certain time. An estimate for the amounts in the last deficiency bill came in, and that was the amount at that time found to be actually due postmasters. Since then it has been settled-not guessed at, but settled-that there is a further amount due postmasters of $50.682.24. The Senator would not want the Bureau of the Budget to guess at the amount that was to be paid to postmasters?

Mr. McKELLAR. No; they ought to know about it.
Mr. SMOOT. They can not know about it in advance.
Mr. McKELLAR. They ought not to be sending in here requests for deficiency appropriations every month.

Mr. SMOOT. No human being could tell in advance what amount would be required.

Mr. McKELLAR. This is not a good way to legislate; it is not the way to manage; and if the Budget Bureau can not do any better than that I think it had better quit.

Mr. SMOOT. No human being can tell what the total compensation of postmasters is going to be. It depends upon the amount of business done by various little post offices, and the amount can not be guessed at. I should not want the Director of the Bureau of the Budget to make any estimate in the form of a guess, and say, "We guess it will be $50,000," or "We guess it will be a million dollars." Whenever these accounts are finally audited and ascertained, then we appropriate for them, and that has been the policy all the time.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator says the bureau ought not to guess. That is true. But when the Budget sent an original estimate here for the Post Office Department last year they must have guessed at it then, because they then said to the Congress that the amount that they submitted was not a guess but an accurate statement of what amount would be necessary. Now we find that they missed it in January, at any rate, by $1,399,508.03, and even now there is still a further discrepancy of $50,000 for which we have to appropriate.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, those two accounts are quite As to the item which we are discussing now, different items. no human being knew what it would be until the reports had been submitted from the various post offices and a final statement and audit had been made.

The other proposition, of course, is an estimate. This is not an estimate. This is an actual amount that is found to be owing, and we appropriate to the very cent to cover all of it. All of the others are estimates, and, of course, nobody could tell then exactly what it would be down to the cent or the dollar or the hundred dollars, and in some cases not to the million dollars.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I just remark again that it seems to me the Budget, as managed at present, is a fifth wheel to the wagon.

Mr. SMOOT. You will never get a better manager.
Mr. KING. Mr. President, while we are on this item—
Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, why does not the Senator make some motion, if he is not pleased with the bill?

Mr. KING. I can not offer a motion dealing with this matter at the present time, under the rule, until we finish the committee amendments.

Mr. WARREN. The Senator can offer amendments to these committee amendments.

Mr. KING. That is true, but what I was about to ask concerning now was not an amendment. I can get the information now, and save offering an amendment which would call for an explanation, and would delay the matter.

I was about to ask the Senator with respect to the item of $1,000,000, found on page 48, for 15 division superintendents, 15 assistant division superintendents, and so forth. Is that deficiency?

Mr. WARREN. That is to carry out the law which already exists. Perhaps the Senator will remember that we have had several discussions at different times about the number of those superintendents, and they have had to be added to from time to time.

Mr. KING. Then, as I understand, we have increased the number of superintendents, and this calls for an additional $1,000,000 for their salaries. I assume that the Senator answers "Yes.

Mr. PHIPPS. Yes.

Mr. KING. Referring to the next item of $3,500,000 for inland transportation by railroad routes, could not that have been foreseen and estimated for, or is that a deficit?

Mr. PHIPPS. That is covered by what I said. It represents between 14 and 15 per cent of the business which has had to be transported in the last year under our Postal Service. The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will continue the reading of the bill.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 47, after line 22, to insert:

For pay of letter carriers at offices already established, including substitutes for letter carriers absent without pay, City Delivery Service, fiscal year 1923, $300,000.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I should like to have an explanation of that item of $300,000 for substitutes for letter carriers absent without pay. It is a rather peculiar provision of law when you appropriate $300,000 to pay for substitutes who are absent without pay in part.

Mr. WARREN. They are all subject, of course, to the leaves of absence that all employees of the Government are. Those substitutes, of course, are paid out of an entirely different fund, and we have to appropriate accordingly.

Mr. McKELLAR. Why could not the Budget have known something about that, and why could not the department have known something about it?

Mr. WARREN. The Senator contends all the time, or seems to understand, that these things were made up by the Budget Bureau with figures before them, lately. The original esti-mates were made up last August and September, the latest ones. The increase since then, and the shortages, have been estimated as nearly as possible up to date; and these things are in addition to those that were estimated for and appropriated heretofore.

Mr. McKELLAR. I call attention to the language:

For pay of letter carriers at offices already established.

We have already appropriated for letter carriers at offices already established.

Mr. WARREN. Let us assume that the Senator is a letter carrier. He has worked his 11 months and he gets a month's leave. He gets his pay. Who is going to take his place? The work has to be done by a substitute, and that substitute has to be paid.

Mr. McKELLAR. That is provided for in the appropriation bill for the Post Office Department.

Mr. WARREN. No; it is only provided for as far as they ad information. The Senator seems to forget all the time had information. that there is this big percentage of business being added month by month, continually.

Mr. SMOOT. Not only that, Mr. President, but no one can tell how much sick leave a man is going to have. an employee has all of the privileges granted to him in the way of sick leave and leave of absence and half holidays, and so forth, they amount to over 56 days in the year; and the Senator, I think, voted for all of them.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, permit me to say that this illustrates splendidly one of the objections to the taking over of the authority of the Post Office Committee to appropriate. We have two committees at work on it, and the officers of the departments come in after the Budget is made up and after the bill is passed; whenever there is a deficiency we find these large amounts coming in.

Mr. SMOOT. They always have.

Mr. McKELLAR. We have a law against deficiencies, and yet they come right along, with the usual perseverance, and get large appropriations from the Government. I am inclined to think that it is a very bad way to legislate.

Mr. PHIPPS. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator if he did not sit on the subcommittee that passed upon the appropriation bill for the Post Office Department for the coming fiscal year 1924 in the room of the Committee on Appropriations?

Mr. McKELLAR. I did.

Mr. PHIPPS. And was not that bill handled in exactly the same manner that the bill for the fiscal year 1923 was handled?

Mr. McKELLAR. Yes.

Did the Senator sit on the subcommittee for Mr. PHIPPS. the bill of 1923?

Mr. McKELLAR. I do not recall. I believe, though, that I did; but here is the point about it—

Mr. PHIPPS. The bill was prepared by a subcommittee of the Post Office Committee?

Mr. McKELLAR. Yes; and we allowed every appropriation that was properly submitted and that was proper and right, and we had hearings about it, and we cross-examined the witnesses, and we looked into it, and we examined it carefully.

Mr. PHIPPS. In the same manner that it was done this

Mr. McKELLAR. Now the bill comes up before the Appropriations Committee, a different committee; and to my mind facts have not been given here showing that these large appropriations were necessary. I call especial attention to this $300,000. I know that in our committee we went very fully into the matter of the pay of substitutes for letter carriers absent without pay.

Mr. WARREN. If the Senator went into it, why did he not appropriate enough so that we did not have to appropriate

Mr. McKELLAR. I think we did appropriate enough. Mr. WARREN. Last year the Senator was one of those who provided it.

Mr. McKELLAR. I think we did appropriate enough, and therefore there is no real reason for this appropriation. At any rate the chairman of the committee has not given it to us.

Mr. WARREN. Does the Senator want to say that the Post Office Department has fooled away in the meantime the money that the Senator himself voted to appropriate?

Mr. McKELLAR. Oh, no; I do not say that; but we know that every department here constantly comes before the com-mittee and asks for increased appropriations, and when they have two committees instead of one it is just that much easier for them to get them.

Mr. WARREN. Does the Senator mean to insinuate that the present committee is throwing away the public money on the Post Office Department?

Mr. McKELLAR, Oh, no; not at all.

Mr. WARREN. One would think so from the remarks of the

Mr. McKELLAR. The committee is doing the best it can in the closing days of the session, of course. I know that.

Mr. PHIPPS. Mr. President, the Senator made one remark which I do not think should be permitted to pass; it might be misunderstood. I do not believe that the Senator meant to insinuate that the subcommittee of which he was a member, sitting on the bill for the coming fiscal year, 1924, did not go nto the various items with as much diligence and care as did the subcommittee on which the Senator sat for the year 1923, Mr. McKELLAR. I did not compare them. The Senator could not possibly misconstrue in that way any statement that have made. I did not reflect upon anyone.

Mr. PHIPPS. I did not think the Senator did, and I did not want it to appear so in the RECORD.

Mr. McKELLAR. It would not appear that way in the Mr. PHIPPS. But that was the inference that might have been drawn from the Senator's statement.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed, the last paragraph read being as follows:

For inland transportation by railroad routes, fiscal year 1923,

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I ask the member of the Post Office Committee who is on the Appropriations Committee—the Senator from Colorado [Mr. Phipps]—to explain this item. Here is an item of $3,500,000 for inland transportation by railroad routes for the fiscal year 1923. Why is it that we have to have that enormous sum added to what we have already appropriated? We had all the facts before the committee when that appropriation was made.

Mr. PHIPPS. Mr. President, I believe the Senator will remember that in many instances the estimates coming from the Post Office Department were allowed in full by the House, and there were cases where the Senate committee thought it proper to increase amounts that had been allowed by the House, and then, after the Senate had expressed its views and the items would go back into conference, the House would not always recede.

In many instances the House insisted that the amount which it considered proper and sufficient should be the amount allowed, and that we should not go beyond that. That was true in many cases such as this. I have a clear recollection that this very item was one where we did not permit the Post Office Department to have the full amount originally estimated for transportation of mail by inland routes.

Mr. McKELLAR. What was the original amount?

Mr. PHIPPS. I want to say that the effect of the recent railroad strike was such as to add largely to the cost of that transportation. In the Railway Mail Service alone, for salaries, there is a large increase.

Starting last July there was a railroad strike, nation-wide in extent, which included all of the shopmen of the various railroads. Within a few weeks after the start of this strike the effect of the lack of proper men in the shops was very noticeable, with the definite result that the trains began to run behind schedule quite generally. This continued throughout the strike and is still continuing, with no sign of any marked improvement.

Our railway mail clerks are employed on these trains. When the trains are late in arriving at their destinations we are required by law to pay the railway mail clerks for the extra time which they have put in.

Mr. McKELLAR. Is the Senator reading from the hearings before the Post Office Subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee?

Mr. PHIPPS. No; not before the Post Office Subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee. This was before the deficiency subcommittee

Mr. McKELLAR. We had all of that before us at the time, and we appropriated with that in view, and yet we have a deficiency of $3,500,000 here.

Mr. PHIPPS. For the fiscal year 1923. Mr. McKELLAR. 1923. That does not indicate that we did

Mr. McKelllar. 1923. That does not indicate that we do not have it before us. What did the Budget provide?

Mr. PHIPPS. This is additional to the original appropriation. This is not an item that the Senate passed upon.

Mr. McKellar. What did the Budget provide for inland transportation?

Mr. PHIPPS. I do not appear to have right at hand here the comparative items as between the bills for the two years.

Mr. WARREN. While the Senator is looking up the items, I send to the desk for printing some matter which I wish to have go into the RECORD along with the debate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

The matter referred to is as follows:

Under date of February 20, 1923, the Post Office Department officials notified postmasters that the appropriation for pay of substitutes and of auxiliary and temporary letter carriers was insufficient to meet the requirements of the service and no additional allowances would be made. Postmasters were also notified that the appropriation for regular city delivery carriers, from which the overtime service performed by letter carriers must be paid, is exhausted, and that all overtime of carriers must be discontinued. This order is mandatory on all postmasters, the notice further states, because a deficiency appropriation covering this item has not been approved by the Bureau of the Budget. Believing that the conditions resulting from insufficient appropriations to properly conduct the Postal Service will work injury to its good name and harm to the interest of its patrons far beyond the economies effected, I desire to submit for your consideration the following statement:

The estimates submitted by the department officials for pay of letter carriers at post offices already established for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, was $71,000,000. The Congress appropriated $70,200,000, or $800,000 less than the estimates. The department estimates for temporary and auxiliary service was $9,000,000. The Congress appropriated $8,000,000, or $1,000,000 less than the estimates.

The average annual increase in postal receipts for the preceding 10-year period has approximated 7 per cent. The increase in postal receipts for the current fiscal year beginning July 1, 1922, and continuing on without abatement to the present time have been far in excess of this annual 7 per cent average. The following table, beginning with the month of July, 1922, and including January, 1923, shows the increase in postal revenues from month to month during the current fiscal year as compared with similar months in the preceding fiscal year:

	Increase.	Per cent increase.
July, 1922, over July, 1921. August, 1922, over August, 1921. September, 1922, over October, 1921. October, 1922, over October, 1921. November, 1922, over November, 1921. December, 1922, over November, 1921. January, 1923, over January, 1922.	$2,034,410 2,082,796 2,357,543 3,107,418 3,006,720 2,422,749 3,978,036	11. 62 10. 80 11. 55 14. 34 13. 79 9. 00 18. 99

The increase in postal revenues has been reflected in a steadily mounting volume of mail matter, but without a corresponding increase in the appropriation for the pay of letter carriers, who are an indispensable factor in handling this mail. In fact, the appropriation granted by Congress for the pay of letter carriers at post offices already established for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1922, was $70,000,000. The same item for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, was $70,200,000.

or a minor fraction of 1 per cent in the expenditure for letter-carrier service as compared with an approximate increase of 12½ per cent in the volume of mail to be handled as indicated by the receipts. For the fiscal year ended June 30, 1922, the appropriation for temporary and auxiliary carrier service totaled $10,500,000. The amount appropriated by Congress to cover the same item for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, was $8,000,000 or a decrease in this item alone for the current as compared with the preceding year of $2,500,000. Thus it will be noted that in those two major items a considerably less amount has been appropriated for pay of letter carriers during the fiscal year 1923 than in the preceding fiscal year, notwithstanding that the increase in the volume of mail during the same period has reached record proportions.

the volume of mail during the same period has reached record proportions.

As a result of intensive effort and constant development along lines of greater efficiency, the Postal Service to-day has less duplication, less lost motion, and less misdirected effort than any considerable institution anywhere. The letter-carrier service has achieved a notable efficiency along these lines that offer little prospect of material improvement. In the opinion of trained postal officials, the carrier service has reached the saturation point and no decrease in expenditures for this service can be effected without a corresponding decrease in the character of service rendered postal patrons. This fact is fully confirmed by the testimony of Post Office Department officials before the Subcommittee on Appropriations in charge of the Post Office appropriation bill, which shows that the carrier service is now keyed up as tight as efficient supervision can make it and that the regular carrier force can not handle the mounting volume of mail without further assistance.

In order to meet the actual needs of the City Delivery Service at post offices during the remainder of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, it is necessary that a deficiency appropriation be authorized by Congress. Postmaster General Work recommended to the Bureau of the Budget a deficiency appropriation of $300,000 for the City Delivery Service for the remainder of the fiscal year. This is a modest and conservative estimate and is only a fraction of the increased revenues of the department for the single month of January, 1923.

From the standpoint of business and in fairness to the public, the employees, and the service we appeal to the Senate to provide the necessary deficiency appropriation requested by the Post Office Department officials.

Hoping you will give this important matter your earnest considera-emphyses, essary deficiency appropriation requested by the essary deficiency appropriation requested by the essary deficiency appropriation requested by the essay deficiency appropriation requested by the essay of the essay of

Mr. PHIPPS. There is quite a lengthy statement. If the Senator had read the hearings of the House committee, which were available, he would have gotten much of the information, but it is very difficult to give the details and condense them. The train schedules show that there were 12,270 connections missed on account of delayed trains during the week of November 19, 1922, alone.

Mr. McKELLAR. I want to call the Senator's attention to the fact that some $10,000,000 are carried in this third deficlency bill over and above the appropriations we made in the original Post Office appropriation bill and in two of the deficlency bills for the Post Office Department. It just strikes me that a Budget which misses the mark by more than $10,000,000 is not very accurate in its calculations as to what Congress ought to do.

Mr. PHIPPS. Let me give the Senator some of these figures. When the deficiency bill to which he called attention awhile ago was passed in January we allowed $1,250,000 for railway transportation. The department then asked for $4,750,-000, or $3,500,000 more than was allowed. I read now from the hearings:

The Charman. Lest there might be any doubt as to the responsibility for the reduction in the appropriation to $90,000,000 I think it is only fair to say, without intending to reflect on anybody, that when this sum of $90,000,000 was appropriated it was appropriated at the direct request of Colonel Henderson's predecessor, Colonel Shaughnessy, who has since died, and it was not done by the Committee on Appropriations or by the Congress; it was done at Mr. Shaughnessy's request. Did I understand from the reading of that communication that had not the railroad strike occurred it might have been possible to have come within the $90,000,000 or close to it?

Mr. Triem. No, sir; the railroad strike had nothing to do with this increase in the mail pay. The increase in mail pay is due entirely to the increase in postal business and to the bulk of mails carried.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I wish to suggest that the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. STANLEY] desires to speak on the filled milk bill, and we have only 15 minutes left for debate.

Mr. STANLEY. Mr. President, I do not care to divert the attention of the Senate from the deficiency bill, but I do take this occasion, as I have only 15 minutes-

Mr. WARREN. Will the Senator excuse me a moment? I do not object, of course, to the Senator doing as he has a right to do, to take the time now to speak on the filled milk bill, but immediately following his address I understand that under the unanimous-consent agreement debate will cease on that bill, and a vote will follow shortly. I give notice at this time that I shall expect the Senate to bear with me after that vote is taken until we pass the deficiency bill, whether it takes a part of the night or all night, because if we have any intention of having it become a law it should be passed by the Senate to-night.

Mr. ROBINSON. I understand it is expected that an executive session will be held immediately following the disposition of the filled milk bill, and it has been suggested that the Senate then revert to the consideration of the appropriation bill.

Mr. WARREN. That is what I expect when we open the doors and come back into legislative session.

FILLED MILK.

Mr. STANLEY. Mr. President, this matter should be called to the attention of the Senate and of the leader of the minority.

The method of legislation upon which we are about to enter is, in my humble opinion, an evidence either of gross carelessness or of a lack of moral courage in facing an issue.

Here is a bill, H. R. 8086, which on its face is essentially commendable. A hurried reading of the bill would lead one to believe that it was an honest attempt to prevent the sale of adulterated milk. It is no such thing. As drawn, it is a plain attempt to utilize the dread powers of legislation to destroy one business in order to foster another.

This bill, after a long and complex definition of what filled milk is and how it may be sold, declares in section 2:

It is hereby declared that filled milk, as herein defined, is an adulterated article of food, injurious to the public health, and its sale constitutes a fraud upon the public.

The sale of this filled milk is not regulated; it is absolutely prohibited, notwithstanding the fact that I can find nothing in the record which indicates that any constituent of this so-called filled milk is deleterious or unwholesome, that it contains anything positively injurious or poisonous. The most that can be said of it is that it is less deleterious than the natural milk.

Mr. ROBINSON. Will the Senator yield?
Mr. STANLEY. Yes.
Mr. ROBINSON. I understand the proponents of the bill claim that a fraud is perpetrated in the sale of filled milk as milk; that, as a matter of fact, it is a mixed, not to say an adulterated, article; that it is used in an attempt to nourish infants; and that to infants it proves deleterious. I understand that to be the theory upon which the proponents of the bill proceed.

Mr. STANLEY. It is claimed it is deleterious to infants because the filled milk is lacking in vitamines which the natural milk contains. But here is the point: Instead of providing, as everybody is willing to provide, that this milk shall not be sold unless it plainly indicates what it contains, and is plainly difdifferentiated from the other milk, or that it shall not be sold at all if it is deleterious to health, the bill provides that because it is not quite as good a food for infants as some other food a man shall go to the penitentiary for so many years and pay a thousand dollars fine for making it and selling it at all.

In the course of the hearing the proponents of the bill called Dr. Joseph Goldberger, of the Public Health Service, who is a scientist of recognized ability. He said:

I tried to inform myself as well as I could by reading this bill that this committee is considering, and it seems there are one or two things about it that perhaps it might be proper for me to express an opinion about. One of those is the word "deleterious," qualifying an article of food, subsection C of section 1.

In my judgment that would not be a correct use of the word deleterious. From what little I know about such food I would say that such food is a wholesome and nutritious article of food and that in the usual conventional use of the word deleterious that would not be a proper qualification of it.

Mr. DIAL. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. REED of Pennsylvania in the chair). Does the Senator from Kentucky yield to the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. STANLEY. I yield.

Mr. DIAL. I call the Senator's attention to the fact that the proponents of this bill stated they might have to make this very article, according to their own representation.

Mr. STANLEY. It appears it is a fight between two manu-cturers of filled milk. There is every evidence of it. facturers of filled milk. There is every evidence of it.

Mr. DIAL. They said they might have to go into making this very article, showing it is not deleterious.

Mr. STANLEY. There is nothing in the hearings to show it is deleterious; yet the Senate of the United States solemnly agrees that at 5 o'clock they will take this up, with other bills in the way prior to that time, and that when it is taken up no amendment may be discussed, but that the bill and all amendments thereto must be voted on immediately. It is unworthy of the Senate to grind legislation through in that way without it being understood, without it being digested, and with a deliberate attempt to prevent the Senate knowing what it is doing. For if the Senate persists in tying its hands in this way it will cease to be a deliberative body.

Mr. DIAL. Mr. President Mr. STANLEY. I yield.

Mr. DIAL. I would like to ask the Senator if he thinks Congress can pass a law declaring an article to be deleterious when it is not deleterious or injurious to health and keep it out of interstate commerce when it is not inherently deleterious?

Mr. STANLEY. It is absurd for the Senate to say a thing is deleterious when there are not three chemists in the body. It is a judicial question. Instead of prohibiting the sale of deleterious foods we are to declare by law what is deleterious without any knowledge on the subject whatever and refuse to discuss it.

What business is it of the Senate to pass upon technical and scientific questions? After a while we will be saying how long skirts shall be and when they are decent or when they are deleterious, and Congress will solemnly pass an act that if a woman wears a skirt more than 18 inches from the ground, or wears a dress more than 8 inches from the top of her shoulder, it is not moral. The exercise of that authority is a reductio ad absurdum.

I represent a State where dairy farming is a great industry. I have every desire to encourage this great industry. There are no filled milk makers in Kentucky. I would have every incentive to support this amendment were I looking simply to that which is popular. Nevertheless I shall not hesitate to express my disapproval of this character of legislation enacted in this sort of way.

A bill prohibiting the use of an imitation milk not plainly marked in such a way as to show it is such imitation would he laudable. A bill prohibiting the making of filled milk or prepared milk which contains any deleterious substance, and providing heavy penalties for that sort of thing, would meet and should meet the approval of every honest and patriotic man in the Senate; but this is not legislation of that character. It is invoking the power of Congress to destroy a business, whether it is legitimate or not, whether it is making a whole-some or a deleterious food or not, by declaring the food unwholesome by flat of law.

Doctor Goldberger, of the Public Health Service, in further discussing this matter, speaking of this very filled milk as not containing vitamines for babies, was asked:

Containing vitamines for babies, was asked:

Doctor, if orange juice were added to the filled milk in feeding the haby, would that make up for the deficiency in vitamine A?

Doctor GOLDERGER, Not entirely, because orange juice is not especially rich in that vitamine, although it is rich in some of the others, for instance, the antiscurvy vitamine. But if tomato juice is added, as is done now in children feeding, that would contribute very materially to supplying that. But one might say this, that there is no particular necessity for using this preparation in infant feeding, and I am not aware that it is being urged for infant feeding, any more than one might say white bread is urged exclusively in infant feeding.

Mr. President under the

Mr. President, under this precedent I can destroy the cottonseed industry in the South. I can utterly annihilate it. People are selling olive oil every day that is cottonseed oil, and the chemists can be found who will say that the cottonseed oil has less nutritive value than olive oil.

It is a tremendous thing for the Congress of the United States to declare that an article in the market is unwholesome and deleterious, without any proof to support it; to declare it by fiat of law, and then refuse to discuss the matter when it gets ready to enact such legislation.

The bill in itself is not of any special importance. It will put a few filled-milk dealers out of business; but the character of this legislation, the intent and purpose and spirit of it, the use of the lawmaking power to regulate business to-day, to destroy business to-morrow, to foster business the next day, is an ever-growing menace. Every day ingenious men are finding new ways and new hooks and new crooks to invoke the power of Congress, either to destroy or to subsidize some business, and it is time that sort of thing should stop, and it should be challenged whenever it is attempted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Reed of Pennsylvania in the chair). The hour of 5 o'clock having arrived, under the unanimous consent agreement the bill (H. R. 8086) to prohibit the shipment of filled milk in interstate or foreign commerce is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole and will be read for action on the committee amendments.

The reading clerk proceeded to read the bill. The first amendment of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry was, on page 2, lines 8, 9, and 10, to strike out "and as such is an adulterated and deleterious article of food, and when marketed as such constitutes a fraud upon the public," and to insert in lieu thereof the following:

This definition shall not include any distinctive proprietary food compound not readily mistaken in taste for milk or cream or for evaporated, condensed, or powdered milk or cream: Provided, That such compound (1) is prepared and designed for feeding infants and young children and customarily used on the order of a physician; (2) is packed in individual cans containing not more than 161 ounces and bearing a label in bold type that the content is to be used only for said purpose; (3) is shipped in interstate or foreign commerce exclusively to physicians, wholesale and retail druggists, orphan asylums, child-welfare associations, hospitals, and similar institutions and generally disposed of by them.

So as to make the first section read:

So as to make the first section read:

That whenever used in this act—

(a) The term "person" includes an individual, partnership, corporation, or association;

(b) The term "interstate or foreign commerce" means commerce (1) between any State, Territory, or possession, or the District of Columbia, and any place outside thereof; (2) between points within the same State, Territory, or possession, or within the District of Columbia, but through any place outside thereof; or (3) within any Territory or possession, or within the District of Columbia; and

(c) The term "filled milk" means any milk, cream, or skimmed milk, whether or not condensed, evaporated, concentrated, powdered, dried, or desiccated, to which has been added, or which has been blended or compounded with, any fat or oil other than milk fat, so that the resulting product is in imitation or semblance of milk, cream, or skimmed milk, whether or not condensed, evaporated, concentrated, powdered, dried, or desiccated. This definition shall not include any distinctive proprietary food compound not readily mistaken in taste for milk or cream or for evaporated, condensed, or powdered milk or cream: Provided, That such compound (1) is prepared and designed for feeding infants and young children and customarily used on the order of a physician; (2) is packed in individual cans containing not more' than 10s ounces and bearing a label in bold type that the content is to be used only for said purpose; (3) is shipped in interstate or foreign commerce exclusively to physicians, wholesale and retail druggists, orphan and generally disposed of by them.

Mr. STANLEY. Is it in order to offer an amendment to the second section of the bill at this time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is not yet in order. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee just read.

question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee just read

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry was, on page 2, line 23, after "Sec. 2," to insert the following:

It is hereby declared that filled milk, as herein defined, is an adulterated article of food, injurious to the public health, and its sale constitutes a fraud upon the public—

So as to make the section read:

SEC. 2. It is bereby declared that filled milk, as herein defined, is an adulterated article of food, injurious to the public health, and its sale constitutes a fraud upon the public. It shall be unlawful for any person to manufacture within any Territory or possession, or within the District of Columbia, or to ship or deliver for shipment in interstate or foreign commerce, any filled milk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Kentucky wish now to offer an amendment to the first part of the section?

Mr. STANLEY. To the whole paragraph. I want to offer an amendment to strike out all of the language just read and to amend the rest of the section so it would read as follows:

It shall be unlawful for any person to manufacture within any Territory or possession, or within the District of Columbia, or to ship or deliver for shipment in interstate or foreign commerce any filled milk which is deleterious or contains any deleterious constituent, or which can be mistaken for natural milk, without being so plainly marked or labeled as to distinguish it from such article.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Where does the Senator wish to insert that language?

Mr. STANLEY. I want to strike out everything now in section 2 and insert what I have offered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The committee amendment to section 2 has not yet been acted upon by the Senate as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. STANLEY. I am offering this language in lieu of the committee amendment. I want to strike out section 2 as proposed by the committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, has not yet acted on the committee amendment to section 2, and until the committee amendment has been acted on it can not be stricken out.

Mr. STANLEY. Mr. President, a point of order.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky will state the point of order.
Mr. STANLEY. I offer what I have offered in lieu of section 2 as reported by the committee.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is of the opinion that the committee amendment must first be acted upon before the Senator's amendment is in order.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, a point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state the point of order.

Mr. ROBINSON. If the committee amendment is agreed to, would then be impossible for the Senator from Kentucky to offer his amendment. I suggest that it is in order for the Senator from Kentucky to offer a substitute for the committee amendment and submit whatever amendment he chooses to submit. It is in order to perfect the committee amendment before voting upon the committee amendment, Otherwise there would be no opportunity to amend the committee amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the Senator offers his amendment as an amendment to the committee amendment, it is now in order.

Mr. STANLEY. I offer it as an amendment to the committee amendment.

Mr. DIAL. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the

The reading clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Ernst	La Follette	Sheppard
Bayard	Fernald	Lenroot	Shields
Borah	France	Lodge	Shortridge
Brandegee	Frelinghuysen	McCormick	Smith
Brookhart	George	McCumber	Spencer
Broussard	Gerry	McKellar	Stanley
Bursum	Glass	McKinley	Sterling
Calder	Gooding	McNary	Sutherland
Cameron	Hale	Moses	Swanson
Capper	Harreld	New	Wadsworth
Caraway	Harris	Norbeck	Walsh, Mass.
Colt	Harrison	Norris	Walsh, Mont.
Cummins	Heflin	Oddle	Warren
Curtis	Jones, Wash.	Overman	Watson
Dial	Kendrick	Phipps	Weller
Dillingham	Keyes	Reed, Pa.	Willis
Edge	Ladd	Robinson

Mr. CURTIS. I wish to announce that the senior Senator from California [Mr. Johnson] is necessarily detained on offi-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Sixty-seven Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. STANLEY. Mr. President— Mr. BRANDEGEE. Will the Senator from Kentucky be kind enough to yield to me to submit a report? I think it will take

Mr. STANLEY. I yield to the Senator from Connecticut for that purpose.

ALLEGED EXECUTIONS WITHOUT TRIAL IN FRANCE.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. From the special committee which was appointed to investigate the charges made by the late Senator Watson of Georgia as to the hanging of soldiers of the American Expeditionary Forces abroad, I present the following report (No. 1256). It is very brief, and if the Senate will bear with me a moment, I will ask that it may be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. HARRISON. I do not desire to object, but yesterday a unanimous-consent agreement was entered into so that we might get a vote this afternoon on the filled milk bill and providing that there should be no debate in order after 5 o'clock. It is violative of the spirit of the agreement at least for this other matter to come in at this time. It seems to me it could well wait. Other Senators might then want to introduce other matters, and we never would get through with the filled milk bill. However, I am not going to object.

Mr. SHIELDS. It will only take a few moments, I will say to the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. HARRISON. I am not going to object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Secretary will read the report of the special committee.

The reading clerk read as follows:

The reading cierk read as follows:

The committee of the Senate appointed on the 4th day of November, 1921, under the provisions of Senate Resolution No. 166, to investigate charges made by the late Senator Thomas E. Watson, of Georgia, that members of the American Expeditionary Forces abroad were executed without trial or court-martial, respectfully reports that it has performed the duty imposed upon it by said resolution, and is of opinion that the charges are not sustained by the testimony. The testimony given before the committee is herewith submitted, together with the comments of an assistant to the Judge Advocate General of the Army thereon.

FRANK B. BRANDEGEE, FRANK B. WILLIS. LEE S. OVERMAN, JNO. K. SHIELDS. RICHARD P. ERNST.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, there is an additional page containing the views of one of the members of the committee, which I will ask the Secretary to read. It is a part of the report

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested.

The reading clerk read as follows:

I concur in the foregoing report.

During the hearings by the committee much testimony was taken relative to the guilt or innocence of Maj. Hierome L. Opie, of Staunton, Va., formerly commanding the Third Battalion of the One hundred and sixteenth Infantry, United States Army, who was accused of shooting and killing his orderly or other person.

This charge against Major Opie was published broadcast throughout the United States.

Our committee heard much testimony relating solely to this charge, and inasmuch as there is no court or other tribunal which can pass upon the question of Major Opie's guilt or innocence, I deem it only fair to Major Opie to state that, in my judgment, there is no ground whatever for this charge against him.

RICHARD P. ERNST.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. This matter, so far as I am concerned, will take only a moment further. I think I ought to say, in yiew of the fact that the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Ernst] has referred to the charges which were made during the hearings before the committee by some witness against Major Opie, that the committee in its report did not refer to that matter or make any finding thereon because the charges made against him arose incidentally in the hearings. The committee was not instructed by the Senate to investigate any charges against Major Ople; and the matter being without our jurisdiction, we did not feel that we were authorized to make a report on it. Inasmuch, however, as a witness blurted out the charge that Major Opie had shot his orderly, and others seeing it in the newspapers came to testify about it, Major Opie asked the privilege of being heard and stating his views upon that question, and the committee could not deny him the opportunity.

I wish to state, however, that personally I entirely agree with the views expressed by the junior Senator from Kentucky, to wit, that the charges made against Major Ople in the hearings were not sustained by the testimony.

Mr. SHIELDS. Mr. President, I do not care to make any extended remarks about the matter, for the Senator from Connecticut has stated my views in reference to it. I did not think that the special charge against Major Opie was within think that the special charge against Major Opie was within the jurisdiction of the committee under the resolution which was passed by the Senate directing an investigation. As the Senator from Connecticut has stated, it only incidentally came in; but as the charge was made, the committee thought it was entirely, at least, equitable that Major Opie be heard in denial, and the evidence was introduced which we thought completely rebutted those charges. I am very glad to say that I concur with the views of the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I ask that the report be printed, with an illustration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so

FILLED MILK.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8086) to prohibit the shipment of filled milk in interstate or foreign commerce.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. STANLEY] in the nature of a substitute for the amendment reported by the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry in section 2. The Secretary will state the amendment which is proposed by the Senator from Kentucky to the committee amendment.

The READING CLERK. On page 2, line 23, after the words "Sec. 2," the committee propose to insert:

It is hereby declared that filled milk, as herein defined, is an adulterated article of food, injurious to the public health, and its sale constitutes a fraud upon the public.

In lieu of which the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. STANLEX] proposes to insert:

It shall be unlawful for any person to manufacture within any Territory or possession of the United States or within the District of Columbia, or to ship or deliver for shipment in interstate or foreign commerce any filled milk which is deleterious or contains any deleterious constituents or which may be mistaken for natural milk without being so plainly marked or labeled as to distinguish it from such article.

Mr. STANLEY. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment to the amendment.

Mr. LENROOT. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin

Mr. LENROOT. May I ask in what form the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky proposes to strike out the committee amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky proposes to strike out the amendment to section 2 as proposed by the committee and to substitute therefor the words which have just been read by the reading clerk.

Mr. LENROOT. I call the attention of the Chair

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Debate is out of order.
Mr. ROBINSON. I suggest to the Senator from Wisconsin that while a parliamentary question could be raised to that procedure

Mr. LENROOT. Very well, I will make the point of order,

Mr. ROBINSON. It would be more convenient to vote on a single amendment than on two amendments. The Senator from Kentucky has offered an amendment in the nature of a substitute for the committee amendment. The Senator can make the point of order if he chooses to do so.

Mr. STANLEY. I offer my amendment as a substitute for the committee amendment.

Mr. LENROOT. I make the point of order that the Senator's amendment is to strike out the entire section, and therefore is not a substitute for the committee amendment.

Mr. STANLEY. I offer my amendment in lieu of the committee amendment.

I rise to another parliamentary inquiry, Mr. LENROOT. Mr. President. Does the amendment as proposed by the Senator from Kentucky strike out all of the text of the House provision?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It does.

Mr. LENROOT. Then I make the point of order against the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The point of order is sus-

Mr. STANLEY. No; my amendment does not propose to strike out any of the text to the House provision. If my amendment is agreed to, the House provision would be retained as it is now found in the last clause of the section.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair now understands that the Senator from Kentucky proposes to strike out only the words inserted by the committee?

Mr. STANLEY. Yes.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. And to insert in lieu thereof the amendment which has been read?

Mr. STANLEY. Exactly.
Mr. LENROOT. And leave the House text as it stands?
Mr. ROBINSON. The Senator may offer an amendment later to that if he desires to do so.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky to the amendment of the committee.

Mr. STANLEY. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The reading clerk proceeded to call the roll, and Mr. ASHURST voted in the negative when his name was called.

Mr. HARRELD. If it is not too late, I should like to ask to have the amendment to the amendment again read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is too late, a Senator having responded to his name on the roll call.

The call of the roll was resumed.

Mr. FERNALD (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from New Mexico [Mr. Jones]. In his absence I withhold my vote, being unable to secure a transfer of the pair.

Mr. HARRISON (when his name was called). On this vote I am paired with the senior Senator from California vote I am paired with the senior Senator from California [Mr. Johnson], and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. LODGE (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. Underwood], but he is paired, I understand, on this bill and all amendments with the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. Bursum]. Therefore I am at liberty to vote, and I vote "nay."

Mr. McCUMBER (when his name was called). I have a pair with the junior Senator from Utah [Mr. King]. Not transfer what his vote would be on this question I withhold.

knowing what his vote would be on this question, I withhold

Mr. McKINLEY (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. Caraway], who has not voted, and therefore I withhold my vote.

Mr. SWANSON (when his name was called). Senator from Michigan [Mr. Townsend] is detained from the Senate on account of illness. I am paired with him for the Not knowing how he would vote on this amendment, I withhold my vote.

Mr. WATSON (when his name was called). I transfer my general pair with the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS] to the junior Senator from Vermont [Mr. PAGE], and vote "nay."

Mr. WILLIS (when his name was called). I am paired with my colleague, the senior Senator from Ohio [Mr. Pomerene]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Oregon [Mr. Stanfield], and vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. EDGE. I am paired with the senior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Owen]. I am unable to secure a transfer of that pair. If permitted to vote, I should vote "yea."

Mr. BURSUM. Upon this question I am paired with the senior Senator from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD]. If he were present he would vote "yea." If I were permitted to vote. I should vote "nay."

Mr. CURTIS. I wish to announce the following pairs:

The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Elkins] with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. SIMMONS];

The Senator from Colorado [Mr. Nicholson] with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED]; and

The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Nelson] with the Senator from Texas [Mr. CULBERSON].

The result was announced-yeas 19, nays 43, as follows:

	YE	AS-19.
Bayard Brandegee Broussard Dial Dillingham	George Gerry Glass Harreld Heflin	Overman Phipps Pittman Robinson Sheppard	Shields Smith Stanley Wadsworth
	NA.	YS-43.
Ashurst Borah Brookhart Calder Cameron Capper Cummins Curtis Ernst France Frelinghuysen	Gooding Hale Hitchcock Jones, Wash. Kellogg Kendrick Keyes Ladd La Follette Lenroot Lodge	McCormick McKellar McLean McNary Moses New Norbeck Norris Oddie Pepper Reed, Pa.	Shortridge Spencer Sterling Sutherland Walsh, Mass, Walsh, Mont. Warren Watson Weller Willis
		OTING-34.	a E . S. Francis
Ball Bursum Caraway Colt Couzens Culberson Edge Elkins Fernald	Fletcher Harris Harrison Johnson Jones, N. Mex. King McCumber McKinley Myers	Nelson Nicholson Owen Page Poindexter Pomerene Ransdell Reed, Mo. Simmons	Smoot Stanfield Swanson Townsend Trammell Underwood Williams

So the amendment of Mr. STANLEY to the amendment of the committee was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now is on the amendment reported by the committee.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, as I understand, the motion of the Senator from Kentucky was to strike out and insert?

Mr. STANLEY. Yes. Mr. BRANDEGEE. I move to strike out the following language in section 2, beginning in line 23:

It is hereby declared that filled milk, as berein defined, is an adulterated article of food, injurious to the public health, and its sale constitutes a fraud upon the public,

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I call the Senator's attention to the fact that that is a committee amendment which has not as yet been agreed to, and the parliamentary status

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I appreciate that we can accomplish the same purpose by voting against the committee amendment.

Mr. ROBINSON. The same result can be accomplished by voting against the committee amendment.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I withdraw my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the adoption of the committee amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.
The PRESIDING OFFICER, The bill is still before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole and open to amend-

Mr. DIAL. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The READING CLERK. On page 3, at the end of paragraph 8, it is proposed to insert the following, to be known as para-

That the second subdivision of section 5 of the United States cotton futures act, approved August 11, 1916, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"Second. (a) Specify and the second of the United States cotton futures act, approved August 11, 1916, as amended, is amended to read Second. (a) Specify as the class of the contract one of the follow-

"Second. (a) Specify as the class of the contract one of the following classes:

"Class A, which shall include only middling fair, strict good middling, good middling, and strict middling grades;

"Class B, which shall include only strict middling, middling, strict low middling, and good middling yellow tinged grades;

"Class C, which shall include only strict low middling, low middling, strict middling yellow tinged, and good middling yellow stained grades.

"(b) Specify the basis grade for the cotton involved in the contract, which shall be one of the grades for which standards are established by the Secretary of Agriculture, and which standards are established by the Secretary of Agriculture, and which shall be one of the grades included within a class in paragraph (a) of this subdivision; the price per pound at which the control of such basis grade is contracted to be bought or sold; the date when the purchase or sale was made; and the month or months in which the contract is to be fulfilled or settled.

"(c) If no other class is specified in the contract, or in the memorandum evidencing the same, the contract shall be deemed a class B contract.

contract.

"(d) If no other basis grade be specified in the contract, or in the memorandum evidencing the same, good middling shall be deemed the basis grade incorporated into a class A contract, middling shall be deemed the basis grade incorporated into a class B contract, and low middling shall be deemed the basis grade incorporated into a class C contract. It is further specified that in case delivery is demanded or cotton is tendered at least one-third of each contract shall be filled in the basic grades specified herein, and that the other two-thirds shall be filled either in that grade or in one of the other grades specified in said class."

That the third subdivision of section 5 of such act is amended to

That the third subdivision of section 5 of such act is amended to read as follows:

"Third. Provide that the cotton dealt with therein or delivered thereunder shall be of or within the grades for which standards are established by the Secretary of Agriculture and of or within the grades included within the class so specified or incorporated as the class of the contract, and that cotton of any other grade or grades shall not be dealt with therein nor delivered thereunder."

That the fifth subdivision of section 5 of such act, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"Fifth. Provide that cotton that, because of the presence of extraneous matter of any character or irregularities or defects, is reduced in value below that of strict middling in the case of a class A contract, strict low middling in the case of a class B contract, or low middling in the case of a class C contract, the grades mentioned being of the official cotton standards of the United States, or cotton that is less than seven-eighths of an inch in length of staple, or cotton that is less than seven-eighths of an inch in length of staple, or cotton that is staple or of immature staple, or cotton that is 'gin cut' or reginned, or cotton that is 'repacked' or 'false packed' or 'mixed packed' or 'water packed,' shall not be delivered on, under, or in settlement of such contract."

That the second paragraph of the seventh subdivision of section 5 of

That the second paragraph of the seventh subdivision of section 5 of such act, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"The provisions of the third, fourth, fifth, sixth, and seventh subdivisions of this section shall be deemed fully incorporated into any such contract if there be written or printed thereon, or on the memorandum evidencing the same, at or prior to the time the same is signed, the phrase 'subject to United States cotton futures act, section 5, class A.' if the contract is a class A contract, or the phrase 'subject to United States cotton futures act, section 5, class B contract, or the phrase 'subject to United States cotton futures act, section 5, class B contract, or the phrase 'subject to United States cotton futures act, section 5, class B contract, or the phrase 'subject to United States cotton futures act, section 5, class B contract, or the phrase 'subject to United States cotton futures act, section 5, class B contract, or the phrase 'subject to united States cotton futures act, section 5, class B, 'if the contract is a class B contract."

That the provisions of this act shall be effective on and after the thirtieth day after its passage, but such provisions shall not be construed as applicable to nor as affecting any right, power, privilege, or immunity under any contract entered into prior to such day.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from South Carolina.

ment proposed by the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. DIAL. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the reading clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Making the

Mr. FERNALD (when his name was called). same announcement as before, I withhold my vote. Mr. McCUMBER (when his name was called). Making the same announcement with reference to my pair as on the previous vote, I withhold my vote.

Mr. McKINLEY (when his name was called). Has the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. Caraway] voted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That Senator has not voted.

Mr. McKINLEY. I withhold my vote.
Mr. SWANSON (when his name was called). Making the same announcement that I made on the previous vote, I withhold my vote.

Mr. WATSON (when his name was called). Making the same announcement as before, I vote "nay."

Mr. WILLIS (when his name was called). Making the same announcement as heretofore concerning the transfer of my pair, I vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. EDGE (after having voted in the negative). I transfer my pair with the senior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Owen I transfer to the junior Senator from Washington [Mr. POINDEXTER] and will allow my vote to stand.

Mr. BURSUM. On this question I am paired with the junior Senator from Alabama [Mr. Underwood]. If I were at liberty to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. HARRIS. I have a pair with the Senator from New York [Mr. CALDER], and withhold my vote.

The result was announced-yeas 7, nays 50, as follows:

	Y.	SAS-7.
Borah Dial	Harreld Jones, Wash.	Overman Shields	Stanley
	NA NA	YS-50.
Bayard Brandegee Brookhart Broussard Cameron Capper Cuomins Curtis Edge Ernst Frelinghuysen Gerry	Gooding Hale Heffin Kellogg Kendrick Keyes Ladd La Follette Lenroot Lodge McCormick McKellar McLean	McNary Moses New Norris Oddie Pepper Phipps Pittman Ransdell Reed. Pa. Robinson Sheppard Shortridge	Smith Spencer Sterling Sutherland Wadsworth Walsh, Mass. Walsh, Mont. Warren Watson Weller Willis
Glass		OTING-89.
Ashurst Ball Bursum Calder Caraway	Colt Conzens Culberson Dillingham Elkins	Fernald Fletcher France George Harris	Harrison Hitchcock Johnson Jones, N. Mex. King

McCumber McKinley Myers Nelson Nicholson	Norbeck Owen Page Poindexter Pomerene	Reed, Mo. Simmons Smoot Stanfield Swanson	Townsend Trammell Underwood Williams
--	---	---	---

So Mr. Diar's amendment was rejected.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, I desire to give notice that I shall ask for a separate vote on the committee amendment in section 2 when the bill gets to the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is still before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole and open to amendment. If no further amendment is proposed, the bill will be reported to the Senate.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendments made as in Committe of the Whole except the one on which the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. Brandegee] has asked for a separate vote.

Mr. STANLEY. I give notice that I shall also ask the Senate to vote upon an amendment to the same paragraph.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. As I understand, in section 2, if Senators will look at the bill, the committee amendment is that part of section 2 which is in italics.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair so understands.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Very well. Would it be in order to move to strike out that part of section 2 which is in italics, which is the committee amendment, or is the question on concurring in the committee amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question, as the Chair understands, is on concurring in the amendment in section 2, which was made as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. And a motion to strike that out would not be in order?

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, the question is on concurring in the amendment. The Senator from Connecticut gave notice that he would reserve that. Therefore that amendment is be-fore the Senate, and of course it is open to a perfecting motion, exactly like any other amendment at any other stage.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. But the first question before the Senate, the Chair understands, is on the adoption of the committee amendments other than the one as to which the Senator has given his notice.

Mr. LODGE. There is some confusion about what the amendment consists of

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands that it is the first sentence in section 2, which is printed in italics.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Have the other amendments agreed to as in Committee of the Whole been concurred in in the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. They have not. The Chair was about to put the question.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, I think the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. STANLEY] just a moment ago gave notice that he desired a separate vote on his amendment. Am I right?

Mr. STANLEY. Yes.

Mr. WADSWORTH. We are up to it now. His amendment comes first.

Mr. LODGE. I think we had better be clear as to just what we are doing. Is the first amendment the amendment on lines 8, 9, and 10, to strike those lines from the House bill? Is that the first amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands that the first amendment is the striking out of the matter in struck-through type in lines 10, 11, and 12, and the insertion in lieu thereof of the matter in italics in lines 12 to 24.

Mr. LODGE. The Chair, then, has a bill in which the numbering is different from mine. It must be a different print.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The print the Chair has is that reported from the committee.

Mr. LODGE. I have the correct print now. I have just re-Mr. LODGE. I have the correct print now. I have just received a fresh one. In that case the amendment begins on line 8 with the word "and"; it strikes out a portion of line 8, the whole of line 9, and the whole of line 10 but one word, and inserts from line 10, page 2. down to line 22.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair so understands, Mr. LODGE. That is the first amendment.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, will the Senator read the words? I have here a copy that seems to be different.

I have here a copy that seems to be different.

Mr. LODGE. The committee moves to strike out, beginning on line 8, after the word "desiccated." the words "and as such is an adulterated and deleterious article of food, and when marketed as such constitutes a fraud upon the public," and to insert: "This definition shall not include any distinctive proprietary food compound not readily mistaken in taste "-that word "intesta" is a misprint-" in taste for milk or cream or for evaporated, condensed, or powdered milk, or cream: Provided,

That such compound (1) is prepared and designed for feeding infants and young children and customarily used on the order of a physician; (2) is packed in individual cans containing not more than 161 ounces and bearing a label in bold type that the content is to be used only for said purpose; (3) is shipped in interstate or foreign commerce exclusively to physicians, wholesale and retail druggists, orphan asylums, child-welfare associations, hospitals, and similar institutions and generally disposed of by them."

That ends the first amendment.

Mr. SMITH. Has the Senator offered an amendment to this provision?

Mr. LODGE. No; I am not offering an amendment to it. The Senator from Kentucky reserved the right to offer an amendment to it. The amendment of the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. Brandegee] would come next. It is an amendment to section 2, which reads:

It is hereby declared that filled milk, as herein defined, is an adulterated article of food, injurious to the public health, and its sale constitutes a fraud upon the public.

Those words the Senator from Connecticut proposes to strike out.

Mr. SMITH. What is the amendment now proposed? Does the Senator from Kentucky offer an amendment to the first section?

Mr. STANLEY. The Senator from Kentucky offers to insert after the words "filled milk" the following words—

Mr. BRANDEGEE. What line?

Mr. STANLEY. Line 4, page 3. Mr. LODGE. We have not reached that as yet.

Mr. STANLEY. It is a part of section 2.

Mr. LODGE. That is not a part of the amendment. It is a further amendment, which the Senator will have a perfect right

Mr. STANLEY. I will offer the amendment when we have acted on the one now before the Senate.

Mr. LODGE. The Senator has an entire right to offer that Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. The VICE PRESIDENT. The gentleman will state his in-

Mr. LODGE. The question is on the request of the Senator from Connecticut for a separate vote on his motion to strike out section 2. Mr. STANLEY. I give notice that when the amendment of the Senator from Connecticut has been acted on I will ask in the Senate to amend section 2 by adding, after the word "milk," on line 4, page 3, the following words:

Which is deleterious or injurious, or contains any injurious or deleterious ingredients, or which is not so marked or labeled as to plainly distinguish it from natural milk.

Mr. McCORMICK. A parliamentary inquiry.
The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state his inquiry.
Mr. McCORMICK. Have we disposed of subsection (c)?
The VICE PRESIDENT. That has not yet been disposed of.

The question is on concurring in the amendment on page 2, and included in subsection (c).

The amendment was concurred in.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Now I desire to submit a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state his inquiry.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. As in Committee of the Whole, the committee agreed to the committee amendment contained in section 2, which is indicated in italics. Is it in order to move to strike that out, the bill now being in the Senate, or is the question simply on concurring in the committee amendment?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on concurring in the amendment in section 2.

Mr. SMITH. I move to strike that out.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. That is not in order. If the Senate does not concur, it would be equivalent to striking it out. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the reading clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. McCUMBER (when his name was called). general pair with the junior Senator from Utah [Mr. KING], who is absent from the Chamber, and not knowing what his vote would be upon this amendment, I withhold my vote.

Mr. McKINLEY (when his name was called). I have a pair with the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. Caraway]. In his absence from the Chamber, not knowing how he would vote, I withhold my vote.

Mr. SWANSON (when his name was called). I have a pair with the senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. Townsend], and not knowing how he would vote on this amendment, I withhold my vote.

Mr. WATSON (when his name was called). Making the same announcement as before, I vote "nay."

Mr. WILLIS (when his name was called). I am paired with my colleague [Mr. Pomerene]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Oregon [Mr. Stanfield], and vote "yea." The roll call was concluded.

Mr. EDGE. Making the same announcement as before as to the transfer of my pair, I vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 36, nays 25, as follows:

YEAS-36.

Ashurst Borah Brookhart Cameron Capper Cummins Curtis Frelinghuysen Gooding McCormick McKellar McNary Moses Norbeck Norris Oddie Pepper Shields Shortridge Spencer Sterling Sutherland Walsh, Mass. Walsh, Mont. Weller Willis Hale Hitchcock Jones, Wash, Kellogg Kendrick Keyes Ladd La Follette Lenroot Pepper Reed, Pa. NAYS-25.

Ernst Brandegee Broussard Calder Dial Dillingham George Gerry Glass Harreld Heflin Lodge

New Overman Phipps Pittman Robinson Sheppard Smith NOT VOTING-35.

Stanley Wadsworth Warren Watson

Ball Bursum Caraway Colt Couzens Culberson Elkins Fernald Fletcher

France Harris Harrison Johnson Jones, N. Mex. King McCumber McKinley McLean

Myers Nelson Nicholson Owen Page Poindexter Pomerene Ransdell Reed, Mo.

Simmons Smoot Stanfield Swanson Townsend Trammell Underwood Williams

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PITTMAN. I offer an amendment, to strike out, on page 1, commencing with line 9, the numeral "(2)" and the words "between points within the same State, Territory, or possession, or within the District of Columbia, but through any place outside thereof." It is the provision which prevents commerce inside of a State.

Mr. LODGE. I ask that the amendment be stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the amend-

The READING CLERK. On page 1 strike out, beginning with line 9, as follows:

(2) between points within the same State, Territory, or possession, within the District of Columbia, but through any place outside

And the semicolon,

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. WADSWORTH. May I ask the Senator if he has a situation of this kind in mind-

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, debate is not in order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. No debate is in order.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I accept the rebuke.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada.

The amendment was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is, Shall the amendments be engrossed and the bill be read a third time?

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. LODGE. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After 35 minutes spent in executive session, the doors were reopened.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Overhue, its enrolling clerk, announced that the House had passed without amendment the following bills of the Senate:

S. 574. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to save daylight and to provide standard time for the United States," as

S. 1076. An act establishing standard grades of naval stores, preventing deception in transactions in naval stores, regulating traffic therein, and for other purposes;

S. 4211. An act authorizing preliminary examination and survey to be made of the Intracoastal Waterway in Louisiana and Texas: and

S. 4469. An act to extend the time for the construction of a bridge or bridges and trestles over the navigable channels of the mouth of the Mobile River in the State of Alabama.

The message also announced that the House had passed the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 240) authorizing the erection on public grounds of a memorial to the late Joseph J. Darlington, with an amendment, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message further announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 13550) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to enter into a contract with the Elephant Butte irrigation district of New Mexico and the El Paso County water improvement district No. 1, of Texas, for the carrying out of the provisions of the treaty of January 16, 1907, between the United States of America and the United States of Mexico, and for other purposes, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message also communicated to the Senate the intelligence of the death of Hon. W. BOURKE COCKBAN, late a Representative from the State of New York, and transmitted the resolutions of the House thereon.

ENROLLED BILLS.

The message further announced that the Speaker pro tempore of the House had signed the following enrolled bills:

S. 4197. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to issue to certain persons and certain corporations permits to explore, or leases of, certain lands that lie south of the medial line of the main channel of Red River, in Oklahoma, and for other purposes:

S. 4579. An act to authorize the Lee County bridge district No. 2, in the State of Arkansas, to construct a bridge over the St. Francis River;

S. 4583. An act granting the consent of Congress to the State of South Dakota for the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River between Charles Mix County and Gregory County, S. Dak.; H. R. 5018. An act to authorize the widening of First Street

NE., and for other purposes; and H. R. 13554. An act authorizing the construction, maintenance, and operation of a dam and appurtenant intake and outlet structures across or in the Potomac River at or near Williamsport, Washington County, Md.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT SERVICE (S. DOC. NO. 341).

The Vice President laid before the Senate a communication from the President of the United States, transmitting, pursuant to law, a claim amounting to $4,380.67, allowed by the General Accounting Office, as covered by certificate of settlement under appropriation, the balance of which has been exhausted, for the service of the Post Office Department, which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

NITRATE PLANT AT MUSCLE SHOALS (S. DOC. NO. 340).

The Vice President laid before the Senate a communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a supplemental estimate of appropriation for the War Department, fiscal year 1923, for payment of awards for land condemned for use by the War Department at the United States nitrate plant No. 2, Muscle Shoals, Ala., in amount $30,000, which with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

CLAIMS OF CERTAIN OIL COMPANIES.

Mr. McKELLAR submitted an amendement intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 4479) for the relief of Rose City Cotton Oil Mill and others, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

REPORT FROM THE COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY.

Mr. WALSH of Montana, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill (S. 4543) to amend an act entitled "An act to provide compensation for employees of the United States suffering injuries while in the performance of their duties, and for other purposes," approved September 7, 1916, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 1255) thereon.

ORDER FOR ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. CURTIS. I ask unanimous consent that at the conclusion of the business of the Senate to-day the Senate adjourn until 11 o'clock to-morrow morning.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, what business? After the deficiency bill passes I desire to take up the reclassification bill.

Mr. CURTIS. I say after the conclusion of the business of the Senate. They can go on as long as they like.

Mr. SMOOT. But I want it understood that it is not at the conclusion of this bill.

Mr. CURTIS. I have not asked for that,
Mr. SMOOT. I misunderstood the Senator.

Mr. McKELLAR. What is the proposal-to go on for some time?

Mr. CURTIS. The Senator from South Dakota [Mr. Ster-LING] wants to go on with the reclassification bill as soon as we get through with the appropriation bill; but I desire an agreement now, if possible, that when we conclude our business to-day we shall adjourn until 11 o'clock in the morning.

Mr. HEFLIN. There is no objection to that, I guess. Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I think the agreement should be entered into.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

THE MERCHANT MARINE.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, I knew when the shipping bill was defeated that its defeat would bring great delight to the shipping interests and to the people of Great Britain. I did not expect them to express themselves quite so freely and so quickly as they have done; but I find in the New York Times of to-day a dispatch from London to which I wish to call attention. This paper opposed the bill, and therefore no question can be made as to the authenticity of this dispatch. I ask that it may be read. It is short, but it is quite interesting, I think.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the article will be read.

The reading clerk read as follows:

SAYS WE COLLAPSE AT SEA-LONDON PAPER DECLARES THE GREAT AMERI-CAN EFFORT FAILS.

[By wireless to the New York Times.]

[By wireless to the New York Times.]

London, Feb. 28.—"America's collapse at sea" is the big-type headline used by the Daily Chronicle above a dispatch from its New York correspondent announcing the fate of the ship subsidy bill and a decision to place 1,700 American vessels on the market. Commenting editorially the Chronicle says:

"Thus ends in catastrophe the vastest and most futile attempt in history to create artificially a new industry. It represents probably the greatest recorded failure of the protectionist theory in practice, and consequently the greatest triumph for free trade in America. It means almost a dead loss of some £570,000,000. It means a bitter disillusionment, the collapse of a dream which would have put the American flag in every port of the world and on all its seas, the failure of a grandiose national effort in the furtherance of which the Government strained to the utmost its influence and resources and threw into the scale its official authority and unique propaganda.

"The dream has been shattered finally by the American taxpayer, but it is true that the causes of failure are economic, not political: They are simply these: That America could not build ships as cheaply as we could, or as well; that she could neither run them nor man them as we do; that it is beyond the power of our Government or of any Government to create a carrying trade artificially; that Washington has made the same mistake with shipping that Moscow has made with industry.

"Naturally British shipping will benefit. So long as these American."

industry.

"Naturally British shipping will benefit. So long as these American ships were run as they were being run, for the purpose of forcing an opening of doors for American traffic, and not for legitimate profit, and so long as the American citizen was patient enough to pay out of his pocket for the experiment, it was useless to hope for recovery in the shipping trade.

"A new chapter now opens for the British mercantile marine. At the same time a chapter closes in economic history that has its lesson not only for America, but for all who have the intelligence to read it."

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I have no disposition to renew the debate on the shipping bill. It has consumed the attention of the Senate during the special session preceding the present session and the greater part of the time of this session. I think we ought to give our attention now to live subjects of legislation.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 14408) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, and prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will continue the reading of the bill.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the head "Department of State," on page 51, after line 10. to insert:

ADORNMENT OF THE PEACE PALACE AT THE HAGUE.

The appropriation of $20,000 to enable the United States to contribute to the adornment of the Peace Palace at The Hague, made by the diplomatic and consular act, approved February 28, 1913, including the same objects specified under this head, is hereby reappropriated and made available for the fiscal years 1923 and 1924.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I desire to give notice that I shall move to strike out, when we reach it, the item of $78,- 675,000, on page 54, for the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

The next amendment was, under the head "International Exposition at Rio de Janeiro, Brazil," on page 53, at the beginning of line 15, to strike out "$30,000" and insert "$35,000," so as to make the paragraph read:

The appropriation of $1,000,000 authorized by Joint Resolution No. 25, approved November 2, 1921, for the expenses of taking part in an international exposition to be held at Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, which was made by the first deficiency act, fiscal year 1922, approved December 15, 1921, is hereby made available for the fiscal year 1924, and the Secretary of State may expend not to exceed $15,000 of the balance of the appropriation, not required for the expenses of participation in the exposition building and improvement of the grounds thereof for permanent use as residence and offices of the diplomatic representative of the United States to Brazil; and not to exceed $35,000 for the purchase of additional land adjoining the site now owned by the United States upon which the exposition building is situated.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 53, after line 17, to insert:

CLAIM OF GOVERNMENT OF FRANCE.

To pay the Government of France, as an act of grace and without reference to the question of the legal liability of the United States, in satisfaction of a claim on account of losses sustained by a French citizen in connection with the search for the body of Admiral John Paul Jones, $13,511.13.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head "Treasury Department," on page 54, after line 10, to insert:

DIVISION OF BOOKKEEPING AND WARRANTS.

Contingent expenses, public moneys: For contingent expenses under the requirements of section 3653 of the Revised Statutes, for the collection, safe-keeping, transfer, and disbursement of the public money, etc., including the same objects specified under this head in the act making appropriations for the Treasury Department for the fiscal year 1923, $15,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 56, after line 11, to insert: Denver, Colo., mint building: For additional vault facilities, $50,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 58, after line 7, to insert: River and harbor work: For payment of claims adjusted and settled under section 4 of the river and harbor appropriation act approved June 25, 1910, as amended, certified to Congress during the present session in House Document No. 596, $4,803.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 58, after line 21, to insert:

INTERNATIONAL SHOOTING COMPETITION.

To meet the expenses incident to holding an international shooting competition in the United States in connection with the national matches, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War, to be immediately available, and to remain available until December 31, 1923: Provided, That the rifles, pistols, equipment, ammunition, and personal effects of the visiting riflemen from foreign countries be admitted to the United States without the imposition of duty, $25,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Quartermaster Corps," on page 59, line 16, after the numerals "1924," to strike out the proviso in the following words:

Provided, That this appropriation shall not become available for expenditure until the State of Kansas shall have entered into an agreement with the Secretary of War to maintain the roads in good condition after their construction or improvement has been completed.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under head "Judgments, United States courts," on page 60, line 23, after the numerals "573," to insert "and Senate Document No. 314," so as to read:

For payment of the final judgments and decrees, including costs of suits, which have been rendered under the provisions of the act of March 3, 1887, entitled "An act to provide for the bringing of suits against the Government of the United States," as amended, certified to Congress during the present session by the Attorney General in House Document No. 573 and Senate Document No. 314, and which have not been appealed, namely.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, at the top of page 61, to insert:

Under the United States Housing Corporation, $437.50.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 61, line 4, before the word "together," to insert a semicolon and the words "in all, $402,-274.12," so as to read:

Under the War Department, $401,836.62; in all, $402,274.12, together with such additional sum as may be necessary to pay interest on the respective judgments at the rate of 4 per cent from the date thereof until the time this appropriation is made.

Mr. KING. I would like to have an explanation of that War Department Item.

Mr. WARREN. They are judgments of the Court of Claims drawing 4 per cent.

Mr. SMOOT. We want to pay them as quickly as we can. Mr. KING. They are judgments against the United States? Mr. WARREN. Yes.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head "Judgments, Court of Claims," on page 61, line 11, after the numerals "575," to insert "and Senate Documents Nos. 312 and 324," so as to read:

JUDGMENTS, COURT OF CLAIMS,

For payment of the judgments rendered by the Court of Claims and reported to Congress during the present session in House Document No. 575 and Senate Documents Nos. 312 and 324, namely:

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 61, after line 12, to insert: Under the Department of the Interior, $430.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 61, at the end of line 16, to strike out "$62,750.39" and insert "$249,257.57," so as to read:

Under the War Department, $249,257.57.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 61, at the end of line 17, to increase the appropriation for payment of the judgments rendered by the Court of Claims and reported to Congress during the present session in House Document No. 575 and Senate Documents Nos. 312 and 324, from "$72,811.41" to "$259,-748.59."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 69, after line 12, to insert:

AUDITED CLAIMS.

SEC. 3. That for the payment of the following claims, certified to be due by the General Accounting Office under appropriations the balances of which have been exhausted or carried to the surplus fund under the provisions of section 5 of the act of June 20, 1874, and under appropriations heretofore treated as permanent, being for the service of the fiscal year 1920 and prior years unless otherwise stated, and which have been certified to Congress under section 2 of the act of July 7, 1884, as fully set forth in Senate Document No. 313, reported to Congress at its present session, there is appropriated as follows:

INDEPENDENT OFFICES.

For salaries and expenses, Federal Board for Vocational Education, $22.82.
For Interstate Commerce Commission. $7.67.
For salaries and expenses, Veterans' Bureau, 53 cents.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE.

For general expenses. Lighthouse Service, $9.76.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR.

For scientific library, Patent Office, $2.50.
For maintenance and operation of fuel yards, District of Columbia, Bureau of Mines, $88.11.
For increase of compensation, Indian Service, $24.
For purchase and transportation of Indian supplies, $55.09.
For Indian School, Riverside, Calif., $161.14.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.

For detection and prosecution of crimes, $49.99, For fees of commissioners, United States courts, $153.20. For support of prisoners, United States courts, $3,906.61.

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR.

For expenses of regulating immigration. $4. For enforcement of laws against allen anarchists, $238.25. DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

For salaries of secretaries, diplomatic service, $110.76.
For transportation of diplomatic and consular officers, $41.06.
For salaries, Consular Service, $340.18.
For post allowances to diplomatic and consular officers, $304.16.
For contingent expenses, United States consulates, $95.11.
For national security and defense, Department of State, $101.11.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

For expenses of loans, act September 24, 1917, as amended, $88.35. For salaries and expenses of collectors, etc., of internal revenue, $38.53.

For collecting the war revenue, $110.73.

For allowance or drawback (internal revenue), $144.

For Coast Guard, $358.54.

WAR DEPARTMENT.

For pay, etc., of the Army, $10.67.
For mileage to officers and contract surgeons, $7.68.
For general appropriations, Quartermaster Corps, $8,015.53.
For supplies, services, and transportation, Quartermaster Corps, $85,587.76.

$85,587.76.
For barracks and quarters, $75.
For Air Service, Army, 30 cents.
For increase for aviation, Signal Corps, $6.87.
For medical and hospital department, $73.29.
For Ordnance Service, $16.50.
For ordnance stores, ammunition, $8.37.
For ordnance stores and supplies, $100.86.
For armament of fortifications, $1,925.42.
For armament of fortifications, $1,925.42.
For arming, equipping, and training the National Guard, $471.91.
For increase of compensation, Military Establishment, $950.84.
For National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, Pacific Branch, $6.76.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT-POSTAL SERVICE.

For clerks, first and second class post offices, $299.42. For power-boat service, $65.37. For unusual conditions at post offices, $100. Total, audited claims, section 3, $104,178.75.

The amendment was agreed to.

month.

The next amendment was, on page 72, line 22, to change the section number from "3" to "4."

The amendment was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The committee amendments are all disposed of.

Mr. WARREN. I wish to say that the Senate committee has further amendments, and under the agreement they are now in order, and I wish to present them.

The VICE PRESIDENT. They are in order, and the Chair recognizes the Senator from Wyoming for the purpose of offering them

Mr. WARREN. The first amendment I send to the desk. The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the amendment.

The READING CLERK. On page 3 insert a new paragraph, as follows:

To pay the widow of the late W. BOURKE COCKRAN, late a Representative from the State of New York, $7,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WARREN. I offer the following amendment.
The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the amendment.

The READING CLERK. On page 4, line 1, strike out the word "three" and insert the word "four."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WARREN. I offer an amendment for consideration which probably is legislation, in a way. I will send it to the desk to be read, and if any explanation is necessary, it can be

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the amendment.

The READING CLERK. On page 9, after line 2, to insert the following:

SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION.

That additional taxes amounting to $74,657.70, together with all penalties and other charges thereon, assessed by the Treasury Department against the estate of Charles L. Freer, deceased, late of Detroit, Mich., which estate has been closed, the executors discharged, and the residue paid over to the Smithsonian Institution as an endowment for the Freer Gallery of Art, presented to the Nation by the said Charles L. Freer, are hereby canceled and the Treasury Department is hereby authorized and directed to remit any further taxes, penalties, or charges, which may hereafter be found due from the said estate.

The amendment was agreed to

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WARREN. I offer the following amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the amendment.

The READING CLERK. On page 29, after line 24, to insert the

The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to pay to R. P. Rueth, of Chamita, N. Mex., the sum of $350 from the appropriation for the support and civilization of the Indians of New Mexico for the fiscal year 1922, in reimbursement of the amount expended by him from personal funds for the repair of the bridge across the Rio Grande at the San Juan Indian pueblo in the State of New Mexico.

Mr. KING. May I ask the Senator if that is not an item that was contained in a special bill which was rejected by the Senate?

Mr. WARREN. I do not recall that, but it is a matter offered to remedy a situation in which the Commissioner of Indian Affairs finds himself.

The amendment was agreed to.
Mr. WARREN. I offer another amendment, which I send to the desk

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the amendment.

The READING CLERK. On page 48, after line 4, to insert:

For payment of the claim of J. Leo Skelley allowed by the General Accounting Office, as covered by certificate of settlement, under appropriation the balance of which has been exhausted, and for the service of the Post Office Department, $4,380.67.

The amendment was agreed to.
Mr. WARREN. I will send to the desk now an amendment which appropriates no money, but changes the application of money appropriated for a certain building, so that instead of all of it being used for painting, repairs to plumbing, and so forth, a certain amount of it may be used for mechanical equip-

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the amendment.

The READING CLERK. On page 56, after line 20, to insert the following:

West Roxbury, Mass., Public Health Service Hospital No. 44: That the sum of $50,000 appropriated in the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the Treasury Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, and for other purposes," approved February 17, 1922, for exterior and interior painting of all buildings, and repairs to plumbing, at the Public Health Hospital, West Roxbury, Mass., is hereby made available for mechanical equipment, in addition to the items already authorized.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WARREN. There is a matter of legislation contained in the amendment I am about to offer which I will describe in a few words before the amendment is read. When our troops were in Cuba and the Philippines, at the time of the war with Spain and immediately afterwards, certain officers and men submitted themselves for experiment in the study of yellow fever and its cure. Certain of the officers died, and years ago we provided that a certain amount should be paid by the War Department to those who survived. The man mentioned in the amendment I am about to send to the desk was an enlisted man who submitted himself with the others and was very ill. He had yellow fever, but he did not die.

It seems he was one of those brave men who did not wish to make it a matter of money, but wanted the glory, as courageous, heroic men do, so he refused to take any money at that time or to have anything done for him. But it seems that afterwards his trouble developed again; he asked for aid, and then we passed a pension bill granting him $12 a month. That was passed, I think, in 1907, and he was granted a pension of $12 a Later on, about 1911, the matter was brought before the Committee on Military Affairs and this man was put on the same basis as the others, to draw a hundred dollars a month, to be paid by the War Department. He has drawn that sum ever since, and it seems that through ignorance or neglect he has also drawn the $12 a month up to the time he was informed and the department corrected itself, so that it would amount to probably $500 or $600 received by him which he should not have had.

The man now lies in bed, paralyzed from the waist down; he has a family, and he was provided for in the regular annual Army appropriation bill. When it went to the House, in conference they asked that $50 a month be reserved from his pay until this debt to the Government was extinguished. This amendment is to clear the record, to remove any charge of debt against this man, and permit him to draw hereafter the $100 a month and that amount only.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the amendment.

The READING CLERK. On page 57, after line 25, insert the following paragraph:

That the Secretary of War be authorized and directed to continue on the rolls of the War Department the name of John R. Kissinger, late of Company D, One hundred and fifty-seventh Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and also late of the Hospital Corps of the United States Army, and continue to pay him the sum of $100 per month during his natural life pursuant to the act of Congress approved February 15, 1911, notwithstanding the fact that certain payments of pension money may have heretofore been made to said John R. Kissinger under a special act of Congress approved March 2, 1907, and that return of such sums as have been paid contrary to law to said John R. Kissinger under said act of March 2, 1907, shall not be demanded, nor shall any deduction on account of such payment be made from moneys due and payable to him under said act of February 15, 1911.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WARREN. I offer a further amendment relating to Muscle Shoals, but I will say that it is only to appropriate a small amount that is due for land that was taken by the Government and was not settled for.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the amendment.

The READING CLERK. On page 58, after line 21, insert the following:

MUSCLE SHOALS.

Land for nitrate plant No. 2: For amount required to pay awards for land condemned for use by the War Department at the United States nitrate plant No. 2, Muscle Shoals, Ala., $30,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SMOOT. From the committee I offer the following amendment. I will say to the Senate that this is not an appropriation but it is an authorization to use money for the rental of the Lemon Building and to transfer money from one fund to another. I am trying to get more employees in the Lemon Building.

Mr. ROBINSON. Is it a legislative provision?

Mr. SMOOT. Yes; a legislative provision so far as the transfer of the money is concerned. It does not appropriate a cent of money, but gives us more room and saves us money.

Mr. ROBINSON. We have relaxed the rule, so I will not object to this.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the amendment.

The READING CLERK. On page 58, following line 12, to insert the following:

That $1,800 from the appropriations for the rental of buildings and parts of buildings for military purposes in the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, is hereby made available for the rental of the Lemon Building for the period beginning April 1, 1923, and ending June 30, 1923, and $5.400 from the appropriations for the rental of buildings and parts of buildings for military purposes in the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, is hereby made available for the rental of the Lemon Building for the fiscal year 1924, without regard to the particular purposes for which it is to be used.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WARREN, I have one further amendment on the part of the committee

Mr. ROBINSON. Is this a committee amendment? Mr. WARREN. It is the last amendment of the committee. The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the amendment.

The READING CLERK. On page 18, after line 24, to insert the following:

The Reading Clerk. On page 18, after line 24, to insert the following:

On page 18, after line 24, insert the following:

"That, pursuant to the report of the joint select committee appointed under the provisions of the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of such District for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, and for other purposes," approved June 29, 1922, there shall be credited to the general account of the District of Columbia, required under the provisions of said act to be kept in the Treasury Department, the sum of $7.574,416.90, being the reported balance in the general fund of said District, as shown on the books of the Treasury Department on June 30, 1922, as certified by the Comptroller General of the United States and as verified in the report of said committee, that there shall be charged to said account the proportion of unexpended balances of appropriations on said date, payable by said District, together with obligations and encumbrances which will accrue subsequent to said date and amounting in all to $2,903,-219.93; that there shall also be charged to said account the sum of $233,707.51, found by the said committee in its report as due from the District of Columbia to the United States, as follows: The District's proportion of the $240 annual bonus paid to certain of its employees, $191.890.35, the District's proportion of the cost of additional land for the National Zoological Park, $41,500, and one-half of amount appropriated by special act of Congress for the relief of Eldred C. Davis, $317.16; that there shall be credited to said account the sum of $665.46, found by the said committee in its report as due the District of Columbia from the United States; that in the settlement of said items between the United States or the District of Columbia, in respect to the items involved; that, taking into account the above mentioned charges and credits, the amount of the

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. President, this is a very important matter. I doubt if any Senator knows anything about it. I feel compelled to-make the point of order against it as being general legislation upon an appropriation bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair understands it has been reported by the committee.

Mr. WARREN. It was duly considered by the committee and reported. I am aware, as the Senator has stated, that it is a matter covering a great deal of ground, but to bring it down to a few words it means that either we do or do not owe the District of Columbia some four million and odd dollars as a result of the accounting that has taken place going back as far as 1878 and being brought up to the present hour. It is the opinion of the committee that the United States does owe the District of Columbia that amount,

Mr. LENROOT. I would like to ask how much consideration was given to it by the subcommittee?

Mr. PHIPPS. On February 17 a bill was introduced in the Senate and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia covering this very language, and the Committee on the District of Columbia reported the bill out favorably, and it is on the calendar. On the same date, February 17, in the House a duplicate of the Senate bill was introduced by Congressman HARDY of Colorado, and it was referred to the House Committee on the District of Columbia, and has been favorably reported by the House committee. The bill, therefore, having received the approval of a standing committee of the House as well as a standing committee of the Senate, I do not see how it can be subject to a point of order.

Mr. LENROOT. It is general legislation. The committee has no right to report general legislation. I happen to know that there is opposition to the matter in another body. I know nothing about the merits of it. It may be all right, but I do know if there be opposition in another body that there will be no opportunity to consider the matter on its merits if it is attached as an amendment to the pending bill. Clearly, it seems to me, it is, of course, general legislation. I think the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations admits that it is subject to a point of order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair is of the opinion that the point of order is well taken.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, the Attorney General sent to the Committee on Appropriations an amendment which he desires to have adopted. The committee thought it was general legislation, and referred it to the Committee on the Judiciary. I have taken it up with the Judiciary Committee, and they report favorably. I think it is in order. I ask unanimous consent to report at this time the amendment, as it is a very important matter.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be reported. The READING CLERK, On page 17, after line 3, insert the following:

SUPERINTENDENT OF THE WASHINGTON ASYLUM AND JAIL

SUPERINTENDENT OF THE WASHINGTON ASYLUM AND JAIL,

The superintendent of the Washington Asylum and Jail, appointed by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, is hereby directed, anthorized, and required to execute the judgments of the law heretofore pronounced and hereafter to be pronounced in the District of Columbia by the courts thereof in all capital cases, and the power and the authority heretofore given to and now vested in such commissioners to appoint such superintendent and all appointments to the position of such superintendent made by such commissioners, are hereby ratified and confirmed, and any failure on the part of Congress heretofore or hereafter to make specific appropriation for the salaries or compensation of such superintendent shall not be construed either as an abolition of such superintendent of the Washington Asylum and Jail or as a repeal of the power and authority of such commissioners to appoint such superintendent.

The amendment was acreed to

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. OVERMAN. I ask permission to place in the RECORD in 8-point type a letter from the Attorney General, so that in conference the amendment may be understood.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the Record in 8-point type, as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE, Washington, D. C., February 26, 1923.

Hon. KNUTE NELSON,

Chairman Judiciary Committee of the Scnate,

Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: I have the honor to inclose herewith a copy of a letter from the United States attorney for the District of Columbia. You will note that his letter suggests legislation for the relief of a very serious situation, and I send it to you for your serious consideration.

Respectfully,

JOHN W. H. CRIM, Assistant Attorney General.

OFFICE OF THE UNITED STATES ATTORNEY, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA. Washington, D. C., February 23, 1923.

The ATTORNEY GENERAL,

Department of Justice, Washington, D. C.

SIR: There is pending in the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia a case on appeal from the Supreme Court of this District which involves the question whether there is such a position as the superintendent of the Washington Asylum and Jail. The case went up on appeal from a judgment of the lower court overruling the demurrer to the return of the Government to a petition for habeas corpus in a capital case in which the death warrant directed such superintendent to execute the judgment of the court.

As there are a number of other prisoners in the custody of such superintendent under sentence of death, together with many convicted of various crimes, I am somewhat apprehensive as to what would happen should the Court of Appeals hold that there is no such position as superintendent of the Washington Asylum and Jail, and especially so in view of the fact that Congress will not be in session again for 9 or 10 months.

In 1911 Congress abolished the office of warden of the faft. whose duty it had been to execute the judgments of the court in capital cases, and created the office of superintendent of the Washington Asylum and Jail, and authorized the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to appoint such superintendent, and conferred upon such superintendent all the duties, discretion, and powers then vested in and exercised by the warden of the jail of the District of Columbia and the superintendent of the then Washington Asylum.

In the act of June 26, 1912, making appropriation for the District of Columbia, is the following provision:

"That the superintendent of the Washington Asylum and Jail appointed by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia be, and he is hereby, directed, authorized, and required to execute the judgments of the law heretofore pronounced and hereafter to be pronounced in the District of Columbia by the courts thereof in all capital cases." (37 Stat. L., Pt. I, p. 170.)

From that time to the present the judgments of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia in capital cases have been executed by the superintendent of the Washington Asylum and Jail or by his assistant.

The contention in the case now pending in the Court of Appeals is that the position of superintendent of the Washington

Asylum and Jail has been abolished by reason of the fact that since 1919 Congress has failed to make any appropriation for salary or compensation for the position of superintendent of the Washington Asylum and Jail, while making appropriation for the positions of superintendent of the workhouse and reformatory, and superintendent of the Washington Asylum Hospital.

In view of the above circumstances, and so that there may be no question about the matter, I would suggest that you request Congress immediately to enact legislation as follows:

"An act authorizing the superintendent of the Washington Asylum and Jail to execute the judgments of the courts in the District of Columbia in capital cases, and ratifying and confirming appointments to the position of such superintendent made by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

"Be it enacted, etc., That the superintendent of the Washington Asylum and Jail appointed by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia be, and he is hereby, directed, authorized, and required to execute the judgments of the law heretofore pronounced and hereafter to be pronounced in the District of Columbia by the courts thereof in all capital cases. And the power and authority heretofore given to and now vested in such commissioners to appoint such superintendent and all appointments to the position of such superintendent made by such commissioners are hereby ratified and confirmed; and any failure on the part of Congress, either heretofore or hereafter, to make a specific appropriation for the salary or compensation of such superintendent shall not be construed either as an abolition of such position of superintendent of the Washington Asylum and Jail or as a repeal of the power and authority of such commissioners to appoint such superintendent."

Respectfully,

PEYTON GORDON, United States Attorney.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I offer the following amendnent, to be inserted on page 41, under the heading "Department of Labor." It is an amendment which I have offered in another form heretofore and relates to pay for overtime for the immigration officers and inspectors, the pay for overtime to be furnished by the steamship and transportation companies.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The READING CLERK. On page 41, after the amendment in lines 19 and 25 heretofore agreed to, insert the following:

lines 19 and 25 heretofore agreed to, insert the following:

The Secretary of Labor is authorized, under such regulations as he may deem advisable, to pay extra compensation to immigrant inspectors and other immigration employees when, at the request of any transportation company, corporation, or individual bringing aliens to the United States, such officers or employees are required to report for extra duty or to work overtime, or on nights, Sundays, or holidays, in connection with the examination of alien passengers or crews; and the transportation company, corporation, or individual requesting such extra service shall pay to the Secretary of Labor as reimbursement the amounts expended by him for such extra service in accordance with his regulations, and such reimbursement shall be credited to the appropriation "Expenses regulating immigration."

Mr. WARREN. That seems to me to be something against which I shall have to make the point of order, but I will withhold it for the moment if the Senator from Massachusetts wishes to explain the amendment.

Mr. LODGE. It is an attempt to get pay for the immigration Inspectors when they work overtime, the money to be paid by the transportation companies and steamship companies when they require the immigration inspectors to work overtime and at night. I suppose it is general legislation.

Mr. WARREN. It would seem to me that it is. We did not have it before the committee.

Mr. SWANSON, Mr. President, will the Senators speak louder? It is impossible for us to understand what the amendment is or what they are saying about it.

Mr. KING. A point of order has been made against the amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The point of order is well taken. Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, with reference to the amendment which the Senator from Massachusetts has offered, I desire to say that a subcommittee of the Committee on Commerce was appointed to consider the legislation, and I think held quite extensive hearings, but was not able to reach a conclusion before the present session should come to a close. Mr. LODGE. A House committee held hearings on it, too.

Mr. JONES of Washington. We hope during the next session of Congress to present legislation covering the situation.

Mr. LODGE. I think it is desirable that that be done.
Mr. CALDER, Mr. President, I introduced a bill covering this matter and it was referred to the Committee on Commerce. The bill was introduced by me because in the last session of Congress there was passed a bill providing for similar payments for the customs inspectors. The Senator from Massachusetts now desires that the immigration inspectors shall be cared for in the same way. This legislation has been asked for by the great shipping companies in New York City, Boston, and other large cities in the East. They are perfectly agreeable to having the service paid for in this way. It would put the immigration inspectors exactly on the same status as the customs inspectors are to-day. It is most unjust to have the customs inspectors paid for the overtime while the immigration inspectors must work overtime without pay.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, a point of order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Arkansas will state the point of order.

Mr. ROBINSON. I understand a point of order has been made against the amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts and was sustained.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair ruled on the point of

Mr. LODGE. I never knew of any rule in the Senate that prevented Senators from talking about a subject after it had been ruled on.

been ruled on.

Mr. ROBINSON. There is such a rule in the Senate, but I never knew that anybody observed it very rigidly.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I have another amendment that I desire to offer. On the 9th of May, 1921, the Senate passed an act paying to the State of Massachusetts the sum of $233,-885.82, cost charges and expenses properly incurred by such State for interest and premium paid for coin in payment of such interest on bonds issued for money borrowed and expended at the request of the President of the United States during the Civil War. Other similar amounts have been paid. The matter has been before the court and the finding of the court approves it, though no judgment was entered. Therefore I offer the amendment.

Mr. WARREN. I reserve an objection until the amendment has been reported.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be reported. The READING CLERK. Insert in the proper place the following words .

To pay the State of Massachusetts for interest and premium paid on coast-defense bonds as set forth in the findings reported by the Court of Claims in favor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and printed in House Document 359, Sixty-fifth Congress, first session, $233,885.82.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, I regret to have to say that this is a matter against which I shall have to make a point of order. I regret it all the more because it relates to the State of my birth and early training. Different States have been paid various sums at various times, which were considered sufficient at the time. These matters have been brought up since to crowd the matter a little on the question of interest, and so forth. As against that a number of States of the Union-I have forgotten whether Massachusetts was one of the States—In the early years borrowed from the Treasury of the United States. The United States had a full Treasury and for some reason wanted to dispose of its funds, and so loaned them to various The States have never repaid those loans, and the United States has seemingly made no practicable effort to collect I feel that I shall have to make the point of order against the amendment, because it is a claim, and, while it has behind it the finding of the Court of Claims, it is not a judgment, and it has not passed both Houses to make it suitable to put on the pending bill.

Mr. LODGE. I shall not contest the ruling which I anticl-pate, but I do want to say that the State of Massachusetts, to my knowledge, never borrowed any money from the United States, but paid gold throughout the Civil War. It is a question of the premium.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The point of order is well taken. Mr. LODGE. Now, Mr. President, I have one more amendment to offer.

Mr. ROBINSON, Mr. President, I ask recognition to present an amendment. The Senator from Massachusetts has presented three or four amendments.

Mr. LODGE. I think I have presented two.
Mr. ROBINSON. I suggest to the Senator from Massachusetts that there is no Senator entitled to present amendment after amendment and retain the floor, and that there ought to be an opportunity for other Senators to be recognized.

Mr. LODGE. I have been recognized, and I think I have the floor. I do not know of any rule which prevents me from offering more than one amendment.

Mr. ROBINSON. The Senator loses the floor when the amendment he offers is disposed of. Otherwise one Senator would be able to take the floor and offer an indefinite number of amendments.

Mr. LODGE. I was recognized for the purpose of offering an amendment a moment ago, and I have been recognized for the purpose of offering another amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair understood that he recognized the Senator from Massachusetts to present this amendment.

Mr. ROBINSON. Will the Chair indicate how long it is the purpose of the present occupant of the chair to recognize the senior Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. LODGE. I have no other amendment to present after this

Mr. ROBINSON. I suppose if the Senator had an indefinite number he would be recognized to present them.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair made the statement with the understanding that the Senator from Massachusetts asked recognition for only one further amendment.

Mr. LODGE. This is an amendment which I am offering because I was urged very strongly to do so, and I hope the Senate may adopt it.

Mr. ROBINSON. I suggest that the amendment be reported. The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will report the

The READING CLERK. Insert at the proper place the follow-

That the Joint Committee on the Library be, and it is hereby, authorized to provide for the restoration and completion of the historical frieze in the rotunda of the Capitol. For that purpose the said joint committee is empowered to select an appropriate design for the completion of the frieze and to employ such artists in the work of completion and restoration as may demonstrate to the satisfaction of said joint committee their ability to perform the work in a proper manner. That there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $20,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, for the purposes of this resolution.

Mr. WARREN. The amendment possesses nearly all the elements that make it nonadmissible now. It has not been before the committee and it is not estimated for.

Mr. LODGE. It was reported from another committee. WARREN. That may be, but that does not entitle it to go into an appropriation bill.

I am aware of that. Mr. LODGE.

Mr. WARREN. I am sorry to have to say it, because I think the object is good, but the way to handle these matters is to get them before the proper authorities in season, and not to ask that we shall at the last minute in a session of Congress insert them by way of amendment in an appropria-

The VICE PRESIDENT. The point of order is well taken. Mr. ROBINSON. I submit the amendment which I send to the desk

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Arkansas will be stated.

The READING CLERK. On page 2, line 4, it is proposed to insert the following:

After March 1, 1923, the salatics of the Assistant Doorkeeper and Acting Assistant Doorkeeper shall be at the rate of $4,200 per annum each, and there is hereby appropriated the sum of $1,600 to carry out

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, I think, through some misapprehension, the Senator offering that amendment believes that we have agreed in the committee to accept it, and while I am sorry that we have to include any amendment of that kind at this time, I shall not object to the two increases proposed in the amendment just stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Arkansas.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MOSES. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk to insert a new section and I ask that it may be stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from New Hampshire will be stated.

The reading clerk proceeded to read the amendment.
Mr. WARREN. Unless the Senator who offers the amendment wishes the whole amendment read—

Mr. MOSES. This amendment is the same as the printed amendment which I offered some time ago except that the $4,000 items in the amendment have been reduced to $3,600 and the 84 additional clerks are proposed to be carried at a salary of $1.500 instead of $1,200; in other words, I make a reduction of $400 in the amendment as originally offered in the first item which I proposed, and in the last place named I have provided for an increase of $300 a year. I have no desire to have the amendment read in full, but I desire that it may be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. WARREN. I have no objection to the amendment being printed in the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection the amendment will be printed in the RECORD.

The amendment proposed by Mr. Moses is to add a new section, as follows:

will be printed in the Record.

The amendment proposed by Mr. Moses is to add a new section, as follows:

That part of the act making appropriations for the legislative branch of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, and for other purposes, under the beading "Senate" subheading "Committee employees," is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Clerks and messengers to the following committees: Agriculture and Forestry—clerk $3,600, assistant clerk $2,500, assistant clerk $2,100; Appropriations—clerk $6,000, assistant clerks at $1,800 each, messenger $1,200; To Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate—clerk $3,600, assistant clerk $2,500, as

"CLERICAL ASSISTANTS TO SENATORS.

"CLERICAL ASSISTANTS TO SENATORS.

"For clerical assistance to Senators who are not chairmen of the committees specially provided for herein: Seventy clerks at $3,600 each, 70 assistant clerks at $2,500 each, 70 assistant clerks at $2,100 each, $574,000: Provided, That such clerks and assistant clerks shall be ex officio clerks and assistant clerks of any committee of which their Senator is chairman.

"Eighty-four additional clerks at $1,500 each, 1 for each Senator having no more than 1 clerk and 2 assistant clerks for himself or for the committee of which he is chairman, $\frac{1}{2}$ in all, $\frac{1}{2}$ "For compiling the Navy Yearbook for the calendar year 1922, under the direction of the chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs, $500."

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, I desire to say that we can not now take up the matter which is involved in the amendment, much as I should like to do so. It is a matter in reference to which the Senator from New Hampshire has been very properly industrious. He brought it before our committee at the time we were acting upon the legislative appropriation bill. At that time we believed that we should have the reclassification bill before the Senate any day. We asked the Senator from New Hampshire to wait until the reclassification bill should be reported. The reclassification bill, however, has not yet passed.

This proposed legislation, like all other legislation, must, of course, go to the House of Representatives, for finally the legislation to pay Senators and to authorize the payment of their clerks and also the other employees which belong to both the House and the Senate together, such as the police and the drafting service and many other services, has to be acted on by both Houses.

I have here to be brought before the committee a bill which must yet be passed upon by its members, and which I hope may be enacted into law. It is a bill which provides for the continuing of the so-called bonus of $240 to every employee who is receiving $2,500 and less per annum. If we are to pass the reclassification bill, and also to change the salaries of our employees, the other House, of course, will have the same right, as they probably have the same intent as we have. They have. however, met the matter in another way, which I think we may follow without too much trouble, and perhaps avoid the final loss of the pending appropriation bill. At the end of the so-called bonus bill the House has added a specific provision which states:

Which states:

Sec. 10. That a joint committee of Congress is hereby created, consisting of three Senators who are Members of the Sixty-eighth Congress, to be appointed by the Vice President, and three Representatives elect to the Sixty-eighth Congress who are Members of the Sixty-seventh Congress, to be appointed by the Speaker. It shall be the duty of the joint committee to investigate and report to Congress on the first day of the next regular session what adjustments, if any, should be made in the compensation of the officers and employees of the Senate and House of Representatives, including joint committees and joint commissions, the office of the Architect of the Capitol, the Legislative Drafting Service, and the Capitol police.

Mr. President, as I have stated, the bonus bill carries $20 a month, or $240 per annum, to all clerks who are now receiving $2,500 or less, and it will leave the clerks receiving more than that uncovered after the 1st of next July, unless we may other-

I have had some communication with the various Members of Congress; not that I have sought for any directions as to what to do, but they have several times spoken of the unfairness of the proposition-and I acknowledge that it is unfair, and yet we can not help it-that we have had a reclassification bill in hand for 14 months, which we now propose to pass and send over to the House with perhaps 14 minutes remaining, certainly not more than 14 hours of the session. I am advised that they can not and will not undertake to get that measure through, because a large proportion of the Members of the House are going out and are pressing hard, of course, to secure the enactment of various items of legislation, as are also Members who have been reelected.

As to the reclassification bill, my conversation concerning it has been mainly with the chairman of the House committee; and while, of course, he can not bind his committee, and I did not ask him to do so, and I do not now undertake to say what we will do, I said that if we were going into anything of that kind we should date the provisions back so that the legislation would cover the clerks in the same way as if the bill had been passed at an earlier time. He did not personally make any objection to that, but he said the bonus bill, which I shall expect to report to-morrow providing an appropriation of $37,000,000 or $38,000,000, would be necessary any way; that if at the last moment a change should come about in the status of the reclassification bill that money would have to be appropriated and that it would only take a line or two added to the end of the bill to apply the appropriation otherwise.

Mr. President, other Senators know the trials of conferees as well as I do. We have had troubles in former times with the House over matters that were of joint concern in a way. We have undertaken to draw the line since I have had charge of the appropriation bills and to reach an understanding that, as the employees of individual Senators and of the Senate, the House must leave those questions to the Senate, and as to the employees of the House and their salaries we would leave such matters to them. So far I have been able to maintain that spirit of comity.

I wish to say furthermore—and never was that condition more apparent than at the last session-we have had periods of disagreement, but along the general line indicated the House committee has been ready to cooperate with the Senate committee in speeding business along without such controversies as have sometimes obliged us to reach the end of a short session of Congress on March 4 without one or more of the appropriation bills having been disposed of.

Much as I want to see these clerks receive proper compensation. I do not want to undertake to accept an amendment of the kind offered and take a chance on the ultimate passage of this deficiency bill, as I know we will be doing if we adopt the The reclassification bill should be acted upon amendment. before we undertake to settle the question involved in the pending amendment; and, at any rate, the bonus bill contains a provision to which I have referred which will bring about a consideration and adjustment of the matter. But I am not willing to undertake now to raise the salaries of our clerks, which were raised during war times, and let it go to the country, as it would, that we have done so, but have made no provision for all the other employees of the Government because we have not passed the reclassification bill or appropriated money in order to bring them up to the level on which we undertook to place our own employees.

referred a few moments ago to the reclassification bill as having been pending for 14 months or some such time. I am not blaming the Senators who have had charge of that bill, because it has been a very vexatious matter, but I am stating the circumstances exactly as they are. If we proceed in such manner as we are proceeding now, I want to say that probably the bill will not pass.

Mr. STERLING. May I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President, I have the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. McCumber in the chair). Does the Senator from Wyoming make a point of order against the amendment?

Mr WARREN I do make the point of order, but I wanted to explain my position before doing so. I did not want to cut off by a point of order the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President, I had the floor and I yielded to the Senator from Wyoming. Before the point of order is ruled on, I should like to make a statement.

Mr. CAMERON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for a moment?

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President, if the Senator will permit me to proceed and make my statement, then I will yield the floor?

Mr. CAMERON. I should like to offer an amendment to the Senator's amendment.

Mr. MOSES. That may be done when the amendment comes to be acted upon.

Mr. President, the historical recital which has been made by the Senator from Wyoming is completely accurate. However, at all the steps which preceded the offering of this amendment assurances were given to the effect that the amendment should be favorably considered. If I may state the case again to the Senate, I offered this amendment many weeks ago and brought it before the committee at the time the legislative appropriation bill was under consideration. I was then told that the reclassification bill was going along speedily, and this proposed legislation should be made to follow that, with the assurance, however, that if the reclassification bill did not go through, this amendment of mine-at any rate, in its substance-would receive sympathetic consideration. In consequence of that I appeared once again before the Committee on Appropriations when the pending bill was under consideration, and I received again the same assurance.

Mr. President, it is not the fault of the clerks of Senators it is not the fault of Senators generally that the reclassification bill has not been passed. The Senate will pass the reclassification bill, if it ever gets to it, which will settle the opinion of the Senate on that point.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield there?

Mr. MOSES. Yes.

Mr. SMOOT. I should like to say to the Senator that the reclassification bill does not include the clerks of Senators. Questions affecting them are and always have been entirely in the hands of the Senate.

Mr. MOSES. Absolutely.

I am simply stating the reasons which were advanced to me for not pressing the matter before and the reasons which actuated me in not pressing it.

I take the position with reference to this amendment that it is not subject to a point of order because it is a question of privilege for the Senate; it is a question of whether the Senate is going to be permitted to conduct its own business. I maintain that the Senate can fix the salary of its employees whenever it sees fit and at any figure it sees fit: may attach a measure fixing their salaries to any measure which is before the Senate or may bring it forward at any time.

It is a matter, I maintain, of privilege which is not subject to a point of order such as the Senator from Wyoming has attempted to make against it. I submit further that the sentiment of the Senate on a question well known to Senators-for it has been discussed here for months, the terms of the amendment having been known for weeks, and the overwhelming opinion on the part of the Senate being that this action should be taken-should not be barred expression by a point of order or by any other consideration.

I maintain further with reference to it that I am not at all entering upon the merits of the question, upon the capacities and capabilities of the persons affected by this legislation, upon the dependence of Senators upon the loyalty and ability of their I am stating a case as coldly and baldly as I may.

Mr. President, even if everything that the Senator from Wyoming says were accurate, if it were desired to proceed along the line of the section provided in the bonus bill which the Senator from Wyoming has read, if we determined after all, later on, that we were going to proceed with the joint commission which that bill sets up, the adoption of my amendment at this time would set a standard for the Members on the part of the Senate of that joint commission for the pay of the employees of the Senate—a question which I submit is wholly in the hands of the Senate, which the Senate may handle at any time, in any way, or upon any measure which is before it; and if I understand that the Chair has ruled in support of the point of order raised by the Senator from Wyoming, I must respectfully appeal from the ruling of the Chair, not because I wish to proceed in a disorderly manner with reference to this thing, but because I wish the Senate to assert itself even against the most resolute of Committees of Appropriation at the other end of the

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will have to correct the Senator, if he will allow the Chair to do so.

Mr. MOSES. And may I add that the Budget has absolutely no jurisdiction over this item.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair has not passed upon any point of order, nor has any point of order been stated to the Chair. Mr. WARREN. I have not yet made any point of order.

Mr. MOSES. I beg the pardon of the Chair and of the Senator from Wyoming. I understood the Senator from Wyoming to have concluded with the statement that he did make a point I understood the Senator from Wyoming of order, and I understood the Chair to have said that he sustained it. If I am wrong on both of those points-

Mr. WARREN. I stated that I might make it, and I state again that I may make it; but I would not make it, of course, so as to cut off any Senator who wished to present the matter In as able a manner as the Senator from New Hampshire has presented it. So far as I am concerned, the Senator from New Hampshire is not any more generous than I am disposed to be, In my judgment; and it hurts me more perhaps than it hurts him to have to be placed personally in this situation. I find, for instance, that during the last few moments I have sinned against the honorable Senator, who is my friend, I hope, and whom I respect as highly as any Senator in this body, who represents the great Committee on the Civil Service, and who has here a bill which I hope will pass before the morning hour—the reclassification bill. I hope that bill will pass. I am simply stating what happens to be the situation and what happens to be the way of some of the people whom we shall have to meet and contend with.

It is all right to have the courage to stand at the desk here and tell what the Senate can do, and it is all right to say what the House will do; but on the general proposition it is well to know just what your ground is before you start and whether you are taking or attempting to take an unreasonable advantage of another body with which you are in coordination. I think myself that it would be absolutely unfair to undertake at the last moment to say what we shall pay to our secretaries, when the House is deprived of the privilege of giving similar treatment to its own secretaries,

Another thing: Speaking of this bonus bill, unless we pass that, or something in place of it, of course we will have no money either to pay the increase that is proposed here or to pay the bonus that is now being enjoyed, and that extends only to the 30th of June.

I am simply stating the situation. The Senate, of course, has its rights, and it can proceed, if it desires, in a manner which I think is improper. I have no pride of opinion about it, I state these facts as they seem to me, and what I think is best, and what in the long run I think will please the employees best; and when the debate on this matter is over I shall have to make the point of order.

Mr. CAMERON. Mr. President-

The Senator has made a point of order. That should be ruled upon before a Senator offers another amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state that the Senator from Wyoming has not announced what point of order he desires to make.

Mr. WARREN. The point of order is that this is the appropriation of a large amount of money that has not come in by reason of any legislation or by the action of any committee. It changes existing law, of course, as to every one of these raises that are proposed. No general legislation could be had,

Mr. CAMERON. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. McCumber in the chair). The Chair is called upon to rule upon the point of order raised by the Senator from Wyoming, and the Chair rules that the amendment is not in order.

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President, I respectfully appeal from the ruling of the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. From the ruling of the Chair the Senator from New Hampshire appeals. The question is, Shall the ruling of the Chair be sustained?

Mr. MOSES. On that I ask for the yeas and nays. The yeas and nays were ordered, and the reading clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. COLT (when his name was called). I have a pair with the junior Senator from Florida [Mr. TRAMMELL]. I am unable to secure a transfer, and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. HARRISON (when his name was called). I have a pair with the junior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Kelloge]. As he is not here, I shall have to withhold my vote. If at liberty to vote, I should have to vote "yea."

Mr. LODGE (when his name was called).

I have a general pair with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. Underwood]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Vermont [Mr. Page], and will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Delaware [Mr. BAYARD]. As he has not voted, I will withhold my vote. If at liberty to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. SWANSON (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. Townsend], who is sick and detained from the Senate. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HITCHCOCK], and will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. WATSON (when his name was called). I transfer my general pair with the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. I transfer my WILLIAMS] to the senior Senator from Maryland [Mr. France] and will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. WILLIS (when his name was called). I am paired with my colleague, the senior Senator from Ohio [Mr. POMERENE]. Not being able to obtain a transfer, I am obliged to withhold my vote. If at liberty to vote, though I am in favor of the amendment, I should be compelled to vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN (after having voted in the negative). transfer my general pair with the Senator from Montana [Mr.

Walsh] to the junior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Kellog6] and will allow my vote to stand.

Mr. ROBINSON (after having voted in the affirmative). I transfer my pair with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Robinson and the Senator fr SUTHERLAND] to the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] and will let my vote stand.

Mr. McCormick (after having voted in the negative). Has the junior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. Kenderck] voted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is informed that he

Mr. McCORMICK. Then I must withdraw my vote. Mr. McKELLAR (after having voted in the affirmative). Has the Senator from Indiana [Mr. New] voted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. He has not.

Mr. McKELLAR. I withdraw my vote. Mr. CURTIS. I have been requested to announce the following general pairs:

The Senator from Delaware [Mr. Ball] with the Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER];

The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Elkins] with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Simmons];

The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Nelson] with the Senator from Texas [Mr. Culberson]; and The Senator from Colorado [Mr. Nicholson] with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED].

The result was announced-yeas 30, nays 19, as follows:

YEAS-30. Gerry Glass Jones, N. Mex, Jones, Wash. King Lodge McKinley Norris Overman Phipps Pittman Ransdell Brandegee Spencer Stanley Swanson Wadsworth Caraway Cummins Curtis Dial Dillingham Robinson Warren Watson Sheppard Smith Smoot Ernst Fernald NAYS-19. La Follette Leuroot McNary Moses Bursum Calder Cameron Capper Gooding Pepper Shortridge Sterling Weller Hale Harris Heffin Capper Frellnghuysen Oddie Ladd NOT VOTING-47. McLean Myers Nelson New Nicholson Shields Ashurst Ball France George Harreld Harrison Hitchcock Simmons Stanfield Sutherland Ball Bayard Borah Brookhart Broussard Townsend Norbeck Owen Page Poindexter Pomerene Reed, Mo. Reed, Pa. Trammell Underwood Walsh, Mass. Walsh, Mont Johnson Colt Couzens Culberson Edge Elkins Kellogg Kendrick Keyes McCormick

So the ruling of the Chair was sustained.

McCumber McKellar

Mr. GLASS. I offer the amendment which I send to the Secretary's desk, and which I hope the chairman of the committee will accept.

Willis

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will state the amendment.

The READING CLERK. On page 2, after line 4, insert the fol-

On and after March 1, 1923, the salaries of the two floor assistants shall be at the rate of $3,600 per annum; and there is hereby appropriated the sum of $2,933.34 to carry out said purpose.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, one sin calls for another, I suppose. I myself will make no objection to this amendment, because of what passed before it, but I do want to state that if any further similar amendments are offered I shall be compelled to object.

The amendment was agreed to.
Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment on page 22, after line 18, was agreed to, in order to reform the language in accordance with the estimates sent down by the Budget Bureau.

I move to amend by striking out, on line 20, the words "fiscal year 1923," and to insert, after the numerals "$40,000," the words "to remain available until June 30, 1924."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator to reconsider the vote by which the committee amendment was adopted.

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will state the amendment of the Senator.

The Reading Clerk. On page 22, line 20, to strike out the words "fiscal year 1923" and, after the numerals "$40,000," Mr. ROBINSON. I will ask that the Senator moving the amendment explain the purpose of it.

Mr. OVERMAN. It will make this money remain available, whereas under this amendment it will amount to nothing. It provides that it shall be in effect until the 1st of July. The boll weevil does not come until after the 1st of July, and this makes it available and extends it to 1924.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I offer an amendment which I send to the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the amendment.

The Reading Clerk. On page 22, line 7, after the numerals "$40,000," to strike out the words "fiscal year 1923" and to insert the words "to remain available until June 30, 1924."

Mr. PEPPER. The effect of this amendment will be precisely the same as the effect of that which has just been agreed.

to. It is to make the appropriation available in fighting the Japanese beetle pest until the season when the appropriation can be expended with advantage.

Mr. WARREN. I am not going to object to either one of those. I did not object to the first one. I suppose we are taking a chance on it, because these are in no wise deficiencies when they are to be extended into the future for one or two years, but I will do the best I can to keep them in the bill. We have to meet the objections of the conferees, of course, who are trying to hold the deficiency bill down to the limit. We are having very serious times because of these late amendments brought to us at the last moment by Senators who desire to have appropriations extended for two or three years into the future rather than have them apply to the few months between now and the 1st of July.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Pennsylvania.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WILLIS. I desire to offer the following amendment. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will state the amendment.

The READING CLERK. On page 52, after line 10, to insert the following:

SEVENTEENTH INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS AGAINST ALCOHOLISM.

For expenses of delegates, not exceeding 10 in number, to be designated by the President, to the Seventeenth International Congress Against Alcoholism, at Copenhagen, Denmark, to be held in 1923, including the cost of secretarial and stenographic work and transcription of the report, $7,500.

Mr. WADSWORTH, Mr. President, I make the point of order against the amendment on the ground that it is legislation.

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. President, I desire to be heard on the point of order.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I did not desire to make any extensive remarks about it. I understand there is no existing law to authorize such an expenditure, and that this amendment, taken the including its local attachment. In view of the feet that as it is, is legislation to that extent. In view of the fact that there is prohibition in this country, I can see no advantage in having the United States represented in an alcoholic league of nations.

Mr. WILLIS. In response to the suggestion made by my friend from New York, if his contention is true that prohibition has increased the consumption of liquor, there is more reason for this amendment than at any time in the history of the country. I want to address myself to the point of order.

In the first place, there is nothing new about it. This Government has been represented at these congresses for the past 12 years. I have before me Document No. 322, containing the approval of this proposed appropriation by the President of the United States, and also a letter from the Director of the Budget calling attention to the desirability of the appropriation and what it is expected will be accomplished. I contend that this is not general legislation on an appropriation bill. As I said, there is nothing new about it. We have been making similar appropriations for years.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President—
Mr. WILLIS. I yield to the Senator.
Mr. JONES of Washington. Did I understand the Senator to state that this is pursuant to an estimate submitted according to law?

Mr. WILLIS. Absolutely so.

Mr. WADSWORTH. That is not the basis of the point of der. The mere fact that the item is estimated for does not order. make it in order. If it is legislation on an appropriation bill it is out of order.

Mr. JONES of Washington. If it is not legislation, however, it is in order.

Mr. WILLIS. I desire to invite the attention of the Chair particularly to the provisions of rule 16 as modified:

All general appropriation bills shall be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and no amendment shall be received to any general appropriation bill * * unless the same be moved by direction of a standing committee or select committee of the Senate, or proposed in pursuance of an estimate submitted in accordance with law.

I have in my hand the estimate which was submitted in accordance with law, and I therefore contend that the point of order is not well taken. This is not general legislation upon an appropriation bill.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I want to just emphasize what the Senator from Ohio has said. This is simply an item of appropriation for a specific purpose for this one year. It is not general legislation or new legislation, because, as the Senator has said, it has been carried in appropriation bills for several years.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. SMOOT. It has not been carried for the last few years. Mr. JONES of Washington. I did not say last year, but for several years.

Mr. WILLIS. I can correct the Senator from Utah on that point. They hold these congresses only every two years. So there was no point in the suggestion that it was not made last before.

Mr. WARREN. Neither this year, last year, nor the year

Mr. WILLIS. There was a congress in 1920.

Mr. WARREN. That was the last one.

Mr. WILLIS. And there was one in 1921. Mr. WARREN. There was no appropriation for United States delegates to attend it.

Mr. WILLIS. There was one held, and I can call attention to the information in the document that there was one in 1921.

Mr. WADSWORTH. We do not care whether there was one in 1921 or not.

Mr. WILLIS. It was held in Lausanne.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I do not care where it was held: we did not send anybody to it.

Mr. WILLIS. Oh, yes, we did, Mr. President. If the Senator will yield to me, we were represented there at Lausanne in 1921. The Senator is mistaken.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I thought the Senator said that for two years we had not sent anybody.

Mr. WILLIS. I did not say that.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Does the Senator contend it is therefore standing legislation to send them every year?

Mr. WILLIS. Certainly not; but I contend it is not general legislation on an appropriation bill when we have been represented, and have made appropriations from year to year. It is absurd to call it general legislation.

Mr. JONES of Washington. This is an item duly estimated for according to law. If the Chair should hold that this is legislation, and to be excluded from an appropriation bill, there is no new item of appropriation which could not be excluded on the same ground, because this is nothing in the world but an item of appropriation for a particular purpose for a year, of importance to all.

Mr. NORRIS. May I interrupt the Senator from Washing-Is there any question about this being authorized by law?

Mr. JONES of Washington. There is no general authorization for holding these conventions.

Mr. NORRIS Then the Senator Then the Senator must modify his statement that the estimate has been made in accordance with law.

Mr. JONES of Washington. It has been. There is a law under which the Budget Bureau can make estimates and submit them to Congress. This has been estimated pursuant to The Senator may have misunderstood me. I did not mean that the estimate was made to carry out existing law. I contend that an estimate was submitted pursuant to law; that is, the Budget officer was authorized to submit the esti-

Mr. NORRIS. That is, the estimate was submitted by a person authorized by law to submit an estimate?

Mr. JONES of Washington. Yes.

Mr. NORRIS. The Senator does not mean that there is any law providing for sending delegates to any such conven-

Mr. JONES of Washington. Oh, no; we have not passed any

Mr. NORRIS. I thought from the Senator's observation that we had passed some general law authorizing the appointment of such delegates.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. McCumber in the chair) In the opinion of the present occupant of the chair, a specific appropriation for a specific purpose only is not general legisla-tion, and the Chair overrules the point of order based upon the claim that the amendment is general legislation.

Mr. SMOOT. Then I hope that the Senate will defeat this amendment. For about 15 years we have had these appropriations made, until last year or the year before when no money was appropriated for this purpose. It has grown to a scandal in some cases. I had a list of the names of parties who went over as representatives of the Government at one time for this very purpose. We had stenographers going along as experts to pass upon alcoholism.

Mr. NORRIS. May I interrupt the Senator? What kind of experts would we have on a proposition of prohibition?

Mr. SMOOT. I do not think a lady stenographer knows very much about alcohol.

Mr. NORRIS. No; but the lady stenographers were not the experts. I want to know how a man becomes an expert on that kind of a proposition. They could not get experts out of a prohibition country. We would have to go and employ foreigners if we want an expert to go over there, because we are all prohibitionists over here.

Mr. SMOOT. In theory. Mr. WILLIS. I unders Mr. WILLIS. I understand the amendment is now before the Senate, and I think the observation of the Senator from Utah requires some attention, because it is a reflection upon some people. I have taken occasion to investigate, because I have heard these charges, and I want to say to the Senator that while I was not a member of the delegation that was sent the last time, I know about the delegation, and the allegation he makes concerning that delegation is a mistake. There was nobody who went except the delegates. There was no person who took his wife or anybody else's wife, and the only person who was taken was the person who was elected as secretary of the delegation, and the reflection the Senator makes is not justified.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I did not say it was last year. I put the names in the RECORD the year I am speaking of.

Mr. WILLIS. What year was it?
Mr. SMOOT. I can not remember the year. pected this question to come up. It was five or six years ago.

Mr. WILLIS. Does not the Senator think that is rather an unusual argument, because even if the thing which he relates five or six years ago, to say that therefore now the United States should be without representation does not seem to me carries any force.

Mr. SMOOT. If the Senate wants to appropriate $750 apiece for these 10 people to go on a junketing trip to Europe,

Mr. WILLIS. In no case has any person on one of these delegations received a per diem, and when the Senator speaks of the $750, the Senator knows the money was paid for expenses and nobody received any of it as salary.

Mr. SMOOT. I did not say they did. I said it was $750 apiece for 10 people to go to Europe. I did not say they were paid salaries besides their expenses.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President— Mr. WILLIS. I yield to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. NORRIS. I have not heard the proposition discussed. I would like to know what the object is, and what is proposed to be done.

Mr. WILLIS. I think I can answer the Senator best by reading the letter of the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, which he transmitted to the President of the United States. That letter reads as follows:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
BUREAU OF THE BUDGET,
Washington, February 24, 1923.

Sin: I have the honor to transmit herewith for your consideration and, upon your approval, for transmission to Congress, a supplemental estimate of appropriation for the Department of State for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, for expenses of delegates to the Seventeenth International Congress Against Alcoholism, at Copenhagen, Denmark, $7,500.

"Seventeenth International Congress Against Alcoholism: For ex-

International Congress Against Alcoholism, at Copenhagen, Denmark, $7,500.

"Seventeenth International Congress Against Alcoholism: For expenses of delegates, not exceeding 10 in number, to be designated by the President, to the Seventeenth International Congress Against Alcoholism, at Copenhagen, Denmark, to be held in 1923, including the cost of secretarial and stenographic work and transcription of the report (submitted), $7,500."

The Seventeenth International Congress Against Alcoholism will be held in Copenhagen, Denmark, from August 20 to 24, 1923, and the United States has been invited to be officially represented at the congress. It is expected that the congress will discuss the social, economic, scientific, industrial, and other aspects of the alcohol problem, and that leading scientists, physicians, educators, and publicists in the various countries will be in attendance.

It has been customary for the United States to be represented at the meetings of the International Alcoholic Congress. It sent a delegation of 12 to the thirteenth congress, held at The Hague in September, 1911; 10 to the fourteenth congress, held at Milan in 1913; and 10 to the sixteenth congress, held at Milan in 1913; and 10 to the sixteenth congress for the necessary arrangements and entertainment of the delegates of foreign countries.

The above estimate is for an appropriation required to meet an unforeseen contingency which has occurred since the transmission of the Budget for the fiscal year 1924, and its approval is recommended.

Very respectfully,

H. M. Lond,

Director of the Bureau of the Budget.

H. M. Lond, Director of the Bureau of the Budget.

The PRESIDENT.

If Senators suppose that this is a mere propaganda for the prohibition cause, they are entirely mistaken. I have taken pains to inform myself. I hold in my hand a rather large volume, containing the report of the congress which was held in this country in 1920, at which time, by the way, this Government appropriated $60,000 for the entertainment of the congress. The report is a scientific discussion—not a discussion of the prohibition question but of the effects of alcoholism. Senators, at the time when this has been written into the Constitution of the United States, whether they think it is a wise policy now for the United States to say to the rest of the world, "We have lost interest in the question." I hope the amendment will be adopted.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I want to interrogate the Senator from Ohio a little. I am impressed by what he has said. I am inclined to think it is a good thing, from what the Senator from Ohio has said. Does the Senator have any knowledge, or can he give us any idea as to who the delegates should be?

Mr. WILLIS. I have not the slightest idea. Mr. NORRIS. How are they selected?

Mr. WILLIS. They are to be appointed by the President, the number not to exceed 10.

Mr. NORRIS. I can see, it seems to me, how this might be made a junket and, on the other hand, how it might be made a very useful thing. If the real intent is carried out, as outlined by the Senator from Ohio, the result of the congress would be very valuable to the people who want to study the question.

Mr. WILLIS. I think we may trust the President for that. He is given discretion to appoint not to exceed 10. He does not need to appoint more than one, unless he wants to do so.

Mr. NORRIS. The senior Senator from Utah [Mr. Smoot] called our attention to a time when it was turned into a junket. very likely.

Mr. STANLEY, Mr. President—
Mr. WILLIS. I yield to the Senator from Kentucky.
Mr. STANLEY. If the purpose of the appropriation is to enable well-informed people to go at Government expense across the Atlantic Ocean to place before other countries of the world the manifest evil effects of alcoholism as resulting from wood alcohol and bootleg whisky, I think it is a very wise appropriation.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I move to strike out the numeral "10" in the second line and insert in lieu thereof the numeral "3

Mr. NORRIS. What is the effect of that?

Mr. KING. So the number on the junket trip would be limited to 3 instead of 10.

Mr. NORRIS. I want to say to the Senator that I came into the Chamber while the debate was on and I did not hear the original amendment read. That would cut down the delegation?

Mr. KING. Yes; to 3 instead of 10. Mr. WADSWORTH. Why not reduce the amount of the appropriation, too?

Mr. KING. If my amendment is agreed to, we will reduce the amount proportionately.

Mr. WILLIS. I do not think the amendment would be a very bad amendment, and yet I do not think it is wise. I call attention to the report of the Director of the Bureau of the Budget which I submitted a little while ago. We sent a delegation of 12 to the thirteenth congress held at The Hague in September, 1911; 10 to the fourteenth congress held at Milan in 1913; and 10 to the sixteenth congress held at Lausanne in 1921. I do not see any good reason why this Republic should become parsimonious in the matter of cutting down the size of the delegation

Mr. WADSWORTH. It would provide more delegates than we had at the Versailles conference.

Mr. WILLIS. We had but one at the Versailles conference. Mr. WADSWORTH. I am not stating the number, but certainly it was less than 10.

Mr. WILLIS. I hope the amendment to the amendment will

Mr. NORRIS. Of course we had a good many assistants at the Versailles conference.

Mr. JONES of Washington, Mr. President, I want to sugest that I think there is a little bit more involved in this question than the number of delegates and the amount of money. We held this convention here in 1920. We invited other countries to send delegations to discuss the matter. They accepted the invitation and sent delegations. They sent delegations of this size, and some greater and some less. They have now invited us as a nation to be represented at the forthcoming conference. It is simply a question of whether this great country will refuse the invitation of another country

I do not think it is a matter that can really be measured in dollars and cents or in the number of delegates that should be sent. I think we owe some consideration as a nation to the people who are interested in this great problem. It is a tremendous problem. Of course we have not solved it entirely, but we are, I think, the great exemplar among the nations of the world upon the problem. They have invited us to send delegates, and I do not think we can afford not to do so.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. McCumber in the chair) The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Utah to the amendment of the Senator from Ohio.

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is now on the amendment offered by the Senator from Ohio.

The amendment was agreed to.
Mr. CALDER. Mr. President, I desire to submit the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The READING CLERK. Insert at the proper place in the bill the following:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to Louis Leavitt, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $620,623.33 in reimbursement of certain moneys paid by him to the United States and for certain expenses incurred under circumstances set forth in the communication of the President of the United States to the Speaker of the House of Representatives dated the 6th day of May, 1922, and in the accompanying report of the Director of the Budget, House Document No. 313, Sixty-seventh Congress, second session.

Mr. CALDER. Mr. President— Mr. WARREN. I am about to make a point of order, but I do not wish to take the Senator off the floor.

Mr. CALDER. I would like to make a statement on the question of the point of order. This item was estimated for. The Bureau of the Budget has estimated as indicated in the amendment. I have here a copy of that estimate. The item also was carried in a bill introducel by me, reported upon by a committee of the Senate, and passed by the Senate. Rule XVI seems to cover the case, as follows:

No amendments shall be received to any general appropriation bill the effect of which will be to increase an appropriation already contained in the bill, or to add a new item of appropriation, unless it be made to carry out the provisions of some existing law, or treaty stipulation, or act, or resolution previously passed by the Senate during that session; or unless the same be moved by direction of a standing or select committee of the Senate, or proposed in pursuance of an estimate of the head of some one of the departments.

It seems to me it clearly comes within that rule.

Mr. WARREN. I call the attention of the Chair to page 21, clause 4 of Rule XVI, which reads:

No amendment, the object of which is to provide for a private claim, shall be received to any general appropriation bill, unless it be to carry out the provisions of an existing law or a treaty stipulation, which shall be cited on the face of the amendment.

Mr. CALDER. The question is whether or not this is a private claim. I know of the rule to which the Senator has referred. This man purchased bacon from the Government. He paid the sum of approximately $700,000 for it. It was delivered to him. Subsequently he was arrested for hoarding the bacon, a part of which had not yet been delivered to him. He was indicted. The United States marshal took charge of his property and it was held by the marshal for a period of over a year. The value of the property had shrunk materially because of its character and he had a very considerable loss by depreciation.

The War Department urges the adoption of the amendment and the Department of Justice recommends it. The Budget has estimated for it and a committee of the Senate has passed favorably upon it. We have passed a bill of the same character. In fact, I have submitted the exact language of the bill in the amendment. I do not wish to discuss the merits any further. If it is in order I shall be glad to do so.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair sustains the point of order upon the ground that the amendment involves a private claim.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk,

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated. The READING CLERK. On page 21, line 22, insert the following:

To enable the Secretary of Agriculture to settle claims against the Government arising out of the activities of the Department of Agriculture which have been thoroughly investigated by his department and where the liability of the Government has been found to be clear and a settlement reached by him, $245,258.12.

Mr. WARREN. I make the point of order against the amend-It is a matter of legislation and something that has not been adjudicated in any way. It is not a deficiency matter.

Mr. CURTIS. I admit that it is subject to a point of order. I only apologize to the chairman of the committee for not having brought the matter to his attention when the bill was being considered, but my eyes have been bothering me, and I could not read the letter received with reference to it until this morning. I ask permission to have printed in the Record, without reading, the letter which I have received from the Secretary of Agriculture with reference to the matter.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, Washington, February 27, 1923.

Hon. CHARLES CURTIS, United States Senate.

United States Senate.

Dear Senator Curtis: In view of the probability that after adjournment on March 4 the Congress will not be in session until next December, I am hopeful that all matters affecting the administration of the department and requiring congressional action be taken care of as far as possible before adjournment. There have been pending for considerable time a number of miscellaneous claims against the Government arising out of the activities of the department which should be adjusted in justice to the claimants and to the department. I have in mind only claims which have been thoroughly investigated and wherein the liability of the Government has been found to be clear, and which have been recommended to Congress for payment, but which have failed to be reached for action. It will require $245,258.12 to adjust these claims. I understand that the last deficiency bill for this session is now pending, and if an item could be added making provision for adjusting these claims it would not only prevent continued injustice to the claimants by further long delay but would, in my judgment, promote the interests of the department.

I take the liberty of addressing this letter to you by reason of the fact that you are the author of the bill by which the claims were allowed in the Senate.

Respectfully,

Mr. CURTIS. I want to state further that the Way Department.

Mr. CURTIS. I want to state further that the War Department is authorized to settle claims, the Navy Department is authorized to settle claims, and, for the life of me, I do not see why the Agricultural Department should not be authorized to settle claims in the same way,

Mr. WARREN. I agree with the Senator; but in both the cases to which he refers it has been done by specific and special legislation. There has been none asked for and none furnished for the Department of Agriculture.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I offer the following amendment, and in view of it being in my own handwriting I will take the liberty, with the permission of the Chair, of reading it myself. I move to strike out, on page 54, all of lines 19 to 24, inclusive, and on page 55, lines 1 and 2, under the head of "Bureau of Internal Revenue," and to insert in lieu thereof the language which I am about to read. I call the attention of the Senator in charge of the bill to the reading of the provision.

Mr. WARREN. I understand what the Senator means is to strike out the appropriation for about $79,000,000 for the Internal Revenue Department to pay to those who have had money illegally collected from them and who have waited for its return.

Mr. KING. Yes. I offer, in lieu of the language proposed to be stricken out, the following:

That all claims in excess of $5,000, now pending or that shall hereafter be presented to the Treasury Department for refund of income taxes or any other taxes paid under a mistake of fact or because of alleged illegal assessment or collection, shall be sent to the Court of Claims, which shall be authorized to find the facts in relation thereto and to enter judgment thereon.

Now, just a word. I think that the policy of intrusting to employees of the Treasury Department, most of whom are young men of no very great experience—certainly they are not judges nor have they had judicial experience—the determination of important questions of fact and of law, particularly of law, involved in the refund of millions and tens of millions of dollars, may not be defended upon any policy of wisdom or We set up courts to whom we refer claims against the Government of very insignificant amounts. The Court of Claims by common consent has been invested with jurisdiction to determine claims against the Government of the United States that may be referred to it.

We have committed to the Treasury Department and to the officials therein the determination of claims against the Government, some of which I am told aggregate several million dollars. These young men, or the older ones, for that matter, thoroughly honest and competent for the duties for which they were employed, are not, in my opinion, qualified to dispose of these important legal questions. The matter is so important that it seems to me it ought to be referred to a court of competent jurisdiction. It seems to me that the very fact that we leave to these officials of the department the determination of these intricate questions of law, upon their decision resting millions and hundreds of millions of dollars, is a confession of the unwisdom of the policy. My amendment proposes to refer to the court the determination of these questions. In order to avoid sending them all to the Court of Claims, I have placed a limitation of $5,000. It may not be said, therefore, that persons whose claims are small will be put to the expense of coming to the Court of Claims for the purpose of determining their rights.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a ques-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. KING. I yield. Mr. NORRIS. The Senator has not read the language which he proposes to strike out and for which he offers his amendment. I should like to hear read the language which he proposes to strike out.

Mr. KING. I had started to read it when the able Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN] interrupted me. It is as fol-

BUREAU OF INTERNAL REVENUE.

For refunding taxes illegally collected under the provisions of sections 3220 and 3689, Revised Statutes, as amended by the acts of February 24, 1919, and November 23, 1921, for the fiscal year 1923 and prior fiscal years, $78,675,000: Provided, That a report shall be made to Congress of the disbursements hereunder as required by the acts of February 24, 1919, and November 23, 1921.

In other words, my amendment proposes to take away from the department the determination of the claims for a refund of taxes where the amount of any particular claim exceeds $5,000.

Mr. NORRIS. But the Senator's amendment does not propose to strike out the appropriation, does it?

Yes; I propose to strike out the appropriation. Mr. KING. Mr. NORRIS. Will not the appropriation be necessary in order to carry out the object of the Senator's amendment?

Mr. KING. Just as soon as the Court of Claims makes its findings, of course, it will report to Congress, and Congress will then make the appropriation.

Mr. NORRIS. The Senator's amendment permits the Court of Claims to render judgment as well as to make a finding of Mr. KING. Yes; but whenever the Court of Claims renders judgment, as the Senator from Nebraska knows, Congress immediately makes an appropriation for the purpose of carrying it out. Appropriations are being carried in this bill to meet judgments which have been rendered by the Court of Claims.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, we are collecting a vast amount more than we are paying out on account of taxes that were not properly assessed at the time they were collected.

The Senator from Utah, of course, knows that the amendment is subject to a point of order because it proposes to change existing law. The law provides that taxes illegally collected may be credited on faxes levied in later years, or they may be adjudicated under the law and report made to Congress as the basis for an appropriation for their refund. The adoption of this amendment would simply mean delaying the adjudication of these matters longer than it has already been delayed. It would be like going to the Senator and taking money out of his pocket, and after two years kicking him out of his house be-cause he asked for a refund of it. That is all. The Govern-ment has illegally taken from men, women, and children, guardians, and so forth, money to which it was not entitled. The law provides a way of returning it. That law ought to be followed, and it has been properly followed. If we should send such cases to the Court of Claims for adjudication it would be years before the court could undertake to pass upon the volume of claims that are now being handled by a very competent force.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator from Wyoming yield to me?

Mr. WARREN. Yes.

Mr. KING. The Senator from Wyoming is prejudging the very question that is at issue. He says that we have taken out of the pockets of the people illegally large sums of money. That is the question at issue. Have we taken out of the pockets of corporations and individuals taxes which were illegally assessed against them? I want to submit that question to a court of competent jurisdiction. It is a legal question. It is a question which involves a legal issue.

Mr. WARREN. I make the point of order against the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator from Wyoming state his point of order?

Mr. WARREN. My point of order is that the amendment proposes general legislation. It changes existing law. It provides for new legislation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The point which the Senator makes is that the amendment is general legislation?

Mr. WARREN. That it is general legislation.

Mr. KING. It seems to me that where an appropriation is carried in a bill an amendment which seeks to exclude the appropriation until the facts shall have been determined is not new legislation.

Mr. WARREN. If the Senator from Utah desires to reduce the amount of the appropriation, an amendment to that effect will be in order, and we may vote upon it, but here is a case where the law provides exactly how this duty shall be performed, and the bill provides an appropriation to carry out the law. The Senator from Utah new proposes to make a new law and to transfer jurisdiction to another tribunal.

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Utah a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. KING. I yield to the Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. CARAWAY. The Senator objects to the present tribunal finding whether they have assessed and collected too much taxes against the taxpayer, and yet it is the very same tribunal which levies the tax. The question I wish to ask the Senator from Utah is this: If we are to question their judgment and wisdom in refunding the taxes, why should we not question their wisdom in assessing them? So far as I am concerned, I feel more inclined to restrain them from collecting taxes than from refunding them. What little experience I have had in trying to get the department to do justice to people in my State, where they have illegally collected taxes, proves that it is difficult to get them to act at all. They are swift to collect taxes, but slow to return them. If we are going to amend the law, let us make them more careful in collecting illegal taxes instead of refunding them after they shall have been collected.

Mr. KING. I agree with the Senator from Arkansas as to that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair sustains the point of order raised against the amendment of the Senator from Utah by the Senator from Wyoming, on the ground that the proposed substitute is clearly general legislation.

Mr. SPENCER. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated. The READING CLERK. On page 3, after line 17, it : proposed to insert the following:

After July 1, 1923, the salary of the laborer in charge of the private passage under the office of the Sergeant-at-Arms and Doorkeeper of the Senate shall be at the rate of $1,100 per annum, and there is hereby appropriated the sum of $200 to carry out such purpose.

Mr. SPENCER. Mr. President, the amendment relates to William Montgomery, the colored boy in the washroom. He has been an employee of the Senate for 24 years. His unusual courtesy and efficiency are known to every man upon the floor. In the last appropriation bill we increased the salary of the attendants in the two rooms upstairs from $720 to $1,000. The amendment will give to William Montgomery an increase of $200.

Mr. McKELLAR. I hope the amendment will be adopted.

He is a very valuable employee and a good man.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Missouri,

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, this is a matter of very much embarrassment to me because the fact is that, perhaps, the employee referred to does not get a large enough salary, but it is undertaking to go back over the road that we have decided not to follow. As I have said—and I do not say it in any boastful way—I would almost sooner pay the money myself from my own pocket than at this time to include it in this bill and then have to pilot it through the opposition it will encounter in conference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Missouri.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CALDER. Mr. President, I submit an amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated, The READING CLERK. On page 43, line 10, after the figures "$6,500,000" and before the period, it is proposed to insert a colon and the following proviso:

Provided. That no part of the moneys appropriated in this paragraph shall be used or expended for making such changes in private establishments or for the purchase or acquirement of any article or articles that at the time of the proposed changes, purchase, or acquirement can be made, manufactured, or produced in each or any of the Government navy yards of the United States, if time and facilities permit, for a sum less than they can be made, purchased, or acquired otherwise.

Mr. WARREN. I make the point of order against the amendment that it is general legislation.

Mr. CALDER. Mr. President, I should like to discuss the point of order, if I may.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will inquire of the Senator from Wyoming, What is the point of order?

Mr. WARREN. The point of order is that it is general legislation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The holding of the Chair is that it is a limitation of an appropriation, and is not general The Chair therefore overrules the point of order. legislation.

Mr. WARREN. The Presiding Officer may understand better than I do what is behind the amendment, but it manifestly proposes to change existing law, and is certainly general legislation.

Mr. CALDER. Mr. President, this amendment provides that all work performed under the particular paragraph which I seek to amend shall be done by the navy yards of the country, provided it can be done cheaper there. If it can be done cheaper in other places, then the amendment will not be effective. It seems to me that with all the navy yards we have in the country we ought to keep them employed, if it is possible to do so, and especially if their activities will not involve any greater expense to the Government.

Mr. JONES of Washington, Mr. President, will the Senator from New York yield?

Mr. CALDER. I yield.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I should like to know how the Senator would determinine, until it is actually done, whether work can be done cheaper in a Government navy yard or in a private establishment?

Mr. CALDER. We have very efficient engineers and managers at the navy yards; and my experience has been that in nearly every case they are able to do the work within the limit of their estimate.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Seldom do they do it within the stimate. At any rate, it is nothing more than an estimate. The Senator does not restrict the language of his amendment so that the work can only be done at the navy yard if an estimate is to the effect that it may be done as low as at a private establishment.

The amendment provides that not a dollar of this money shall be spent if the work can be done cheaper in a navy yard. How any accounting officer can say it can be done cheaper until it actually has been done I do not know.

do the work cheaper than can a private establishment, work will go elsewhere. That has been the universal practice. Mr. JONES of Washington. Yes; but suppose it is estimated that it can be done for $10,000 and then when it is actually done it costs $12,000, what becomes of the provision of the Senator's amendment?

Mr. CALDER. That sometimes happens, of course.
Mr. JONES of Washington. It very often happens.
Mr. CALDER. I know that the Navy Department in the past has been more disposed to have its work done by private concerns than by navy yards, and the navy yard has to show pretty clearly that it can do the work cheaper before it can get the work Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, this question has a good many times been before the Senate and the House of Representatives. It always seems to me that as long as we keep up the navy yards, with all the machinery and the men required there to perform the work for the Government, it is a very poor business proposition to let out the work to private parties. would be economy in the end, even if we paid more to a United States navy yard, to keep the men employed, to keep the machinery in operation and the plant going. It is practically an impossibility, I presume, in most cases to figure out to a penny just what it is going to cost in a navy yard to perform a particular work. I think the Senator from New York has well said that for a good many years if the Navy Department has had any prejudice at all it has been in favor of private parties rather than in favor of the navy yards.

Laying that aside, however, whether that be true or not—I will not say myself that it is true—assuming that they are going to be absolutely fair, this is a step toward employing our own men in the Government service when they are able to do the work. They will make an estimate, I presume, and if we assume that they are honest also-which I think we have a right to do-they will have some professional pride in carrying out the estimate. If they made an estimate on one job, and it was found that the cost exceeded the estimate very much, there is not any doubt but that they would begin to lose their reputation. They would be just as anxious to keep within their estimate as they possibly could, and I assume they would make it in good faith; and when they are able to do the work cheaper than private parties, certainly we ought to let them do it and keep our force together.

It is quite important, Mr. President, in the case of an emergency, when you want to enlarge the force in the navy yard, to be able to get it together at once. When you have once assembled it, if there is any work of the Government to do, it seems to me to be the height of folly to go and farm it out to private parties. I would be in favor of going further than this amendment goes. I would provide that just as long as we had a navy yard that was competent to do a job of work and was able to do it it should be done there and not done anywhere else, regardless of all other features.

This amendment does not even go that far. In my judgment it ought to go further, and if we are going to maintain a navy yard at all and we have any work to do we ought to do it in our own shops. A man who is manufacturing anything in his own establishment would be considered a very foolish business man if he had the machinery and the men could do the work if he should farm it out somewhere?

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator; yes. Mr. CARAWAY. What greater interest would the Government have in the navy yard than it had in the shop of any other citizen of the country? It owes nothing more to the shop because it is a Government-owned shop than it does to the private individual who has a place where men are employed. And is a man who happens to be on the Government pay roll to be pre-ferred when times of depression come to the man who is working for himself or for some other American citizen? It hon-estly concerns me. I do not think the Government ought to rush into business and try to shut out all private enterprise.

Mr. NORRIS. If the Senator is through with his question,

I will answer it the best I can.

The Senator assumes, I think, in his question, that there is nothing involved in it but a question of labor. I think something more is involved in this proposition. It is true that the number of men that will be employed on a certain job will be just as great at one place as another. I concede that; but the Senator must admit that the Government has its navy yard. It has its shop. It is not a question as to whether it should go Mr. CALDER. I am sure the Senator understands that if the estimate of the navy yard is higher, or if upon investigation by the Navy Department it is believed the navy yard can not our navy yards. We would not think of it for a moment. The employment of men will be just the same, I concede; but having our navy yards, having the men there, and having some work of our own to do, we ought to do it, I think, rather than to let it out to anybody else.

Mr. CARAWAY. May I ask the Senator another question?

Mr. NORRIS.

Mr. CARAWAY. We all realize that if the Government shall tax its citizens for the money to build an establishment, and then exempt it from taxation and pay for its upkeep, it can manufacture cheaper than the individuals who must pay the taxes to support the Government; and if the theory is to be extended, the Government can go into any line of business and tax everybody to support it and pay its losses. If the Government buys a plant and exempts it from taxation, it can drive any private industry out of business

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, the Senator, I think, fails to differentiate in this: This is entirely Government business. It is not going out to go into private business. It is not a question of competition with the men who are engaged in the manufacture of things that are in commerce generally, but it is a question of the repair of its ships and its other property. It is the Government's property. If we had no navy yards, if we had no shops, or if we did have and we wanted to scrap them all and go out of the business entirely and not have any, then I concede that the Senator's argument might be good.

Mr. CARAWAY. Let me ask the Senator, Is there anything sacred about the matter simply because it is Government property?

Mr. NORRIS. No; but this does follow, I will say to the Senator: Because it is Government property we are not going out in competition with men in the ordinary business affairs of If the Senator had an establishment here capable of building battleships and we were going to build one or repair one, as they need repairs all the time, and here were a navy yard equipped to do the work, with the men there in the employ of the Government, would it not be better business, as a matter of fact, for the Government to do its work in its own shop and keep that shop and the men in good condition so that they would be ready for any emergency that might arise?

Mr. CARAWAY. The Senator, if he will pardon me, must know that that is not really the question. The question is, when hard times come, whether men who are working for themselves shall be let out of employment and the taxes paid used to keep busy men who have been fortunate enough to go into the Government employ, and let the hard times and the depression fall always upon the citizen who is struggling to build up the industries of this country and pay the taxes. Are we to tax every-body, and, when once a man gets on the Government pay roll, determine that we will always keep him well supplied with work and well paid?

Somehow or other I do not feel that the man who works for the Government is any more sacred than the man who works for himself.

Mr. NORRIS. I do not, either.

Mr. CARAWAY. I do not believe in taxing everybody else's business out of existence in order to keep somebody always on the Government pay roll at a salary much better than he can get in private employment; but that is what is going on here.

Mr. NORRIS. Ne; I do not think so.
Mr. CARAWAY. If the Senator will pardon me, we have seen that campaign carried on right here in the District of Columbia, and that sort of an idea urged-that nobody must be thrown out of employment who is working for the Government. If anybody is to be laid off, let the private individual who never had a good thing quit, starve, and walk the streets, but always keep the man who has a Government job well paid. That is exactly the question. Mr. NORRIS. No; it is a

Mr. NORRIS. No; it is not exactly the question.
Mr. CARAWAY. Then I do not know what the question is,

and I thought I did.

Mr. NORRIS. Perhaps I should modify that by saying I do not think that is all there is in the question. I do not say that the Senator does not understand-

Mr. CARAWAY. Of course, I understand the Senator. I am not trying to be captious with the Senator. That is his viewpoint, and this is mine.

Mr. NORRIS. The Senator has a perfect right to have his viewpoint. I think he is wrong, as I pointed out before, and I am going to point out again where in his recent statement I think he is in error.

He would lead us to believe that if this work is done in these Government shops it must be paid for by taxation; that if it is done privately it would not be paid for by taxation. It does not make any difference where it is done; the taxpayer is going to pay for it. As far as the taxpayer is concerned, he will pay for it whether it is done in a private shop or whether it is done in a Government shop, and presumably it will take the same amount of labor and the same number of men to do it in one place that it will in another; and if the authorities go out and give other people employment to perform the work, there are people in Government employment that will either not do the work or that will be out of a job. I do not see that that makes a particle of difference.

Mr. CARAWAY. Let me make this suggestion to the Senator: The Government plant pays no taxes. The private industry does. If you are going to close one of the two, which does the public suffer most by having closed? If the private plant closes, and men are out of employment, and they no longer pay taxes, the taxes of every other citizen must be increased to meet that loss. If the Government's plant closes there is no diminution in the Government's revenue. I know why the Senator takes this position. He feels that way with reference to Muscle Shoals. He wants to tax everybody to run Muscle Shoals at the cost of the general public. If it is a success, why, it will be good; if it is a loss, the people will pay for it. We could follow that idea in other lines.

The Government owns coal mines. Why not open them and put every other coal mine out of business? It has iron mines; it has oil lands; it has timberlands. Why not open sawmills on these timberlands, and close everybody else's sawmills, and make the people pay for the upkeep of them?

Mr. NORRIS. Now, the Senator is entering on several other things that in my judgment do not apply to this particular proposition. For instance, the Senator says I am in favor of the Government developing Muscle Shoals and making all the people stand the expense, and if there is a loss all the people will suffer the loss. That states my position correctly. hope I can be equally successful in stating the Senator's posi-He would give Muscle Shoals to one corporation, and have it developed at the expense of all the people, with all the possible profits coming to that corporation, and none to the

Mr. CARAWAY. If the Senator will pardon me, he may accurately state his position, but he woefully misstates mine. In the first place, I did not want to give it away; I did not want to develop it at the public expense; but I did want to permit some private citizen to develop it and to use it for the public good.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, I ask if either one of the Senators who have the floor, or both of them, will yield for a moment?

Mr. CARAWAY. The Senator from Nebraska has the floor, Mr. WARREN. What I wish to say is that so far as I am concerned this matter is settled. It has been ruled out by the

Mr. NORRIS. It will take me only a minute to conclude. I would have been through long ago if it had not been for the interruptions

Mr. President, if the private party can not build a battleship, if he has the machinery, he will do something else. He is not confined to Government work. He will go into general business. If the Government in its navy yards puts its men out of business and stops its machinery it does nothing. It is idle. The machinery commences to rust and deteriorate. The men who are there are disorganized, and they scatter all over the country and go into other lines of business. We shall want them again some time. We may get into war, perhaps, or dan-ger of war. We may want to build another battleship or something of that kind. Then we will have to get them all together again. They do not understand each other, and many of them are new. Financially it is a great loss to the Government, which means to the taxpayers of the country. Every business man knows that one of the great damaging features to his business is when his organization is dissolved and scattered.

That happens to the Government when they do not do business in their plants because they are confined to Government business. It does not happen to a private corporation which is able to repair a battleship. It can also make automobiles or something else. So it does seem to me, putting it strictly on a business basis, having these navy yards and these repair shops, net a Senator here would cast a vote to scrap them. We must maintain them. We must have the men to operate the machinery we have and to care for it. If we have some work of our own, why not do it in our own shops, with our own men, with our own machinery, all equipped for the work, rather than close down the machinery, disorganize the force, and turn the work out to private parties, who, perhaps, in order to do work for the Government would give up some other business? It might, as a matter of fact, interfere with business operations in the country rather than assist it.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I want to say that the Senator from Nebraska has stated by position exactly, and I wanted to suggest to the Senator from New York that if his amendment would provide that this work shall be done, and these materials, or whatever may be necessary, shall be produced in a navy yard conveniently located, with ample facilities to do it, it ought to be done. I would a great deal rather require the expenditure of money in navy yards, if a navy yard is conveniently located and has ample facilities, than to leave it to this doubtful method of determining whether it can be done more cheaply in a Government navy yard before it is determined where the money will be spent, because I do not see how the officer who is passing upon the voucher can determine whether it could have been done better in another place or not until after the work is actually completed.

Mr. KING. I would like to ask the Senator how it is possible to determine whether it may be done more cheaply in a Government navy yard than in a private yard? You have to take into account, as well as other factors, the Government capital invested, which may be millions and millions, and the accumulation of years; you have to take into account overhead; you have to take into account compensation which is paid to employees under the retirement act; you have to take into account multitudes of officers of the Navy who are there in attendance, all of whom have to be paid by the Government. How is it possible to determine, if that is to be the basis of giving work to the navy yards, which can do the work more cheaply?

Mr. JONES of Washington. I do not know how it can be done. Furthermore, the estimate may include all these things, but it is nothing but an estimate, and if they spend $10,000 on a job and it is not finished they will come back to Congress and we must appropriate whatever additional amount is necessarv.

Mr. KING. Does not the Senator think that if the amendment should prevail it would lead to the maintenance of navy yards which are not needed and to the retention in those yards of a number of employees in anticipation of getting work which might go to private yards?

Mr. JONES of Washington. I do not think this would lead to that.

Mr. CALDER, Mr. President, I am not desirous of providing by this amendment that work shall be done in a Government navy yard unless it can be done as cheaply in the yard as outside the yard.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ODDIE in the chair). question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from New York.

Mr. KING. I ask for a division.

Mr. NORRIS. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered. On a division the amendment was rejected.

Mr. NORRIS. I ask for the year and nays on the question. Mr. SMOOT. It is too late now to ask for the year and nays. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The year and nays have been refused, and the Chair has announced the decision.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the

The principal legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Hale Harris Heffin Jones, N. Mex. Jones, Wash. Ball McKinley McNary Sheppard Brandegee Bursum Calder Cameron Shortridge Smith Smoot Moses Norbeck Norris Oddie King La Follette Lenroot Sterling Wadsworth Warren Watson Weller Capper Colt Curtis Dial Overman Pepper Pittman Ransdell Reed. Pa. Robinson Lodge McCormick McCumber McKellar Dillingham Fernald Weller Gooding

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Forty-seven Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is not present, and the Secretary will call the names of the absent Senators

The principal legislative clerk called the names of the absent Senators

Mr. WARREN. I move that the Sergeant at Arms be instructed to secure the attendance of absent Senators.

Mr. Harrison entered the Chamber and answered to his

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming moves that the Sergeant at Arms be requested to secure the attendance of absent Senators.

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Sergeant at Arms will execute the order of the Senate.

Mr. France and Mr. Frelinghuysen entered the Chamber and answered to their names.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. NORRIS. I ask now for the yeas and nays on the amendment on which we were voting.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair rules that the vote was announced, and the Senator's demand for the year and nays is out of order.

Mr. NORRIS. So as to avoid further difficulty, let me make this statement: We are not going to pass the bill without a roll call on the amendment.

Mr. WARREN. There is no objection to that. Mr. NORRIS. I understand there is no objection, but when we come to voting the vote does not show that. I have not offered the amendment, but if the Senator from New York does not offer it at another place in the bill, I give notice now that I shall offer it in the Senate when the bill gets there; and I want everybody to be here, because I want a roll call on it. That is all I ask, and that I am entitled to. I now offer the following amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will report the amendment.

The READING CLERK. On page 43, line 10, after the figures "$6,500,000," strike out the period and insert in lieu thereof a colon and add the following:

Provided. That no part of the moneys appropriated in this paragraph shall be used or expended for making such changes in private establishments or for the purchase or acquirement of any article or articles that at the time of the proposed changes, purchase, or acquirement can be made, manufactured, or produced in each or any of the Government navy yards of the United States, if time and facilities

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. NORRIS. I am willing to vote on it without any further argument if we can get a roll call. If we can not, then I want to talk about it. I demand the year and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the reading clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. COLT (when his name was called). Making the same announcement as before, I withhold my vote.

Mr. LODGE (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the senior Senator from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] to the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PAGE] and vote "yea."

Mr. McKINLEY (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. Caraway]. have not been able to obtain a transfer, I withhold my vote.

Mr. ROBINSON (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Suther-LAND] to the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Walsh], and vote "yea."

Mr. WATSON (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS] to the junior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Kelloge], and vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. COLT. I transfer my pair with the junior Senator from Florida [Mr. Trammell] to the junior Senator from Washington [Mr. Poindexter], and vote "yea."

Mr. McKELLAR (after having voted in the affirmative). I inquire if the junior Senator from Indiana [Mr. New] has

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That Senator has not voted. Mr. McKELLAR. I have a pair with that Senator, which I transfer to the senior Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST] and let my vote stand.

Mr. DILLINGHAM (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a pair with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. Glass], who has not voted. I transfer that pair to the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Kexes] and allow my vote to stand.

I have a general pair with the senior Senator Mr. BALL. from Florida [Mr. Fletcher]. May I inquire if that Senator has voted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. He has not voted. Mr. BALL. In his absence I withhold my vote.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. I transfer my general pair with the junior Senator from Montana [Mr. Walsh] to the junior Senator from Oregon [Mr. Stanfield] and vote "nay."

The roll call resulted-year 37, nays 10, as follows:

YEAS-37. Bursum Calder Cameron Capper Fernald France Harris Harrison Colt Heflin Jones, N. Mex. Jones, Wash. La Follette Curtis Dial Dillingham

Lenroot Lodge McKellar McNary Moses Norbeck	Norris Oddie Overman Pittman Ransdell Robinson	Sheppard Shortridge Smith Spencer Sterling Wadsworth	Watson Weller Willis
TAXABARAN III A INI	N	AYS-10.
Brandegee Frelinghuysen Gooding	Hale King McCumber	Pepper Reed, Pa. Smoot	Warren
	NOT	VOTING-49.
Ashurst Ball Bayard Borah Brookhart Broussard Caraway Couzens Culberson Cummins Edge Filkins Ernst	Fletcher George Gerry Glass Harreld Hitchcock Johnson Kellogg Kendrick Keyes Ladd McCormick McKinley	McLean Myers Nelson New Nicholson Owen Page Phipps Poindexter Pomerene Reed, Mo. Shields Simmons	Stanfield Stanley Sutherland Swanson Townsend Trammell Underwood Walsh, Mass. Walsh, Mont. Williams

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. Norris] the yeas are 37 and the nays are 10. Senators McKinley and Ball being in the Chamber and paired and not voting, it constitutes a quorum, and the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. NORRIS. I understand that to perfect the bill the same amendment ought to appear on the next page. Since we have had a roll call on the matter, I presume there will be no objection to inserting the same amendment after line 7, on page 45.

therefore offer that amendment.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated. The READING CLERK. On page 45, after line 7, insert as a new paragraph the following proviso: Provided, That no part of the moneys appropriated in this paragraph shall be used or expended for making such changes in private establishments or for the purchase or acquirement of any article or articles that at the time of the proposed changes, purchase, or acquirement can be made, manufactured, or produced in each or any of the Government navy yards of the United States, if time and facilities permit.

The amendment was agreed to.
Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, I have an amendment which I am going to propose that is subject to a point of I have not had an opportunity to confer with the chairman of the committee about it because I received the report from the Department of Commerce just a little while ago with reference to it. I want to explain it, because I believe it will appeal to the Senate and to the chairman of the committee. will send the amendment to the desk and have it read, and then I ask for an opportunity to give the reason for urging it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be re-

The READING CLERK. Insert on page 26, after the committee amendment, the following:

The General Accounting Office is hereby authorized and directed to allow credit in the respective accounts of disbursing agents under the Department of Commerce for payments of loss by exchange of salary and per diem checks issued under appropriations, respectively, for the fiscal years 1917 to 1922, inclusive, containing provision for exchange on official checks the account of which payments may have been heretofore settled or may hereafter become a matter of settlement.

growing out of the war, exchange against our people became very serious. In submitting the estimates for appropriations for the fiscal years 1916 and 1917 each appropriation included, among other items, a provision for "exchange on official checks."

I now wish to read a statement from a letter from the Secretary of Commerce, which I just received, with reference to the matter. He sent this to me just this evening.

Congress, in approving appropriations for the 1916-17 fiscal year, allowed this clause to stand, presumably, upon the strength of the arguments and statements brought out before the subcommittee of the House Committee on Appropriations in the hearings on the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill for 1917.

Every fiscal year from 1916 to 1922 we had that provision. For the current year the appropriation bill did not contain the provision, possibly upon the assumption that the exchange was getting more nearly normal. He said further:

In view of the fact that the appropriations for the fiscal years 1916–17 provided for "exchange on official checks" the bureau authorized its foreign officers and employees when sustaining a loss in an exchange of their salary or per diem in lieu of subsistence checks for the local currency to include such losses in their official accounts, and after the Auditor for the State and Other Departments had established a method of computing such losses the officers and employees were instructed to compute their claims in accordance with his method.

The amendment which I have offered is subject to a point of order, and I do not want to ask the chairman of the committee to accept it unless he feels that it ought to be accepted. I think it ought to be accepted.

Mr. WARREN. I have no objection to it, as it seems to me proper legislation.

Mr. SMOOT. I would like to ask the Senator from Washington what our representatives are losing now in the exchange on money?

Mr. JONES of Washington. It does not apply now. This only covers the years when we had that provision in the appropriation bills, 1915 to 1922.

Mr. SMOOT. The same people are not asking now that we take from them the advantage which they have in exchange

Mr. JONES of Washington. Oh, no, indeed.

Mr. SMOOT. It is all one way, to take it out of the Govern-

Mr. JONES of Washington. It is simply a matter where these men sustained the losses. Some of them had their accounts adjusted, but they were behind two years and by a reversed ruling of the comptroller it was held that they could not recover, so some of them got it and some did not, and some are held responsible for losses, and had to account for their subordinates' losses.

I will ask that this letter may be printed in the RECORD, in order that the conferees may have all the facts in connection with the matter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The letter referred to is as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE, OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY, Washington, March 1, 1923.

Hon. WESLEY L. JONES,
Chairman Committee on Commerce,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Mr. Senator: I have your letter requesting me to furnish your committee suggestions as to the merits of Senate bill 4637 and as to the propriety of its passage.

Inclosed please find copy of a memorandum on this subject, prepared by the chief of the auditing section of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, which presents the facts fully.

This bill requires no new appropriation, but merely provides just relief for certain disbursing agents of the Department of Commerce who would otherwise be unfairly penalized. I believe the passage of this bill is both desirable and urgent.

Yours faithfully,

Herbert Hoover,

Scoretary of Commerce.

HERBERT HOOVER, Secretary of Commerce.

Department of Commerce, Office of the Secretary, Washington, February 28, 1923.

(Memorandum.)

Subject: Legislation to relieve special disbursing agents of disallow-ances on account of claims for loss by exchange.

In 1915 the exchange situation in certain foreign countries where the bureau had officers stationed became so adverse to the agents that they were losing heavily on their salary and per diem in lieu of subsistence checks when exchanged for the local currency. In some few cases this loss amounted from about 10 per cent to 15 per cent of their salary they were losing heavily on their salary and per diem in lieu of subsistence checks when exchanged for the local currency. In some few cases this loss amounted from about 10 per cent to 15 per cent of their salary.

In submitting estimates of appropriations for the fiscal years 1916–17, each appropriation included, among other Items, a provision for "exchange on official checks." Congress, in approving appropriations for the 1916–17 fiscal year, allowed this clause to stand, presumably upon the strength of the arguments and statements brought out before the subcommittee of the House Committee on Appropriations in the hearings on the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill for 1917 (p. 580), supra, as follows:

"Secretary Redfield. Our estimate of the importance of the duties and responsibilities involved in it.

"Mr. Pratt. And. to some extent, the living expenses. May I mention one thing here? I want to refer to those words in italics, 'exchange on official checks.' Our Mr. Thompson, who is in Holland, owing to the exchange system there, is losing about $40 a month on his salary simply because of the decrease in exchange over there. Now, if we have that provision there it will permit us to equalize those things, and I think it really ought to be done. We will probably have to come to the committee and ask for a deficiency appropriation for Mr. Thompson, because he is really getting cheated out of his money, and through no fault of his own.

"Mr. Pratt. Yes, sir; absolutely.

"Mr. Pratt. Yes, sir; absolutely.

"Mr. Pratt. Yes, the they are very small in normal times.

"Secretary Redfield. The point is that the Government now allows for exchanges on expense accounts, but does not allow them on salaries, and that is the reason for this language."

Congress allowed this provision to remain in each of the appropriations for each of the succeeding fiscal years ended with June 30, 1922.

However, the appropriations for the current fiscal year do not carry this provision, the assumption being that the

Under the régime of the auditors for the various departments, the Auditor for the State and Other Departments, in settling the accounts of the special disbursing agents of this bureau, allowed the special disbursing agent credit for all claims for loss by exchange which he paid when such claims were computed in accordance with his method of computed by him. The method of computing loss by exchange as used by the Additor for the State and Other Departments did not reimburse the officer or employee for his actual losses.

Due to the inadequate staff of auditors in the office of the Auditor for the State and Other Departments, the accounts of the special disbursing agents of this bureau were not settled as promptly as they should have elapsed from the date of the submission of the accounts until notice of their settlement was received by the special disbursing agent. Consequently a large number of claims for loss by exchange in accounts of special disbursing agents were allowed to accumulate.

With the abolishment of the office of the auditors for the various depoted in the abolishment of the office of the auditors for the various depoted by the special disbursing agent to the numerous changes in personnel, an entirely different construction was placed upon the provision for "exchange on official checks" than was believed to have been the intent of Congress, The General Accounting Office, State and Other Departments Division, submitted a memorandum decision to the Comptroller General for his consideration was placed upon the provision for "exchange in consideration was proper charge against the Government, and that credit should not be allowed in the settlement of the accounts of special disbursing agents for such improper payments. Under date of September 21, 1821, the Comptroller General upheld the memorandum decision of the Congress, and the control of the such as a settle of the such

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I should like to have the amendment stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated. The READING CLERK. On page 26, after the amendment heretofore agreed to, it is proposed to insert:

The General Accounting Office is bereby authorized and directed to allow credit in the respective accounts of disbursing agents under the Department of Commerce for payments of loss by exchange on salary and per diem checks issued under appropriations, respectively, for the fiscal years 1917 to 1922, inclusive, containing a provision for "exchange on official checks," the accounts of which payments may have been heretofore settled or may hereafter become the matter of settlement

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Washington.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. McKELLAR. I offer an amendment as a new section to the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Tennessee will be stated.

The READING CLERK. It is proposed to insert at the proper place in the bill the following:

That clerks to Senators who are not chairmen of committees shall hereafter be paid $3,300 per annum, payable monthly.

Mr. WARREN. I make the point of order against that amendment that it has already determined to be out of order by a point of order already made against a similar amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Such an amendment has once been ruled out of order to-night.

Mr. HARRISON. A parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Mississippi will state it.

Mr. McKELLAR. This amendment has not been ruled out of order

Mr. WARREN. I make the point of order against the amendment in order that it may be ruled out of order.

Mr. HARRISON. I wish to propound a parliamentary in-Is it not within the province of the Chair, or in his discretion, if he sees fit, to submit this question to the Senate notwithstanding any action heretofore and let them decide it for themselves The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will submit the question to the Senate.

Mr. SMOOT. Will the Chair submit the question to the Senate after a similar amendment has been ruled out of order on this very day?

Mr. McKELLAR. The Chair has already done so. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The wording of this amendment is different from the former one, and the Chair has ruled that he will submit the question to the Senate.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President—
Mr. SMOOT. But the principle involved is the same.

Mr. NORRIS. Before the Chair submits it to the Senate. I should like to make an inquiry in order to see if I understand the question. If this amendment were agreed to it would give to the clerks of Senators who are not chairmen of committees a higher salary than is received by clerks to Senators who are chairman of committees

Mr. WARREN. Certainly.
Mr. SMOOT. That would be the effect of the amendment.
Mr. NORRIS. The Senator who is chairman of a committ The Senator who is chairman of a committee has to attend to the work of that committee which also requires the time of a clerk.

Mr. McKELLAR. I thought the clerks of the chairman of the committee were already paid that amount. If that is not the case

Mr. NORRIS. Oh, no.
Mr. McKELLAR. Then, I will modify the amendment by striking out the words "who are not chairmen of committees" and insert "clerks to Senators." That will accomplish the object.

Mr. WARREN. This matter has been duly discussed. The question has been presented to the Chair on a similar amendment which was ruled out on a point of order. On the question being submitted to the Senate whether the Chair should be sustained, the Chair was sustained by a large majority. The Senator from Tennessee must know that.

Mr. McKellar. But this is a different case.
Mr. Warren. There can be but one reason left. This amendment can not be sustained unless it is desired to destroy the bill and throw it to the winds.

Mr. SMITH. May not the amendment be again stated, Mr.

President?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will again read the amendment.

The READING CLERK. As now modified, the amendment reads: That clerks to Senators shall hereafter be paid $3,300 per annum, payable monthly.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will submit the question to the Senate

Mr. McKELLAR. I ask for the yeas and nays, Mr. President. Mr. HARRISON. Let us merely have a division, Mr. President.

Mr. SMOOT. Let us have the yeas and nays. We want a record vote on this question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The yeas and nays are demanded.

Mr. ROBINSON. A parliamentary inquiry. What is the question which is submitted to the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question submitted to the Senate is, Is the amendment in order? The Chair rules that the Chair, as a matter of right, is privileged to submit the question to the Senate.

Mr. NORRIS. I concede that the Chair has the right to submit it to the Senate and let the Senate decide the question. think it is true that the Presiding Officer may do so if he

Mr. WARREN. As to the germaneness of the question— The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Is the amend-ment in order? [Putting the question.] The "noes" seem to have it

Mr. McKELLAR. I ask for the year and navs.

Mr. HEFLIN. Let us have the yeas and nays. The yeas and nays were ordered, and the reading clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. COLT (when his name was called). Making the same announcement that I made before with reference to my pair and its transfer, I vote "nay."

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN (when his name was called). Making the same announcement as before with regard to my pair and its transfer, I vote "nay."

Mr. LODGE (when his name was called). Making the same announcement as before with regard to the transfer of my pair, I vote "nay.

Mr. McKINLEY (when his name was called). I have a permanent pair with the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CARAWAY]. As he is not present, and I do not know how he would vote, I withhold my vote.

Mr. ROBINSON (when his name was called). Announcing the same pair and transfer as on the previous vote, I vote

" nay."

Mr. STANLEY (when his name was called). I inquire if the

Mr. STANLEY (when his name was called). I inquire if the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Ernst] has voted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. He has not voted.
Mr. STANLEY. I have a pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky, which I transfer to the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. Hitchcock], and vote "nay."

Mr. WATSON (when his name was called). Making the same announcement as to the transfer of my pair as before, I vote "nav.

Mr. WILLIS (when his name was called). I am paired with my colleague, the senior Senator from Ohio [Mr. POMERENE], who is absent. I am unable to secure a transfer, and, therefore, am compelled to withhold my vote. If permitted to vote, although in favor of this amendment, I should be compelled to vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. BALL. I inquire if the senior Senator from Florida

[Mr. Fletcher] has voted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That Senator has not voted. Mr. BALL. As I have a general pair with that Senator, I withhold my vote.

Mr. McCORMICK. I inquire if the Senator from Wyoming

[Mr. KENDRICK] has voted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. He has not

Mr. McCORMICK. I am compelled to withhold my vote, as I have a pair with that Senator. If permitted to vote, I should vote "yea."

Mr. DILLINGHAM (after having voted in the negative). I am informed that my pair would vote as I have already voted. I therefore feel at liberty to vote, and will allow my vote to stand.

Mr. McKELLAR (after having voted in the affirmative). I note that the junior Senator from Indiana [Mr. New] has not voted. I have a pair with that Senator, which I transfer to the Senator from Arizona [Mr. Ashurst] and allow my vote to stand.

Mr. CURTIS. I wish to announce the following general

The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. Edge] with the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. Owen];
The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Elkins] with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. SIMMONS]

The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. McLean] with the Senator from Montana [Mr. MyERS];

The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. Nelson] with the Senator from Texas [Mr. Culberson];

The Senator from Colorado [Mr. Nicholson] with the Sena-ator from Missouri [Mr. REED] The Senator from Colorado [Mr. PHIPPS] with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. Dial]; and The Senator from Michigan [Mr. Townsend] with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. SWANSON]

The roll call resulted-yeas 21, nays 24, as follows:

VEAS 91

Bursum Cameron Capper Gooding Hale Harris	Harrison Heffin Jones, N. Mex. La Follette Lenroot McKellar	McNary Moses Oddle Overman Pittman Ransdell	Shortridge Smith Sterling
	NA	YS-24.
Brandegee Calder Colt Curtis Dillingham Fernald	France Frelinghuysen Jones, Wash. King Lodge McCumber	Norris Pepper Reed, Pa. Robinson Sheppard Smoot	Spencer Stanley Wadsworth Warren Watson Weller

snurst	Ernst	McMiniey	Shields
all	Fletcher	McLean	Simmons
ayard	George	Myers	Stanfield
orah	Gerry	Nelson	Sutherland
rookhart	Glass	New	Swanson
roussard	Harreld	Nicholson	Townsend
araway	Hitchcock	Norbeck	Trammell
ougana	Tohnson	Owon	Underwood

NOT VOTING-51.

Couzens Culberson Cummins Dial Edge Kellogg Kendrick Phipps Poindexter Pomerene Reed, Mo. Keyes Ladd McCormick

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this question the yeas are 21 and the nays are 24. The Senator from Illinois [Mr. McCORMICK], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. McKINLEY], the Senator from Delaware [Mr. Ball], and the Senator from Ohio [Mr. Willis] are in the Chamber paired, but not voting, constituting a quorum. The noes have it, and the amendment is determined not to be in order.

Mr. CALDER. Mr. President, I submit an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated. The READING CLERK. At the proper place in the bill, it is proposed to add the following:

That all per diem employees of the several departments and independent offices of the Government who were carried on the rolls as employees and excused from work on November 11, 1921, shall be allowed pay for that day.

Mr. CALDER. Mr. President, this amendment is made necessary as the result of the decision of the Comptroller General. Despite the fact that Congress authorized November 11, 1921, the day of the burial of the unknown soldier, as a legal holiday, and gave the President authority to call it a legal heliday and instruct employees of the Government to cease their labors on that day, nevertheless, at this late day, after all the per diem employees have been paid, the comptroller holds that the per diem employees will have to return their pay. The amendment will permit them to retain their pay for that day.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from New York.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, that bill was up in the Judiclary Committee the other day, if my recollection

Mr. CALDER. It was, and is on the calendar for consideration. It was favorably recommended by the Judiciary Com-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from New York,

The amendment was agreed to.
Mr. KING. Mr. President, for the purpose of obtaining an explanation, if nothing else, I move to strike out, on page 44, line 20, the numerals "$8,450,000."

I may say that we recently passed a naval bill appropriating three hundred and thirty-odd millions of dollars. It was assumed, in view of the magnitude of the appropriation, that that was approximately all that would be required of Congress for was approximately all that would be required of Congress for the next fiscal year. I do not know whether this is for the next fiscal year or is a deficiency. If a deficiency, it was known at the time of the former appropriation bill to which I have referred, and we ought to have dealt with it at that time.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, this refers to the ships that were partly built and that were beyond the stage where it was thought either necessary or satisfactory from any point of view to destroy them. Other ships are to be destroyed in place of these in order to conform to the requirements of the treaty. While, of course, some money may be obtained from the scrapping of the others, appropriations are necessary for doing the

Mr. KING. May I inquire of the Senator whether the $20,950,000 found on line 6 of page 45 is for the construction of additional capital ships?

Mr. WARREN. That seems to be a total of other sums appropriated for various purposes. As the Senator knows, all of them are in the text of the House bill.

Mr. KING. Yes.

Mr. WARREN. And they have been carefully considered in all the hearings that have been had. I assume that the acting chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs will be able to give the Senator any information he desires in regard to these items.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, these appropriations have not anything whatever to do with any new construction. They are simply appropriations for scrapping the ships that were required to be scrapped under the terms of the treaty for the limitation of armaments. There is nothing whatever for new construction.

The first item to which the Senator has objected-the item of $8,450,000-is to scrap the armor and armament provided for these ships that are to be given up under the terms of the treaty, and the other item is for the hulls and machinery.

Mr. KING. May I inquire of the Senator whether this is to pay for contracts which have been breached because of the action of the disarmament conference?

Mr. WARREN. I think the Senator is now speaking of what I described, here on page 42. The Senator from Maine is speaking about the later appropriation of some $8,000,000.

Mr. HALE. It is the whole item for scrapping, I take it, to which the Senator is alluding.

Mr. KING. What I want to know is whether it costs $20, 000,000 merely to scrap a few vessels, or whether a portion of that is to pay persons with whom the Government had contracts?

Mr. HALE. That is one of the principal items in it. Mr. KING. Were not appropriations for this purpose carried in the regular appropriation bill?

Mr. HALE. Not for that purpose at all. It was announced by the House Committee on Appropriations last year that in the future they would ask for a further appropriation to take care of this scrapping. It was estimated at that time that it would take some $70,000,000 to provide for the scrapping of the ships that would be given up under the terms of the treaty. Since that time they have been able to cut down that amount, and the present estimate is $55,000,000, of which $20,000,000 is appropriated here and $5,000,000 was appropriated last year. That leaves an additional $30,000,000 to be appropriated in the years to come.

Mr. KING. Why should not the Government, if it has breached contracts which have entailed claims for damages. settle all of the controversies and report in one bill the obli-Why come in from year gations which will have to be met?

to year with appropriations?

None of the countries that were to scrap their Mr. HALE. ships under the terms of the treaty have done so yet. They have not actually destroyed the ships. They will not do so until the treaty has actually been ratified and takes effect. Therefore in this case the actual hulls of the vessels themselves, and the propelling machinery that is inside of them, are to be kept and are not to be scrapped now under the terms of this provision.

May I inquire of the Senator whether the corporations which had entered into contractual relations with the Government have presented claims to the Government to the extent of $70,000,000 by reason of the termination of those contracts?

Mr. HALE. Not altogether; no. Mr. KING. Then are contracts still in existence, and work being done under them, which will have to be canceled?

Mr. HALE. No; the work is not being done. The contracts are still in existence, with the understanding that they will be paid from time to time as appropriations are made for the purpose. The Navy Department does not want to cancel some of them, as I have said.

Mr. KING. Then what is the $70,000,000 for to which the Senator referred a moment ago?

Mr. HALE. As I told the Senator, the $70,000,000 was merely an estimate. Now they have got it down to $55,000,000. Part of that is for armament.

Does the Senator understand that in addition Mr. KING. to this $20,000,000, plus the $5,000,000 which was carried heretofore, further appropriations will be required?

Mr. HALE. Later on $30,000,000 more will be needed when the department wants to get rid of the ships and actually scrap

Mr. KING. I can understand that there would be continuing appropriations to do the actual physical work of scrapping the vessels; but if the Government has broken or canceled contracts which entailed damages for which the Government was liable under its contracts, it would seem that those damages ought to be submitted; the Government could determine at this time what they were, and we could make an adequate appropriation to cover the entire damages.

Mr. HALE. The department takes the stand that they can not do so at the present time until they know exactly when they are going to dispose of the ships finally.

Mr. KING. This piecemeal policy will, of course, entail additional expense. It is very unfortunate that a different procedure was not inaugurated.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, some of the increases of minor salaries that have been made by amendments on the floor have resulted in at least one inequality which I think ought to be corrected. I therefore offer the amendment which I send to

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. REED of Pennsylvania in the chair). The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Utah [Mr. King]. Does the Senator insist upon his amendment?

Mr. KING. I will withdraw the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will state the amendment of the Senator from Pennsylvania.

The READING CLERK. It is proposed to insert in the bill, at the proper place, the following:

For additional compensation to messenger at card door, $200.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President, was no point of order made against that amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No point of order was made. Mr. MOSES. Where are the watchdogs of the Treasury

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, before this bill passes I desire just briefly to call to the attention of the Senate a speech that was made by General Dawes immediately upon taking charge of the Bureau of the Budget.

When the Budget system was put in operation we were told that we would not have any deficiency appropriations; that the pattern would be cut at the beginning of each Congress and the appropriations would be made within that particular pattern, and so forth. Here is what General Dawes said:

The report of the Director of the Budget indicates that the Executive can maintain, through the agencies of coordination, an effective control over expenditures which will substantially eliminate the occasion for deficiency appropriations.

So we can see from this expression of General Dawes. as well as from the expressions which we recall upon the floor of the Senate when this system was enacted into law, that the object was to do away with deficiency appropriations; and yet, in so short a time since the Bureau of the Budget has begun to function, we have passed, or will have passed with the passage of this bill, eight deficiency appropriation bills. I know it is a startling statement, and it controverts the assertions made by General Dawes; but here we come in with appropriation bills to provide for the expenses of operation of the Government and man representing the majority party. of the Government, and men representing the majority party go upon the hustings telling the people that they have cut down appropriations from the enormous amounts carried in previous appropriations to the small amount carried in the previous appropriations to the small amount carried in the general supply bills. Why, the distinguished leader of the majority party, in his campaign in Massachusetts, said that this administration had saved $7,500,000,000, I believe, since it came into control, and those figures I think were afterwards reiterated by the distinguished ex-chairman of the Republican senatorial campaign committee. Of course, when the matter was called to the attention of the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Longe], he admitted that he was mistaken to the amount of just about $7,500,000,000; but that is what the country gets. You bring in these general supply bills, saying that they have been cut below the estimates, and that the amounts are much less than those carried in the former appropriation bills, and then you come on and pass eight deficiency appropriation bills. Here in this very bill you appropriate one hundred and fifty odd millions of dollars.

Here are the bills that have been passed: The first one was passed on June 16, 1921, and carried $106,000,000.

The next one was passed on August 24, 1921, and carried $50,000,000.

The next one was passed on December 15, 1921, and carried $105,000,000.

The next one was passed on March 20, 1922, and carried $137,000,000.

The next one was passed on July 1, 1922, and carried $47,-000,000.

Another one was passed on September 22, 1922, and carried $75,000,000.

Then you passed another one recently, and now this one is about to go through for one hundred and fifty-four odd millions of dollars, and I imagine that you have another one there carrying about twenty or thirty millions of dollars to pay the bonus.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a moment?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes.

Mr. WARREN. I know how frightened the Senator is and how very bad he feels about it. We have no further deficiency bills at this session.

Mr. HARRISON. I am glad to hear it; so there will be only

Mr. WARREN. But we shall have another appropriation bill for some $37,000,000, to which I hope the Senator will not object.

Mr. HARRISON. That is a deficiency? Mr. WARREN. No; it is not. Mr. HARRISON. What is it for?

Mr. WARREN. It is for the bonus.
Mr. HARRISON. Oh, for the bonus! It is not provided in the general supply bill?

Mr. WARREN. It is provided in the general supply bill.

Mr. HARRISON. But it has not been passed yet? Mr. WARREN. This one has not been passed; and it is to provide for the interim after July 1 until we meet again next

Mr. HARRISON. Yes; another deficiency.

Mr. WARREN. No. Mr. HARRISON. It is just for the bonuses, the salaries. Then you were going to claim thirty or forty million dollars more as saved. I merely wanted to call to the attention of the Senate the fact that if you go out and claim great economy and saving, you should not cite alone the figures that are carried in the general appropriation bills but cite, in addition to them, these large amounts, running almost into billions of dollars, carried in the deficiency appropriation bills.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I simply want to say, of course taking both sessions into consideration, as far as the appropriations are concerned for this year they will amount to less than the appropriation bills of previous sessions, will be many, many hundreds of millions of dollars less.

Mr. OVERMAN. I challenge that statement and will show a different state of facts.

Mr. SMOOT. I will say to the Senator from Mississippl that the amount of every appropriation bill will be put in the Recorn, not only of one deficiency bill but of all that have been passed, of every appropriation bill that has been passed, and then the Senator can see the total amount of all of them. Senator must understand that these deficiencies are mostly on account of the war, in which this country took part, and, of course, I am not going to charge them to the former administration.

Mr. McKELLAR. There is one Item that is not due to the war. About $12,000,000 of this comes in the Post Office Department appropriation, and has nothing in the world to do with the war. Most of them come from sources other than the

Mr. SMOOT. Twelve million is a very little item.

Mr. McKELLAR. Of course, it is a very little item in the mind of the Senator, but it is a good deal when it comes to the taxpayers paying it.

Mr. SMOOT. It is very small in considering three and onehalf billion dollars. I am speaking generally and giving the reasons why these appropriations are made.

Mr. HARRISON. How much of it is for the remission of the taxes which have been taken off under this administration? Mr. SMOOT. Seventy-eight million dollars. It is not a remission at all.

Mr. McKELLAR. What is it? It is to pay it back. Mr. SMOOT. It was an illegal assessment of taxes.

Mr. McKELLAR. Then the Government has been at fault for not assessing them correctly.

Mr. SMOOT. A statement like that does no good and carries no weight. There is no question but that these taxes were illegally assessed; and while they are paying back $78,000,000, we have collected over $243,000,000 from those who were not taxed sufficiently. That is a shoe on the other foot,
Mr. WADSWORTH. One never hears that mentioned.

Mr. SMOOT. Of course not; that is not politics, and politics is what we hear all the time.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I agree with the Senator from Utah, and at the same time I agree with the statement of the Senator from North Carolina. The Senator from Utah says that if you take all these eight deficiency appropriation bills which they have passed since the Budget system came into vogue and add them to the general appropriation bills, it makes a good deal less than was appropriated in preceding years. That was the statement. The Senator from North Carolina said that he would show a different state of facts. The Senator from Utah had in mind those years during the war, when we had to appropriate about $20,000,000,000.

Mr. SMOOT. Oh, no.

Mr. HARRISON. Wait until I finish. I am trying to offer a good excuse, to get the Senator out of a hole, and he will not let me. So the Senator had those in his mind. The Senator from North Carolina had in mind, when he said they did not reduce it, but added to it, those good old Democratic days of economy preceding the war. So both Senators are correct.

Mr. SMOOT. Oh, yes, Mr. President. Then we will go back, if that is the case, to the good old days of the Republican Party before the war, and see what the appropriations were.

Mr. HARRISON. There were no good old days during Republican administrations.

Mr. SMOOT. We are talking now about the amount of appropriations when the different parties were in power. I want to say to the Senator now that I have no reference whatever to the time we were appropriating $18,000,000,000. I say these were the appropriations for this coming fiscal year, beginning on July 1, 1923, and ending on June 30, 1924; the appropriations we are making at this session of Congress will be less than for the year previous.

Mr. OVERMAN. About $400,000,000 more. Mr. McKellar. I hope that when the Senator from Utah makes up his figures he will include all the unexpended balances of previous years which have been reappropriated in bills during the present year.

Mr. SMOOT. It could not be otherwise, because everyone knows that wherever an appropriation is made of an unexpended balance, it is accounted for in the appropriation.

Mr. McKELLAR. Many of the figures I have seen from Republican sources did not contain those unexpended balances.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is in Committee of the Whole and open to further amendment. If there be no further amendment, the bill will be reported to the Senate.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

RECLASSIFICATION OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8928) to provide for the classification of civilian positions within the District of Columbia and in the field services.

Mr. ROBINSON, Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER, Does the Senator from South Dakota yield to the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. STERLING. I yield. Mr. ROBINSON. The Se The Senate has been in session for 11 I understand it is the purpose of the Senator to agree to an adjournment immediately after his motion is agreed to, if the Senate agrees to the consideration of the bill he mentions.

Mr. STERLING. That is the intention, to adjourn until 11 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. ROBINSON. I have no objection to the motion of the Senator from South Dakota.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Dakota moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 8928, the reclassification bill.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

MEMORIAL TO THE LATE JOSEPH J. DARLINGTON.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 240) entitled "Joint resolution authorizing the erection, on public grounds, of a memorial to the late Joseph J. Darlington," which was, on page 2, line 3, after the word "erection," to insert "or maintenance."

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I move that the Senate concur in the House amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

ADDITIONAL REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. McCUMBER, from the Committee on Finance, to which were referred the following bills, reported them, each without amendment, and submitted a report as indicated:

H. R. 13770. An act to amend the revenue act of 1921 in respect to capital gains and losses, and for other purposes. H. R. 14050. An act to amend the revenue act of 1921 in respect to income tax of nonresident aliens (Rept. No. 1257). Mr. BALL, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 13617) to dissolve the Colored Union Benevolent Association, and for other purposes, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1258) thereon.

Mr. CAPPER, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 4648) for the relief of Louis Leavitt, reported it with an amendment.

Mr. CALDER. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South

Dakota yield to the Senator from New York?

Mr. STERLING. I yield,

Mr. CALDER. The Senator from Kansas has just reported Senate bill 4648, permitting the reference of a claim which the Senate has already passed on to the courts of the eastern dis-trict of New York. I ask unanimous consent for immediate consideration of the bill.

Mr. ROBINSON. I object.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made.

Mr. ROBINSON. I trust that no other unanimous-consent request will be submitted to-night.

RECLASSIFICATION OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 8928) to provide for the classification of civilian positions within the District of Columbia and in the field services, which had been reported from the Committee on Civil Service with an amendment.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Dakota yield to the Senator from New York?

Mr. STERLING. I yield to the Senator.

DEATH OF REPRESENTATIVE W. BOURKE COCKRAN.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate resolutions which have been sent to the Senate by the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Reed of Pennsylvania). The Chair lays before the Senate resolutions from the House of Representatives, which will be read.

The reading clerk read the resolutions, as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES,

March 1, 1923.

Resolved, That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. W. BOURKE COCKRAN, a Representative from the State of New York.

Resolved further, That a committee of 20 Members of the House, with such Members of the Schate as may be joined, be appointed to attend the funeral.

Resolved further, That the Sergeant at Arms of the House be authorized and directed to take such steps as may be necessary for carrying out the provisions of these resolutions, and that the necessary expenses in connection therewith be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

Resolved further, That the Clerk comments are such as the contingent fund of the House.

Resolved further, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

Resolved further, That as a further mark of respect this House do now adjourn.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, I offer the following resolutions and ask for their adoption:
The resolution (S. Res. 464) was read, considered by unanimous consent, and unanimously agreed to, as follows:

mous consent, and unanimously agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with profound sorrow the announcement of the death of Hon. W. BOURKE COCKRAN, late a Representative from the State of New York.

Resolved, That a committee of six Senators be appointed by the Vice President to join the committee appointed by the House of Representatives to attend the funeral.

Resolved. That the Secretary communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, as a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased Representative, I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

The motion was unanimously agreed to; and (at 10 o'clock p. m.) the Senate adjourned, the adjournment being under the order previously entered, until to-morrow, Friday, March 2, 1923, at 11 o'clock a. m.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate March 1, 1923. GOVERNOR OF PORTO RICO.

HORACE M. TOWNER, of Iowa, to be Governor of Porto Rico, vice E. Mont Reily, resigned, effective April 1, 1923.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF THE NAVY.

Dwight Davis, of Missouri, to be Assistant Secretary of War, vice Jonathan Mayhew Wainwright, resigned.

DIRECTOR OF THE WAR FINANCE CORPORATION.

FRANK W. Mondell, of Wyoming, to be a director of the War Finance Corporation, vice Dwight Davis, resigned.

COMMISSIONER OF IMMIGRATION.

John D. Nagle, of California, to be commissioner of immigration at the port of San Francisco, Calif.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGES.

F. C. Jacobs, of Arizona, to be United States district judge, district of Arizona. (An additional position created by the act approved September 14, 1922.)

John F. McGee, of Minnesota, to be United States district judge, district of Minnesota. (An additional position created by the act approved September 14, 1922.)

Orle L. Phillips, of New Mexico, to be United States district judge, district of New Mexico. (An additional position created by the act approved September 14, 1922.)

Paul Jones, of Ohio, to be United States district judge, northern district of Ohio. (An additional position created by the act approved September 14, 1922.)

John J. Gore, of Tennessee, to be United States district judge. middle district of Tennessee. (An additional position created by the act approved September 14, 1922.)

Harry M. Hoffheimmer, of Ohio, to be United States district judge, southern district of Ohio, vice John W. Peck, resigned, effective April 4, 1923.

Xenophen Hicks, of Tennessee, to be United States district judge for the eastern and middle districts of Tennessee, vice Edward T. Sanford, appointed Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.

William Bondy, of New York, to be United States district judge, southern district of New York, vice Julius M. Mayer, promoted to circuit judge.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT ATTORNEY.

Benson W. Hough, of Ohio, to be United States attorney, southern district of Ohio, vice D. Q. Morrow, whose nomination was confirmed and who has declined appointment.

REGISTER OF THE LAND OFFICE.

George W. McKnight, of Oregon, to be register of the land office at Vale, Oreg., vice Thomas Jones, term expired.

PROMOTIONS IN THE REGULAR ARMY.

To be colonel.

Lieut. Col. William Topping Merry, Infantry, from February 27, 1923.

To be lieutenant colonels.

Maj. Thomas Worthington Hollyday, Field Artillery, from February 26, 1923.

Maj. Albert Louis Rhoades, Coast Artillery Corps, from February 27, 1923.

CHAPLAINS.

To be chaplains with the rank of captain.

Chaplain Thomas Albert Harkins from February 28, 1923. Chaplain Frank Pearson MacKenzie from February 28, 1923.

APPOINTMENTS BY TRANSFER IN THE REGULAR ARMY. QUARTERMASTER CORPS

Capt. Joseph Lester Brooks, Infantry, with rank from July 1, 1920.

AIR SERVICE.

First Lieut. Eugene Luther Vidal, Corps of Engineers, with rank from September 28, 1919.

PROMOTIONS IN COAST GUARD OF THE UNITED STATES.

Lieut. Edward D. Jones to be lieutenant commander, to rank as such from January 12, 1923, to fill an original vacancy created by the act of January 12, 1923.

Lieut. (Junior Grade) Thomas S. Klinger to be lieutenant, to rank as such from January 12, 1923, in place of Lieut. H. E. Rideout, promoted.

Lieut. (Junior Grade) Joseph F. Farley to be lieutenant, to rank as such from January 12, 1923, in place of Lieut. R. R.

Waesche, promoted.

Each of the above-named officers has passed the examinations required by law.

PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS IN THE NAVY.

MARINE CORPS.

First Lieut. Bruce J. Millner to be a captain in the Marine Corps from the 17th day of December, 1921.

First Lieut, William P. Richards to be a captain in the Marine Corps from the 1st day of January, 1922.

First Lieut. Willett Elmore to be a captain in the Marine Corps from the 26th day of March, 1922. First Lieut. Francis Fisk to be a captain in the Marine Corps from the 2d day of May, 1922.

Wilson B. McCandless, a citizen of the State of Iowa, to be a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps for a probationary period of two years from the 15th day of February, 1923.

The following-named noncommissioned officers in the Marine Corps to be second lieutenants in the Marine Corps for a probationary period of two years from the 26th day of February, 1923: Corpl. Jonathan O. Becker.

Sergt. Franklin W. R. Brown, Sergt. Harold C. Roberts.

Sergt. Will H. Lee. Sergt. Monroe S. Swanson.

Corpl. William E. Lee. Corpl. August L. Huhn, jr.

Gunnery Sergt, Charles R. Barrett, Corpl. Joshua B. Langley.

Sergt, John G. Walraven. Gunnery Sergt. William R. Hughes.

Corpl. James K. Reid.

POSTMASTERS.

ALABAMA.

Hattie M. Guin to be postmaster at Kennedy, Ala., in place of Alma Collins, resigned.

Hubert H. Hughston to be postmaster at Tuscumbia, Ala., in place of H. H. Hughston. Incumbent's commission expired October 24, 1922.

CALIFORNIA.

George Ide to be postmaster at Orcutt, Calif., in place of Calla Winger, resigned.

James C. Tyrrell to be postmaster at Grass Valley, Calif., in place of J. C. Tyrrell. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.
Ella A. Himes to be postmaster at Hammonton, Calif., in place of L. B. McCarty, resigned.

George F. Russell to be postmaster at Lakeport, Calif., in place of M. A. Craig. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.

Frederick W. Rohlfing to be postmaster at Placerville, Calif., in place of Joseph Scherrer. Incumbent's commission expired

September 5, 1922.

Meta C. Stofen to be postmaster at Sonoma, Calif., in place of J. D. Wagnon. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922, GEORGIA.

Albert S. Hardy to be postmaster at Gainesville, Ga., in place of A. S. Hardy. Incumbent's commission expired November 21, 1922

John L. Callaway to be postmaster at Covington, Ga., in place of J. L. Callaway. Incumbent's commission expired September 26, 1922.

Cicero F. Duffee to be postmaster at Jonesboro, Ga., in place of W. W. Brown, resigned.

Ezma D. Lindley to be postmaster at Powder Springs, Ga., in place of A. C. Moore, resigned.

TDA HO

Burton D. Fox to be postmaster at Challis, Idaho, in place of E. W. Keyes. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922

ILLINOIS.

Samuel H. Lawton to be postmaster at Delavan, Ill., in place of J. N. Hall. Incumbent's commission expired October 24, Edwin E. Jones to be postmaster at Bloomington, Ill., in place of M. M. Morrissey. Incumbent's commission expired October 24, 1922,

Robert B. Marshall to be postmaster at Capron, Ill., in place of William Lascelles, resigned.

Henry F. Maiwurm to be postmaster at Forest Park, Ill., in place of H. F. Maiwurm. Office became third class July 1, George A. Roberts to be postmaster at Staunton, Ill., in place of G. H. Luker, resigned.

INDIANA.

Guy H. Walker to be postmaster at Rockport, Ind., in place of C. H. Salm. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922

IOWA.

Benjamin H. Todd to be postmaster at Ida Grove, Iowa, in place of C. A. Britch, resigned.

Charles O. Shearer to be postmaster at Collins, Iowa, in place of H. R. Sokol, resigned.

Judson P. Holden to be postmaster at Delhi, Iowa, in place of

L. M. Barnes. Office became third class April 1, 1921.
Wesley L. Damerow to be postmaster at Dows, Iowa, in place of J. L. Lee. Incumbent's commission expired November 21, 1922.

Russell E. Metcalf to be postmaster at Hawarden, Iowa, in place of F. A. Gefke. Incumbent's commission expired December 6, 1922.

Paul F. Wilharm to be postmaster at Sumner, Iowa, in place of J. H. Noon, deceased.

KANSAS.

Abe K. Stoufer to be postmaster at Liberal, Kans., in place of E. S. Irwin. Incumbent's commission expired September 13, 1922.

Jesse M. Foster to be postmaster at Clifton, Kans., in place of E. W. Caywood. Incumbent's commission expired September 13, 1922. Walter S. Wright to be postmaster at Minneola, Kans., in place of W. B. Gregory, resigned.

George S. Robb to be postmaster at Salina, Kans., in place of W. F. Grosser, resigned.

Franklin J. Adams to be postmaster at Waterville, Kans., in place of C. C. Holbrook. Incumbent's commission expired September 13, 1922.

KENTUCKY.

Edward R. Lafferty to be postmaster at Cave City, Ky., in place of J. B. Yates, removed.

Alvin Courtney to be postmaster at Falmouth, Ky., in place of J. N. Rule, resigned.

ber 1, 1922.

Carl B. Marshall to be postmaster at Lewisburg, Ky., in place of J. B. Lasley, resigned.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Henry T. Maxwell to be postmaster at Millbury, Mass., in place of D. J. Dempsey. Incumbent's commission expired October 1, 1922.

William H. Anderson to be postmaster at Monson, Mass., in place of F. J. Sullivan, resigned.

Joseph V. Curran to be postmaster at Attleboro, Mass., in place of W. J. Kenney. Incumbent's commission expired October 1, 1922.

Godefroy de Tonnancour to be postmaster at Fall River,

Mass., in place of J. H. Hoar, deceased.

Eugene J. Le Maire to be postmaster at Fisherville, Mass., in place of J. J. Tebo. Office became third class April 1, 1921. Elizabeth B. Flint to be postmaster at North Attleboro, Mass., in place of T. F. Coady. Incumbent's commission expired Octo-Elmer R. Fate to be postmaster at Bellaire, Mich., in place of R. E. Pryor. Incumbent's commission expired September 13. 1922.

MINNESOTA,

Edwin H. Anderson to be postmaster at Monticello, Minn., in place of C. S. Strout. Incumbent's commission expired September 13, 1922.

Albert S. Webb to be postmaster at Sandstone, Minn., in place of L. M. Reinholdson. Incumbent's commission expired November 21, 1922.

Lottie A. Samuelson to be postmaster at Grasston, Minn., in place of J. T. Samuelson. Office became third class April 1, Flint E. Stanchfield to be postmaster at Onamia, Minn., in place of Henry Goulet. Incumbent's commission expired August 7, 1921.

Hugh R. Smith to be postmaster at Wabasha, Minn., in place of S. M. Quigley. Incumbent's commission expired September 13, MISSISSIPPI.

Robert B. Cox to be postmaster at Batesville, Miss., in place of R. B. Cox. Incumbent's commission expired April 30, 1922.
William M. Nisbet to be postmaster at Pontotoc, Miss., in place of C. W. Bolton. Incumbent's commission expired August 7, 1921.

MISSOURI.

Otto L. Caroutte to be postmaster at Mountainview, Mo., in place of J. L. Walker. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.

Joseph V. Forst to be postmaster at Silex, Mo., in place of

J. B. Williams. Incumbent's commission expired December 20, 1920.

George R. Moshier to be postmaster at Baker, Mont., in place of C. M. Daugherty. Incumbent's commission expired September 13, 1922.

Harvey St. J. Cannon to be postmaster at Kallspell, Mont., in place of Samuel Hilburn. Incumbent's commission expired September 13, 1922.

NEBRASKA.

Edwin D. Gideon, jr., to be postmaster at Ainsworth, Nebr.,

in place of F. R. Galbraith, resigned.

Robert W. Finley to be postmaster at Bradshaw, Nebr., in place of G. W. Gilliland. Incumbent's commission expired October 3, 1922.

George Beardsley to be postmaster at Clarke, Nebr., in place of Elizabeth McLean. Incumbent's commission expired November 21, 1922

William E. Brogan to be postmaster at Tilden, Nebr., in place of C. L. McCord. Incumbent's commission expired October 3, 1922.

George F. McMullen to be postmaster at Walthill, Nebr., in place of A. J. Caldwell. Incumbent's commission expired Octoher 3 1922

George W. Howe to be postmaster at Wisner, Nebr., in place of G. W. Howe. Incumbent's commission expired December 6, 1922.

NEVADA.

Madge S. Sweet to be postmaster at Minden, Nev., in place of E. A. Smith, resigned.

NEW JERSEY.

Herman H. Wille to be postmaster at Orange, N. J., in place of J. D. Moriarty, deceased.

John Rotherham to be postmaster at Jersey City, N. J., in place of Matt. Ely, resigned.

Marcus Cramer to be postmaster at Gloucester City, N. J., in place of T. J. Foley. Incumbent's commission expired October 24, 1922.

NEW MEXICO.

Dennis J. Walsh to be postmaster at Santa Rita, N. Mex., in place of J. L. Turner. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.

NEW YORK.

Delos Wilkinson to be postmaster at Akron, N. Y., in place of R. J. Paxon, removed.

Elmer A. Arnold to be postmaster at Burdett, N. Y., in place of E. A. Arnold. Office became third class October 1, 1922. Charles H. Brown to be postmaster at Corfu, N. Y., in place of M. J. Flaherty. Incumbent's commission expired September

William J. Leighton to be postmaster at Avon, N. Y., in place of C. H. Tighe. Incumbent's commission expired September 19, Roy W. Munson to be postmaster at Brasher Falls, N. Y., in place of P. A. Hallahan. Incumbent's commission expired October 24, 1922.

Cornelius V. Collins to be postmaster at Troy, N. Y., in place of J. H. Burns. Incumbent's commission expired Nevember 21,

NORTH CAROLINA.

William H. Parker to be postmaster at Carrboro, N. C., in place of L. D. Whitaker. Office became third class October 1,

NORTH DAKOTA.

Alexander R. Wright to be postmaster at Oakes, N. Dak., in place of J. M. Hamill. Incumbent's commission expired November 21, 1922.

OHIO.

Alexander M. Renick to be postmaster at Chillicothe, Ohio, in place of M. J. Scott, resigned.

John P. Cramer to be postmaster at Fredericksburg, Ohio, in place of C. E. Cramer, resigned. Henry W. Gruver to be postmaster at Miamisburg, Ohio, in place of William Alexander, resigned.

Isaac Evans to be postmaster at Vinton, Ohlo, in place of H. L. Sansbury, resigned.

Fred H. Tibbetts to be postmaster at Columbus, Ohio, in place of S. A. Kinnear, resigned.

John R. Lloyd to be postmaster at Cambridge, Ohio, in place of R. M. Allison. Incumbent's commission expired September

OKLAHOMA.

Sam H. Wilson to be postmaster at Barnsdall, Okla., in place of G. S. Clute, resigned.

Lyle H. Ball to be postmaster at Laverne, Okla., in place of E. Malloy. Incumbent's commission expired January 27, J. Ward McCague to be postmaster at Ralston, Okla., in place O. E. McCague. Incumbent's commission expired January 27, 1920.

PENNSYLVANIA.

William Z. Mahon to be postmaster at Carlisle, Pa., in place of Fisk Goodyear. Incumbent's commission expired September 1000

William D. First to be postmaster at Conneaut Lake, Pa., in place of W. D. First. Incumbent's commission expired February 23, 1923.

Joseph A. Hanley to be postmaster at Erie, Pa., in place of J. A. Hanley. Incumbent's commission expired December 23. 1922

John D. Hart to be postmaster at Export, Pa., in place of J. F. Lauffer. Incumbent's commission expired September 13,

Samuel G. Williams to be postmaster at Girard, Pa., in place of J. A. Rick. Incumbent's commission expired October 24, 1999

Ira A. Dinger to be postmaster at Mayport, Pa., in place of A. Waltman. Incumbent's commission expired December 23, 1999

George D. Claassen to be postmaster at Natrona, Pa., in place of J. J. Roll. Incumbent's commission expired December 23, 1922

Edwin W. Dye to be postmaster at Lawrenceville, Pa., in place of E. W. Dye. Incumbent's commission expired September 26, 1922.

PORTO RICO.

Jaime Tous Soto to be postmaster at Hato Ray, P. R., in place of J. C. Silva. Office became third class January 1,

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Julia E. D. Tolbert to be postmaster at Ninety Six, S. C., In place of J. W. Stalnaker, removed.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Leo D. Houk to be postmaster at Colome, S. Dak., in place of H. F. Mettler, resigned.

TENNESSEE.

Dorsey L. Lillard to be postmaster at Englewood, Tenn., in place of D. D. Edgemon. Incumbent's commission expired January 27, 1923.

Hubert B. McCalla to be postmaster at Kerrville, Tenn., in place of H. N. Aycock, deceased.

Henry E. Hudson to be postmaster at Whitwell, Tenn., in place of H. E. Hudson. Incumbent's commission expired January 2, 1921.

VIRGINIA.

John T. Kinlighan to be postmaster at Staunton, Va., in place of S. M. Donald, resigned.

Francis A. Haynes to be postmaster at Barboursville, Va., in place of D. D. Ball, resigned.

Benjamin B. Parker to be postmaster at Middletown, Va., in place of C. E. Wright, removed.

Charles R. Bockmeir to be postmaster at Granite Falls, Wash., in place of D. I. Carpenter. Incumbent's commission expired October 14, 1922.

John F. Samson to be postmaster at Oroville, Wash., in place of R. P. Hoskyn, resigned.

WEST VIRGINIA.

William B. Hines to be postmaster at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., in place of L. M. Rowan, resigned.

William M. Kidd to be postmaster at Burnsville, W. Va., in place of H. H. Berry. Incumbent's commission expired November 21, 1922.

WISCONSIN.

Durant C. Gile to be postmaster at Edgerton, Wis., in place of C. A. Hoen, resigned.

Ambrose M. Steinuand to be postmaster at Colby, Wis., in place of Carrie Kautsky, resigned.

Frances W. Kulwiec to be postmaster at Lublin, Wis., in place of Bruno Rojewski. Office became third class July 1, 1922.

Wilbur H. Bridgman to be postmaster at Stanley, Wis., in place of W. D. Schultz, resigned.

Roy Shaver to be postmaster at Greybull, Wyo., in place of J. E. Gilmore, appointee, declined.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate March 1, 1923. PROMOTION IN THE CONSULAR SERVICE.

CONSUL GENERAL OF CLASS 3 TO CONSUL GENERAL OF CLASS 2. Carlton Bailey Hurst.

CONSUL OF CLASS 1 TO CONSUL GENERAL OF CLASS 2.

Horace Lee Washington.

CONSUL GENERAL OF CLASS 4 TO CONSUL GENERAL OF CLASS 3.

DeWitt C. Poole. Albert W. Pontius. Claude I. Dawson. Frederick T. F. Dumont.

CONSUL OF CLASS 3 TO CONSUL GENERAL OF CLASS 4.

Homer M. Byington. Tracy Lav Clarence E. Gauss.

CONSUL OF CLASS 4 TO CONSUL OF CLASS 3.

Addison E. Southard. Henry P. Starrett. Louis G. Dreyfus, jr. George S. Messersmith.

Theodore Jaeckel. Thomas D. Bowman. John A. Gamon.

CONSUL OF CLASS 5 TO CONSUL OF CLASS 4.

Felix Cole. Ernest L. Ives. Paul Knabenshue. Irving N. Linnell.
J. Klahr Huddle.

Samuel W. Honaker. Thomas H. Bevan, George K. Donald. Hamilton C. Claiborne, Keith Merrill.

CONSUL OF CLASS 6 TO CONSUL OF CLASS 5.

Henry B. Hitchcock. Thomas M. Wilson. S. Pinkney Tuck, jr. Coert DuBois. Erle R. Dickover. David B. Macgowan.

Carol H. Foster. Homer Brett. Charles R. Cameron. Avra M. Warren. Harry M. Lakin.

CONSUL OF CLASS 7 TO CONSUL OF CLASS 6.

Walter A. Adams. George Wadsworth. Romeyn Wormuth. Karl de G. MacVitty. Cecil M. P. Cross. John Corrigan, jr. John G. Erhardt. Dudley G. Dwyre.

George Orr. Monnett B. Davis. W. M. Parker Mitchell. Clinton E. MacEachran, Herbert O. Williams, Fred R. Robinson. Marshall M. Vance, Alfred T. Burri. VICE CONSUL OF CAREER OF CLASS 1 TO CONSUL OF CLASS 7.

John F. Simons.
Robert B. Macatee.
Ralph H. Tompkins.
Edward M. Groth.
Clarence J. Spiker.
John R. Minter.
Paleigh A. Gibson Raleigh A. Gibson, Richard F. Boyce. Eliot B. Coulter. Hooker A. Doolittle.

Edmund B. Montgomery. Herndon W. Goforth. Hugh S. Fullerton. A. Wallace Treat. William J. McCafferty. Don S. Haven.
Leroy Webber.
Digby A. Willson.
Reginald S. Castleman.
Maynard B. Barnes.
Charles B. Hosmer.

CONSULS OF CLASS 6, FROM THE ELIGIBLE LIST.

Normand L. Anderson. Alfred W. Kliefoth.

Harry E. Carlson.

MEMBER OF THE TARIFF COMMISSION.

Henry H. Glassie.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSIONER.

William C. Deming.

PROMOTIONS IN THE COAST GUARD. To be captains.

Byron L. Reed. James M. Moore William B. Jacobs. Preston H. Uberroth. Richard O. Crisp.

To be captains (engineering).

Harry L. Boyd. John B. Coyle, John E. Dorry,

To be commanders.

Frederick G. Dodge. George C. Carmine. Francis S. Van Boskerck. Claude S. Cochran.

John G. Berry, Benjamin M. Chiswell, Aaron L. Gamble. Frederick C. Billard.

To be commanders (engineering).

William E. Maccoun. Carl M. Green. Horatio N. Wood.

Hermann Kotzschmar. Robert E. Wright. Urban Harvey.

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY.

Hanson Edward Ely to be major general.
Edwin Burr Babbitt to be major general.
George LeRoy Irwin to be brigadier general.
Ira Allen Haynes to be brigadier general.
Malvern-Hill Barnum to be brigadier general, Cavalry.
James Cooper Rhea to be colonel, Cavalry.

James Cooper Knea to be colonel, Cavany.

James Hanson to be colonel, Infantry.

Fred Radford Brown to be colonel, Infantry.

Walter Trotter Bates to be colonel, Adjutant General's Department.

Edmund Anthony Buchanan to be lieutenant colonel, Cavalry. Benjamin Delahauf Foulois to be lieutenant colonel, Air Ralph Hill Leavitt to be lieutenant colonel, Infantry. John Doyle Carmody to be major, Quartermaster Corps. John Curtis Newton to be captain, Infantry.

George Frederick Unmacht to be captain, Chemical Warfare

Ranald Trevor Adams to be first lieutenant, Field Artillery. Charles William Leng, jr., to be first lieutenant, Cavalry. Edward Ward Hendrick to be first lieutenant, Coast Artillery Corps.

Frederick Pearson to be first lieutenant, Infantry. Charles Frederick Colson to be first lieutenant, Infantry. Albert Walker Johnson to be first lieutenant, Cavalry. Donald Frederick Carroll to be first lieutenant, Infantry, Bernard Wellington Slifer to be first lieutenant, Coast Artillery Corps.

Willard Ames Holbrook, jr., to be first lieutenant, Cavalry.
Auston Monroe Wilson, jr., to be first lieutenant, Coast Artil-

Samuel Powell Walker, jr., to be first lieutenant, Cavalry. Robert Alwin Schow to be first lieutenant, Infantry. John Harrison Stokes, jr., to be first lieutenant, Infantry. LeGrande Albert Diller to be second lieutenant, Infantry.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY. To be captains.

Clarence L. Arnold. George B. Landenberger.

To be commanders.

Isaac C. Kidd.

Miles A. Libbey.

Robert A. Theobald. Charles F. Russell. Guy E. Baker.

Henry K. Hewitt. Felix X. Gygax. Guy E. Davis. Lelgh M. Stewart. William O. Wallace.

William S. Farber.

George M. Ravenscroft.

Raymond A. Spruance.

Frank D. Pryor. Frank J. Fletcher. John H. Towers. John H. Towers.
William H. Toaz.
Turner F. Caldwell.
Earl R. Shipp.
Arthur W. Sears.
Charles M. Austin.
Walter B. Decker.
John P. Miller.
Harry L. Pence.
Ferdinand L. Reichmuth.
Harvey Delano.

Harvey Delano. To be lieutenant commanders. Joseph F. Crowell, jr.

Webb Trammell. Charlton E. Battle, jr. Herbert A. Ellis. Herbert R. Hein. Herbert H. Bouson. Ole O. Hagen. Robert M. Griffin. Robert H. Skelton. Alfred G. Zimmermann.

Delavan B. Downer. Ralph E. Dennett. William J. Butler. Frederick Baltzly. Fred K. Elder. John H. Culin.

Robert A. Lavender.

John A. Rogers. Arthur H. Cummings, Alfred J. Byrholdt, Harold K. Smoot.

Jay K. Esler. George D. Murray. Harry R. Bogusch. Harry R. Bognsch.
Robert H. English.
Carroll Q. Wright, jr.
Oliver M. Read, jr.
Glenn B. Strickland.
Joseph McE. B. Smith.
George J. McMillin.
William H. O'Brien, jr.
Howard F. Kingman.
James G. B. Gromer.
William M. Oniglov William M. Quigley. Walter S. Haas. Stephan B. Robinson. William G. Greenman.

To be lieutenants.

Lansford F. Kengle. Edward H. Smith. Roger F. McCall. Frank E. Vensel, jr.

Harold H. Little.

Joseph Buchalter. William D. Sample. William L. Marsh. Arthur F. Anderson. Braxton Rhodes. Elwood H. Barkelew. Emil B. Perry. Louis T. Young. Donald McA. Mackey. James E. Dyer. Vernon C. Bixby:

To be lieutenants (junior grade).

Henry S. Dunbar, jr. Daniel F. Worth, jr. Marcy M. Dupre, jr. Edgar P. Kranzfelder Thomas A. Gaylord. Robert Bolton, jr. Robert Bolton, jr.
Robert W. Bockius,
Harry Corman.
Fred B. Avery,
Levi D. York,
Edward P. Wilson.
Geold N. Bull. John F. Crowe, jr. Edwin H. Tillman, jr. William A. Swanston. John T. Bottom, Jr. Frederick J. Caminghams Paul S. Slawson. Martin J. Gillan, jr. Valentine M. Davis. Charles D. Porter. George W. Mead, jr. Charles R. Woodson. Richard P. Glass. David A. Hughes. William Butler, jr. Arthur S. Billings. Kenneth D. Muir. Frank Kerr

Passed assistant paymasters.

Robert H. Mattox. Golden F. Davis. Herman F. Gingrich. Harry R. Hubbard: Henry C. McGinnis. John M. Speissegger. Clarence E. Kastenbein. George Scratchley. Charles B. Forrest William G. Conrad. Orville F. Byrd. Lester B. Karelle. James D. G. Wognum. Daniel L. McCarthy. Charles H. Ritt. Joseph W. Cavanagh. . Verny Carroll. Charles Musil. Forrest Ivanhoe. Ray W. Byrns, William W. Wise.

Don M. Robinson. Robert H. Lenson James H. Stevens. Ellsworth F. Sparks. John P. Killeen. Karl S. Farnum. Louis A. Puckett. Ellory F. Carr. Charles H. Gillilan. Leon Dancer. Harry A. Miller. Harvey R. Dye. Ervine R. Brown Charles Schaaf. Ray E. Snedaker. George W. Davis: Guild Bruda Alvin S. Reid. Robert R. Blaisdell. Edward F. Ney.

To be assistant surgeons:

Harry J. Scholtes. Willard S. Sargent.

To be passed assistant surgeon.

Jerome Braun.

To be naval constructors.

Isaac I. Yates. Ernest L. Patch.

To be chief carpenter.

Hamilton P. K. Lyons.

MARINE CORPS:

Harold C. Snyder to be colonel. Charles F. Williams to be lieutenant colonel. Harry Schmidt to be major. Julius T. Wright to be captain. Samuel J. Bartlett to be captain. Oliver A. Dow to be captain. Louie W. Putnam to be captain.

Frank E. Kennedy. Lewis H. C. Johnson. Dean Blanchard. Alfred Doucet. Percival W. Buzby. Frederick W. Ickes. Scott E. Pack Charles F. Grisham.

Donald J. MacCalman. Steven W. Callaway: William Hartenstein.

Claude B. Arney. Marvin G. Fox. Gilbert R. Whitworth. John J. Gaskin. Edward J. Spuhler. Joseph W. McColl, jr. James R. Harrison Edgar C. Suratt. John P. Bowling. Clarence L. Waters. Clarence H. Pike. Sidney E. Huff. James M. Fernald. Nelson H. Eisenhardt. Lewis R. McDowell. Joseph H. Severyns. Joseph H. Severyns. John B. Hupp. Burton W. Lambert, Godfrey P. Schurz. Raymond S. Kaiser. James F. Cooper: Charles F. Hudson: Hugo F. Sasse:

Irvin M. Hansen.

Benjamin S. Henderson. Meinrad A. Schur. Kenneth C. Hawkins. John V. McElduff, Ralph P. Noisat.

POSTMASTERIS

ALABAMA. Allen R. Byrd, Luverne.

CALIFORNIA.

Charles P. Hoffman, Cement. Alonzo F. Hann, Compton. Leonard G. Hardy, jr., South San Francisco. Nana M. Halferty, Tujunga.

COLOBADO

John L. Nightingale, Fort Collins.

CONNECTION.

Lewis E. Clark, South Meriden.

DELAWARE.

Rhubert R. German, Delmar.

FLORIDA.

Nathan B. Winslow, Bushnell, George E. Gay, Palatka. Edith C. Ryer, Lake Alfred. William P. Moore, Wellborn.

GEORGIA.

Earnest C. Smith, Bainbridge. Charles L. Adair, Comer. William C. McBride, Newnan.

IDAHO.

George F. McMartin, Coeur d'Alene,

ILLINOIS

Louis Lindenbauer, Camp Point, William D. Chambers, East Moline, Richard W. Miller, Hamilton. Walter V. Berry, Irving.
William A. Fay, Jacksonville.
Albert O. Kettelkamp, Nokomis.
William R. Landwehr, Northbrook. Fred A. Sapp, Ottawa. George S. Faxon, Plano Katherine C. Adams, Riverton. Minnie E. Bailey, Taylor Springs. Justin P. Crawford, Tolono.

INDIANA.

Milo E. Garrett, Auburn. Charles G. Covert, Evansville, John C. Chaille, Otwelf. Amanda B. Gosnell, West Terre Haute.

TOWA.

Charles A. Clark, Fort Des Moines. Oscar W. Larson, Odebolt. Ralph A. Rutledge, Sharpsburg. Joseph C. Allen, Zearing.

KANSAS.

Lida H. Caughron, Fontana. James G. Frazer, Halstead, Raymond R. Norris, Marquette. Jessie I. Dickson, Neosho Falls. Luella Tapley, Quenemo.

LOUISIANA.

Clyde L. Nelson, Lillie.

MAINE

Eddy A. Conant, Oldtown. Florence M. McKey, Wytopitlock, Gladys E. Gaskill, Delton, Fred W. Walker, Otsego.

MISSISSIPPI.

MICHIGAN.

Ida E. Roberts, Cleveland.

NEBRASKA.

William A. Gibson, Cedar Rapids. Gustav A. Koza, Clarkson. Hiram B. Cameron, Herman. Frank E. Crawford, Wymore.

NEVADA.

Charles P. Squires, Las Vegas.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Harry F. Smith, Peterboro.

NEW JERSEY.

Cooper L. MacMillan, Audubon. Timothy J. Nevill, Carteret.

Elmer G. Houghton, Cranford. Mary H. Jeffrey, Deal. Arthur J. Halladay, Kenliworth. Rufus O. Walling, Keyport. Harold Pittis, Lakehurst. Edward M. Sutton, Ocean City. James A. Harris, Wildwood. Jacob Feldman, Woodbine.

NEW YORK.

Spencer K. Warnick, Amsterdam. Earl J. Franklin, Belfast. Frank O. Persons, East Aurora. Roof D. Miller, Fort Plain. William D. Shepard, Geneseo. Hilda C. Tuma, Montauk. Dennis Lamarche, Plattsburg. William E. Mills, Rose Hill. Brainard W. Russell, Windsor. Ashmer R. Collins, Norwood.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Charles F. Smathers, Canton. Mattie C. Lewellyn, Walnut Cove.

NORTH DAKOTA.

James E. Galehouse, Carrington. Alfred B. Welch, Mandan.

OHIO.

Oliver R. Gulker, Glandorf. Paul H. Clark, Junction City. Henry G. Moellenbrock, Olmstead Falls.

OKLAHOMA.

Ellen K. Marchant, Aline.

OREGON.

Arlington B. Watt, Amity. Chester G. Coad, Dallas. Oscar C. Maxwell, Elgin. Thomas W. Angus, Gardiner. Nellie G. Reed, Gold Hill.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Joseph P. Fry, Allentown. Howard C. Emigh, Morrisdale. George D. Frey, Newville. Jennie A. Hickernell, Schaefferstown. Quinn T. Mickey, Shippensburg. Robert H. Harris, Tamaqua.

RHODE ISLAND.

William H. Godfrey, Apponaug.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Arnold Poulsen, Lennox. Olof Nelson, Yankton. Garfield G. Tunell, Mobridge.

TENNESSEE.

Ira L. Presson, Camden. Lulu M. Divine, Johnson City.

Edis T. Oliver, Caldwell. Carlton A. Dickson, Cleburne. Fred L. Brown, Plainview.

Alfred B. Brewster, Benton City. Fred W. Hoover, Eatonville. Thomas A. Graham, Goldendale. Edward C. Campbell, Kettle Falls. James F. Greer, Pe Ell. Sydney Relton, Richland. Edward A. Morris, Rockport. Arthur A. Bousquet, Wenatchee.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Monroe Burns, Cairo. Henry E. Folluo, Glen Rogers. Noah W. Russell, Lewisburg. Oliver A. Locke, Milton. Alma Hawks, McDowell.

J. Bascom McClure, Omar.
Robert E. L. Holt, Princeton. Ben Wakeman, Ward.

WYOMING.

Reuben A. Faulk, Lusk. James Syme, Superior. Alma N. Johnson, Yoder.

WITHDRAWAL,

Executive nomination withdrawn from the Senate March 1, 1923. POSTMASTER.

Hans R. Jepsen to be postmaster at Minde, in the State of Nevada.

REJECTION.

Executive nomination rejected by the Senate March 1, 1923. COMPTROLLER OF CUSTOMS.

Walter L. Cohen to be comptroller of customs, in district No. 20, with headquarters at New Orleans.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, March 1, 1923.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon and was called to order by Mr. Campbell of Kansas as Speaker pro tempore.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

The Lord who gives us life replete with blessings, give us hearts replete with gratitude and inspire them with Thy spirit. Be gentle with us in our sins; teach us the beauty of the upper way. May Thy wisdom be adapted to our weakness, Thy knowledge to our ignorance, and Thy mercy to our needs. Impress us that the greatest rewards of good and useful living are not in external things, but in joy and in peace by the way.

Solemn, silent moment; a pillar has fallen. Again the silver cord is loosed, the golden bowl is broken. The pitcher and the wheel are shattered. O help us in our infirmities and claim us as Thine own. Bring to the sick and sorrowing a release from pain, and unto all the hurts of the heart may our answer be, "God is good." Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

ARLINGTON MEMORIAL AMPHITHEATER,

The report of the Arlington Memorial Amphitheater Commission, with illustrations, was ordered printed.

FARM CREDITS LEGISLATION.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The unfinished business is the The SPEAKER pro tempore. The uninished business is the bill (S. 4280) to provide for the incorporation and supervision of corporations formed for the purpose of making agricultural and live-stock loans; to amend the Federal reserve act; to amend the Federal farm loan act; to extend and stabilize the market for United States bonds and other securities; to provide fiscal agents for the United States; and for other purposes, which the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, by direction of that committee, has reported back to the House with an amendment, with the recommendation that the amendment be agreed to and that the bill as amended do pass. The previous question is ordered under the rule on the bill and amendment to final passage. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the third reading of the Senate bill.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, and was read the third time.

Mr. LUCE. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Luck moves to recommit the bill to the Committee on Banking and Currency with instructions to that committee to report the same back forthwith with the following amendment: On page 51, strike out section 208 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"The capital and surplus of any farm-credit department, and the income derived therefrom shall be exempt from Federal, State, municipal, and local taxation, but such exemption shall not apply to any debentures or other obligations issued under authority of this title or to any income derived therefrom."

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the motion to recommit is not in order for the reason that the section which the motion seeks to strike out has already the adopted by the House. It is not in order to strike out an amendment which has already been adopted by the House. This amendment has been adopted by the House because this is all in one amendment, and the House just adopted that amendment in toto. Therefore the motion to recommit by striking out a portion of the amendment is not in order.

portion of the amendment is not in order.

Mr. LUCE. Mr. Speaker, an Irish member of the House of Commons said that the way to learn its rules was to break them. If in this motion I propose breaking the precedents of the House I shall be better informed hereafter. The Chair and his adviser know much more about this than I do, and I merely desire to suggest that if the precedents prevent the application of a principle that was embodied in the rules of the House for the protection of minorities, and in order to accomplish the most salutary purposes, the precedents are unfortunate, and in my judgment should be now reversed.

Tucker

Radcliffe

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It is well settled by the precedents in the House of Representatives that an amendment once agreed upon by the House may not be amended on a motion to recommit. These rulings run through the precedents of the House of Representatives so far back that it is not necessary for the Chair even to make a review of them. The Chair sustains the point of order.

The question is on the passage of the bill.
Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 306, nays 36, answered "present" 2, not voting 82, as follows:

YEAS-306. 3-306.
Langley
Lanham
Lankford
Larsen, Ga.
Larson, Minn.
Lawrence
Lazaro
Lea, Calif.
Leatherwood
Lee, Ga.
Lee, N. Y.
Lehlbach
Lineberger Roach Robertson Robsion Rodenberg Rosenbleom Rouse Rucker Sabath Fairchild Fairfield Faust Favrot Abernethy Almon Anderson Anderson Andrews, Nebr. Anthony Appleby Aswell Atkeson Bacharach Bankhead Barbour Barkley Fess Fields Fish Fisher Fitzgerald Focht Fordney Sanders, Ind. Sanders, Tex. Sandlin Schall Fordney
Foster
Frear
Frear
Free
Free
French
Fuller
Fulmer
Funk
Gahn
Garrett, Tenn.
Garrett, Tex.
Gensman
Gilfbort
Goldsborough
Goodykoontz
Gorman
Graham, Ill.
Green, Iowa
Griest
Griffin
Hadley
Hammer
Hardy, Colo.
Hardy, Tex.
Haugen
Hawes
Hawes Foster Scott, Tenn. Beck Beedy Begg Bell Lineberger Linthicum Little Scott, 1 Sears Shaw Shelton Shreve Siegel Sinclair Logan London Benham Bixler Longworth Lowrey Blakeney Bland, Va. Blanton Boies Bond Lyon McArthur
McDuffle
McFadden
McKenzie
McLaughlin, Nebr.
McSwaln
McSwaln
MacLafferty
Madden
Magee
Mansfield
Mapes
Martin
Mead Michener
Miller
Mills
Mondell
Montague
Moore, Ill.
Moore, Ohio
Moore, Va.
Morgan
Morin
Mott
Murphy
Nelson, Me.
Nelson, J. M.
Newton, Minn.
Newton, Mo.
Norton
O'Connor
Oldfield Sinnott Sisson Smith,Idaho Smithwick Snell Snyder Speaks Sproul Steagall Stedman Bowers Bowling Box Brand Briggs Brooks, Pa. Buchanan Bulwinkle Steenerson
Stevenson
Stevenson
Strong, Kans.
Strong, Pa.
Strong, Pa.
Sumners, Tex.
Swank
Sweet
Swing
Taylor, Ark.
Taylor, Colo.
Taylor, Tenn,
Ten Eyck
Thompson
Tillman
Timberlake
Tincher
Towner
Turner
Tyson
Upshaw
Valle
Vestal
Vinson
Voigt
Voik Burtness Butler Byrnes, S. C. Byrns, Tenn. Haugen Hawes Hawley Hays Henry Herrick Hersey Hickey Hicks Cable ampbell, Kans. Cannon Cantrill Carter Chalmers Chindblom Christopherson
Clagne
Clarke, N. Y.
Clouse
Cole, Iowa
Cole, Ohio
Collier
Collins
Colton
Connally, Tex.
Cooper, Ohio
Coeper, Wis.
Copley
Coughlin
Cramton
Crisp
Curry hristopherson Himes
Hoch
Hogan
Hooker
Huddleston
Hudspeth
Hukriede
Hull
Humphrey, Nebr.
Humphreys, Miss.
Hutchinson Himes Oldfield Oliver Overstreet Parker, N. Y. Parks, Ark. Patterson, N. J. Paul Perlman Porter Pou Volstead Walters, Wason Watson Hutchinson Ireland James Jefferls, Nebr. Jeffers, Ala. Johnson, Ky. Johnson, S. Dak. Johnson, Wash. Jones Tex. Weaver Webster White, Kans, Williams, III, Williamson Curry Dallinger Darrow Davis, Minn. Davis, Tenn. Dickinson Dominick Jones, Tex. Kelley, Mich. Kelly, Pa. Kendall Ketcham Porter Pou Pringey Purnell Quin Rainey, Ill. Williamson Wilson Wingo Wise Woodruff Woods, Va. Woodyard Wright Wurzbach Wyant Yates Young Zihlman Ketcham Kiess Kincheloe Kissel Kleczka Kline, N. Y. Kline, Pa. Knutson Kopp Kunz Lampert Doughton Dowell Drewry Raker Ramseyer Rankin Ransley Driver Dunbar Dunn Dyer Echols Elliott Rayburn Reed, N. Y. Reed, W. Va. Rhodes

Evans Lampert NAYS-36. Greene, Mass. Greene, Vt. Hill Husted Kirkpatrick Kreider Layton Luce MacGregor Merritt Ackerman Andrew, Mass. Burdick Edmonds Fenn Frothingham Gernerd Burton Moores, Ind. Parker, N. J. Glynn Graham, Pa.

Ricketts

Riordan Rogers	Stephens Tague	Temple Tilson	Winslow
Hogers	10000 March 2000	"PRESENT "-2.	TT I III STO IT
	Gallivan	Tinkham
		OTING—82.
Ansorge	Denison	Luhring	Rossdale
Arentz	Drane	McClintie	Ryan
Bird	Dupré	McCormick	Sanders, N. Y.
Bland, Ind.	Ellis	McLaughlin, Mie	ch. Scott, Mich.
Brennan	Freeman	McPherson	Slemp
Britten	Garner	Maloney	Smith, Mich.
Brooks, Ill.	Gould	Michaelson	Stiness
Brown, Tenn.	Hayden	Mudd	Stoll
Browne, Wis.	Huck	Nolan	Sullivan
Burke	Jacoway	Q'Brien	Summers, Wash.
Chandler, N. Y.	Johnson, Miss.	Ogden	Thomas
Chandler, Okla.	Jones, Pa.	Olpp	Thorpe
Clark, Fla.	Kahn	Paige	Treadway
Classon	Kearns	Park, Ga.	Ward, N. Y.
Codd	Keller	Patterson, Mo.	Ward, N. C.
Connolly, Pa.	Kennedy	Perkins	Wheeler
Crago	Kindred	Petersen	White, Me.
Crowther	King	Rainey, Ala.	Williams, Tex.
Cullen	Kitchen	Reber	Wood, Ind.
Dale	Knight	Riddick
Dempsey	Kraus	Rose

Taylor, N. J.

So the bill was passed.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:
Mr. McLaughlin of Michigan (for) with Mr. Tinkham (against)

Mr. McClintic (for) with Mr. Gallivan (against).

Further notice:

Mr. Treadway with Mr. Garner.

Stafford

Mr. Denison with Mr. Rainey of Alabama. Mr. Scott of Michigan with Mr. Johnson of Mississippl.

Mr. Paige with Mr. Kindred. Mr. Browne of Wisconsin with Mr. Sullivan, Mr. White of Maine with Mr. Cullen.

Mr. King with Mr. Clark of Florida. Mr. Patterson of Missouri with Mr. Kitchin.

Mr. Patterson of Missouri with Mr. Kitchin.
Mr. Crowther with Mr. O'Brien,
Mr. Dempsey with Mr. Stoll.
Mr. Michaelson with Mr. Thomas.
Mr. Mudd with Mr. Drane.
Mr. Connolly of Pennsylvania with Mr. Dupré.
Mr. Freeman with Mr. Ward of North Carolina.
Mr. Kearns with Mr. Williams of Texas.
Mr. Wood of Indiana with Mr. Jacoway

Mr. Wood of Indiana with Mr. Jacoway.
Mr. Perkins with Mr. Park of Georgia.
Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to vote.
The SPEAKER pro tempore. Was the gentleman in the Hall and listening when his name was called?

Mr. DEMPSEY. I was in the Hall, but I am not sure I was here when my name was called.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman does not come within the rule.

Mr. GALLIVAN. Mr. Speaker, on this roll call I voted "no." find that I am paired with the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. McClintic]. If he were present he would vote "aye" and I voted "no." I desire to withdraw my vote and answer present.

The name of Mr. Gallivan was called and he answered

" present."

Mr. TINKHAM. Mr. Speaker, I desire to withdraw my vote, I find I am paired with the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CLAUGHLIN]. He would vote "aye" and I "no," and I McLAUGHLIN]. answer present.

The name of Mr. TINKHAM was called and he answered

present."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. For what purpose does the gentleman from Kansas rise?

Mr. LITTLE. I rise to ask unanimous consent that I may speak for five minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In a minute.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection the title will he amended.

There was no objection.

On motion of Mr. McFadden, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. TUCKER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on this bill.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. Speaker, I make the same request. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Speaker, I make the same request. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? [After a pause. 1 The Chair hears none. The extension of remarks referred to is here printed in full

as follows:

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Speaker, we Americans are justly proud of America. We realize that America is to-day the greatest power in the world, the greatest military force in the world, the greatest industrial power, the greatest power in the world of finance, the great leader of all the world in humanity and civilization. But realizing these things as we do, we are likely to assume that that which is always will be, that because America to-day is the great leader of the world's civilization itt always must occupy that high position.

In that great lecture, "The Lost Arts," which he delivered more than two thousand times, Wendell Phillips said:

The most objectionable feature of our national character-and that is self-conceit, an undue appreciation of ourselves, an exaggerated estimate of our achievements, of our inventions, of our contributions to popular comfort, and of our place, in fact, in the great procession of the ages. We seem to imagine that whether knowledge will die with us or not, it certainly began with us. We have a pitying estimate, a tender pity, for the narrowness, ignorance, and darkness of the bygone ages. We seem to ourselves not only to monopolize but to have begun the era of light. In other words, we are all running over with a Fourth of July spirit of selfcontent."

And then he told of the evidences which remain of civilizations that were and are no more, of great powers that one time led the world's progress and are vanished. He told of the things which people in those bygone civilizations were able to do which we, with all of our progress, with all of our knowledge, are not able as yet to duplicate. He told of the making of a glass as pliable as cloth, of the wonderful tempering of steel, of work in the finer metals, of wonderful accomplishments which the archeologist discovers as he explores the sands that cover great civilizations of other days. WEAKNESS OF PAST CIVILIZATIONS.

The earliest pages of recorded history tell of great powers, of rulers with many millions of subjects, holding dominion over great empires, living in luxury and splendor with such omnipotence that they sometimes thought of themselves as gods, and now they are swallowed up in oblivion.

If I were speaking from a pulpit I might use a text; and if so, I would take one from the Psalmist where he glorifies God in that He gives strength to the weak and aid to the needy. And if I might have two texts, I would take the line from Ezekiel where he speaks of the great cities engulfed by the waters—the waters of oblivion, I take it.

I wandered once over the sands near Saloniki, the old Thessalonica of Bible days. I wandered about on these sands where now is but a desolate waste, but in the days of Alexander and Philip a great city stood, filled with pride in its power and beauty. I read recently of the excavations which Harvard is about to undertake in old Colophon, extinct for more than two thousand years but once one of the proudest of the 12 cities forming the Ionic Confederacy, claimed as the birthplace of Apelles, the greatest painter in oils of ancient times, and of Homer, whose fame will never die. I have wondered why these great powers of other days, these past civilizations, fell from pride into oblivion. The reason has seemed to me to lie in this—whatever may be our creed or faith, we must all recognize that an all-wise Providence rules the destiny of the world; and these empires that were but temporary, for all their pride and seeming omnipotence, lacked in that they did not serve God's purposes in the world and sank to oblivion because they did not give strength to the weak and aid to the needy.

THE PURPOSE OF DEMOCRACY.

When the founders of this great Republic framed its government they had before them all the pages of recorded history and they read this lesson which is repeated throughout the lesson that whatever the form of government that has existed in any age of the world, that government has always been administered primarily in the interest of those who controlled the government. Such is human nature. In the days of Herod, a despot, himself controlling the government, he brought sorrow into thousands of homes by the killing of the male babes in order, as he thought, to protect his own throne. In days of class rule, the few administered the government primarily in their own interest with scant heed to the rights or welfare of the many. In the French Revolution, when the very streets of Paris were said to run red with blood, when gentle women were bound upon the rude wooden carts and carried over the rough pavements to the guillotine, when kindness and pity seemed gone and men seemed turned to beasts, many have wondered. But there is less wonder if the first chapter is read first—if one reads how, under the rule of the few, the many had no rights that the nobility were bound to respect; how the nobles riding forth to the hunt might trample down the crops, destroying the labor of the past year and the hopes of the year to come, and there would be no redress for the peasant; how the most sacred rights of family might be invaded and for the peasant there was no justice. Mirabeau called the Revolution "the sudden, impetuous revenge of the many."

AMERICA'S FIRST GREAT EXPERIMENT.

And so with this lesson written on every page of history, the fathers of this Republic ventured to make this a democracy, a Government in which all should share in the ruling, a Government which, being controlled by all, should have as its primary concern the welfare and happiness of all. was America's first great experiment, the world's first great adventure in real democracy. The whole world looked on with skepticism. Everywhere abroad was failure propliesied for this great American experiment. In the first place, it never had been done and that is for many sufficient proof that it never can be done. Your honest-to-goodness pessimist is the man who says that something which ought to be done can not be done because it never has been done, and furthermore he does not propose to to anything to help it to be done. Phillips tells us of the Englishman who in 1836 wrote a book in which he conclusively proved that a steamboat never could cross the Atlantic Ocean because it never had been done. strange thing about it was that the first copy of that wise volume that came to America came on the first steamship that did cross the Atlantic. The spirit of America is rather that of the boy that Edgar Guest writes about:

"Somebody said that it couldn't be done But he with a chuckle replied That 'maybe it couldn't,' but he would be one Who wouldn't say so till he'd tried. So he buckled right in with the trace of a grin On his face. If he worried he hid it. He started to sing as he tackled the thing That couldn't be done, and he did it!

The fathers of the Republic ventured to attempt the thing which they thought ought to be done. The Old World scoffed and said it could not succeed, that there would come days of moboeracy as in old Rome when the people would seek constantly from the Government games, triumphal marches, feasts, and largess from the Treasury, seeking always to receive from the Government and never willing to sacrifice anything for the common good. If such a day does come in America, when the people only expect to receive from the Government and are not willing to sacrifice for the common good, then has begun the end of this democracy. But such has not been the history of America. In every great emergency the many have been willing to yield in the interest of the common good, and so great has been the success of this democracy that new the Old World which once scoffed everywhere seeks to imitate. America's first great experiment is a proven success, accepted and approved of the whole world.

CONFLICT WITH ALCOHOL INEVITABLE

It has seemed to me that it was inevitable that such a Government, founded to secure the happiness and welfare of all its people, must some time or other come to grips with the alcoholic liquor traffic. It is not for me here to prove to you the curse which that traffic has always been to the world. Those who sought its overthrow were always met with the old argument that alcohol could not be driven out, because it never had been done. We were told how from the earliest days of history and before, the traffic in alcoholic liquors had flourished in the world. Prohibition could not be because it never had been. That always emphasized in my mind the thought that the greatest condemnation of the alcoholic liquor traffic lay in this—that given thousands of years of experi-ence with that traffic, no one could point to any one good thing it had ever given to the world. I will call only one witness to testify as to what are the outstanding accomplishments of In March, 1910, there was published alcohol as a beverage. in the Outlook Magazine an interesting exchange of letters on the subject of the saloon between Dr. Lyman Abbott and one T. M. Gilmore, then editor of Bonfort's Wine and Spirit Circular, president of the National Model License League, and closely identified with the distillery business. In that correspondence debate this champion of the distillers' business said:

"I agree with the physician that the excessive use of alcohol is a prolific cause of disease; with the sociologist that it is a prolific cause of poverty; with the penologist that it is a prolific cause of crime."

A prolific cause of crime, poverty, and disease! Can you imagine a people free from crime, poverty, and disease? How happy would be such a land! How then could a government, pledged to secure the happiness and welfare of all its people, fail to make the attempt to elimate that which is a prolific cause of these great enemies of human happiness and welfare? True, it never had been done but that does not quiet the spirit of America.

WOMAN AND THE SALOON.

It is only a few years ago that in my little town of Lapeer there were 10 or 12 saloons. There met once or twice a month an organization of women, a Woman's Christian Temperance Union, with probably not more than 10 or 12 women at the average meeting. These women were consecrated to the destruction of the traffic in alcoholic liquors. It seemed a most unequal contest between the saloons, established by law, protected by law, and in many cases dominating the very Government itself, and those women without the vote or voice in their Government. I dare say that very few, if any, of those women, with all their faith, ever dared to hope that they would live to see the day when the saloon would be driven out of America. But that day did come when the people of this great democracy, founded to secure the happiness and welfare of all its people, wrote in their fundamental law a declaration that that which is a prolific cause of crime, poverty, and disease, an enemy of human happiness and welfare, would no longer be tolerated anywhere in this country, and the eighteenth amendment became a part of the Constitution of the United States. Then before all the world, America became committed in the most solemn way possible to another great experiment.

ANOTHER GREAT AMERICAN EXPERIMENT.

The issue now before America is whether that great experiment shall be a splendid success, pointing the way for greater happiness for all the world, or a failure involving in its own doom the shame of democracy itself.

RESULTS OF PROHIBITION.

It is not my purpose now to survey the results already accomplished by national prohibition in America. They are sufficiently great to justify the efforts made to bring it about, the efforts that are necessary to sustain and maintain it.

President Harding summed it up eloquently in this:

"In every community men and women have had an opportunity now to know what prohibition means. They know that debts are more promptly paid; that men take home the wages once wasted in saloons; that families are better clothed and fed, and more money finds its way into the savings banks. The liquor traffic was destructive of much that was most precious in American life. In the face of so much evidence on that point, what conscientious man would want to let his own selfish desires influence him to vote to bring it back? In another generation, I believe, liquor will have disappeared not merely from our politics but from our memories."

GOIN' T' BRING BOOZE BACK.

Abe Martin, in one of his evening lines of humor, says:

"Th' ole fashioned candidate that used t' promise t' reduce taxes now has a son runnin' fer office that's goin' t' bring booze hack"

year ago there became apparent a great effort to defeat prohibition. Forty organizations or more were formed to contest prohibition, some of them hardly living long enough for the country to know that they had been born. These organiza-tions, formed in the early months of 1922, had for their first object the election of a wet Congress. The present Congress is three to one dry on any question that comes up affecting prohibition. But these hopeful and vociferous wets were sure last January that the Sixty-eighth Congress would be wet. So beer-and-wine candidates became numerous in all of the early primaries. It seemed reasonable then to expect that while the West and South and North, that had experimented for some time in prohibition-local, county, and State-would hold firm to the faith, that the eastern sections, that had not had a similar experience, would show decisive reaction. The returns from the Pennsylvania primary in early June knocked all hopes of the wets into a cocked hat. In these primaries not a single beer-and-wine candidate in the great State of Pennsylvania was able to dislodge a dry Congressman, not even in the Pittsburgh district, represented by Hon. CLYDE KELLY, probably the greatest industrial district in the United States. This district is made up almost entirely of miners, steel laborers, and others similarly engaged. Mr. Kelly was opposed by a beer-and-wine candidate and has this to say of the contest:

"In my own district I saw the power of the outlaws and the power of the people. The Allegheny County Liquor Dealers' Association, whose very existence is an insulting challenge to the Constitution and laws of this country, officially indorsed my opponent and supplied him with large sums of money, levied from license holders and bootleggers. Seventy-five thousand dollars was expended and every method known to polecat fighters was brought into use."

He was renominated on the Republican ticket by a majority of 11,900, by a vote of three to one on the Democratic ticket, and secured all the votes on the Prohibition ticket. Similar results followed elsewhere in the primaries. In the election the drys suffered a net loss of six or eight only in the House and made a net gain of three seats in the Senate. It is assured that the Sixty-eighth Congress will be substantially as dry as the present Congress.

EIGHTEENTH AMENDMENT CONSTITUTIONAL,

But these wet organizations are at work; a paid propaganda is flooding the country; a great campaign is on. It is urged that the eighteenth amendment is not constitutional, that it conflicts with the fifth or the sixth or other amendments of the Constitution. It does not conflict with any other part of the Constitution. It is, as I have emphasized, entirely in harmony with the very essence of the underlying principles of our Government. But if there should be any conflict, it is to be remembered that the portion of the Constitution last adopted would repeal anything in earlier portions in conflict with it, and would constitute a repeal in so far as there existed any conflict. Therefore, the eighteenth amendment is the most constitutional part of the Constitution, unless it be the nineteenth amendment extending the right of suffrage to women, and I have not as yet observed any conflict between the votes of the women and national prohibition.

REPRESENTS VIEWS OF SUBSTANTIAL MAJORITY.

It is urged that the eighteenth amendment does not represent the sentiment of the people of the United States; that something was put over on the wets during the war and when the boys were in the military service. This overlooks entirely the long campaign for scores of years to bring about prohibition, the rapid spread of the movement from 1910 and the years immediately following. Many States had gone dry when, on November 7, 1916, Michigan, one of the greatest industrial States in the Union, adopted state-wide by a majority of 68,624. That was before any of our boys had entered the military service in the great war. It is interesting to note that in that vote the urban population, living in cities of 10,000 population or more, gave a majority of 12,334 in favor of prohibition. After state-wide prohibition had been in effect a year, the wets brought on a vote proposing the return of beer and wine, and in the election of April 7, 1919, when a great number of the boys had been discharged from the military service, the return of even beer and wine was overwhelmingly rejected by a vote of 530,123 against to 322,603 for, or a majority of 207,520 against beer and wine. In that election only two of all the cities gave any majority whatever for beer and wine. The great industrial State, Ohio, adopted state-wide prohibition by 25,759 in 1918, and in the November election of 1922, after more than two years of national prohibition, with everyone out of the military service, a proposal to return beer and wine was defeated by a majority of 189,000, with only 7 counties out of 88 in the State giving any majority for beer and wine. Such cities as East Liverpool, Columbus, Ashtabula, Youngstown, and Akron voted to sustain the eighteenth amendment.

The amendment, when submitted, received the vote of 281 members of the House against 128, and in the Senate 65 members as against 20. On the question of ratification in the various State legislatures, 1,288 members of the State senates voted for ratification and 213 against. In the various houses of representatives, 3,739 voted for ratification and 934 against, or a total of 86 per cent voting for ratification in the State senates and 80 per cent in the houses of representatives. In all, 46 States ratified the eighteenth amendment, the greatest number that have ratified any amendment to the Constitution. When the eighteenth amendment was adopted, 33 States were already dry, and 2,338 counties were dry out of 3,032. Over 90 per cent of the area of the United States was dry and over 60 per cent of the population of the United States was living in such arid area. It is but puerlie piffle that the country was taken by surprise or that the eighteenth amendment is founded on anything but the deliberate judgment of an overwhelming majority of the people of this democracy.

WETS OPPOSE ENFORCEMENT.

The great issue now before the American people is whether law and order shall prevail; whether the Constitution shall be respected and obeyed, or whether the bootleggers and the booze beggars shall be able to dictate to Uncle Sam. The most conspicuous of the principal organizations opposed to prohibition is the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment. In the circular of that organization dated March 1, 1922, which I now have in my hand, the program of that organization is announced as follows:

'A. To get the Volstead Act out of the law and keep it out. "B. To oppose the passage of similar tyrannical laws, and to endeavor to have the enforcement of the eighteenth amendment (so long as it remains in force) left to the people of the several States under the 'concurrent' clause.

"C. To work patiently, lawfully, fairly, and patriotically for the repeal of the prohibition amendment, and in the hope that the Constitution of the United States will hereafter be pre-served from mutilation by an organized fanatical minority."

AMENDMENT CAN NOT BE REPEALED, The repeal of the prohibition amendment is very remote as was recently declared by President Harding. Neither Stayton of Baltimore, nor any of the other functionaries of the association can have any hope of bringing about repeal of the eighteenth amendment in 50 years. In order to secure the ratification of the amendment it was necessary to get the support of both branches of the legislatures in 36, or threefourths of the States. If one branch of the legislature in each of 13 States had stood out against ratification the amendment would never have become a part of the Constitu-The wets were unable to find 13 States in which one branch of the legislature would stand in the way of the amendment, but on the contrary there were 46 States in which both branches voted to ratify, or in all 92 houses of representatives and State senates indorsed the eighteenth amendment. In order to secure a repeal of the amendment the 13 bodies that could have prevented ratification of the amendment will now be woefully insufficient. Instead there must be 72 legislative bodies in 36 States voting together for a resolution of repeal, first submitted by the Congress, before the eighteenth amendment can be taken out of the Constitution. Manifestly. our wet friends, having been unable but recently to stop the march of civilization by the action of 13 State legislative bodies, can not hope in this generation or the next to get 72 such bodies to undo this great legislative reform.

NULLIFICATION IS THE WET PROGRAM.

As a matter of fact, they have no illusions about this. None of these wet agitators have any expectation of repeal. they desire, what they urge, what they plan, is nullification of the Constitution of the United States. And the program of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, if you will note, proposes in Paragraph A to eliminate the Volstead Act and eliminate. Federal enforcement of the eighteenth amend-Paragraph B urges that enforcement be left entirely to the people of the several States. There are but two States in the Union that have no State enforcement code to carry into effect the eighteenth amendment. One of these is Maryland, the home of Stayton, the managing director of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, and of Hon. John Philip HILL, Member of Congress from Baltimore, and designated spokesman in Congress for that association. Recently an effort as made to secure in Maryland a State law to enforce prohibition. The Hon. John Philip Hill was the leader of the fight against such enactment before the legislature, and the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment in Maryland, as everywhere else, is actively opposed to the enactment of any law for enforcement of the eighteenth amendment, and actively engaged everywhere in an attempt to repeal or to destroy any law now in existence for that end. The program of these enemies of the eighteenth amendment is nullification, nothing more nor This organization is in effect a "league to aid bootleggers."

ISSUE IS NOW LAW AND ORDER.

There was a time when you and I perhaps differed on the question of prohibition. I think we always agreed as to its desirability, but we may very well have differed in our judgment as to its feasibility. But the time for such difference of opinion is past. While you and I may have differed on the question of the feasibility of prohibition, I can not conceive how you and I as good Americans can now differ on this issue of respect and obedience for the fundamental law of America. It was but a few days ago that the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, the Hon. William Howard Taft, speaking before the Washington Alumni Association of Yale, said this:

"This great period has many disquieting symptoms which in themselves constitute a period of lawlessness and even protests The safety of society is in obedience to law. If against law you like the law or not, as long as it is regularly adopted, it is our business to obey it. To obey the law is to be a true democrat. If every man thinks every law must suit him in order to obey it, he is not a democrat, but an anarchist. The basis of If every man thinks every law must suit him in order to good government is obedience to law as people have determined it to be. Young men should be trained to know that to be patriotic and democratic members of society, they must realize not only what it means to obey, but to instill the act of obedience in others."

VOLSTEAD OPPONENTS SET BAD EXAMPLE TO ALIENS.

A great Democrat, Hon. Thomas R. Marshall, former Vice President of the United States, who did not favor the adoption of the eighteenth amendment, in a signed article in the Washington Star of January 27, 1923, said:

When citizens of foreign birth note the attitude of mind and observe the conduct of other citizens, who appear to be leaders in all walks of life, toward the Volstead law, what ideas do they gain about this Government, what impression do they receive as to the kind of Americans they ought to be? We are going to have much difficulty in teaching our foreignborn man to be a law-abiding citizen so long as he has examples of so-called good citizens who reserve the right to eliminate certain laws from among those which they voluntarily obey. And we are doing a very bad thing when we tell him that the law can not be enforced. That should not be said of any law, and no law should be repealed because it can not be enforced. It should be enforced to the strictest letter of it until citizens, voluntarily obeying it, go about its repeal in an orderly man-ner. We do not make Christians by teaching them to mumble creeds. We can not make Americans out of foreigners by teaching them principles and at the same time showing them that loyalty to them is merely lip service. We will make of them good Americans only when we keep and enforce our laws.'

THE BAST IS THE PIRING LINE.

Out in our part of the country this Baltimore organization does not get far with its propaganda. We are experienced in the blessings of prohibition, for it is no new thing with us. Mount Clemens, in my district, a great health resort whose baths are famous throughout the world, was in the old days pretty wet in its sentiment. Last April the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment sought to organize a county branch there Full page ads were resorted to and a canvass was made for sale of tickets for a banquet where $4 would pay for a splendid dinner and membership and paid-up dues in the association and a badge would be thrown in free. of 80 tickets was sold after considerable effort and the night of the banquet, so the local papers stated, there were only 32 present and 48 vacant chairs, one for each State in the Union.

But the great firing line in this contest is in the East-New York, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland—and there this organization seems to meet with greater success in its raising of funds toward a seven million dollar pot and its influence on elections.

BEER AND WINE NOW.

Their immediate program is "beer and wine now." Knowing they can not repeal the eighteenth amendment, that they can not repeal the Volstead Act, they propose a nullification of the Volstead Act to permit the sale of beer with 2.75 per cent alcohol and wine with 14 per cent alcohol. Such an amendment to the Volstead Act would be unconstitutional. The eighteenth amendment prohibits "the manufacture, sale, or transportation of intoxicating liquors within, the importation thereof into, and the exportation thereof from, the United States and all territories subject to the jurisdiction thereof, for beverage purposes." It is manifest that any amendment of the Volstead Act that seeks to legalize the sale of a liquor which is intoxicating would be contrary to that amendment and hence unconstitutional. The Volstead Act forbids sale of any liquor having over one-half of 1 per cent of alcohol. That standard was adopted because the experience in the States that had adopted it clearly demonstrated that a higher percentage made prohibition enforcement impossible. Thirtypercentage made prohibition enforcement impossible. Thirty-four States had already adopted a limitation of one-half of

1 per cent or less. The Supreme Court of the United States in an opinion delivered by Justice Brandels said:

"The decision of the courts, as well as the action of the legislatures, make it clear * * * that a rigid classification of beverages is an essential for * * * effective prohibiof beverages is an essential for * * * effection of intoxicating liquor. A test often used effective prohibiwhether it contains one-half of 1 per cent by volume."

The court then called attention to the fact that the Federal Government would have the same difficulties in enforcement as the States, and referred to the definitions of over 30 States which have as strong or stronger definitions than the Volstead Act. The court then said:

"It is therefore * * * clear * * * that the defini-tion provided by the Volstead Act was not an arbitrary one." BEER AND WINE, NEVER.

Admittedly, beer containing one-half of 1 per cent of alcohol is not intoxicating, but the purpose of Congress was not to secure a limitation that is intoxicating but to secure one that is not intoxicating. Recently in the United States District Court in St. Louis the judge held that the court would take judicial notice of the fact that beer of the sort there involved (about 4 per cent) is an intoxicating liquor. The difference in the intoxicating effect between 4 per cent beer and 2.75 beer would only involve the drinking of a little more to secure the same intoxicating effect. Anyone who has read the eighteenth amendment or has given any consideration to the decisions of the United States Supreme Court knows very well that that tribunal would very promptly hold unconstitutional any beer and wine amendment to the Volstead Act. But the enactment of such an amendment by Congress would be destructive of national confidence in enforcement of the law, and it is very fortunate that there is every assurance that the next Congress will give no more serious consideration to such defiance of the Constitution than has this. Beer and wine may be an effective plea to get votes in New York, in New Jersey, or in Massachusetts, but the officials elected by such votes can not deliver the goods in return.

FOR RETTER ENFORCEMENT.

The great issue of the present is not a legislative one. It is education to secure enforcement of law, to increase respect for law, to vindicate the majesty of the Constitution of the United States. There are details in this problem of enforcement to be taken care of. Ministers of foreign Governments must come to realize that habitual violation of our fundamental law will end their usefulness. Our jurisdiction over the waters of the oceans to the east and to the west of us must be asserted a sufficient distance from our shores to enable us to maintain our sovereignty in our own country. Every agency of the Government should be called into action to guard against smuggling upon our boundaries. Politics should be absolutely eliminated from the selection and retention of men charged with enforcement of the Volstead Act. No Congressman and no Senator should be permitted to secure the appointment or prevent the discharge of an undesirable, untrustworthy agent of the commissioner charged with enforcement of the eighteenth amendment.

DEPORT THE ALIEN VIOLATOR.

It is one big question of enforcement of the law and respect for the Constitution. Neither you nor I have any right to say that we like one part of the Constitution and that we will respect; that another part we do not like and that we will not respect or obey. The vilest criminal no doubt obeys the laws that he wishes to obey. His criminality begins when he transgresses the laws which he does not want to obey. Recently in Congress there was pending in the House a bill that proposed the deportation of aliens convicted of violating our laws against sale of narcotics and intoxicating liquors. hibition Commissioner Haynes has said that 80 per cent of the liquor law violation is by aliens. I ventured to say in that debate that if a man comes to America from some foreign land, a land where there was little of opportunity for him or his children; but in some way he got together enough to bring him to this great land of opportunity, and after spending a period of probation, as our Methodist friends have it, and still not having taken upon himself the responsibilities of citizenship, having taken no obligation to defend our flag in time of war or support our institutions-if such a man persistently violates our laws and shows his contempt for the institutions of the land that gave him opportunity instead of lifelong lack of opportunity, the sooner such a man is sent back to the land from which he came the better.

THE CODE OF AMERICANISM.

But what will you say of the man who was born in this country; who has from his earliest hours enjoyed the privilege of an American home, better than any other home in the world; who has enjoyed the privilege of an American church, a little broader than any other church in the world; who has enjoyed the privilege of an American school where in another land there might have been no school at all; the privilege of American community life, giving more pleasure and inspiration than community life in any other place? If an American, enjoying all these privileges that have been made possible for him by the sacrifice and toil of patriots and pioneers, is still content to enjoy all the blessings that America has for him and in return can not even give respect to the fundamental law of his Nation, what do you say of him? The pity is there is no place to send such a one. We him? The pity is there is no place to send such a one. can at least educate our Nation to realize that such a one is lacking in Americanism. During the war we heard mention of 100 per cent Americanism. I used to think sometimes that those who prated the most about their 100 per cent Americanism knew more about percentage than they did Where do about Americanism. What is Americanism? you find it written down in black and white so that you may teach it to your children? It is in the Constitution of the United States. That is the great code of Americanism. There it is that the people of this great democracy have from time to time written down their great ideals of government. In earlier days they wrote there that your property can not be taken without due process of law; that a man can not be punished for crime except after trial by a jury of his peers. Finally, under the leadership of the great Lincoln, they wrote that one should not hold his fellow in Then under the leadership of the women of America, that one man should not sell to another that which would enslave and ruin him. It is all one great code from the earliest word of its preamble to its latest amendment, and he who would be a 100 per cent American must give love, respect, and obedience to that great document from end to The American creed closes:

"I therefore believe it is my duty to my country to love it; to support its Constitution; to obey its laws; to respect its flag; and to defend it against all enemies."

CIVILIZATION IS LAW AND ORDER.

Attorney General Daugherty, before the American Bar Association, said:

"Respect for law is the one essential fact of our civilization. Without it life, liberty, and property are insecure. The history of civilization has been a continuous struggle for law and order. * * * The Government will endure on the rock of law enforcement or it will perish in the quicksand of lawlessness.

With us a reasonable measure of law and order has been so commonplace that we have failed to appreciate its blessings. A few years ago, during the Great War, I was traveling in southern Albania, one of the oldest countries of Europe, its people intelligent, active, and possessing great possibilities of progress under proper conditions. For half a thousand years they were under the Turk, who cared nothing for their welfare or their development and sought only the taxes that could be wrung from them. In 1912 they won their independence, but, lacking a stable government, anarchy and lawlessness prevailed throughout the country. As the World War progressed, the Austrians occupied the northern half of the country, the Italians the southern portion. There the Italians established law and order, and the great landowner with whom I talked told me that his tenants renting land upon shares were producing from the same land three times as much as they had in the old days of lawlessness. Under law and order established by the Italians, the man who sowed knew that he would reap. They were appreciating law and order recently established. We would appreciate it the more when too late if lawlessness succeeded generally to law and order in this country.

THE TEST OF RESPECT FOR LAW.

When governor of New York, Hon. Charles E. Hughes, now

Secretary of State, said, in 1908:

"Everybody is ready to sustain the laws he likes. The test not, in the proper sense, respect for law and order. of respect for law is where the law is upheld even though it hurts. And we can't afford in this country, and in this State, to have a constitutional provision, which is the fundamental law of the land, ignored, betrayed. Therefore, I say that what the people have said in their Constitution must be enforced. and it is the duty of the legislature and of the governor and of the citizens to see to that enforcement.'

LINCOLN'S APPEAL.

In an address at Springfield, Ill., January 27, 1837, the immortal Lincoln said:

Let every American, every lover of liberty, every well wisher of posterity, swear by the blood of the Revolution never to violate in the least particular the laws of our country, or to tolerate their violation by others. As the patriots of '76 did to the Declaration of Independence, so to the support of the Constitution and the laws let every American pledge his the Constitution and the laws let every American pledge his life, his property, and his sacred honor. Let everyone remember that he who violates the laws of the land tramples on the blood of the fathers, and tears in sunder the charter of his own and his children's liberty. Let reverence for the laws be breathed by every American mother to the lisping babe that prattles on her lap; let it be taught in schools, in seminaries, and in colleges; let it be written in primers, spelling books, and in almanacs; let it be preached from the pulpits, proclaimed in legislative halls, and enforced in courts of justice, and, in short, let it become the political religion of the Nation." the Nation."

SACRIFICH IN PEACE AS IN WAR.

This great struggle in defense of our institutions, in behalf of respect for the supreme law of the land, may entail some small sacrifices upon us, some inconvenience, some interference with our established habits, some criticism of assoclates, the occasional loss of a customer or a vote; may even seem to stand in the way of the accomplishment of fame or fortune. But the great thing that Americans need to understand is that the citizen owes as much to his country in peace as in war. Peace has its responsibilities for the citizen no less great than those of war. We have seen how ready our people are to give up their money, to give up their sons, to give up their lives for the common cause, for the good of the Nation in time of war. But it is argued that for the common good the difference between one-half of 1 per cent and 2.75 per cent of alcohol in a glass of beer is not to be sacrificed. How cheap is such patriotism! Peace is the normal mission for America, not war. War is justified only to defend the existence of our country, to defend its institutions. It is but subsidiary to peace. The war is but occasional, Peace we hope to have always. Do not underestimate the responsibilities of peace. Peace has its responsibilities for the citizen no as in war. of peace.

During the war I visited our splendid Thirty-second Division just after the wonderful drive they had made in early August, 1918, driving the Germans back from Courmont to Fismes. It was but a few days after that drive when I visited them in their rest camp, a few miles back of Fismes. Early in the morning with the chaplain and the major I went across the fields to a number of graves newly made where boys from my own district were wrapped in the soil of France. As I stood beside these graves one of the soldiers showed me a snapshot of Walter Taylor, buried there, and the girl in Lapeer he was to have married on his return from the war. I realized then that life had meant as much to Taylor as to you or to me; that he owed nothing more of devotion to the cause of democracy or the country or the flag than do you or I; but he made the 100 per cent sacrifice while you and I are permitted to enjoy the blessings of a democracy made more secure. As I stood there I wondered whether there was in America a people worthy of such sacrifices.

That is the issue that is now before America, that is now before you and me-whether in this emergency of peace we are going to meet our responsibilities, perform our duties of citizenship with something of the same spirit of sacrifice as did many thousands in time of war.

I met a French general to whom one of our party spoke of the glory the commander had won in the war. He responded:
"It is not my glory. We are simply the guardians of glory of others.

Those in khaki and in blue guarded the glory of America in time of war so that our banner flies with a brighter gleam in the stars than ever before. But shall there be no one to guard the glory of America in time of peace? That is your privilege and responsibility and mine. Make this second great experiment of America a glorious success to the end that throughout the world the liquor traffic, prolific cause of crime, poverty, and disease, shall everywhere be doomed. Give strength to the weak and aid to the needy. Secure the greatest possible happiness for the many.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT FOR HIS APPROVAL,

Mr. RICKETTS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that this day they had presented to the President of the United States, for his approval, the following bills:

H. R. 370. An act for the relief of Charles W. Mugler; H. R. 962. An act for the relief of the heirs of Robert Laird McCormick, deceased:

H. R. 1290. An act for the relief of Cornelius Dugan;

H. R. 2702. An act for the relief of J. W. Glidden and E. F. Hobbs:

H. R. 4421. An act for the relief of John Albrecht; H. R. 5251. An act for the relief of Ruperto Vilche; H. R. 6538. An act for the relief of Grey Skipwith; H. R. 6358. An act authorizing the accounting officers of the Treasury to pay to A. E. Ackerman the pay and allowances of his rank for services performed prior to the approval of his bond by the Secretary of the Navy;

H. R. 6423. An act to detach Pecos County, in the State of Texas, from Del Rio division of the western judicial district of Texas and attach same to the El Paso division of the western judicial district of said State;

H. R. 6954. An act fixing rates of postage on certain kinds of printed matter; H. R. 7010. An act for the relief of the Southern Transportation Co.; H. R. 7053. An act to grant certain lands to the city of Canon City, Colo., for a public park; H. R. 7322. An act for the relief of John F. Homen;

H. R. 7967. An act granting certain lands to Escambia County, Fla., for a public park;

H. R. 8046. An act for the relief of Themis Christ; H. R. 8448. An act for the relief of Joseph Zitek; H. R. 8921. An act for the relief of Ellen McNamara;

H. R. 9309. An act for the relief of the Neah Bay Dock Co., a corporation;

H. R. 9862. An act for the relief of the Fred E. Jones Dredging

H. R. 9944. An act for the relief of Vincent L. Keating; H. R. 10003. An act to further amend and modify the war risk insurance act;

H. R. 10047. An act for the relief of Frances Martin H. R. 10179. An act for the relief of Americus Enfield; H. R. 10287. An act for the relief of John Calvin Starr;

H. R. 10816. An act to fix the annual salary of the collector of customs for the district of North Carolina; H. R. 11340. An act to advance Maj. Ralph S. Keyser on the lineal list of officers of the United States Marine Corps so that he will take rank next after Maj. John R. Henley;

H. R. 11579. An act to amend section 1 of an act approved January 11, 1922, entitled "An act to permit the city of Chicago to acquire real estate of the United States of America"

H. R. 11603. An act to validate for certain purposes the revocation of discharge orders of Lieut. Col. James M. Palmer and the orders restoring such officer to his former rank and command:

H. R. 11637. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to approve indemnity selections in exchange for described granted school lands;

H. R. 11738. An act for the relief of Maj. Russell B. Putnam; H. R. 12751. An act to convey to the Big Rock Stone & Construction Co. a portion of the hospital reservation of United States Veterans' Hospital No. 78 (Fort Logan H. Roots) in the State of Arkansas;

H. R. 13032. An act to authorize the sale of the Montreal River Lighthouse Reservation, Mich., to the Gogebic County Board of the American Legion, Bessemer, Mich.;

H. R. 13272. An act granting a license to the city of Miami Beach, Fla., to construct a drain for sewage across certain Government lands;

H. R. 13326. An act in reference to a national military park at Yorktown, Va.;

H. R. 13827. An act relating to the sinking fund for bonds and notes of the United States;

H. R. 14081. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Valley Transfer Railway Co., a corporation, to construct three bridges and approaches thereto across the junction of the Minnesota and Mississippi Rivers, at points suitable to the interests of navigation;

H. R. 14249. An act for the relief of the owners of the American schooner Mount Hope; H. H. 13793. An act making appropriations for the military and nonmilitary activities of the War Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, and for other purposes; and

H. J. Res. 47. Joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to receive for instruction at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis Mr. Jose A. de la Torriente, a citizen of BUSTS OF THE LATE CHAMP CLARK AND THE LATE JAMES R. MANN.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 568.

Resolved, That the sum of $4,000 is authorized to be paid from the contingent fund of the House for the procurement of a marble bust of Champ Clark, late a Representative from the State of Missouri, and a marble bust of James R. Mann, late a Representative from the State of Illinois. The expenditure of the sum herein authorized shall be made under the direction of the Committee on the Library.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of the resolution? [After a pause.] The Chair hears

The question was taken, and the resolution was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Craven, its Chief Clerk, announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was

S. 4245. An act to provide the necessary organization of the customs service for an adequate administration and enforcement of the tariff act of 1922 and all other customs revenue

S. 4425. An act to authorize appropriations for the relief of certain officers of the Army of the United States; S. 4396. An act for the relief of Eldredge & Mason, of Malone,

N. Y.;

S. J. Res. 277. Joint resolution granting permission for the erection of a monument to symbolize the national game of baseball:

S. J. Res. 287. Joint resolution creating the joint commission of gold and silver inquiry;

S. 4160. An act to amend the act of Congress entitled "An act to establish a commission for the purpose of securing information in connection with questions relative to interstate commerce in coal, and for other purposes, approved September 22, 1922

S. 4631. An act granting the consent of Congress to the counties of Bowie and Cass, State of Texas, for construction of a bridge across Sulphur River at or near Paces Ferry, in said counties and State;

S. 3855. An act to quiet the title to lands within Pueblo Indian land grants, and for other purposes;

S. 1847. An act to amend an act approved February 12, 1901, entitled "An act to provide for eliminating certain grade crossings on the line of the Baltimore & Potomac Railroad Co. in the city of Washington, D. C., and requiring said company to depress and elevate its tracks, and to enable it to relocate parts of its railroad therein, and for other purposes

S. 4119. An act authorizing the erection in the city of Washington of a monument in memory of the faithful colored mammies of the South;

S. 4638. An act authorizing the Great Northern Railway Co. to maintain and operate or reconstruct, maintain, and operate its bridge across the Columbia River at Marcus, in the State of Washington; and

S. J. Res. 283, Joint resolution directing the Public Utilities Commission of the District of Columbia to investigate rates charged by taxicabs and automobiles for hire,

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bill and joint resolution of the following

H. J. Res. 453. Joint resolution requesting the President to urge upon the governments of certain nations the immediate necessity of limiting the production of habit-forming narcotic drugs and the raw materials from which they are made to the amount actually required for strictly medicinal and scientific purposes; and

H. R. 13554. An act authorizing the construction, maintenance, and operation of a dam and appurtenant intake and outlet structures across or in the Potomac River at or near Williamsport, Washington County, Md.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 4197) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to issue to certain persons and certain corporations permits to explore or leases of certain lands that lie south of the medial line of the main channel of Red River, in Oklahoma, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendment joint resolution of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

H. J. Res. 422. Joint resolution permitting the entry, free of of certain domestic animals which have crossed the boundary line into foreign countries.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE.

Mr. LITTLE. Mr. Speaker, I rise to ask permission to ask unanimous consent to address the House for five minutes.

Mr. MONDELL. On what subject?

Mr. LITTLE. To answer a question put here the other day as to how much the code bill cost.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? [After a

The Chair hears none.

Mr. LITTLE. Mr. Speaker, last Saturday there was some inquiry in the House as to the expenses of the preparation and publication of the act to establish a Federal Code. I am glad that I am able to state to the House that whether the Federal Code is completed or not, it would not cost the taxpayers of this country a nickel, but on the contrary will show a clean profit of money put in the Treasury of over a quarter of a million dollars. If you will turn to the Congressional Record of April 10, 1920, you will get the information in detail from Mr. Slemp, chairman of the Ordnance and Fortifications Subcommittee of Appropriations. On page 5505 of the RECORD Mr. SLEMP said:

I will say in reply to the gentleman that the War Department withdrew the estimate of $58,500 for that board for the coming fiscal year and will return to the Treasury Department the unexpended balance in that fund of $230,000, or a total of $288,500, so that the gentleman is responsible for saving to the Treasury $288,500.

The inquiry was made by myself, with regard to the Bureau of Ordnance and Fortifications. The gentleman from Kansas had called the Secretary of War's attention to the fact that the annual appropriation for that bureau was not authorized by law. The chairman of the revision committee said that if Secretary Baker would have such a bill prepared and introduced the chairman would cheerfully support it, but unless that bill was introduced the chairman on revision would make the point of order that there was no authorization for such an appropriation. Mr. Baker withdrew the request for the appropriation, as Mr. SLEMP says, and it was discovered that fund was then $230,000, which was returned to the Treasury, and the taxpayers were saved that amount.

The same year the chairman of the revision committee called the attention of the chairman of the Military Affairs Committee to an item in his bill preparing to make the annual appropriation of $10,000 for the military people to make a military code and suggested that the Military Committee had no such authority; that those funds under the law were required to go to the Revision of Laws Committee, and Mr. KAHN said he would withdraw it. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Madden] that afternoon made the point of order and the $10,000 was stricken out and the annual appropriation discontinued.

The annual appropriation of $58,500 and $10,000 made, of course, $68,500 that has been saved ever since and will be saved hereafter. Five years of annual savings of $68,500 constitutes already a saving of $342,500. This annual saving will continue. Adding to this present amount of $230,000, we have a total saved by those in charge of the bill to make a code of cash money to the amount of $572,500. This will pay much more than all the expenses in every way of making the code and leave the Government a clean profit on the investment of over half a million dollars. We challenge the history of this country to surpass that accomplishment as a financial business proposition,

Mr. HILL. Will the gentleman yield? I would like to ask when was the last code published.

Mr. LITTLE. In 1874, and a second edition in 1878

If you will turn to the debates of 1874 you will find that the chairman said it cost them $100,000 to prepare the Revised The people in charge of the present bill Statutes of 1874. expended about $13,000 in its preparation for printing, and spent $87,000 less than they did in '74, and more than that, less than was spent some 15 years ago when the effort was made to make a code.

When the chairman approached the printer's task he took it up with Mr. Morgan, then superintendent, a very excellent printer, and found that to print the bill in the ordinary shape bills were printed would have cost $84,000. Should the bill thus become a law, it would immediately become necessary to discard all that typesetting and begin to put it in book form. The printer and the chairman after very careful consideration decided to adopt the present form of H. R. 12 as the one that would be most utilitarian and most economical. By printing the bill in this form, it ceased to be necessary to cast it aside and begin to print again. When the bill becomes a law, all that will be necessary is to make the plates from the type, and the cost will be comparatively nominal. So I can assure the gentlemen of the House that whether or not this bill becomes a law, it will never cost this Government anything.

The saving on the printing and in the preparation over the statutes of '74 and '77 constitutes a saving of $171,000 that would ordinarily have been expended. When we add that to the $572,500, we get $743,500, which money has been saved by the revision committee and its work. We hope presently to be able to present a plan for the permanent maintenance of a code. If you will permit us to put at interest the money we have saved, we will supply you with an annual income that will take care of the printing of this code as long as the Republic keeps one. Indeed, the annual saving of $68,500 we have already provided will be far more than that.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LITTLE. I will.

Mr. BLANTON. Could the gentleman get these facts before the people of Kentucky?

Mr. LITTLE. I hope we can; I am trying now. The Government Printing Office has informed me that if the bill becomes a law, when 10,000 copies have been printed, the printing will have cost $25,340.06, and that thereafter it will cost $1,690.19 a thousand to print more. We have spent some $13,000 and are prepared to spend $4,000 more to complete the book, which would be about $17,000, which if added to $25,000 for printing, would make an expense of $42,000 when the book is done, if we are not annoyed too much by fools. If you will take the $288,500 that Mr. Slemp told you the gentleman from Kausas had saved, and add the $10,000 against which Mr. MADDEN made the point of order, you have $298,500 in cash to be put in the Treasury at one swipe in one year. Subtracting from it the $42,000 of these expenses, the Treasury will have a clean, clear profit of $256,500. I haven't heard of any other business enterprise on which this Government ever cleared a quarter of a million dollars, or anything else. The fool who fired the Ephesian dome 22 centuries ago has never had an equal since till a moron rose to block the American Code; but even if that wrong to the bench, the bar, and the litigants should be really accomplished, the Revision of Laws Committee will forever point with pride to a quarter of a million dollars their work has deposited in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the taxpayers, an achievement that has not been surpassed in the 22 centuries between the two most outstanding and decadent figures of their kind in all the annals of time. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. LITTLE. I would ask to extend and revise my remarks. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. LITTLE. To thoroughly understand all that has been done in the making of this bill to establish a code it is necessary to lay before my hearers some of the former history of the committee's work.

In the sixties the committee was appointed and a commission selected to revise the statutes. Caleb Cushing was to be chairman, but just attended one session. For some years the commission worked to and fro, and finally, in 1873, Benjamin Butler, chairman of the Revision Committee, took over the board of revisers' work. They were authorized to thoroughly revise and rewrite the laws, and did so. General Butler saw at a glance that the changes and amendments and omissions were so numerous that it would be impossible in any one Congress to read and discuss them and pass the bill. He employed a lawyer named Durant for nine months to rewrite the bill and take out all the changes and leave it as it was so that it might With considerable amusement I hear of commisbe passed. The idea is sions of distinguished scholars to do this work. not workable, and the Revised Statutes of 1874 were not prepared by any commission. The work was mostly done by Mr. Durant, a Washington lawyer from New Orleans. The committee then did a great deal of the work and passed the bill, very much the same manner that the present bill has been prepared, though this work has been done with a great deal more care and has taken more time. Some 20 years ago an effort was made by the Revision Committee of the House to place before the House another revision of the laws. A gentleman was employed for several years to do that work. made many changes and alleged improvements. The committee saw as before that it would be quite impossible to even read such a bill, much less pass it, and wholly discarded it. printers of that date tell me that in printing and reprinting and reprinting this work about $200,000 was expended, every dollar of which was wasted. When the committee undertook this work the gentleman was so anxious to help that he volunteered his services without pay, though he was paid properly for his time. As before, he was persistently anxious to improve everything, and it finally became necessary to do without his services because he did not understand what the committee was endeavoring to accomplish, the task of repeating in the code the laws made by Congress word for word. He was so interested in it and so hard a worker that after we had secured his promise to adhere to our plans he was reemployed, and he did a considerable portion of the work. I observe with regret that after being employed for some 18 months on H. R. 12 he accepted a fee to attack it and criticize it, including his own work. Fifteen years ago a great publishing house similarly employed a man attached to the work to circulate defamatory statements with regard to the bill the gentleman himself wrote. It is somewhat curious that the only person who has been employed to attack this bill by a formal review was the man employed to make it and discharged for incompetence, but such is the fact. It is very seldom that one can be paid by both sides of such a controversy. In his review he persistently attempts to renew his old efforts to change the law and improve it, as he thinks. Most of the material he inserts is a lot of petty criticisms from various people here and there in the departments whose work has all been thoroughly reviewed by the learned revisers and the committee.

They have long since been given credit for everything that was entitled to consideration, and it is almost buffoonery that in this review of March 2 we should again be confronted by all the stuff that has been thoroughly disposed of over and over during the last three years and fully placed before those who seek to criticize. There can be no better evidence of the detailed application and scholarship applied to the making of this bill than the patient care with which every such puerile or senile criticism has been gone over and over again and is again disposed of in this discussion. Among the fallacious criticisms was one two years ago from the Interstate Commerce Commission, which found its way into the hands of the critic. When the attention of the commission was called to those defects, they withdrew practically all the attacks made by that department, as you will see by the letter from Mr. Esch. The Committee on Revision found that one of those 49 suggestions was correct, and it will be inserted in the bill. Of the balance, 40 were withdrawn entirely, and I do not know why the critics published the letter at all, unless it is to mislead careless readers. Permit me to call attention to the statement by Hon. John J. Esch in his letter, which is included in the review of March 2:

We appreciate fully the magnitude and importance of this work. It is this very fact that leads us to refer to these matters. We do not mean to intimate that the code has not been most carefully and critically prepared. In a work of this character it is practically impossible to prevent inaccuracies. In an endeavor to be helpful, rather than critical, we have attempted to call attention to some matters which it seems to us should be further considered. Many of the doubts that arise can be settled only by Congress or by the courts, which in the last analysis means the Supreme Court.

The laws made by Congress and inserted in this code go into the code accompanied by all judicial decisions that apply to them. Their presentation in the code will result in no further judicial decisions concerning things already decided, and things not decided will be open to the same discussion that they are now and would be if the code is never made. Some of these critics seem to get the idea that their appearance in the code will precipitate new issues. Certainly not; the law will be just as it is now, surrounded by the same difficulties, and no more. When the Revised Statutes was made in 1874 judicial decisions soon determined and settled that fact. We can not do anything that will so fix the law that it will be free from the same questions that arose as Congress made it originally. have done nothing to add any question, as is demonstrated by the results after the adoption of the Revised Statutes of 1874. It is our duty to present in this bill the law as already made. and the only reenactment in it is the enactment of it into one law—a code—instead of many. It is merely repetition of the same laws, and its condition before the courts will be no more changed than it was changed in 1874 when the Revised Statutes became what the whole world concedes to be the greatest law book ever made.

At present nobody knows just what the law is in many cases, and most people are unable to find it all. What we have done is simply to present all the law made by Congress which was in effect March 4, 1919, where its virtues and vices can be at once pointed out, and when it is so reenacted it becomes a law and everybody knows for a certainty just what the law is and finds it right at his hand. When that is done anybody can go to his court and get a decision upon doubtful questions where there appears to be any conflict or confusion. Of course, in so great a book there may be errors, omissions, or mistakes discovered. Nobody ever heard of any such a big book that did not subsequently disclose occasional mistakes, but every day courts and lawyers make more mistakes because of the confusion in the law than there are in this entire bill.

Therefore the committee instructs me to place before the House this statement with regard to the criticisms which are launched at us at the last moment when it appeared to be impossible to have met them. We replied hastily in 24 hours to these attacks and now, two days later, hastily complete our statement to suggestions made at the last moment after 21 months' delay.

CONFUSION IN PUBLIC PRINTING LAWS.

Because of the confusion in the laws this proposed code was prepared because it would present all the law to the people and they could find it in one book and the courts could know at a glance what the net result would be of such legislation. The Joint Committee on Printing, in view of this confusion, had prepared what amounted to their idea of a code of the law of their committee. Unfortunately the revisers of this great book—lawyers of many years of experience—did not entirely agree with the code, and the clerk of that committee persisted in criticisms on matters of mostly no importance, and the only effect of the criticism might be to block this great code. The committee have felt that the codifiers and revisers were right in the occasional conflicts. For example, the critic calls attention to the fact that on November 1, 1893, the law announced that thereafter engrossed bills should be printed at the stage of the consideration at which they were engrossed before, and he says there is no law in our code to tell at what stage that was. There is certainly no law in our book about it, because there never was any law made by Congress about it and we decided not to invent one. The time of consideration was fixed by the rules and customs of the House and still is, and it is not a matter of law, and it is unfortunate the gentleman wasted our time in looking up such a matter.

He says of our section 5771 that it is superseded by section

He says of our section 5771 that it is superseded by section 5770. He is mistaken. The older section provided that whenever there did not happen to be a Joint Committee on Printing somebody else should supply that need. The newer section undertook to provide for a system so that there would always be a Joint Committee on Printing. There still remained the provision to fill this place if it did not exist. There is no conflict between the two, and if for any reason, by death or any accident, the joint committee should not function, the other one would. Not only is there no conflict, but the new law distinctly did not repeal the old law. The new law did not even make the usual and customary repeal of things in conflict therewith. It is entirely evident that the Congress did not repeal it, but the codifier of the committee print wants to repeal it. The revisers did not agree with him. Whether Congress wanted to maintain it or so totally avoid it we do not know, but as Congress did not repeal It, and very distinctly did not, it still remains in force. We can not be making repeals out of our own minds because the presence of some section appears distasteful to us.

One of the greatest difficulties in our laws is the appearance of the joker in appropriation bills. The gentleman has found one in the Thirty-fifth Statutes, page 381, on which appears an appropriation of $3,600 for a Deputy Public Printer. In making an appropriation it is required that there should be an authority for the existence of the office, and the appropriation furnished one, and never since has there been such authority for making a Deputy Public Printer. They simply made an appropriation of $3,600 a year to pay one, though there was no such office. They then added a clause which told what kind of a man should be appointed and who should appoint him. That simply said that the man to draw this $3,600 should be such and such a man and be appointed. The minute that $3,600 was spent, man and be appointed. the instructions about spending it stopped. It was a limitation Those words only applied to that approon this expenditure. They did not create an office. They assigned to him certain duties, taking some away from the chief clerk, but nothing was said about doing away with the chief clerk, and the law instituting him still remains and he has other duties to attend to anyway, and the minute the $3,600 is expended the matter stops unless there should be another appropriation, which, of course, is without any authority of law either. Sometimes when they make such an appropriation they say, after such and such things shall be the law." It has been held that while it is temporary legislation when inserted simply to tell what shall be done with the appropriation, it becomes permanent law when they say that "hereafter" it shall continue. Congress did not so state, and, of course, there is nothing permanent about an appropriation that might have been stopped by a point of order any time and the limitations on it telling how it shall be spent. The critic requires that the law be amended by striking certain words out in order to give effect to his views. Congress has not stricken them out and they are still there. If there is any dispute over it, it is a matter for the courts to decide, and we do not regard the clerk of any committee as gifted with judicial powers and authority, so the committee prefers to leave the law stand the way Congress made it.

There is a criticism of section 5884, which refers to a Government director for the Union Pacific Railroad, which he says is obsolete. There is a law that has never been repealed, and if it had long since ceased to function, we can not say that Congress wanted it out of the road. As a matter of fact, after very careful examination the committee found that there is still a remnant of that old relation which makes it essential that in order to protect all interests this section should be carried. It was looked into with infinite care, and without any question it ought to be right where it is.

The critic suggests that there is some repetition in this book. There certainly is, because the Statutes at Large have frequent repetitions, and so long as they do codes will. Furthermore, it often happens that the same bit of law must almost necessarily be placed under two different titles in order to give the people who study that title full information where they expect to find it. If there were a thousand repetitions in this code it would not change the law a particle, and it would still remain an infinite improvement upon the old laws, which bring more confusion every day in the courts than there are mistakes in the whole bill.

Another excellent example of the impropriety of allowing committee clerks to decide legal confusion questions is found in the Twenty-eighth Statutes, page 608, which provides that the Public Printer may employ six clerks at certain annual salaries. In the Thirty-fifth Statutes Congress directed that the Public Printer shall submit for each fiscal year estimates for clerks. There was nothing that prevented him from including the six clerks mentioned, and that law was left wholly unrepealed. Whether that authority to select those six and file in the estimate still remained with the Public Printer is a judicial question, not a legislative one, and it is up to the courts to decide. The original statute is not in conflict with the new one at all. It may be the purpose of the law to permit those men to retain those positions and be included in that estimate. Congress made no repeal of it in any way and the codifiers will not. This is a matter for the Chief Justice, not for a committee clerk nor for a codifier.

The gentleman suggests that a certain section is dead matter superseded by some other one. Congress did not say so. It made two sections and they are still the law, because neither of them repeals the other. That is why we have to make a code, so people can get at them all at once. The rest of his suggestions were practically all of this character, except some much more puny and unimportant. We are sorry that the revisers have fallen into conflict with the committee clerk and his code, but we are quite frank to say that we still think the indement of the committee is better.

the judgment of the committee is better.

However, he speaks of section 5 of the Thirty-second Statutes, page 631, for distributing some books, as being omitted. I am inclined to think the revisers have made the mistake the critics so often make of disposing of something that is obsolete because it had ceased to amount to anything much. In my judgment this ought to be looked into carefully, and if not located in this book I should recommend that that section be inserted before the bill becomes a law. He has pointed out what he claims are 138 mistakes. In this entire review of March 2 I think that one of his suggestions is right, and that is all that are right, and it will be recommended for adoption unless located somewhere else in the book.

Attention has been called to a "cursory" examination of this code by the attorney general of Alaska, accompanied by an essay from a gentleman in the War Department suggesting criticisms on the law the revisers have found and reported concerning Territories. It is exceedingly pleasant to know that an employee of the Government so far distant has an active interest in these matters, and we earnstly regret that he had not previously given the subject such attention as would make his suggestions more valuable.

ALASKA.

The act of January 27, 1905 (33 Stat. 616), to provide for the construction of roads, the establishment of schools, and care of the insane in the District of Alaska, provides for an Alaska fund to be derived from liquor licenses and occupation or trade licenses outside of incorporated towns in the District of Alaska. The act of February 6, 1909 (35 Stat. 600), being an act relating to affairs in the Territories, provides for the repeal of as much of the foregoing as provides that 5 per cent of the license moneys collected outside of incorporated towns in the District of Alaska shall be used for the care of the insane, and provides that such moneys, so far as is necessary, shall be applied to the establishment and maintenance of public schools in the District. The attorney general of Alaska makes the severe and caustic criticism that "section 3823 * * * omits the first part of section 7 of the act of February 6, 1900," but he is mistaken. The first part of that is found in section 3840 of the code, just where it should be. He evidently intended to say that a later part of that was omitted, being the statement that the money shall hereafter be applied to the maintenance of schools in said District.

In 1912 the District of Alaska was organized into the Territory of Alaska. Since then the Constitution and the laws have terminated the liquor licenses and there is no money derived from them for that Alaska fund. The organization of the Territory of Alaska, instead of the District of Alaska, terminated the application of that money to the schools in the District of Alaska and left to the Territory of Alaska the duty of utilizing its funds and maintaining its schools. Furthermore, when the District of Alaska desisted, the Government had nothing more to do with occupation or trade licenses outside the incorporated towns in the District of Alaska, and there was no such money to go into an Alaska fund.

The Territory of Alaska had all the control of trade licenses in such places in its territory, and that money placed in this Alaska fund no longer went there. That fund terminated and was no longer available, and the provision he mentions, of course, disappeared from the law. He does not seem to have observed that when the law created the Territory of Alaska and gave it a legislature with power to raise revenues that legislature controlled its local government and resources. The District has long since become the Territory of Alaska, with it went the revenues thus raised for the Alaska District fund. The matter is now in the hands of the legislature, and the attorney general should call its attention to the fact. His position is a responsible one, and he should fully inform himself of it, not so much for our benefit here as for the benefit of those he serves at home. The manner in which the revisers and the committee have handled this somewhat complicated and intricate point is an admirable illustration of the exact and meticulous care they have given to all the details of this great We thank the gentleman for directing attention to it, because it goes far to prove how careful the revisers have been; but, unfortunately, it also discloses the unfortunate fact that the attorney general himself has not given his duties that same tedious application which would probably greatly improve his

The attorney general of Alaska suggests that sections 3832 and 3833 of the code should be repealed. Well, let him have them repealed. We have no objection; but they are the law as made by the Congress and will so remain until they are repealed.

The gentleman from Alaska states that the Federal law with regard to schools for white and colored children is not found in the code. It is found in section 3836. He is evidently a very careless observer and investigator. A gentleman who is as careless as that could not be a very safe custodian of the rights of the people of Alaska, and I would suggest that it might be well to send an attorney there who can find the law, but who will not rush down here, at a distance of a thousand miles, and endeavor to make it impossible to have a statement of the laws of the United States where such laws can be found by careful men. Also committees and reviewers, employed at $650 for a few weeks' work, to investigate the proposed code, should be able to have more sense than to publish such a letter as an argument in favor of their opposition to any code.

The Alaska attorney general says:

Some of the penal laws applicable to Alaska are embodied in the codification, but I don't find that the Penal Code of 1899 is inclu-What effect this will have I am not at present prepared to state.

The act of 1912 (37 Stat. 512), which organized the Territory of Alaska, gave it a local government and gave it authority to make its own laws, which it does. It provided that-

All laws now in force in Alaska shall continue in full force and effect until altered, amended, or repealed by Congress or by the legislature.

This bill establishing this code purports to give only the general and permanent laws of the United States and not the laws of Alaska. Any laws which apply solely to Alaska are not general, and no laws which have been or can be superseded at any moment by the Legislature of Alaska are permanent. The laws the gentleman looks for were the laws made for the District of Alaska, and not for the Territory. The attorney general says he does not know what the effect is. Well, who would know if the attorney general of Alaska does not? I suggest that he go and find out and not bring his trouble here. This committee has trouble enough. Furthermore, two national administrations of Attorneys General have said distinctly that the penal code of this book has no omissions and no mistakes. Attorney General Palmer said:

The only portions of this bill submitted to this department were section 965 to section 1612 relating to the judiciary, and section 503 to section 551 relating to the Department of Justice.

So far as such portion of the bill is concerned there is no criticism to offer on behalf of this department.

And the present Attorney General's office said by its attorney, C. Herron, Chief Justice Taft's brother-in-law:

The sections which seem to relate in any way to the criminal law or criminal procedure have been carefully examined, and, so far as it is possible to discover from such an examination, no errors or omis-sions have been noted.

The Alaska gentleman criticizes the code bill because it has published some parts of the act to make a civil government for Alaska and has omitted some parts. This is perhaps true, Whatever in the said act is permanent and general law is inserted in this code and whatever is not is not in the bill. He complains that the Governor is authorized by the Federal laws to appoint a notary public. Well, the codifier can not help it, and it will remain in this or any other code that is made until Congress changes it. The laws of Alaska might doubtless make authority for a notary public if they want to, and there is no conflict between the two authorities. We are not making new law nor repealing old law. He suggests if we reenact it, might affect the local laws of Alaska. Well, suppose it did; the Federal laws often do. If we reenact it, that simply makes it into one great code; the law is just like it was before. This is just exactly what was done in the old Revised Statutes, and this quibble about it changing the law is pure nonsense. 48 years the Revised Statutes have stood, and for a generation no change has ever been made. The Supreme Court of the United States has long since settled the application of the Revised Statutes to the laws before they went into it, and every such matter is settled. To change from the old Revised Statutes enactments and methods would precipitate a lot of new controversies, which we shall not do. We at first thought we could improve that section, drawn by the wonderful men who prepared the Revised Statutes, but long since found that we could make no change that would not do more harm than good. What he is doing is criticizing the work of the great lawyers who made the Revised Statutes, whose methods we have fol-lowed exactly. We will be compelled to leave to the American people whether these fireflies can dim the luster of the Revised Statutes of 1874.

The attorney general of Alaska continues:

The attorney general of Alaska continues:

Section 3796 also contains a provision making it the duty of the governor to "from time to time inquire into the operation of any person, company, association, or corporation authorized by the United States, by contract or otherwise, to kill seal or other fur-bearing animals in the Territory, and any and all violations by such person, company, association, or corporation of the agreement with the United States under which the operations are being conducted, and shall annually report to Congress result of such inquiries."

This, of course, is antiquated, but a reenactment at this time might impose upon the governor duties which it was not the intention to require him to perform.

He says that this law is antiquated and therefore should not be in effect. Antiquated? Why, the Constitution is much older, How old must a law be before it ceases to be a law in Alaska? He says that its reenactment might impose upon the governor duties which it was not the intention to require him to perform. You can assure him that it will not. It merely repeats the law which authorizes the governor to be a governor and which tells him what his duties are, not whose "intention to have him perform." Congress intended to have him perform it, and I trust he is performing it. I should hate to think that the Governor of Alaska is disobeying the law that created his office. The law requires him to see that seal stealing is stopped in Alaska and of course he has taken an oath of office and he will obey the law.

The critic who is assisting the reviewer says:

These are a few of the objections to the new compilation which occur to me at the present time after, as I have stated, a cursory examination of the subject. If Alaska could be left out of the new code it would give me considerable pleasure to assist in compiling and revising the Federal enactments of a permanent nature touching this

Here is a most remarkable and startling situation. months a corps of scholarly and experienced lawyers in charge of a committee that has had several hundred years of legal experience prepared the code of the laws of the United States, and some gentleman from Alaska hops up and says that he wants Alaska left out of the laws of the United States, and if that is done it would give him considerable pleasure to assist in the work. Who is this that tells the House of Representatives, which has twice passed this bill unanimously, that he will join in the work if they will leave Alaska out? Is this gentleman going to make the laws for Alaska hereafter, and what improvements has he to suggest? He tells us that the law directing the governor to prevent seal stealing in Alaska is antiquated, and for that reason solely should be omitted, and having made that suggestion he then simply asked that Alaska be left out of the Federal laws. Is not this a little peculiar? The Committee on Revision of the Laws feels that the general laws with regard to Alaska should be in the code the same as any other; that its officers should be governed by the laws made by Congress just as are all other men, and we will insist that even the antiquated law of 25 years ago about Alaska stay right where Congress put it.

In response to the Secretary of State's letter of January 27, 1923, which I have presented to the House elsewhere, the chairman of the House Revision Committee wrote as follows:

JANUARY 28, 1923.

Hon. CHARLES E. HUGHES, Secretary of State, Washington, D. C.

Hon. Charles E. Hughes,

Secretary of State, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Mr. Secretary; Replying to your favor of the 27th answering my letter of the 23d, I note that on December 7, 1922, the department in response to a communication from Senator Ernst dated November 10, 1922, sent him "a copy of a memorandum" and stated that "at the time H. R. 9889 was receiving consideration in the House, a memorandum had been prepared in response to a request from the chairman of the House Committee on Revision, containing brief comments on certain sections of that bill" and "that the department had no additional suggestions to offer concerning the sections covered by that memorandum."

I write to inquire whether you will kindly send me a copy of the memorandum that you forwarded him December 7, with the date thereof. H. R. 9389 passed the House December 20, 1920, and the memoranda with regard to that were long since utilized.

I note your remark that you say, "I have noted your statement that after the bill becomes a law you intend to suggest to the department that an amendment be prepared for the purpose of correcting such inaccuracies as may appear." I presume you refer to my letter of April 11, 1922, in which I said, "Our plan is simply to prepare a bill that contains the present law without any change whatever. This bill is now the law, and if it passes the Senate it becomes a law, and we will then have something to begin with, doing away with the past confusion. Our committee will then bring in a bill suggesting some changes correcting what appear to be errors in the present law." I was not referring to inaccuracies in our bill, but the errors in the present law, such, perhaps, as may exist with regard to these ministers and ambassadors, but which are errors by Congress—not in this bill. Before the old Revised Statutes were fully printed a bill was passed correcting 34 mistakes in it, and two years later a bill was passed statutes which still remain. If we adhere to the precedent set by the Revised Statutes which still

This presents the views of the committee with regard to the matter and we think makes it clear, as does the Secretary's letter, that the law with regard to ambassadors and ministers as found in the code bill is the law of the land as made by Congress and never repealed or declared unconstitutional, and therefore rightfully in the code bill.

TERRITORIAL LAWS.

A gentleman in the War Department says:

I have been asked to comment upon the question whether or not any or all of the provisions of chapter 4 of title 25 of the Code of Laws of the United States, hereinafter referred to as the new code, have been superseded or rendered obsolete by other legislation.

Just why he should have that task is not quite plain. If certain laws made by Congress have been repealed, then they will not be found in the new code. If they have not been repealed, they will be. What does he mean by "obsolete," and what does he mean by "superseded."? If the law has been repealed, it will not be in effect. If it has not been repealed, it will be found in the book. The gentleman has an extended review of the history of the Territories which might be very interesting to a high school, but is of no utility here. some difficulty we discover what seems to be the point. He suggests that there is a question as to whether the laws instituting the Territory of Alaska, for example, have done away with the general Territorial provisions. Why does he ask that question here? If Congress has two sets of laws and has repealed neither, it will be up to the courts to decide what is the result of such legislation. The codifiers have nothing to do with that subject, and it is a curious problem as to what the gentleman has to do with it. One of the reasons that we must have a code is that Congress has made many such legal situations and thus confused the law. If the code becomes a law all the conflicting legislation will be assembled together and can readily be found and corrected. All those conflicting provisions placed in the code are the law now, and that is why we must make the code. They speak of reenacting it. Nothing is reenacted except that which is in effect now, reenactment simply reenacts them all as one bill, one law, one code. They have the same legal relation to each other as before being assembled, but they are now found all together. The same facts apply to Porto Rico, Hawaii, and the Philippines. There are many thousands of curious legal situations in the laws of the United States, hundreds of which require the decisions of the courts. The codifiers can do nothing whatever to change such legal situations, but when the laws become one law Congress can soon decide just what should be done. At the present time these contradictions and confusions are scattered through some 40 law books, and if the House committee on revision is not too much annoyed by puerile and senile criticism, which exhibits no comprehension of the purpose of the code, Congress will soon have all the laws together so as to be readily compared and applied by the courts or amended by the Congress. Just why this character of an essay is presented here it is difficult to understand.

"THIS ACT."

The Statutes at Large, which the code bill is intended to displace, frequently refer in themselves to "this act," meaning the act in the Statutes at Large. Those words as used in the code would refer to the code, and if so retained would incorrectly state the law; and it became necessary, of course, to cross out "this act" and insert the name of the act, so that the reader would know just what was meant. That plan was utilized in the old Revised Statutes, as will be seen by section 2416 of the Revised Statutes, which reads as follows:

In all cases of warrants for bounty lands issued by virtue of an act approved July 27, 1842, and of two acts approved January 27, 1835, therein and thereby revised, and of two acts to the same intent, respectively, approved June 26, 1848, and February 8, 1854, for military services in the Revolutionary War, or in the War of 1812 with Great Britain, which remained unsatisfied on the 2d day of July, 1864, it is lawful for the person in whose name such warrant issued, his heirs or legal representatives, to enter into quarter sections, at the proper local land office in any of the States or Territories, the quantity of the public lands subject to private entry which he is entitled to under such warrant.

The revisers have been following the precedents thus set. The reviewer of our code bill showed his incompetence for the work by criticizing that plan, which, of course, is absolutely necessary to make a successful book.

He begins his charges against the code bill by directing attention to several sections where this policy has been followed, beginning with section 104. If you will turn to the original of that section in our bill you will find that our code bill section repeats the old law word for word, and that this criticism amounts to a criticism of the original bill itself. This, of course, demonstrates at a glance that his criticisms are not made in good faith but with some determined motive to pile up an apparent bunch of criticisms. He should have said it was a compliment to ascertain we had followed the old law word for word. What manner of a man is this that offers such a statement and calls it a criticism? Let us have fair play somewhere. His criticisms, on that account, are as idle as "a painted ship upon a painted ocean," and as silly as a fool's somewhere. summer dream. He began by telling us that there were thousands of such cases in the bill, but when he was forced to look it up he turns up with 70. Suppose there were 70 such sec-Why did he not go ahead and correct them, if he knew What is he bringing them back to us for? Somebody was allowed $6,800 a year to do this work elsewhere and they came back with one correction. Why did they think that the House committee and its revisers should spend 22 months' hard work and make all this great book of 2,000,000 words and that they, after 21 months, should return without having done anything? If every one of the 70 were a mistake, it should have been corrected in two days, anyway.

The fact is that in addition to transcribing the former law the scholarly revisers in hundreds of instances located the corresponding section mentioned in our own code and pointed the reader to where he could find that citation in our own booka work of loving labor never performed before by any national codifier to such an extent. This attack that he throws at us should have been labeled "compliment," and nobody who had any comprehension of the work of making a code would have failed to see the value of it.

He says that some of these sections do not refer to any section in the bill. Why, of course not; necessarily there will be such. Quite a good many of them refer to appropriation bills from which has been dragged some general law. Appropriation bills are not permanent law and do not go into the code and will not be found there, but reference is necessarily made to them sometimes in order to copy the old laws and put them in the book. What is this critic going to do about these alleged mistakes? He does not tell us any remedy for them, and he has none, because they are not mistakes.

The reviewer says that these conditions compel reversion to the old law. Well, what of it? What if we do follow the precedent of the Revised Statutes and insert necessary references to the old law? There are in this bill 10,747 sections which have been rescued from the confusion of some 40 Statutes at Large. In order to find them, the lawyer must go to every one of all these books and examine all its pages. Suppose that occasionally some lawyer did now and then find it necessary to go back to the old laws? Is it possible that there is anybody who is compos mentis that would refuse to accept such a code as this that gave him over 10,000 sections at hand to be touched instantly, even if a few hundred lawyers did occasionally have to look back at some old section to which his finger is pointed immediately, whereas under the old laws there was nothing to point him to that section? Nobody with good sense would offer that as a criticism.

Referring to our section 988, the reviewer criticizes it severely as being dead matter and because it refers back to something before and instances its last paragraph. It is difficult to speak in patient language of as big a piece of foolery as that. That last paragraph which he criticizes so caustically is taken bodily from the Revised Statutes, section 3465. It reads in our code just as it did in the Revised Statutes, from which it is copied. Is it possible that a man of sound mind can not see that that is just as severe a criticism of the ancient and honorable Revised Statutes as it is of our book? It would seem any mentality would see that when he launched an attack upon us because we repeated word for word section 3465 of the Revised Statutes he was making just as vicious an onslaught on the ancient and honorable Revised Statutes as he was on our code. Our book helped the reader some by locating the references by certain pages in certain books so as to be easily found, while the Revised Statutes mentioned them by names and dates and compelled the reader to work out his own salvation as to where to find them. We gave the location, not the name of the

If you will turn to this section, you will find that it is placed under the title of "Jurisdiction for District Courts," just under the title of "Jurisdiction for District Courts," just where it belongs, of course, as any lawyer would easily see. The critic complains that this paragraph which discusses the jurisdiction of certain cases should not be placed under jurisdiction, but should be placed under internal revenue, which, of course, is just simply nonsense. But from a general analysis of his suggestions we are constrained to the belief that he is honest in his assertion that he so thinks. Probably he does.

After 21 months of defamation and slander and villification of the code without specifying the places which he claimed were wrong, except once, which was soon disposed of, he sums up, with the assistance of one of our former aids, his sum total of alleged errors, of which he specifies 138 and no more. If you have followed with sufficient patience the presentation of our reply in detail, you will find that these gentlemen have just exactly pointed out one mistake in all the 138. Why, that does not amount to a row of pins in 2,000,000 words. As soon as the old Revised Statutes were enacted they discovered and made a new law correcting many mistakes, and two years later they made another new law correcting 242. If this bill had passed with 138 mistakes in it, it would still be far superior to the old Revised Statutes in accuracy. He has only discovered, he claims, 138 mistakes. Well, why in the name of all that is claims, 138 mistakes. Well, why in the name of all that is common sense, did he not correct them and present the bill? If you will turn to Roscoe Conkling's speech in 1874 you will find that they made many changes in that great bill in '74 in a very offhand way. Here are some people who are designated to perform the duty of ascertaining and correcting the mistakes found in this bill and presenting it to Congress. What pitiable showing is this that turns up after 21 months and says, are 138 mistakes, and we do not know how to correct them"? Well, why does he undertake the work, then? If they had handed us such a list of mistakes, our committee would have taken care of them months ago if they were found to be mistakes. The House Committee on Revision of the Laws appeals to the American Congress and the American lawyers and the American bench and bar for a square deal and fair play for this enormous work they have put before the people and which has never yet received any careful consideration from anybody except the gentlemen who have eulogized it many times in public announcement.

Similar questions arose in 1874 when Conkling, Carpenter, Edmunds, and others of the most distinguished lawyers the world ever saw were on the committee that put this bill through the Senate of the United States. Senators Conkling and Carpenter presented those questions very carefully, and I now call your attention in conclusion to what was said by great lawyers and great men at that time in our national career when the first code was made and became a law and the foundation of all our future legislation.

Senator Carpenter said:

our future legislation.

Senator Carpenter said:

Mr. Athony in the chair). The Senator from Indiana says this is a dangerous thing. That is undoubtedly so. It is dangerous to pass any law, because there may be a mistake in it that will harm somebody. That danger is inherent. We can not avoid that difficulty. Every exercise of sovereign power is dangerous in that sense, that if there is an error lurking in it and if it is not discovered it may do harm.

The Senator says this work has been done by three commissioners, and from that he derives an objection to it. I think it would have been an improvement if it could have been done by one competent man. Where you have got one thing to do, whether it he to carve a statue or paint a picture or revise the laws of Congress, if it can be done by one mind, you are more likely to have it correct than you are if it is participated in by more than one.

Now, what does the Senator suppose would become of that revision if it were to come in here and take the fate of ordinary bills in the Senate Chamber? The youngest boy born in this country to-day never could live to see it disposed of. Suppose it were put into installments, part of it taken up one session and part another, by the time you had gone through two or three sessions your accumulated legislation would make a new revision absolutely necessary; you never could end anything, and never would come to any conclusion.

Undoubtedly there will be found errors in this revision. There never was a revision made, as the Senator from New York has said, that did not have errors. It is not in the nature of things that the revision of so many statutes should be absolutely perfect. All that we can do is to give it every guaranty that such a work ever can have that it is correct. The great benefit of it is that it gives us a starting point for the law, and if errors a

Senator Conkling said:

Senator Conkling said:

Mr. Edmunds. I wish to ask the chairman of the Committee on the Revision of the Laws, if he will not think it implies any inference on the committee, as it does not, how sure the committee is, as we necessarily take this revision entirely on trust, that it does embrace existing law and nothing new?

Mr. Conkling. That is not a very easy question to answer. "How sure is the committee?" I scarcely know how to answer that. It is a question I have heard put to a witness sometimes, and always excluded when objected to, it relating to comparative degrees of assurance. Certainly I can only say, as the Senator from Vermont well knows, that this work has engaged the attention of three sets of commissioners, and the examination of the committees of two Houses, and of the committees of the two Houses acting jointly, and of the House special sessions being set apart for many days for its consideration; and all those concerned, so far as I can judge, tried to do their duty in regard to it. But when the Senator asks me to state how sure I am, or how sure they are that this immense volume, made of the gathered meaning of 17 or 18 volumes of statutes, contains no blunder, I repeat the question is difficult to answer. There is upon the second page of the bill, or preceding the second page as it stands, a list of crrors called "errata," which are to be corrected in the reprinting; and many other errors have been found and have been corrected.

Perhaps I should be more candid in my answer if I were to say to the Senator from Vermont that I have no expectation that this work is free from error. I have never known any revision of laws that was. We have had several revisions in the State of New York, conducted by very emiment and expert men usually, and we never had one which did not contain errors. I think the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Boutwell] will bear me out in saying that although they revise very carefully, in spite of all their processes errors are found. I presume errors will be found here, and

REVENUE COLLECTION DISTRICTS AND COLLECTORS.

Mr. MHLLS. Mr. Speaker, I am directed by the Committee on Ways and Means to call up bill (S. 2051), to amend section 3142 of the Revised Statutes to permit an increase in the number of collection districts for the collection of internal revenue and in the number of collectors of internal revenue from 64 to 65, and move its immediate consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Will the gentleman from New York send the bill to the Clerk's desk?

Mr. MILLS. It is a privileged bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from New York ask unanimous consent for its present consideration?

Mr. MILLS. It is a privileged bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman ask unanimous consent that it be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole?

Mr. MILLS. I do.

Mr. HICKS. Regular order, Mr. Speaker. Mr. MILLS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the measure may be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?
Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. I object.
Mr. MILLS. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (S. 2051). No. Mr. Speaker; I temporarily withdraw my motion.

BRIDGE BILLS.

Mr. WINSLOW. Mr. Speaker, at the direction of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce of the House, ask unanimous consent to have several Senate bridge bills taken from the Speaker's table and considered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Massachusetts asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the following bills, among them Senate bill 4583. Is there objection?

Mr. BRIGGS. Mr. Speaker, may we have the bills reported? The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the first bill.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE MISSOURI RIVER, S. DAK.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 4583) granting the consent of Congress to the State of South Dakota for the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River between Charles Mix County and Gregory County, S. Dak.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the bill. The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the State of South Dakota to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Missouri River, at a point sultable to the interests of navigation, between Charles Mix County and Gregory County, S. Dak., in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the third reading of the Senate bill.

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a similar House bill will lie on the table.

There was no objection.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE ST. FRANCIS RIVER, ARK.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Massa-chusetts asks unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the following bill, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 4579) to authorize the Lee County bridge district No. 2, the State of Arkansas, to construct a bridge over the St. Francis

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the bill. The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the Lee County bridge district No. 2, State of Arkansas, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the St. Francis River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, at or near Cody, in the county of Lee, in the State of Arkansas, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the third reading of the Senate bill.

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the similar House bill will lie on the table.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next one.

BEAR CREEK, MISS.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 4548) declaring Bear Creek, in Humphreys, Leflore, and Sunflower Counties, Miss., to be a nonnavigable stream.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I have no objection to the bill, but some explanation should be made before the objecting stage has passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Will some one state the facts with respect to this bill?

Mr. WINSLOW. The bill S. 4548?

Mr. WINSLOW. The bill S. 4548?
The SPEAKER pro tempore. Yes.
Mr. WINSLOW. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HUMPHREYS] to explain the bill.
Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, that creek was formerly under improvement by the United States Government for 12 miles. Commerce has ceased to exist on it.
Mr. STAFFORD. Did it ever have any commerce?
Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. No much, but some. Since 1913 we have expended no money on the stream, and the Chief of Engineers recommended some years ago that the project be abandoned.

Mr. MONDELL. How much has been expended on the stream?

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. Five thousand dollars or $6,000 or $8,000. Now a drainage district has been created by the farmers of that district, and the engineers contemplate building a dam across this creek to prevent the water from backing up and overflowing the land.

Mr. STAFFORD. A very satisfactory explanation. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Bear Creek in Humphreys, Leflore, and Sunflower Counties, in the State of Mississippi, be, and the same is hereby, declared to be a nonnavigable stream within the meaning of the Constitution and laws of the United States, and jurisdiction over said creek is hereby declared to be vested in the State of Mississippi.

SEC. 2. That the right of Congress to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the third reading of the Senate bill.

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a similar House bill will lie on the table.

There was no objection.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE PEEDEE RIVER, S. C.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Also the following Senate bill. S. 4536. The Clerk will report it.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 4536) to authorize the building of a bridge across the Peedee River in South Carolina.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the counties of Darlington, Marlbero, and Dillon, in the State of South Carolina, or such townships in said counties as may desire to do so, be, and they are hereby, authorized to construct, operate, and maintain a highway bridge and approaches thereto across the Peedee River at or near a point known as Cashua Ferry, in said State, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

Sec. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

expressly reserved

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

DEFACED POSTAGE STAMPS-CONFERENCE REPORT,

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on S. 2703.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Minnesota calls up a conference report on a bill which the Clerk will report by title.

The Clerk read the title of the bill (S. 2703) to allow the printing and publishing of illustrations of foreign postage and revenue stamps from defaced plates.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. I ask unanimous consent that the statement may be read in lieu of the conference report.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Minnesota asks unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the conference report. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (S. 2703) to allow the printing and publishing of illustrations of foreign postage and revenue stamps from defaced plates, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recom-mend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 1, and agree to the same.

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 2, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 13, page 1, after the word "albums," strike out the semicolon and insert a period and in lieu of the matter proposed insert the following: "Nothing in said sections shall be construed to forbid or prevent similar illustrations, in black and white only, in philatelic or historical articles, books, journals, albums, or the circulars of legitimate publishers or dealers in such stamps, books, journals, albums, or circulars, of such portion of the border of a stamp of the United States as may be necessary to show minor differences in the stamp so illustrated, but all such illustrations shall be at least four times as large as the portion of the original United States stamp so illustrated"; and the House agree to the same.

ANDREW J. VOLSTEAD, W. D. BOIES, HATTON W. SUMMERS, Managers on the part of the House. W. P. DILLINGHAM, ALBERT B. CUMMINS, JNO. K. SHIELDS, Managers on the part of the Senate.

STATEMENT.

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 2703) to allow the printing and publishing of illustrations of postage and revenue stamps from defaced plates, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conference com-

The Senate recedes from its disagreement to the amendment of the House No. 1, and also recedes from its disagreement to the amendment of the House No. 2, but agrees to the latter amendment with an amendment that strikes out the provision that before any likeness of any stamp or plate may be produced a permit shall be obtained therefor from the Secretary of the Treasury

In view of the fact that the bill does not permit the reproduction of any stamp or plate of such stamp that would sufficiently resemble an original, so that it could be made use of for the purpose of fraud, this limitation upon the right granted under the proposed act was not deemed necessary.

Andrew J. Volstead,

W. D. Boies, Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. STAFFORD. Will the gentleman from Minnesota explain the effect of the agreement of the conferees?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. The effect is stated in the last paragraph of our statement. There was an amendment added on the floor requiring the permission of the Secretary of the Treasury before any of these imitations or likenesses of revenue or postage stamps might be printed in catalogues, circulars, and things of that kind; but as the law itself requires that they shall be so defaced that there can not be any possibility of fraud, there is no necessity of that, and we agreed to strike out the amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

REORGANIZATION OF THE ADMINISTRATIVE BRANCH.

Mr. TEMPLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table for immediate consideration Senate Joint Resolution 282.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table vania asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table a Senate joint resolution, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read the title of S. J. Res. 282, to amend the resolution of December 29, 1920, entitled "Joint resolution to create a joint committee on the reorganization of the 'administrative branch of the Government."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I object.

LEAVE TO EXTEND REMARKS.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record on the farm loan act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Maryland asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks as indicated. Is there objection?
There was no objection.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, the time has come when we Members of this House, in the words of President Harding, must be militant "sentinels on the towers of constitutional government," instead of voting for any old thing that is backed by well-organized propaganda.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday, during the general debate on the to provide additional credit facilities for the agricultural and live-stock industries of the United States; to amend the Federal farm loan act; to amend the Federal reserve act, and for other purposes—

I raised a question as to two provisions of the bill, as fol-

Mr. Hill. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. Luce, I will.

Mr. Luce, I will.

Mr. Hill. On page 17 of the report of the committee, I notice this:

"The intermediate credit banks are permitted to rediscount paper purchased by them and to issue collateral trust notes and debentures based on such paper and sell the same for the procurement of additional loanable funds. These debentures are made tax free and may be purchased by Federal reserve banks with the restriction that no such debentures may be purchased by a Federal reserve bank which has a maturity of more than nine months from the date of purchase."

I would like to ask the gentleman if he has estimated how much these tax-free securities will amount to?

Mr. Luce, Six hundred million dollars.

Mr. Hill. The intermediate banks are to be capitalized and capital owned by the United States—$5,000,000 a bank; $60,000,000. Does the gentleman know why, in view of the fact that the United States Government is to be the sole stockholder, the shares are put at $5 a share?

Mr. Luce. Those are mysteries of the bill that I have not yet solved.

Although this House a few weeks ago expressed itself as opposed to tax-exempt securities, by this bill it authorizes 12 Government banks to issue $600,000,000 worth of such taxexempt securities.

I voted against the proposed constitutional amendment to do away with tax-exempt securities because it was a serious infringement upon the rights of the individual States, but I am opposed to tax-exempt securities. To-day I have voted with 36 others against this bill continuing tax-exempt securities, while 306 Members of this House voted for the bill with this, and all of its other provisions, putting the Federal Government definitely into the banking business.

I am happy to share the views of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Burron] and the gentleman from New York [Mr. Cock-RAN], both of whom opposed this bill in most able speeches yesterday. I sat beside Mr. Cockran just before he spoke, and I join in the universal sorrow of this House that it was the last speech of that great American who so long and with such distinction served his country in this body. His loss is to us personal and national.

This bill creates 12 Federal banks of whose capital stock the United States is to be sole owner. This is contrary to the spirit of our Constitution as I conceive it, and it is certainly against the platform of the Republican Party, the theory of which favored taking the Federal Government out of competition with private business.

The Republican platform said, "The fact is that the war, to a great extent, was financed by a policy of inflation through certificate borrowing from the banks and bonds issued at artificial rates, sustained by the low discount rates established by the Federal Reserve Board. The continuance of this policy since the armistice lays the administration open to severe criti-

This bill creates "artificial rates," in addition to authorizing $600,000,000 of tax-exempt securities. It is not for the real interest of the farmers, but is an encouragement to false financing. I agree with the clear and concise analysis of the bill by the gentleman from New York [Mr. Husted]. This bill is a poor hotchpotch of several bills and should not pass. I do not believe the Senate will pass it, since I recall the words of President Harding's address of acceptance of the nomination for the Presidency, when he said of the Senate, "Its Members are the designated sentinels on the towers of constitutional government.

I am for the pledge of the Republican platform for "the authorization of associations for the extension of personal credits," but this bill goes far beyond that. It puts the Federal Government finally into the private banking business and extends tax exemption. I am therefore one of the 36 who voted against this bill and not one of the 306 who voted for it.

CALENDAR FOR UNANIMOUS CONSENT.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will call the Calendar for Unanimous Consent.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of H. R. 12997.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will recognize the gentleman after the call of the Calendar for Unanimous Con-

MISSISSIPPI RIVER FLOODS.

The first business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 13459) extending the jurisdiction of the Mississippi River Commission and making available funds appropriated under authority of an act entitled "An act to provide for the control of the floods of the Mississippi River and of the Sacramento River, Calif., and for other purposes," approved March 1, 1917, for the purpose of controlling the floods of the Mississippi River from the mouth of the Ohio River to Rock Island, Ill., and for the purpose of controlling the floods of the tributaries of the Mississippi River between the mouth of the Ohio River and Rock Island, Ill., including levee protection and bank protection, in so far as said tributaries are affected by the flood waters of the Mississippi River.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to ob-

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that that bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Mississippi asks unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

AUDITOR AND DEPUTY AUDITOR OF THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (S. 3617) to fix the salaries of the auditor and deputy auditor of the Philippine Islands.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. CRAMTON. I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Michigan objects.

The Clerk will report the next bill on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent.

CERTAIN HOMESTEAD ENTRYMEN.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 2347) for the relief of certain homestead entrymen.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, when this bill was last under consideration the gentleman who reported the bill was temporarily out of the Chamber, and we passed the measure over temporarily in order to have some explanation of it. I notice that the author of the bill is present. Perhaps he can give some information as to the real effect of it. Before the gentleman explains the bill I wish to say that I would like to have information as to whether this measure will not put a premium upon settlers taking up home-stead entries on Government land in our forest reserves.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That any homestead entryman of 160 acres or less of lands which have been or may hereafter be designated or classified by the Secretary of the Interior as subject to entry under the provisions of the enlarged homestead act of February 19, 1909, or June 17, 1910, who has not submitted final proof upon his existing entry, and any homestead entryman who has submitted final proof, or received patent, for such an amount of lands which have been or may hereafter be designated or classified by the Secretary of the Interior as of the character described in said act, and who owns and resides upon the said homestead entry, where said lands are within a national forest, may make an additional entry for and obtain patent to such an amount of land, of that same character, not in a national forest, and within a radius of 20 miles from said homestead entry, as, when the area thereof is added to the area of the original entry, will not exceed 320 acres, and residence upon the original entry shall be credited on both entries; but cultivation must be made on the additional entry as required by said act. For the purposes of this act the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to designate as subject to the enlarged homestead acts lands embraced, at the time of such designation, within valid subsisting entries within national forest.

Sec. 2. That any homestead entryman of 160 acres or less of lands which have been or may hereafter be designated or classified by the Secretary of the Interior as subject to entry under the provisions of the stock raising homestead act of December 29, 1916, who has not the stock raising homestead act of December 29, 1916, who has not submitted final proof upon his existing entry, and also any homestead entryman who has submitted final proof or received patent for such an amount of lands that are of the character described as subject to entry under the provisions of the said stock raising homestead act, and who owns and resides upon the said homestead entry, where said lands are within a national forest, may make an additional entry for and obtain patent to such an amount of land of that same character, not in a national forest and within a radius of 20 miles from said homestead entry, as, when the area thereof is added to the area of the original entry, will not exceed 640 acres, and residence upon the original entry shall be credited on both entries; but improvements must be made on the additional entry equal to $1.25 for each acre thereof. For the purposes of this act the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to designate under the stock raising homestead act lands embraced, at the time of such designation, within valid subsisting entries within national forests.

The Clerk read the first committee amendment, as follows: Page 1, line 7, strike out the word "and" and insert in lieu thereof the word "or."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read the second committee amendment, as follows: Page 2, line 10, after the word "lands." at the end of the line, insert the following words: "embraced, at the time of such designation, within valid subsisting entries."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read the next committee amendment, as follows:

Page 3, line 8, after the word "lands," at the end of the line, insert the following words: "embraced, at the time of such designation, within valid subsisting entries."

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask recognition on the amendment.

Gentlemen of the committee, there is a unanimous report from the District of Columbia Committee

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, the discussion must be on the subject matter, the amendment to the bill.

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman will save a lot of time if he allows me to proceed. Mr. MONDELL. We are on the Unanimous Consent Calendar, and we are going to try to get through with it to-day.

discussion must be on the measure before the House.

Mr. BLANTON. This is a very important matter—
The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will confine himself to the amendment.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to speak for two minutes out of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent to speak out of order for two minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. MONDELL and Mr. SNELL objected.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask that we have a quorum from now on-to-day, to-morrow, the next day, and Sunday. make the point of no quorum.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas makes the point of no quorum. Evidently there is no quorum present

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

The Clerk called the roll and the following Members failed to answer to their names

Andrew, Mass.	Fenn Freeman	McDuffie McFadden	Ryan Schall
Allsorge
Atkeson	Garner	McLaughlin, Pa.	Scott, Mich.
Bird	Gifford	McPherson	Scott, Tenn.
Blakeney	Glynn	Maloney	Shaw
Bowers	Goodykoontz	Michaelson	Shelton
Brand	Gorman	Mills	Slemp
Brennan	Gould	Montague	Smith, Mich.
Britten	Hawes	Moore, Ill.	Sproul
Brooks, Ill.	Hays	Morin	Stiness
Brown, Tenn.	Henry	Mudd	Stoll
Browne, Wis.	Huck	Newton, Minn.	Sullivan
Burdick	Jacoway	Nolan	Taylor, Ark.
Burke	Jefferis, Nebr.	O'Connor	Ten Byck
Cantrill	Johnson, Miss.	Olpp	Thomas
Carew	Jones, Pa.	Overstreet	Thorpe
Chandler, N. Y.	Kahn	Paige	Tinkham
Clague	Keller	Park, Ga.	Towner
Clark, Fla.	Kelley, Mich.	Parker, N. J.	Treadway
Classon	Kennedy	Patterson, Mo.	Turner
Clouse	Kindred	Paul	Ward, N. C.
Codd	King	Perkins	Webster
Cole, Ohio	Kitchin	Petersen	Wheeler
Connolly, Pa.	Knight	Pringey	White, Me.
Copley	Lampert	Purnell	Williams, III.
Crago	Larsen, Ga.	Radeliffe	Williams, Tex.
Crisp	Larson, Minn.	Rainey, Ala.	Williamson
Crowther	Lea, Calif.	Rayburn	Wise
Cullen	Linthieum	Reber	Wood, Ind.
Davis, Minn.	Luhring	Riddick	Wright
Drane	McArthur	Rodenberg	Wyant
Dupré	McClintle	Rose	Zihlman
Ellis	McCormick	Rossdale	Zimmall
	MCCOVIIIACE	as orsanage at

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. DEMPSEY). On this call 297 Members have answered to their names, a quorum.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I move to dispense with further proceedings under the call,

The motion was agreed to. The doors were opened.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was agreed to.

The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

GRADE PERCENTAGES OF ENLISTED MEN, UNITED STATES ARMY.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (S. 4037) to amend the grade percentages of enlisted men as prescribed in section 4b of the national defense

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to ob-ect, I have given more consideration to this bill than I usually give to others because it is a matter that affects the After reading the hearings, since the Unanimous-Consent Calendar was last considered, I can not bring myself to the opinion that they need the more than 1,000 additional noncommissioned officers than they now have in these three highest grades. I do not desire by any act of mine to cause the demotion of any of those in the higher grades, but I can not see where the War Department has made a case whereby they should have 1,000 more noncommissioned officers than they have at the present time. I realize that the percentages under the Army reorganization act were based originally upon an Army of 175 000, then 150,000, and now reduced to 125,000. There should be some percentage of increase in the higher grades, but to increase at this time by more than 1,000, entailing an expense of over a million and a half dollars, I do not think is warranted, when we are seeking to curtail Army expenditures for Army personnel, whether commissioned or noncommissioned.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.
The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas demands the regular order. Is there objection?
Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, if the regular order is demanded, I object.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Craven, its Chief Clerk. announced that the Senate had disagreed to the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 4280) to provide for the incorporation and supervision of corporations formed for the purpose of making agricultural and live-stock loans; to amend the Federal reserve act; to amend the Federal farm loan act; to extend and stabilize the market for United States bonds and other securities; to provide fiscal agents for the United States; and for other purposes; had requested a conference with the House of Representatives on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. McLean, Mr. Calder, Mr. Pepper, Mr. Owen, and Mr. Hitchcock as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the amendment of the House of Representatives to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11939) to amend section 5219 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

SCHOOL FUND OF CHEROKEE NATION OF OKLAHOMA.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was House Resolution 393, directing the Attorney General to make an immediate investigation of the school fund of the Cherokee Nation in Oklahoma.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. Carter] stated that he had objection to the passage of this resolution, and that if he were not here to at least have it passed over without prejudice. would not want the resolution passed in his absence. I ask unanimous consent that it go over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request that the resolution be passed over without prejudice?

There was no objection.

CHIPPEWA INDIANS, MINNESOTA.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 13953) authorizing, for the relief of the distress of the Chippewa Indians of Minnesota, the withdrawal of moneys from the tribal funds of said Indians.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to ob-

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, do I understand that the gentleman from Wisconsin objected to the bill S. 4037, respecting the grade percentages of enlisted men, which was under consideration a moment ago? I think that is a very worthy bill, and it is legislation that we ought to have. I trust that we may have fair consideration of these measures. This is the last opportunity to go through this calendar.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that that has been objected to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman can withdraw his objection, if he is disposed to do so.

Mr. BLANTON. But we have taken up another bill since that Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I made the objection under the demand of the regular order. I did not intend to object at the moment, but as the regular order was demanded, necessarily I was compelled to object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman withdraw his objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. I am willing to reserve the objection.
Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the objection to the bill H. R. 13953, just reported, and in that connection I ask unanimous consent to proceed for three minutes out of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I object. Mr. BLANTON. I think we should have a quorum present, and I make the point of order that there is no quorum present. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas makes the point of order that there is no quorum present.

Evidently there is not.

Mr. Mondell. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will bring in absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

Ansorge	Faust	Logan	Riddick
Anthony	Fordney	Longworth	Rodenberg
Atkeson	Foster	Luhring	Rose
Bell	Freeman	McClintic	Rosenbloom
Bird	French	McCormick	Rossdale
Bowers	Frothingham	McDuffle	Ryan
Brand	Funk	McFadden	Schall
Brennan	Gahn	McLaughlin, Pa.	Scott, Mich.
Britten	Garner	Madden	Scott, Tenn.
Brooks, Ill.	Gifford	Maloney	Shelton
Brown, Tenn.	Glynn	Mead	Sisson
Browne, Wis.	Gorman	Michaelson	Slemp
Burke	Gould	Moore, Ill.	Smith, Mich.
Cantrill	Graham, Pa.	Mott	Snell
Carew	Green, Iowa	Mudd	Stiness
Carter	Hawes	Nelson, Me.	Stoll
Chandler, N. Y.	Hays	Nelson, A. P.	Sullivan
Chandler, Okla.	Henry	Nelson, J. M.	Taylor, Ark.
Clark, Fla.	Huck	Nolan	Ten Eyck
Classon	Husted	O'Connor	Thomas
Clouse	Jacoway	Oliver	Thorpe
Codd	Jefferis, Nebr.	Olpp	Treadway
Connolly, Pa.	Johnson, Miss.	Overstreet	Underhill
Crago	Johnson, S. Dak.	Paige	Vinson
Crowther	Jones, Pa.	Park, Ga.	Ward, N. C.
Cullen	Kahn	Patterson, Mo.	Webster
Curry	Keller	Paul	Wheeler
Dale	Kelley, Mich.	Perkins	White, Me.
Davis, Minn.	Kennedy	Petersen	Williams, Ill.
Denison	Kindred	Porter	Williams, Tex
Dominiek	King	Pringey	Winslow
Drane	Kitchin	Purnell	Wise
Dupré	Knight	Rainey, Ala.	Wood, Ind.
Echols	Lampert	Reber	Zihlman
Edmonds	Larson, Minn.	Reed, N. Y.
Ellis	Layton	Rhodes

The SPEAKER pro tempore. On this call 282 Members have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I move to dispense with further proceedings under the call.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may extend my remarks on House Joint Resolution 171 relating to the Hawaiian Islands.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from California asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the manner indicated. Is there objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, are they the gentleman's own remarks? Mr. RAKER. I want to insert in the Record a statement of President Roosevelt-

Mr. SHAW. I object.
Mr. LITTLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks on the bill reported from the Agricultural Committee about wheat.

Mr. RAKER. Reserving the right to object, coupling my request with it-

Mr. STAFFORD. The gentleman can not do that.

Mr. RAKER. Well, then I object-

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas?

Mr. RAKER. I object.

Mr. LITTLE. Mr. Speaker, I renew my request. Mr. RAKER. I renew my objection. If I can not be given permission, none shall go through.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill? Mr. BLANTON. Which bill?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The bill H. R. 13953.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I understood the substance of this bill was incorporated in the omnibus Indian legislative and appropriation act. ask unanimous consent that this may be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Wisconsin asks unanimous consent that the bill be passed without prejudice. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

CONTRACT WITH ELEPHANT BUTTE IRRIGATION DISTRICT.

The next business in order on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 13550) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to enter into a contract with the Elephant Butte Irrigation District of New Mexico and the El Paso County Improvement District No. 1, of Texas, for the carrying out of the provisions of the convention between the United States and Mexico, proclaimed January 16, 1907, and providing for compensation therefor.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, we have had this bill up for consideration, I would say, at a former date in a small way, but the gentleman from Texas is pressing for immediate and early action. It is an important proposal, and I think some explanation should be made further by the gentleman from Texas as to the exigency, if there is one, and why we should take up the matter now.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Permit me to say to the gentleman from Wisconsin that he will see from this report that I hold in my hand a statement in Secretary Fall's letter that the people of Texas and New Mexico, under the Elephant Butte project, are having to pay $35,000 annually in order to carry out the contract entered into between this country and Mexico for the delivery of 25,000 acre-feet of water.

Now, mark you, gentlemen, that this bill provides that this is a final settlement in regard to this matter and that my people agree to carry out this contract made between this country and Mexico in the future, in perpetuity, and I state to you that if you pass this bill now and not defer until the next session of Congress—as some gentlemen think we should do—that it will be the means of saving this Government several hundred thousand dollars. This bill is not all that we could legally claim and justly present. But my people were satisfied with this amount and I am pleading with you gentlemen to take up this bill and pass it and make a just settlement with my people.

We had almost two weeks' hearing on this bill before the

We had almost two weeks hearing on this bill before the Irrigation Committee of the House, and this committee went into this matter thoroughly and many members of that committee found that the United States was indebted to the water users in a greater sum than we are asking here to-day. Mr. Burges and the other gentlemen representing these projects were satisfied with this amount. It is a final settlement of the controversy. The water users of this State will have to carry out this contract in the future or the director general of reclamation can force them to do it.

I secured a rule from the Committee on Rules, without a dissenting vote of that committee, but I do not wish to take up the time of this House by having this rule presented, and I trust that the gentleman will let me take it up to-day under unanimous consent. I might not have a chance of getting up this

Mr. STAFFORD. Surely not. The gentleman in his brief experience has become aware that a rule does not amount to much in the closing days of the Congress.

Mr. HUDSPETH. I did not want to get up the rule unless it was necessary and take up the time, but it is a just measure

Mr. STAFFORD. When this bill was under consideration before I recognized the equity-

Mr. STAFFORD. The equity of the users of the water to their pledge to pay these rentals. I could see there was considerable equity on the part of the Government to contribute something toward carrying out the treaty obligations entered into between our Government and the United States of Mexico. I thought then it was rather too important a proposal to take up under the Unanimous Consent Calendar, but if the gentleman says there is no question but what this million dollars will be the fixed price

Mr. HUDSPETH. That is the final outcome-Mr. STAFFORD. And will not be increased-Mr. HUDSPETH. Congress will not be harassed.

Mr. STAFFORD. But will be a finality so far as the understanding existing between our Government and these users is concerned-

Mr. HUDSPETH. That is the situation.
Mr. STAFFORD. And in order to relieve the embarrassed condition of the Committee on Rules, who, I think, have 57 rules—and if I am exaggerating I would like to stand corrected-I will in this instance not press the Committee on Rules to consider this bill any further.

Mr. HUDSPETH. I thank the gentleman. Mr. STAFFORD. I withdraw the reservation of objection. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will read the bill.

The Clerk began the reading of the bill.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the committee amendment be read in lieu of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Wisconsin asks unanimous consent that the committee amendment be read in lieu of the bill. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The Clerk read the committee amendment, as follows:

The Clerk read the committee amendment, as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

"That in connection with the Rio Grande Federal irrigation project in New Mexico and Texas, and as a final settlement of the subject, the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to enter into contracts with the Elephant Butte Irrigation District of New Mexico and the El Paso County Water Improvement District No. 1, of Texas, under which said districts shall agree to store and deliver 60,000 acre-feet of water annually in the bed of the Rio Grande at the head works of the Acequia Madre above the city of Juarez, Mexico, as provided by the treaty of January 16, 1907 (34 Stats., p. 2953), between the United States of America and the United States of Mexico, and under which, in case of default by said districts, the Secretary of the Interior may undertake and fulfill such contracts and such treaty obligation and collect the cost thereof from said districts.

"Sec. 2. That upon the mutual execution and delivery of said contract and in consideration thereof the Secretary of the Interior is authorized and directed to credit the construction cost of said Rio Grande Federal irrigation project with the sum of $1,000,000, thereby reducing by that amount the total construction charge due from the water users under said project to the United States, and shall issue a certificate to that effect to the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States.

"Sec. 3. That upon receipt of such certificate the Secretary of the States. "SEC. 3. That upon receipt of such certificate the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States is authorized and directed to accept the same in lieu and in full satisfaction of the next installment of $1,000,000 due the general fund of the Treasury of the United States from the reclamation fund, under the provisions of the act of June 25, 1910 (36 States, p. 835), as amended by the act of June 12, 1917 (40 States, p. 149)."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the committee amendment.

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Speaker, before I proceed I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record regarding peon labor in Hawaii up to 1890, on the adoption of the joint resolution to provide for the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands, on July 7, 1898, and on to and including the 30th day of April. 1900, when the organic act was passed, and present condition of peon labor, running from that time down to the present, and the effort to restore peonage and contract labor in the Territory of Hawaii by virtue of House Joint Resolution 171, by including a statement of President Roosevelt, by including a statement and a history of the case by Mr. Patterson, of Indiana, and an article in the Saturday Evening Post, and a few remarks of my own on the subject.

Mr. SIEGEL. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker-Mr. STAFFORD. Oh, we can not permit the incorporation in the Record of things as old as 1890.

Mr. RAKER. It involves a real live problem now. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. I object.

Mr. MONDELL. I suggest that the gentleman confine it to his own remarks.

Mr. RAKER. I can not do that, because I want to refer to the history of this situation and the conditions then and now existing and that contemplated by House Joint Resolution 171, and I was not there when this history was made.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is made.

Mr. RAKER. Now, Mr. Speaker, I am going to talk on the bill. I admit that just now I dld branch off a little to another matter [laughter], but this bill involves $1,000,000. From the report of the Secretary and the hearings it is shown that there was no final settlement, and the project was left as a continued drain on the Government, amounting to from $25,000 to possibly $50,000 a year. I went into the matter very thoroughly and took the matter up with the Secretary of the Interior, and I want to say this-and I think I am entitled to it-I suggested to the Secretary of the Interior personally and to his associate, Mr. Finney, that there should be a full and final settlement, and that there should be a requirement on the part of the water users to continue this use, and if they did not, this work shall be done by the Government, and then this expense charged up to the projects and thereafter be of no expense to the Govern-That was my suggestion to the Secretary. adopted by the department and the committee. I feel quite well satisfied with this work. I have tried in all other such matters to make good suggestions for the administration of the affairs of the Government.

As to Hawaii, a Territory of the United States, I feel so keenly on the matter that I do not believe that the Members of the House, if they knew the history and facts regarding the Hawaiian Islands, would object for a moment for the public to know the condition of those islands regarding the population, the tense issues now pending as to what will become of the Islands, and labor conditions. It can not be set aside much longer.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I insist that the gentleman speak on the amendment.

Mr. RAKER. I did slip off the amendment a little. I concede that.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The question is on the en-The SPEAKER pro tempore. The grossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the will be amended in accordance with the text of the bill. Without objection, the title

There was no objection.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Mr. Speaker, I move to reconsider the vote whereby the bill was passed and to lay that motion on the table.

Mr. STAFFORD. I object to that. We are not having that to-day.

Mr. HUDSPETH. All right.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next bill.

MARINE HOSPITAL, DETROIT, MICH.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H.R. 13961) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to sell the United States marine hospital reservation and improvements thereon at Detroit, Mich., and to acquire a suitable site in the same locality and to erect thereon a modern hospital for the treatment of beneficiaries of the United States Public Health Service, and for other purposes

The title of the bill was read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, we passed a bill of similar import, so far as Cleveland, Ohio, is concerned. This relates, I notice, to the old marine hospital in the business district of Detroit. I am rather in sympathy with the purpose of the bill, but I would like to inquire as to the necessity of the limitation in section 4 as to the 3 per cent of the amount received from the sale of the said hospital being available for the payment of architect's fees.

Mr. LANGLEY. The author of the bill, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Brennan], is not in the city. I can speak only in a general way from my recollection of the hearings on the I recall that the Surgeon General of the Public Health Service made a report recommending that this legislation be enacted, for the reason that the present site is in a section of the city where business establishments have been erected, factories, and so forth, and the noise and smoke from them makes this location wholly unsuited for a hospital.

The Surgeon General thinks that there is no question about the proceeds of the sale being sufficient to get another site that is suitable and to erect a suitable building thereon.

This limitation was approved by the Surgeon General, presumably to expedite the construction of a building. That is, he thought this 3 per cent limitation would be sufficient. I am only conjecturing as to that.

Mr. STAFFORD. Will the gentleman inform the House as to how much it is estimated will be received from the sale of this property?

Mr. LANGLEY. I do not recall. I do not happen to have with me the letter of the Surgeon General. I expected the author of the bill to be here to-day. He is entirely familiar with the details. But the Surgeon General said, as I recall, that, on investigation, he was confident that the proceeds would be entirely sufficient to purchase a new site and erect thereon a building such as the Public Health Service needed.

What is the estimate of cost of the new Mr. STAFFORD. hospital building?

Mr. LANGLEY. About $600,000 or perhaps less.

Mr. MICHENER, About $500,000.
Mr. STAFFORD. Then why should there not be a limitation placed here to that effect, that the site and buildings should not exceed $500,000?

Mr. LANGLEY. It does not, in any event, involve any additional charge on the Treasury.

Mr. STAFFORD. If the Government has a valuable piece of property to dispose of, it should place a limitation on the cost of the building, and not leave it to the whim of the Public Health Service to expend the entire amount received from the sale of the property.

Mr. LANGLEY. I will say to the gentleman that the committee followed the recommendation of the Surgeon General of the Public Health Service in approving the bill as it stands.

Mr. STAFFORD. If some member of the committee will offer an amendment to limit the cost to $500,000 I will have no objection.

Mr. BLANTON. I should like to ask the gentleman from Kentucky a question. If I understand it, this hospital is not to be used for ex-service men?

Mr. LANGLEY. It is to be used for the same purpose for which the hospital there has been used heretofore.

Mr. BLANTON. For the Public Health Service, but is it not one of our ex-service men's hospitals?

Mr. LANGLEY. I do not recall whether this particular hospital was transferred under the Executive order to the jurisdiction of the Veterans' Bureau or not, and I do not happen to know what character of patients are admitted.

Mr. BLANTON. The other day when I finished checking up the number of available beds that are now in the various hospitals which we have provided for the ex-service men I was surprised to find the number of available beds that are now vacant. As the years roll along these hospitals are going to be needed less and less all the time.

Mr. LANGLEY. That is a mooted question. Mr. BLANTON. The first thing you know we are going to have a lot of hospitals on our hands with no use for them.

Mr. LANGLEY. I think not. At any rate this hospital is already on our hands, and has been in use for many years.

Mr. BLANTON. I know, but we are trying to get something bigger on our hands.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. Will the gentleman permit me to answer his question?

Mr. BLANTON. Certainly.
Mr. CHINDBLOM. This hospital is in Detroit. Detroit is one of the most important of the Great Lakes ports. This, as I recall it, is purely a marine hospital, and it is absolutely essential to have a marine hospital in Detroit. It was there long before we had the new hospitals which have been built for the veterans of the World War.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman tell me how many Government-owned hospitals we have now in Michigan?

Mr. CHINDBLOM. Not very many.
Mr. BLANTON. Can anybody tell us how many?
Mr. STAFFORD. The hospital to be constructed at Camp Custer is to be one of the largest hospitals under the Veterans' Bureau.

Mr. BLANTON. Can any gentleman tell us what other hospitals there are in Michigan?

Mr. CHINDBLOM. My understanding is that the reason for the location of the hospital at Camp Custer was because there was no other hospital there for the treatment of ex-service men.

Mr. BLANTON. I do not believe we ought to pass this bill now under unanimous consent, in the closing hours of Congress, with the superficial investigation that has been had.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. My interest in this matter arises from the fact that there is a marine hospital in Chicago in my own district, and I know the necessity for marine hospitals at ports. It is very essential to have marine hospitals in Lake ports for the sailors on the Lakes.

Mr. BLANTON. But we can not have them in every place. Mr. CHINDBLOM. Detroit is one of the great ports of the

Mr. HERRICK. Mr. Speaker, I want to call the attention of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Blanton] to the fact that perhaps he ought not to begin to feel concerned about the number of empty beds that we now have available on the theory that we are never going to have any further use for them, for the reason that I want to remind the gentleman from Texas that just about as soon as we get everything lovely the profiteers will discover that there is something to be gained from another war, and they will kick up another fight and we shall need all the beds we have.

Mr. BLANTON. We are going to be here to stop anything of that kind. I object, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. ELLIS. Will the gentleman reserve his right to ob-

Mr. BLANTON. I object, Mr. Speaker. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas objects. The Clerk will report the next bill.

POST OFFICE AND PUBLIC BUILDING AT BELDING, MICH.

The next bill on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 13596) providing for the erection of a post office and public building at Belding, Mich.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?
Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I regret very sincerely that I must object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Wyoming objects.

Mr. MONDELL. If I may make a statement—if we should pass this bill and it should go to the Senate, it might blossom out and burgeon into a full-fledged omnibus public building bill.

Mr. BLANTON. I have no objection to the gentleman making that statement

Mr. MONDELL. I must object to the consideration of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next bill.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT KEYTESVILLE, MO.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 14039) authorizing the acquisition of a site and the erection of a public building at Keytesville, Mo.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, have a public matter of great importance on which I would like to address my colleagues for three minutes, and I ask unanimous consent, under the reservation of objection, to address my colleagues for three minutes out of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent to address the House for three minutes out of order. Is there objection?

Mr. STEPHENS. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. BLANTON. I think we ought to have a quorum. I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas makes the point of order that there is no quorum present. Evidently there is no quorum present.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Wisconsin moves a call of the House.

A call of the House was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Doorkeeper will close the cors. The Sergeant at Arms will bring in absent Members. The Clerk will call the roll.

The Clerk called the roll, when the following Members failed to answer to their names:

Cullen
Davis, Minn.
Davis, Tenn.
Denison
Drane
Dunn
Dupré
Ellis Ansorge Bird Bird
Boies
Brand
Brennan
Britten
Brooks, Ill.
Brown, Tenn.
Browne, Wis.
Burdick
Burke Faust Fenn Focht Frear Free Freemau Funk Garner Burtness Burton Cantrill Carew Carter Garner Glynn Gould Griffin Hawley Hayden Huck Jacoway Jefferis, Nebr. Johnson, Miss. Jones, Pa. Kahn Chandler, N. Y. Chandler, Okla. Clark, Fla. Classon Clouse Couse Codd Collier Connolly, Pa. Cooper, Ohio Copley Crago Crowther

Keller
Kelley, Mich.
Kelly, Mach.
Kelly, Pa.
O'Connor
Connor
Conn Mott Mudd Nelson, A. P.

Nolan
O'Connor
Olpp
Overstreet
Paige
Park, Ga.
Parks, Ark.
Patterson, Mo.
Patterson, N. J.
Paul
Perkins
Petersen
Pringey
Rainey, Ala,
Reber Rodenberg Ryan Schall Scott, Mich. Shelton Sisson Slemp Smith, Mich. Sproul

Stedman	Thomas
Stiness	Thorpe
Stoll	Timberlake
Sullivan	Treadway
Taylor, Ark.	Turner
Ten Eyck	Vinson

Voigt Ward, N. C. Webster Wheeler White, Me. Williams, Tex.

Wise Wood, Ind. Woodruff Zihlman

The SPEAKER pro tempore. On this roll call 291 Members have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I move to dispense with further proceedings under the call.

The motion was agreed to.

The doors were opened.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next bill on the Unanimous Consent Calendar.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT KEYTESVILLE, MO.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 14039) authorizing the acquisition of a site and the erection of a public building at Keytesville, Mo.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I regret that I must object.

CENTRAL BUILDING FOR ART AND INDUSTRY.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 218) to create a commission to consider the proposal of a central building for art and industry in the District of Columbia.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. BLANTON. I object.

BRIDGE ACROSS TUGALOO RIVER, S. C. AND GA.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (S. 4387) to authorize the building of a bridge across the Tugaloo River, between South Carolina and Georgia. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, was not this bill passed in the early session of the House to-day?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is informed that this bill has not been before the House. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the State Highway Department of South Carolina and the State Highway Department of Georgia, in cooperation with the properly constituted authorities of Oconee County, S. C., and Stephens County, Ga., be, and they are hereby, authorized to construct, operate, and maintain a highway bridge and approaches thereto across the Tugaloo River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation and at or near a point known as the old Southern Railroad bridge, between the counties of Oconee, S. C., and Stephens, Ga., in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 28, 1906.

Sec. 2. That the right to alter amond or reneal this extraction of the second of the

2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the last word. I would like to ask the chairman of the committee if this is a toll bridge.

I ask the question because last year during the closing hours bill was passed similar to this permitting the construction of bridge between Georgia and Florida. That bridge was a toll bridge, and I have been trying month after month to get a bill reported from the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee to repeal that bill because, unless it is repealed, the main highway from the North to the South will be stopped, because under the Federal law no Federal money can be spent, or at least will be spent, on a road leading up to a toll bridge. I think it is important to find out whether we are going to get into the same position now that we got into then.

Mr. WINSLOW. I will say to the gentleman from Florida that according to the communication from the Secretary of Agriculture we give this a clean bill of health. The gentleman is laboring under some misinformation. Mr. SEARS. I would like to know what is the misinformation.

Mr. WINSLOW. I do not think it is the law that provides that no Federal money can be spent on a road leading to a toll bridge.

Mr. SEARS. I understand that is the law, and if it is not the law I will try to have it incorporated into the law.

Mr. WINSLOW. It may be so, but I do not know it.

The bill was ordered to be read the third time, was read the third time, and passed.

BRIDGE ACROSS RED RIVER, MONTAQUE COUNTY, TEX.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill S. 4122, an act granting the consent of Congress to the Interstate Toll Bridge Co. for the construction of a bridge across Red River between Montague County, Tex., and Jefferson County, Okla.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore, Is there objection to the consideration of the bill? [After a pause,] The Chair hears

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the Interstate Toll Bridge Co, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Red River at a point suitable to the interests of navigation between Montague County, Tax., and Jefferson County, Okla., In accordance with the provisions of an act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the last word. Mr. Speaker, I do this, as I have been trying to do for an hour, for the purpose of calling the attention of my colleagues to a matter of great public importance. I have no private bill on this calendar. I have not had any private bills on the calendar. The question I am interested in is a public matter.

With the exception of the policemen and firemen of this District every other employee of the District of Columbia and of the Government gets one day off each week in lieu of Sunday where they do not get Sunday. The policemen and firemen of this District do not get that day off; they have to work Sundays and seven days in the week. I want to appeal for these police and firemen to my collection in all fairness and tracks. and firemen to my colleagues in all fairness and justice-if you are all fair-minded men

Mr. BEEDY. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the gentleman is not speaking in order.

Mr. BLANTON. Will not the gentleman permit me to bring this just matter before the House?

Mr. BEEDY. The gentleman is not speaking to his amendment.

Mr. BLANTON. I make the point that there is no quorum. Mr. POU. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the gentleman's point of order is dilatory.

Mr. BLANTON. There is no quorum present. The Constitution requires one at all times.

Mr. POU. Mr. Speaker, the record shows that the point has been made three times within the last hour, and a quorum has been developed every time. The point was made within 20 minutes. If the Chair desires to bear any authorities for that, I have them here.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair would be glad to have the gentleman produce the citation.

Mr. POU. Mr. Speaker, I refer the Chair to section 986 of the Manual:

Manual:

On July 24, 1919, pending the demand for the previous question, Mr. Cramton moved that the House do now adjourn. The motion was lost, and after debate a point of order that no quorum was present was made, and after the roll was called a quorum appeared. Thereupon, a motion to lay the bill on the table was rejected on another roll call, when Mr. Cramton again moved that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. Mann made the point of order that the motion was dilatory.

The Speaker. The Chair thinks it is clearly dilatory.

Mr. Cramton. There has been intervening business.

The Speaker. The question whether the motion to adjourn is dilatory, the Chair thinks, does not depend simply on the time that has clapsed or the business that has intervened. The question is whether the motion is really dilatory or not; and one of the decisions which the Chair thinks is entitled to great weight says that not only should the Chair himself be satisfied that the motion is dilatory, but that the Chair should be satisfied that the House is satisfied that it is dilatory. In the present instance the Chair thinks the House must be satisfied that the motion is dilatory, and the Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. Speaker. the gentleman from Texas has made this point

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Texas has made this point of order three times within the last hour. The gentleman from Texas was on his feet addressing the House and was taken off his feet by a point of order. I make the point of order that it is perfectly clear that the gentleman from Texas is making his point of no quorum out of resentment because of the point of order made which cut off his address. I do not believe the gentleman from Texas himself will deny that. The rules of the House are made to transact business, not to stop the transaction of business. I make the point of order that with the surrounding circumstances, with the facts that have transpired in the presence of the Speaker, there is only one construction that can be put upon the point of order of the gentleman from Texas, and that is that he is holding up the business of the House in order to force this House to allow something that is not permitted under the rules of the House.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, this is a constitutional ques-

I respectfully submit that in view of the appear ance of a quorum promptly on three former occasions, within the last hour, the Speaker should assume that there is a quorum here now and should not permit any Member to hold up the business of the House.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, there is a quorum present new and I withdraw the point.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair does not recognize the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. BLANTON. But I have the right to withdraw the point, a quorum now having appeared, and I do withdraw it.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I call attention to the fact that the gentleman who made the point has repeatedly stated in the House that he would tie up the business of the House; that he would prevent the House from doing business.

Mr. BLANTON. I said that I would require them to keep a constitutional quorum here, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempere. The gentleman from Texas will take his seat.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee, Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Texas has withdrawn the point.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It is clear that there is nothing for the Chair to do except to direct the Clerk to proceed with the regular order, the point of order having been withdrawn. The Clerk will read the bill a third time.

The bill was read a third time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The bill was passed.

CHANGING THE DATE FOR THE SESSIONS OF CONGRESS.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 14186) fixing dates for the beginning of regular sessions of Congress.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HERRICK. Mr. Speaker, I object. Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I object. Mr. ANDREWS of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill may be passed over without prejudice for the present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I should like to know if it is the thought of the gentleman to attempt to call this bill up before the adjournment of the present session?

Mr. ANDREWS of Nebraska. That will depend upon the action taken en Senate Joint Resolution 253.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I object. Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I object to the request of the gentleman from Nebraska and I object to the consideration of the bill.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. LITTLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD upon the wheat bill which I introduced, which has been favorably reported,

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? Mr. RAKER. Mr. Speaker, I am willing to withdraw my objection to the gentleman's request.

There was no objection.

The extension of remarks referred to is here printed in full as follows

Mr. LITTLE. Mr. Speaker, in December I introduced a bill with regard to stabilizing the price of wheat. With gradual improvements, several of those bills have been introduced, next to the last of which was reported to the House with a recommendation that it become the law with four slight amendments. Since then, with the full benefit of the views of the committee, I have introduced bill 14400, which reads as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, February 21, 1923.

In the House of Representatives,

Petruary 21, 1923.

Mr. Lattle introduced the following bill; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and ordered to be printed:

A bill (H. R. 14400) to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to purchase, store, and sell wheat, and to secure and maintain to the producer a reasonable price for wheat and to the consumer a reasonable price for bread, and to stabilize wheat values.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of Agriculture is hereby authorized to buy wheat of such grades and quality as he designates, at such times and places as he directs, at not to exceed $1.10 a bushel and at not to exceed the market price at said times and places, except when wheat is being sold there and then at less than $1 a bushel, when he may pay $1 a bushel for said wheat if he deems best; and an appropriation of $30,000.000 is hereby authorized for the purchase, transportation, storage, and insurance of said wheat.

Whenever the Secretary of Agriculture has accumulated in elevator storage 1,000,000 bushels of wheat or more, Treasury certificates shall be issued to the Secretary of Agriculture at such interest and for such times as the Secretary of Agriculture to pay them prior to their expiration if he shall see fit. They shall be issued in such amount as the Secretary of the Treasury shall hold to be properly secured by the wheat then in storage. But whenever the wheat on which these certificates are issued is sold that money shall be applied to the discharge of that particular indebtedness and to pay off those certain certificates, and this process may continue whenever the Secretary of Agriculture has a million or more bushels of wheat in storage on which no certificates have issued.

The wheat he buys shall be stored in elevators under warehouse receipts. When any 2,000 bushels or more of wheat shall have been held by the Secretary for more than 30 days, thereafter it shall be stored in bonded elevators.

The Secretary of Agrichlture may from time to time sell wheat at not less than the market price in Minneapolis; Buffalo; Kansas City, Kans.; Chicago; and New York City, as he shall deem to the best interests of the Nation.

Whenever wheat of the aforesaid grades and quality can not be bought in Chicago and New York City for less than $1.85 per bushel, the Secretary of Agriculture shall proceed to sell as much of the wheat he holds in storage as he deems wise, at such prices as shall be considered proper by him, and so continue as in his judgment such sales shall be to the best interests of the Nation.

The $30,000,000 first appropriated, the money derived from the sale of the certificates authorized, and the money derived from the sale of wheat by the Secretary as hereinbefore authorized, or for this fund from any other source, shall constitute a revolving fund for carrying out the provisions of this act. If the sale of any wheat made security for any given certificates shall not be sufficient to take up those certificates, the balance may be discharged from the sald revolving fund.

The President of the United States shall appoint, for a term of four years and subject to removal by him, an officer in the Department of Agriculture, to be known as the superintendent of grain and bread, at a salary of $19,000 a year, who shall maintain in Washington an office as his headquarters, employing, subject to the approval of the Secretary of Agriculture, such assistants in said headquarters and such agents for the purchase and sale of wheat as shall be appropriated for. The bonds of all bonded elevators in which wheat shall be stored shall be subject to the provisions hereof, the Secretary of Agriculture shall make, subject to the provisions hereof, the Secretary of Agriculture shall make, subject t

The bill reported by the committee is practically the same, except that it substitutes $1.40 for $1 and $1.50 for $1.10. With those prices, if passed, the bill would be better for the farmer, but the increase in prices I find has aroused some opposition to the bill which did not before exist, and the problem now is for the farmers to decide whether they would rather have a bill with $1.50 in it which did not pass, than to have one with $1.10 which did pass. Possibly neither of them might pass, but that is a condition to which I wish to direct their attention during the months that ensue before the next Congress.

Whenever the farmer goes to town with money in his pockets the merchants are busy selling goods. Whenever that occurs the wholesale houses and the factories prosper and thrive, and the railroads have something to transport and their employees are well paid. In other words, whenever the farmer does well all other business prospers in this country, and when the farmer goes to town with empty pockets nothing goes right and nobody makes money. The farmer is the basis of all the prosperity and wealth of the Nation, and there is no other task the lawmakers have that is more important than securing and assuring success to the farmer. We have made laws for years that would make the manufacturers able to carry on business and pay good wages, and of late we have provided similar legislation for the railroads. We have provided absolute, definite prosperity for the silver miners.

Every candid man will confess that no other industry is in worse condition than the farmer. During the war his crops, like the produce of other business, reached high prices. The first step toward a return to ordinary and normal conditions was the fall of the farmer's prices, but the material he purchases, the machinery he bought, all the things that he must buy have remained at about the old war prices. The farm crops are back to normal, and very lonesome there, because they came back alone and unattended. The purpose of this bill is to enable the farmer to maintain himself until the things he buys are back to normal, along with his crops. The purpose of the bill is to reasonably assure the wheat farmer the cost of production of wheat, so that he can afford to sow wheat and furnish foodstuffs. If the country should produce 800,000,000 bushels of wheat, and this bill should succeed in making the price $1 a bushel instead of 80 cents, the farmers of this country would make $160,000,000 in a year over and above their 80cent price. This Government could well afford to establish this business and maintain it and lose from $10,000,000 to $20,-000,000 if such a gain could be provided to the wheat people, because with their prosperity would come the prosperity of all Such an investment would merit and meet the support and applause of all the rest of the Nation.

this bill becomes a law, the farmer will be practically certain to receive at least $1 a bushel for his wheat, which means that wheat will always be above that price, practically, and that every year he may hope for some profit. It has been suggested often that the farmer should have a reduction in railroad rates. That immediately raises the inquiry whether the farmers must pay high rates for transportation in order to give high wages, or whether the wage earners on the railroads must reduce wages to make lower rates for the farmer, because of the fact that about 60 per cent of the money the railroads re-ceive is paid for wages, so that 60 per cent of the money the farmers pay the railroads goes to the wage earners. This adjustment, of course, is a difficult one, and nobody has been able to solve it satisfactorily, because all concerned have rights that must be considered and conceded. I have prepared this wheat bill in order to cover the securing of a reasonable price for wheat. I am not undertaking to work miracles, and if I can solve this problem I shall feel that I have accomplished some good for the people that need it and for the country at large.

There is still another feature of the railroad issue that should be carefully examined. The railroads have gradually killed off the rivers, and have not been able to take care of the business themselves, so that this country is simply compelled to look to the rivers again, and the shipment of wheat on barges to the ocean is going to be an absolute necessity to the farmer who hopes to get decent rates on transportation for his crops.

Mr. Speaker, the State of Kansas pays 104 cents a bushel to send its wheat to Chicago. It costs 21 cents more a bushel to get that wheat to Liverpool. That is 31½ cents. We are shy just that much on every bushel of wheat that we ship to Liverpool. You can ship wheat from New Orleans to Liverpool for 8 cents. You can send it by barges and tugboats by river from St. Louis to New Orleans for 8 cents. That is 16 cents. If we could get the tugs and barges we could send our wheat to New Orleans for about 10 cents a bushel. Eight cents to Liverpool would make 18 cents. We would save the difference between 18 cents and 31½ cents, which is 13½ cents a bushel. In 1921 Kansas raised 128,900,000 bushels of wheat. At 133 cents a bushel, that would be over seventeen and onehalf million dollars. If you will give us a million and a half dollars a year to fix the Missouri River for a few years we will have a 400-mile 6-foot channel to St. Louis; then save $17,500,000 a year for the farmers.

If we can get rid of this pretense of the railroad lawyers and lobbyists that to put the Missouri River on the map again would be a pork-barrel job we will soon have reasonable rates to the sea. For many years that cry was raised by railroad lobbyists through their attorneys and the big newspapers. It is time the farmer began to think of his own interests and prices and transportation charges instead of listening to such an outcry. Of the money appropriated this year for rivers and harbors, about half will go to New York City. The New York Harbor needs help less than does the Missouri River; and if all this money for some years should be spent in the interior routes of water transportation instead of on the seacoast, where the great millionaires ply their trades, we would have an adjustment of railroad rates that would be worth while. For the State of Kansas and the Missouri Valley, the most tremendous lesson at hand is the statement I have just made. Then, if we could put wheat at a dollar a bushel and ship it to Liverpool for 131 cents less than we have been paying, the foundation industry of the whole American Union will be put permanently on its feet, which will redound to the business advantage of the whole country. I am not offering some plan to loan a lot of money to people already in debt, with which they can raise some other poor crops, perhaps; I am not offering any fictitious or fancy prices which nobody would want to pay or would have it to pay; but I am suggesting the practical application of a practical, sensible, plain law that will maintain a reasonable price for wheat and a reasonable price for transportation half around the world. If we can secure those two advantages for the farmers of Kansas and the Missouri Valley, prosperity will ring its bells for many years to come on the Kansas prairies. Let us get down to brass tacks, gentlemen, and have something started that is practical. can be done if we will all stand together for the interests of our Commonwealth and open up from Kansas City the path down the Missouri and the Mississippi to the sea.

The Government pays about $1 an ounce for all the silver that is brought to it. The miners get good wages and the mine owners make good money. The Government makes about 25 per cent on its investment, and you, like everybody else, are in favor of it. There is no reason why the Government should not handle its relation to the wheat business so as to practically assure the farmer of cost price for his wheat.

Congress has carried out Mr. Wilson's contracts with the railroads and given them millions of dollars with which to pay their wage earners the wages the labor unions insist upon. Why should not the farmers get equally good treatment?

Congress authorized the railroads to charge enough so they could make 5½ per cent. Why should not the farmer be able, with Government assistance, to get cost price for his wheat?

The men who did business on the seas thought it well that they should be allowed to sail across the Isthmus of Panama, and this Government spent many millions to enable them to carry on their business in that way. They are mostly foreigners. Is it possible that you think the Government ought to take care of those people and do nothing for the American wheat grower?

Every year this country spends millions to keep New York Harbor in condition for the people who do business there. Why should it not spend something to assist the farmers in carrying on their business? What is spent for all these people is a gift, but under this plan of mine the Government is not giving a nickel to any farmer nor even giving him a big price for anything.

The lobbyists for those big interests who make so many millions with Government help suggest that the transportation of grain is vested with a public interest and is for everybody, and therefore Congress should help them.

Why, for heaven's sake, is there anybody so dumb that he does not know that the producer of food is infinitely more important to the welfare of the people than is the transporter of it? If the farmer ever quit work, the rest of us would starve. There are a hundred reasons why the producers of wheat, the principal food crop, should be encouraged where there is one that all these people I have mentioned should be helped with Government money as a gift. A few generations ago private citizens carried all the world's mail. This year we voted $594,000,000 to the Government to carry the mails. Of course, every man that voted for that bill is in favor of the Government engaging in that tremendous business.

The Government has already established banks and loan systems under which it endeavors to loan money to the farmer and enable him to get into debt to raise crops that do not pay very frequently. Is it possible that you do not see that the Republic is much more engaged in business with the farmer under its banking system than it would be under this plan of mine, which would simply provide a method by which, under the laws of supply and demand, he would be able to get about cost for his wheat, and probably without the Government being compelled to buy any wheat, just as the gold reserve protects the currency? It is said the worst feature against the agriculturist is the combination for profiteering, the lack of railroad accommodations, and the high raises he the lack of railroad accommodations, and the high rates he is obliged to meet. If my bill becomes a law, the Secretary will be able to break up every corner on wheat at any moment and will terminate that.

I earnestly deplore the disposition to join in sarcasm about the "dear farmer." The lobbyists for the big millionaire interests here get great amusement out of ridiculing those from the West who want the farmer to be considered. I think the people who engage in it ought to be ashamed of themselves. The very people who come here and worry Congress to death to get millions originated this.

I am glad to have the views anybody cares to present, so that I can understand how this bill appeals to different minds. Up to the present time it has had three hearings before the Agricultural Committee and two in Congress on the floor, and nobody has yet been able to suggest any change in it that ought to be made. Those who are in favor of subsidizing the ships and the railroads and the Panama Canal and the silver mines and the rainbatts and the rainbatt and the silver limbes and other interests are, of course, opposed to anything that we may offer to help the farmer, but I do not know of anybody else that is opposed to the bill, except the men who want their Government to go into business to help them. Why should a Kansas farmer follow the lead of the lobbyists of the big interests here?

Under the bill to stabilize the price of wheat, $30,000,000 is appropriated for the Secretary of Agriculture. He will go to the farmer's home town and buy wheat there of such grades and qualities as he desires at the local market price, not to exceed $1.10 per bushel, except that if wheat gets below $1, he may, if he sees fit, pay $1 per bushel to stabilize the price of wheat at least at $1 per bushel to the farmer. The wheat buyers at under $1.10 will buy such wheat as the market desires and wishes. The Secretary will thus merely absorb the immediate surplus of each day, and whenever the wheat buyers determine that the Secretary has absorbed the surplus at $1.10 or below, they will shoot the price up to $1.11, and the Secretary will retire from the market with wheat bought at low prices. He will store his wheat in elevators on warehouse receipts, where it will never deteriorate, and will be held at a small cost, thus having assisted the farmer to get a price above $1.10.

While he does not go into the wheat business like other traders, he can from time to time proceed to sell wheat and take a profit, but at not less than the prices at Minneapolis, Buffalo, and Kansas City, Kans., the great milling towns, and at New York and Chicago. If wheat, as would be natural, should go up above $1.11, the Secretary can always throw some wheat into the market, not to interfere with the market prices, and take a profit from time to time, so that the business would be self-sustaining, though he would never interfere with the orderly course of trade. If wheat could not be bought at $1.85 in New York or Chicago, which would indicate a scarcity or a gambler's pyramid, he is directed to begin selling his reserve supply either at the market price, taking a profit, or at a price that would knock the blocks out from under the pyramided price and put a stop to the gambling, and would give bread to the city people at a proper price.

If the facts drawn from the gold reserve protection of the currency, with a reserve much smaller in amount than the currency, protects the currency, so that nobody wants the gold, so this system will maintain the price of wheat at $1, when people know that the Government is prepared to pay $1, the ma-chinery of this plan would cease to be needed to any very great The Government should, however, maintain a sufficient reserve to break up wheat gambling and its high prices and to protect the consumers' market. Thus by application of the ordinary rules of supply and demand and the orderly course of trade, the farmer will know that he can have $1 a bushel when

When the Secretary of Agriculture invests his $30,000,000, he will have something over 25,000,000 bushels of wheat. Under this bill he will be authorized on the security of that 25,000,000 bushels to receive Treasury certificates sufficient to buy the next 25,000,000. That money will be paid from the proceeds of the sale of the first 25,000,000 bushels, and so on indefinitely, and this money might easily run up to $100,000,000, which is in effect the gold reserve of this system, because it notifies everybody that the Government can maintain its purchase of wheat at $1 as far as anybody wants to go. This system finances itself after it is first started and would not need any additional funds from Congress at any time. When the Government has thus definitely notified the people that it will pay a price of $1 for wheat, the farmer will know that he is going to get practically cost, at least, and the wheat crop will be stabilized forever. The gamblers' corner will be busted, as they can not corner wheat and shoot it up to extravagant prices with the Government reserve facing them-all bought below $1.10. It would be impossible that there should be a scarcity of flour when the Government maintains a wheat reserve of 50,000,000 bushels, and at the other end the farmer would know that his wheat had a market value that assured him of at least getting his money back.

The plan represented in this bill is entirely new in every respect and has never been even suggested before by anybody as far as we can learn. If the bill becomes a law the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to buy wheat at the farmer's home town and to pay $1 a bushel whenever wheat is below that price, and to pay from $1 to $1.10 per bushel wherever and whenever that is the market price. No expensive force would be required, because one agent at a central place like Kansas City can buy wheat for hundreds of miles in any direction any morning by wire.

The bill authorizes the appropriation of $30,000,000 for that purpose. A further fund is secured by the fact that whenever the department accumulates a considerable quantity of wheat the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to advance to the Secretary of Agriculture Treasury certificates which can be used to buy more wheat and are secured by the storage on hand at the moment issued. As fast as that wheat on hand is disposed of it must be expended to discharge the Treasury certificate indebt-Thus a fund of almost unbounded limits is practically at hand for the continued purchase of wheat, without any further appropriation from the taxpayer, and a method is devised which discharges those debts almost as fast as they accumulate. It thus is evident that the ability of the department to buy wheat at $1 a bushel indefinitely is absolutely certain, and whenever people have learned that the Secretary of Agriculture will always be ready to pay $1 a bushel for wheat at a man's home town, nobody will sell wheat for less and nobody will endeavor to buy wheat for less. The probability is that the first season the Secretary should expend his $30,000,000 and put the proposition right on its feet, and make it clear at once that it can be done and will be done. From that time on every farmer can always be assured of what is practically at least cost for his wheat.

There is no real chance that the Government can lose any money, because it will always have either the money or the wheat on hand and it buys at under $1.10, and it would very infrequently happen that the Government could not hold the wheat at least long enough to get its money back, and it undoubtedly would be practically certain that year by year the Government would sell most of its wheat at a profit and that the transaction would be a paying one in any event

The menace to the wheat producer of the surplus has been grossly exaggerated. Every year a certain amount of wheat is produced, consumed, and exported, and a certain amount is carried over. There will always be wheat produced, consumed, exported, and carried over. The wheat absorbed by the consumer and the exporter is wholly disposed of, so far as the plans of this bill are concerned. The consumer and exporter need that wheat and they will pay for it whatever they must. Washington will fix, in the final analysis, what they will be required to pay, and if they want it they will have to pay it, and that will be at least $1 a bushel.

In the season of 1922, 78,000,000 bushels was carried over, and for many years it has varied from 43,000,000 in 1909-10, and 85,000,000 in 1910-11, and 17,000,000 in 1918-19, and 163,-000,000 in 1916-17, and 136,000,000 in 1900-1901, and so on, to 78,000,000 in 1922-23. When the exporters and the consumers have taken what they must have, the carry over is the only surplus that remains with which the Secretary of Agriculture must contend, and the only one that, in the last analysis, it could possibly become necessary that he absorb. Of the carry over, most of it is carried over by people who want to carry it over and would not sell to the Government or anybody else, except at the price they wanted. In 1922-23 there were 28,-000,000 bushels in the country in mills and elevators, leaving 50,000,000 bushels still remaining, of which 18,000,000 were the commercial visible supply and 32,000,000 were in the farmers' hands. As the farmer each year sows 75,000,000 bushels, a good share of it in the spring, it is evident that this surplus is largely imaginary, as shown by the course of the years culminating in As a matter of fact, in order to maintain any wheat reserve, which he must pay at less than $1.11, the Secretary will have to handle his business with considerable care. Nobody ever burns or sinks any wheat and all wheat is consumed in some way, even the carry over every year, which is just as much a necessity of the market as is the wheat that is used for other purposes. It is not at all necessary that the Government should absorb very much wheat, even in the final analysis. The problem would really be whether the Secretary could get enough wheat to maintain a wheat reserve sufficient to meet the wheat corners and gamblers and the lack of wheat in the dead years.

The Government statistics show how much wheat has been exported in recent years, including wheat manufactured into flour in this country and then exported, as follows: In 1921, 366,000,000 bushels (200,000,000 of which was wheat not manufactured into flour); in 1920, 219,000,000 bushels (including 218,000,000 not manufactured); in 1919, 287,000,000 bushels (including 148,000,000 not manufactured). The statistics further show that in the following years, referring to the total of wheat and wheat manufactured into flour, the United States exported in 1918 133,000,000 bushels; in 1917, 203,000,000; in 1916, 243,000,000; in 1915, 332,000,000; in 1914, 145,000,000.

From this you can see what wheat the rest of the world has bought from us during the years since Russia was exporting. The figures during the years of the war were somewhat influenced by the war, of course; but it is evident that, at least until Russia reappears as a competitor, from 150,000,000 to 300,000,000 bushels of wheat will be bought in this country by the rest of the world. It is obvious that the world will to that extent purchase wheat in this country at the price necessary to get it until Russia reappears. The wheat that the rest of the world must have from us is no part of the surplus, and it is something that the Government will not be compelled to absorb or purchase under this legislation proposed.

Referring to the years when Russia was a competitor with us in the world's wheat market, we find that we exported, including the manufactured wheat, in 1913, 142,000,000 bushels: in 1912, 79,000,000; in 1911, 69,000,000. The average wheat exported per annum in the years from 1906 to 1910, inclusive, was 121,000,000 bushels; 1901 to 1905, inclusive, 163,000,000; 1896 to 1900, inclusive, 179,000,000; 1891 to 1895, 166,000,000; 1881 to 1890, 126,000,000; 1871 to 1880, 86,000,000; and 1867 to

1870, 30,000,000,

In these latter years the home consumption of wheat in the United States has of course greatly and gradually increased, so that, relatively speaking, a smaller proportion of our wheat can be exported probably. On the other hand, the world is gradu-ally using more wheat all the time and the foreign demand will be bigger on us until Russia comes in, and the demand of course will be greater then on the whole; so that it must be necessarily conceded that when Russia gets in, if it ever does, there will always be a very large demand from abroad on the United States for a great amount of wheat, which it must necessarily Therefore, our exports will run from 150,000,000 bushels upward for a long time to come. All the wheat thus experted will go abroad, because they need it, and it is just as certain to be purchased as is the home consumption to be maintained as it has been. That is to say, the Secretary of Agriculture will never be asked to absorb that wheat any more than he will the wheat consumed at home.

There remains the carry over. Practically all of that is carried over by people who carry it over because they want to and would not sell to the Government anyway; so that the actual surplus at the end of each year under ordinary conditions, and not made by some artificial stimulant, could hardly run over 50,000,000 bushels a year in any event; and it is not at all certain the Government could buy 10,000,000 bushels if it wanted to, unless some artificial stimulant had been promised them a year ahead in the way of an artificial price. The menace of the surplus against this bill would be practically nominal.

This bill was before the committee and has been before the Congress for weeks. Nobody yet has found a flaw in it. It is true it is new and original and was never suggested before; but if there was any hole in it, they would have sunk our ship long since and put the bill into the discard; but the report from the Committee on Agriculture in its favor was unanimous, and I leave it with the country for the summer in the hope that by next December people may get its full value and it may become a law and redound to the assistance of the farmers and their communities and all the people.

WESTERN JUDICIAL DISTRICT OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Conseat was the bill (H. R. 7851) to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to provide for the appointment of a district judge, district attorney, and marshal for the western district of South Carolina, and for other purposes,' proved September 1, 1916, so as to provide for the terms of the district court to be held at Spartanburg, S. C.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, what advantage will be gained to the public by establishing a session of the court at Spartanburg?

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, Spartanburg is the most important railroad center in the entire western judicial district of South Carolina. It is a long story and goes back into considerable political history as to why there has not been a term of Federal court at that place. Seven important railroad lines radiate from that point. It has ample hotel facilities, and the committee finds and the Department of Justice reports that it will be in the interest of economy to this Government, because it is in the center of population. It saves mileage and per diem for jurors and witnesses. The splendid hotel facilities will be an accommodation to the court officials, to the judge and the clerk and all other officials, and it is in the interest of justice and economy that this city should at last have a term of the Federal court.

Mr. STAFFORD. As I understand, South Carolina has two districts?

Mr. McSWAIN. Two-the eastern and western.

Mr. STAFFORD. The judge is not very much burdened with work?

Mr. McSWAIN. He is very much burdened with work, indeed, and this will save time.

Mr. STAFFORD. In view of the fact the Attorney General has pointed out the importance of Spartanburg, I will not object, but I question very much the real necessity of it. Mr. McSWAIN. I am glad the gentleman will not object. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Chair hears none.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 5 of an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to provide for the appointment of a district judge, district attorney, and marshal for the western district of South Carolina, and for other purposes," approved September 1, 1919, be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 5. That the terms of the district court for the eastern district shall be held at Charleston on the first Tuesday in June and December; at Columbia, on the third Tuesday in January and first Tuesday in November; at Florence, first Tuesday in March; and at Alken, on the first Tuesday in April and October.

"Terms of the district court of the western district shall be held at Greenville on the first Tuesday in April and the first Tuesday in October: at Bock Hill, the second Tuesday in March and September; at Greenwood, the first Tuesday in February and November; at Anderson, the fourth Tuesday in May and November; and at Spartanburg, on the third Tuesday in February and second Tuesday in December.

"The office of the clerks of the district court for the western district shall be at Greenville, and the office of the clerk of the district court for the western district for the eastern district shall be at Charleston."

The committee amendment was read, as follows:

Page 1, line 7, after the word "amended," insert after the words "fourth Tuesday in May and November" the words "and at Spartanburg, on the third Tuesday in February and second Tuesday in December."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read the third time, was read the third time, and passed.

REINSTATEMENT OF WARRANT OFFICERS, ARMY MINE PLANTER SERVICE.

The next business on the Unanimous Consent Calendar was the bill (H. R. 13772) to authorize the Secretary of War to reappoint and immediately discharge or retire certain warrant officers of the Army mine planter service.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, the committee has not gone to the extent the department recommended that they should go in reinstating these warrant officers connected with the Army mine planter service. This is the aftermath of some of the economies brought about last year by the Subcommittee on War Department Appropriations, when we sought to cut down the commissioned officer personnel and the noncommissioned officer personnel so far as warrant officers are As far as I can ascertain from the reading of the concerned. report and the letter of the Secretary of War, it seeks to reinstate some 20 or more who had about two years' service in the Army, men largely engaged in civilian capacity as engineers or mates and the like. Now, what claim have they on the Government after two years' service to be placed on a permanent roll and be ultimately pensioned on three-quarters pay?

Mr. BLAND of Virginia. If the gentleman will yield, a majority of these men who are sought to be reinstated came into the Army mine planter service from the military and naval service, where they had an accruing right of retirement. They came into the Army mine planter service with the distinct provision in the law that they should be entitled to a right of retirement. When the appropriation bill went into effect 32 men were reduced or cut off from the Army, and those men who had an accruing right of retirement were absolutely kicked out without any regard to their accruing right of retirement. Some of those men had accruing service that would have entitled them to retirement in a few years.

Mr. STAFFORD. How many would have been entitled to retired pay?

Mr. BLAND of Virginia. I think there are about six or seven, possibly, who would have been entitled to retirement in a few years. Others had longer years to serve. Now, the Secretary of War recommends those men be restored to service. The object of this bill is not to retire them now. The committee amended the bill so as to put them in service-

Mr. McKENZIE. On their application? Mr. BLAND of Virginia. That is true, only those who make application to be reinstated.

Mr. ANTHONY. If the gentleman will yield. Has the gentleman found there is any real military need for these men after restored to duty? They would be surplus men and they would have no use for them.

Mr. BLAND of Virginia. The Secretary of War, in his letter to the committee, says that if reinstated these warrant officers could be advantageously used on vessels of the Quartermaster Corps in place of civilian masters, mates, and engineers. He further says:

It is believed that these discharged warrant officers, Army Mine Planter Service, have real ground for feeling that their summary discharge was an unnecessary hardship and in violation of the implied terms of their appointment. Their reinstatement would be an act of justice, and they have more claims to permanence of employment than civilian masters, mates, and engineers whom they would replace on vessels of the Quartermaster Corps.

The bill as amended by the committee and as it came before the committee on that amendment is in the language of the amendment suggested by the Secretary of War.

Mr. ANTHONY. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, it is my impression that there were about 80 of these warrant officers in the mine-planter service at the time of the reduction. Congress reduced the number to 40 to be employed in this It was stated to the committee that in carrying out the reduction the men with the least number of years of service would be the first discharged and the men with the longest periods of service would remain. Now, I can not see where these warrant officers who were discharged—mostly men com-missioned during the war, most of them with little or no military service before the war and with but two or three years' service during or since the war-have any right whatever to claim retirement at three-quarters pay of their grade; and that is what it will mean eventually if these men are restored. The effect of restoring them to duty would simply be to burden the Army with an additional number of unnecessary warrant officers and burden the Public Treasury with their pay.

Mr. FIELDS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. ANTHONY. Yes. Mr. FIELDS. I happen to know that one of these men had 21 years' service.

Mr. ANTHONY. Then the War Department should not have discharged him. They should have retained him in the service among the 40 that were retained. I think the remedy is to bring in specific legislation to take care of any individual with especially long or meritorious service.

Mr. FIELDS. Some of them had 10 years' service. Mr. ANTHONY. Yes. But certainly those of short service should not be reinstated.

Mr. McKENZIE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman vield?

Mr. ANTHONY. Yes.

Is it not true that in the amendment to the Mr. McKENZIE. appropriation bill submitted by the subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations, providing for the reduction of the commissioned personnel of the Army, they provided that in every other branch of the service except the Mine Planter Service an officer with 10 years' service would be discharged with one year's pay; and if he had more than 10 years' service, he would be retired with 3 per cent additional for the number of years he had been in the service? We simply provide in this bill that on their own application they may be reinstated and work for the Government in a position other than in the Mine Planter Service, where we now hire civilians.

Mr. ANTHONY. The gentleman knows that most of these men were civil employees, assistant engineers, or mates on harbor boats when they were invested with the dignity of warrant officers during the war. If the gentleman wants to reinstate these men and put them on the retired list, he ought also to put every civil employee similarly situated on the retired list.

Mr. McKENZIE. Will this cost the Government any money?

Mr. ANTHONY. It depends on whether the Government needs their services or not. It is not shown that the Government needs their services.

Mr. BLAND of Virginia. I have a statement furnished me from the War Department to the effect that 22 of the 32 men involved in this bill came from the Army-that is, they had prior service in the Army before they went into the Mine Planter Service—and 5 of them were from the Navy. So that 27 of these men had prior service, military or naval service.

The bill creating the Army Mine Planter Service provided that they should have retirement, and in the bill that was passed by the House, the appropriation bill which provided for their elimination, every other officer who was eliminated was taken care of except the warrant officers in the Army Mine Planter Service

Mr. ANTHONY. The most we did for the commissioned officer with 10 years' service when he was displaced was to give him a year's pay. Does the gentleman think these men should be given more than a year's pay?

Mr. BLAND of Virginia. Some of them should.

Mr. ANTHONY. I think the Government has the absolute right to discharge surplus officials whenever they are unneces-

Mr. BLAND of Virginia. When it invites them into the service on the understanding that they shall be retired? Does not the Government hold out that offer to these officers?

Mr. ANTHONY. The law provides that they can be retired only by reason of disability or after 30 years' service.

Mr. BLAND of Virginia. The act provides that they shall have retirement.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Speaker, will the Mine Planter Mr. ANTHONY. Yes, Mr. TILSON. How did these men get into the Mine Planter Service from the Navy?

They came in when the Mine Mr. BLAND of Virginia. The military forces had great Planter Service was created. trouble in getting warrant officers, and this inducement was held out to them that they would get retirement pay. The testimony taken before the committee was to the effect that these men would not have come in without the promise of They would have remained in the military or naval retirement. branches of the service, where they would have their accruing right of retirement.

Mr. ANTHONY. I object, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Kansas objects. The Clerk will report the next bill.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE RED RIVER.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (S. 4235) granting consent of Congress to the Charlie Bridge Co. for construction of a bridge across Red River between Clay County, Tex., and Cotton County, Okla.

The title of the bill was read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the Charlie Bridge Co. to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Red River at a point suitable to the interests of navigation between Clay County, Tex., and Cotton County, Okla., in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the third reading of the Senate bill.

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next bill.

GRANT ROAD, IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 18237) authorizing the closing of certain portions of Grant Road, in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes

The title of the bill was read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. CRAMTON. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, section 2 of this bill is disapproved by the authorities of the District. It has several very undesirable features. I shall be obliged to object unless section 2 is eliminated.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It would be in order to strike out section 2 in the consideration of the bill.

Mr. CRAMTON. Will that be agreeable to the gentleman in charge of the bill, and will it stay out if it is taken out here? If not, I will object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Michigan objects. The Clerk will report the next bill.

TERMS OF COURT AT PAULS VALLEY, OKLA.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 6376) to amend the act establishing the eastern judicial district of Oklahoma.

The title of the bill was read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of this bill?

Mr. CRAMTON. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, that bill is one in which the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. CARTER Is interested. This afternoon occurs the wedding of the daughter of the gentleman from Oklahoma, and naturally he is not able to be present here this afternoon; and because of his absence I object.

Mr. SWANK. Will the gentleman reserve his objection?
Mr. CRAMTON. I have no objection to reserving it.
Mr. SWANK. The gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. CARTER] spoke to me a few minutes ago about this. He has three Federal court towns in his district. This provides for a court at Pauls Valley, Okla. They have a $150,000 courthouse there that they will furnish the Government for nothing. I would be glad if the gentleman would not object. Mr. CRAMTON. The gentleman realizes that I am not familiar with the conditions. The gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. CARTER] is interested, and I have a great deal of confidence that he would have good reasons for his objection, and I am obliged to object.

Mr. SWANK. Has the gentleman any objection to the bill retaining its place on the calendar?

Mr. CRAMTON. I have not.

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill may retain its place on the calendar.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Oklahoma asks unanimous consent that the bill may retain its place on the calendar. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

TRANSPORTING COMMITTEE OF FOURTH OHIO INFANTRY TO PORTO RICO.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 442) to authorize the transportation to Porto Rico of a committee representing the Fourth Ohio Infantry, war with Spain.

The Clerk read the title to the resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. STAFFORD. Reserving the right to object, I wish to inquire whether there is any instance where the Government has allowed its utilities to be used gratuitously for transportation purposes as proposed in the resolution submitted for objection or consideration.

Mr. McKENZIE. I wish to say to the gentleman that I can not answer that question. I can simply give him our reason for reporting this resolution. It involves the officers of the Fourth Ohio Infantry who took part in the Spanish-American War. They want to go to Porto Rico to put a marker there. There may not be any precedent for it, but it seems to me it is a matter that we should not quibble about.

Mr. CRAMTON. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. McKENZIE. Yes.

Mr. CRAMTON. It is my recollection that at the time of the last Olympian games at Antwerp such a provision was put into the law, and contestants went over to the number of one or two hundred on a Government transport under a similar provision.

Mr. TOWNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STAFFORD. I will gladly yield to the future distinguished Governor of Porto Rico, whom we are all, I know, very happy to have been honored with such a distinguished appointment. [Applause.] If I may be allowed, we wish him

Godspeed in his work in his new honorable position.

Mr. TOWNER. Mr. Speaker, I only want to make this state-It would be difficult to find a precedent for it. ment. Fourth Ohio Infantry captured the town of Guyama, in Porto Rico, during the Spanish-American War. This is the twenty-fifth anniversary of that event. The survivors of this regiment desire to send a small party to Porto Rico and also allow them to go on a transport without any additional expense to the Govern-They desire that for two reasons: First, that it would give their visit a significance that they could not acquire by reason of going on some other vessel at their own expense. It will not cost the Government anything, and it will be an act of courtesy, especially to the regiment, and especially also to the people of Porto Rico, who will gladly receive them and join with them in the memorial exercises.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, as a courtesy to the future Governor of Porto Rico, I withdraw my reservation of an objec-

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, there is an additional reason why the resolution should be passed. By the time his visit is made our colleague, our friend from Iowa, will be in Porto Rico as the governor of that beautiful island, and we desire that an opportunity shall be offered these gentlemen to visit Porto Rico at the time he is there and see how splendidly he is maintaining the prestige of the Nation and adding to the glory and prosperity of Porto Rico. [Applause.]

Mr. DAVILA. Mr. Speaker, I am proud of my ancestry and my Spanish blood, but, without any reflection on the Spanish people, whom I love and admire, I want to say that the day the American flag was raised in Porto Rico we began to live a new and prosperous life. [Applause.] Now, it is nat-ural that we want to have an opportunity to extend our courtesies to these soldiers who fought for America and to pay our tribute to those who died during the service in the Spanish-American War. The people of Porto Rico have instructed me to invite the soldiers to go to the island, and we are going to do something for them. They will be welcome as our guests. [Applause.] I hope this resolution will pass.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for three minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, it has been my privilege for many years to serve on the Committee on Insular Affairs with the distinguished gentleman from Iowa, Judge Towner. Of course, I do not know just why the judge is willing to retire from the House of Representatives to accept the burdens and responsibilities of the position of Governor of Porto Rico, but since he is willing so to do, I think the people of Porto Rico are to be congratulated; and certainly those of us who have had the opportunity of intimate service with him upon the committee who are aware of the knowledge he pos-sesses of all of the details of insular problems are also aware of the fact that he will meet those responsibilities and dis-charge those duties fairly, honestly, with credit to himself, with credit to his country, and we hope with entire satisfac-tion to the people whose governor general he is to be. [Applause.] My own opinion is that the President made a very wise choice, and as a member of the minority on the Committee on Insular Affairs I wish to express to the honorable gentleman from Iowa congratulations, good wishes, hopes for his success in the responsibilities that he has to discharge, and to him and to his good wife all good things now and forever.

Mr. DAVILA. Mr. Speaker, if I may be permitted just a moment, I desire to read the following cablegram which I have received from the president of the Porto Rican Senate:

SAN JUAN, P. R., February 28, 1923.

Judge Córdova Dávilla, Resident Commissioner from Porto Rico, Washington, D. C.:

People of Porta Rico received with great enthusiasm the appointment TOWNER. Please so inform President Harding and Judge TOWNER himself.

BARCELO.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the joint

The Clerk read the House joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That if accommodations on public transports are available, the Secretary of War is authorized to provide, without expense to the United States, transportation from the United States to Porto Rico of a committee composed of members of the Fourth Ohio Infantry, war with Spain, for the purpose of placing a memorial tablet in the city of Guyama commemorating the twenty-fifth anniversary of the capture of that place and in honor of the American soldiers who died during their service in Porto Rico.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the engross-ment and third reading of the House joint resolution.

The House joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

PROCEEDINGS IN CONTESTED ELECTIONS.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 14224) to determine proceedings in contested elections of Members of the House of Representatives.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HICKS). Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee, Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, this is a bill of very great importance and very far-reaching in its aspects.

Mr. DALLINGER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman reserve

his objection?

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. I reserve the objection.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a constitutional question, and make the point of order that we have no quorum

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas makes the point of order that there is no quorum present. Chair will count. [After counting.] Two hundred and sixteen Members present, a quorum.

Mr. DALLINGER. Mr. Speaker, this bill has the unanimous report of the Committee on Elections No. 1, and it is the result of eight years' experience with contested election cases in the House of Representatives. For a long time there has been a great deal of criticism throughout the country in regard to the delay in the settlement of these election contests, and still more criticism of the fact that when the contest is decided in favor of the contestant, in some cases two persons from the same district draw almost two years' salary, together with mileage, stutionery allowance, and other perquisites that go with the office. Under the present law, if both the contestant and the contestee take all of the time that the statute allows, and the Committee on Elections to which the case is referred gives it careful consideration, it is a year and a half after the election before the case can be called up upon the floor of the House. Over, it frequently happens that where a committee has several cases referred to it, without any dilatoriness upon the part of the committee, it is almost two years before the case can be decided in the House.

Mr. McARTHUR. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?
Mr. DALLINGER. Yes.
Mr. McARTHUR. Does this bill propose a quicker report?
Mr. DALLINGER. Mr. Speaker, this bill proposes that these cases shall be tried in the first instance in the Federal courts in a way that will greatly expedite their consideration. say in passing that in 1868, over half a century ago, the British Parliament passed an act providing for the trying of all contested-election cases in the courts, and under the English statute the House of Commons is not even given the right of The court simply certifies to the Speaker of the House the finding of the court. We can not, of course, do that in this country, because our written Constitution makes each House "the judge of the elections, returns, and qualifications of its own Members," but there is nothing whatever to prevent Congress providing by statute that in the first instance these heard and decided expeditiously and strictly upon their merits without regard to personal or partisan considerations. If this bill is enacted, the finding of the court, together with an abstract of the testimony in narrative form, will be here in the hands of the Clerk of the House in the case of every contest when the new Congress convenes. The cases can then be re-ferred to one of the Committees on Elections, and we can rest assured that in nine cases out of ten the committees will speedily report in accord with the finding that the Federal court

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, there is no question but that this bill has in it much food for thought. Everyone must realize that the bill would not have any opportunity of consideration in the other branch of the Congress at the present session. The gentleman is fortunately coming back in the next Congress and he will have many days then when he can bring this subject up.

RELIEF OF CERTAIN NAVAL RESERVE OFFICERS.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 10268) to provide for the relief of certain officers of the Naval Reserve Force, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. Mr. McARTHUR. Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this legisla-Mr. McARTHUR. Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this legisla-tion is for the relief of certain officers of the reserve force who have been disenrolled and to those who were released from active duty, but who did not begin travel to their homes within the period of four days after their release. At the close of the war, when these reserve officers, or some of them, were ordered home they were disenrolled and then told to proceed to their homes. The comptroller has decided in a decision rendered on October 7, 1919, that those officers were not entitled to mileage because they had been disenrolled; that that put them out of the service, and that it was the same as ordering civilians to proceed to their homes. It was held that there was no authority for such orders, and that, therefore, they were not entitled to mileage. In some cases the officers were actually paid the mileage, but in some cases they were never paid. That is why the decision came to be made by the comptroller, because when he found that they were being paid this mileage he decided against their getting mileage, and the pay officers who had paid the mileage, of course, had their accounts held up. Then the department issued orders to reserve officers detaching them from active duty and ordering them to their homes at their option. It seems to me this bill does nothing more than correct a very grave injustice that has been done to a lot of excellent men who wore our uniform during the World War, men of the Naval Reserve Force. They have been denied their pay on account of a ruling of the comptroller, and if justice is going to be done these men and also men in the Paymaster Corps of the Navy who have technically made erroneous payment to these officers because they did not proceed immediately to their homes

Mr. STAFFORD. If the gentleman will yield. Many of these officers of the Naval Reserve Corps took leave of absence and went on vacation for six months before they attempted to return to their homes. That practice is not indulged in in the Army of allowing the men any such right under those circumstances. Here we have a law which gives members of the Naval Reserve Force mileage if they will begin their travel within a time limit under naval regulations. Of course, there are any number of men upon their discharge from the service who would like to have a holiday of a few months and have Uncle Sam come and pay for their transportation home after the vacation. We find the law is this:

Since under the act of August 29, 1916 (39 Stat. 588), the right of officers of the Naval Reserve Force to the pay and allowances of officers of the regular Navy is expressly dependent upon a status of active duty in the Navy, no right to mileage accrues separate and apart from such active-duty status, and officers of the Naval Reserve Force detached from active duty and ordered to their homes, and who in proceeding home delay beyond the period authorized by naval regulations, are not entitled to mileage in subsequently performing the travel, their active-duty status having been terminated as of the date of detachment, (Decision of Comptroller of the Treasury dated February 9, 1920, 26 Comp. Dec. 639.)

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. I object. Mr. McARTHUR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks on this bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? [After a cases shall be tried out in the Federal courts, where they will be I pause. 1 The Chair hears none.

AUTHORIZING THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA TO BRING SUIT AGAINST THE UNITED STATES.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (S. 3892) authorizing the State of California to bring suit against the United States to determine title to certain lands in Siskiyou County, Calif.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, this report is not very illuminating and does not differ from other reports which the Committee on the Judiciary make. I can understand why perhaps in the closing days of the Congress the clerk to the committee had only time to write a report of only five lines. That would be sufficient warrant to object, but in view of the fact that the gentleman from California, my dear friend, is interested in the bill, I reserve the right to object.

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Speaker, the State of California was granted swamp lands under the swamp land act of Congress. The State of California ceded this land to the Government on February 3, 1905 (California Statutes, 1905, p. 4), for reclamation purposes, and the Federal Government accepted it on February 9, 1905 (33 Stat. 714), for reclamation purposes. The land had been drained. Congress passed an act directing the land to be surveyed and to be opened for homestead settlement for soldiers of the late war. That is the status of it. Now the State of California comes in, by an act of the legislature last year, directing the attorney general to commence action. The State of California claims the land; the Federal Government claims the land. I have taken up the matter with the Department of the Interior and with the Reclamation Service, and they tell me this is the only fair way of disposing of it, and let the court adjudicate the legal questions involved. The sooner it is done the better for all concerned.

Mr. STAFFORD. Will the gentleman permit? I remember some years back, before one of those regular interregnums occurred in my service in this House, that the gentleman was endeavoring to get through the House a bill granting some persons preferred rights to entry; and, if I am not mistaken, it was on this land.

Mr. RAKER. Yes, we did; and the World War came on and that was the first time when the land was authorized to be opened to ex-service men. It gave them the preference right of entry.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, the statement that has been made does not cover the situation as it has been explained to us.

Mr. STAFFORD. I would be very glad to have the gentleman from Minnesota give the explanation made to him.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Here is the situation: The Legislature of California undertook to grant to the United States a certain right in swamp land granted to the State of California. Now, in the grant there was a provision that the land uncovered by certain drainage proceedings should go to the United States Government. The State of California contends that the land that was granted was inside the meander line of the lake that was to be drained, but the United States Government claims it did not only cover the land in the basin of the lake but also land that was drained by reason of this reclamation. Here is the situation: The Government has drained and permitted entries upon this land that adjoins the margin of the lake. As a consequence there is a dispute between the United States Government and the State of California, and it is very important, it seems to me, to allow that matter to be determined in one suit. Under the law, of course, they can allow entries to go to patent. Then each entryman would have to face a suit to set aside that patent. It is not fair to allow people to go on these lands on the assumption that the Government can protect them, because it may turn out, as the courts of California have held, that the land does belong to Califora. It ought all to be determined in one suit, Mr. STAFFORD. The bill which the gentleman from California was so much interested in during the war Congress I was opposed to and other Members were. I believe it did not have merit. But I concede that the rights of California and of the Federal Government should be determined, and I withdraw my reservation of an objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The reservation of an objection is withdrawn. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That consent is hereby given that a suit or suits may be instituted by or in behalf of the State of California in the Supreme Court of the United States to determine the right, title, and interest of such State to certain lands in Siskiyou County, Calif., alleged to have been ceded by such State to the United States by act of the Legislature of the State of California entitled "An act authorizing the United States Government to lower the water levels of any or all of the following lakes: Lower or Little Klamath Lake, Tule or Rhett Lake, Goose Lake, and Clear Lake, situated in Siskiyou and Modoc Counties, and to use any part or all of the beds of said lakes for the storage of water in connection with the irrigation and reclamation operations conducted by the Reclamation Service of the United States; also ceding to the United States all the right, title, interest, or claim of the State of California to any lands uncovered by the lowering of the water levels of any or all of said lakes not already disposed of by the State," approved February 8, 1905, and in any such suit the right, title, and interest of such State and of the United States may be fully tested and determined if the Secretary of the Interior is made a party to such suit.

Upon the request of such Secretary the Attorney General of the United States is authorized and directed to defend the right, title, and interest of the United States to such land or any part thereof.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the third

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the third reading of the Senate bill.

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

FARM CREDITS BILL.

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill S. 4280, the farmers' credit bill, disagree to the Senate amendment and agree to the conference asked for by the Senate.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania moves to take from the Speaker's table the bill S. 4280, disagree to the Senate amendment, and agree to the conference asked for by the Senate. Is there objection?

There was no objection; and the Speaker pro tempore announced as the conferees on the part of the House Mr. Mc-FADDEN, Mr. DALE, Mr. A. P. NELSON, Mr. WINGO, and Mr. STEAGALL.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. FOSTER, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the bill H. R. 12123.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio to extend his remarks in the manner indicated?

There was no objection.

UNITED STATES INDUSTRIAL REPORMATORY,

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Speaker, this bill (H. R. 12123) was prepared under the supervision of the Superintendent of Prisons of the United States. It was approved by the Department of Justice. It has the unanimous indorsement of the American Prison Association. Each approves it both as to the principle of the reformatory and its location at Camp Grant. President Harding, in a letter to the chairman of the Judiciary Committee, a copy of which is attached to the report, approves the bill both as to its principle and its location, and calls attention to the fact that the three Federal prisons are already overpopulated by more than 600 and if relief is to be had the project must of necessity be authorized by the present Congress

The Judiciary Committee held exhaustive hearings during November and December. If the entire membership of the House were to read the hearings before the Judiciary Committee, it is my judgment that there would not be 10 votes against either the creation of the reformatory or its location

Among those who testified in behalf of the bill were Assistant Attorney General Holland, Assistant Attorney General Crim, who has charge of the Criminal Division of the Department of Justice, Mr. H. H. Votaw, Superintendent of Prisons, Assistant Attorney General Mabel W. Willebrandt, and Mr. F. F. Duehay, trustee, National Training School for Boys, all of whom heartily approve the bill, both as to its provisions and as to the location Rockford, Ill., and they because of its location near them.

In a memorandum filed in the Department of Justice by Superintendent of Prisons Votaw appears this statement:

The records of the United States courts show that the criminal business of the United States in the last 10 years has increased 800 per cent. Due to new criminal laws which have been passed during the last three or four sessions of Congress, including the antinarcetic act, the espionage act, the auto theft act, the income tax act, and the national prohibition act, at least 60 per cent of the increase has come within the last three or four years.

Assistant Attorney General Willebrandt testified that the records show that there are more than 400,000 men going out from our penitentiaries, State and Federal, annually. tically all of the States have provided reformatories similar to the one proposed by this bill for Federal prisoners. Attorney General Crim, in charge of the Criminal Division of the Department of Justice, in testifying before the committee, said:

The greatly enlarged jurisdiction of the Federal criminal department during the past 10 years, caused by the enactment of a number of statutes which create new Federal offenses, has given us a very much greater number of prisoners than anyone dreamed of 20 years ago.

When we first began to send Federal prisoners to Atlanta, it was thought that the Atlanta prison would be adequate for a great number of years—a generation. The prison at Atlanta is now over capacity. The same is true of Leavenworth and McNeil Island.

The new statutes under which these prisoners are being sent up are giving us a very different type of prisoner from the old Federal prisoner of 20 years ago. He was a man close to middle age. He was a post-office clerk, a counterfeiter, a pretty hard-boiled individual, as prisoners went, if I may use that expression. Our average Federal prisoner to-day is of a different type. He is a much younger man; he is in his twenties, and invariably he is sent there under a statute that does not involve moral turpitude.

Moreover, we have still another type of prisoner, and that is the prisoner who is an addict. About 600 of the present occupants of the prison at Atlanta—and the percentage holds, I believe, true in the other prisons—are addicts. We have no means at Atlanta of segregating those men, giving them the care and attention that they should have.

Then, too, we have a percentage of tubercular prisoners. When I wished the prisoners are addicted to the prisoners.

gating those men, giving them the care and attention that they should have.

Then, too, we have a percentage of tubercular prisoners. When I visited the prison at Atlanta about a year ago I found that we had them in the yard of the prison, in tents, but it was utterly impossible to give those men, under the then existing circumstances and the circumstances that exist to-day, the attention that they should have and the segregation that they ought to have.

With this congestion in our prisons, with ever increasing jurisdiction, it is high time for us to take up, step by step, some scheme of handling these men; and the step before you to-day is a proposed law providing for an industrial prison to take care of the prisoners between the ages of 17 and 30, prisoners who are first offenders, and who, in the judgment of the prison officials, can be saved and released as useful citizens with some means of making a livelihood. There are a great number, a great percentage, as our parole reports show, of young men who are convicted and sent to these prisons who, on getting out or being paroled, make good; and it is to assist those individuals in a subjective way that this theory of an industrial prison is adopted, and as an example to other prisoners as well.

The conditions, if allowed to continue as they are, in a year or two will be absolutely immoral. You can not crowd men together as we have to do without haxing a very serious situation not only with respect to life but to morals as well.

Superintendent of Prisons Votaw states that this bill is modeled along the lines of the best thought of practical penologists and will effect great improvement in the penal laws of the United States. He further states that the prison laws with regard to the treatment of United States prisoners are inadequate and far behind the laws of the more advanced States. Prior to the occupancy of the Atlanta and Leavenworth prisons the United States prisoners were confined in the penal institutions of the various States and were subjected to the same treatment and disciplined as State prisoners in the same institution. There were, therefore, as many as 25 different measures of treatment for the United States prisoner. When the Federal penitentiaries were constructed no consideration was given of a reformatory nature. The result is that while the United States has penitentiaries modern as to physical comforts, measures for the training and reformation are entirely inadequate. Neither are any drastic or reactionary measures contemplated. On the contrary, this bill is in harmony with the prevailing sentiment of enlightened, practical prison administrators throughout the country. It is in accord with legislation already on the statute books of our advanced States. He stated to the Judiciary Committee:

It is conceived in the spirit of the only principle of penology that is worthy of consideration—that is, to try to find out the reasons for a man's wrongdoing and endeavor to make it not worth his while to repeat it.

In an Caborate and exhaustive memorandum submitted by Mr. Votaw he presents the arguments in support of this bill:

First, (a) to meet the needs of our rapidly increasing prison population and (b) obviate the necessity of recourse to State institutions to care for the increase. Second, the desirability of the institution being a reformatory from (a) the humanitarian standpoint and (b) the practical standpoint. And third, the most logical location for its establishment with regard to (a) a center of population, (b) railway facilities, (c) farming operations, (d) economical considerations, and (e) early occupation. I wish every Member of the House would read this memorandum submitted by the superintendent of prisons.

A commission appointed by the President in 1909 to investigate penal matters reported:

gate penal matters reported:

We do not believe in taking any attitude toward the violators of law that will lead them to look upon their offenses as trivial, to look upon themselves as victims of oppression or upon governments as their debtors. But we do believe in taking a passionless, patient, and impartial attitude toward them, making it as easy as possible to do right, as difficult as possible to do wrong, and keeping always before their eyes the hope of redeeming themselves, in convincing them in every practicable way that they are still the makers of their own destiny. We believe that those who may be reasonably supposed to be reformable should be treated and employed with that end in view. We believe that for certain criminals there should be labor, long and severe. We believe that no system of dealing with the criminal classes should ever at any point lose sight of the fact that the criminal is a man. He should never be needlessly degraded, insulted, or abused. We believe that a vital and momentous point of time is when the prisoner is released and turned back upon the world, and that the law should employ all possible agencies to guard and assist him in making a new start.

It is upon this principle that the Camp Grant reformatory project is planned.

The War Department has set aside 500 acres from the Camp Grant site, near Rockford, Ill., to be used for the reformatory. Superintendent of Prisons Votaw and others made a personal and careful inspection of all camps that were available for this reformatory, and all agreed upon Camp Grant, and their reasons are set forth fully in the hearings. The chief objection, and about the only objection, urged against the Camp Grant lecation comes from some of the business men of the city of Rockford who desire to extend their factory sites onto this Govern-ment-owned land. The minority report filed by my good friend Governor YATES consists of four letters from four of these business men, and a reading of them will disclose their chief objections. The hearings show that Camp Grant is three hours' ride from Chicago, and entirely without the city limits of Rockford. Hearings were granted citizens of Rockford, and each person protesting the location of the reformatory frankly admitted the need for the reformatory. This matter resolves itself into a question of whether the interests of the Government or the interests of the city of Rockford should be paramount. Similar objections will come from any possible location. I submit that when the Secretary of War consents to the use of these 500 acres, and when the commission, under the superintendent of prisons, has inspected the available sites and recommends Camp Grant, that the protests of the manufacturing interests of one city against the use of Government-owned land located without the city limits should not be taken too seriously.

Every State prison to-day is congested, as will be shown by the hearings on page 4. A table attached to the report on this bill shows the overcrowding of all three Federal prisons. The health and morals of the prisoners are greatly impaired. It also shows that there are 1,900 first offenders between the ages of 17 and 30, of which number 600 are World War veterans.

It is contemplated that this reformatory will be constructed over a 10-year period, with an annual appropriation not to exceed $150,000. It is intended that the work shall be done by these first offenders, who are to construct their own reformatory, thereby giving them employment and removing these young men from constant association with the hardened

This is a condition, not a theory, confronting Congress. Our three prisons are overcrowded. The health of the prisoners is seriously threatened. The morals of these 1,900 young men are being constantly jeopardized. The expense is inconsiderate. while the need is urgent. The bill seeks to provide a Federal reformatory such as all modern States-such as the State of Illinois-have, in their wisdom and humanity, provided for their first offenders of tender years. I submit that the bill should be passed, both from a humanitarian standpoint as well as from a practical standpoint. It will save both money and men. It has the unanimous approval of the American Prison Asseciation, practically all of the strong and influential women's organizations, the Secretary of War, the Department of Justice, and the President of the United States. It is sound financially; it is sound socially; and I respectfully submit that it is the least the Government should do from both a common-sense and a humanitarian standpoint. This is a duty we owe not only to these unfortunate young men but it is a duty we owe to our Government and to ourselves.

Mr. LONDON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record by incorporating a letter from Mr. Samuel Untermyer, a letter containing statements in reply to accusations made by Mr. Geodykoontz, of West Virginia. I spoke with the gentleman from West Virginia, and I understood that he would oppose my request. I also spoke to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Volstead]. I am making the request in their hearing.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is heard. The Clerk will report the next bill.

JOINT COMMISSION OF GOLD AND SILVER INQUIRY.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the resolution (H. J. Res. 441) creating a joint commission, to be known as the joint commission of gold and silver inquiry, which shall consist of five Senators, to be appointed by the President of the Senate, and five Representatives, to be appointed by the Speaker.

The title of the resolution was read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this resolution?

Mr. BLACK. I object.

Mr. RAKER. Will the gentleman withhold for just a moment?

Mr. BLACK. Yes.

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Speaker, I want to say to the House that yesterday the Senate passed an identical resolution without any other than a general explanation (S. J. Res. 287, Congressional Record, p. 4867); that it went through the Senate and the resolution is now lying on the Speaker's desk. I hope the gentleman will permit the House Joint Resolution No. 441 to be laid aside and the Senate Joint Resolution 287 be taken up and passed. It is a vital matter to the mineral interests of the West. There are gentlemen here who are familiar with it. The chairman of the Committee on Mines, the gentleman from Utah [Mr. Colton], and the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. TAYLOR] and myself have a deep interest in it in the way of seeing the question of mineral interests developed. This has nothing to do with the standard of silver and gold, but simply is to make an investigation and report to the Congress the result of the development of minerals. It is for the reasons set out in the report that the resolution is desired. It should pass, and I have be gottlementally belief. and I hope no gentleman will object.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAKER.

Yes.
I have no special interest in this. Mr. BLACK. eral rule I do not favor the creation of these numerous commissions unless there is some definite aim in view. Now, why can not any committee of the Senate or of the House obtain this information?

Mr. RAKER. Under the conditions and under the strain it is impossible. There are a number of men here who are from the supposition of the report? That will satisfy all criticism.

Mr. BLACK. I have no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will read the matter indicated.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk rend as follows:

Extensive hearings were recently held by the Senate Committee on Mines and Mining on Senate Concurrent Resolution 37, which has been amended to conform to House Joint Resolution 441, and was favorably reported a few days ago.

The printed hearings show that a number of expert economists and mining men testified in support of the Senate resolution. An examination of the testimony of these witnesses shows the following state of facts to exist:

1. The annual production of gold and silver in the United States and throughout the world has been decreasing for a number of years.

2. That many of the silver mines will be compelled to close down and cease operation upon the expiration of the Pittman Act, unless something is done to improve the condition of the industry.

3. Over 80 per cent of the silver of the world is produced in North America and the major portion of it is controlled by American citizens, yet the price of our silver is arbitrarily fixed by four London brokers, controlled by the Bank of England.

4. Great Britain's control over the price and distribution of silver gives her an advantage in commerce in China and India, where the largest foreign silver market is found.

5. That our export trade is adversely affected by conditions surrounding the production, marketing, sale, and use of silver.

6. In 1919 $80,000,000 of gold went into jewelry and the fine arts in the United States, while our total production of gold for hat year was but $58,000,000, The world's production of gold in 1915 was $474,000,000, and in 1922 it was but $327,000,000.

There are so many complex questions relating to the cost of production, reduction, refining, transportation, marketing, and uses of gold and silver that your committee is of the unanimous opinion a fact-finding commission should be created and report back to Congress the result of its inquiry as soon as practicable. This legislation has no bearing upon the questions of monometalism, bimetalism, or flat money, nor does it propose a subsid

Mr. BLACK. Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that the Pittman Act expires in the near future, I will withdraw my objection.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I enter a reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. Black] withdraws his objection, and the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Stafford] reserves the right to object.

Mr. STAFFORD. In view of what has been read from the report, what advantage will be gained by the commission going around the country to explore into this question?

Mr. COLTON. I hope the gentleman will not object. I do not know that there will be any commission going around the country. I do not believe our congressional commissions often take unnecessary trips. No investigation has ever been made of the mineral situation in the United States.

We do know that there is a depressed condition in the mining industry; that many mines will have to close down, undoubt-edly will close down, at the time the Pittman Act expires. We believe that there are certain agencies operating against the profitable production of gold and silver, and that a fact-finding commission will give us the information necessary to determine the causes of the depression and threatened great injury, if not permanent crippling, of the mining industry. Surely no one would want that if it can be avoided, and I think it can be. We feel sure now that certain conditions are greatly hindering the mining business and undoubtedly the industry can be greatly stimulated.

In the first place, we believe that the freight rates are excessively high, and I believe ores are being discriminated against in freight rates. No one is in a position to give accurate information or reason for the depression of the mining industry. We hope to bring out a lot of facts that will help us to solve the problem. This is merely a fact-finding commission, such as we had investigate agriculture and other industries.

Mr. STAFFORD. Why can not that be done by the Com-mittee on Mines and Mining?

Mr. RHODES. This commission is to be appointed for the same reason that we appointed the Commission on Agricultural Inquiry. That commission consists of five Senators and five Representatives, and the same reasons which justified the appointment of that commission justify the creation of this com-

Mr. HAYDEN. Another point that is embarrassing the industry is that the smelters impose a burden on them. great smelters make undue deductions for moisture in the ore and in many other particulars, and if that could be investigated it would develop facts that would aid the industry itself.

Mr. STAFFORD. What is the estimate of the cost or expenses of this commission?

Mr. RHODES. The commission serves without pay

Mr. STAFFORD. Yes; I know. We have observed how careful some commissions are in expenditures, and with some how the extravagance goes wild. Would the gentleman object to limiting the amount to $10,0007

Mr. RHODES. That question was raised in the Senate, but the gentleman will remember that there was no limit on the joint agricultural commission, and none of the other commissions that have been created in the Senate have been limited in expenses. I see no good reason why the commission authorized in this resolution should be put under a limitation.

Mr. STAFFORD. The committee may not be able to see any good reason, but, as an individual Member of Congress, I can see some reason why the commission should be placed under a limit as to their expenditure. I want to be reasonable as to the amount, but I do not intend to allow any commission to have a free rein.

Mr. RHODES. The gentleman has allowed and this House has allowed the Joint Commission on Agriculture to proceed without limit.

Mr. STAFFORD. Yes; and the Coal Commission came in the other day for an additional appropriation of $400,000

Mr. RHODES. I trust the gentleman will be indulgent and let us state our case.

Mr. STAFFORD. Surely. Mr. RHODES. I never have come before the House and insisted on a proposition unless I believed there was merit in it. I do think in this case it would be unfair to the silver and gold mining industry to deny them this commission, and put the commission under a limitation as to expenses. I feel certain there will be no danger of this commission indulging in extravagant expenditures, and I think the gentleman ought not to insist on placing a limitation on it, because we do not know what those expenses are going to be. I am sure they will be modest.

Mr. STAFFORD. Would the gentleman object to some reasonable limitation?

Mr. RHODES. I would not. I do not believe, Mr. Speaker, there is a man on the floor of this House who is prepared to-day to say just what would constitute a reasonable expendi-

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I want to reserve an objection to ask the question.

Mr. CRAMTON. I want to say to the gentlemen who are interested in this matter that they seem to have no idea what-ever of what it is going to cost the Government, and have brought in a bill under which the entire contingent fund of the House could be taken for expenses. They may travel all over the United States, to every mine and over every railroad in the study of the freight rates, and so forth. Under these conditions, whatever may have been provided in the past, does not the gentleman think it is time for the House to establish a precedent and fix the limitation of cost?

Mr. ARENTZ. We do not know whether it will be $10,000 or $25,000.

Mr. CRAMTON. I should think that $2,000 would be enough.

Mr. ARENTZ. They will want to make inquiry among all the nations of Europe.

Mr. CRAMTON. Under this bill they could not visit all of the nations of the world. They should do it in Washington.

Mr. ARENTZ. They are not going to visit any country outside of the United States. They may sit in Washington; they may go as far as Butte, Mont. It will be necessary to travel in the United States but we do not know how far; we do not in the United States, but we do not know how far; we do not know whether it would take $10,000 or $25,000.

Mr. CRAMTON. This Congress right along has required the executive departments to come to Congress with definite information—definite estimates. We require every Government department—every executive department—to do that, and we ought to be willing to conform to it ourselves. If nobody knows how much is needed for this purpose, the bill had better wait until they get that information.

Mr. STAFFORD. Further reserving the right to object, I would like to have some expression as to whether the proponents of this bill want to place any limitation on the cost of this commission

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. Speaker, I am going to demand the regular order. There are others interested in this calendar.
Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, if the regular order is delar order.

manded, I shall object.

Mr. BUTLER. I am not going to demand the regular order.

Mr. BLANTON. If the gentleman will permit, I would like to ask some questions.

Mr. COLTON. The gentleman from Pennsylvania has withdrawn his demand for the regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?
Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object.
Under the authority of this bill it does not limit the five Senators and five Representatives to Members of the Sixty-eighth Congress, but they could be appointed from the retiring Members of the Sixty-seventh Congress who will go out of office next Sunday, and they could be appointed in five minutes after this resolution is agreed to.

Mr. ARENTZ. If the gentleman is referring to me, I will say that the Sixty-eighth Congress is quite agreeable to me. I would not go on this commission if I had a chance to.

Mr. BLANTON, I did not know that the gentleman was connected with the matter at all and did not have him in mind. I know what has happened with respect to other commissions

Mr. ARENTZ. Oh, that suspicion is so often thrown around here that we are all looking for jobs. I am not,

Mr. BLANTON. I am glad to know that, but other gentlemen are, and fat jobs are being filled every day. Members who are leaving this Congress could be appointed upon this commission, and then after they have performed the work they could come in as another commission did two years ago and ask for salaries at the rate of $7,500 per year, and get them out of the Treasury, and then extend their commission on for a long time.

I want to ask the chairman of the committee why he did not limit this? There are other resolutions to come up similar to this one that do limit the appointments to Members of the Sixty-eighth Congress, which will prevent extra salaries. I call attention to the fact that anywhere in continental United States this commission may meet. It may meet in Seattle, it may meet in San Francisco, it may meet in Albuquerque, N. Mex., or it may meet in Miami, Fla., or in Boston, Mass.

Mr. ARENTZ. The subject is one that is large enough to justify that.

Mr. BLANTON. But not to justify possible junketing trips. Just one other point. I call attention to this to show that the rights of the American people are not properly safeguarded. This bill provides for the appointment of a stenographer to wait upon the committee. We are to adjourn next Sunday, We have four reporters of committees, not the ones who are taking our debates here, but the ones who are in the House Building, who have offices there. They will not have one single thing to do for nine months and they are drawing $6,000 a year from the Treasury, with nine months' vacation. Why does not the gentleman provide that one of them should serve on this committee and not have to appoint another patronage stenographer with a new salary?

Mr. RHODES. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman is addressing his inquiry to me, I desire to say that the author of the bill, the gentleman from Utah [Mr. Col.ron], has followed the language in existing congressional commissions.

Mr. BLANTON. If this were the only one of such resolutions it would not be so bad, but the gentleman from New York [Mr. CLARKE] has one in his pocket that he expects to call up. There are others here that are coming up in the closing hours of Congress for these commissions that can travel all over the world and the United States for the next nine months, during vacation, and waste thousands of dollars of the people's money.

Mr. RHODES. Mr. Speaker, the provision confining the activities of this commission to continental United States was put in the bill for the reason that the original act as introduced in the Senate would have authorized the commission to go anywhere, and members of the House Committee on Mines and Mining objected to that wide latitude. That phrase was put in there to confine the activities of the committee to the United

Mr. BLANTON. That proves that some one had a design to travel over Europe. Just this further suggestion: One paragraph of this bill still directs this commission to confer with travel over Europe. parties in foreign countries.

Mr. ARENTZ. That is necessary.
Mr. RHODES. That can be done by correspondence.
Mr. BLANTON. It attempts to limit that by inserting a provision that the committee shall not sit anywhere except in continental United States. That is a committee amendment. Suppose this passes the objection stage and the resolution comes up for passage and that the gentleman offers his committee amendment and the House votes it down. the other provision in the bill will be the law and will permit this commission to hold its hearings in Liverpool, in London, in Paris, in Rome, or anywhere else in foreign countries.

Mr. HAYDEN. The Senate bill has that limitation in it and we are trying to pass the Senate bill.

Mr. BLANTON. There are some splendid gentlemen interested in this matter, and I hate to oppose them, but I feel that it is my duty to object to this bill.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I object if that is to be done. Mr. RAKER. Oh, just give us a moment and we can meet

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. BLANTON. I object. Mr. COLTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the resolution may retain its place on the calendar.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. BLANTON. I object.
Mr. RAKER. Mr. Speaker, would not the Speaker recognize the gentleman from Utah to suspend the rules and pass this joint resolution? It will take only a few minutes, with these amendments.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair could not do that RESERVOIR SITES.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (8, 3123) to amend section 1 of the act entitled "An act providing for the location and purchase of public lands for reservoir sites," approved January 13, 1897, as amended.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 1 of the act entitled "An act providing for the location and purchase of public lands for reservoir sites," approved January 13, 1897, as amended, is amended by inserting at the end thereof the following new sentence:

"The Secretary of the Interior, in his discretion, under such rules, regulations, and conditions as he may prescribe, upon application by such person, company, or corporation, may grant permission to fence such reservoirs in order to protect live stock, to conserve water, and to preserve its quality and conditions: Provided. That such reservoir shall be open to the free use of any person desiring to water animals of any kind; but any fence erected under the authority hereof shall be immediately removed on the order of the Secretary."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the third reading of the Senate bill.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read a third time, and passed.

MINING OF COAL, OIL, ETC., ON PUBLIC DOMAIN.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (8, 3794) to amend section 35 of the act entitled "An act to promote the mining of coal, phosphate, oil, oil shale, gas, and sodium on the public domain," approved February 25, 1920.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. STAFFORD. I object.

BRIDGE ACROSS TUG FORK OF BIG SANDY RIVER, KY.

The next business in order on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 11477) granting the consent of Congress to the Freeburn Toll Bridge Co. to construct a bridge across the Tug Fork of Big Sandy River, in Pike County, Ky.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the Freeburn Toll Bridge Co., and its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Tug Fork of Big Sandy River at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, at or near the mouth of Peter Creek, in the county of Pike, in the State of Kentucky, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read the third time, was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent briefly to extend my remarks in the Record and explain the delay in reference to the passage of this bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky? [After a pause.] [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

SALE OF CERTAIN AIR SERVICE PROPERTY.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 14388) to authorize the sale of certain Government property and authorizing an appropriation for permanent buildings and improvements for use of the engineering division of the Air Service of the Army.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I object.

COLUMBIA RIVER AND WILLAMETTE SLOUGH, OREG.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 415) for the relief of St. Helens, Oreg., by improving the channel between the harbor of St. Helens and the Columbia River.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this joint resolution? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized and directed to construct and maintain a channel between deep water in the harbor of St. Helens, Oreg., and deep water in the Columbia River, in accordance with the recommendations made in the House Document No. 156, Sixty-seventh Congress, second session, out of any moneys heretofore or hereafter appropriated or allotted for the improvement or maintenance of channels in the Columbia River.

The committee amendment was read, as follows:

Strike out all of lines 3 to 10, inclusive, page 1, and insert in lien thereof the following:

"That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized and directed to modify the project for the improvement of the Columbia and lower Willamette Rivers, below Portland, Oreg., in accordance with the reports submitted in House Document No. 156, Sixty-seventh Congress, second session."

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended.

GRANTING HELL'S HALF ACRE TO NATRONA COUNTY, WYO., FOR A PUBLIC PARK.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (S. 4146) permitting the State of Wyoming to reconvey certain lands to the United States and to select other lands in lieu thereof, and providing for the patenting of certain lands to Natrona County, Wyo., for public-park purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object. this being a bill to grant a patent of interest to the people of Wyoming, I shall not object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That upon delivery to the Secretary of the Interior by the State of Wyoming of its properly executed and duly recorded deed or deeds reconveying to the United States of America in fee simple the lands in section 36, township 36 north, range 86 west of the sixth principal meridian, containing approximately 640 acres, the said State shall be authorized and permitted to select an equal number of acres from the unreserved, nonmineral, nontimbered, unappropriated public lands of the United States in said State, for the same purposes, and subject to the same conditions and limitations under which the lands so reconveyed were held.

Size. 2. That when the title to section 36, township 36 north, range 86 west of the sixth principal meridian, shall have revested in the United States pursuant to the foregoing provisions, the Secretary of the Interior shall cause a patent to issue conveying the said section 36, township 36 north, range 86 west, together with the north half of section 1, township 35 north, range 86 west of the sixth principal meridian, to Natrona County, Wyo., in trust for the purpose of a public park, but in said patent there shall be reserved to the United States all oil, coal, and other mineral deposits within said lands and the right to prespect for, mine, and remove the same.

Size. 3. That the graint herein made is upon the express condition that within 30 days of the receipt of any request therefor from the Secretary of the Interior the county clerk of Natrona County, Wyo., shall submit to the Secretary of the Interior a report as to the use made of the land herein granted the county during the preceding period named in such request, showing compiliance with the terms and conditions stated in this act; and that in the event of his failure to so report, or in the event of a showing in such report to the Secretary of the Interior that the terms of the grant have not been compiled with, the grant shall be held to be forfetted, and the Attorney General of the United States shall institute suit in the proper court for the recovery of said lands.

The bill was ordered to be read the third time, was read the

The bill was ordered to be read the third time, was read the third time, and passed.

AMENDING PATENT AND TRADE-MARK LAWS, AND FOR OTHER PUR-POSES.

The next business in order on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 14111) to amend the patent and trade-mark laws, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, my friend from Texas did not object to the other bill because, as the report shows, it is right around and includes what is known as "Hell's Half Acre."

Mr. STAFFORD. The gentleman, I presume, is thoroughly acquainted with the character of the location?

Mr. RAKER. Close, as you and ourselves; we meet on the

Mr. STAFFORD. Did the gentleman ever get close enough

Mr. RAKER. I trust my friend has not been singed. We all have to keep a close lookout lest we slip. You know as well as I what might surely follow a careless act or wrong objection. I just wanted to refer to it by way of saying that sometimes it is advisable not to object. I withdraw the reservation.

Mr. BLANTON. He is much more likely to get singed here than there

Mr. STAFFORD. In reference to this bill, reserving the right to object, this is a rather important bill, reported rather recently, to authorize the Commissioner of Patents or his assistants to modify and reinstate a patent and correct a mistake. The gentleman shakes his head as if to say that is not the purpose.

Mr. VESTAL. Mr. Speaker, the rules of the Patent Office now provide that these mistakes may be corrected by certificates, and what we want to do here is to give those certificates the authority of law. Practically all the people accept them, but sometimes we find somebody who does not accept those and then the whole matter has to go down to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and the whole thing be reprinted at a cost, for instance, in a case like this, of $49, where this certificate has only cost $2. Practically everybody accepts such certificates, but we want to give them the authority of law and save money to the Patent Office instead of its being a larger expense.

Mr. STAFFORD. Then, as I understand, under the existing practice the Commissioner of Patents when he discovers a mistake has the right to correct it by issuing a certificate

Mr. VESTAL. And we want to give those certificates the authority of law, of correction.

Mr. STAFFORD. I notice that a minor change will be made, but I will not draw attention to it until the change is made. I will withdraw my reservation of an objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The reservation of objection is withdrawn. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That whenever a mistake in a patent or trademark registration, incurred through the fault of the Patent Office, is clearly disclosed by the records or files of the office, a certificate, stating the fact and nature of such mistake, signed by the Commissioner of Patents and sealed with the seal of the Patent Office, may be issued, without charge, and recorded in the records of patents or trade-marks, and a printed copy thereof attached to each printed copy of the patent or trade-mark registration, and such certificate shall thereafter be considered as part of the original, and every patent or trade-mark registration, together with such certificate, shall have the same effect and operation in law on the trial of all actions for causes thereafter arising as if the same had been originally issued in such corrected form. All such certificates heretofore issued in accordance with the rules of the Patent Office and the patents or trade-mark registrations to which they are attached shall have the same force and effect as if such certificates had been specifically authorized by statute.

SEC. 2. That section 892 of the Revised Statutes be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 892. Written or printed copies of any records, books, papers, or drawings belonging to the Patent Office, of letters patent, of certificates of registration of trade-marks, labels, or prints, authenticated by the seal of the Patent Office and certified by the commissioner thereof, or in his name attested by a chief of division duly designated by the commissioner, shall be evidence in all cases wherein the originals could be evidence; and any person making application therefor and paying the fee required by law shall have certified copies thereof."

SEC. 3. That section 11 of the trade-mark act of February 20, 1905, being Thirty-third Statutes at Large, page 725, be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 11. That certificates of registration of trade-marks shall be issued in the name of the United States of America, under the seal of the Patent Office, and shall either be signed by the Commissioner of Patents or have his name printed thereon and attested by an Assistant Commissioner of Patents or by one of the law examiners duly designated by the Commissioner of Patents, and a record thereof, together with printed copies of the drawing and statement of the applicant, shall be kept in books for that purpose. The certificate shall state the date on which the application for registration was received in the Patent Office. Certificates of registration of trade-marks may be issued to the assignee of the applicant, but the assignment must first be entered of record in the Patent Office."

With a committee amendment:

With a committee amendment:

Page 2, line 24, strike out the words "page 725."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. To the committee amendment?

Mr. STAFFORD. No.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Wisconsin offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

Mr. STAFFORD. Page 2, line 23, strike out the words "being Thirty-third Statutes at Large" and insert in lieu thereof "(33 Statutes at Large, page 724)."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Wisconsin offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Stafford: Page 2, line 23, after "1905," strike out the words "being Thirty-third Statutes at Large" and insert in licu thereof "(38 Statutes at Large, page 724)", with a comma.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

e amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The question is on the en-The SPEAKER pro tempore. The grossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next

NAVAL STORES.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 14326) establishing standard grades of naval stores, preventing deception in transactions in naval stores, regulating traffic therein, and for other purposes.

The title of the bill was read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, before the objecting stage is passed I think some explanation should be made of this rather important measure.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Wisconsin reserves the right to object.

Mr. HAUGEN. Mr. Speaker, this bill simply provides for the standardization of naval stores. There is so much of them being adulterated that it seems the unanimous sentiment of those who have knowledge of it that the bill should be passed, both in the interest of the purchaser and of the producer.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAUGEN. Yes.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Has not a similar bill been passed by the Senate

Mr. HAUGEN. Yes. I propose to have the House bill laid aside and take up the Senate bill.

Mr. STAFFORD. There seems to be a necessity requiring a statement as to the quality of wool and the like.

Mr. ASWELL. I will say to the gentleman that 20 per cent of all the naval stores purchased by the United States are adulterated.

Mr. STAFFORD. All manufacturers, as I understand, are in favor of this measure, are they not?

Mr. ASWELL. Yes; the producers and the consumers and the public generally favor it. We had representatives before us of the Bureau of Chemistry in the Department of Agriculture recently, and they all agreed upon this bill.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the objection.
Mr. HAUGEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take up the bill S. 1076. It is identical with this.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Iowa asks unanimous consent to take up the Senate bill 1076, an identical Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the Senate bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

bill (S. 1076) establishing standard grades of naval stores, preventing deception in transactions in naval stores, regulating traffic therein, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1076) establishing standard grades of naval stores, preventing deception in transactions in naval stores, regulating traffic therein, and for other purposes.

Re it enacted. etc., That, for convenience of reference, this act may be seen as the convenience of the convenience of not exceding $5,000 or by imprisonal.

both.

SEC. 7. That the Secretary of Agriculture is hereby authorized to purchase from time to time in open market samples of spirits of turpentine and of anything offered for sale as such for the purpose of analysis, classification, or grading and of detecting any violation of this act. He shall report to the Department of Justice for appropriate action any violation of this act coming to his knowledge. He is also authorized to publish from time to time results of any analysis, classification, or grading of spirits of turpentine and of anything offered for sale as such made by him under any provision of this act.

SEC. 8. That there are hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be necessary for the administration and enforcement of this act, and within the limits of such sums the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to employ such persons and means and make such expenditures for printing, telegrams, telephones, books of reference, periodicals, furniture, stationery, office equipment, travel and supplies, and all other expenses as shall be necessary in the District of Columbia and elsewhere.

SEC. 9. That if any provision of this act or the application thereof to any person or circums ances is held invalid, the validity of the remaineder of the act and of the application of such provision to other persons and circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

SEC. 10. That this act shall become effective at the expiration of 90 days next after the date of its approval.

Mr. LONDON. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition, and I ask

Mr. LONDON. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition, and I ask for recognition in opposition to the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. LONDON. Mr. Speaker, one of the reasons why I oppose the bill is that I do not understand it. That is a very good reason for opposing it. I have been unable to follow it.

Another reason is that I would like to save the time of the House, and I would save the other four minutes if the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Volstead] will withdraw his objection to the request I previously made, and which I am about to renew. I ask permission to extend my remarks in the Record by incorporating a letter from Mr. Samuel Untermyer, the letter being a refutation of certain charges made against him during a debate in the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the manner indicated. Is there objection?

Mr. BLANTON. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I do not think that any individual in the United States who, off in another State, villifies a whole committee of the House of Representatives, without any qualification at all, ought to have his remarks put in the Congressional Record, and I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas ob-

Mr. LONDON. I do not want at this late hour to renew the controversy in which Mr. Untermyer participated. This request was to be made by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. THOMAS], who presented a minority report in the matter, but he has been in the hospital ill and somebody has asked me to present the request to the House.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. LONDON. I will.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Before the Committee on the Judiciary had done a thing Mr. Untermyer undertook to make an attack on it in the newspapers. He has repeated it; he has succeeded in getting a lot of stuff into the Record, and it does not seem to me that he should be given the privilege of spreading any more of this stuff in the Record attacking the committee. It is not fair to the committee; it takes too much time to defend the committee MEMBER. The regular order.

A MEMBER, The regular order.

Mr. LONDON, I am using my five minutes.

Mr. STAFFORD. The gentleman is proceeding by grace of the House. Under the rule the gentleman must confine himself to the matter under discussion.

Mr. LONDON. How much time have I remaining, Mr. Speaker?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman has consumed four and a half minutes of his five minutes.

Mr. LONDON. I will ask the gentleman from Minnesota and the gentleman from Texas to withdraw their objection. Mr. BLANTON. I want to wait until we are sure there are no improper attacks on the committee in the article which the gentleman wishes to put in the RECORD.

Mr. LONDON. I showed this letter to the gentleman from Minnesota.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

A similar House bill was laid on the table.

Mr. ASWELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks on the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana?

There was no objection.

The extension of remarks referred to is here printed in full as follows

Mr. ASWELL. Mr. Speaker, permit me to say that turpentine farming is one of the old industries of this country, engaged in from earlier colonial days. The oldest known records indicate that tar and pitch were made by the French in Nova Scotia as early as 1606. As early as 1610 the colony at Jamestown, Va., had instructions for making turpentine, but apparently there is no record of the shipment of turpentine from Jamestown.

As early as 1694 rosin was being shipped from New England to England, but whether this rosin originated in the New England States or had been made from the turpentine gum gathered farther South is not clear.

Turpentine farming may be said to have really begun in this country in North Carolina in 1723, and from that time until after the Civil War, possibly as late as 1870, the production of turpentine was primarily, if not entirely, a plantation industry carried on to a large extent by the planters coordinately with their other farm work. Throughout this period the production of turpentine was generally known as "turpentine farming" and even in certain sections of North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia is now frequently spoken of in the same terms. The term "turpentine or rosin manufacture" is practically unknown in the turpentine and rosin producing section. People who work timber for turpentine and rosin are known in the South as "turpentine producers" or "turpentine operators," or "turpentine farmers," never as "turpentine manufacturers."

Until after the Civil War comparatively little turpentine was distilled on the plantations. Until about 1830 the turpentine or gum was put in approximately 300 pound barrels and shipped to England or to Philadelphia, New York, or Boston, where by distillation it was separated into spirits of turpentine and rosin. Since about 1830 the separation of spirits of turpentine and gum has been made at Wilmington, N. C., where the stills were erected and in fact the larger part of the turpentine and rosin made in North Carolina to-day is produced at Wilmington from gum which has been shipped in barrels from interior points.

As the industry grew more and more planters established their own stills until, with the expansion of the industry into the States to the south and west of North Carolina, most of the operators had their own stills located on the tract of timber they were working, though even to-day in the Atlantic Seaboard States there are a number of people interested in turpentine and rosin who have no stills of their own but sell their gum direct to another operator who has a still or turn it over to him for distillation for their account.

The production of turpentine and rosin, which began and continued up until after the Civil War largely as a plantation operation, has become more and more specialized until it is now conducted by a specially trained and experienced set of men, just as large-scale orcharding or ranching, creamery or cheese factories are operated. Most of the operators, however, are comparatively small. The Census Report for 1899 shows that Si per cent of the operations are conducted with a capital of less than $5,000, 33.2 per cent with a capital of from $5,000 to $20,000, 49½ per cent with a capital of from $20,000 to $100,000, and 8.8 per cent with a capital of $100,000 and over; but 247 of the 1,200 establishments listed are owned by corporations; the others are owned by individuals or partnerships. It is relatively certain that about one-half per cent of the turpentine and rosin operations are conducted on capital of less than $30,000, which would not go far in financing a cotton plantation in the South, a butter or cheese factory in Michigan or New York, an orchard in Washington, California, Florida, or Virginia, nor would it run much of a corn or wheat farm in any of the States north of the Ohio River or as far west as the Rocky Mountains

There are about 1,400 turpentine and rosin producers in this country, and probably 200 or 300 of these do not have their own stills but sell the gum direct to other establishments. There are approximately 45,000 people employed in the industry. The invested capital is something more than $80,000,000, the annual salaries and wages amount to more than $18,000,000, and the value of the products is more than $50,000,000 annually

In this connection it may be of interest to consider the parallel statistical data concerning the butter, cheese, and condensed-milk industry

According to the 1919 Census of Manufactures, the total quantities of these materials produced in plants of this kind are as follows:

Total butter, 920,500,000 pounds, valued at something over $522,000,000; total cheese, 473,500,000 pounds, valued at approximately $137,000,000; condensed milk, 2,093,600,000 pounds, valued at approximately $293,000,000; total capital invested in these plants is approximately $315,000,000; salaries and wages are approximately $54,000,000, and the total value of the product is approximately $1,066,000,000.

There are 7,669 establishments, 59.6 per cent of which have a capital of less than $100,000, and this 59.6 per cent of the establishments produce but 22 per cent of the total value of the product. The percentage of the plants operated by corporations is 73.2. The value of the products produced by corporations is 65.9 per cent of the whole.

Minnesota produces 146,300,000 pounds of butter and about 10,000,000 pounds of cheese.

Wisconsin produces over 93,000,000 pounds of butter, 298,-000,000 pounds of cheese, and 248,000,000 pounds of condensed

Iowa produces 90,000,000 pounds of butter, 10,000,000 pounds of cheese, 800,000,000 pounds of condensed milk.

Ohio produces 64,000,000 pounds of butter, 5,000,000 pounds of cheese, 119,000,000 pounds of condensed milk.

California produces 64,000,000 pounds of butter, 9,700,000 pounds of cheese, 46,000,000 pounds of condensed milk.

New York produces approximately 16,000,000 pounds of but-ter, 89,000,000 pounds of cheese, and 474,000,000 pounds of condensed milk.

The following facts are pertinent to this bill:

It has found that from 20 to 80 per cent of the samples of turpentine which have been collected in recent years have been adulterated anywhere from 2 to 50 or 60 per cent, also that in a good many localities, especially in the smaller stores, a mineral oil is delivered to the purchaser who asks for turpentine, and the ordinary small buyer who purchases from 1 to 5 gallons of turpentine has no reliable means by which he can determine whether or not the turpentine is adulterated. Many small shipments of 10 gallons or less are made interstate from the wholesale markets in one State to the retail stores in another.

Of the 100 or more deliveries of rosin which the Bureau of Chemistry has examined in the past two years, representing a total of from 30,000 to 40,000 barrels, all but a dozen of these different lots were found to be misgraded 20 per cent or more, and 60 per cent were misgraded 40 per cent or more, and about 50 per cent were misgraded two grades or more.

From the information which has been secured during the past five or six years, it appears that the adulteration of turpentine is increasing both in the producing and in the consuming sections. The misgrading of rosin is quite as general as it was four or five years ago.

While turpentine and rosin are made in the South, practically all is consumed in the North or West, or is exported, something over half being used in this country.

Formerly rosin was graded by means of samples made from rosin. These rosin samples were subject to bleaching, were easily broken, and in warm weather became misshapen. Bureau of Chemistry has prepared standard type samples made of glass, and these have been accepted by all of the navalstores trade organizations in this country and are in general use in the grading of rosin. They have, however, no legal status except such as is given them by their general use.

No opposition on the part of either producers, consumers, or dealers in naval stores is known.

It is estimated that it will cost not more than $5,000 the first year to enforce this act, since the existing facilities of the Bureau of Chemistry can be utilized in part of the work. It is not anticipated that the work will cost more than $10,000 a year thereafter.

It is also estimated that the receipts from the examinations and tests which the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to make will ultimately cover the expense of enforcing the act. It is provided in the bill that these receipts be turned into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts,

For the season April 1, 1921, to April 1, 1922, the total production of turpentine in this country was approximately 486,000 standard barrels of 50 gallons and the production of rosin was 1,654,000 standard barrels of 500 pounds. These figures are for gum turpentine and gum rosin only. Wood turpentine and wood rosin constitute about 10 per cent additional. Florida produces about 40 per cent, Georgia about 23 per cent, Alabama about 12 per cent, Louisiana about 11 per cent, Mississippi about 10 per cent, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Texas about 4 per cent of the crop.

SALARIES OF UNITED STATES ATTORNEYS AND UNITED STATES MARSHALS.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill S. 425, "An act authorizing the Attorney General of the United States to fix the salaries of United States attorneys and United States marshals of the several judicial districts of the United States within certain limits."

The Clerk rend the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? Mr. BLANTON. Reserving the right to object— Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I reserve the right to object.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, this bill was reported by our distinguished colleague from Minnesota [Mr. Volstead]. Sunday our distinguished friend will have completed 20 years of honorable, faithful, efficient service in this House. [Applause.] I am one of those in this House who appreciates that service, who appreciates what the efforts of the distinguished gentleman, aided by his colleagues, have brought to his State and the Nation. He goes from this House back to Minnesota with the affection and regard and high appreciation of the present speaker and his many friends here.

Mr. Speaker, the name of the distinguished gentleman from Minnesota will live long in the United States; it will have a place here and in our Nation when our names probably are long forgotten. [Applause.] His name will be before the American people when the names of his traducers throughout the land are forgotten. [Applause.]

The distinguished gentleman from Minnesota has had his name prominently connected with the closing of every saloon in this great Nation, with the closing of every brothel, with the closing of every dive. It is a name that stands for honor and for sobriety and for national morality. [Applause.] It will continue to stand for the things that make home and the fireside secure and worth while. It has been beneficial in setting a worthy example not only to the House of Representatives and Congress, not only to the State of Minnesota, but to the great United States, aye, even unto the whole world. Mr. Volstead in serving in the National Congress has served his country well. I am sure whatever you colleagues may think about the question so vitally connected with his name, whatever stand you may have taken on that question, I am sure the distinguished gentleman from Minnesota goes back to his home State next Sunday with your high regard, your sincere esteem, your confidence, and the hope for his success and happiness through the remainder of his life. I am sure I am not alone in hoping that he will soon come back to this National Capitol and again help serve his country.

Mr. UPSHAW rose.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. For what purpose does the gentleman from Georgia rise?

Mr. UPSHAW. Mr. Speaker, I rise for the purpose of saying a few words concerning the gentleman from Minnesota VOLSTEAD], and ask unanimous consent that I may proceed for five minutes.

Mr. SABATH. Oh, we have heard one very good speech on the gentleman. If it is only as to the gentleman from Minnesota, I do not object.

Mr. UPSHAW. That is all.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? There was no objection.

Mr. UPSHAW. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, it is an inspiring commentary on the immortality of human influence for a man to so live and so relate himself to a worthy cause that his name is given in unsulfied honor to history's living page.

We honor such a builder of civilization to-day in the person of the gentleman from Minnesota, the Hon. ANDREW J. Vol-STEAD, and it is eminently fitting that as he closes his long and honorable career as a Member of this Congress we should pause few minutes in thoughtful, appreciative recognition of his distinguished services. Because of his character and his acknowledged ability he was made chairman of the Judiciary Committee, and because of this position his name is forever linked to our national enforcement law which the passage of the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution made incumbent

Regardless of any man's personal taste and legislative predilections, he must admit that it is a signal and imperishable honor to have one's name made the synonym of the greatest piece of moral and humanitarian legislation ever enacted through due constitutional process by any nation on earth. But I wish to protest, in the name of all the forces of righteousness in America, against the disparaging criticisms of the liquor press of this country concerning what they are pleased to term gloomy Volsteadism." They are seeking to discount national prohibition by the aspersive application of a personality or an epithet. However great any man's name, however outstanding any personality, let it be remembered that this law, which fought its way to victory as the expression of generations of agitation, education, and prayerful consecration, is greater than any personality and more powerful than any name. This law is any personality and more powerful than any name. no more "Volsteadism" than it is Neal Dowism, or Frances E. Willardism, or John P. St. Johnism, or John G. Wooleyism, or Willardism, or John P. St. Johnism, or John G. Howard Russellism, or Wayne Wheelerism-it is greater, I tell you, a million times greater than any of these-it is Americanism, sane, sober, constitutional Americanism [applause]—a triumphant, unselfish Americanism that stands, first of all, for the stainless purity and sobrlety of it own flag and every home beneath that flag—and then, pray God, for altruistic leadership in carrying sobriety to the drinking, staggering world.

HAS WARMED MILLIONS OF HEARTHSTONES.

We have all laughed about the story of that enterprising Pennsylvania citizen who hit upon a clever plan to replenish his winter coal supply. Erecting a sign, "Hurrah for Volstead!" beside the railroad, every trainman who mourned for his beer, every hobo who liked illicit liquor as well as an illicit ride, would grab a lump of coal from the open car and hurl it at the sign. And before the winter was very far advanced he could take down his sign in thrifty triumph, for his coal bin was full and his furnace all aglow. [Laughter.]

Oh, my colleague from Minnesota, let the liquor editors rave about your name and the law you helped to frame and pass, but we love to remember that, because of the saving influence of the law that bears your honored name, fires have been kindled on millions of hearthstones that were erstwhile cold and desolate, millions of empty larders have been filled with plenty and to spare, and the roses of beauty and happiness thank God, have been made to bloom on the wan and wasted cheeks of millions of wives and mothers and laughing children. Yes, hurrah for the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead [Laughter and applause.]

The strange, strange thing, gentlemen of this House, is that any friend of humanity can give courage to lawbreakers and liars by criticizing, instead of obeying and defending, this benev-wholesome law.

Although every honest man must agree that conditions are greatly improved over the old legalized reign of rum and ruin, we must agree that President Harding told the truth when he recently said before this Congress that the situation is gravely serious, and before the curtain falls on the Sixty-seventh Congress I desire to say a final word for vacation contemplation concerning the supremest question before the people of this country, and before coming to my main argument I wish to gratefully acknowledge the vigilant kindness of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAMTON], the ever-alert gentleman from Texas [Mr. Blanton], and the unique gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Quin] in making prompt reply during my imperative absence to the "wet" speeches of the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. HILL] and the gentleman from New York [Mr. Cockran], whose rash efforts to answer my plea for sober officials and sober citizens led them into the commission of what I counted monumental follies. It is pertinent, perhaps, to say that I was celebrating that modern edition of the Fourth of July, the 16th of January, anniversary of the adoption of the eighteenth amendment, by addressing a great "dry" rally in New York, the home city of Mr. Cockran, and there I witnessed the militant birth of a national movement for sober officials and the righteous triumph of constitutional law that would make the black hair of Mr. Hill turn gray overnight and that would have caused consternation to the eloquent tribune of Tammany Hall and those gay "wet" twins from Boston, Hon. James Gallivan and Hon. George Holden Tinkham.

One other little side journey I wish to take before starting on the main line. I wish the genial and gentlemanly newspaper men to get straight forevermore my ecclesiastical status. In introducing my recent pleas for official sobriety the papers have referred to me as "a former evangelist" and the " I want it distinctly understood that I am not an "ex" anything. What I was I am. I am not an ordained preacher; I am just a layman, "a sinner saved by grace." hope, believing with all my heart that since religion is the greatest thing in the world, holding within its compass the supremest issues of time and eternity, it is the commanding duty as well as the joyous privilege of every Christian man and woman to be active in church work, "every day and Sunday, too." For, remember, we are living the only life we shall ever live "between the two peaks of God's eternity," and no journeyman of the ages has a right to "kill time," for "it is time that is killing him."

TAKES COLLEAGUES INTO HIS CONFIDENCE,

Very frankly, taking my colleagues into my confidence, one reason I have never been ordained to preach, I have wanted to feel free as a layman to help lick the fellow who jumps on preachers; whenever I hear a blind, stingy parasite say that "a p-r-e-a-c-h-e-r always hears the call where the biggest salary is," I want to be free as a larman to lead to I want to be free as a layman to lash him with my tongue or crack him with my crutch and remind him that he is one of the "nuts" that do not pay any of the salary. And when I hear another blind parasite say that "preachers' children are the worst children in the world," I love to be free as a layman to look him in the face and tell him "without mental reserva-tion or purpose of evasion" that he is an unmitigated fool or an unfumigated liar—"either all or both." If one child of a preacher goes wrong, you tell the world; but you hear nothing of the ninety and nine who live on in the modest beauty or the conquering glory of their God-fearing lives, going out from the sacred influences of family altars and sacrificial parental example, making a positive gulf stream of blessing through the social, spiritual, educational, and political life of the Nation, fructifying every shore that it touches. Verily the faithful preacher is the pack horse of the community life. He restrains the erring, marries the loving, comforts the sorrowing, buries the dead, and then usually sinks into his grave without money enough to purchase his own winding sheet, because, like his Master, he has loved humanity better than he has loved worldly preferment or the "yellow glare of gold." Thinking of how preachers, Bibles, churches, and schools give fundamental value to our own homes, our property, and everything that is worth while in our treasured civilization, I love to be free as a layman to crown the underpaid preachers and teachers as the most unselfish men and women the world has ever seen.

AS STRAIGHT AS A STRAIGHT LINE.

Let me say at the very outset that I challenge a critical, honest review of my every statement concerning this matter, both before and since my plea for sober officials. My course in this contention has been as straight as the geometrical definition of a straight line—the shortest distance between two given points. I simply seized upon the President's call for a conference of governors to consider ways and means for a better enforcement of the prohibition law, to commend the power of official example as the quickest and surest way to get results; and while recommending the strict observance of the Volstead law and the spirit of the eighteenth amendment by all governors. I naturally—and I think very properly—widened the application to all officials in Washington and all officials everywhere, especially those whose oath of office calls for loyalty to the Constitution of the United States. The discussion of the sanity, safety, and crying necessity of this plea could hardly be called academic, for the converse of the proposition is unthinkable—it is simply preposterous.

Paying glad and grateful tribute to the vast majority of my colleagues who, I declared, practice the prohibition which their votes profess, I earnestly and honestly called on those who do not to give up their bibulous habits and encourage all high officials to set an example of sobriety and obedience to law for the sake of clean citizenship and happy homes among the masses of the American people.

And despite the sensational hysterics of a few very "wet" newspapers, the overwhelming majority of the correspondents in the press galleries being square, fair, and helpful, I have not sought to embarrass anybody but devilish, defiant bootleggers. As they can not live without patrons, I have tried to dissuade these patrons from their personal and official devilment. no occasion, it seems to me, for the excitement that has expressed itself in news columns, on editorial pages, and among the magazines and cartoonists of the country; but hostile editors may criticize and "wet" politicians may try to make it a joke, punmakers may pun, and funmakers make fun; but when a man knows he is on the side of the Constitution and sobriety he can be tranquil in heart and humbly but proudly conscious of victory. In the triumphant words of that old camp-meeting song he can "Smile at Satan's rage and face a frowning world," Thrice armed is he whose cause is just.'

PRESERVING "LIBERTY" IN ALCOHOL.

Packed into one paragraph, all who have heard the recent speeches of the eloquent gentlemen from New York and Boston will agree that they mean this and only this: That all laws must conform to the the customs of the communities for which they are made, and that all efforts to regulate and restrain by law the inclinations, the habits, and the "liberties" of the individual are born of fanaticism and doomed to failure. Weaving a halo of eloquence around the brow of the great lawyer, James C. Carter, who spent the last seven years of his life writing lectures for the Harvard Law School on "The Philosophy of Law," the late Mr. Cockran made this statement:

The main proposition underlying them was that all law is merely custom; that no statute can have the force of law which does not enforce customs already established in the locality affected by it,

Why, gentlemen of the House, that unthinkable position would nullify every law of God and man from Sinal to Washington, D. C .- yea, and that utterly unthinkable contention would shatter the towering temple of every state and national government on earth. It would subject every governing entity to the caprice of every defiant atom. Illinois would tremble daily before the behest of Chicago, Ohio would crouch and cower when Cincinnati showed its gnashing teeth, Massachusetts would run under the bed when "rum cultured" Boston entered the door, and the Goddess of Liberty herself would splash into the waters of the Bay of New York or plunge from her sunlit apex on the proud dome of every capitol in which we make laws for the whole Nation to-day just because boozy Baltimore and gay and godless Gotham shake their fists at the Constitution and the flag and tell sober "Uncle Sam" to go where it does not snow!

The difference between their concept of "liberty" and mine is this: I think liberty can be preserved in the duly enacted Constitution and in the loyal hearts of sober American citizens, and

These gentlemen complain that the purpose of prohibition—" to make men good"—is "utterly repugnant to every element of democracy." It is further declared concerning the purpose to make men good by law:

This is precisely what no government can do and which no democratic government can undertake to do without violating the principles that are absolutely fundamental.

THE WISDOM OF GLADSTONE.

Over against this baseless governmental fallacy I offer the declaration of William E. Gladstone-that towering genius and Christian statesman, of whom Henry Grady said, "He seems to have caught the inspiration of the Infinite and towers, half human and half divine, from his earthly eminence, while the light of another world seems beating in his grand old face." This great builder of Christian civilization said:

It is the duty of government to make it as hard as possible for the citizen to do wrong, and as easy as possible for him to do right.

That is wisdom-fundamental governmental wisdom, in radiant consonance with wisdom divine. The friends of the licensed saloon have always contended that "you can not legislate morality into people." I answer that since no nation can live long without morality, it is therefore the function of government, in the sane and stalwart processes of its own preservation, to protect the agencies and institutions that make for morality. It is not the function of government to patronize the church and subsidize the home, but it is the solemn, saving duty of the government to stand by the door of the home, the church, and the school and fight off the wolves of temptation and damnation that are trying to strike down the youth of the nation, without which no government can endure.

Talk about its not being democratic or ethical or governmental to try to interfere by law with the appetites and in-clinations of the individual! That position is so palpable, so glaring, that a 10-year-old schoolboy would marvel at its folly. "Thou shalt not!" "Thou shalt not," or "thou shalt!"—unwelcome limitations on the liberties of the individual for the common good, have come sounding down through the ages from the throne of God and the courts of man. On the parchments of the early Orientals, on the tables of stone from the hand of God, in the musty records of modern governments that have struggled upward toward the light-yea, on the "burnished ceiling of the sky of God"-we read the daily reflection of this eternal truth.

LIQUOR MAKES A MAN THINK WRONG,

There is something about liquor that makes a man think wrong; whether he drinks it or whether he thinks it, he finds himself demanding for liquor a "liberty" which he claims for no other outlawed evil. Carrying one's own pistol in this "land of the free and home of the brave" might be called "an included by the company of the brave. inalienable right," but organized society strikes that liberty down for the common good; selling and eating opium might be called "an inalienable right" as a surcease of worry amid fantastic visions and dreams, but the Government claims and exercises the right to stop the devilish traffic for the common good. Even hoary China, steeped and groping in ages of paganism, said "Thou shalt not" to Chinese "personal liberty and God knows America ought to do as much. These "wet" champions have never denied the right of the Federal Government to lay its strong hand on every drug store and every doc-tor in America for the purpose of curbing this insidious, na-

Seven thousand men in the State of New York decided last year to join a "personal liberty" gang with several hundred down in Georgia and appropriate another man's automobile without paying for it because the car "looked good" in this land of individual liberty, but no eloquent tribune of New York or Massachusetts will hardly announce for Congress or governor or President on the platform that every well-dressed devil whose habits and inclinations cause him to want a car should be allowed to take one and use it for himself without being branded a criminal. The auto thieves of New York and Georgia have not wrought one-thousandth part of the havoc and horror to human happiness that has been wrought by the makers and sellers of the liquor for whose legal protection Mr. Hull,

Mr. Gallivan, and Mr. Tinkham so eloquently plead.

God of our fathers, citizens of America, save our youth and our national ideals from such insidious baleful sophistry!

THE HIGHER UPS AND THE LOWER DOWNS.

It is a "wet" argument that "the best elements of our society" do not like this prohibition law, and, naturally, they think they ought to be allowed to break it without being rated and indicted as criminals. It is to smile! "Best element," indeed! That means, of course, that whatever the denizens of the Bowery may do-however much they are provided by law with saloons in which to lounge and drink and rob their families of the fellowship of their society and the fruitage of their labor, bringing upon themselves the tragic indictment of being ragged "ne'er-do-wells," and people who live up on Riverside Drive and Fifth Avenue and "laugh and dance and wanton" and drink hard liquor and sparkling champagne beneath silken curtains and glittering chandeliers—these, these should be allowed to plunge into all sorts of bacchanalian excesses and still be called the "best element of our society." I am reminded of that declaration of Clinton Howard, the "little giant" of Rochester, when he recently said: "I am not so much afraid of the alien in the alley as I am of the anarchist on the avenue." And Will Hays, that astute arbiter of the motion picture corporations, in expressing his approval of my demand that the "higher ups" shall practice what they enforce on the lower downs," said:

UPSHAW, you are on the right line. When I read your speech I was reminded of that startling cartoon of Darling in which he pictured a big limousine filled with silk-hat grandees, driving ruthlessly through a barbed-wire fence, labeled "The prohibition law," and right behind this shining limousine came a little old ramshackle roadster filled with long-bearded, wild-eyed bolshevists, anarchists, and cut-throats saying: "We have a right to go where that big car goes!" Who shall deny their contention?

Gentlemen of the Congress, this cartoon of Darling's-this interpretation of Mr. Hays-is as fundamental to government as the preamble of the Declaration of Independence.

If our "best society" means drinking and carousing in defiance of law, then God save our youth from such gilded devil-ment, and give us the plain, humble American "log cabin" where sober contentment reigns.

THE SUPREMEST ISSUE IN THE PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN.

There is beginning even now to be "a stirring in the tops of the mulberry trees" concerning the outstanding men and meas-ures in the next presidential campaign. "Ifs" and "ands," preachments and prognostications are already lighting up the newspapers and magazines and littering up the wastebaskets. Cautious prophets abound, while incipient booms and boomlets, no bigger than a man's hand, flash, flicker, and fade upon the radiant alchemy of the presidential sky.

Who will be the man in each party, and what will be the main plank in his platform? "Listen, my children, and you shall hear." I tell you here and now what his name and his platform will not be: It will not be any name or any plank that trifles with the supremest question now before the Na-tion. I go William J. Bryan "one better" on his recent prophecy concerning the main planks in the Democratic platform. That miracle of genius, eloquence, and sustained power, who has been before the American people 30 years without a fleck upon his name, and who holds the faith of the masses in the hollow of his hand as never before, said that "UPSHAW did not go far enough in his demand for sober officials." I answer that I am ready to go as far as any sane man can go in order to help usher in an era of sober leadership, social and political, for the sake of the sanctity of law and the sobriety of the

I believe with him in doing everything possible for the farmer. I am the son of a farmer, and my record in Congress will show my legislative sympathy with the man who clothes and feeds the world; I believe, with him, in every phase and form of legislative fairness to the man in overalls—I have worn overalls, and the man in overalls has always been my hero. Counseling conservatism, my votes will show that I have given the man in overalls the benefit of the doubt when striving to know and do my duty before the balancing scales of "even-handed justice"; I believe, with Mr. Bryan, in curbing and punishing the conscienceless profiteer, for even my humble home has felt his teeth and his claws; but all economic laws will fail and fall if they are not planted in the secure guardianship of sober, intelligent humanity. Therefore I here and now announce that the supreme issue in the presidential campaign and the supreme plank of my own party platform will be the integrity of the Constitution, the majesty of duly constituted law, and personal and national sobriety. And when that platform is given to the world, mark my words, the Democratic Party will not dare to nominate a candidate who is not in 100 per cent sympathy with that platform. In other words, the Democratic Party will not nominate a man who meddles with a bottle, a man who personally violates the spirit of the eighteenth amendment; and may the Lord have mercy on the timorous souls of you Republicans if you dare to do less. The best people of America are weary, indignantly weary, not only with lawbreakers among the masses but above all with lawbreakers among the lawmakers. The awakened, regnant conscience of America—the upright, downright, outright conscience and character of this country will not stand any more for a kid-gloved camouflage on this question. If the Great War meant one thing more than any other thing, it meant the shattering of shams. The people demand the genuine in character, the genuine in religion, the genuine in politics, the genuine in everything. And they have made up their minds that any man who will flout a duly constituted law because his liquorized taste demands it is an unsafe leader for our plastic youth and for every citizen beneath the flag.

THE CAMBLE AND THE WISE MEN OF THE EAST.

To the blind and foolish folk who, ostrichlike, hide their heads in the sand and flippantly declare that the sentiment of this country is changing toward a material modification of the prohibition law I commend that breezy, convincing survey of nation-wide sentiment on the prohibition question from the pen of Jack O'Donnell in Collier's of February 10. Beginning his story, "The camels and the wise men of the East," he says:

I am a wet. I have always been and always shall be. All my best friends are wet. I have always been thrown into or sought that company of drinking men. They are the kind of men I like—my kind. I am against prohibition from the first word of the title on the eighteenth amendment to the final word in section 20 of title 3 in the enforcement act. I am a reporter. When Collier's sent me out into the various States to find out "if the sentiment of the people is changing in favor of modification or repeal of the Volstead Act I put my personal opinions in my pocket, so to speak, and sought the facts."

After traveling with impartial observation through the admittedly "wet" East and all over the central Middle West and far Western States, this dyed-in-the-wool wet reporter declares "it almost breaks my wet heart" as he finds the facts which make him loth to admit even to himself that there is an abundance of evidence that "a great dry wave is rolling eastward," slowly but surely grinding down opposition to prohibition." Then "wet" but honest Jack O'Donnell scratches his head, wipes the cold sweat from his brow, and flings to his disconcerted comrades in the reeking realm of "wetdom" this fatal review and ominons warning:

Some day we "wets" are going to awaken to find that an over-whelming majority of the people of the United States are weary of bootleggers and dry-law violators. Some day, and that day is not far distant, these people are going to rid the country of the bootlegger and the rum-runner, just as the Vigilantes of the fifties rid the Califor-nia mining camps of undesirable gamblers, gunmen, and prostitutes. On which side will the defiant "wet" champions stand?

NULLIFICATION AND SECESSION

The whole spirit of the recent "wet" speeches in this House have been a challenge to the Constitution and the law. Many of us have heard them say on this floor; "This law can not and ought not to be enforced." The Chicago Tribune and other "wet" papers in the great cities of the North have taken the same position. Gentlemen of the House, that is nullificationnullification from a strange geographical center-and nullification and secession are inseparable twins. I remind you of that immortal declaration of Daniel Webster in his reply to Cal-

To begin with nullification and not to proceed to secession, dismemberment, and general revolution, is as if one were to take the plunge of Niagara and cry out that he would stop halfway down. In the one case, as in the other, the rash adventurer must go to the bottom of the dark abyss below, were it not that that abyss has no discovered bottom.

It has come to this, that a son of the South, the son of a Confederate soldier in our reunited country, must teach to liquor advocates of the North the majesty of the law, the supremacy of the flag, and the integrity of the Federal Constitution.

And I remind these festive and illogical champions of liquor that, great as was New England in Revolutionary glory, and rich and "wet" and defiant as New York and New England are to-day, they constitute a very small part of the whole United States, and to those who wish to "secede from the Union" in order to get all the liquor they want, we who believe in sober, constitutional government answer them as we point to the American flag: "Nothing doing! That emblem waves higher than the insignia of any State! We write again in burning letters that withering declaration of that heroic old war horse and pathfinder of reforms, Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts:

You would not ratify and you shall not nullify."

Come on, ye boasted champions of democracy, and salute anew the flag that protects your homes!

AN UNFORTUNATE COMPARISON,

It is very regrettable that in strained and abnormal effort to show the danger of regulatory legislation there was recently spoken on the floor of this Congress a scathing indictment of a majority of the best people in America who believe in the prohibition of the liquor traffic by a far-fetched comparison of prohibition ideals with certain barbarous cruelties in Louisiana, with which certain hysterical papers have tried to connect the Ku-Klux Klan. Edmond Burke declared: "You can not indict a whole people."

And it is uttery unfair, un-American, and un-Christian to lay such a groundless charge at the door of the millions of patriotic, God-fearing men and women who believe in prohibiting by law the iniquitous liquor traffic, or to likewise indict, because of one isolated tragedy-whose source has not yet been proven-a great nation-wide patriotic organization whose members have just as much right to their fraternity and secrecy as the Knights of Columbus, the Masons, the Red Men, and countless other lodges, especially when the ritual and the oath of these klansmen, as registered in the Library of Congress, reveals a new dedication of loyalty to the Bible as the Word of God, to the Constitution of the United States and the supremacy of the American flag over every foreign power or potentate, political or ecclesiastical.

It is nobody's business to what organization a citizen belongs, just so he is true to God and obedient to the law of his country. And it is because the appetite for liquor and the advocacy of liquor poisons the spirit of genuine, constitutional Americanism that I here and now dedicate my all, of mind and heart and strength, to a truceless warfare against it, in the name of the God of battles, for a sober America and a sober humanity all over the world!

Mr. CRAMTON rose.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. CRAMTON. To speak for a moment of the man Vox-STEAD.

Mr. RAYBURN. For how many minutes? Not exceeding five minutes. Mr. CRAMTON.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry. When are we going to adjourn? Is there an agreement in respect to the time of adjournment to-day? There are some uncontested bridge bills on the calendar that ought to be passed, that are important to local communities. If we are going to run only a little while longer, I am going to object to any further encomiums

Mr. MONDELL. I was in hopes that we could finish the Unanimous-Consent Calendar before we adjourned.

Mr. RAYBURN. That is satisfactory to me.

Mr. BUTLER. Are we to adjourn when we do?
Mr. MONDELL. I think under all of the circumstances that we must, but I hope we may finish the Unanimous-Consent Calendar to-day, and I trust that where bills are to be objected to that gentlemen will make the objection and that we may go on to the next one.

Mr. RAYBURN. Then I have no objection. My impression was that the House was going to adjourn about 5 o'clock.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the gentleman from Michigan proceeding for five minutes?

Mr. HERRICK. Mr. Speaker, we have had two speeches now out of order. I do not want to object, but I want to say that I want to have about three minutes before the House adjourns, and if the floor leader will assure me that I can have that, that he will not object to my having three minutes, I shall not object now.

Mr. MONDELL. Oh, Mr. Speaker, I feel that I must object to these discussions.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is heard. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I object to the consideration of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas objects, and the Clerk will report the next bill.

THURSTON W. TRUE-CONFERENCE REPORT.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I present a conference report upon the bill (S. 2984), for the relief of Thurston W. True, for printing under the rule,

The conference report is as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 2984) for the relief of Thurston W. True, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses that the House recede from its amendment.

B. H. SNELL, JOHN C. KLECZKA, Managers on the part of the House. ARTHUR CAPPER, SELDEN P. SPENCER, JOE T. ROBINSON, Managers on the part of the Senate.

STATEMENT.

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 2984) for the relief of Thurston W. True submit the following statement in explanation of the action agreed upon by the conference committee and submitted in the accompanying conference report:
Appropriates $1,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $794, as proposed by the House.

B. H. SNELL. JOHN C. KLECZKA, Managers on the part of the House.

BRIDGES OVER NAVIGABLE CHANNELS OF MOBILE RIVER, ALA.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (S. 4469) to extend the time for the construction of a bridge or bridges and trestles over the navigable channels of the mouth of the Mobile River in the State of Alabama.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present

consideration of the bill?

There was no objection. The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge or bridges and trestles, authorized by the act of Congress approved October 5, 1917, as revived and reenacted by the act of Congress approved February 14, 1922, to be built by the Gulf Ports Terminal Railway Co., a corporation existing under the laws of the State of Florida, over and across the navigable channels of the mouth of Mobile River from Bay Port, in township 4 south, range 2 east, on the east shore of the waters of Mobile Bay, in Baldwin County, Ala., on a direct line, to a point on Blakely Island, in Mobile County, on the east shore of Mobile River, opposite the municipal docks of the city of Mobile, Ala., are hereby extended one and three years, respectively, from the date of approval hereof.

Sec. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the third

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the third reading of the Senate bill.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED.

Under clause 2, Rule XXIV, Senate bills of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and referred to their appropriate committees as indicated below:

S. 3855. An act to quiet the title to lands within Pueblo Indian land grants, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

S. 4245. An act to provide the necessary organization of the customs service for an adequate administration and enforcement of the tariff act of 1922 and all other customs revenue laws; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

SURVEY OF INTRACOASTAL WATERWAY IN LOUISIANA AND TEXAS.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 13246) for the examination and survey of New Orleans, La., to Corpus Christi, Tex.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears

Mr. DUPRÉ. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate bill on the Speaker's table, identical with the House bill, be considered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Louisiana asks unanimous consent to consider Senate bill 4211 in lieu of the House bill, being an identical bill. Is there objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, on the assurance they are identical I shall not object.

Mr. DUPRE. I desire to say to the gentleman that in all instances that I make any statements they are true. (Laughter.)
The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the

The Clerk read as follows:

An act (S. 4211) authorizing preliminary examination and survey to be made of the Intracoastal Waterway in Louisiana and Texas.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause an examination and survey to be made of the Intracoastal Waterway from the Mississippi River at or near New Orleans, La., to Corpus Christi, Tex.

The bill was ordered to be read the third time, was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. DUPRÉ. I ask that the House bill lie on the table. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, that order will be made.

There was no objection.

Mr. ROACH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar 543, objected to by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Blanton], and ask that gentleman if he will not withdraw his objection.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order. We desire to finish the Unanimous Consent Calendar. Mr. BLANTON. I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The regular order is demanded which is equivalent to an objection. The Clerk will report the next bill.

ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

Mr. RICKETTS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills and joint resolution of the following titles, when the Speaker pro tempore signed the same:

H. J. Res. 453, Joint resolution requesting the President to urge upon the governments of certain nations the immediate necessity of limiting the production of habit-forming narcotic drugs and the raw materials from which they are made to the amount actually required for strictly medicinal and scientific

H. R. 5018. An act to authorize the widening of First Street

NE., and for other purposes; and H. R. 13554, An act authorizing the construction, maintenance, and operation of a dam and appurtenant intake and out-let structures across or in the Potomac River at or near Wiliamsport, Washington County, Md.

The SPEAKER pro tempore announced his signature to enrolled bills of the following titles:
S. 4583. An act granting the consent of Congress to the State of South Dakota for the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River between Charles Mix County and Gregory County, S. Dak.; S. 4197. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to issue to certain persons and certain corporations permits to explore, or leases of, certain lands that lie south of the medial line of the main channel of Red River, in Oklahoma, and for other purposes; and

S. 4579. An act to authorize the Lee County bridge district No 2, in the State of Arkansas, to construct a bridge over the

St. Francis River.

RELIEF OF CITY OF ASTORIA, OREG.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 449) for the relief of the city of Astoria, Oreg.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. I object. Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks on this bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oregon? [After a pause.] Chair hears none.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. Speaker, the resolution authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to loan to the city of Astoria, Oreg., not to exceed $1,063,000 for the purpose of enabling the city to rebuild the area devastated by the conflagration of December 8. 1922. The loan is to the municipality, to be used for municipal purposes. It is not to be used in any way for the reconstruction of private property or for the benefit of individuals. For more than a hundred years Congress has given aid to stricken cities and communities according to their several needs. The necessity for the relief proposed for Astoria is apparent from the statement of facts. On December 8, 1922, a fire devastated some 34 blocks, covering about 40 acres, comprising the entire business area of the city. More than 500 buildings were destroyed, including the 5 banks and all the hotels. So fierce was the conflagration that buildings considered fireproof were unable to resist the power of the flames. This great area is now a crater filled with the débris of the fire and the wrecks of the buildings, streets, and sidewalks-practically a total loss.

The city of Astoria is built on the south bank of the Columbia River about 12 miles east of the entrance. It is located on what was originally a tidal flat, formerly submerged at high tide to the depth of about 30 feet. It is the only practicable location on the river in that section. The city was first built on piling from the harbor line to the foot of the steeply sloping hills. Formerly the tide ebbed and flowed under this entire burned

Some years ago the city, in order to establish a modern sewage system that would discharge at all stages of the tide, constructed a bulkhead along the water front and filled in the area to the top of the bulkhead. The property owners were then required to raise their buildings 9 feet to the established street level. The main floors of the buildings and the streets and sidewalks were 9 feet above the level of the fill. The streets were constructed on bridge work set on the pilings which were flush with the top of the fill and decked over with planking. Upon this planking this asphalt pavement was laid and concrete sidewalks constructed. The city intended to complete the filling of the streets up to the street level as soon as the condition of its finances permitted. While many of the buildings were of substantial construction and a number supposed to be fireproof, the majority were made of wood, as is natural in a heavily timbered country. The city had installed water and fire systems expected to be sufficient to provide safety and which for a number of years had so proved. The fire, which broke out at 2 o'clock on the morning of December 8, 1922, spread with great rapidity. It attacked the water and fire systems, spread under and through the buildings, and under the streets with such fierceness that the fire department of Astoria, which received prompt assistance from Portland and from boats along the water front, could not control it.
On December 7, 1922, Astoria was a thriving and prosperous city provided with modern improvements. Before the close of December 8, the heart of the city had been destroyed. Its sewage and water systems were seriously injured, its streets and sidewalks burned or wrecked, and its business houses were charred and crumbling walls. Nothing of value remained in the burned section. The value of its lots had been reduced to about 2 per cent of their previous assessed valuation.

Before this burned area can be rebuilt it will be necessary to reconstruct the sewage and water systems, build substantial retaining walls around each block, fill in the streets between the walls with dredged material from the river, and pave the streets and lay sidewalks. Until the necessary and essential things are done, no capital can be obtained to enable the property owners to reconstruct their buildings. When the insurance adjusters from New York, Chicago, St. Louis, and San Francisco came to adjust the losses, the city officials, with them, made a careful estimate of the losses and found them to be in excess of $11,000,000. The value of each building, of all stocks of goods, fixtures, and other property within the burned area, was appraised in arriving at this amount. Many think, with good reason, that the loss was much greater.

The city of Astoria, in order to provide the things essential for a modern city, has issued bonds and incurred bonded obligations as follows: For school purposes, $277,500; for sewage and water systems, streets, sidewalks, and other city purposes, $3,852,685.55. The property of the city was also liable for its proportion of the bonds issued by the port of Astoria for the construction of modern docks and other port improvements, and for the bonds issued for the construction of roads in Clatsop County, in which the city is located. These two latter items combined placed a bonded obligation upon the city of $1,423,709.77. The total bonded liability of the property within the city was, therefore, $5,553,895.32. Upon this bonded obligation there is an interest charge of over $330,000 per annum.

The assessed valuation of all property within the city limits prior to the fire was $11,358,469, so that previous to the conflagration the bonded liability of the city was 49 per cent of its assessed valuation. With the total destruction of the buildings and contents within the burned area and the consequent depreciation of the value of the real estate within it, because of its inaccessibility under present conditions, and the consequent decline of the values of other property in the city, the bonded indebtedness is now so nearly equal to the present value of all property within the city as to deprive it of the ability to sell further bonds for reconstruction purposes through the ordinary investment channels. If the city had any basis for commercial credit no application for relief would now be presented here. The city has no intention of repudiating its bonded indebtedness nor of attempting to evade in any manner the payment of the principal and interest. Its citizens desire to rebuild and have been assured by banks in Portland and other places of loans of sufficient amount to enable them to construct substantial buildings when the work above described has been accomplished. Some four or five buildings are being constructed on the edge of the burned area, but the inaccessibility of all but exceptional spots will prevent the construction of buildings therein until the reconstruction work has been effected. But with the sewage and water systems relaid, retaining walls erected, fill made, streets and sidewalks built, loans will be available for the building of modern houses of business within the burned area. The property owners are all anxious to rebuild. They believe in the future of the city. They are willing to assume the burdens necessary and have no doubt of their ability in due time to meet all their obligations. The docks, wharves, and other improvements of the port were not burned. The resources surrounding the city justify the belief that the citizens will be able to meet the obligations. The important industries of the tributary territory are the fish canneries, the sawmills, dairying, trade, and commerce.

Your committee believes that the Government of the United States should grant this aid. It is not probable that any other case similar in character will ever arise where a city, because of its enterprise, unusual location, and desire to install modern improvements, has obligated itself to such an extent that a devastating fire will leave it in a similar condition.

Astoria was founded in 1811 by John Jacob Astor and is the oldest city in the Pacific Northwest. It had a population of some 16,000 people. It grew rapidly in recent years when the improvements above described were made. There will always be a city on the present site of Astoria. There is no other location suitable for a city in that section. It is essential to trade and commerce, but without the aid proposed in the pending resolution its restoration will be a long process of many weary years.

The following tables and statements from public officials present the facts in a succinct form, relating to the property destroyed in the burned area and the financial condition of the

ASTORIA, OREG. Reasonable value: Buildings destroyed Merchandise destroyed Other property destroyed Public-service utilities destroyed City property destroyed; including pavements, sidewalks, sewer and water systems, fire system, etc. $3, 450, 000 4, 190, 000 1, 550, 000 430, 000 1, 500, 000 Total loss 11, 030, 000 Area devastated stated to include 34 blocks, covering about 40 sed value: Buildings and merchandise (all destroyed), and of real estate (little value without streets) in the burned Property outside of the burned area.____ Total assessed value 11, 358, 469 Bonded indebtedness. or city purposes. ability of city for county road bonds and for bonds of the port of Astoria (29 per cent of the total of such issues) School district No. 1

Total bonded indebtedness_____ Total bonded indebtedness — 5, 553; 894

The bonded indebtedness was 49 per cent of the assessed valuation before the fire, and now exceeds present value of the property remaining in the city, since the destruction of the entire business district has caused the property remaining to decline in value,

Annual interest charge on the bonded indebtedness, over $330,000.

Insurance on buildings destroyed, $600,000, or 17.4 per cent of their reasonable value.

Insurance on other property destroyed, exclusive of public utilities and city improvements and property, $1,650,000, or 29.2 per cent of its reasonable value.

RECONSTRUCTION.

What it is necessary to do to rebuild the city, which the city is unable to do, as it has no credit, and its citizens are not able to do, since until reconstruction work is done they have no credit,

Reconstruction of sewers. Reconstruction of water system. Retaining walls Fill. Paving streets	-	$101, 242 72, 907 455, 552 26, 041 167, 590
Sidewalks:		240, 225
Total	1	062 557

1,063,557

[Telegram.]

ASTORIA, OREG., January 4, 1923.

Hon. W. C. Hawley, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.:

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.:

In compliance with your telegram of the 3d instant, the executive committee met with property owners and insurance adjuster on the ground now adjusting and paying our fire losses and hereby certify the facts to be: First, the total reasonable value of the buildings destroyed by such fire is $3,450,000; second, total reasonable value of merchandise, furnishings, fixtures, libraries, etc., including property of all kinds, exclusive of buildings above mentioned, as follows: Merchandise, $4,100,000; furniture, fixtures, and libraries, $1,550,000; third, public service utilities, $430,000; fourth, city properties, including streets, water systems, sewers, fire system and appliances, $1,500,000; grand total, $11,030,000; fifth, total insurance, $2,250,000.

Col. W. S. Gilbert, chairman; A. B. Everts, T. C. Shanlund, W. M. Patterson, W. G. Lloyd, E. R. Thompson, E. T. V. Ettlinger, E. G. Ford, adjusters on the ground.

CITY OF ASTORIA, CLATSOP COUNTY, OREG.

, rusi, walka	AND SCHOOL DEBT.
$1, 208, 762, 91	City of Astoria proper: Municipal bouded debt
216, 095, 22	Floating debt— 89, 666. 42 Special fund 89, 666. 42
	Total municipal general debt. 1,056,166.42 Sanitary and reclamation commission of the city:
303, 300. 00 13, 161. 25	Municipal bonded debt 300,000.00 District improvement bonded debt Floating debt, district warrants
	Total general obligation of city 1, 356, 166, 42

Total district or special obligation becoming general obligation upon default of district or system_____ 1, 741, 319, 38 system.

I hereby certify that the foregoing statement is true and correct and from the records of the city of Astoria, in my office and in my custody. Dated at Astoria, Oreg., December 29, 1922.

[SEAL.]

Auditor and Police Judge of the City of Astoria, Clatsop County, Oreg.

ASTORIA PUBLIC SCHOOLS, Astoria, Oreg.

STATE OF OREGON, County of Clatsop, 98: This is to certify that I am the duly elected, qualified, and acting clerk of school district No. 1, Clatsop County, Oreg., and the custodian of all books, records, and papers of the said district; that the outstanding indebtedness of the said district at this date is as follows: Outstanding bonds_____Outstanding building warrants___

Total indebtedness . In witness whereof, I bereunto set my hand on behalf of the said district this 29th day of December, 1922.

W. A. SHERMAN, District Clerk.

THE WATER COMMISSION.
Astoria, Oreg.

To whom it may concern: We hereby certify that the indebtedness of the water commission of the city of Astoria, Oreg., as shown by our trial balance of Novem-ber 30, 1922 (exclusive of monthly pay rolls and bills), was as follows: Outstanding bonds Less sinking fund	$852, 000, 00 96, 800, 00

Net indebtedness	755, 199, 75
[SEAL.] THE ASTORIA WATER C By G. W. LOUNSBERRY, Ch.	OMMISSION, erk.

PORT OF ASTORIA, Astoria, Oreg. The bonded indebtedness of the port of Astoria December 28, 1922, is $4:130.000.

I hereby certify that the amount of bonded indebtedness as stated above is correct, according to the records of the port of Astoria.

R. R. BARTLETT,

Manager Port of Astoria.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 28th day of December, 1922. C. L. HESS, Notary Public for Oregon.

My commission expires August 8, 1924.

To general fund warrants outstanding ...

STATEMENT OF INDEBTEDNESS OF CLATSOP COUNTY, OREG., ON THE 20TH DAY OF NOVEMBER, 1922.

Cash in fand to reason immoration
To general fund warrants outstanding in excess of cash on hand to redeem same	349, 878. 25 6, 864. 73 443, 000. 00

STATE OF OREGON, County of Clatsop, ss:

I. J. C. Clinton, county clerk and clerk of the county court of the county and State aforesaid, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a full, true, and correct statement of the indebtedness of Clatsop County, Oreg., on the 30th day of November, A. D. 1922, as the same appears from the books at my office and in my custody.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of the county court this 29th day of December, A. D. 1922.

[SEAL.]

J. C. CLINTON, County Clerk.

ASTORIA, OREG., December 16, 1922.

ASTORIA, OREG., December 16, 1922.

ADJUTANT GENERAL UNITED STATES ARMY,

Washington, D. C.:

Under requirements of paragraph 2, Regulations 67, War Department, 1921, governing relief work, report as follows: Conflagration of city of Astoria on December 8 completely destroyed 34 blocks in the business section of the city, area about 40 acres. Estimated damage about $20,000,000. Number of people seriously affected. 5,000, Rellef measures taken by local authorities as follows: National Guard field kitchens on ground for first meal. All welfare societies in operation at once. People were housed and fed from the very moment of crisis by emergency funds and supplies and contributions, which came in at once from neighboring cities—Portland mostly, National Red Cross, and Fort Stevens.

Restorative measures are beyond power of the municipality and State. The municipality is absolutely bankrupt through previous heavy issues of bonds for former street, municipal, and port terminals.

Guarding of city now done by detachments from United States ship Yarborough, Coast Guard cutter Algonquin, volunteer Legion men, municipal police assisted by sworn deputies.

Presence of Regular troops not necessary.

Rations and quartermaster supplies not required of Army,

Immediate relief work as follows is recommended: The construction by the United States Government of bulkheads for streets in the affected district, the same to be filled by sand dredged from the harbor along the Astoria water front, which in places is in need of deepening.

The restoration also of the sewer, water, and electric fire system. This latter work, as stated above, can not be done by this bankrupt city and is absolutely necessary before the devastated district, which comprises entirely all of the business section of town, can be reconstructed by the municipality or people of Astoria.

The rehabilitation refers to municipal work only—streets, water, and sewerage systems, together with fire and police wiring. No portion is for property owned by private individ

T. M. ANDERSON, Colonel Seventh Infantry.

There was insurance on the buildings in the burned area of $600,000, and on stocks, fixtures, etc., $1,650,000; but as the merchants had in their Christmas stocks, as well as other considerable staple stocks, since business was good, it has taken nearly all the insurance money to liquidate the balances unpaid upon them.

The Legislature of the State of Oregon has passed legislation authorizing the remission of the taxes on the property in the city for a period of seven years, which relief will amount to nearly $500,000.

Every stricken city and community in this country has been aided by the Government, even when their necessities were not as dire as those of Astoria. We gave $2,500,000 to San Francisco; we gave $800,000 to Italy for relief purposes when volcanic eruptions had wrought disaster. A partial list of the acts of Congress providing relief for sufferers on account of fires, floods, earthquakes, etc., is given below:

Relief granted by Congress to sufferers on account of fires, floods, carthquakes, etc.

	Amount.	Date.	Statutes at Large.
Venezuela, earthquake in	$50,000.00	May 8, 1812 Feb. 17, 1815	Vol. 2, p. 730. Vol. 3, p. 211.
New York City, sufferers from fire to be relieved from paying certain duties.		Mar. 19, 1836	Vol. 5, p. 6.
Florida, rations to be given sufferers from Indian depredations in.	Indefinite.	Feb. 1, 1836	Vol. 5, p. 131.
Portsmouth, N. H., sufferers from fire to be relieved from paying duties on merchandise.		Feb. 19, 1803	Vol. 6, p. 49.
Norfolk, Va., sufferers from fire given extension of time within which to pay certain duties.		Mar. 19,1804	Vol. 6, p. 53.
Alexandria, Va., for relief of sufferers from fire.	20, 000. 00	Jan. 24, 1827	Vol. 6, p. 356.
Ireland, authority to use U. S. S. Macedonian for transportation of supplies to sufferers in Ireland.		Mar. 3, 1847	Vol. 9, p. 207.
Minnesota, relief of persons damaged by Indian depredations in.	200, 000. 00	Feb. 16, 1863	Vol. 12, p. 652
District of Columbia Arsenal, relief of sufferers from explosion in cartridge factory.	2,000.00	July 4, 1864	Vol. 13, p. 416
Portland, Me., relief of sufferers from fire, certain articles admitted free of duty.		July 4, 1866	Vol. 14, p. 304.
District of Columbia Arsenal, relief of sufferers from explosion.	2, 500. 00	Mar. 17, 1866	Vel. 14, p. 351.

Relief granted by Congress to sufferers on account of fires, floods, earthquakes, etc.-Con. Relief granted by Congress to sufferers on account of fires, floods, earthquakes, etc.-Con.

	Amount.	Date.	Statutes at Large.
Portland, Me., relief granted in payment of taxes of citizens who suffered from fire at.		July 27, 1866	Vol. 14, p. 369.
Southern States: Authority given to use public vessels in transportation of supplies to.		Feb. 22, 1867	Vol. 14, p. 567.
Authority given to charter ves- sels for the transportation of	care and a	Mar. 29, 1867	Vol. 15, p. 24.
supplies. South, Secretary of War authorized to issue supplies of food to sufferers		Mar. 30, 1867	Vol. 15, p. 28.
in. Southern States, purchase of seeds	$50,000.00	do	Do.
for distribution. South, authority given to Secretary of War to distribute certain food		Jan. 31, 1868	Vol. 15, p. 246.
supplies. France and Germany, authority given to use naval vessels for the transportation of supplies to the destitute and suffering peoples of.		Feb. 10, 1871	Vol. 16, p. 596
Chicago, Ill.: Relief of sufferers from fire at Relief of postmaster at, on ac-	Indefinite.	Apr. 5, 1872 Mar. 12, 1872	Vol. 16, p. 31. Vol. 16, p. 646.
Relief of postmaster at, on ac- count of loss due to fire. Mississippi River flood sufferers, President authorized to issue sup-	Indefinite.	Apr. 23, 1874	Vol. 18, p. 34.
plies of food and clothing to. Sufferers from ravages of grasshop-	30, 000. 00	Jan. 25, 1875	Vol. 18, p. 303.
pers, purchase of seeds for. Mississippi flood sufferers, relief of Sufferers from ravages of grasshop-	190, 000, 00	May 13, 1874	Vol. 18, p. 45.
Yellow fever, refrigerating ships for	150, 000. 00 200, 000. 00	Feb. 10, 1875 Apr. 18, 1879	Vol. 18, p. 314. Vol. 1, p. 21.
disinfection of vessels and canoes on account of.
Colored immigrants, articles for relief of, to be admitted free.		Mar. 5,1880	Vol. 21, p. 66.
Ireland, Secretary of Navy authorized to use naval vessels for transporta-		Feb. 25, 1880	Vol. 21, p. 303.
tion of supplies to. Macon, Miss., Secretary of War authorized to send 4,000 rations to cyclone sufferers.		May 4,1880	Vol. 21, p. 306.
Mississippi River flood sufferers: Purchase of seeds for Relief of destitute. Secretary of War authorized to use hospital tents for.	20,000.00 100,000.00	Apr. 11,1882 Feb. 25,1882 Mar. 10,1882	Vol. 22, p. 44. Vol. 22, p. 378. Do.
use hospital tents for. Secretary of War authorized to use Government vessels for transportation and distribution of rations.		Mar. 11,1882	Do.
Furnishing food to	- 150, 000, 00 100, 000, 00	Mar. 21,1882 Apr. 1,1882	Vol. 22, p. 379. Do.
Purchase and distribution of sub- sistence stores, clothing, etc., to.	300,000.00	Feb. 12,1884	Vol. 23, p. 267.
Relief	200,000.00	Feb. 15,1884 Mar. 27,1884	Vol. 23, p. 268. Vol. 23, p. 269.
Yellow fever and cholera, prevention of.	200,000.00	Sept. 26,1888	Vol. 25, p. 630.
Yellow fever, eradication of Japanese crew, recognition of kind of treatment of.	100,000.00 5,000.00	Oct. 12,1888 May 24,1888	Vol. 25, p. 631, Vol. 25, p. 623,
Arkansas, Mississippi, and Louisiana, purchase of tents for flood sufferers. Mississippi River flood sufferers:	25,000.00	Mar. 31,1890	Vol. 26, p. 33.
Authority to hire boats from appropriation for improvement of Mississippi River to rescue.		Apr. 3,1890	Vol. 26, p. 670.
Relief of. Oklahoma, certain unexpended balances made available for the relief of citizens of made destitute by	150, 000, 00	Apr. 21, 1890 Sept. 1, 1890	Vol. 26, p. 671. Vol. 26, p. 679.
drought. Potomac River, removal of ice gorge. Ford Theater disaster:	5, 000. 00	Feb. 15, 1895	Vol. 28, p. 969.
Payment to heirs of legal repre-	125, 000: 00	Mar. 2,1895	Vol. 28, p. 932.
sentatives of persons killed in. Payment to employees on account of.	131, 550. 00	June 8, 1896	Vol. 29, p. 273.
Authority to transport supplies to poor of.		Feb. 19, 1897	Vol. 29. p. 701.
Use of vessels authorized to aid suffering of poor.	900 000 00	June 1, 1897	Vol. 30, p. 219.
Mississippi River flood sufferers, relief of. Cuba, relief of United States citizens	200, 000. 00 50, 000. 00	Apr. 7, 1897 May 24, 1897	Do. Vol. 30, p. 220.
in. Maine, U. S. S., payment to sufferers	00,000.00	Mar. 30, 1898	Vol. 30, p. 346.
on account of destruction of. District of Columbia, prevention of spread of contagious diseases.	50, 000. 00	Feb. 28, 1899	Vol. 30, p. 1390.
San Franciso, Calif.: Relief of sufferers from earthquake Do	1,000,000.00 1,500,000.00 (1)	Apr. 19, 1906 Apr. 24, 1906 June 18, 1906	Vol. 34, p. 827. Vol. 34, p. 828. Vol. 34, p. 850.

indicate in the second of the	Amount.	Date.	Statutes at Large.
Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Louisi- ana, Mississippi, Tennessee, Texas, relief of cyclone sufferers.	$250, 000. 00	May 11, 1908	Vol. 35, p. 572,
Italy, relief of citizens of Ohio River, removal of ice gorges	800, 000, 00 10, 000, 00	Jan. 5, 1909 Jan. 19, 1910	Vol. 35, p. 584.
Costa Rica, sufferers from earthquake. Imperial Valley, Calif., protection of lands and property from Colorado River.	1,000,000.00	May 13, 1910 June 25, 1910	Vol. 35, p. 584. Vol. 36, p. 873. Vol. 36, p. 367. Vol. 36, p. 883.
China, relief of famine sufferers Mississippi Valley, relief of flood sufferers in,	50,000.00 1,239,179.00	Feb. 10,1911 May 9,1912	Vol. 36, p. 919. Vol. 37, p. 633.
Mississippi River, between Head of Passes and Cape Girardeau, main- taining and protecting levees	350, 000. 00	Apr. 3,1912	Vol. 37, p. 78.
against floods. Mississippi River and tributaries:	The state of Maintaining and protecting levees against impending floods.	300, 000. 00	Apr. 16,1912	Vol. 37, p. 85.
Authority to use $1,500,000 for re- pair, improvement, and strengthening levees against floods.		Apr. 30, 1912	Vol. 37, p. 633.
Middle West flood sufferers, reim- bursement to Life Saving Service appropriation for aid to.	5,000.00	Oct. 22, 1913	Vol. 28, p. 211.
Mississippi and Ohio Valleys, Peach Tree, Alabama, and Nebraska re- lief of sufferers from floods, torna-	654; 448. 49	do	Vol. 38, p. 215.
does, and conflagrations, reim- bursement of War Department ap- propriations.
Action of the President in extending aid from various appropriations ratified.		do	Vol. 38, p. 216.
Mississippi Valley flood sufferers, 1913:		100
Credit in account of certain river and harbor appropriations for expenditures.	34, 192. 35	do	Do.
Medical supplies, action of the President in issuing ratified.	8, 239. 40	do	Do.
Flood sufferers in Ohio and Indiana and on the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers, reimbursement to certain naval appropriations for relief.	130, 940. 38	Oct. 22, 1913	Vol. 38, p. 215.
Salem, Mass., relief to sufferers from fire at (expended, $47,140.10).	200, 000, 00	Aug. 1,1914	Vol. 38, p. 681.
Paris, Tex., relief to sufferers from fire at.	(2)	Apr. 11, 1916	Vol. 39, p. 50.
North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, Florida, and Mississippi flood suf- ferers, supply of seeds to be fur- nished, and Army supplies by Quartermaster and Medical De- partments of the Army.	540, 000. 00	Aug. 3, 1916	Vol. 39, p. 434.
West Virginia, relief of flood sufferers (provisions of resolution, appropria- tion just above extended to West Virginia).	540, 000. 00	Aug. 24, 1916	Vol. 39, p. 534.

¹ Tents, blankets, etc., by Army, Navy, and Panama Canal.
² Tents, cots, etc., and supplies to be furnished by War Department.

In addition to the above we have in recent years loaned very considerable sums of money to agricultural sections for the purchase of grain. We have loaned to various nations of Europe since the World War many millions of dollars for relief purposes. We gave also $3,000,000 for the relief of the Philippines.

It seems to me that in view of all the circumstances, and the fact that the Government has hitherto aided stricken cities and communities, this bill should be passed, and the loan, which will surely be duly repaid, be made to this sorely distressed community.

EXTENDING RETIREMENT ACT TO PANAMA CANAL EMPLOYEES.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (S. 4167) to amend an act entitled "An act for the retirement of employees in the classified civil service, and for other purposes," approved May 22, 1920, in order to extend the benefits of said act to certain employees in the Panama Canal Zone.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. STAFFORD. I ask that it may be passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the bill being passed? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 253) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, fixing the commencement of the terms of President and Vice President and

Members of Congress, and fixing the time of the assembling of

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this joint resolution?

Mr. BLANTON. I object.

ANDREWS of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the resolution according to the re-

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair does not recognize the gentleman for that purpose. The Clerk will report the next bill

Mr. ANDREWS of Nebraska. I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

Mr. BLANTON. I make the point of order that that is

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will count.

Mr. HERRICK, I move that the House recess until 8

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That motion is not in order. Mr. HERRICK. Well, I make the motion that we do now

Mr. ANDREWS of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the question of a quorum.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Joint Resolution 441 may remain on the calendar. That is the resolution regarding silver.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from California asks unanimous consent that the resolution referred to may retain its place on the calendar. Is there objection?

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, for the present, I object.

POST OFFICE SITE, TAMAQUA, PA.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 9597) relating to the title to land to be acquired as a site for a post office building at Tamaqua, Pa.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HERRICK. Mr. Speaker, I object. The other post office bill has been objected to, and unless that goes on I will object. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next COMPENSATION OF INJURED EMPLOYEES.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H, R, 14226) to amend an act entitled "An act to provide compensation for employees of the United States suffering injuries while in the performance of their duties, and for other purposes," approved September 7, 1916.

The title of the bill was read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I request that this bill be passed over without losing its place on the calendar.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Wisconsin asks unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without losing its place on the calendar. Is there objection? There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next

MEMORIAL TO JOSEPH J. DARLINGTON.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the resolution (S. J. Res. 240) authorizing the erection, on public grounds, of a memorial to the late Joseph J. Dar-

The title of the resolution was read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to select a suitable site and to grant permission for the erection on public grounds of the United States in the city of Washington, D. C., other than those of the Capitol, the Library of Congress, the White House, and the Mall, of a memorial to the late Joseph J. Darlington, a leader of the Washington bar, as a gift to the people of the city of Washington: Provided, That the site chosen and the design of the memorial shall be approved by the Joint Library Committee of Congress, with the advice of the Commission of Fine Arts; that it shall be erected under the supervision of the Chief of Engineers, and that the United States shall be put to no expense in or by the erection of the said memorial.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment. Page 2, line 3, after the word "erection," insert the words "or maintenance.'

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Michigan offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CRAMTON: Page 2, line 3, after the word erection," insert the words "or maintenance."

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Speaker, I understand it is not proposed to erect a fountain that will cost the Government $2,000 or $3,000 a year to operate, but to guard against this I offer the amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the third reading of the Senate resolution as amended.

The Senate joint resolution as amended was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next bill.

EMBASSY IN PARIS.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 14287) to authorize the Secretary of State to acquire in Paris a site, with an erected building thereon, at a cost not to exceed $300,000, for the use of the diplomatic and consular establishments of the United States.

The title of the bill was read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. BLANTON. I object. Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman withhold his objection?

Mr. FAIRCHILD. Will the gentleman from Texas withheld his objection for a moment?

Mr. BLANTON. I do not think it would be fair. I intend

Mr. MONDELL. If the objection is made, I hope it will be made now.

Mr. BLANTON. I intend to make it, but I will withhold it if the gentleman wants to speak about it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next

AMENDMENT OF THE DAYLIGHT SAVING LAW.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (S. 574) to amend an act entitled "An act to save daylight and to provide standard time for the United States,' as amended.

The title of the bill was read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. BLANTON. I object. Mr. SMITH of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman reserve his objection and permit me to explain the bill?

Mr. BLANTON, I will reserve it if the gentleman will get permission to proceed on that side, but he is not going to get permission to proceed.

Mr. SMITH of Idaho. This is exceedingly important legislation, Mr. Speaker. All the people in the State of Idaho are exceedingly desirious of having it enacted. It transfers southern Idaho from the Pacific to the Mountain time zone, where it was prior to March 19, 1918, when the daylight saving law was The railroad operators, as well as the Rotary, Kienacted. wanis, and other commercial clubs in the various towns and cities, as well as city councils in southern Idaho, have been appealing for the change proposed.

Mr. BLANTON. Why do not the people in Idaho do as they do in New York and New Jersey-fix their clocks to suit themselves?

Mr. STAFFORD. Will the gentleman from Texas yield in that particular?

Mr. BLANTON. I have not the floor. Mr. STAFFORD. Some years ago—I can not recall just when—we fixed regional sections where the railroad time should begin and end. This is merely to include some portions of the railroad time that was left out. It has nothing to do with the proposal for daylight saving.

Mr. BLANTON. I know exactly what it is intended to do. object.

Mr. FAIRCHILD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill (H. R. 14287) in regard to the site for an embassy at Paris may retain its place on the calendar.

Mr. SMITH of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, I make the same request with respect to the bill S. 574, Calendar No. 553.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent that Calendar No. 552 retain its place on the calendar, and the gentleman from Idaho makes a similar request with respect to Calendar No. 553. Is there objection? Mr. BLANTON. Which two bills?

Mr. SMITH of Idaho. Nos. 552 and 553 on the calendar.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. One relating to daylight saving and the other to the embassy at Paris.

Mr. BLANTON. So far as the embassy building is concerned,

To the other, I do not. I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Idaho that the bill S. 574 retain its place on the calendar?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is made to the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. FAIRCHILD].

Mr. ANDREWS of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar No. 548.

COTTON STATISTICS.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next hill

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (S. 3757) authorizing the Department of Commerce to collect and publish additional cotton statistics and information.

The title of the bill was read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to inquire of the gentleman reporting this bill, where is the constitutional warrant to compel private individuals to furnish data, such as this bill requires, to the Census Bureau?

Mr. FAIRCHILD. The Census Bureau holds the data they take inviolate.

Mr. STAFFORD. In the last Congress, when I was not present, as everyone knows, a bill was passed requiring leather users to furnish statistics as to the amount of leather on hand. It required private leather manufacturers to go to the expense of furnishing data every month. I wish to inquire where is the constitutional warrant that gives the Government the right to imprison the manufacturer who refuses to furnish this information?

Mr. FAIRCHILD. By an amendment passed, that privilege was taken out.

Mr. STAFFORD. But you want to fine those who fail to furnish this information. I think you are going pretty far when you are trying to compel a private party to furnish information as to his private affairs under the guise of census taking, and I would like to ascertain from some one the reasons that would justify such procedure.

Mr. WYANT. Mr. Speaker, I object.
The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is made.

Mr. SMITH of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to the consideration of Calendar No. 553.

Mr. FAIRFIELD. Mr. Speaker, there was no objection to my bill.

Mr. WYANT. I objected. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Idaho asks unanimous consent to return to Calendar No. 553. Senate 574. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the bill. The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

An act (8. 574) to amend an act entitled "An act to save daylight and to provide standard time for the United States," as amended.

Be it enacted, etc., That an act entitled "An act to save daylight and to provide standard time for the United States," approved March 19, 1918, as amended, be, and the same hereby is, further amended by adding thereto after section 2 and before section 4, an additional section to be known as section 3, as follows:

"SEC. 3. In the division of territory, and in the definition of the limits of each zone, as hereinbefore provided, so much of the State of Idaho as lies south of the Salmon River, traversing the State from east to west near 45 degrees 30 minutes latitude shall be embraced in the third zone."

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

REPRESSION OF PROSTITUTION. *

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 11490) to enlarge the powers and duties of the Department of Justice in relation to the repression of prostitution for the protection of the armed forces.

The Clerk read the title to the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. MOORES of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the bill be passed over.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Indiana asks unanimous consent that the bill be passed over.

Mr. RAKER. Let us dispose of the bill. It ought to be passed by the House; there is no objection to it.

Mr. MOORES of Indiana. Then I object.
Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Does the gentleman object to the bill retaining its place on the calendar?

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order, The SPEAKER pro tempore. The regular order is, Is there objection?

Mr. MOORES of Indiana. I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Indiana objects, and the Clerk will report the next bill on the calendar.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to speak out of order for one minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Tennessee asks unanimous consent to speak out of order for one minute. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, if I may have the attention of the gentleman from Wyoming, I think there will be no objection to meeting at 11 o'clock to-morrow, if the gentleman should desire to make such a request. I am very doubtful whether the requests that are now being made are receiving the consideration that they ought to receive, but it occurs to me that in view of circumstances that exist, known to all of us, the hour has about arrived when we should adjourn.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I should like to go through with the calendar. It will take but a few moments more. Bills that are objected to can go back on the calendar and we ought to be able to finish in half an hour, and then I would like to adjourn until 11 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. What has occurred to me is that the objections that are made to bills are apparently made in temper.

MEETING AT 11 O'CLOCK TO-MORROW.

Mr. MONDELL. I hope the gentlemen who have been irritated will calm themselves and let us finish the calendar. It will only take 20 or 25 minutes. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Speaker, that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet at 11 o'clock a. m. to-morrow.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Wyoming asks unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet at 11 o'clock a. m. to-morrow. Is there ob-

Mr. HERRICK. I will not object to that if the gentleman will assure me that he will not freeze me out of five minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. MONDELL. I never froze anyone out.
Mr. HERRICK. Mr. Speaker, with that assurance I withdraw my objection. [Laughter.]
The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. FAIRFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar No. 554. I understand there was a misunderstanding that led to the objection.

Mr. WYANT. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my objection. I misunderstood the character of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Indiana asks unanimous consent to return to Calendar No. 554. Is there objection? Mr. STAFFORD. I do not object to returning if we return under a reservation of objection.

Mr. MONDELL. To return under a reservation of objection at this hour I do not think is a kindness to anyone.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. I object. Mr. FAIRFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that No. 554 on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent, the bill S. 3757, may be placed back on the calendar without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Indiana asks unanimous consent to place the bill referred to back on the calendar. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. ANDREWS of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that Calendar No. 548 be returned to the calendar. Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I object.

COMPENSATION OF CERTAIN INJURED UNITED STATES EMPLOYEES.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 14226) to amend an act entitled "An act to provide compensation for employees of the United States suffering injuries while in the performance of their duties, and for other purposes," approved September 7, 1916.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act entitled "An act to provide compensation for employees of the United States suffering injuries while in the performance of their duties, and for other purposes," approved September 7, 1916, be amended as follows:

That section 40 of said act is amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 40. That wherever used in this act—
"The singular includes the plural and the masculine includes the feminine.

"SEC. 40. That wherever used in this act—
"The singular includes the plural and the masculine includes the feminine.
"The term 'employee' includes all civil employees of the United States and of the Panama Raliroad Co.
"The term 'commission' shall be taken to refer to the United States Employees' Compensation Commission provided for in section 28.
"The term 'monthly pay' shall be taken to refer to the monthly pay at the time of the injury.
"The term 'injury 'includes, in addition to injury by accident, any disease proximately caused by the employment. Any award made by the Compensation Commission under the act of September 7, 1916, for an injury sustained prior to the passage of this act, shall be valid, if such award would be valid if made in respect to an injury sustained after the passage of this act.
"The term 'compensation' includes the money allowance payable to an employee or his dependents and any other benefits paid for out of the compensation fund."

SEC. 2. That section 37 of said act is amended to read as follows:
"SEC. 37. That if the original claim for compensation has been made within the time specified in section 20, the commission may, at any time, on its own motion or on application, review the award, and, in accordance with the facts found on such review, may end, diminish, or increase the compensation previously awarded, or, if compensation has been refused or discontinued, award compensation. In the absence of fraud or mistake in mathematical calculation, the findings of fact in, and the decision of the commission upon the merits of any claim presented under or authorized by this act shall not be subject to review by any other administrative officer, employee, or agent of the United States."

With the following committee amendment:

With the following committee amendment:

Page 2, beginning with line 22, strike out all of section 2.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

AMENDING CHINA TRADE ACT.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was H. J. Res. 455, to amend the China trade act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?
Mr. BLACK. Mr. Speaker, I object.

CLERKS AND STENOGRAPHERS IN GRAND JURY SESSIONS.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 14084) to amend section 1025 of the Revised Statutes

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HERRICK. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, I wish the gentleman would withdraw his objection. This is a very important proposition and can do no possible harm. It is recommended by two attorneys general.

Mr. HERRICK. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my objection. Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. I understand this bill is to authorize the presence of clerks and stenographers in grand jury sessions.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. It has been practiced for a number of years, but a question has been raised as to the validity of indictments where that has occurred. It seems to me that no harm can come out of a thing of that kind.

Mr. STAFFORD. What is the necessity for having clerks rather than stenographers present in grand jury sessions?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. The clerks are stenographers, in fact. They appear and take the testimony, and very often by knowing what the testimony is before the grand jury they are able to conduct the case with much less expense, with much more expedition. There ought not to be any objection to this proposition.

Mr. STAFFORD. I thought the recommendation of the department was solely for permitting stenographers rather than clerks.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. They are really clerks.
Mr. STAFFORD. I think the sanctity of the grand jury should be preserved as much as possible and not allow clerks and outsiders to invade those sacred precincts.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. They are employees of the Attorney General's office, and they do, in fact, take the testimony.

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Speaker, I object.

CONTINUING TERMS OF GRAND JURIES.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 14085) to amend section 284 of the Judicial Code of the United States.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, is this the bill that provides that grand juries shall not be summoned-

Mr. VOLSTEAD. There is only one change proposed. the end of a term the grand jury is in session and is considering a matter, this provides that it may continue and finish that particular matter, so that you would not be compelled to call a new grand jury for the purpose of investigating that particular thing.

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman had one bill which I thought was a very good bill, which would prevent the summoning of grand juries by the clerk and the marshal until the district attorney approved.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. This is the law as it exists, with one exception.

Mr. BLANTON. And you are reciting the present law as a preamble?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Simply that the grand jury, if it is engaged in the investigation of a matter, may continue and conclude that after the term of court.

Mr. BLANTON. There is just one objection to that, and I want to get the gentleman's view upon it. We do not want to pass a law that is not a salutary law. Usually when the court is forced to end a term the judge goes somewhere else to open court at another place. That place is sometimes two or three hundred miles distant from where he last held court. What would be the situation after the judge left and went away 200 miles with his grand jury sitting and some witness should come in and refuse to testify? 'process to make him testify. The grand jury would be without

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Oh, I do not think that is true. Mr. BLANTON. Things of that kind could arise. I do not think a grand jury should sit when there is no court to direct them or to stand behind them and enforce their orders

Mr. VOLSTEAD. When the term ends there should be some way of continuing that grand jury investigation.

Mr. BLANTON. Is there any recommendation as to how long the grand jury may sit?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. It may sit to the end of the term.
Mr. BLANTON. I mean in this bill.
Mr. VOLSTEAD. No; except this, that it may only finish the business that has been started.

Mr. BLANTON. That would be a question of opinion as to what it had done. A judge could leave his town and go two or three hundred miles away and that jury could sit until he comes back

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Oh, there is a limit on that.
Mr. BLANTON. I do not think that this bill should pass. I object.

AMENDING SECTION 81 OF THE LAWS RELATING TO THE JUDICIARY.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 14272) to amend section 81 of the act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary," approved March 3, 1911. The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I do not see this on the calendar.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The bill is on the House Cal-

Mr. STAFFORD. Let the bill be read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the bill. The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section S1 of the act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary," approved March 3, 1911, as amended by the act of February 23, 1916, and the act of April 27, 1916, be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. S1. The State of Iowa is divided into two judicial districts, to be known as the northern and southern districts of Iowa.

"The northern district shall include the territory embraced on the 1st day of July, 1910, in the counties of Allamakee, Dubuque, Buchanan, Clayton, Delaware, Fayette, Winneshiek, Howard, Chickasaw, Bremer, Blackhawk, Floyd, Mitchell, and Jackson, which shall constitute the eastern division of said district: also the territory embraced on the date last mentioned in the counties of Jones, Cedar, Linn, Iowa, Benton, Tama, Grundy, and Hardin, which shall constitute the Cedar Rapids division; also the territory embraced on the date last mentioned in the counties of Emmet, Palo Alto, Pocahontas, Calhoun, Carroll, Kossuth, Humboldt, Webster, Winnebago, Hancock, Wright, Hamilton, Worth, Cerro Gordo, Franklin, and Butler, which shall constitute the central division; also the territory embraced on the date last mentioned in the counties of Dickinson, Clay, Buena Vista, 8ac, Oscoela, O'Brien, Cherokee, Ida, Lyon, Sloux, Plymouth, Woodbury, and Monona, which shall constitute the western division.

"Terms of the district court for the castern division shall be held at Dubuque on the fourth Tuesday in April and the first Tuesday in December; and at Waterloo on the second Tuesdays in May and September; for the Cedar Rapids division, at Cedar Rapids on the first Tuesday in April and the fourth Tuesday in September; for the central division, at Fort Dodge on the second Tuesdays in June and November, and at Mason City on the fourth Tuesdays in June and November; and for the western division, at Sioux City on the fourth Tuesday in May and the third Tuesday in October.

"The southern district shall include the territory embraced on the 1st day of July, 1910, in the counties of Louisa, Henry, Des Moines, Lee, and Van Buren, which shall constitute the eastern division of said district; also the territory embraced on the date last mentioned in the counties of Marshall, Story, Boone, Greene, Guthrie, Dallas, Polk, Jasper, Poweshlek, Marlon, Warren, and Madison, which shall constitute the central division of said district; also the territory embraced on the date last mentioned in the counties of Crawford, Harrison, Shelby, Audubon, Cass, Pottawattamie, Mills, and Montgomery, which shall constitute the western division of said district; also the territory embraced on the date last mentioned in the counties of Scott, Muscatine, Washington, Johnson, and Clinton, which shall constitute the Davenport division of said district; also the territory embraced on the date last mentioned in the counties of Bavis, Appanoose, Mahaska, Keokuk, Jefferson, Monroe, and Wapelo, which shall constitute the Davenport division of said district; also the territory embraced on the date last mentioned in the counties o

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman from Iowa or some member of the commit-tee inform the House how far Mason City is from Fort Dodge? Mr. HAUGEN. It is 73 miles. Mason City is in the north-east corner of the district and Fort Dodge is in the northwest corner. Mason City has railroad facilities and is one of the largest railroad centers in the State and is more accessible to a majority of the people in the district.

Mr. STAFFORD. Has this the approval of the Department of Justice?

Mr. HAUGEN. It has not been submitted, but I know of no objection to it.

Mr. STAFFORD. Has it the approval of the district judge? Mr. HAUGEN. I have not taken it up with the judge, but the bar has passed a resolution asking—

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman ought to answer the question of whether it has the approval of the judge and the district at-

Mr. HAUGEN. I have not asked the approval of the depart-It is a matter that is generally conceded because of the location, which makes it advantageous to the people of that community and the attorneys as well. I trust there will be no objection to it. I know of no objection.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, until the judge approves of it,

I object

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is heard.

STATUE BY JOSÉ CLABA, PERSONIFYING "SERENITY."

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was S. J. Res. 242, authorizing the erection on public grounds in the District of Columbia of a statue by José Clara, personifying "Serenity."

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? Mr. HERRICK. I object.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE RIO GRANDE.

The next business in order on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 12378) granting the consent of Congress to maintain a bridge across the Rio Grande River. The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The Clerk will report the bill. The Chair

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to F. M. Rose, E. F. Measles, D. Newton, H. M. Hutchinson, and B. G. Stafford, comprising a copartnership known as the San Felipe Bridge Co., and their successors and assigns, to maintain and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Rio Grande River at or near the city of Del Rio, State of Texas, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

Sec. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

expressly reserved.

The committee amendments were read as follows:

The committee amendments were read as follows:

Page 1, line 3, after the word "to" strike out "F. M. Rose, E. F. Measles, D. Newton, H. M. Hutchinson, and B. G. Stafford, comprising a partnership known as the San Felipe Bridge Co., and their," and insert "the Citizens' Bridge Co., a corporation, and its."

Page 2, after the figures "1906" in line 2 insert: "Provided, That the authority hereby granted shall terminate and end on the 1st day of July, 1925, if within that time the Del Rio & Las Vacas Bridge Co., a copartnership organized and entered into under the laws of the State of Texas, shall construct and complete a bridge at or near said location in accordance with the authority given to said copartnership by the act entitled "An act to authorize the construction of a bridge over the Rio Grande between the cities of Del Rio, Tex., and Las Vacas, Mexico, approved July 1, 1922: Provided further, That nothing herein shall operate to extend the time within which said Del Rio & Las Vacas Bridge Co. is required by the act approved July 1, 1922, to begin and complete said bridge."

The question was taken and the committee amendments were

The question was taken and the committee amendments were agreed to

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read the third time, was read the third time, and passed.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. BOX. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks on H. J. Res. 171.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent to revise and extend his remarks in the manner indicated. Is there objection?

Mr. SHAW. I object.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that Calendar No. 562 retain its place on the calendar, objected to awhile

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent that No. 562 retain its place on the calendar. Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. That would not be of any value; there is no chance of its being considered any more.

DEATH OF HON. W. BOURKE COCKRAN, REPRESENTATIVE FROM NEW YORK.

Mr. RIORDAN. Mr. Speaker, it becomes my painful duty to report to the House the death of my colleague, Hon. W. BOURKE COCKRAN, Representative from the State of New York.

At this late hour of the day and at this late day of the session there is only opportunity now to offer this resolution of adjournment. At the first suitable opportunity I shall ask for occasion for the House to pay tribute to his memory. I offer the following resolution, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York offers a resolution, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved. That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. W. BOURKE COCKRAN, Representative from the State of New York.

Resolved. That a committee of 20 Members of the House, with such Members of the Senate as may be joined, be appointed to attend the Members of the Senate as an action of the senate as an action of the senate as a senate as the resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair appoints the following committee to attend the funeral: Mr. Riordan, Mr. Mott, Mr. Carew, Mr. Siegel, Mr. Sullivan, Mr. Kline of New York, Mr. London, Mr. Griffin, Mr. Mead, Mr. Oliver, Mr. Dale, Mr. Tucker, Mr. Fish, Mr. Linthicum, Mr. Fairchild, Mr. Sabath, Mr. Connally of Texas, Mr. Ten Eyck, Mr. Chandler of New York, and Mr. Jones of Texas.

ADJOURNMENT.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the additional resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect this House do now

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 45 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned, under the order previously made, until to-morrow, Friday, March 2, 1923, at 11 o'clock a. m.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

1025. Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, a letter from the Secretary of the Navy, transmitting a schedule of claims paid from the appropriation "Pay, miscellaneous," during the fiscal year 1922 for damages to private property for which men in the naval service and the Marine Corps have been found to be responsible, was taken from the Speaker's table and referred to the Committee on Expenditures in the Navy Department.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII,

Mr. SNYDER: Committee on Indian Affairs. S. 4544. act to authorize the extension of the period of restriction against allenation on surplus lands allotted to minor members of the Kansas or Kaw Tribe of Indians in Oklahoma; without amendment (Rept. No. 1741). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. WINSLOW: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. H. R. 14443. A bill for the relief of certain disbursing agents under the Department of Commerce; without amendment (Rept. No. 1742). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. LANGLEY: Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, H. J. Res. 462. A joint resolution authorizing the President of the United States to lease certain land in the District of Columbia and pay rental from revenues derived from the opera-tion of the Government hotels for Government workers; with amendments (Rept. No. 1744). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. SNYDER: Committee on Indian Affairs. S. 3855. An act to quiet the title to lands within Pueblo Indian land grants, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 1748). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. PORTER: Committee on Foreign Affairs. H. J. Res. 459. Joint resolution authorizing and requesting the Secretary of State to enter into negotiations with the Dominion of Canada with reference to the straightening and deepening of the channel of the Roseau River north of the international boundary line; without amendment (Rept. No. 1749). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. FORDNEY: Committee on Ways and Means. S. 4245. An act to provide the necessary organization of the customs service for an adequate administration and enforcement of the tariff act of 1922 and all other customs revenue laws; with amendment (Rept. No. 1750). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. MOORES of Indiana: Joint Select Committee on Disposition of Useless Executive Papers. H. Rept. 1743. A report on disposition of useless papers in the United States Veterans'

Bureau. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. MOORES of Indiana: Joint Select Committee on Disposition of Useless Executive Papers. H. Rept. 1747. A report on disposition of useless papers in the United States Navy Department. Ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII,

Mr. SWING: Committee on Naval Affairs. H. R. 12340. A bill for the relief of Gordon G. MacDonald; without amendment (Rept. No. 1745). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. KLINE of New York: Committee on Naval Affairs. H. A bill for the relief of Lieut. Commander Jerome E. Morse, United States Navy, retired; without amendment (Rept. No. 1746). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:
By Mr. SHAW: A bill (H. R. 14449) for the purchase of a site for a public building at Roodhouse, Ill.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. MALONEY (by request): A bill (H. R. 14450) to amend section 35 of an act entitled "An act to provide a civil government for Porto Rico, and for other purposes," approved March 2, 1917; to the Committee on Insular Affairs.

Mr. PATTERSON of New Jersey (by request): A bill (H. R. 14451) to amend section 96, chapter 5, of the act of Congress of March 3, 1911, entitled "The Judicial Code"; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. UPSHAW: A bill (H. R. 14452) to increase the compensation of Senators, Representatives, Delegates, and Resident Commissioners; to the Committee on the Judiciary

By Mr. ROBSION: A bill (H. R. 14453) to abolish the Railroad Labor Board; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. VINSON: A joint resolution (H. J. Res. 463) to extend the powers of the War Finance Corporation to March 4, 1924; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. JOHNSON of Washington: A joint resolution (H. J. Res. 464) amending and supplementing the immigration act of May 19, 1921; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. IRELAND: A resolution (H. Res. 569) authorizing the Clerk of the House to pay out of the contingent fund of the House to Margaret F, Kerr and Hugh S, Ryder one month's salary as clerks to the late Hon. W. Bourke Cockran; to the Committee on Accounts.

By Mr. ANDREW of Massachusetts: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Massachusetts, relative to retirement of disabled emergency officers of the United States Army; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Massachusetts, in favor of the ship subsidy bill, so called; to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. GALLIVAN: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Massachusetts, favoring the ship subsidy bill; to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. ROGERS: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Massachusetts, relative to retirement of disabled emergency officers of the United States Army; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Massachusetts, favoring the ship subsidy bill; to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BLAND of Indiana: A bill (H. R. 14454) granting a pension to Martha A. Hall; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CANTRILL: A bill (H. R. 14455) for the relief of the estate of Sigmund Luscher; to the Committee on War Claims. By Mr. FOCHT: A bill (H. R. 14456) for the relief of the victims of the Knickerbocker Theater disaster; to the Committee on Claims

By Mr. SNELL: A bill (H. R. 14457) granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth Gonier; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

7487. By the SPEAKER (by request): Petition of the convention of department of superintendence, National Education Association, urging the passage of the teachers' salary bill; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

7488. By Mr. CHINDBLOM: Petition of Annie Greening and 1,215 other citizens of Illinois, for the passage of the legislation embodied in House Joint Resolution 412 providing for the relief of the distress and famine conditions in Germany and Austria: to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

7489. By Mr. CRAMTON: Petition of John Meyer and other citizens of Mount Clemens, Mich., urging passage of the resolution to give aid to the people of Germany and Austria; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

7490. By Mr. KISSEL: Petition of the National Association of Woolen and Worsted Overseers, Webster, Mass., favoring legislation to establish greater uniformity in the hours of labor in the textile industries of the United States; to the Committee Labor.

7491. Also, petition of National Federation of Federal Employees, Washington, D. C., urging passage of House bill 14226; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

7492. By Mr. ROUSE: Petition of 102 citizens of Campbell County, Ky., protesting against the enactment of any legisla-tion toward the change of the present immigration laws that will permit admission of aliens other than provided by present laws; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

7493. By Mr. SINCLAIR: Petition of Northern Pacific System Lodge, No. 87, Brotherhood Railroad Signal Men of America, protesting against unrestricted immigration; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

7494. By Mr. SMITH of Michigan: Petition of Battle Creek Trades and Labor Council, of Battle Creek, Mich., urging restriction of immigration; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

SENATE.

FRIDAY, March 2, 1923.

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a. m.

The Chaplain, Rev. J. J. Muir, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Our Father, we bless Thee for the privileges continued unto us, for all the mercies with which Thou art crowning our days, for the opportunities of service for a loved country, and for the high honor of being related to Thee in all the duties and obligations of life. Hear us this morning; be with us constantly; and ever help us to realize Thy presence. We ask through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

The reading clerk proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings, when, on request of Mr. Curtis and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with and the Journal was approved.

CALL OF THE ROLL.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will call the roll

The reading clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Fernald	Ledge	Shields
Ball	Frelinghuysen	McCormick	Shortridge
Bayard	George	McCumber	Smith
Borah	Gerry	McKellar	Smoot
Brandegee	Glass	McKinley	Spencer
Brookhart	Gooding	McNary	Stanley
Bursum	Hale	Moses	Sterling
Calder	Harreld	Myers	Sutherland
Cameron	Harris	New	Swanson
Capper	Harrison	Norbeck	Townsend
Caraway	Heflin	Norris	Wadsworth
Colt	Johnson	Oddie	Walsh, Mass.
Couzens	Jones, N. Mex.	Overman	Walsh, Mont.
Culherson	Jones, Wash.	Page	Warren
Cummins	Kellogg	Phipps	Watson
Curtis	Kendrick	Pittman	Weller
Dial	King	Ransdell	Willis
Dillingham	Ladd	Reed, Pa.	WILLIS
Edge	La Follette	Robinson
Ernst	Lenroot
EATTINE	Tenioot	Sheppard

Mr. CALDER. I wish to announce the absence of the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. McLean], the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. Pepper], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. OWEN], and the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HITCHCOCK] on business of the Senate.

Mr. PHIPPS. I desire to announce the absence of my colleague [Mr. Nicholson] on account of illness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Jones of Washington in the chair). Seventy-seven Senators have answered to their names. There is a quorum present.

PROPOSED CONSIDERATION OF THE CALENDAR.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, before we proceed to routine morning business, I would like to submit a request for a unanimous-consent agreement. I ask unanimous consent that at the conclusion of the routine morning business the calendar be called for unobjected House bills and unobjected Senate resolutions until they are completed or not later than 1 o'clock

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas asks unanimous consent that at the conclusion of the routine morning business the Senate proceed to the calendar for the consideration of unobjected House bills and unobjected Senate resolutions. Is there objection?

Mr. CUMMINS. Does the Senator from Kansas mean that we are to begin at the beginning of the calendar?

Mr. CURTIS. No; to begin where we left off at the last call.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Beginning with calendar No. 1035.

SUTHERLAND. I should like to ask whether that Mr.

would include unobjected joint resolutions?

Mr. CURTIS. No; I said Senate resolutions. If a joint resolution has passed the House the request would include it, but not otherwise.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Would it not be well to include all foint resolutions?

Mr. CURTIS. Very well; I will include unobjected joint resolutions.

Mr. KING. May I inquire of the Senator why he dis-criminates against Senate bills and in favor of Senate joint resolutions or Senate resolutions?

Mr. CURTIS. The House has been holding night sessions to pass Senate bills. There are quite a number of House bills on the Senate calendar. In my judgment, no bill can pass at this session that has not already passed one House or the other. I think it would be useless to pass a Senate bill at this time, because it would be impossible to get it through the House before Sunday. I believe we owe it to the House to dispose of their measures.

Mr. KING. When the Senator says House bills he means reported bills?

Mr. CURTIS. I mean those reported and on the calendar. Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I have a bill on the calendar that is a private measure and there can not be any objection to it. It has not passed the House, and that bill can not come up for consideration under the proposed agreement.

Mr. CURTIS. After we have concluded the call of the calendar under the unanimous-consent agreement the Senator could ask unanimous consent to take up his bill. I do not suppose anyone would object to its consideration.

Mr. HARRISON. That might be a long time off. I think I shall object to the request of the Senator from Kansas.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Mississippi objects.

Mr. CURTIS. Then I ask unanimous consent that at the conclusion of the routine morning business, the Senate shall proceed to the consideration of unobjected bills and resolutions on the calendar, beginning where we left off at the last call of the calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas asks unanimous consent that at the conclusion of the routine morning business, the Senate shall proceed to the consideration of unobjected bills and resolutions on the calendar, beginning at Calendar No. 1035. Is there objection?

Mr. McKELLAR. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee objects.

SUGAR PRICES AS AFFECTED BY THE FORDNEY-M'CUMBER TARIFF.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Mr. President, recent information of a further advance in the price of sugar suggests the appropriateness of calling the attention of the public to the effect of the tariff in increasing the price of sugar since the passage of the Fordney-McCumber tariff law.

When the Fordney-McCumber law became effective last September, the wholesale price of refined sugar was 6.25 cents per pound. It is now 9 cents, or about 44 per cent price increase in five months. This is the highest price sugar has reached in the last 40 years, with the exception of five months in 1919 and the average price for 1920. It is interesting to compare the New York refined price announced February 3, 1923, with the average price for recent years: The average for 1922 was 5.904 cents; for 1921, 6.207 cents; for 1920, 11.309 cents; from August 12 to December 31, 1919, 9.003 cents.

The present wholesale price of 9 cents is the highest since 1883, with the exception of five months in 1919, and the average for 1920, as I have said before, which was the peak period of war-time inflation. The retail price is now 10 cents per pound in New York, and from 11 to 12 cents per pound in other parts of the United States.

The present tariff is responsible for 2 cents per pound of this increase price, according to the United States Sugar Associa-I request that a recent letter and review of this question published by this association be printed in the Record.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, if that is to go into the Record,
I simply want to say that if time permits, I shall answer not only the article that is to go into the RECORD but circulars that have been sent out by the refiners of the country, which are filled full of lies.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. I assumed the Senator would say it was all a lie; but a categorical denial is not an answer. I hope the Senator will answer, if he can, the claim that the Republican tariff is responsible for the present high price of sugar. I am asking to have this communication inserted in the RECORD this morning because of comments in the press of the country to-day with reference to the very high increase in the price of sugar recently announced.

Mr. SMOOT. As I said the other day, before the Fordney-McCumber Tariff Act went into effect sugar in Cuba sold at $1.67 per hundred. What is it selling for to-day in Cuba?

There is no need of discussing the question of a tariff on sugar at all. I say now that the refiners who control the crop sugar at all. I say now that the reinlers who control the ctop of sugar in Cuba have put the price up from $1.67 per hundred to over $4.75 for 96 per cent sugar. Did the Fordney tariff law have anything to do with it? Not a thing.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Utah

vield to me'

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I call for the regular order. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The regular order is the presentation of petitions and memorials.

Mr. HARRISON, Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Mississippi will state it

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. I ask that my request be passed upon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Mississippi desires to make a parliamentary inquiry, and will state it.

Mr. HARRISON. The Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] made a statement, and immediately the regular order is called for. Is it in order for me to say now that I hope when the Senator from Utah shall make his speech defending the present iniquitous rate on raw sugar he will not wait until the last minute, as he did in the last Congress, to make his speech, but will make it early enough to give those of us who opposed the present tariff law an opportunity to reply to it?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair does not regard the statement of the Senator from Mississippi as a parliamentary inquiry, but his statement, having been made, will appear in the RECORD. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Massachusetts? The Chair hears none, and the communication will be printed in the RECORD.

The communication from the United States Sugar Association is as follows:

UNITED STATES SUGAR ASSOCIATION, New York, February 23, 1923.

Hon. David I. Walsh,

Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.

Honorable Str: Inclosed find a review of the effects of the tariff on sugar since the passage of the Fordney-McCumber bill. When the law went into effect the price of refined sugar was 6.25 cents per pound, and it is now 9 cents per pound, or an advance of 2.75 cents per pound. This is the highest price in 40 years, with the exception of five months in 1920 and the average for 1910. This has been due mainly to the 1,200,000 long tons less supplies in Cuba at the beginning of the year than there was at the beginning of last year, and such a situation did not call for a tariff increase to raise the price for the benefit of the domestic beet and other tariff-favored sugar interests at the expense of the American public.

The domestic beet-sugar interests are following all advances in price and selling their product on New York basis plus freight in their immediate territory. They are doing this despite the fact that their costs have not been advanced the same as that of cane refiners, who are obliged to purchase their raw product from day to day at market quotations.

obliged to purchase their raw product from day to day at market quotations.

Desire to call your special attention to the fact that the benefit domestic beet-sugar interests derive from the tariff exceeds the price they guarantee the factory, which averages $5 per ton. At 2 cents per ton tariff benefit the beet factories of Colorado obtain $5.22 from a ton of beets; of Idaho, $6.18; Nebraska, $5.35; Utah, $5.62. The only time that the farmer obtains more than the guaranteed price from the factory is when they sell their refined sugar above 5 cents per pound. All of the above benefit to the extent of $2.61, $3.09, $2.67, $2.81 per ton, respectively, on each increase of 1 cent per pound, and give the farmer $1 of this amount, and all of the above increase is paid by the consumer.

While the Cuban tariff rate is 1.7648 cents per pound, it takes 107 pounds of 96 degrees test sugar to make 100 pounds of refined, which makes the tariff cost 1.89 cents per pound instead of 1.7648 cents per pound, and other added expense due to the tariff brings the total cost up to 2 cents per pound. You can appreciate that the actual cost of the tariff is more than the Cuban rate when I inform you that the drawback received on refined sugar exported is 1.88 cents per pound.

The statistics upon which all of the conclusions are based were obtained from the records of the Department of Agriculture or from Truman G, Palmer's "Concerning Sugar," and may be relied upon as not at all exaggerating the position of the domestic beet-sugar interests.

Trusting that you may have an opportunity to confront Senator Sanoor and other high tariff advocates with the result of their legislation and embarrass them to the same extent they were embarrassed when reminded of the high prices brought about by the increased tariff on wool, I beg to remain,

Very truly yours,

Assistant Secretary.

M. DORAN, Assistant Secretary.

Under the Fordney-McCumber tariff bill the rate of 2.206 cents per pound imposed upon full duty and 1.7648 cents upon Cuban raw sugars, 96 degrees test, are the highest since the general rate of 2.24 cents per pound of the tariff act of 1888. They are even 30 per cent higher than the corresponding rates of 1.685 cents and 1.348 cents per pound of the Payne and exactly 76.48 per cent more than the corresponding rates of 1.256 cents and 1.0048 cents per pound of the Underwood bills. The importations of 450,000 long tons of raw sugar annually from Hawaii, 25,000 from Porto Rico, and 215,000 from the Philippines are duty free: sugar produced within our tariff wall from Louisiana and Texas cane. 215,000 long tons, annually, avoid the tariff or any special form of tax. As the duty-free and domestic cane-sugar interests sell their product upon the duty-paid Cuban basis, and the domestic beet factories sell their finished product upon the basis of New York refined sugar, which includes the cost of the tariff, at least 1.7648 cents per pound is added to the cost of every pound consumed by the American public. EFFECT OF THE TARIFF ON SUGAR SINCE PASSAGE OF TARIFF BILL.

The United States' annual consumption of sugar is new 5,092.758 tong tons of 2,240 pounds each, which is equal to 11,407.779,920 pounds, or 108.18 pounds per capita. Hence, upon the Cuban basis, the tariff costs American consumers a total of $201,324,456 annually, only 60 per cent of which, or $121,000,000, inures to the benefit of the Government as revenue collected from Cuban importations, the balance of 40 interests at the expense of American consumers through the tariff levided upon Cuban importations. But as 107 pounds of 90 degrees refused, and the duty on these extra 7 pounds at 1.7648 cents per pound is equivalent per pound instead of 1.7648 cents of the tariff is 1.89 cents per pound instead of 1.7648 cents ere cost of the tariff is 1.80 cents per pound instead of 1.7648 cents ere pound of the tariff is 1.80 cents loss in weight upon raw sugars stored or in transit before melting, and requirement of additional cash investment are further increased by the atiff increase to at least 0.11 of a cent per pound more, and must be passed on to the consumer. The actual cost of the present tariff averannually to every man, woman, and child in the United States, or a total of $228,155.558.

As it was contended during the course of the tariff debates that increases in the duty on sugar would not result in an increased price to consumers, in fact, a set of statistics graphically prepared having a cubally decline if the duty was advanced and that the price of sugar invariably decline dhen the Louisiana cane and domestic best crops came on the market, actual experience since the law went into effect the law was enacted a special clause to the effect that if there was any increase in the tariff on sugar between the date of the contract price. On September 22, 1922, the price of raw sugar was 3 cents per pound, the duty-paid price of raw sugar for the law was enacted a special clause to the effect that if there was any increase in the tariff on sugar between the date of the contract per pound. On September 25, 1922, th same period in 1921.

During all of this advance the price of raw sugar reflected the increase in the tariff, and refiners' margin was less than it was before the increase took effect, thus demonstrating that refiners did not take advantage of the situation to increase their margin of profit, as contended by the beet-sugar advocates. This development was the culmination of tariff discriminations against Cuba for a year and a half, which forced her to sacrifice her surplus production. As a result, her surplus in 1922 (September) was 400,000 long tons, as compared with 1,500,000 long tons in 1921, to supply our needs during the three months pending receipts from her new crop. Attention was called to this situation during the course of the Senate debates as an unanswerable argument for a reduction instead of an increase in duties, but was entirely ignored.

There was no relief from this advance until the advent of the new able argument for a reduction instead of an increase in duties, but was entirely ignored.

There was no relief from this advance until the advent of the new Cuban crop, which began to make its influence felt on December 14, forcing a decline from 7.25 cents to 7.16 cents per pound, and further declines until the price reached 6.50 cents per pound on January 27, 1923. Production of new crop Cuban sugars up to this date had been 675,000 long tons, as compared with 354,000 the year previous, and exports to 306,000 long tons, as compared with 68,000 long tons in 1921. Thus Cuba was the usual dependable reservoir of sugar supplies for the relief of American consumers in the absence of consideration by domestic tariff-favored interests.

This decline, however, proved temporary. By February 1 the price of refined had advanced to 6.70 cents per pound, owing to the increase in the price of duty-paid raw sugars from 5.99 cents to 5.28 cents per pound, and on February 8 to 7.25 cents per pound, on account of the further increase on duty-paid raws to 5.78 cents per pound. On February 8 the United States Department of Commerce Issued a misleading statement tending to show that there was a world's prospective shortage in production over consumption of 725,000 tons, and on the same date Gume-Mejer, a leading authority on Cuban conditions, reduced his estimate of the Cuban 1923 crop from 4.193,500 long tons to 3,800,000 long tons. As a result there was wild speculation in raw sugars, which at one time forced the price of duty-paid sugars as high as 7.22 cents. Between February 12 and February 15, when the prices of duty-paid raw sugars on the New York Sugar Exchange were fluctuating between 5.78 cents and 7.22 cents per pound, the refiners did not advance their prices of refined, but withdrew from the market, and did not again quote prices for refined sugar until the afterneon of February 15, at an advance to 8.25 cents per pound, because the price of duty-paid raws had then become fairly steady between 6.75 cents and 7.03 cents per pound. Refiners did all in their power to discourage this advance, but were obliged to follow the raw market. Although domestic beet sugar factories have not had their costs advanced by the fluctuations which affected cane refiners, they have advanced the price of their product to 8.25 cents per pound. New York basis. Thus the price of sugar has advanced exactly 2 cents per pound since the tariff law went into effect, more than ever emphasizing that there was no occasion for an increase in the tariff when the sugar market was so sensitive to the least influence on account of threatened scarcity of supplies.

As the burden fell upon consumers on account of the failure of these two contentions, let us determine who profited by the increase in tariff subsidy.

According to the authority of the United States Department of Agriculture, the United States average price paid beet farmers by beet factories in 1919 was $11.74 for a ton of beets averaging 246.8 pounds of refined sugar, and, in 1920, $11.63 for a ton of beets averaging 272.8 pounds of refined sugar, or an average for the two years of $11.685 for a ton of beets averaging 275.2 pounds of sugar under a tariff rate of 1 cent per pound, while the average paid in 1921 was $0.32 for a ton of beets averaging 276.5 pounds of refined sugar, under a tariff rate of 1 cent per pound, while the average paid in 1921 was $0.32 for a ton of beets averaging 270.5 pounds of refined sugar, or an average of 263.4 pounds of refined su 1921 and 1922.

Nebraska: Average price of $11.43 for a ton of beets averaging 243.5 pounds of sugar in 1919 and 1920; average price of $5.785 for a ton of beets averaging 267.4 pounds of sugar for 1921 and 1922, or an average of $5.645 less for 23.9 pounds more sugar in 1921 and 1922 than the average for 1919 and 1920; average, 1916–1921, $9.24 for a ton of beets averaging 253.6 pounds of sugar, or an average of $3.455 more for a ton of beets averaging 13.8 pounds less sugar than for 1921 and 1922.

Litch Average price of $11.50 for a ton of beets averaging 240.1

1921 and 1922.

Utah: Average price of $11.50 for a ton of beets averaging 240.1 pounds of sugar for 1919 and 1920: average price of $5.275 for a ton of beets averaging 280.9 pounds of sugar for 1921 and 1922, or an average of $6.225 more in 1919 and 1920 for a ton of beets averaging 40.8 pounds less sugar than the average for 1921 and 1922; average, 1914-1921. $7.925 for a ton of beets averaging 257.1 pounds of sugar, or an average of $2.65 more for a ton of beets averaging 29.8 pounds less sugar than the average for 1921 and 1922;

Wisconsin: Average price of $11.11 for a ton of beets averaging 224.9 pounds of sugar for 1919 and 1920; average price of $6.475 for a ton of beets averaging 235.8 pounds of sugar for 1921 and 1922, or an average of $5.635 more in 1919 and 1920 for a ton of beets averaging 10.9 pounds less sugar than the average for 1921 and 1922; average, 1916-1921, $8.42 for a ton of beets averaging 238.8 pounds of sugar, or an average of $2.945 more for an average of 3 pounds more sugar than the average of 1921 and 1922.

From a consideration of the above it is apparent that the farmer has suffered an average reduction in price of over 50 per cent while the tariff on sugar was being increased an average of $8.14 per cent, although he has to pay for the increased price of sugar along with the 110,000,000 consumers.

the tariff on sugar was being increased an average of 68.14 per cent, although he has to pay for the increased price of sugar along with the 110,000,000 consumers.

As the United States average of refined sugar obtained by the beet factory from a ton of beets in 1922 was 263.4 pounds, and the tariff adds 2 cents to the value of every pound of sugar sold by the factory, the total benefit derived by the factory from a ton of beets purchased from the farmer at an average of $5.65 amounts to $5.27. Even the increase in the tariff from 1 cent per pound to 1.7648 cents per pound increases the profits of the factory $2.01 per ton, yet they are paying 51.2 per cent less than under a tariff rate of 1 cent per pound, and the only prospect the farmer has of gaining would be in the event the average price received by the factory would be well over 5 cents per pound. The only obligation there is on the part of the factory to the farmer is to pay him a guaranteed price, ranging from $5 to $5.50 per ton. If the price received by the factory exceeds 5 cents per pound, it is the consumer who must pay the farmer $1 more per ton for each 1 cent advance and the factory $1.63 more profit. The increased price to the farmer is not paid by the factory. In contrast, in 1912 the beet factory poid the beet farmer $5.82 per ton and in 1913 $5.69, and the average New York price for refined during 1912 was 5.041 cents per pound and in 1913 4.278 cents per pound, as compared with present prices of 8.25 cents per pound. The beet factory is therefore averaging over 3\(\text{2} cents per pound more at the present time than the average for 1912 and 1913 and paying the farmer less for a ton of beets. The following are the amounts, by States, to which beet-sugar factories benefit through the present tariff cost of 2 cents per pound and the increase in tariff from 1 cent to 1.7648 cents:

State,	Pounds from ton of beets.	Tariff benefit, 2 cents per pound.	Tariff benefit in- crease from 1 cent to 1.7648 cents per pound.
Colorado	260. 8	$5, 22	$1. 99
	309. 0	6, 18	2. 36
	267. 4	5, 35	2. 04
	280. 9	5, 62	2. 15
	235. 8	4, 71	1. 80

that the beet farmers profit even in the remotest degree from the Following is the production of beet sugar and consumption of sugar by States:

State.	Popula- tion.	Pro- duc- tion.	Pro- duction.	Consump- tion, 103 pounds per capita.	Production, surplus.	Pro- duction, deficit.
California	2, 930, 544 2, 403, 630 1, 769, 257 3, 667, 222 2, 386, 371 547, 593 1, 296, 372	183, 000 41, 000 3, 000 8, 000 85, 000 7, 500 20, 000 27, 000 118, 000	366, 000, 600 82, 000, 000 6, 000, 000 20, 000, 000 16, 000, 000 172, 000, 000 16, 000, 000 170, 000, 000 54, 000, 000 7, 200, 000 20, 000, 000	97, 000, 000 44, 500, 000 302, 000, 000 248, 000, 000 182, 500, 000 246, 000, 000 55, 400, 000 56, 400, 000 592, 000, 000 271, 100, 000 20, 000, 000 66, 600, 000	269, 000, 000 37, 500, 000 33, 600, 000 190, 000, 000 14, 000, 000	209, 000, 000 289, 000, 000 228, 000, 000 166, 500, 000 231, 000, 000 16, 400, 000 539, 000, 000 132, 800, 000

WEST BAY CITY DIVIDENDS.

"Bay City, Mich., December 25.—A stock dividend of 400 per cent has been declared by the West Bay City Sugar Co., increasing the authorized capitalization from $200,000 to $1,000,000. This is the first additional stock issue made since the company was organized. 25 years ago, at which time a bond issue was put out to meet the cost of plant construction in excess of the $200,000 provided for Since that time bonds have been retired and several hundred thousand dollars have been spent in improvement, all coming out of earnings, while some large dividends have also been paid. The new stock issue is being made to transfer assets representing plant investment, and carried as surplus to the stock account. The stock of the company is practically all held by the president, M. J. Bally and members of his family, the heirs of the late Charles J. Smith, and the heirs of the late John M. Kelton, all three of whom are among the original incorporators."

Thus, domestic beet-sugar companies are capitalizing the tariff and absorbing all of the profits derived through it without sharing any of the benefits with the beet farmer, who finds himself now raising sugar beets at a loss.

of the benefits with the best latines, who had not sugar bests at a loss.

From Facts About Sugar, issue of January 27, 1922, at page 73:

HAWAIIAN CAPITAL INCREASES

of the Benefits with the best farmer, who finds hinself now raising sugar bests at a loss.

From Facts About Sugar, issue of January 27, 1923, at page 73:

HAWAILIA CAPITAL INCREASES.

"HOXOLULE, January S.—Prom November 15 to December 21, 1922, notices of increases in capital stock were filed with the territorial treasurer by 48 Hawaiian corporations, the total increases amounting to $31,315,000. Among the corporations, increasing their capital were Castle & Cook, sugar and shipping agents, from $2,500,000 to $5,000,000, 43 per cent; Hawaiian Pineappis Co., from $4,000,000 to $5,000,000, 25 per cent; Hawaiian Pineappis Co., from $4,000,000 to $5,000,000, 25 per cent; Hawaiian Pineappis Co., from $4,000,000 to $2,000,000, 25 per cent; Olawa Sugar Co., from $2,000,000 to $2,000,000, 25 per cent; Olawa Sugar Co., from $75,000 to $1,500,000, 100 per cent; Honomu Sugar Co., from $750,000 to $1,500,000, 100 per cent; Honomu Sugar Co., from $750,000 to $1,500,000, 100 per cent; Hawaiian guar Indress and companies dependent use their first the former have adopted the ingenious method of increasing their issues of capital stock as their fariff profits increase, thus managing to conceal the enormous amount of such profits. In some instances, the capital is inflated four times beyond the actual investment. Even upon this inflated stock, Hawaiian companies are in the habit of raw sugar. The balance of the sugar companies are controlled by the Western Sugar Co. of San Francisco, and all of their profits and Conceal the enormous amount of such profits. In some instances, the capital is inflated four times beyond the actual investment. Even upon this inflated stock, Hawaiian companies are in the habit of raw sugar. The balance of the sugar companies are controlled by the Western Sugar Co. of San Francisco, and all of their profits and control of the sugar companies are controlled by the Western Sugar Co. of San Francisco, and all of their product is sugar Co., sugar Co., september, sper hundred pounds in freight, or 2,418 ce

Since the passage of the tariff law, local brokers have been continually distributing circulars calling attention to the fact that Porto Rican raw-sugar companies have been benefited to the extent of $5.50 per bag of 320 pounds by the tariff levied upon imports of sugar and advising their clients to invest. This affords another example of capitalizing the tariff.

CLASS OF LABOR FOR WHICH TARIFF PROTECTION IS REQUESTED.

As "Protection to American labor" was one of the chief slogans and pretexts indulged in by high-tariff advocates in defense of the present high tariff on sugar, let us call attention to the class of labor employed in the domestic and tariff-favored sugar industry. In Hawaff over 95 per cent of the labor in the sugar industry consists of Japanese, Chinese, and Philippine immigrants, and Hawailan sugar interests are now endeavoring before Congress to obtain special legislation to allow them to import Chinese coolies to relieve the prependerance of Japanese influence in the Islands. They prefer the Chinese to any other nationality, principally because they will work for less, and their present labor elements are not satisfied with the present wages paid in proportion to the sugar companies' profits. Japanese, Mexican peons, and some Hindus constitute the labor in the domestic beet industry of California; Mexicans, Japanese, Russian-Germans, and children prevail in Utah, Idaho, and Colorado; Russian-Germans and the surplus foreign-labor supply of the larger cities, comprise the labor employed in the rest of the States. This class of labor is usually rounded up and contracted for by the agents of the factory and furnished to the farmer upon the basis of so much per acre of beets. They are the cheapest kind and class of labor that can be secured and not of the high-class American standard for which protection should be demanded.

From Sugar, issue of December, 1922, at page 679:

MICHIGAN LABOR TROUBLES.

"BAD AXE, MICH., October 29.—During the beet-harvesting season which is now progressing. Huron County beet growers are experiencing difficulty in harvesting their crops. Early in the year a number of foreigners were brought into the local fields to take care of the work, but many of them broke their contracts and returned to their locations. Frank Thornton, in charge of former Gov. Albert E. Sleeper's beet farm, was left with 40 acres of beets to harvest without help. A number of Walpole Indians were brought to the farm, but the majority of them left after one or two days."

From the American Child, published monthly by the National Child Labor Committee, 105 East Twenty-second Street, New York, issue of December, 1922, under heading:

NOTES FROM OUR INVESTIGATORS.

"In Utah we found that some rural schools were closed on account of beet-field needs. Think of it! In the rich beet-field districts through which the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad passed that was the situa-which the Denver & Mo Grande Linear County, Kans., beet-sugar districts are more deplorable than those in any other section of the State, according to Miss Alice K. McFarland, head of the welfare division of the industrial court. 'It is a common thing to see little tots with long, sharp knives cutting tops from beets. In many cases they work from 6 o'clock in the morning until nearly dark, with only a short stop for lunch.'" (Topeka (Kans.) Capital, October 26, 1922)

1922.)
Yet Senator Smoot testified before the Senate Finance Committee that the opportunities offered by the beet-sugar industry of Utah to the child for work in the beet fields was a perfect godsend to them.

CHILDREN WORKING IN BEET-SUGAR FIELDS IN COLORADO.

child for work in the beet fields was a perfect godsend to them.

CHILDREN WORKING IN BEET-SUGAR FIELDS IN COLORADO.

"The United States Department of Labor, through the Children's Bureau, has just issued some preliminary figures regarding the findings in the study of children who work in the beet fields, one of a series of studies which the Children's Bureau is making of the work of children on farms. The study covers part of Weld and Larimer Counties in Colorado, and included 1,077 children 16 years of age who did beet-field work. While some of the beet growers plant small acreages and depend upon their own families to do the handwork which is involved, the great majority hire contract laborers for the handwork. Over seven-tenths of the working children were children of the contract laborers. In the area studied in Colorado four-fifths of the laborers were resident; that is, they lived in towns near the beet fields, moving out to the farms in the spring and returning to their homes after the harvest. About 70 families, however, were those of transient laborers, recruited by the sugar companies, often from distant parts of the country. Many of them were attracted to the beet-growing areas by the fact that the whole family could work in the beet fields. Children thinned out the small beet plants in the spring, hoed, and pulled up the beets and 'topped' or cut off the beet tops at harvest. They worked at very early ages. Over one-fourth of them were under 10 years old, a small percentage under 8. Less than one-fifth were as much as 14 years old. Considerably over half were from 9 to 13 years of age. Physically, the most harmful feature of the work probably lies in the iong hours. From 69 to 85 per cent, according to the process in which the child was engaged, worked nine hours or more aday. From more than one-seventh to one-third (again varying with the process worked 11 hours or more. Thinning and blocking in the spring and pulling and topping in the sutumn are both done under more or less pressure; the first p

CHILD LABOR IN MICHIGAN REET INDUSTRY.

A recent report of investigation by the National Child Labor Committee of the employment of children in the beet industry of Michigan discloses that there were about 10,000 children between the ages of 6 and 16 employed and that the working hours varied between 9 and 13: that they were employed in thinning and hoeing, as well as pulling and topping the beets; that they were usually the children of parents of Slavic origin, with an average family of 10, and that the class of labor employed was recruited from the larger cities of 14 different States; that the average earnings of a man and wife when working alone was about $14 per acre per season, and that for each additional child employed the earning capacity was increased $7 per acre per child; that this class of labor was furnished to the farmer by the agents of the beet factories on the basis of about $18 per acre, and that this class of labor generally rented from or had furnished them the house and quarters they lived in by the factories; that two very disastrous fires had occurred in Saginaw County during the past season; that the effect of this employment on children was to interfere with their proper education, retard their normal growth, and undermine their general health. On account of the actual shortage of labor prevailing during the past year and the prospect of an increase in acreage in Michigan for 1923. the employment of child labor is apt to be resorted to on even a larger scale.

Practically all field labor in the sugar industry of Louisiana are colored—men, women, and boys—a few Creoles, Cajuns, and Italians. The rate of wages is so low that negroes are migrating North because of higher wages. It is estimated that 5.000 have turned trappers, thus creating a shortage. The American Cane Sugar League is trying to ingo that they may be released for work in the sugar industry. The Louisiana Planter, the organ of the Louisiana sugar interests, advocated gratultously advised Cuba to import Italians as a solution of her labor problems.

The control of the cane-refining industry toward the tariff may be cally and simply explained. The tariff and in 1984 cents per pound to every pound of raw sugar they must purchase for the purpose of refining. It takes 107 pounds of 96 degrees test raw sugar to make, 100 pound. This averages more than 50 per cent of the cost of the raw sugar, that they are compelled to the open-third of their investment of the cost of the cost of every pound of sugar they produce, which must be passed on to the costs of every pound of sugar they produce, which must be passed on to the costs of every pound of sugar they produce, which must be passed on to the costs of every pound of sugar they produce, which must be passed on to the costs and the more profit. At present they supply 85 per cent of the sugar consumed to the aways given consumers the benefit of tariff reductions, and they can always afford to do so, on account of correct the sugar consumed by the American public, as compared with 15 per to plaintain they are consumed to the sugar consumed by the American public, as compared with 15 per to the sugar consumed to the American public, as compared with 15 per to the consumer is a price of 2 cents less if the fariff is removed, and reduction in price corresponding to a reduction from present high states, despite the disadvantages under while they are obliged to complete with beet-sugar interests, as they manufacture several grades that the sugar and distribute it only in 100 pound bags.

Slxty per cent of the sugar consumed by the American public is furnished by the control of the sugar state of the full duty basis or a world's price that would give Cuba and the contro retailer a profit of one-half cent per pound and the retailer exacts from the customer another one-half cent per pound. Prior to the war the wholesaler was satisfied with one-fourth of a cent per pound profit, and the retailer frequently sold sugar to the consumer without a profit, using it as a leader to induce sales of other classes of merchandise. But both the wholesaler and retailer are now obliged to invest so much more in sugar on account of increase in price, due largely to the tariff, that they must charge more in order to obtain proper return upon their investment. It was not unusual 10 years ago to obtain sugar for 5 cents per pound retail, even with a tariff of 1.348 cents per pound, but the American public can never expect refined sugar at such a price with a tariff rate amounting to 2 cents per pound. Owing to the high prices paid during the war, the American consumers seem to have become indifferent to the 100 per cent increase in sugar prices during the past 10 years, and this indifference is taken advantage of by many dealers to indulge in war-time profits. There is no reason why sugar under normal conditions and with a reasonable tariff could not again sell for 5½ to 6 cents retail.

FEBRUARY 23, 1923.—The price of New York refined sugar has now advanced to 9 cents per pound, due to advance in duty-paid raws to 7.53 cents per pound, which means that the retail price of sugar is now 10 cents per pound in New York and from 11 to 12 cents per pound in other parts of the United States. The New York refined price of 9 cents per pound compares with an average for 1922 of 5.904 cents; 1921, 6.207 cents; 1920, 11.309 cents; from August 12 to December 31, 1919, 9.003 cents; 1918, 7.834 cents; 1917, 6.33 cents; 1916, 6.682 cents; 1915, 5.539 cents; 1914, 4.682 cents; 1913, 4.278 cents per pound. The present price, therefore, is the highest since 1883, with the exception of five months in 1920 and the year 1919, during the peak period of war-time inflation. The present tariff is responsible for 2 cents per pound of this price.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a resolution unanimously adopted by citizens of Eastham, Mass., in town meeting assembled, favoring the enactment of legislation fixing a maximum price on coal, etc., which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. KEYES presented resolutions adopted by the men of the Church of Christ at Dartmouth College, of Hanover; Woolen Workers' Local, No. 1424, United Textile Workers of America, of Dover; and Cotton Workers' Local, No. 27, United Textile Workers of America, of Dover, all in the State of New Hampshire, favoring an amendment to the Constitution governing the passage of legislation regulating child labor, which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. WARREN presented the following joint resolution of the Legislature of Wyoming, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce:

THE STATE OF WYOMING, Office of the Secretary of State.

United States of America.

State of Wyoming, ss:

I. F. E. Lucas, secretary of state of the State of Wyoming, do hereby certify that the annexed copy of Enrolled Joint Resolution No. 23 (senate) of the Seventeenth Legislature of the State of Wyoming, being original Senate Joint Resolution No. 6, has been carefully compared with the original, filed in this office, and is a full, true, and correct transcript of the same and of the whole thereof.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State of Wyoming.

Done at Cheyenne, the capital, this 27th day of February, A. D. 1923.

1923. [SEAL.]

F. E. Lucas,
Secretary of State.
By H. M. SYMONS, Deputy.

Eurolled Joint Resolution No. 23 (Senate), Seventeenth Legislature of the State of Wyoming.

Senate joint resolution requesting the appointment of a commission to investigate the feasibility of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence tidewater project, and providing for the expenses thereof, and asking Congress to aid in the investigation of the project.

Whereas it is proposed to make such improvements in the St. Lawrence River as to make the Great Lakes necessible to ocean-going commerce; and as this improvement will in effect bring the State of Wyoming nearer to the world's markets; and because our producers and the consuming public have allke suffered enormons losses during the last year by reason of the high cost of transportation, there is an urgent need for such a project; and

Whereas a number of States have joined the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Tidewater Association, having as its object the early undertaking of a completion of this project: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the State of Wyoming be properly associated in the above-named organization with the other States interested, in pressing this undertaking to completion; be it further

Resolved, That the Representatives of this State in Congress of the United States be requested to facilitate in every possible way the prosecution of this undertaking.

S. Skovgare,

S. SKOVGARD, President of the Senate. J. D. NOBLITT, Speaker of the House, Approved February 21, 1923.

WILLIAM B. Ross, Governor.

Mr. NORRIS. I present and ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the Record resolutions adopted by the Northwest Stabilization Congress at Billings, Mont., on February 16 and 17, 1923.

There being no objection, the resolutions were referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Resolutions adopted by Northwest Stabilization Congress at Billings, Mont., February 16 and 17, 1923.

Mont., February 16 and 17. 1923.

Whereas agriculture, including animal husbandry, is the basic industry of the United States; and
Whereas this industry has been and is suffering from the unprecedented deflation which followed the World War, which has forced the farmers to sell their products for less than the cost of production; and Whereas those engaged in agricultural pursuits are by the very nature of their occupation decentralized and scattered over a large territory and, as a result, are unable to thoroughly organize to influence the market conditions and are thereby compelled to sell and buy in a market over which they have no control; and
Whereas the purchase and sale of farm products is no longer governed by the so-called law of supply and demand; and
Whereas the farmers' cooperative and sales agencies are not able to compete with the highly centralized organized power of monopoly; and Whereas farmers and stockmen over 15 Western States are stranded and can no longer function under the heavy load which they carry, excessive interest, high taxes, short-time loans, deflated markets, high cost of farm machinery, also all supplies necessary to feed and clothe themselves and families; and
Whereas form the best authority on cost of production covering a period of 10 years the actual cost of producing a bushel of wheat is $1.60 over the 10 Northwestern States; and
Whereas over 100 banks have failed in six of these States within the last 45 days; and
Whereas the not more credit that the farmers need but a price for their products which will enable them to liquidate their already too large burden of debt: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Northwest Stabilization Congress in session assembled. That the stabilization of the price of farm products by Federal legislation is the only scientific method by which agriculture can be immediately restored to its rightful place in our industrial and economic system; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to the chairmen of the Agricultural Commi

Mr. NORBECK presented the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of South Dakota, which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs:

Aff. NORDECK presented the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of South Dakota, which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs:

A concurrent resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States to make such provisions as will authorize the Secretary of the Interior to sell Indian inheritance lands.

Whereas there are several large Indian reservations in the State of South Dakota on which there are residing at the present time about 20,000 Indians who have been allotted lands in severalty, which allottements vary in size from 160 acres to 640 acres: and

Whereas these allotments are held in trust by the General Government for a period of 25 years, or until such time as the Secretary of the Interior, in his opinion, may deem any allottee competent to manage his own affairs, when in such case the Secretary of the Interior may grant a patient in fee to such Indian for the land allotted to him; and

Whereas the experience of such practice in the past has been that in a large majority of the cases where patients in fee have been granted that the Indians receiving such patients invariably sell the lands thus patented to them and squander the proceeds within a short time thereafter; and

Whereas it is evident that if this practice continues it will only be a question of time when the lands now belonging to the Indians will have passed from their control, either to speculators or to settlers, and the Indians themselves will in many instances be papers and dependent upon the communities in which they live; and

Whereas this state of affairs is one to be deplored and which should be prevented, if possible by the citizens of South Dakota by cooperating with the Federal Government in regulating and controlling the sale of Indian land yield a regular income to the present owners and at the same time afford homes to a large number of would-be settlers with small means, and also to add to the taxable property of the counties in which these reservations are located and thereby decrease the present b

Pro tempore President of the Senate.
A. B. Blake.
Secretary of the Senate.
E. O. Friscoln.
Speaker of the House.
Wright Tarrell.
Chief Clerk of the House.

Mr. NORBECK presented the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of South Dakota, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys:

Concurrent resolution.

Whereas the Bad Lands of the White River in South Dakota embrace an area about 1,500 square miles in extent, the title to which chiefly remains in the United States; and

Whereas this area is most unique and picturesque in character, showing the processes by which nature is croding and carrying away overlying strata of materials of the most unusual sort; soils filled with remains of prehistoric life, from which the museums of the world have been supplied with specimens of the first importance; an area affording opportunities for study in natural history, paleontology, anthropology, geology, and topography not found elsewhere, as well as indescribable scenic grandeur; cliffs carved by crosion into vast cathedrals surmounted by tapering spires, deep chasms with walls of jasper, embattlements with bases of blazing crimson and crowned with parapets of crystal white; extensive areas so complicated that man has not yet invaded them and the hidden beauties and wealth of which have not been glimpsed by human eye; and

Whereas this wonderland is located directly upon the lines of two of the great transcontinental highways and is easily accessible to scientists and tourists: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate of the State of South Dakota (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Congress of the United States be memorialized to set aside and establish this area as a national park and to provide for its supervision.

That engrossed copies of this resolution be forwarded by the secretary of state to our Senators and Representatives in Congress, to the Secretary of the Senate, and Chief Clerk of the House of Representatives of the United States, and to His Excellency the President of the Senate.

C. S. AMSDEN,
President of the Senate.
A. B. BLAKE,
Secretary of the Senate.
E. O. FRESCOLN,
Speaker of the House.
WRIGHT TARBELL,
Chief Clerk of the House.

Mr. NORBECK presented the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of South Dakota, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor:

Concurrent resolution of South Dakota Legislature,

Concurrent resolution of South Dakota Legislature.

Whereas the unprecedented wave of crime sweeping over America, crowding our jails and peniteutiaries and increasing the prison population of South Dakota almost 100 per cent, is, in the opinion of the most expert sociologists of the age, due to the emphasis which has in recent years been placed upon material values and the small consern paid to spiritual values in home, school, and society; and

Whereas this alarming condition shows no indication of subsidence, but on the contrary is increasing and must produce a situation that should arouse every thoughtful person to consider efficient methods of combating the crime wave and to impress the great necessity for reform in modern home life, school economy, and social practices; and

Whereas the multiplicity of bills offering diverse methods of accomplishing this purpose which have flooded this legislature is proof of the concern felt, as well as the difficulty of enacting into law effective provisions for producing the end sought, as well as the greater difficulty of bringing citizens of opposing views and different religious convictions to a uniform understanding and method; and

Whereas Washington said in his Farewell Address: "No nation can exist without religion." Experience—the history of humanity—has demonstrated that a Republle like ours is strong and a blessing to its people, according to the moral character and intelligent religion of its people; and people and the world according to the development of its people, according to the moral character and intelligent religion of its people; and

Whereas the strength and efficiency of any republic, a government by the people, depends upon the best development of those people, which experience has demonstrated and history shows can not be without religion. The strength of a republic is in the character of its citizens, their intelligence and their morals inseparable from their religion; and Whereas it is uniformly conceded that the remedy must be effected through the inculcation of morality, spirituality, and conscience in the young, in church, school, and home: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate of the State of South Dakoia (the House of Representatives concurring). That the people of South Dakoia be enjoined to address themselves to renewed effort to restore the balance between the spiritual and the material, that our children be reared up in the precepts of fundamental righteousness.

That the churches and Sabbath schools be constrained to intensify their work and to extend it to every child within their respective spheres of influence.

That parents be adjured to exert every effort to restore the old-time influence of the home in molding the lives of their children, for the development of conscience and morality; that the family altar be restored and that in self-sacrificing love the little ones be trained in the simple virtues of truthfulness, honesty, and respect for the rights of others.

That the schools promptly reform their methods, so that the radimentary studies as well as the sciences be taught only as subordinate to righteousness. That the emphasis be placed upon morality, good conscience, respect for parents, reverence for age and experience, and that all learning is but the handmaiden of eternal goodness.

That it is the judgment of the Legislature of South Dakota that only upon the lines herein suggested can the true balance be restored and the crime wave checked and civilization preserved.

Mr. NORBECK presented a petition, numerously signed, of sundry citizens of Lane, Woonsocket, Wessington Springs, and Alpena, all in the State of South Dakota, praying for the passage of legislation granting immediate aid to the faminestricken peoples of the German and Austrian Republics, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. McNARY, from the Committee on Commerce, to which was referred the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 415) to authorize the improvement of the Columbia River at St. Helens, Oreg., reported it without amendment.

Mr. CALDER, from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to which was referred the resolution (S. Res. 459) authorizing an annotation of the Senate rules, reported it without amendment.

AUGUST NELSON.

Mr. KENDRICK. From the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys I report back favorably without amendment the bill (H. R. 13024) for the relief of August Nelson, and I submit a report (No. 1259) thereon. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the homestead entry No. 027376, Cheyenne, Wyo., made by August Nelson on October 11, 1920, under the act of February 19, 1909 (35 Stat. L. p. 639), for lots 3 and 4, east half of the southwest quarter, and southeast quarter of section 30, township 25 north, range 81 west, sixth principal meridian, be, and the same is hereby, validated, and the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to issue patent thereon upon the submission of satisfactory proof of compliance with the law under which the entry was allowed.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LEGAL REPRESENTATIVES OF MILES J. DAVIS, DECEASED.

Mr. KENDRICK. From the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys I report back favorably without amendment the bill (H. R. 13612) authorizing the issuance of patent to the legal representatives of Miles J. Davis, deceased, and I submit a report (No. 1260) thereon. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized to issue a patent to the legal representatives of Miles J. Davis, deceased, upon homestead entry, Buffalo, Wyo., No. 014165, made August 2, 1920, for the east half of the west half, west half of the east half of section 34, south half of the south half of section 27, and south half of the south half of section 27, and south half of the south half of section 26, township 54 north, range 75 west, sixth principal meridian, upon which proof of compliance with law has been filed,

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ADDITIONAL SENATE PAGES.

Mr. CALDER, Mr. President, all the pages of the Senate are carried on the pay rolls until the end of the present month of March except the five extra pages whom we have had employed for the past two years. From the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate I report back favorably Senate Resolution 462 to carry those five pages until the 31st of March.

I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution.

There being no objection, the resolution (S. Res. 462) submitted by Mr. Curtis on the 1st instant was considered and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That Senate Resolution 363, agreed to December 4, 1922, authorizing and directing the employment of five additional pages for the Senate Chamber to serve until March 4, 1923, at $2.50 per day each, be, and the same hereby is, continued in full force and effect until March 31, 1923.

DISTRICT COURT AT SPARTANBURG, S. C.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further reports of committees, the introduction of bills and joint resolutions is in order.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, before we pass from the order of reports of committees, I wish to ask the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. Overman] if his committee is ready to report on a measure which has come over from the House of Representatives in reference to establishing Spartanburg, S. as a place where the district court may hold its sessions? The proposed legislation is a matter of importance, and I wish to see it expedited. I disliked for this order of business to pass over until I knew whether or not it would be possible for us to pass on the matter to-day.

Mr. OVERMAN. There has been no message received from the House of Representatives this morning at all. The Com-the House of Representatives this morning at all. The Committee on the Judiciary, of course, can not report on the measure to which the Senator from South Carolina referred until it shall have come from the other House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The measure has not yet come from the House. The introduction of bills and joint resolutions is in order. If there be none, concurrent and other resolutions are in order.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. SHORTRIDGE:

A bill (S. 4654) for the relief of William J. McGee; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. JOHNSON:

A bill (S. 4655) to amend section 463 of the Revised Statutes; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. KING (by request):

A bill (S. 4656) to transfer to the Secretary of Commerce the powers, duties, and functions of the United States Shipping Board, including the assets, properties, funds, and liabilities of the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corpora-tion, and to provide for the disposition of merchant vessels owned by the Government; to the Committee on Commerce.

THE PRICE OF SUGAR.

Mr. BROOKHART. Mr. President, I submit a resolution providing for an investigation of the sugar situation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa offers a resolution, which will be read.

The resolution (S. Res. 465) was read, as follows:

The resolution (S. Res. 465) was read, as follows:

Whereas the price of sugar has advanced so rapidly during the past 30 days and propaganda is being broadcasted through the public press that a sugar shortage is at hand, and the sugar manipulators are reaping a harvest from the consuming public: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Senate Committee on Manufactures, or a duly authorized subcommittee thereof, is hereby authorized to investigate the manipulations of the sugar market and ascertain the cause of the rapid advance in the price of sugar, notwithstanding the fact that the Secretary of Commerce announces that there is no world's shortage of the sugar supply. The committee or subcommittee shall make a final report of its investigations, with recommendations to the Senate, at the convening of the Sixty-eighth Congress. For the purpose of this resolution the committee or subcommittee is authorized to sit and act at such times during the recess of Congress and in such places within the United States, to hold such hearings as such committee or subcommittee shall deem advisable, and to employ such clerical and stenographic assistants as it deems necessary, and the subcommittee shall have the same authority as the full committee. The cost of stenographic service to report such hearings shall not be in excess of 25 cents per hundred words. The committee or subcommittee is further authorized to send for persons, books, and papers, to administer oaths, and to take testimony. The expense of the committee or subcommittee shall be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate.

Mr. BROOKHART. I ask unanimous consent for the imme-

Mr. BROOKHART. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That may not be done. Under the statute the resolution has first to go to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, as it involves an expenditure of money.

Mr. President, I hope the Senator from Iowa Mr. KING. will request and use his best offices to secure prompt action by that committee. I think the resolution is one which ought to pass

Mr. BROOKHART. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution is required to be referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate in pursuance of the statute and not of the rules of the Senate.

Mr. BROOKHART. I ask unanimous consent that the rule may be suspend.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the Senator will pardon the Chair, he desires to repeat that the necessity for referring his resolution to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate is not by virtue of a rule of the Senate but by virtue of the statute providing that such matters must first be passed on by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

Mr. BROOKHART. Then I desire to say that I hope the resolution will be reported immediately, so that action may be had at this time.

In this connection I desire to submit and have printed in the RECORD a letter which I addressed to the Secretary of Commerce on the subject and his letter in reply. I desire to call to the attention of the Senate the fact that there is no sugar shortage; in fact, there is quite a large surplus. The increase in the price of sugar has been worked up by certain speculators who are interested in making profits out of a situation of this kind. I wish to call upon the house-wives of the United States to boycott this sugar combination for bringing about this increase in the price of sugar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the correspondence referred to by the Senator from Iowa will be printed in the RECORD.

The letters referred to are as follows:

FEBRUARY 23, 1923.

Hon. Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Mr. Secretary: I have noted in press dispatches the rapid rise in the price of sugar, and am receiving complaints from Iowa asking for an investigation with a view to ascertaining the cause for such rapid increase. I wish you would kindly advise, in your opinion, as to whether or not there is a corner on sugar and the great American public is being mulcted out of millions of dollars through the sugar gamblers of Wall Street. I know that you handled this question during the war and are fully advised as to the methods pursued by these sugar operators at that time.

If you would kindly advise me fully just what the situation is, and what law, if any, could be put in force to regulate this matter, I shall very much appreciate it.

I would also like to be advised as to the sugar supply. It is my understanding that they have sent out word that there is to be a great sugar shortage, and this has caused a panic in the sugar market. An early reply will be appreciated.

With kind regards, I am, sincerely yours,

SMITH W. BROOKHART.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE, OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY, Washington, February 26, 1923.

Hon. SMITH W. BROOKHART. United States Senate, Washington, D. O.

United States Senate, Washington, D. O.

Dear Mr. Senator: I am in receipt of your letter of February 23. The only laws at all related to the subject to which you refer are the restraint of trade acts, as all price and other war regulations have been long since repealed by Congress. This department necessarily has no knowledge of any corner in sugar, as such matters are dealt with by the Department of Justice and the Federal Trade Commission.

As to the question of sugar supplies, a world survey made by this department showed that the stocks of sugar on hand from last year, plus the production of this year, were estimated at a total of 19,511,000 tons, whereas the consumption for the year was estimated at 19,035,000 tons, leaving a probable surplus at the end of the year of 476,000 tons. Some misconception has arisen because the estimated surplus at the end of the year showed a decrease from the abnormal stocks at the beginning of the year.

There is obviously no shortage in sugar and, moreover, an undue increase in price will decrease consumption.

Herbert Hoover.

Ballway Shopmen's Strike.

BAILWAY SHOPMEN'S STRIKE.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I desire to call up Senate Resolution 463, which was introduced by me on yesterday, and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

Mr. CURTIS. Let the resolution be read. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will be read. The Assistant Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 463)

Resolved. That the President of the United States be requested, in his discretion, to renew his good offices in bringing about a settlement of pending controversies between certain railroads and railway shopmen. which was submitted on yesterday by Mr. Sheppard, as follows:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution which has just been read.

Mr. SMOOT. I ask for the regular order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah asks for the regular order, which is the introduction of concurrent and other resolutions.

ANNOTATION OF SENATE RULES.

Mr. CALDER. I ask unanimous consent, out of order, to report from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate Senate Resolution 459.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] has just asked for the regular order. The Senator from New York asks unanimous consent, out of order, to report from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate a resolution, which will be read.

The resolution (S. Res. 459) submitted by Mr. Curtis on February 28, 1923, was read, as follows:

Resolved, That an annotation be made of the Standing Rules of the Senate with the more important decisions on points of order and parliamentary questions listed and digested under each rule, with a full index, and that 1,000 copies be printed and bound for the use of the Senate. The Rules Committee is authorized to employ a competent person to assist in preparing the annotation, if necessary, his compensation to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

Mr. CALDER. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution

Mr. OVERMAN.

Mr. OVERMAN. I ask for the regular order.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The regular order is demanded. Concurrent and other resolutions are in order. there be none, resolutions coming over from a preceding day are in order. Is there further morning business? If not, morning business is closed. The calendar under Rule VIII is in order.

LAND IN MILITARY RESERVATION AT FORT LEAVENWORTH.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, I am obliged to leave the Chamber to attend a meeting of a conference committee. am therefore going to ask unanimous consent at this time for the consideration of Order of Business 1238, being House bill 13004. The bill has been unanimously reported. If its consideration leads to any debate, I will withdraw my re-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill referred to by the Senator from Kansas?
There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 13004) authorizing the Secretary of War to lease to the Kansas Electric Power Co., its successors and assigns, a certain tract of land in the military reservation at Fort Leavenworth, Kans. The bill was read, as follows:

in the military reservation at Fort Leavenworth, Kans. The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he hereby is, authorized and empowered to lease for a term of 50 years with the privilege, in the discretion of the Secretary of War, of renewal for a like ferm to the Kansas Electric Power Co., a corporation, its successors and assigns, for a consideration and under terms and conditions to be determined by said Secretary of War, the following-described tract of real estate in the military reservation at Fort Leavenworth in the State of Kansas:

Beginning at a point which is located as follows: Starting from the northeast corner of the east coping of concrete bridge on Grant Avenue over the Leavenworth, Kansas & Western Railroad; thence north 71 degrees 6 minutes east, a distance of 1.073% feet, to the northwest corner of the United States Government Motor Transport Building; a distance of 1.023% feet to the aforesaid point of beginning; thence south 18 degrees east, a distance of 847 feet; thence north 72 degrees east, a distance of 433 feet more or less, to a point located on the west right-of-way line of the said Leavenworth, Kansas & Western Railroad, Returning to the original point of beginning; thence north 18 degrees west, a distance of 580 feet, to a point; thence north 72 degrees east, a distance of 580 feet, to a point; thence north 72 degrees east, a distance of 543 feet more or less, to a point located on the west right-of-way line of the Missouri Pacific Railroad; thence in a southerly direction along the west boundary of the Missouri Pacific Railroad; thence in a southerly direction along the west boundary of the Missouri Pacific Railroad; exclusive of the rights of way rearted to said Leavenworth, Kansas & Western Railroad and said Missouri Pacific Railroad, and containing, exclusive of the rights of way granted to said Leavenworth, when the successors or assigns, shall case for the purpose herein above set out, under the provided, so long as said tract s

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN L. LOTT.

Mr. ERNST submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 468), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate be, and he bereby is, authorized and directed to pay out of the contingent fund of the Senate to John L. Lott the sum of $650 for services rendered the Committee on Revision of the Laws of the Senate during the Sixty-seventh Congress in an expert, technical examination of H. R. 12, an act to codify and revise the laws of the United States, passed by the House of Representatives and referred to said committee.

INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE AT THE HAGUE (S. DOC. 342).

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I present a reply from the Secretary of State, transmitted by the President, to certain questions asked by the Committee on Foreign Relations in regard to the message of the President on Saturday last. As we have only one day more, it seemed to me desirable that this communication should be placed before the Senate as soon as possible, and I ask that it be printed in the Record in 8-point type. I understand that the Secretary of State has already given the letter to the press

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered

Mr. LODGE. I ask that the letter of the President and the letter of the Secretary of State, which are to be printed in the RECORD, be also printed as a Senate document.

There being no objection, the matter referred to was ordered to be printed as a document and to be printed in the RECORD in 8-point type, as follows:

THE WHITE HOUSE, Washington, March 2, 1923.

HON. HENRY CABOT LODGE,

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR LODGE: On Wednesday you sent me the request of the Foreign Relations Committee for information relative to the proposal that we adhere to the protocol establishing an International Court of Justice at The Hague. I immediately submitted the inquiries of your committee to the Secretary of State for detailed reply. I am pleased to transmit to you herewith a letter from the Secretary of State covering the various questions raised in the committee resolution of inquiry. I need not add that the reply of the Secretary of State has my most hearty approval.

Very truly yours,

WARREN G. HARDING.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, March 1, 1923.

MY DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: I have received your letter of February 28, inclosing a request handed to you by Senator Longe, chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, for certain information desired by the committee in order to reach a decision relative to advising and consenting to our adhesion to the protocol establishing the Permanent Court of International Justice. I beg leave to submit the following statement upon the points raised:

First, the inquiry is this:

That the President be requested to advise the committee whether he favors an agreement obligating all powers or governments who are signers of the protocol creating the court to submit all questions about which there is a dispute, and which can not be settled by diplomatic efforts, relative to: (a) The interpretation of treaties; (b) any question of international law; (c) the existence of any fact which, if established, would constitute a breach of an international obligation; (d) the nature or extent of reparation to be made for the breach of an international obligation; (e) the interpretation of a sentence passed by the court."

I understand that the question is not intended to elicit your purely personal opinion, or whether you would look with an approving eye upon an agreement of this sort made effective by the action of all powers, but whether you, as President, in the exercise of your constitutional authority to negotiate treaties, favor the undertaking to negotiate a treaty on the part of the United States with other powers creating such an obligatory jurisdiction.

So understood, I think that the question must be answered in the negative. This is for the reason that the Senate has so clearly defined its attitude in opposition to such an agreement that until there is ground for believing that this attitude has been changed it would be entirely futile for the Executive to negotiate any treaty of the sort described.

I may briefly refer to earlier efforts in this direction.

In the latter part of the Cleveland administration a very strong public sentiment was expressed in favor of a general arbitration treaty between the United States and Great Britain, this being regarded as a step toward a plan for all civilized nations. In January, 1897, the Olney-Pauncefote treaty was signed, with provisions for compulsory arbitration having a wide scope. This treaty was supported not only by the Cleveland administration but President McKinley indorsed it in the strongest terms in his annual message of December 6, 1897, urging "the early action of the Senate thereon not merely as a matter of policy but as a duty to mankind." But despite the safeguards established by the treaty the provisions for compulsory arbitration met with disfavor in the Senate, and the treaty failed. (Moore's Int. Law Dig., Vol. VII, pp. 76-78.)

A series of arbitration treaties was concluded in 1904 by Secretary Hay with about 12 States. Warned by the fate of the Olney-Pauncefote treaty, Secretary Hay limited the provision for obligatory arbitration in these treaties to "differences which may arise of a legal nature or relating to the interpretation of treaties existing between the two contracting parties, and which it may not have been possible to settle by diplomacy." Even with this limitation, there was added the further provise: "Provided, nevertheless, that they (the differences) do not affect the vital interests, the independence, or the honor of the two contracting States, and do not concern the interests of third parties."

It was also provided that the parties should conclude a "special agreement" in each individual case, "defining clearly the matter in dispute, the scope of the powers of the arbitrators, and the periods to be fixed for the formation of the arbitral tribunal and the several stages of the procedure.'

Notwithstanding the limited scope of these treaties for compulsory arbitration, the Senate amended them by substituting the phrase "special treaty" for "special agreement," so that in every individual case of arbitration a special treaty would have to be made with the advice and consent of the Senate. (Moore's Int. Law Dig., Vol. VII, p. 102-103.) In view of this change, Secretary Hay announced that the President would not submit the amendment to the other Governments.

It should also be observed that The Hague conventions of 1899 and 1907, to which the United States is a party, relating to the general arbitration of certain classes of international differences, do not make recourse to the tribunal compulsory.

In 1908 a series of arbitration treaties was negotiated by the United States. The provisions of these treaties were limited to differences which may exist of a legal nature or relating to the interpretation of treaties existing between the two contracting parties and which it may not have been possible to settle by diplomacy," with the proviso "that they do not affect the vital interests, the independence, or the honor of the two contracting States, and do not concern the interests of third Secretary Root also provided, taking account of the failure of the Hay treaties, that "in each individual case" the contracting parties before appealing to the arbitral tribunal should conclude a "special agreement" defining the matter in dispute, the scope and powers of the arbitrator, and so forth, and it was further explicitly stipulated in these treaties that "special agreement" on the part of the United States should be made by the President "by and with the advice and consent of the Senate." These treaties, with these limiting provisions, made in deference to the opinion of the Senate as to the permissible scope of such agreements, received the Senate's approval

In 1911 the Taft administration submitted to the Senate general arbitration conventions with Great Britain and with France which were of broad scope. There were numerous objections on the part of the Senate. There was a provision in article 8 that, in case of a controversy as to whether a particular difference was justiciable, the issue should be settled by a proposed joint high commission. Objection was made that such an arrangement was an unconstitutional delegation of power, and the provision was struck out by the Senate. Again the Senate conditioned its approval on numerous other reservations, withholding from the operation of the treaty any ques-"which affects the admission of aliens into the United States, or the admission of aliens to the educational institutions of the several States, or the territorial integrity of the several States or of the United States, or concerning the question of the alleged indebtedness or moneyed obligation of any State of the United States, or any question which depends upon or involves the maintenance of the traditional attitude of the United States concerning American questions, commonly described as the Monroe doctrine, or other purely governmental policy."

In the amended form the treaties were not acceptable to the administration and remain unratified.

In the light of this record it would seem to be entirely clear that until the Senate changes its attitude it would be a waste of effort for the President to attempt to negotiate treaties with the other powers providing for an obligatory jurisdiction of the scope stated in the committee's first inquiry, quoted above

If the Senate, or even the Committee on Foreign Relations, would indicate that a different point of view is now entertained, you might properly consider the advisability of negotiating such agreements

Second. The second inquiry is as follows:

"Secondly, if the President favors such an agreement, does he deem it advisable to communicate with the other powers to ascertain whether they are willing to obligate themselves as aforesaid?

"In other words, are those who are signers of the protocol creating the court willing to obligate themselves by agreement to submit such questions as aforesaid, or are they to insist that such questions shall only be submitted in case both, or all, parties interested agree to the submission after the controversy

"The purpose being to give the court obligatory jurisdiction over all purely justiciable questions relating to the interpretation of treaties, questions of international law, to the existence of facts constituting a breach of international obligation, to reparation for the breach of international obligation, to the interpretation of the sentences passed by the court, to the end that these matters may be finally determined in a court of justice."

What has been said above is believed to be a sufficient answer to this question. It may, however, be added that the statute establishing the Permanent Court of International Justice, as I stated in my previous letter, has a provision-article 36which compulsory jurisdiction can be accepted, if desired, in any or all of the classes of legal disputes concerning (a) the interpretation of a treaty, (b) any question of international law. (c) the existence of any fact which, if established, would constitute a breach of an international obligation, and (d) the nature or extent of the reparation to be made for the breach of an international obligation. Accordingly, attached to the protocol of signature for the establishment of the Permanent Court of International Justice is an "optional clause" by which the signatory may accept this compulsory jurisdiction.

I understand that of the 46 States which have signed the protocol for the establishment of the court about 15 have ratified this optional clause for compulsory jurisdiction, but among the States which have not as yet assented to the optional clause are to be found, I believe, Great Britain, France, Italy, and Japan. The result is that aside from the objections to which I have referred in answering the first inquiry there is the additional one resulting from the attitude of these powers.

It was for all the reasons above stated that in my previous. letter I recommended that if this course met with your approval you should request the Senate to give its advice and consent to the adhesion on the part of the United States to the protocol accepting, upon the conditions stated, the adjoined statute of the Permanent Court of International Justice, but not the optional clause for compulsory jurisdiction.

Third. The next inquiry is: "The committee would also like to ascertain whether it is the purpose of the administration to have this country recognize part 13 (labor) of the treaty of Versailles as a binding obligation. See article 26 of statute of league establishing the court."

I submit that the answer should be in the negative.

Part XIII of the treaty of Versailles, relating to labor, is not one of the parts under which rights were reserved to the United States by our treaty with Germany. On the contrary, it was distinctly stated in that treaty that the United States assumes no obligations under Part XIII. It is not now contemplated that the United States should assume any obligations of that sort. Article 26 of the statute of the court, to which the committee refers in its inquiry, relates to the manner in which labor cases referred to in Part XIII of the treaty of Versailles shall be heard and determined. But this provision would in no way involve the United States in Part XIII. The purpose of the court is to provide a judicial tribunal of the greatest ability and distinction to deal with questions arising under treaties. The fact that the United States gave its adhesion to the proto-col and accepted the statute of the court would not make the United States a party to treaties to which it was otherwise not a party or a participant in disputes in which it would otherwise not be a participant. The function of the court, of course, is to determine questions which arise under treaties, although only two of all the powers concerned in maintaining the court may be parties to the particular treaty or the particular dis-

Undoubtedly there are a host of treatles to which the United States is not a party, as well as Part XIII of the treaty of Versailles, which would give rise to questions which such a permanent court of international justice should hear and deter-None of the signatory powers by cooperating in the establishment and maintenance of the court make themselves parties to treaties or assume obligations under treaties between other powers. It is to the interest of the United States, however, that controversies which arise under treaties to which it is not a party should be the subject of peaceful settlements, so far as it is practicable to obtain them, and to this end that there should be an instrumentality, equipped as a permanent court, through which impartial justice among the nations may be administered according to judicial standards.

Fourth. Finally the committee states that "they would also like to be informed as to what reservations, if any, have been made by those countries who have adhered to the protocol."

I am not advised that any other State has made reservations on signing or adhering to the protocol.

I am, my dear Mr. President,

Faithfully yours, CHARLES E. HUGHES.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Overhue, its enrolling clerk, announced that the House had passed without amendment the bill (S. 4552) to incorporate the Belleau Wood Memorial Association.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 2984) for the relief of Thurston W. True.

The message further announced that the House had passed bills and joint resolutions of the following titles, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 2347. An act for the relief of certain homestead entry-

H. R. 7851. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to provide for the appointment of a district judge, district attorney, and marshal for the western district of South Carolina, and for other purposes," approved September 1, 1916, so as to provide for the terms of the district court to be held at Spartanburg, S. C.:

H. R. 11477. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Freeburn Toll Bridge Co. to construct a bridge across the Tug Fork of Big Sandy River, in Pike County, Ky.

H. R. 12378. An act granting the consent of Congress to maintain a bridge across the Rio Grande River:

H. R. 14111. An act to amend the patent and trade-mark laws, and for other purposes;

H. R. 14226. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to provide compensation for employees of the United States suffering injuries while in the performance of their duties, and for other purposes," approved September 7, 1916;

H. J. Res. 415. Joint resolution to authorize the improvement of the Columbia River at St. Helens, Oreg.; and

H. J. Res. 442. Joint resolution to authorize the transportation Porto Rico of a committee representing the Fourth Ohio Infantry, war with Spain.

HOUSE BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS REFFERRED.

The following bills and joint resolutions were severally read twice by title and referred as indicated below:

H. R. 2347. An act for the relief of certain homestead entrymen; to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys.

H. R. 14111. An act to amend the patent and trade-mark laws, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Patents.

H. J. Res. 442. Joint resolution to authorize the transporta-tion to Porto Rico of a committee representing the Fourth Ohio Infantry, war with Spain; to the Committee on Military

H. R. 7851. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to provide for the appointment of a district judge, district attorney, and marshal for the western district of South Carolina, and for other purposes," approved September 1, 1916, so as to provide for the terms of the district court to be held at Spartanburg, S. C.; and H. R, 14226. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to provide compensation for employees of the United States suffering injuries while in the performance of their duties, and for other purposes," approved September 7, 1916; to the Committee on purposes." the Judiciary.

H. R. 11477. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Freeburn Toll Bridge Co. to construct a bridge across the Tug Fork of Big Sandy River, in Pike County, Ky.;

H. R. 12378. An act granting the consent of Congress to maintain a bridge across, the Rio Grande River; and

H. J. Res. 415. Joint resolution to authorize the improvement of the Columbia River at St. Helens, Oreg.; to the Committee on Commerce.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries, announced that on March 2, 1923, the President had approved and signed the following acts

S. 937. An act to reimburse Isaiah Stephens, postmaster of McMechen, Marshall County, W. Va., for money and postage stamps stolen;

S. 2168. An act for the relief of Jesse C. Dennis and William Rhett Eleazer;

S. 2632. An act for the relief of Martin Cletner;

S. 3171. An act for the relief of the trustee of the estate of Hillsboro Dredging Co., a corporation, bankrupt; and

S. 4028. An act for the relief of John N. Halladay.

THE CALENDAR.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The calendar under Rule VIII is in order.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the call of the calendar begin at the number where we left off when the calendar was last under consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa asks unanimous consent that the consideration of the calendar begin with Order of Business No. 1135. Is there objection?

Mr. McNARY. Is that the order of business which follows the last bill which was considered when the calendar was under consideration a few days ago?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is informed that that is where we left off the consideration of the calendar when it was last under consideration. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Iowa? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

JOSEPH F. BECKER.

The bill (S. 3615) for the relief of Joseph F. Becker was announced as first in order.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I have offered an amendment to that bill to correspond with the action we took the day before on a similar bill. I wish to say that I have made some further investigation in what limited time I have had, and I find that the disability of the beneficiary of the bill in this case is not so great as the disability of the claimant in the other case. Following the precedent then set, therefore, I think the amount under this bill ought not to be so high, and I will modify my amendment by striking out $150 a month and inserting $75 a

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I do not see why the beneficiary of this bill should have any more than an old soldier who served through the Civil War and was crippled and requires an attendant. I understand that the man for whose relief this bill is intended had his leg broken.

Mr. NORRIS. The amount proposed is not more than the Civil War soldier would receive.

Mr. SMOOT. Yes; it is. Mr. NORRIS. No.

Mr. SMOOT. Sixty dollars is the very highest rate that is paid for any injury like this to an old soldier of the Civil War who is on the verge of the grave.

Mr. NORRIS. Such an old soldier gets more than $60 a month.

Mr. SMOOT. I say that he does not get more than $60 a month.

Mr. NORRIS. The Senator can make his statement, of course, and I can make mine, but neither one of us, perhaps, can make a statement that may not be contradicted by the record. I have known many old soldiers who have received more than that when they did not require the services of an

Mr. SMOOT. The amount allowed in the most aggravated and helpless cases is $72.

Mr. NORRIS. Well, let us put the figure in this bill at $72. I think that would be fair. The proposed beneficiary can not perform any labor where he is required to stand.

Mr. SMOOT. He had his leg broken; that is all. Mr. NORRIS. This man is not able to perform any kind of labor where he has to stand up or walk. He is permanently disabled and can not use one of his limbs.

Mr. DIAL. Mr. President, I notice from the report that he was not injured in the performance of his duty.

Mr. NORRIS. He was injured in the performance of his duty.

Mr. DIAL. Will the Senator inform us how his injury was brought about?

Mr. NORRIS. He was injured in line of duty, but he was not injured until after peace had been declared with Germany. This man was the commander of his vessel. He came from private life, it is true, but he was one of the reserve officers and was permanently injured in the line of duty on his own ship. As I have stated, however, the injury occurred after peace had been declared. Had it occurred before that he would have been entitled—I do not know just what a reserve officer's salary would have been, but it would have been $200 or $300 a month, as I understand-but because the injury occurred after peace, instead of while there was technical war on, he was not entitled to anything under the general law.

We have taken similar action in other cases. to take up the time of the Senate; we debated this case at considerable length a few days ago, and the Senate finally reached a conclusion as to what action it would take in such cases, of which there are several. In one case which was before the Senate it was decided to give the one who had been injured a pension, and we passed a bill giving the man a pension in that case of $150 a month. If we make it $72 in this case, we have equalized matters, it seems to me.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair assumes that unanimous consent has been given for the consideration of the bill

I did not so understand, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Well, is there objection to the present consideration of the bill? The Chair hears none.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 3615) for the relief of Joseph F. Becker.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I do not want to object to the consideration of this bill, or else I would have done so before. I am perfectly willing to pay a man a reasonable pension, even though his leg was not broken in the line of duty; but I can not understand why to-day we should pay a man who has one lame leg more than we pay a wounded Civil War veteran. Simply because there is a special bill for this man, who is not entitled under the law to a pension, I do not see why we should give him more than anyone else.

This is a Senate bill, Mr. President, and there is no use in taking any time with it, because I do not think it will pass the House, anyhow. Therefore I shall not object to its consideration any further, and let the $72 go.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Nebraska will be stated.

The READING CLERK. It is proposed to strike out all after the enacting clause and in lieu thereof to insert the following:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Joseph F. Becker, late a lieutenant commander, United States Naval Reserve Force, and pay him a pension at the rate of $72 per month, dating from the date of his discharge from the Navy.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, does the Senator mean to pay him back pay or pension?

Mr. NORRIS. Yes.

Mr. SMOOT. I can not agree to that, Mr. President. We

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, we did that the other day, and now the Senator says we never do that. The very precedent that I am following did that very thing. That was in the Senate bill that we debated all day and finally decided on a

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, that is exactly what happens when a precedent is established.

Mr. NORRIS. That is what ought to happen when a precedent is established. We ought to treat them all alike.

Mr. SMOOT. Oh, well, the cases are not the same at all. Mr. NORRIS. I admit that, but the only difference is in degree; that is all; and we have cut this man down to $72, when we paid the other man $150. Outside of that, the cases are identically the same.

Mr. SMOOT. No pension bill has ever passed for an old soldier where he was paid a dollar unless it began at the date when the bill became a law.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, is this bill before the Sen-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is, under Rule VIII, subject to objection, of course.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I am summoned to a conference committee on the deficiency bill—

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, let us dispose of this bill

Mr. OVERMAN. I thought it had been disposed of.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I move to strike out the part of the amendment that refers to back pay.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment to the amendment will be stated.

The READING CLERK. It is proposed to strike out "dating from the date of his discharge from the Navy.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts obtained the floor.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, on that motion I want to be heard.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts is recognized.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Mr. President, I simply want to say that I have some knowledge of cases similar to this one. I consider this a worthy case. This naval reserve officer ought to be given some compensation by the Government, or better, he ought to be retired on pay, just as regular officers

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I hope the Senator from Utah will allow this bill to pass.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. I want to ask the Senator from Nebraska, however, because, though the Senator passes this bill, it is doubtful if he will get any legislation at this session, to join with some other Senators on this floor in getting a general law passed to give relief to naval reserve officers.

Mr. NORRIS. I shall be very glad to do that.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Every reserve officer in the Navy who was injured between March 3, 1921, and July 1, 1922, when they were all released from active service, is in the same position that man is in. Up to March 3, 1921, they were all, when permanently incapacitated, given the right to be retired in the same manner as regular naval officers. After March 3, 1921, to July 1, 1922, that right has been denied them; and several of them have sustained severe injuries not dissimilar to the injury that this particular applicant has experienced. I think we ought to make a general law and treat every reserve officer alike, in view of the fact that after July 1 last their active service terminated. I can not see any justification for giving certain rights to reserve officers who were injured on March 1, 1921, and denying those same privileges to men injured on March 10, 1921, and thereafter. It seems to me we ought to get together here and pass a general act giving reserve officers who were permanently incapacitated between March 3, 1921, and July 1 of last year the same rights as reserve officers injured previously period.

I have no objection to the Senator's bill; I hope it will be passed; but it will not end these cases, and we ought to pass a general law. The Committee on Naval Affairs ought to report a bill treating all these men alike, because otherwise we will have these independent bills here, session after session, until the men are all dead. Year after year we will be hounded here in Congress to give them the relief that they are entitled to; and I hope the Senator will help a movement to get a general act adopted.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Mr. President, I have a similar bill following this one. Were I to remain here, I most certainly would join with the Senator from Massachusetts in order that a general bill might be passed. I hope the same consideration will be given to this bill that has been given to the one previously passed.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. President, if there were the slightest possibility of any of these Senate bills becoming law, I certainly would not object to a reasonable compensation; but everyone knows that it is utterly futile for the Senate to spend its time upon this class of bills when they will not be considered by the House. It does not seem to me that the time of the Senate ought to be occupied in doing an utterly useless thing when there are so many House bills upon the tlendar. Therefore, Mr. President, I am going to object.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin calendar objects to the present consideration of the bill.

Mr. NORRIS. I move that the Senate take up the bill notwithstanding the objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of this bill notwithstanding the objection.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, the unanimous-consent agreement was that unobjected bills would be considered.

Mr. NORRIS. No.
Mr. ROBINSON. No. Mr. President.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. That agreement was not entered into. Objection was made, as the Chair remembers, so we are proceeding with the calendar under Rule VIII. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Nebraska to take up the bill, notwithstanding the objection.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President——
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair does not understand that the motion is debatable at this time.

Mr. ROBINSON. Very well.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Nebraska.

On a division, the motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Utah [Mr. Smoot] to the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I want to be heard briefly on

The other day, at great length, we debated this question, and finally we had two roll calls on it. We had a roll call first upon the adoption of the amendment, and then we had a roll call upon the passage of the bill; and an amendment was adopted word for word like this one, with the exception that this provides for $72 where the other one provided for $150, Now the Senator from Utah [Mr. Smoot] has moved to strike out of this proposed amendment the clause which says that this pay shall begin from the date of this man's discharge from the Navy.

Mr. President, the injury was received even before he was discharged. He has received nothing for that injury, no help of any kind. I am told that he is in circumstances of the direst poverty. I do not know that of my own personal knowledge. He does not even live in my State; but, at least, the payment ought to date from the date of his discharge. To be really just, we ought to give him the pension from the date when the injury was received. Under general law if a man is given a pension for an injury incurred in the service, the pension does date from the date of the injury.

I do not want to go over that ground again. thrashed it all out heretofore. I just want to know whether or not the Senate Is going to treat this case in the same way that it did the other one, when it discussed it all day and finally reached a conclusion upon a roll call of the Senate. We must treat them all alike. We can not make fish of one and fowl of the other. We can not favor some one Senator's bill and put the kibosh on somebody else's bill. It is a question of whether or not we are going to do the same with this man that we did with the other man. That is all there is to it.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. President, inasmuch as the Senate seems to wish to occupy its time in the useless undertaking of considering Senate bills which can not ever be considered by the House at this time, I do not know why we should not take some time in debating the merits of this proposition.

The position of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. Norris] is that if the Senate the other day made a mistake and did a wrong thing, therefore it must continue the mistake and do the wrong thing in this case.

Mr. President, if we go upon the pension basis-and I say that is the only correct basis for these men-why should we give them a greater privilege and give them greater considera-tion than we have given to soldiers of the Civil War and to soldiers of the Spanish-American War?

Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. NORRIS. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. LENROOT. I do. Mr. NORRIS. I should like to ask the Senator how he voted the other day upon the Wadsworth amendment?

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. President, the particular question that is now up was not up on that proposition.

Mr. NORRIS. It was involved in it.

Mr. LENROOT. Oh, it was involved; but I want to say to the Senator that if that question had come up, I would have voted then just exactly as I expect to vote to-day.

Mr. NORRIS. Now I want to ask the Senator another question, if he will kindly yield.

Mr. LENROOT. I want to ask the Senator from Nebraska a question. Does the Senator think that if there is in a bill something that is wrong, to which Senators have not had their attention called, the Senate is thereafter bound to continue the

Mr. NORRIS. No. First, it is not wrong. Secondly, it was brought to the attention of everybody here, and we had a discussion of it, and a roll-call vote, and I take it that the Senator voted for it. Now he is going to vote against it because it is a different man and a different Senator.

Mr. LENROOT. Let me ask the Senator this question: Is he willing, in the case of pensions for the soldiers of the Civil War, to date their pensions from 1865?

Mr. NORRIS. I am willing, in the case of soldiers of the Civil War, to date their pensions from the date of the injury; and that is the general law and has been all the time.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, the Senator is wrong.
Mr. LENROOT. The Senator is entirely wrong. Mr. LENROOT. The Senator is entirely wrong. Why, if that rule prevailed, it would cost hundreds of millions of dollars additional to the Treasury of the United States. The Senator from Nebraska must be aware of that. I am especially surprised that the Senator from Nebraska, of all Senators on this floor, should take the position that Senators are bound to vote for something they believe is wrong because the Senate the other day did something that the same Senators believe was wrong. That is a very unwise position. It is not the kind of position that the distinguished Senator from Nebraska usually takes.

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. LENROOT. I yield. Mr. COUZENS. In view of the statement of the Senator from Wisconsin in regard to the inability of the House of Representatives to pass upon these bills at this late time in the session. I am going to object to taking up every one of these bills as they come along, so that we may get down to some business that can be done.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is up now by motion, by vote of the Senate.

Mr. COUZENS. I am making reference to future bills.
Mr. LENROOT. I wish to say to the Senator from Michigan that I am entirely in accord with his view, and I took that position not 10 minutes ago; but the Senate, by a majority vote, seemed to be indifferent to action upon House bills, to action upon bills that might become laws, and by a very considerable majority this morning voted to take up bills that every Senator knows can not become law. That being the attitude of the Senate, I do not know why I, as one Senator, should be at all concerned, as long as the majority has expressed its will with reference to debating and doing an utterly futile and useless thing until the hour of 1 o'clock shall arrive.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. LENROOT. I yield. Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Mr. President. I think the attitude taken by the Senator from Michigan and the Senator from I have a bill of a similar Wisconsin is manifestly unfair. character. I am perfectly willing, if it is the will of the Senate that these bills shall not be discussed and passed upon. to wipe them all out, but inasmuch as the Senate has taken up one, and inasmuch as the Naval Affairs Committee have passed upon the merits of these cases and reported the bills favorably, and inasmuch as these men who are suffering have appealed to their Representatives for relief, and we have introduced these measures, it is the duty of the Senate to pass upon them, as the Senate has passed upon one.

Mr. LENROOT. I ask the Senator from New Jersey what benefit will accrue to these men from the Senate passing these bills which can not become laws?

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. I will answer the Senator. benefit comes from the very fact that the Senate has gone on record in favor of the claims,

Mr. LENROOT. That is exactly the point, Mr. President. The questions which now come up are of a serious nature, and the effort being made to make hasty action of the Senate a precedent in all cases is the strongest reason why these matters should be carefully considered, and a uniform policy upon these bills adopted.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. LENROOT. I yield

Mr. ROBINSON. I thought the Senator's time had expired.

Mr. LENROOT. There is no limit upon the time.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill was taken up by motion.

Mr. LENROOT. It was taken up by motion.
Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. LENROOT. I yield. Mr. ROBINSON. With With the indulgence of the Senator from Wisconsin, I hope the Senate will not get into a frame of mind now that will prevent it from transacting the business which everybody knows ought to be performed, and I very much fear that is what is about to occur.

In my opinion, the unanimous-consent request submitted by the Senator from Kansas ought to have been entered into. very much regret that the Senator from Tennessee found it his duty to object to that request. There are on the calendar a large number of bills and joint resolutions which have not been called and for the consideration of which no opportunity has been given. This is the next to the last day of the session, and the business of the Senate is constantly becoming more and There are some resolutions and some House more congested. bills on the calendar which have not yet been called and which in all probability will not be reached, to which no objection will be urged, to which no objection can be urged.

Mr. President, I have no objection to the passage of the pending bill. I think, inasmuch as it has been brought before the Senate, it ought to be disposed of, and then I think the Senate ought to enter into some sort of an agreement which will enable it to transact the business that can be transacted.

Mr. LENROOT. If the Senator desires to submit another unanimous-consent request, I will yield for that purpose.

Mr. McKELLAR. My purpose in objecting awhile ago— Mr. ROBINSON. I will submit a request for unanimous consent if the Senator will yield.

Mr. LENROOT. I yield for that purpose. Mr. ROBINSON. I ask that after the pending bill has been disposed of the Senate shall proceed to the consideration of unobjected bills, resolutions, and joint resolutions on the calendar, commencing with Calendar No. 1135, which is the number where the Senate last left off. I submit that request.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made.

Mr. HEFLIN and Mr. McKELLAR addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator from Wisconsin yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. LENROOT. I yield to the Senator from Alabama. Mr. HEFLIN. I want to be heard on this question.

Mr. LENROOT. I quite appreciate the situation; yet the Senator from Arkansas recognizes that the Senate by a very large majority expressed itself a few minutes ago as not being concerned greatly about the passage of bills which have some opportunity of becoming laws.

Mr. ROBINSON. Will the Senator yield further? Mr. LENROOT. I yield.

Mr. ROBINSON. So long as the Senate is proceeding under an order which contemplates that motions may be made to take up bills it is not to be expected that Senators will vote against the consideration of bills they favor. That is not the practice. The intelligent course to pursue, if Senators want measures on the calendar considered, is to enter into a unanimous-consent agreement for that purpose. Senators who want to defeat resolutions and joint resolutions and bills in which they are interested are doing it now, for the last opportunity to consider them is at hand, or well-nigh at hand.

Mr. LENROOT. That is exactly the situation; but a majority of the Senate have voted that they were not concerned in the Senate passing bills which could become laws.

Mr. ROBINSON. Will the Senator yield?
Mr. BURSUM. Mr. President, a point of order.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico rises to a question of order. The Senator will state his point of order.

Mr. BURSUM. My understanding is that up until 1 o'clock, under Rule VIII, we are subject to the five-minute restriction.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is true in regard to bills taken up by unanimous consent, but not when bills are taken up on motion, as this bill has been taken up. The Presiding Officer ruled it that way just a few days ago.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Mr. President-

Mr. LENROOT. I yield.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. I think every Senator in this body will agree that I have not been an obstructionist at any time in my whole term of service here. I have a bill similar in character to the one now under consideration. I think it is manifestly unfair to pass one of those bills and put another over under objection. I have hesitated to object, and I wish to withdraw my objection-

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. As the Chair understands, the Senator from Arkansas wishes to have the Chair submit his unanimous-consent agreement.

Mr. NORRIS. Will the Senator from Wisconsin yield to me to submit a unanimous-consent agreement?

Mr. LENROOT. I yield. Mr. NORRIS. I ask unanimous consent—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is one unanimous-consent request now pending. Is there objection to the request?

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I objected to the unanimous-consent request this morning because it seemed to me that certain Senate resolutions, in two of which I am interested, ought to be considered by the Senate before it adjourns, and I did not know whether they could be considered under the proposed agreement. In view of what has been said, I will withdraw the objection I made. As I understand it, the unanimous-consent request was that we consider unobjected bills

Mr. ROBINSON. Until 1 o'clock.
Mr. McKELLAR. But after 1 o'clock, how long?
Mr. ROBINSON. It was not to run after 1 o'clock.

I withdraw the objection. Mr. McKELLAR.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. As the Chair understands the request of the Senator from Arkansas, it is that upon the disposition of the pending bill the Senate will proceed to the consideration of unobjected bills, House resolutions, and Senate resolutions, on the calendar, beginning with Calendar No. 1136.

Mr. McKELLAR. During the morning hour?
The PRESIDING OFFICER. During the morning hour. Is there objection?

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. I object for the moment.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made. The Senator from Wisconsin has the floor.

Mr. NORRIS. He has yielded to me.

Mr. LENROOT. I yield. Mr. NORRIS. I ask unanimous consent that all speeches on the pending bill be limited to two minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. LENROOT. I object.

Mr. NORRIS. I thought the Senator was very anxious to get along.

Mr. LENROOT. I was,
Mr. NORRIS. He has gotten over that.
Mr. LENROOT. No; I have not. The Senate has determined by vote, and by a large majority, that we should spend the time of the Senate in doing utterly useless and futile things, and if that is so, we might as well debate the merits of this measure at length, even though it takes until 1 o'clock.

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. LENROOT. I yield.
Mr. COUZENS. I wish to say that the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. Frelinghuysen] raised a question a short time ago about having an interest in these relief bills, and the inference was that those who oppose proceeding with the relief bills are opposed to the relief. I want to say that I am just as interested as any Senator here in relieving these injured service men of the country, but I am unalterably opposed to merely going through the form of pretending that we are interested in the relief of the men, when we know that the bills can not at this late time in the session be passed by the House of Representatives. So what is the use of wasting the time of the Senate in trying to pretend that we are interesed in his relief, when we know that no relief can be had during this session of Congress?

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. President, I think I can answer the question of the Senator from Michigan. What is the desire here now?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator yield?
Mr. LENROOT. Let me finish this statement. What is the desire now of the Senator from Nebraska? Of course, he knows that this bill can not become a law, but what is desired, no doubt, is that at the next session, the Senate having voted a certain sum, irrespective of the judgment of any committee as to the extent of the injury involved, he will have a precedent for having the Senate pass a bill at that time carrying the same sum.

No committee has considered the extent of the injury. The committee considered only whether the case came within the law governing retirement, and properly so, if we are to have that policy; but if we are to go to a pension policy-and that is the only proper policy in these cases—the committee can examine into the extent of the injury, determine the proper amount of compensation, and the Senate ought not to be tied up in the future by a provision such as the Senator now seeks to have passed.

Mr. WALSH of Montana and Mr. NORRIS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. LENROOT. I yield to the Senator from Montana. Mr. WALSH of Montana. I observed that the Senator from California [Mr. Shortringe] objected to the unanimous-consent request just preferred. Everybody recognizes that it is a waste of time we are indulging in this morning. I should like to inquire of the Senator from California what is the nature of his objection?

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. If the Senator from Wisconsin will

Mr. LENROOT. I yield.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. I have waited here on two different days for hours to reach Order of Business 1136 on the calendar, in which I am very deeply interested.

Mr. LENROOT. Is that a Senate bill or a House bill?

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. It is a Senate bill; but permit me to explain why I have objected. It will take me but a moment. Lieutenant MacDonald, a brave man-

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Let me inquire of the Senator if be anticipates that some objection will be made?

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. I can not imagine that there would be any.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Then the Senator will expedite consideration by agreeing to the unanimous-consent request.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. That may be; but let me explain myself, if the Senator from Wisconsin will permit me. During a state of war, in active service

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I object to the discussion of the merits of a bill that is not before the Senate.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. I am not discussing the merits of the bill, I am answering a question of the Senator from Montana. Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, if we are going to be technical,

I rise to a point of order. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state his point of order.

Mr. LENROOT. I decline to yield further. Mr. NORRIS. The Senator from Wisconsin has no right to farm out the time and hold the floor himself for carrying on his little one-man filibuster.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The point of order is well taken.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President-

Mr. LENROOT. I decline to yield. If I recollect the bill of the Senator from California-and I think I do-it is a very striking illustration of what this policy will lead to. As I recollect the bill of the Senator from California, it was the case of an officer having ankylosis. Am I correct?
Mr. SHORTRIDGE. The Senator is correct.

Mr. LENROOT. He had trouble with his ankle; yet under the bill now before the Senate it is proposed to give him a higher compensation than we give to a man with a total disability, who was in the enlisted ranks. If this precedent be established, I expect the Senator from California will propose $72 a month for the officer in whom he is interested, although the only injury he has is ankylosis, incapacitating him for military or naval service.

Mr. President, it is worth while, as long as we are going to discuss bills which can not become laws, to discuss somewhat the policy the Senate proposes to enter into. My objection is that upon this matter of compensation we should have information as to the extent of the disability. There is no word in the report upon the bill that is now before the Senate as to the extent of the disability, except that the man is totally incapacitated for military or naval service.

So, Mr. President, my objection is not to giving compensation to these men at a time when it is possible to do something for them, but this is not the time, and when we do give it we should have a report from a proper committee as to the extent of the injury and what in the judgment of the committee would be a proper compensation. Here the bill comes before the Senate. I do not know what rank the officer held, but as the bill was originally proposed, as the Senator from Nebraska would favor it, it would give to the officer two or three or four times the compensation a private soldier or a marine would receive for exactly the same disability. I can not stand here and countenance, so far as my vote is concerned, any such discrimination against a private soldier. The Senator from Nebraska may do so if he chooses.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President—
Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President—
Mr. NORRIS. I thought the Senator from Nebraska,
Mr. NORRIS. I thought the Senator had yielded the floor.
Mr. LENROOT. No; I have not.

So much for that branch of the matter. Next, as to the dating of the pension back to the time of the injury: I challenge any Senator to give any reason why in the case of the World War we should give pensions back to the time of the injury if we do not, as we have not, pursue the same practice with regard to soldiers and sailors of the Civil War and of the Spanish-Ameri-

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from New York?
Mr. LENROOT. I yield.
Mr. WADSWORTH. The Senator should recoilect also that the officer in question was paid at the full rate of his grade until the time of his discharge.

Mr. NORRIS. This does not go back of the discharge.

Mr. WADSWORTH, I know; but the Senator adverted to the proposal of the Senator from Nebraska as to the date from which the man should be paid on account of his injury. As a matter of fact, between the moment of the injury and the moment of discharge many months may elapse during which the man is on a full-pay basis.

Mr. LENROOT. May I have the bill reported as to the time when the pension would take effect? I would like to inquire as to the time under the proposed amendment.

The Reading Clerk. The amendment reads "dating from the date of his discharge from the Navy," which the senior Senator from Utah [Mr. Smoot] has moved to strike out.

Mr. LENROOT. It does not seem to me that the Senate ought to settle that policy now. If we do, what excuse are we going to give for special bills for soldlers of the Civil War from now on as to why their pensions should not date back to 1865, a pension, if you please, of $50 or more a month, $600 a year, for a period of more than 50 years.

SHORTRIDGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for just a moment?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. LENROOT. Very well; I yield. Mr. SHORTRIDGE. In order to make haste, I will withdraw my objection if it stands in the way of adopting the proposed unanimous-consent agreement.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President— Mr. LENROOT. I yield to the Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. ROBINSON. Once more I am going to submit the request for unanimous consent. I renew the request I have twice before made; and unless it is accepted this time we might as well stop pretending to work and, like little children, go on I ask for the present consideration of the unanimousconsent request which I stated a moment ago, and which I will restate if anyone desire

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the unanimous-consent request submitted by the Senator from Arkansas? Mr. HEFLIN. Does the acceptance of the agreement interfere with the disposition of the measure now before the Senate?

It will not cut off debate on that measure?

No; it is not so intended.

Mr. ROBINSON. No; it is not Mr. SPENCER. Mr. President-Mr. LENROOT. Will not the Will not the Senator from Missouri wait until the unanimous-consent agreement is entered into?

Mr. SPENCER. I desire to say something with reference to the unanimous-consent agreement.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I would like to have the proposed unanimous-consent agreement stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The proposed unanimous-consent agreement will be stated.

The Assistant Secretary. It is proposed by the Senator from Arkansas that after the bill under consideration is disposed of the Senate shall proceed to the consideration of unobjected House bills, joint resolutions, and resolutions on the calendar, beginning with No. 1136.

Mr. McNARY. That does not give much comfort to those who have bills on the calendar that might be considered if we were working under Rule VIII. If I knew or had some assur-

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President-

Please let me finish my statement. If I had Mr. McNARY. any assurance that we would return to the calendar under Rule VIII I would not object, but some time I want to go through the calendar under Rule VIII so that we may move to take up bills that are objected to.

Mr. ROBINSON. There will be no objection to that if the time affords an opportunity to do it. The Senate has now consumed an hour and five minutes and has taken no action upon any measure. This is next to the last day of the session. If the bills that have never been called are to have their chance for disposition, they ought to be called immediately. I have no objection subsequently to proceeding to the consideration of other bills on the calendar if the Senate finds it profitable to do so. I am simply trying to prevent the Senate from wasting its valuable time in the consideration of matters which we all know can not be disposed of by the body at the other end of the Capitol.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Mr. President, will not the Senator consent to have Senate bills included? They would go over on objection.

Mr. ROBINSON. Yes; I will modify the request so as to include all unobjected bills on the calendar.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. GOODING. Mr. President, I will have to object. I have a bill on the calendar in which I am very much interested, and a Senator objected to it the other day. I am quite sure he would not object to it to-day. It is a bill in which a neigh-bor of mine is interested, and I want the Senate to take some action on it.

Mr. LENROOT. If It is not objected to, the Senator will have a chance to have action on it.

Mr. GOODING. But it has been objected to.
Mr. ROBINSON. Very well. I have no interest in any bill on the calendar. I am simply moving in the interest of orderly and decent procedure. If Senators want to make a farce of the business of the Senate and act like little children with half intelligence they can do it. I propose that an opportunity shall be given to dispose of business to which there is no objection, and then if any Senator can get the floor and move to proceed to the consideration of his bill, I shall have no objection. I shall be glad to see accomplished anything the Senator from Idaho desires to accomplish, if it can be done.

Mr. GOODING. I have no desire to delay the passage of bills, and with that understanding I will withdraw my objection.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the unanimous-consent request submitted by the Senator from Arkansas? Mr. SPENCER. Mr. President, I want to submit to the Sena-tor from Arkansas this fact: There is upon the calendar an omnibus bill reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to which the committee has given considerable attention. Of course, if there are any items of the bill to which serious objection is made they can be eliminated.

Mr. ROBINSON. Will the Senator pardon an interruption?

Mr. ROBINSON. Will the Senator pardon an interruption?
Mr. SPENCER. May I finish my statement?
Mr. ROBINSON. Certainly.
Mr. SPENCER. But that bill ought not to be put in a position where any single Senator may prevent the Senate from proceeding to its consideration.

Mr. ROBINSON. The only effect of the agreement is to utilize the small remaining part of the morning hour. the Senator can move to proceed to the consideration of the bill, if he desires to do so, at any time that he can get the floor, but it is perfectly apparent that his bill could not be disposed of within the morning hour to-day. We ought to take the 50 minutes remaining before 1 o'clock to dispose of matters that are not objected to. It is in the power of any Senator who chooses to do so to continue the useless waste of time of the Senate, but I ask for the submission of my unanimous-consent request.

Mr. SPENCER. May I ask what number on the calendar we are now considering?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Calendar No. 1135. Mr. SPENCER. I withdraw my objection.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. HARRISON. I am not going to object, but I want to reserve the right to do so for just a moment. This little snarl has come about because Senators who have voted against recommitting the shipping bill time after time have brought it upon us. We pointed out weeks and months ago that if the passage of the ship subsidy bill was insisted on this situation would arise and bill after bill would be defeated. So those Senators who sat here by day and by night voting against the motion to recommit and trying to put the ship subsidy bill over are now responsible for the failure of bills in which they are interested, and they will have that matter to explain to their constituents.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the unanimous-consent request of the Senator from Arkansas? The Chair hears none, and the unanimous-consent agreement is entered into.

Mr. LENROOT, Now, Mr. President—
Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I make the point of order that the Senator from Wisconsin has lost the floor long ago.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair does not understand the reason for the point of order.

Mr. NORRIS. In the first place, I objected to the Senator farming out the time awhile ago. There has been action by the Senate and numerous speeches made by other Senators in the meantime, and he still holds the floor to the exclusion of everybody else.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair inquires of the Senator from Wisconsin whether he has spoken more than the number of times permitted under the rule?

Mr. LENROOT. I did not understand the statement of the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Has the Senator exhausted the number of times he is permitted to speak under the rule?

Mr. LENROOT. He has not. The Senator from Wisconsin yielded for the purpose of having a unanimous-consent request The Senator from Nebraska may attempt to take submitted. advantage of yielding for the purpose of expediting business if he wishes to do so. That is his prerogative.

Mr. NORRIS. That is what I wanted. I want to stop the filibuster.

Mr. LENROOT. There is no filibuster except that the Senator from Nebraska is trying to get the Senate to do a useless thing in order to create a precedent for the future.

Now, Mr. President, I am going to conclude in just a moment by saying that I hope the amendment proposed by the senior Senator from Utah [Mr. Smoot] will be agreed to, and that we will do by this man what we have done for the soldiers and sailors of the Civil War and the Spanish-American War in this regard.

Further, I want to suggest that at the next session, when similar bills come before the committee, as they will, the committee should consider the extent of the disability and make recommendation as to what is the proper amount of compensation, and I shall then cheerfully support them,

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President-

Mr. LENROOT. I do not yield. The reason why I have taken the time is that if the unanimous-consent agreement had not been entered into there would have been like motions on numberless other Senate bills, and I wanted to give notice that if the Senate was going to vote to take up bills that could not possibly become laws, they themselves in so voting were preventing the consideration of House bills that ought to be considered by the Senate.

Mr. NORRIS and Mr. HEFLIN addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT, The Senator from Nebraska is recognized.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, if it had not been for the Senator from Wisconsin, we would have disposed of the bill long ago. I presume I ought to remain quiet under his castigation and not say anything in reply and permit action by the Senate. But I feel that I am justified in saying a few words in reply, because of what he has said and the insinuations he has cast, unfounded, unreasonable, and discourteous as they

All at once the Senator from Wisconsin has become virtuous. His virtue is paraded here. He does not want to consider a bill where the committee has not considered the evidence of the disability. That is true, as a matter of fact. The bill was introduced on a different theory. When it was brought up and the new theory was suggested, and the Senator from New York [Mr. Wadsworth] offered the amendment that was finally agreed to, I not only did my best to expedite it but I supported the amendment. I acted in good faith. After Senators had debated it to a considerable extent, I accepted the verdict, and I offered an amendment to make the bill cover the points at issue.

The Senator from Wisconsin was voting for that amendment. He did not see then the necessity of sending it back to the committee to get evidence. It was somebody else's bill then. It was all right to take that step then. He, like I, supported the Senator from New York in the motion that he made. We voted for the amendment. Like myself, he voted for the other bill. Now he is condemning such action as a most vicious practice when it is applied to somebody else's bill or to some other soldier who has been injured.

Mr. President, the contention as to his getting double pay is not well founded, for the bill provides, just as the other bill did, that his pay shall commence from the date of discharge.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, it may be unpopular with some in the closing hours of this session to take up the time of the Senate pleading for aid for a disabled soldier, but I intend to insist that favorable action be had on this bill to-day, The Senator from Wisconsin tells us that we are undertaking to do an utterly useless and futile thing. I do not agree with the Senator from Wisconsin. The Senate owes it to this soldier to pass this bill. Then the responsibility for failure to pass it through the House will be upon that body. If the Republican Party, in power in both branches of Congress, with two more days and nights remaining of this session, can not put through a little bill to pay a disabled soldier who has practically lost his leg, who is without means—a poor, unfortunate fellow-if that party can not halt other business long enough reliow—It that party can not half other ousness one can be to extend a helping hand to this poor boy who offered to die for his country, then that party is contemptible and impotent.

Are we doing something that is utterly useless and futile? Senators, what are we thinking about? Do you want to send the message to this poor, afflicted boy that you would not halt the proceedings of the Senate long enough to pass a bill of this character? The Government, when our liberty was imperiled, took time enough to go to his home and to bring him out to join the ranks of his comrades and to stand between us and the overthrow of our Government, but we have not time now to do this act of justice. Senators are anxious to get some measure on the calendar jammed through the Senate in the closing hours, and a disabled soldier, poverty stricken, may do the best he can for nine months to come before another Con-God of the Republic, have mercy upon those gress convenes.

who contend for such a course.

Futile! Why futile? The Senator from Nebraska is asking for a small sum for this man who has lost his leg. He is not to blame for losing his leg. He lost it in the service of his country. In the closing hours of the Senate Senators are criticized and lectured for pausing long enough to demand justice for this soldier who was stricken down while serving his country in the hour of its peril.

The junior Senator from Michigan [Mr. Couzens] has said there is no use to lose time with a bill which can not be passed. Why can not Congress pass it? If we pass the bill here and some one makes an appeal to those in authority in the House, if they have any heart, can they not go upon the floor of the House and, because of the merit and emergency character of the measure, ask unanimous consent of the House to pass the bill? If any man in the House should object, I want the RECORD to show it and let the people back home know that he objected and kept this boy out of the aid to which he is entitled for nine long months. I would like to see the Senator or Member of the House who would deny this crippled soldier boy the meager means here asked for to aid in his support. Such a one should be condemned by his people at home. Does not the service of this boy and the condition of this boy appeal to us?

Freeze, freeze, oh bitter sky
That dost not bite so nigh
As benefits forgot.
Though thou the waters warp,
Thy sting is not so sharp
As friends remembered not.

This boy is an American patriot and an American soldier, and, as I have said, was injured in the service of his country. The Republican Party in control of Congress can find time to past through the House and try to pass through the Senate a bill appropriating $5,000,000 to Liberia to enable her to pay debts which are due by her to Wall Street—your party had time to do that; I did not hear any one of you criticizing it either—the Republican Party in control of Congress had time to vote $20,000,000 aid to Russia, and not one of you chirped on that; but you have not time to pay a disabled soldier who is lying on his bed with his leg broken a few dollars to keep him from starying. I have not any patience with any such conduct or patriotism.

Now, Senators ask what good it would do to pass the bill if it should fail in the other House? I will tell Senators what good it will do. If the Senate approves the measure and goes on record as voting for the appropriation asked for, that action alone would enable this boy to borrow money, to get aid from somebody during the next nine months until Congress reconvenes. I beg you, Senators, to do that much for this boy.

venes. I beg you, Senators, to do that much for this boy.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Utah [Mr. Smoot] to the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. Norris], which will be stated.

The Assistant Secretary. It is proposed to amend the amendment by striking out the words "dating from the date of his discharge from the Navy."

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Overhue, its enrolling clerk, amounced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8086) to prohibit the shipment of filled milk in interstate or foreign commerce.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendment of the Senate to the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 53) providing for a special joint committee of the Senate and House of Representatives to investigate employment of prisoners at Leavenworth, Kans., and McNeil Island, Wash., and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 422) permitting the entry free of duty of certain domestic animals which have crossed the boundary line into foreign countries; requested a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. Green of Iowa, Mr. Longworth, Mr. Hawley, Mr. Collier, and Mr. Oldfield were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

The message also announced that the House had passed without amendment the bill (S. 2051) to amend section 3142 of the Revised Statutes, to permit an increase in the number of collection districts for the collection of internal revenue and in the number of collectors of internal revenue from 64 to 65.

The message further announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 14408) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, and prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, and for other purposes, requested a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. Madden, Mr. Anthony, and Mr. Byrns of Tennessee were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference:

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker pro tempore of the House had signed the following enrolled bills, and they were thereupon signed by the Vice President: S. 4122. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Interstate Toll Bridge Co. for construction of a bridge across Red River between Montague County, Tex., and Jefferson County, Okla.;

8. 4235. An act granting consent of Congress to the Charlie Bridge Co. for construction of a bridge across Red River between Clay County, Tex., and Cotton County, Okla.;

S. 4387. An act to authorize the building of a bridge across the Tugaloo River between South Carolina and Georgia;

H. R. 7851. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to provide for the appointment of a district judge, district attorney, and marshal for the western district of South Carolina, and for other purposes,' "approved September 1, 1916, so as to provide for the terms of the district court to be held at Spartanburg, S. C.;

H. R. 8086. An act to prohibit the shipment of filled milk in interstate or foreign commerce;

H. R. 11477. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Freeburn Toll Bridge Co. to construct a bridge across the Tug Fork of Big Sandy River, in Pike County, Ky.;

H. R. 11939. An act to amend section 5219 of the Revised Statutes of the United States; and

H. R. 13205. An act for the relief of the American Trust Co.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION.

Mr. WARREN. I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives on the deficiency appropriation bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 14408) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, and prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, and for other purposes, and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. WARREN. I move that the Senate insist upon its

Mr. WARREN. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, that the request of the House for a conference be granted, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to, and the Vice President appointed Mr. Warren, Mr. Curtis, and Mr. Overman conferees on the part of the Senate.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE REPRESENTATIVE W. BOURKE COCKRAN.

The VICE PRESIDENT appointed Mr. Wadsworth, Mr. Calder, Mr. Robinson, Mr. Watson, Mr. Walsh of Montana, and Mr. Walsh of Massachusetts as the committee on the part of the Senate to attend the funeral of the late Representative W. Bourke Cockran under the resolution (S. Res. 464) unanimously adopted by the Senate on yesterday.

MEMBER OF JOINT COMMISSION ON POSTAL SERVICE.

The VICE PRESIDENT appointed Mr. Edge a member of the Joint Commission on Postal Service, vice Mr. Townsend (chairman), resigned.

DEPARTMENTAL USE OF AUTOMOBILES.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the First Assistant Secretary of the Interior, in further response to Senate Resolution 399, agreed to January 6, 1923, transmitting data relative to motor-driven vehicles in use by the department in the field service of the General Lain Office, the Indian Office, the Geological Survey, the Reclamation Service, the Bureau of Mines, and the National Park Service, which, with the accompanying papers, was ordered to lie on the table.

EMPLOYMENT OF FEDERAL PRISONERS.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Pursuant to the provisions of House Concurrent Resolution 53, to create a joint committee of the Senate and House of Representatives to determine what employment can be furnished Federal prisoners, and for other purposes, the Chair appoints the following Senators members of the special joint committee on the part of the Senate: Mr. Dillingham, Mr. Shorreidge, and Mr. Overman.

INVESTIGATION OF UNITED STATES VETERANS' BUREAU.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Pursuant to the provisions of Senate Resolution 466, authorizing the appointment of a committee to investigate the leases and contracts executed by the United States Veterans' Bureau, and for other purposes, the Chair appoints the following Senators as members of the committee: Mr. Reed of Pennsylvania, Mr. Oddie, and Mr. Walsh of Massachusetts.

REPORT OF COLORADO RIVER COMMISSION.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from Hon. Herbert Hoover, chairman of and Federal representative on the Colorado River Commission, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report of the proceedings of the commission and a copy of the "Colorado River Compact," which was referred to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation.

DISTRICT COURT AT SPARTANBURG, S. C.

Mr. OVERMAN. I ask unanimous consent, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to report back favorably without amendment the bill (H. R. 7851) to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to provide for the appointment of a district judge, district attorney, and marshal for the western district of South Carolina, and for other purposes," approved September 1, 1916, so as to provide for the terms of the district court to be held at Spartanburg, S. C.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the report will be received.

Mr. SMITH. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill. It simply designates a city in my State as a place where a term of the Federal court may be held. The passage of the bill is recommended by the Attorney General.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 5 of an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to provide for the appointment of a district judge, district atterney, and marshal for the western district of South Carolina, and for other purposes," approved September 1, 1916, be, and the same is hereby, amended by inserting after the words "fourth Tuesday in May and November" the words "and at Spartanburg, on the third Tuesday in February and second Tuesday in December" so as to read as follows:

"Sec. 5. That the terms of the district court for the eastern district shall be held at Charleston on the first Tuesday in June and December; at Columbia, on the third Tuesday in January and first Tuesday in November; at Florence, first Tuesday in March; and at Aiken, on the first Tuesday in April and October.

"Terms of the district court of the western district shall be held at Greenville on the first Tuesday in April and the first Tuesday in October; at Rock Hill, the second Tuesday in March and September; at Greenwood, the first Tuesday in April and the first Tuesday in October; at Rock Hill, the second Tuesday in March and September; at Greenwood, the first Tuesday in February and sovember; at Anderson, the fourth Tuesday in May and November; and at Spartanburg, on the third Tuesday in February and second Tuesday in December.

"The office of the clerks of the district court for the western district shall be at Greenville, and the office of the clerk of the district court for the eastern district shall be at Charleston."

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BRIDGE ACROSS TUG FORK OF BIG SANDY RIVER, KY.

Mr. SHEPPARD. From the Committee on Commerce I report back favorably without amendment the bill (H. R. 11477) granting the consent of Congress to the Freeburn Toll Bridge Co. to construct a bridge across the Tug Fork of Big Sandy River, in Pike County, Ky., and I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present

consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the Freeburn Toll Bridge Co. and its successors and assigns to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Tug Fork of Big Sandy River at a point sultable to the interests of navigation at or near the mouth of Peter Creek, in the county of Pike, in the State of Kentucky, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

Sec. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

expressly reserved.

GORDON G. MACDONALD.

The bill (S. 3826) for the relief of Gordon G. MacDonald, was announced as next in order on the calendar.

Mr. KING. I ask that the bill go over. The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

BENJAMIN H. RICHARDSON.

The bill (S. 3895) for the relief of Benjamin H. Richardson was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. I ask that that bill go over.
Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. If the Senator will withhold his objection for a moment, I merely wish to state that that bill is similar to the one which has just been passed. ported by the Committee on Naval Affairs, and I will offer the same amendment to this bill that was offered to the bill which the Senate acted upon a few moments ago, if the Senator will withdraw his objection.

Mr. KING. With that understanding, I will withhold the obection.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.
The Assistant Secretary. It is proposed to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Benjamin II. Richardson, late lieutenant, junior grade, United States Naval Reserve Force, and pay him a pension at the rate of $72 per month, dating from the date of his discharge from the Navy.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from New Jersey what the extent of the injury is in that case?

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. The report of the Committee on Naval Affairs, as I recall, does not specify the nature of the injury, but I am informed by a member of h's family that his back was injured, that he was operated on two years after the injury, and that to-day his disability is nearly permanent. I have been trying to get a report on his injury.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. President, that only illustrates what we are doing in fixing compensation without knowing anything about the extent of the injury.

Mr. SMOOT. I will inquire of the Senator if this is Order of Business No. 1136?

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Yes.

Mr. SMOOT. I will say to the Senator that the report indi-

He is suffering from deformity of bones of the right leg with resulting inversion of foot.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. I understood from a member of his family that the injury was to his hip and back.

Mr. SMOOT. The report shows that the only injury is to a few bones in his leg.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from New Jersey.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. SMOOT subsequently said: Mr. President, so that the RECORD may be correct, I desire to say that I asked the Senator from New Jersey when we were considering Senate bill 3895 if it was Order of Business 1136, and he answered yes. I now find that the Senator from New Jersey probably spoke inadvertently, because the calendar number of the bill is 1137, and the report of the committee on that bill does not show the nature of the injury to the soldier. I simply wish to have the RECORD correct and therefore make this statement.

AMERICAN TRUST CO.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I should like to ask the indulgence of the Senate for the consideration out of order of a bill on the calendar. The Senate has appointed me a member of the conference committee on the deficiency appropriation bill, and I have been called to attend a meeting of the con-The bill to which I refer authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury, under proper safeguards, to redeem certain certificates of indebtedness which were lost, destroyed, or stolen. ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 13205) for the relief of the American Trust Co.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to redeem United States Treasury certificates of indebtedness Nos. 18462, 18463, 18464, and 18465, each in the denomination of $1,000, series TM4-1920, dated February 2, 1920, and maturing March 15, 1920, with interest at the rate of 44 per annum from February 2, 1920, to March 15, 1920, in favor of the American Trust Co., of Charlotte, N. C., or its assigns, without presentation of the said certificates, the certificates of indebtedness having been lost, stolen, or destroyed: Provided, That the said certificates of indebtedness shall not have been previously presented for payment, and that no payment shall be made hereunder for any coupons which shall have been previously presented and paid: And provided further, That the said American Trust Co., of Charlotte, N. C., shall first file in the Treasury Department a bond in the penal sum of double the amount of the lost, stolen, or destroyed Treasury certificates of indebtedness and the interest payable thereon, in such form and with such surety or sureties as may be acceptable to the Secretary of the Treasury, to indedmnify and save harmless the United States from any loss on account of the lost, stolen, or destroyed certificates of indebtedness herein described.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

INDICTMENTS FOUND BY GRAND JURIES.

The bill (S. 4438) to amend section 1025 of the Revised Statutes of the United States was considered as in Committee of the Whole. The bill had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with amendments on page 2, at the beginning of line 1, to strike out "clerks or"; in line 2, after the word "Government," to strike out "in a clerical capacity, who shall, in that connection, be deemed to be persons acting for and on behalf of the United States in an official capacity and function," and to insert "who (such stenographers) shall be sworn to secrecy concerning the proceedings and evidence produced before the grand jury"; so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 1025 of the Revised Statutes of the United States be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

follows:

"SEC. 1025. No indictment found and presented by a grand jury in any district or other court of the United States shall be deemed insufficient, nor shall the trial, judgment, or other proceeding thereon be affected, by reason of any defect or imperfection in matter of form only, which shall not tend to the prejudice of the defendant, or by reason of the attendance before a grand jury of one or more stenggraphers employed to assist the district attorney or other counsel for the Government who (such stenographers) shall be sworn to secrecy concerning the proceedings and evidence produced before the grand jury."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMENDMENT OF JUDICIAL CODE.

The bill (S. 4437) to amend section 284 of the Judicial Code of the United States was considered as in Committee of the Whole. The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 284 of the Judicial Code of the nited States be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as

Be it enacted, etc., That section 284 of the Judicial Code of the United States be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"SEC, 284. No grand jury shall be summoned to attend any district court unless the judge thereof, in his own discretion or upon a notification by the district attorney that such jury will be needed, orders a venire to issue therefor. If the United States attorney for any district which has a city or borough containing at least 300,000 inhabitants shall certify in writing to the district judge or the senior district judge of the district that the exigencies of the public service require it, the judge may, in his discretion, also order a venire to issue for a second grand jury. And said court may in term order a grand jury to be summoned at such time, and to serve such time as it may direct, whenever, in its judgment, it may be proper to do so. And such judge may, upon request of the district attorney or of the grand jury or on his own motion, by order authorize any grand jury to continue to sit during the term succeeding the term at which such request is made, solely to continue business unfinished by such grand jury: Provided, however, That no grand jury shall be permitted to sit in all during more than three terms. But nothing therein shall operate to extend beyond the time permitted by law the imprisonment before indictment found of a person accused of a crime or offense, or the time during which a person so accused may be held under recognizance before indictment found."

Mr. KING. May I inquire of the Senator from Montana to

Mr. KING. May I inquire of the Senator from Montana to what extent the bill proposes to amend the present law?
Mr. WALSH of Montana. The change commences in line 7, page 2, with the word-

And such judge may, upon request of the district attorney, or of the grand jury, or on his own motion-

And so forth.

Under the existing law the grand jury would expire with the expiration of the term. This bill will permit a grand jury called at one term to continue on during the next term in order to complete its unfinished business.

Mr. KING. That is the only change?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. That is the only change. The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMENDMENT OF TRANSPORTATION ACT OF 1920.

The bill (H. R. 14309) to amend section 206 of the transportation act, 1920, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 206 of the transportation act, 1920, is amended by adding at the end thereof two new subdivisions to read is amended by adding at the charter two constants as follows:

"(h) Actions, suits, proceedings, and reparation claims, of the character described in subdivision (a), (c), or (d), properly commenced within the period of limitation prescribed, and pending at the time this subdivision takes effect, shall not abate by reason of the death, expiration of term of office, retirement, resignation, or removal from office of the Director General of Railroads or the agent designated under subdivision (a), but may (despite the provisions of the act entitled

'An act to prevent abatement of certain actions.' approved February 8, 1899) be prosecuted to final judgment, decree, or award, substituting at any time before satisfaction of such final judgment, decree, or award the agent designated by the President then in office. Nor shall any action, suit, or other proceeding heretofore or hereafter brought by any public officer or official, in his official capacity, to enforce or compel the performance of an obligation due or accruing to the United States arising out of Federal control, abate by reason of the death, resignation, retirement, or removal from office of such officer or official, but such action, suit, or other proceeding may (despite the provisions of such act of February 8, 1899) be prosecuted to final judgment, decree, or award, substituting at any time before satisfaction of any such final judgment, decree, or award the successor in office.

"(1) Orders providing for a substitution in such cases made before this subdivision takes effect by courts having jurisdiction of the parties and subject matter are hereby validated, anything in such act of February 8, 1899, to the contrary notwithstanding. Actions, suits, reparation claims, or other proceedings of the character described in subdivision (h) which have been abated or dismissed solely because of the provisions of such act of February 8, 1899, shall be reinstated upon reasonable notice to the adverse party, and upon proper motion therefor filed within one year from the time this subdivision takes effect."

Mr. KING. Reserving the right to object. I should like to

Mr. KING. Reserving the right to object, I should like to ask the Senator from Iowa to explain the bill.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, section 206 of the transportation act of 1920 is the section which provides for the bringing of suits against the United States and by the United States against people who may have controversies arising out of the transportation act. It provides that suits against the United States or against the railroads represented by the United States may be brought against the director general. We have had four directors general, and suits have been brought against all of them. It has not been thought necessary by the lawyers who have conducted this litigation to institute a revival of the actions against the several directors general.

Mr. KING. This bill only permits the substitution of one defendant for the other, does it?

Mr. CUMMINS. That is all. It validates the suits that have been brought against Mr. Jones, for instance, when he has passed out of office and Mr. Smith has come in. It validates the judgments that have been rendered, notwithstanding the abatement of the suits which the Supreme Court has recently held has occurred if this substitution has not been made. It changes no man's rights, and it preserves the rights of a great many very worthy people.

Mr. KING. Has the Senator in mind approximately the amount involved in suits by the Government against individuals and suits by individuals against the Government?

Mr. CUMMINS. No; I have not. Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, if the Senator will allow me. it is in the process of the settlement of the different claims that ew out of Government control.

Mr. CUMMINS. That is all.
Mr. SMITH. That is all that is involved. It is the trans-ference from one director general to another.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, where suit has already been brought and dismissed, will this have the effect of reviving it?

Mr. CUMMINS. Oh, no. Where an order has been made, whether it was a judgment or not, against Mr. McAdoo as director general, and subsequently Mr. Hines became director general, and no substitution has been made, and the suit has been continued against Mr. McAdoo, it validates that suit.

Mr. McKELLAR. This is what I want to know: Where a suit was brought, say, against Mr. Hines when it ought to have been brought against Mr. McAdoo, and the court has dismissed the suit because it was not brought against the proper person, will this permit the suit to be refiled?

Mr. CUMMINS. I think not.
Mr. McKELLAR. It would not cover such a case?
Mr. CUMMINS. No court has ever made an order of that because it was not supposed until very recently that the director general was an officer of the United States in the sense that there must be a revival of the suit.

Mr. McKELLAR. I know of a case at Birmingham, Ala., where a citizen of Tennessee had sued under the holding of the supreme court; the presiding judge at Birmingham dismissed his suit, and the man apparently is without recourse. I was wondering whether this bill covered a case of that sort, which evidently ought not to have been dismissed on a techni-

Mr. CUMMINS. If the suit was dismissed on that ground, it would revive the suit.

Mr. McKELLAR. That is all I wanted to know.

The VICE PRESIDENT. If there be no amendment to be proposed, the bill will be reported to the Senate.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

KANSAS CITY, MEXICO & ORIENT BAILBOAD.

The bill (S. 4528) for the relief of the Kansas City, Mexico & Orlent Railroad of Texas, Oklahoma, and Kansas, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Interstate Commerce with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert:

That the Interstate Commerce Commission be, and it is hereby, authorized and empowered to certify to the Secretary of the Treasury an additional loan or loans to the receiver of the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient Railroad Co.; and to the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient Railroad Co.; and to the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient Railway Co. of Texas, or its receiver if one shall be appointed, from the revolving fund created by and under section 210 of the transportation act, 1920, in the aggregate amount of not to exceed $3.000,000; the time, terms, and conditions of said loan or loans to be fixed by the commission: Provided, That such additional loan or loans shall be prior liens upon the property or properties except the lien or liens of the loan or loans heretofore made out of the revolving fund: Provided further. That upon investigation said commission shall find and certify that such loan or loans are in the public interest.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I will ask the Senator from Texas [Mr. Sheppard] to make some explanation of that bill.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, although I reported the bill from the committee, the Senator from Texas understands the situation as well as I do, and I should be very glad to have him explain it.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, the passage of this bill is necessary to avert a widespread calamity to a large territory of the southwestern United States. The Interstate Commerce Commission and the Interstate Commerce Committee, after examining the situation, have found that if this road can make further borrowings from the revolving fund created by the transportation act of 1920 it can, in all probability, repay the moneys already loaned it by the Government and the further loans also. If this is not done, the road will cease to operate.

On account of the diversion of the business of the road under Government operation, the road is having difficulty in regaining that business, and has gone into the hands of a re-ceiver. It can gradually get back that business if it is given these additional loans and become a going concern. The Interstate Commerce Committee says there is ample security for the loans, and that there can be no loss to the Government, but that unless the privilege of making another loan is granted the road will cease to operate. It is a road 735 miles long, serving approximately 500,000 people, with property values aggregating three or four hundred millions in its tributary areas. If the road ceases to operate, it is estimated that the losses to the people of the territory will run into a sum of more than one hundred million dollars; that these property values will shrink to that extent. General suffering and ruin will follow:
Mr. WATSON. Mr. President, has this road hitherto bor-

Mr. WATSON. Br. Fresheat, has this four interest of rowed money from the Government?
Mr. SHEPPARD. It has,
Mr. WATSON. Has it repaid that money?
Mr. SHEPPARD: It has not repaid that money, and the Interstate Commerce Commission says that under present cir-cumstances it can not repay unless further loans are allowed. The time has expired within which loans can be made under existing law.

Mr. SMITH. If the Senator will allow me, in response to the question asked by the Senator from Indiana, I will state that the road was making money up to the time it was taken over by the Government. Under the distribution of freight it seems that the Government diverted it so that the other roads got most of its business; and therefore, after the war was over it could not get back and has not yet been able to get back the business that made it prosperous prior to the time it was taken over by the Government. I have been informed by members of the department having this matter in charge that they are now working toward the end of getting back for it as far as possible its pro rata share of the business. It is a pioneer road that is developing this country; and the committee, after going over the matter, were of opinion that an additional loan to tide them over this time from the revolving fund would enable them once again to do business profitably without sacrificing the road.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was stricken out.

TRAVEL AND SUBSISTENCE OF OFFICERS OF DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.

The bill (H. R. 13430) to amend section 370 of the Revised Statutes of the United States was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment, on page 2, line 2, before the word while," to insert "per day," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 370 of the Revised Statutes of the United States be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 370. Whenever the Solicitor General, an attorney, an assistant attorney, a special assistant to the Attorney General, or any other officer of the Department of Justice is sent by the Attorney General to any State, District, Territory, or country to attend to any interest of the United States the person so sent shall receive, in addition to his salary and the necessary expenses of travel, his actual expenses incurred for subsistence, not to exceed $6 per day while absent from the seat of government, the account thereof to be verified by affidavit."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

SALARIES IN DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

The bill (H. R. 10819) relating to the Department of Agriculture was announced as next in order, and was read, as follows:

culture was announced as next in order, and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the maximum salary per annum of any scientific investigator, or employee engaged in scientific work and paid from the general appropriations of the Department of Agriculture, shall not exceed $6,500: Provided, That no salary shall be paid under this section at a rate per annum in excess of $5,500 except the following: Not more than 12 in excess of $5,500 but not in excess of $5,500 each, and not more than five in excess of $5,500 each.

Sec. 2. That the salaries per annum of the following officers in the Department of Agriculture shall not exceed as follows:

Assistant Secretary, $7,500; director of scientific work, $6,500; director of regulatory work, $6,500; director of extension service, $6,500; solicitor, $6,500; chief of the Weather Bureau, $6,000; chief of the Bureau of Animal Industry, $6,500; chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry, $6,500; chief of the

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, this is a bill from the House increasing the salaries of certain positions in the Department of Agriculture. At 1 o'clock we are going to take up the reclassification bill, and this very subject matter is treated in that bill

Mr. KING. I object. Mr. SMOOT. Therefore, I object to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I hope the Senator will withhold his objection for just a moment. This is not enacting any new law. It is making permanent legislation which is now carried in the annual agricultural appropriation bill.

Mr. SMOOT. If the reclassification bill passes, it will take precedence over all these other things.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, may I make an inquiry of the Senator from Utah? I have not examined the reclassification bill; I have not had time. This bill seeks to remedy a situation that everybody admits is almost intolerable in the Department of Agriculture. Will all of the propositions contained in this bill be remedied by the reclassification bill?

Mr. SMOOT. I will say to the Senator that there is no doubt of it.

Mr. NORRIS. I have had experience with the Department of Agriculture, particularly with its Bureau of Chemistry, one of the scientific bureaus of the Government, for quite a number of years; I have come in official contact with them, and they are in a deplorable situation now.

Mr. SMOOT. If the Senator will notice the rates in the scientific schedule here, he will observe that they are taken care of, and that is one of the very reasons why we wanted this bill passed. I know that that situation exists not only in the Agricultural Department, but in the Department of Commerce and others

Here is the difficulty, as I understand it: The Mr. NORRIS. reclassification bill may not become a law. This is a House bill, designed to remedy this situation in the Department of Agriculture. If the reclassification bill for any reason should fail to pass, then, as a result of our failure to act on this bill, we would have no relief.

Mr. SMOOT. I will ask that the bill go over.
Mr. NORRIS. I should like to say before I conclude that I concede very frankly that the Senate ought not to pass this kind of a bill under a unanimous-consent agreement like this. I concede that it ought to be discussed. It is quite important. However, there is no other way to pass it, on account of having a short session of Congress and the usual jam that always takes There is not any other hope of securing action at this place. session.

Mr. WATSON. Mr. President, my understanding is that this bill applies only to a limited number of experts in the Agricultural Department.

Mr. NORRIS. A great many of these positions are vacant They are unable to secure the men to fill them. Some of them have been vacant for two years.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, it is apparent from what the Senator has stated and from the debate thus far ensuing that we can not pass this bill in the limited time we have-only 15 I therefore object to its consideration. minutes more.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection is made. The bill will be passed over.

JOINT RESOLUTION PASSED OVER.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 82) providing for immigration to relieve the emergency caused by an acute shortage of labor in the Territory of Hawaii was announced as next in order.

Mr. JOHNSON. Let that go over.
The VICE PRESIDENT. The joint resolution will be passed over.

PAYMENT TO CERTAIN EMPLOYEES OF THE UNITED STATES.

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 256) proposing payment to certain employees of the United States was considered as in Committee of the Whole, and was read, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That all per diem employees of the several departments and independent establishments of the Government who were carried on the rolls as employees and excused from work on November 11, 1921, shall be allowed pay for that day.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, I hope this joint resolution will pass. It deals with the same subject matter as the legislation we passed last night.

Mr. KING. I was about to say that this legislation was passed last evening.

Mr. STERLING. It passed as an amendment, but this is a House joint resolution. In view of the uncertainty in regard to the conference report, I hope this joint resolution will pass.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, what is the number of this measure?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is House Joint Resolution 256. Mr. STERLING. It is to pay the per diem employees of the Government for one day.

Mr. KING. I have no objection to the joint resolution-I think it ought to pass-except for the fact that we passed a similar measure last night.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I am going to be more generous than some other Senators. This measure is not half so important to the country as the one that was objected to. It will pay a whole lot of fellows for another day's work; but the great Department of Agriculture has been handicapped, and is handicapped now, because of its inability to employ chemists and other scientific men.

When that comes before the Senate it is killed, although it is a House bill and only needs the approval of the Senate. am not objecting to this bill; I have no information which would lead me to object to it, at least; but it is true, as it was in the case of the other bills, that it is not the right way to legislate, and we ought not to pass it. We ought to debate all these bills. We are in a condition now where we can not do it. When we come to something that is going to bring some relief, especially to the agricultural interests of the country, we do not have time; but we can find time for these other

Mr. CUMMINS. I wish to say, in confirmation of the statement just made by the Senator from Nebraska, that in my opinion there is no bill on this calendar more important than the one to which he has just referred.

Mr. NORRIS. I think the Senator is right.

Mr. CUMMINS. The House has passed it. The value of the Agricultural Department depends on the skill of its scientific employees, and men of high education and broad experience can not be kept in the Department of Agriculture unless they know that it is to be the policy of the United States to pay reasonable salarles for the work which they are doing. will join with the Senator from Nebraska any time in voting to bring it up.

Mr. NORRIS. It now lacks only 15 minutes of 1 o'clock, and it doubtless would not avail anything if I could get it up by motion.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The joint resolution is still in Committee of the Whole and open to amendment.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and

SESSIONS OF DISTRICT COURT IN MAINE.

The bill (H. R. 14135) to amend an act approved Sentember 8, 1916, providing for holding sessions of the United States district court in the district of Maine, and for other purposes, was considered as in Committee of the Whole, and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act of Congress approved September 8, 1916, entitled "An act to provide for holding sessions of the United States district court in the district of Maine and for dividing said district into divisions, and providing for offices of the clerk and marshal of said district to be maintained in each of said divisions, and for the appointment of a field deputy marshal in the division in which the marshal does not reside," be amended in the first section thereof, by striking out the word "February" where it appears first in said section, substituting therefor the word "November," so that the said section, when amended, shall read as follows:

"November," so that the said section, when amended, shall read as follows:

"That hereafter, and until otherwise provided by law, two sessions of the United States district court for the district of Maine shall be held in each and every year in the city of Bangor, in said district, beginning, respectively, on the first Tuesday of November and the first Tuesday of June, and three sessions of said court shall be held in each and every year in the city of Portland, in said district, beginning, respectively, on the first Tuesday of April, on the third Tuesday of September, and on the second Tuesday in December: Provided, however, That in the year 1923 the session of said court at Bangor, beginning on the first Tuesday of November, shall be held in addition to the sessions in February and June, now provided for by law."

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MUNICIPAL COURT, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

The bill (H. R. 13998) making section 1535c of the Code of Law for the District of Columbia applicable to the municipal court of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, was considered as in Committee of the Whole, and was read, as

Be it enacted, etc., That hereafter section 1535c of the Code of Law for the District of Columbia, permitting equitable defenses to be interposed in actions at law, shall be applicable to proceedings now pending in the municipal court of the District of Columbia as well as to actions hereafter brought in said court.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMERICAN DREDGING CO. AND WALES ISLAND PACKING CO.

The resolution (S. Res. 447) referring to the Court of Claims the bills (S. 3931) for the relief of the North American Dredging Co. and (S. 2888) for the relief of the Wales Island Packing Co. was read and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the claims of the North American Dredging Co. (S. 3931) and the Wales Island Packing Co. (S. 2888), now pending in the Senate, together with all the accompanying papers, be, and the same are hereby, referred to the Court of Claims, in pursuance of the provisions of an act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary," approved March 3, 1911; and the said court shall proceed with the same in accordance with the provisions of such act and report to the Senate in accordance therewith.

BILLS PASSED OVER.

The bill (S. 3487) to provide for the widening of Nichols Avenue between Good Hope Road and S Street SE, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Let that go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 4413) to provide for a tax on motor-vehicle fuel sold within the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Let that go over. Mr. BALL. Mr. President, I trust the Senator will withhold his objection to the bill. It is a measure of the utmost im-

Mr. McKELLAR. It will take some time to dispose of it, and we have not time to discuss it now. There are real objections to the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. On objection, the bill will be passed over.

AMERICAN BATTLE MONUMENTS COMMISSION.

The bill (II. R. 14087) for the creation of an American battle monuments commission to erect suitable memorials commemorating the services of the American soldier in Europe, and for other purposes, was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That a commission is hereby created and established, to be known as the American battle monuments commission (hereinafter referred to as the commission), to consist of seven members who shall be appointed by the President, who shall also appoint one officer of the Regular Army to serve as its secretary. The members and secretary shall serve at the pleasure of the President, who shall fill any vacancies that from time to time occur. The secretary shall slass serve as disbursing officer of the commission, who shall make disbursement upon vouchers approved by its chairman.

The members of the commission shall serve without compensation, except that their actual expenses in connection with the work of the commission may be paid from any funds appropriated for the purposes of this act, or acquired by other means hereinbefore authorized.

Upon request of the commission the President is authorized to designate such personnel of any department or of the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps as may be necessary to assist in carrying out the purposes of this act, and the commission is authorized to employ such further personnel as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this act, within the limits of any appropriation or appropriations made for such purposes.

this act, and the commission is authorized to employ such further personnel as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this act, within the limits of any appropriation or appropriations made for such purposes.

Sec. 2. That the commission shall prepare plans and estimates for the erection of suitable memorials to mark and commemorate the services of the American forces in Europe and erect memorials therein at such places as the commission shall determine, including works of architecture and art in the American cometeries in Europe.

The commission shall control as to materials and design, provide registions for and supervise the erection of all memorial monuments and buildings in the American cemeteries in Europe.

The commission shall cause such photographs to be secured or taken of the terrain of the various battle fields of Europe upon which units of the armed forces of the United States were actively engaged with the enemy as will complete the historical photographic record of the operation of such units, and the commission shall transmit such record when completed to the Secretary of War for permanent file with the records of the War Department.

Sec. 3. That before any design or material for memorials is accepted by the commission the same shall be approved by the National Commission of Fine Arts.

Sec. 4. That the President is requested to make the necessary arrangements with the proper authorities of the countries concerned to enable the commission to carry out the purposes of this act.

Sec. 5. That the commission is authorized to receive funds from any State, municipal, or private source for the purposes of this act, and such funds shall be deposited by the commission with the Chief of Finance of the United States Army and shall be kept by him in separate accounts and shall be deposited by the commission with the Chief of Finance of the Commission shalls of determine.

Sec. 6. That authority is hereby given for the preparation of models and designs and the fabrication of memorials, and the mater constracted under under the commission shall refrain from utilizing material which might otherwise be available for decorative or memorial purposes.

SEC. 7. That the commission is authorized to furnish repliess of any memorial, or any part thereof, to States, municipalities, or interested private persons or associations at actual cost, and to apply any proceeds from such sales to the purposes of this act.

SEC. 8. That the commission is authorized and directed to cooperate with American citizens, States, municipalities, or associations desiring to erect war memorials in Europe in such manner as may be determined by the commission: Provided, That no assistance in erecting any such memorial shall be given by any administrative agency of the United States unless the plan has been approved in accordance with the provisions of this act.

SEC. 9. That it shall be the duty of the Secretary of War to maintain the memorials erected by the commission under authority of this act, and the commission shall advise the Secretary of War of the location and date of completions of each memorial.

SEC. 10. That the commission shall transmit to the President of the United States annually on the list of July a statement of all its financial and other transactions during the preceding fiscal year.

SEC. 11. That such sum or sums as Congress may hereafter appropriate for the purposes of this act are hereby authorized to be appropriate for the purposes of this act are hereby authorized to be appropriated.

printed.

SEC. 12. That the records and archives of the commission shall, upon the termination of its duties, be deposited with the Secretary of

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

VALLEY TRANSPER RAILWAY CO.

The bill (H. R. 14082) to authorize the Valley Transfer Railway Co., a corporation, to construct and operate a line of railway in and upon the Fort Snelling Military Reservation in the State of Minnesota, was considered as in Committee of the Whole, and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to give to the Valley Transfer Raffway Co., a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Minnesota, its successors and assigns, a revocable permit to locate, construct, maintain, and operate a line of railway, with single or double tracks, across the Fort Snelling Military Reservation in the State of Minnesota, upon such location and under such regulations and conditions as shall be approved by the Secretary of War. such regulations and conditions as shall be approved by the Secretary of War.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PAYMENT OF NATIONAL GUARD AND RESERVE OFFICERS.

The bill (H. R. 14077) to extend the benefits of section 14 of the pay readjustment act of June 10, 1922, to validate certain payments made to National Guard and reserve officers and warrant officers, and for other purposes, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with amendments; on page 2, after line 2, to insert the words "or accruing under the operation of this section, hereby made retroactive in effect"; after line 22, on page 2, to insert a new section, to be numbered section 4; to change the numbering of section 4, on line 24, page 3, to section 5; and on page 4, line 6, after the word "validated," to insert additional sections, so as to make the bill read:

a new section, to be numbered section 4; to change the numbering of section 4; and line 24, page 2, to section 5; and on page 4, line 6, after the word "validated," to insert additional sections, so as to make the bill read:

Bet 4 enacted, etc., That officers and warrant officers of the National Guera etc., page 2, 11 and 10 of the antional defense act, approved June 3, 1916, as amended, and reserve officers and reserve warrant officers of any of the services mentioned in the title of the page 2, 11 and 10 of the said pay act, and payments hereforce made, or accruing under the operation of this section, hereby made retroacters, 6, 6, and 11 of the said pay act, and payments hereforce made, or accruing under the operation of this section, hereby made retroacters with the provisions of section 57. That service rendered by National Guard officers during sections are hereby validated.

Sec. 2. That service rendered by National Guard officers during section 57, national defense act, approved June 8, 1916; and all payments hereforce or hereafter made therefor are hereby validated and section 75, national defense act, approved June 8, 1916; and all payments hereforce or hereafter made therefor are hereby validated and section 75, national defense act, approved June 8, 1916; and all payments hereforce or hereafter made therefor are hereby validated and section 75, national defense act, approved June 8, 1916; and all payments hereforce or hereafter made therefor are hereby validated and section 75, national defense act, approved June 8, 1916; and all payments hereforce or hereafter made therefor are hereby validated and section 75, national defense act, approved June 8, 1916; and all payments hereforce are hereby and and payments hereforce are hereby validated and and payments hereforce are hereby and and payments and payments and payments are payments hereforce are hereby and and payments and payments are payments and payments and payments and payments are payments and payments and payments and payments and payments a amended; members of the Officers' Reserve Corps and of the Enlisted Reserve Corps of the Army injured in line of duty while on active duty under proper orders; members of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, and members of the civilian military training camps, injured in line of duty while at camps of instruction under the provisions of sections 47a and 47d of said national defense act, as amended; and anyone belonging to any of said classes of persons who may now be undergoing hospital treatment for such injuries so sustained, shall be entitled, under such regulations as the President may prescribe, to medical and hospital treatment at Government expense until they are fit for transportation to their homes, and upon termination of such medical and hospital treatment shall be entitled to transportation to their homes at Government expense. Officers and ealisted men of the National Guard air service injured in line of duty when performing the duties and exercises described in section 92 of said national defense act, as amended, which involve flying, shall be entitled to like medical and hospital treatment and to like transportation to their homes. Any expenditures heretofore made by the Government in caring for persons injured under the conditions specified herein are hereby validated: Provided, That officers and warrant officers undergoing treatment in hospital under any of the foregoing provisions while not in receipt of pay, and other persons undergoing hospital treatment under any of the foregoing provisions, shall be entitled to subsistence at Government expense.

Mr. WADSWORTH Section 4 mekes but two charges in

Mr. WADSWORTH. Section 4 makes but two changes in existing law. It provides that the officers of the National Guard units shall attend and be paid for the same number of drills as the enlisted men. The enlisted men under existing law are placed upon a maximum attendance of eight drills per month. This puts the officers on the same basis.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. How much does it involve in the way of increased appropriations or expenditures?

Mr. WADSWORTH. Nothing. The maximum of pay is fixed anyway for any one calendar year. The men and officers today, under the bill, will attend the same number of drills and be paid for the same number of drills. That is the change made. Through an error in the national defense act that is not the case now.

Mr. KING. Is there any increase by reason of the words one-thirtieth of the base pay "?

Mr. WADSWORTH. No; that is existing law.

Mr. KING. So the bill will not increase the compensation to be paid either to reserve officers or any of the beneficiaries of the act?

Mr. WADSWORTH. It will not.
Mr. KING. Will the Senator briefly explain the additional sections added? I did not understand the Senator to state that the bill did not increase the compensation in the aggregate.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I said that section 4 did not. The bill consists of a series of amendments to the national defense act, or to the pay act of a year and a half ago, due to the fact that the comptroller has rendered certain decisions so unexpected and so extraordinary in the construction of the intent of the Congress, both in the action of the joint committee between the two Houses and of the Congress itself in passing it, that it is beyond the comprehension of myself and the members of the committee how he ever put such a meaning on it. These provisions, with the exception of the last one, which I will explain, merely make it perfectly definite and sure that the intent of the Congress, as expressed, we believe, in the clearest of English in the pay act and the national defense act, shall be absolutely the law.

Now I will state what the last section has in view. comptroller has ruled that if a National Guard man attending a maneuver camp in the summer time for the 15-day training period with his unit, a soldier of the United States to all intents and purposes, is injured or falls seriously ill, the Government can not give him any hospital care beyond the termination of the camp. Any such interpretation is so extraordinary and in its result so cruel, almost vindictive, that the committee is unanimous in believing that when a man in the service of the Government, training under Government supervision, is injured, at least the Government should take care of him through its medical department until he recovers, but we put a six months' limitation on that.

Mr. KING. Will this be the basis of making injuries received during that period the ground for pensions?

Mr. WADSWORTH. Not at all. That is carefully avoided.

Mr. KING. Or claims for damages?

Mr. WADSWORTH. No; they can not make claims for damages if the care is given. Mr. KING. Of course, they can claim they were disabled for life, and I have no doubt in the world that we will have hundreds of applications for pensions.

Mr. WADSWORTH.' We never have had, and we have had the National Guard for years.

Mr. KING. I hope the Senator's conjectures are right. Mr. WADSWORTH. We are about to send 150,000 guardsmen to the maneuver camps this year. Last year we sent 130,000; 12 or 15 out of the 130,000 were injured. A motor truck ran over a man's leg and broke it. Of course, he could not recover in 15 days' time. One man had his leg so badly crushed that he has been eight months in the Walter Reed Hospital. The Government has no authority to keep him there. General Ireland, the Chief Surgeon of the Army, has kept that man there contrary to the ruling of the comptroller, but the bills for his care have been piling up against the young man all that time. The thing is an outrage.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

AMENDMENT OF REVENUE ACT OF 1921-CONFERENCE REPORT.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, in the next four or five minutes, before 1 o'clock, I do not think we can get through another bill, and I ask permission to present a conference report, and I ask for its immediate consideration, calling the attention of the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Longz] to it. The report was read, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 13774) to amend the revenue act of 1921 in respect to exchanges of property, having met, and after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 1, 2,

3, 4, and 5.

P. J. McCumber, REED SMOOT, A. A. JONES, Managers on the part of the Senate. W. R. GREEN, NICHOLAS LONGWORTH, OGDEN L. MILLS, J. W. COLLIER, W. A. OLDFIELD, Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, when the bill was before the Senate I offered an amendment to make the law take effect on its passage, because as it now stands the law is retroactive for two months. I have no fault to find with the merits of the bill. I am in favor of the bill, but I do not favor retroactive legislation. I therefore offered an amendment, which was inserted by the Senate with the committee's approval, but through an oversight of mine, and of the committee, I think, too, we failed to change a similar date in section 2, which would have to be changed in order to make the law take effect, and this produces confusion, to which the Treasury Department objects. I think it is an injustice to make it retroactive. I do not believe in retroactive measures, but I am not ready to stop legislation of this kind for the better enforcement of the tax laws on account of that point.

Mr. KING. In a word, what does the bill provide?
Mr. LODGE. It is an amendment to the law made necessary, according to the Treasury Department, to enable them to collect taxes in cases of the exchange of stocks. If the Senator and I exchange stocks, and his is precisely of the same value as mine, of course the matter would not come under the income-tax law at all, but if by exchange of stocks, which is now possible under existing law, a profit is made, this is to provide that the profit shall be taxed as income. I am not opposing the bill. I think the merits of the bill are all right, but I do not think it ought to be made retroactive.

Mr. KING. That is the only objection?
Mr. LODGE. That is the only objection I made, that it should not be retroactive, and our conferees have receded. I do not want to defeat the bill on that account when it is a valuable bill, but I think it is an injustice to certain people.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

THE CALENDAR.

The bill (S. 4607) for the allowance of certain claims for indemnity for spoliations by the French prior to July 31, 1801, as reported by the Court of Claims, was announced as next in order on the calendar.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

CLAIMANTS UNDER SOLDIERS AND SAILORS' CIVIL RELIEF ACT.

The bill (H. R. 14144) to limit and fix the time within which suits may be brought or rights asserted in court arising out of the provisions of subdivision 3 of section 302 of the soldiers and sailors' civil relief act approved March 18, 1918, being chapter 20, volume 40, General Statutes of the United States, was announced as next in order.

Mr. DIAL. Let that go over.
Mr. WALSH of Montana. I trust the Senator from South Carolina will not object. It is a bill which ought to have very careful consideration, and it ought to be passed.

Mr. DIAL. I withdraw the objection.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill which had been reported from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, with an amendment, on page 2, line 6, to strike out the words "ninety days" and insert in lieu thereof the words "one year," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That any person entitled to claim any right, title to, or interest in any real estate because of any failure to comply with the provisions of subdivision 3 of section 302 of the soldiers and sailors civil relief act, approved March 18, 1918, being chapter 20, volume 40, General Statutes of the United States, in the foreclosure of a mortgage, or the sale upon a judgment, of such real estate shall be barred forever from asserting such claim unless the claim is successfully asserted in an action or proceeding, in a court of competent jurisdiction, commenced prior to the approval of this act or within one year thereafter.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

DISTRICT COURTS IN TENNESSEE.

The bill (H. R. 14324) to amend section 107 of the act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary," approved March 3, 1911, as heretofore amended, was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

the judiciary," approved March 3, 1911, as heretofore amended, was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 107 of the act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary." approved March 3, 1911, as heretofore amended, be, and it is, amended so as to read as follows:

Sec. 107. The State of Tennessee is divided into three districts, to be known as the eastern, middle, and western districts of Tennessee. The eastern district shall include the territory embraced on the 1st day of July, 1910, in the counties of Biedsoe, Bradley, Hamilton, James, Marion, McMinn, Meigs, Polk, Rhea, and Sequatchie, which shall constitute the southern division of said district; also the territory embraced on the date last mentioned in the counties of Anderson, Blount, Campbell, Clalborne, Grainger, Jefferson, Knox, Loudon, Monro Morgan, Roane Sevier, Scott, and Union, which shall constitute the date last mentioned in the counties of Currer, Core Geometric Marchael and Constitute the property of the control of the date last mentioned in the counties of Currer, Core Geometric Marchael and Marchael a eastern division at Jackson on the fourth Mondays in April and October. The clerk of the court for the western district shall appoint a deputy who shall reside at Jackson. The marshal for the western district shall appoint a deputy who shall reside at Jackson. The marshal for the eastern district shall appoint a deputy who shall reside at Chattanooga. The clerk of the court for the eastern district shall appoint a deputy who shall reside at Chattanooga, and clerk of the court for the eastern district shall maintain an office in charge of himself or a deputy at Knowlle, at Chattanooga, and at Greeneville, which shall be kept open at all times for the transaction of the business of the court."

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PAYMENT OF CLAIMS.

The bill (S. 4608) for the payment of certain claims in accordance with findings of the Court of Claims, reported under the provisions of the acts approved March 3, 1883, and March 3, 1887, and commonly known as the Bowman and Tucker Acts, and under the provisions of section 151 of the Judicial Code, was announced as next in order.

Mr. SMOOT Let that go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

REGISTER AND RECEIVER AT GUTHRIE, OKLA.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 278) providing for continuation of register and receiver of the land office at Guthrie, Okla., at salaries in effect prior to act of January 24, 1923, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The joint resolution had been reported from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys with an amendment, on line 8, after the numerals "1923," to insert a comma and the words "until such time as the Secretary of the Interior shall see fit to consolidate said offices as provided in the act approved January 24, 1923," so as to make the joint resolution read:

Resolved, etc., That in so far as the land office located at Guthrie, Okla., is concerned, the office of register and the office of receiver shall be continued, notwithstanding the provisions of the act approved January 24, 1923, and that the compensation of each shall continue as fixed by the law prior to the passage of said act of January 24, 1923, until such time as the Secretary of the Interior shall see fit to consolidate said offices as provided in the act approved January 24, 1923.

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MISSOURI RIVER BRIDGES.

The bill (S. 4581) granting the consent of Congress to the State of South Dakota for the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River between Brule County and Lyman County, S. Dak., was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the State of South Dakota to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Missouri River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, between Brule County and Lyman County, S. Dak., in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The bill (S. 4580) granting the consent of Congress to the State of South Dakota for the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River between Hughes County and Stanley County, S. Dak., was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the State of South Dakota to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Missouri River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, between Hughes County and Stanley County, S. Dak., in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

Sec. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

expressly reserved. The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The bill (S. 4582) granting the consent of Congress to the State of South Dakota for the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River between Walworth County and Corson County, S. Dak., was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the State of South Dakota to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Missouri River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, between Walworth County and Corson County, S. Dak., in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressive reserved.

expressly reserved.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RECLASSIFICATION OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The hour of 1 o'clock having arrived the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which is House bill 8928.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8928) to provide for the classification of civilian positions within the District of Columbia and in the field services

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President-

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, will the Senator from South Dakota yield to me briefly?

Mr. STERLING. Will the matter which the Senator has in mind take any time?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Not to exceed five minutes.

Mr. STERLING. I yield to the Senator from Montana.

BLACKFEET INDIAN RESERVATION.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, I take advantage of the liberty accorded in debate to call attention to some circular matter which evidently was laid upon the desk of each Member of the Senate referring to what is known as the Indian omnibus bill (H. R. 13835). A very severe criticism of the bill has been made. I take it that objections which are thus suggested will prevent the bill from being considered at the present session of Congress. The bill was referred to this morning by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. Spences], the chairman of the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs.

I do not desire to advert to the criticisms at length, but I desire to characterize them by mentioning something concerning the criticism of an item referring to the Blackfeet Indian Reservation in the State of Montana. I have before me the following comment:

Section 5, Blackfeet Indians: This section will permit the sale to white settlers of land under the Blackfeet irrigation project, in which $1,000,000 of Blackfeet funds have been invested, 1,500,000 acres of land are involved, 12,000 plus are irrigable.

The provision of the bill to which exception is thus made reads as follows:

SEC. 5. That the allotments of Blackfeet Indians designated as home-steads under section 10 of the act of June 30, 1919 (41 Stat. L. 16), imposing restriction on allenation, shall, after the death of the original allottee, be subject to partition, sale, issuance of patents in fee, or any other disposition authorized by existing law relating to Indian allotments.

That is all there is to section 5 relating to the subject. It is perfectly obvious that the gentleman who framed these circulars for the information of the Senate could not possibly have had any knowledge of the law thus to be amended. law to be amended is section 10 of the act of June 30, 1919. which provides as follows:

which provides as follows:

That so much of the Indian appropriation act of March 1, 1907 (34 Stat. L. 1015, 1035), as relates to the disposal of surplus unallotted lands within the Blackfeet Indian Reservation in Montana is hereby repealed, and the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to make allotments under existing laws within the said reservation to any Indians of said Blackfeet Tribe not heretofore allotted living six months after the approval of this act, and thereafter to prorate all mallotted and otherwise unreserved lands therein among the Indians who have been allotted or may be entitled to rights within said reservation: Provided, That of the lands so allotted 80 acres of each allotment shall be designated as a homestead by the allottee and be evidenced by a trust patent and shall remain inalienable and nontaxable until Congress shall otherwise direct.

That provise to the effect that these homesteads, to the extent of 80 acres of the Blackfeet Indians, who were allotted in the aggregate something like 300 acres, should remain inalienable and nontaxable was inserted in the law by myself. I proposed that provision to safeguard the rights of these Indians, so that in any event, no matter what happened to them, they should have 80 acres of land which could not be alienated.

Now, it seems to be contended that by reason of this provision the lands are not subject to disposition, as other lands are under the general law, after the death of the Indian. I do not think that is a proper construction. The bill under consideration is simply intended to make these homesteads subject to disposition, subject to partition, just the same as all other Indian lands, upon the death of the allottee. That has been the law since 1910. In that year the act was passed to which the proposed legislation makes reference and it was to the following effect:

That when any Indian to whom an allotment of land has been made, or may hereafter be made, dies before the expiration of the trust period and before the issuance of a fee simple patent, without having made a will disposing of said allotment as hereinafter provided, the Secretary of the Interior, upon notice and hearing, under such rules as he may prescribe, shall ascertain the legal heirs of such decedent, and his decision thereon shall be final and conclusive. If the Secretary of the Interior decides the heir or heirs of such decedent competent to manage their own affairs, he shall issue to such heir or heirs a patent in fee for the allotment of such decedent; if he shall decide one or more of the heirs to be incompetent he may, in his discretion, cause such lands to be sold: Provided, That if the Secretary of the Interior shall find that the lands of the decedent are capable of partition to the advantage of the heirs, he may cause the shares of such as are competent, upon their petition, to be set aside and patents in fee to be issued to them therefor. All sales of lands allotted to Indians authorized by this or any other act shall be made under such rules and regulations and upon such terms as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe, and he shall require a deposit of 10 per cent of the purchase price at the time of the sale.

The bill under consideration simply provides that with respect to those lands declared by the act of 1919 to be inalienable when the allottee dies, they shall become subject to disposition as other Indian lands are subject to disposition, subject to partition, subject to sale, and to issuance of patents as prescribed in the act of 1910.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, I remind the Senator from Montana that he requested only 5 minutes' time, and he has now taken 10 minutes.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. The Senafor will not have to bear with me very long. I have about concluded my statement,

Mr. STERLING. How long will it take the Senator to con-

Mr. WALSH of Montana. It will take but a moment longer. I would have concluded by this time if I had not been interrupted.

Mr. STERLING. Very well; I yield further to the Senator. Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, I make this statement because I have no disposition to justify the bill in toto as it came from the Committee on Indian Affairs. I shall not even insist against objection on consideration of the particular items in the bill or others in which my State is vitally interested. But it is remarkable that such extraordinary statements should be made by people who seem to be entirely unadvised about the situation for the purpose of prejudicing legislation demanding the serious consideration of Congress in these closing hours of the session.

Reference is made to the irrigation project on the Blackfeet Indian Reservation. There are irrigation projects on all other Indian reservations in the West. The lands are all subject to disposition upon the death of the allottee, just as is provided for in the bill under discussion.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. REED of Pennsylvania in the chair). Does the Senator from South Dakota yield to the Senator from Nevada?

Mr. STERLING. I yield. Mr. PITTMAN. What would become of the lands if it were not for the provision under discussion?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. They would simply be held by the heirs in undivided interest, practically the same as private property would be held by a vast number of heirs upon the death of the antecedent,

TREATIES AND CONVENTIONS WITH FOREIGN POWERS.

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President, during routine morning business I was engaged in an impromptu but very important meeting of the Committee on Foreign Relations, and was unable then to submit a report from the Committee on Printing. I now ask leave to report from the Committee on Printing a resolution, and I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the resolution will be received.

The resolution (S. Res. 467) was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the revised supplement to the compilation entitled "Treaties and Conventions Between the United States and Other Powers," prepared and revised up to March 4, 1923, under authority of the Senate resolution of August 19, 1921, be printed as a Senate document, and that 500 additional copies be printed for the use of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations;

Mr. KING. Mr. President, may I inquire of the Senator from New Hampshire with reference to the impromptu meeting of the Committee on Foreign Relations whether, because of his devotion to the President and his desire to see the wishes of the President carried into effect, he was considering a measure for the purpose of having the United States become a member of the Permanent Court of Justice?

Mr. MOSES. In order to slake the thirst of the Senator from Utah for information on this and all other subjects, I will say this was a hastily summoned meeting of such members of the committee as could be easily reached for the purpose of having them hear read by the chairman of the committee-I may say with great oratorical effect—a letter from the President and Secretary Hughes which I understand the chairman of the committee has caused to be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. KING. I am sure the Senator profited by hearing the same read, and I hope it has converted him to the wisdom of the President's course.

Mr. MOSES. "While the lamp holds out to burn."

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to.

RECLASSIFICATION OF CIVILIAN EMPLOYEES.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8928) to provide for the classification of civilian positions within the District of Columbia and in the field services.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, I know that time is precious and so, both from the standpoint of the bill and from the standpoint of the wishes of other Senators who have matters with which they desire to proceed in the Senate, I shall consume very little of that time in the discussion of the bill.

The bill before the Senate now is the result of some four years of study and of effort, and of expectation, too, I may say, in regard to the enactment of a law that would reclassify the civilian employees of the Government.

Gross inequalities had grown up under the present system; inequalities in pay particularly; and there were employees in the same department doing the same kind of work who were receiving different rates of pay. As between departments, there was great variance in the pay of those who were doing the same kind of work. Other inequalities, and I may say even injustices, existed under that system. They grew in part out of the lump-sum system of payments and out of the fixed statutory roll. In the one there were liable to be abuses sometimes by the heads of departments, and there were opportunities for favoritism because of that system; and in the other there were not the opportunities for promotion and transfer that should have existed.

The Joint Classification Commission, which was appointed in 1919, in pursuance of an act of Congress of that year, made a summary of these various inequalities, and I shall sketch them. They found-

1. That the salary and wage rates for positions involving like duties and responsibilities and calling for the same qualifications (that is, for positions of the same class) show wide variations and marked inequalities.

They also found-

2. That the salary and wage rates for positions of the same class are different in different departments and independent establishments, the scale of pay in some departments being markedly higher than the scale for the same class of work in other departments.

They found-

4. That the present system of paying bonuses tends to increase the inequality in salary and wage rates for positions of the same class.

I may pause in reading their findings to remind Senators that unless this reclassification bill be passed we shall have the bonus bill before us again here in the Senate providing a bonus for all the employees of the Government whose pay is $2,500 per annum or less, both in the service in the District of Co-lumbia and in the field service as well. One of the purposes of the pending bill is to rid the Government of this, what I am pleased to term, iniquitous bonus system, but one which we have been compelled from year to year since 1919 to adopt in order to do simple justice by the great class of the lower-salaried employees of the Government whose salary was inadequate as compared with the cost of living.

The Joint Reclassification Commission also found-

5. That the rates of compensation in the Government service as a whole have not increased as rapidly as has the cost of living.

They found-

That the amounts of recent increases in rates of pay in the Government service have varied greatly (a) as between classes of em-ployment and (b) as between departments.

With these recent increases in pay there has been no equalization of the rates of pay at all. I think I may say that one great purpose of the bill, the underlying principle of the bill, is equal pay for equal work throughout the Government service and a reasonable and adequate compensation for the service

Without reading further, Mr. President, from the findings of the Joint Reclassification Commission, I desire to say that they find the system had a bad effect upon the morale of the em-I do not wonder, and I do not doubt it. I think the experience of Senators who know about departmental work, who have visited the departments from time to time and have seen the conditions under which the employees have worked and knew the salaries they were getting and the discriminations that were here and there made, will corroborate in nearly every particular the report of the Joint Reclassification Commission in this respect.

With reference to the pending bill, Mr. President, there have been matters that have been the subject of sharp conflict of opinion, but we have labored earnestly and faithfully to pre-pare and report a bill to the Senate that would do justice to the employees on the one hand and to the Government on the other hand. We believe that the bill now before the Senate is such a bill. We have succeeded in harmonizing the various We have succeeded in harmonizing the various sharp differences.

One feature of the original bill was the provision that the Civil Service Commission should be the classifying agency. are providing for the creation of another commission for the purpose of doing the allocating and classifying. That commission is to consist of a representative of the Bureau of the Budget, a representative of the Civil Service Commission, and a representative of the Bureau of Efficiency. The allocations, according to the terms of the bill, are to be made primarily by the heads of the various departments. From the beginning of the study of this question it has been a subject of controversy as to who should constitute the classifying agency; whether it should be the Civil Service Commission, on the one hand, or should be the head of the department on consultation with the Civil Service Commission or some other authority, or whether it should be some other independent body. We have finally, if I may use the term, compromised upon this as the consti tution of the allocating or classifying agency. The work of the head of the department in allocating the employees in his department is subject to review and revision by the personnel classification board.

We have sought, Mr. President, to make the bill somewhat flexible. We have provided for increases in compensation upon the attainment of the appropriate efficiency ratings. We have provided for promotions when it shall be in the interest of the Government, and when justice shall be done to the employee by such promotion. One of the provisions of the bill is:

Nothing herein contained shall be construed to prevent the promotion of an employee from one class to a vacant position in a higher class at any time in accordance with civil service rules.

And so on. The bill also provides:

Reductions in compensation and dismissals shall be made by heads of departments in all cases whenever the efficiency ratings warrant, as provided herein, subject to the approval of the board.

That is, the personnel classification board.

The board, under the terms of the bill, is to have the power of review and revision of efficiency ratings which are made. In case of a failure to adopt or abide by the revisions made by the board, an appeal may be taken to the President of the United States.

Now, Mr. President, I think I shall from this time on adopt the course we sometimes adopt when we inclose a letter in I will let the bill explain itself. I am going now to ask for the reading of the bill.

Mr. GERRY. Mr. President-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Dakota yield to the Senator from Rhode Island?

Mr. STERLING. I yield to the Senator from Rhode Island. Mr. GERRY. I should like to ask the Senator from South Dakota a question. On pages 80 and 81 of the bill there are two sections, one covering the skilled-trades service and the other the common and specialized labor service. Am I correct in my understanding of the bill that those provisions would only affect employees in the District of Columbia and the general departments and would not affect outside activities, such as navy yards and torpedo stations throughout the country?

Mr. STERLING. The Senator is correct in that idea. Those provisions apply only to employees in the District of Columbia. The bill as reported by the Senate committee, although the House bill did not so provide, extended the classification to the field service; but that has now been dropped out, and the bill applies only to the service within the District of Columbia, with a provision that a survey shall be made of the field service and report made to the next Congress. There is no attempt whatever to classify such employees as those to whom the Senator from Rhode Island refers.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President— Mr. STERLING. I yield to the Senator from New Mexico. Mr. JONES of New Mexico. The Senator from South Dakota knows that I am deeply interested in this subject.

Mr. STERLING. I am aware of the Senator's great interest in it.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. And I do not wish to delay the passage of the bill, but I should like to get some statement from the Senator as to section 6 on page 42 of the bill.

The whole purpose of this proposed legislation is to equalize the compensation. We know that during the World War, especially when we often appropriated lump sums for certain activities of the Government, persons were put into the service without any particular regard to the question of compensation, especially as to whether or not their compensation compared with that which was paid for service in other branches of the Government. The purpose of this bill largely is to equalize that situation.

Mr. STERLING. Yes, sir.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. And there is a provision in the bill-in fact, most of the bill is taken up with the question of classification, defining certain employments and duties, and fixing various grades of salaries which shall apply from a minimum grade, running up to as many as seven or eight grades in certain cases, with the different amounts of compensation for the respective grades. Section 6 of the bill relates, of course, to those who are now in the service, and clause 3 of that section provides:

3. If the employee is receiving compensation within the range of salary prescribed for the appropriate grade at one of the rates fixed therein, no change shall be made in the existing compensation.

That provision, as I view it, absolutely prohibits the adjustment of compensation in any case where the present employee is receiving too much. If he is receiving compensation even beyond the very highest amount provided for any grade or class under this provision, if I am able to interpret it correctly, that compensation will continue and that employee may continue in the service of the Government at that compensation indefinitely, for the remainder of his life, and so far as he is concerned there will be no readjustment of compensation.

I can quite understand that we do not want to disarrange the affairs of the Government by any sudden change in existing conditions, but I just wondered if it would not be possible to eliminate that section, or else to make some change in the period of its duration. This bill does not go into effect until the 1st of next July, and if there is an employee in a class who is now receiving compensation higher than the very highest amount provided for that class for the future it seems to me that he ought to be willing to accept a reduction of his compensation or else he ought to resign from the service of the Government, so that some one may be employed and take the job and do the work at the compensation fixed within the and compensations and limitations of the act. So I should like to get from the Senator, if I may, some statement as to why that paragraph was inserted in the bill?

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, throughout the consideration of the bill by the Senate Committee on Civil Service, and then in conferences that have been had in regard to it, rule 25 has been the source of considerable discussion. Rule 5 as it came from the House read as follows:

If the employee is receiving compensation in excess of the range of salary prescribed for the appropriate grade, the compensation shall be reduced to the rate within the grade nearest the present com-pensation.

Rule 5 stopped there. But there was a strong feeling against reducing the compensation of any employee at present and immediately, and the opinion prevailed that we should not provide for the immediate reduction of the compensation; so the Senate committee amended it by striking out the words "the com-pensation shall be reduced to the rate within the grade nearest the present compensation" and added certain words, so that it would read:

If the employee is receiving compensation in excess of the range of salary prescribed for the appropriate grade or class thereof, no change shall be made in his compensation so long as he continues in the same position and Congress appropriates therefor: Provided That such position on becoming vacant shall be filled at a rate of compensation fixed for its grade or class.

Mr. President, if the Senator from New Mexico will note, we introduce a new term in the second line of section 6 of the bill, We provide-

That in determining the compensation to be established initially for the several employees the following rules shall govern—

And so it is provided-and that is the sense and the substance of rule 5 as it stands now, read in the light of that preliminary statement at the beginning of the rule—that the employee's compensation shall not at once be reduced, but on the initial allocation his compensation will stand as it is, subject, I think, to revision afterwards, and surely subject to reduction by act of Congress.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Dakota yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. STERLING. I yield.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Does the Senator want us to understand that there is any provision in the bill for the reduction of salaries of existing employees at any time in the future?

Mr. STERLING. Certainly.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Where?

Mr. STERLING. It depends upon their efficiency ratings from time to time.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Does the Senator mean to say that if the present employee is now getting a salary beyond the highest salary provided for in a grade, and if his efficiency rating should be Δ -1, he would be subsequently reduced to a salary within the grade?

Mr. STERLING. If his efficiency rating were A-1?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Yes.

Mr. STERLING. Oh, I do not say that.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. No; I thought the Senator would Suppose there is an accountant who is getting to-day twice the salary provided for within a given grade; and I may say that that is not a wild suggestion, even hypothetically, because it appeared in the testimony taken by the Reclassification Commission, of which I had the honor to be chairman, that salaries varied from $2,000 to $4,000 a year for precisely the same kind of service. In that case, assuming that the highest salary fixed in this classification for the grade would be $3,000 a year, ranging from $2,000 to $3,000—and many grades here have such ranges as that—a present employee getting $4,000 a year would continue to do the same kind of work as long as he lived, and get $4,000 a year. It seems to me that that provision perpetuates the present injustice and inequality, rather than bringing about an equalization of these employments and compensa-

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, I have said before that this was the initial allocation, provided that in cases of this kind no change should be made in the existing compensation, and that with reference to whatsoever grade he might fall in, so far as that is concerned; but being the initial allocation, it would be subject to revision afterwards and, as I say, subject, of course, to regulation by Congress,

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, if the Senator will pardon me further, I know the difficulties which the Senator from South Dakota has had to contend with in this matter. and he has had my most profound sympathy in all of the trials and tribulations which he has had to bear in trying to get anything through here, and I am going to vote for the bill with that in it if it is thought best to keep it there, but I do not believe it is advisable to do it.

Mr. STERLING. Let me suggest to the Senator that if he will let that pass and let it be a matter of subsequent consideration, I will give it my earnest attention. I should like to have the substitute reported by the committee read.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. It does seem to me that if, as to present employees, we should limit their compensation to the highest amount provided for in the grade, that would be serving them as equitably as they should be served. It will be four months from now before this goes into operation; and if there is any man in the service who is unwilling to continue in the service at the highest salary fixed by this classification board for a grade or class of work, he ought to resign. If he is not willing to take the highest pay provided for anybody for the same kind of job, he ought to quit. It seems to me that if we should provide, instead of his receiving his present compensation, that his compensation should be reduced to the highest amount fixed for the grade, he ought to be satisfied with it, and that will have a tendency to bring about something of equality and something of readjustment here; but this simply perpetuates the very thing which we are seeking to get rid of.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, we are confronted here with a condition in legislative matters that ought to bring the blush of shame to every legislator in our country, if not to every citizen. I am not finding fault with any individual or any body of individuals; but from the very nature of our Government, as constituted now, we are confronted with a legislative Jam that meets us every two years on the 4th day of March. We have now, at 15 minutes to 2 o'clock p. m. on the 2d day of March, just taken up a bill of tremendous importance, composed of 83 pages. It has to do with practically the entire clerical service of the Government of the United States. Many thousands and thousands of employees are directly interested and are directly controlled by the provisions of this bill. We are confronted with the remarkable fact that although this bill has been under consideration by the committees for somewhere in the neighborhood of 14 months, we are expected to pass it almost in 14 minutes after it is taken up.

In the first place, the bill itself is an amendment. It strikes out all of the House bill, and provides a new bill. Two different committees of the Senate have been working on this proposition from time to time for considerably more than a year. The bill passed the House December 15, 1921. From that day until a day or two ago the Senate committee has had it in charge.

I have talked with members of the committee, and they have told me they never worked so hard on anything in their lives, and I believe them. They are entitled to the thanks of the Senate, whether they accomplish anything or not, for the diligent service they have conscientiously performed. Now, because we are going to adjourn on the 4th day of March at noon, we will not be able to consider this bill beyond that time. If it is to be enacted, we must pass it through the Senate almost without reading, with very little if any debate or discussion, with practically no analysis, and then it must go to conference, and between the conferees of the two Houses they will probably between now and the 4th of March agree upon a report, and it will come back to us. It may be an entirely new bill as it is reported by the conferees, and we will vote for it without reading it, because if we took the time to read it, it would probably run us beyond the 4th of March. At least, it would interfere with other legislation just as important as this.

Mr. President, without blaming anybody for this condition, I am calling attention to something which everybody knows to be true. What kind of legislation do you expect the Senate and House, or any other legislative body, to enact, when every two years they are completely engulfed with this kind of a proposition? I mention this bill because it happens to be the one now before the Senate. It is not the only one, as everybody knows. We must do one of two things. We must pass this bill and other bills without giving them consideration, or we must, by considering one bill, defeat other meritorious measures.

A man or a corporation of enterprise and progress would not permit such a condition to exist in private business for a This has been the condition for years, Ever since the adoption of our Constitution, we have had a short session of Congress. It is getting worse. It is worse now than it was two years ago. It was worse then than it was two years before

What have we done during the short session? Most of the time has been taken up in the consideration of one bill, which can not pass, and which is conceded now to be dead, and regardless of whether we were in favor of or against ship subsidy, we must admit two things; first, if we had had no short session, and the new Congress had met in January after they had been elected, the ship subsidy bill would not have been here at all, because it is conceded that the new Congress would not pass it. That is one thing which must be admitted.

Another thing we must admit is that even if the bill had been introduced and reported and we did not know in advance that on the 4th day of March we had to quit-that the session necessarily ended on that day-there would have been no delay even on the ship bill. Ninety per cent of the successful filibusters which have been carried on have been in the short session of Congress, made possible entirely by the ending of Congress on the 4th day of March, and in this case there would have been no filibuster and no ship bill if it had not been for the fact that Congress will close on the 4th day of March,

How many Senators have read this bill of 83 pages? I confess I have not, and I have been working 16 hours a day. I, of course, do not know, but in my judgment, outside of the committees which handled it, I do not believe there have been half a dozen Members of this body who have read it or will read it, and I say that without criticism. I am not finding fault with Senators. They have too much to do, and most of it will not be done when we close on the 4th of March,

What is the result? We get half-baked legislation. We get all kinds of jokers in our laws. We are prevented from passing valuable legislation which everybody admits ought to be This very condition would be relieved if the House would pass and the legislatures would approve the constitutional amendment the Senate passed some time ago by a vote of 63 to 6. That proposition is now hung up in the House. It is conceded that if they could get a vote on it it would be carried almost unanimously; yet it is practically conceded that one or two men have it within their power to block it all and to prevent the passage of that resolution and thus the adoption of that constitutional amendment, which would relieve the very situation we are in now.

If the 4th of March were not just a few days off that resolution would pass the House. If we were not compelled to adjourn at that time there is no question but what Congress at this session would submit to the States that proposition to amend the Constitution. Nobody doubts it; everybody admits it. The short session perpetuates itself in existence, with all of the evils that follow.

Nobody has heard me make a disrespectful remark about any of the so-called "lame ducks." I have not argued this proposition from the point of view of preventing defeated Congressmen acting on legislation, although that is one reason for the amendment. It is perfectly preposterous, it seems to me, in a civilized country such as ours, that a Congress elected in November should wait until a year from the following December before they can get into actual work. Yet that is the case now. Nobody has ever yet suggested the perpetuation of that in real good faith.

Why should that resolution be held up, then? Why is the House of Representatives, which is supposed to represent the people of the United States, absolutely impotent and unable to take a move because one man says no or two men say no?

It is amusing to hear the objections made to that constitutional amendment. I talked with a man very high in official life the other day; and while he is a very great man, he did not know that the resolution of the Senate had come from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and that I had reported it. He said, "You know, that resolution to amend the Constitution sent over by the Senate was the awfulest thing I ever saw." I said, "What is the matter with it?" He said, "They fixed the date of the beginning of Congress on the first Monday in January. Just think of it! That would not always be the same day of the month. It would vary seven days, and thus the terms of Representatives and of Senators would vary seven days, one a little longer and the other a little shorter." He said, "Oh, we could not stand for anything of that kind. Such stuff as that will never do in the Constitution." I said, "Why?"

Mr. WATSON. Will the Senator yield to me? Mr. NORRIS. Certainly.

Mr. WATSON. The Senator from Nebraska is a practical Why does he scold us, when we have already passed the joint resolution?

Mr. NORRIS. I have not thought of scolding. Mr. WATSON. We have already passed it, and we can not help what the House is doing.

Mr. NORRIS. The Senator must have a guilty conscience, or he would not think anything I have said is a scolding.

Mr. WATSON. I have no guilty conscience at all. I even went so far as to vote for the measure.

Mr. NORRIS. That was going quite a ways for the Senator. Mr. WATSON. But why the Senator wants to upbraid us, when we have done what he wants done-

Mr. NORRIS. Again I say I am not upbraiding anybody.

I am talking about a man who is not a Senator.

Mr. WATSON. The Senator must know as well as anybody that he is not affecting the House's action by talking to us We have already passed the joint resolution.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I will go on with the story I was telling, which the Senator from Indiana interrupted. said, "My friend, have you ever read the Constitution of the United States?" He said, "Why, sure; I know all about the Constitution of the United States." He had said something about how the forefathers had adopted the Constitution, and how they would blush if we had such a thing in it as a provision for commencing the term of Congress on the first Monday in January. I said, "Are you familiar with the provision of the Constitution, put in it by our forefathers, never yet amended by any of their descendants, which provides that Congress shall assemble once each year, and that the day of assembly shall be the first Monday in December, unless Congress otherwise determines, and that we always meet in annual session on the first Monday in December? Would it be any greater sin if we met on the first Monday in January, and had the new Congress meet instead of the old?"

Then another one of the great leaders, one of the outstanding national figures in the great Republican Party, a man now slated for a $12,000 job, said, "Why, the House committee have amended this resolution; they have made the meeting on the 4th of January, and the beginning of the President's term on the 24th of January. That is too long, too much time." I said, "Why do you not amend it? If 20 days is too much, make it 19, or 19½, or 19¼, or 15. Nobody will kick if you want to amend it." Then he said, "There is too short a time, under that amendment, between the election of Congress and the convening of Congress-between November and January. It does not give time for men to settle down and cool off, and we had better not monkey with the Constitution that our forefathers made."

I had heard that argument before. I had heard it at the time the resolution was first reported to the Senate, coming from the highest place in the land, "Do not monkey with the Constitution. Let the Congress elected in November settle down and get quiet and keep still until a year from the following December, for fear, in the excitement of their passion just after election, they may do some great injury to the people."

Mr. President, no objection has been made to that resolution which any man will stand up in the face of a civilized community and say is valid; yet we can not get it passed on. The people of the country unanimously demand it; the Senate is almost unanimously for it; the House is ready to vote almost unanimously for it; but we can not get it. We must hold on to this old method. We must continue to have conditions such as we have now, when the calendar is congested, when the time is limited, when we can not legislate correctly, as everybody knows; when we will defeat good legislation and innocently pass bad legislation, because we can not give it the consideration it deserves. We are helpless.

It may be that some of these men who are to blame have been repudiated by the people. I have never said a word against any such. I based my argument on two propositions. One was that when the people of the country had expressed themselves at the ballot box they were entitled to have their will translated into law at the earliest possible moment, and that with the election in November a meeting of the newly elected Congress in January was not undue haste; that the Congress elected in November should actually commence operations the following January instead of waiting a year and a month before they did.

The other reason I have given was that there would be no short session of Congress. This jam we have now, this jam of incompetency and impotency that comes every two years, no matter how good everybody may be or how honest may be their intentions, will always come home to plague us unless we remedy the situation. The people almost to a man are crying out for relief, but are not able to get it, because somebody will not let the people's representatives vote.

Mr. President, I hope that in what I am about to say I shall not be misunderstood. As I said, I have never spoken disre-spectfully of any man who has ever been defeated for the Senate or the House. In every political contest I have had in my life my joy at success has been practically equaled by my sympathy and my sorrow for the man who was defeated. do not claim that because a man was defeated he is necessarily a bad man. I am not claiming that he should not perform the functions of his office according to the Constitution, not by any means, and I never have. I do claim that a newly elected Congress ought to be put into office as soon as possible.

But, Mr. President, the danger is not there. The danger is not in that proposition. The danger comes in these conditions giving to the man in the White House almost supreme power over the Congress, the Senate and the House, the National Legislature. Aye, Mr. President, we have seen recently many men who have been defeated for reelection to the Senate and the House, and some who have not been defeated, appointed to high positions. In not a single case, so far as I know, is any one of them disqualified for the office that has been given to him. I am not complaining that the men have been appointed to these positions because of any disqualification, because of any lack of ability, because of any lack of patriotism. There is not the danger point. The real danger is that that kind of system gives to the President of the United States a power that our forefathers never intended he should have in the control of legislation in the House and in the Senate.

Human nature is the same here as elsewhere. Where is the Senator or Member of the House who for months will sit in his seat and with longing eyes look at the dazzling prize of a high office with an increased salary held above him-where is that man who, while he is looking at that dazzling prize, would vote contrary to the wishes and the desires of the man who holds the string by which the prize is dangled before him? There is the danger.

I say, without criticizing the men who have received the appointments, that it is human nature as to the man who knows, and particularly is it true if he has been defeated, but it is true to a greater extent if he has been repudiated at home and lost the election; and when he sees private life just ahead of him, and for three or four months can sit here or in another body recognizing that he is going to get surely or has a chance of getting a job that is better than the one he has had to give up, does anyone expect him ever to get crosswise against the man who has the power to give him that job?

I never knew it to happen. They may vote always conscien-

I never knew it to happen. They may vote always conscientiously, but the very fact that they are human will shape their consciences to be always on the side of the man who holds the whole thing in his hand. That is the danger. If it were not for that danger, that thing existing right now, the amendment to the Constitution would be out of the House and the Senate and the Congress and submitted to the people of the United States.

Yes, Mr. President, we need another amendment to the Constitution of the United States, just as important as that one. We need an amendment that in effect shall provide that a Member of the House of Representatives or a Member of the United States Senate shall be disqualified from receiving a Federal appointment, not only during his term of office, but for two years thereafter. Now, we who believe in separating the functions of the Government according to the fundamental principles laid down by our fathers, into the judicial here, the legislative there, and the executive there, if we are going to keep them separate, then we must prevent the one from dominating the other. As long as the President has the power in his hand that he now has and has had, not only this President but other Presidents before him, it is a temptation ever too great to lay aside for any man to have that power; and when he has the power to control legislation and it is necessary to deal out offices to Congressmen and Senators to get that legislation enacted, he will do it.

Mr. DIAL. Mr. President-

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator from South Carolina. Mr. DIAL. Does not the Senator think it would add to the efficiency of our Government if the President's term were limited to six years and he were made ineligible for reelection?

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; I agree with that proposition. I think that would help. But if we had the legislation I am speaking of now, we would not have the condition in the country that we now have, in one sense laughable and in another sense pitiful. But the very fact that we have it constitutes the very chains around us used to prevent us from getting our legislative

Now, Mr. President, the pending bill, of course, is going to be passed. So far as I know about it, it is a good bill. have to vote for it blindly. I am going to offer an amendment later on, but I do not claim to be posted on it. I think it is impossible for me to do so within the time now remaining, which is limited. I could point out 100 other bills on the calendar of which that is true, with the exception, perhaps, of the few Senators in each case who had to do with the framing of the bill or its consideration in the committee. That is the condition we are in now. We are faced with a condition that, in my judgment, is absolutely disgraceful for a civilized country to maintain, and yet the very fact that we are in that condition is used as a lever by which we are held down and kept under.

Mr. ERNST. Mr. President, H. R. 12 is a bill to consolidate, codify, revise, and reenact general and permanent laws of the United States in force March 4, 1919.

Before the Senator proceeds, will be permit Mr. NORRIS. me to interrupt him just a moment?

Mr. ERNST. Certainly. Mr. NORRIS. That is such a beautiful Illustration. I am somewhat familiar with the bill to which the Senator refers. It is a codification of the laws. Every citizen of the United States is interested in it. It has been an awful task to prepare it. The men who have done it are entitled to braise. They have been at it for years. The Government of the fact to the fa that we have to adjourn on the 4th of March, if our session were unlimited, we would enact it before this Congress closes. But we are helpless. One of the greatest progressive steps than can be thought of is the codifying of our laws and putting them in such shape that every intelligent man can know the law and find the law that must govern and control him, even to his liberty.

I thank the Senator from Kentucky.

CODIFICATION OF LAWS.

Mr. ERNST. Mr. President, H. R. 12 is a bill to consolidate, codify, revise, and reenact the general and permanent laws of the United States in force March 4, 1919. This bill passed the House and was referred to the Committee on Revision of the Laws of the Senate.

H. R. 12 has not been reported to the Senate because it is filled with imperfections of every character, so many and so serious that they can not be remedied by amendments.

A compilation of the laws of the United States should contain all of the laws in such form that one can ascertain the law without the necessity of referring to the Revised Statutes or to the many volumes of the Statutes at Large. If a compilation fails in this respect, we have but added another reference book to already overcrowded shelves.

H. R. 12 contains section after section with references in the body of the section to the law as it is set out in the Revised Statutes or in the Statutes at Large, and with no references whatever to that section of the compilation where the law itself can be found, if, indeed, such section be included in the bill. In every such case an examination must be made of the Revised Statutes or Statutes at Large containing the law thus referred to. This statement does not relate to citations at the end of the various sections of the compilation.

If H. R. 12 should therefore become the law it will fail to accomplish the purpose for which it was enacted, namely, to set forth the laws of the United States in one volume, so that reference to and examination of the Revised Statutes and the Statutes at Large may not be necessary.

A few of the many sections above referred to are sections 104, 333, 354, 423, 456, 501, 651, 660, 773, 783, 787, 869, 905, 925, 945, 955, 988, 1355, 1651, 1679, 1686, 1695, 1774, 1805, 1838, 1967, 2006, 2033, 2058, 2059, 2063, 2199, 2234, 2414, 2452, 2453, 2454, 2455, 2597, 2719, 2777, 2810, 2817, 2824, 2828, 2881, 2892, 2900, 2964, 3122, 3159, 3188, 3224, 3326.

Some of the acts referred to in sections like those above set out were found in this compilation and others were not. foregoing are only a portion of the sections of that character, and no attempt is made here to set out all of them. are 10,747 sections in the code, and the sections just set out and others of the same kind are all found in the first 3,326 sections.

One of the sections above-section 104 of the code-reads as fellows:

In any action now pending, or which may be brought against any person for or on account of anything done by him while an officer of either House of Congress in the discharge of his official duty in executing any order of such House, the district attorney for the district within which the action is brought, on being thereto requested by the officer sued, shall enter an appearance in behalf of such officer; and all provisions of the eighth section of the act of July 28, 1886, entitled "An act to protect the revenue, and for other purposes," and also all provisions of the sections of the former acts therein referred to, so far as the same relate to the removal of suits, the witholding of executions, and the paying of judgments against revenue or other officers of the United States, shall become applicable to such action and to all proceedings and matters whatsoever connected therewith, and the defense of such action shall thenceforth be conducted under the supervision and direction of the Attorney General.

It will be observed that reference is made in this section to

It will be observed that reference is made in this section to the act of July 28, 1866, instead of the section containing that act in this bill. An examination of that act will disclose the fact that a reference is therein made to an act passed in 1833.

It is clear, therefore, that an examination of section 104 of the code makes absolutely necessary an examination of the act of 1866 and also the act of 1833.

It is interesting to note that the acts referred to have been superseded by later legislation and have been dead matter for more than 30 years.

As to section 988, the last paragraph of this section reads as follows:

But chapter 57, Fourth Statutes at Large, shall not be construed to apply to cases arising under chapter 173, Thirteenth Statutes at Large, nor any act in addition or amendment thereto, nor to any case in which the validity or interpretation of said acts shall be at issue.

Therefore the act referred to in section 988 and all acts "in addition or amendment thereto" must be examined in order to ascertain to what this section relates. Furthermore, this section is one conferring jurisdiction upon district courts and the above provision has no proper place where it is found. What it does is, in substance, to declare that the provisions of a customs act shall not apply to cases arising under an internal revenue act.

It may be noted that this provision also has long since been dead matter.

There are hundreds of other sections like the following:

SEC. 769. Nothing in this chapter contained shall affect or modify the provisions of chapter 372, Thirty-first Statutes at Large, page 790, section 5060 of the Code of the Laws of the United States.

As will be seen, the foregoing refers to the Statutes at Large and also to the corresponding section of the code.

Other sections make reference to the acts set out in the Revised Statutes and give the section where the same act can also be found in the code.

There is no good reason for this double reference.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President-

Mr. ERNST. I yield to the Senator from South Dakota.
Mr. STERLING. I would like to ask the Senator from Kentucky what is meant exactly by the use of the term "code"?
In 1876 we had the Revised Statutes, as I remember it, and

Mr. ERNST. I can say to the Senator that I do not think it should be called the code. That is a name that has been given it in the body of the compilation and is used here for reference. I think this is a compilation of the laws of the United States, and that that would be the better way of designating it.

In the first place, the acts referred to are expressly repealed by this code. In the second place, the double references in hundreds of sections throughout the code make it cumbersome, confusing, and serve no good purpose.

If it is desired to refer to the source from which a section is drawn, that should be done by a citation thereto, placed either at the side or at the end of the section.

Other sections of this code refer only to sections of the code itself, usually, however, in the following form: "Section - of the Code of the Laws of the United States."

Mr. STERLING. Then the term "code," as I understand from the Senator, applies particularly to this attempted revision?

Mr. ERNST. It applies to the revision bill, as we call it, being House bill No. 12

It would be much simpler to make reference to other sections without in every instance repeating the words "the Code of the Laws of the United States," as such reference would be understood as referring to the sections of the bill and to noth-

I call especial attention to section 3705, which reads as follows:

All acts or parts of acts inconsistent with or repugnant to the provisions of chapter 89, Fortieth Statutes at Large, page 547, section 3675 of the Code of the Laws of the United States, are repealed; but nothing in said act shall repeal or in any way emlarge section 2169 of the Revised Statutes of 1878, except as specified in the seventh subdivision of section 3675 of the Code of the Laws of the United States, and under the limitation therein defined: Provided, That for the purposes of the prosecution of all crimes and offenses against the naturalization laws of the United States which may have been committed prior to the act of May 9, 1918, Fortieth Statutes at Large, chapter 69, the statutes and laws repealed shall remain in full force and effect: Provided further. That as to all alliens who, prior to January 1, 1900, served in the armies of the United States and were honorably discharged therefrom, section 2166 of the Revised Statutes of 1878 shall be and remain in full force and effect, anything in chapter 60, Fortieth Statutes at Large, page 547, section 3675, of the Code of the Laws of the United States, to the contrary notwithstanding.

Comment upon the foregoing section is hardly necessary.

Comment upon the foregoing section is hardly necessary. It is a most remarkable work of art in statute making. It does not slight either the Revised Statutes or the Statutes at Large or the the Code of the Laws of the United States.

The following provision appears in section 6802, of the code: The excess of his salary from the Coast and Geodetic Survey paid their man shall come from the funds of this commission. The above provision is "revised" from a provision in the river and harbor act of June 25, 1910 (36 Stat., 658), relating to the Mississippi River Commission, and reads:

Provided, That * * * the member of said commission appointed from the Coast and Geodetic Survey shall receive the same annual compensation as other civilian members of said commission, and the excess of compensation he receives from the Coast and Geodetic Survey shall be paid from the funds of said commission.

Being from the funds of the Mississippi River Commission. SEC. 2414. The President is authorized, under the provisions of what was section 20 of chapter 294 of the Sixteenth Statutes at Large, page 319, to make and publish regulations for the government of the Army in accordance with laws existing March 1, 1875: Provided, That said regulations shall not be inconsistent with the laws of the United States.

It will be noted that the foregoing section refers to the provisions of "what was section 20," and so forth, of the Sixteenth Statutes at Large.

Many more examples or illustrations of the character above set out can be given, but the foregoing are abundantly sufficient to demonstrate that H. R. 12 has falled as a compilation of the laws of the United States, which makes reference to the Revised Statutes and to the Statutes at Large unnecessary.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WILLIS in the chair). Does the Senator from Kentucky yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. ERNST. I yield. Mr. WALSH of Montana. I was unfortunately not in the Chamber when the Senator began his remarks and possibly he has answered the inquiry I desire to address to him. I should like to ask exactly how this work was done? Did some Member of Congress in the midst of his absorbing duties endeavor to devote sufficient time to this subject to make the compilation himself or did he have the assistance of some experts in the work of compilation and revision?

Mr. ERNST. I am not advised as to that; I do not know how this work was prepared in the House.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I am sure that neither the Senator nor myself, with the extraordinary demands that are made upon our time here, even assuming that we had any particular skill in that character of work, would be able to devote to such a subject as this the time and attention that it requires. It seems to me that a Member of the House of Representatives must be equally pressed for time in the midst of his other duties. I suppose that a work of this kind ought to be assigned to some commission, including experts who are skilled in the matter of digesting, compiling, and so forth. I was curious to know whether any such course as that had been taken.

Mr. ERNST. I am very glad to hear the Senator from Montana say what he has. I do not know what steps were taken in the House, but I call attention to the fact later on, in my remarks. I state that work of this character can not possibly be done by any committee of either House. It ought to be done by a competent, able, experienced lawyer, assisted by a force who understand this character of work, and it would be necessary for them to give their undivided attention to it. I may as well remark here that to read this volume as one would read a novel would require some three hours of steady reading every day for two months, and to go over it in a critical way so as to analyze it, make the necessary comparisons with the existing statutes, ascertain what sections have been repealed and what have not, would require the work of many, many months by an expert force. It can not be done otherwise.

The errors to which I am calling attention demonstrate, I think, that every character of error which could creep into a compilation of this character have found their way into this REPETITION OF SECTIONS.

Many statutes or sections are repeated, some in substance, others in exact language.

The last 16 lines of section 2879 are repeated word for word in section 2901, on the following page.

In section 2879 is found the following:

That in determining the officers with rank senior to colonel there shall be included the officer serving as major general commandant.

The identical language is repeated on the next page but one, in section 2895, which is a section of but two and a half lines and contains no other matter.

Section 2778, with the headline "Physical examination," and section 2779, with the headline "Physical disqualifications by wounds," are followed but a few pages farther on by sections 2886 and 2887, which later sections contain the same headlines and the exact language in every respect, except that the two words "Navy or" are contained in section 2778 and are not found in section 2886.

I wish to call especial attention to section 218. I am by no means reading all of the sections to which objection can be made, but am picking out some merely for purposes of illustration

Section 218 reads as follows:

The officers and employees of the United States whose salaries were appropriated for in chapter 141 of the Thirty-eighth Statutes at Large, page 1049, by the act of March 4, 1915, are established and shall continue from year to year to the extent they shall be appropriated for by Congress. Employees of the executive departments and other establishments of the executive branch of the Government may be detailed from time to time to the office of the President of the United States for such temporary assistance as may be necessary.

Except for slight variations in sections 3327 and 5509 this section is repeated verbatim et literatim some fourteen times in the compilation, as will be seen by reference to the following sections: Sections 116, 218, 339, 511, 560, 595, 651, 909, 923, 3327, 3487, 5496, 5498, 5500, 5090,

Sections 220 and 221 under title 3, "The President," are duplicated in sections 6355 and 6356, under title 37, "Foreign Relations."

In many places throughout the compilation we find kindred subjects under totally different titles.

Section 596: The last paragraph of this section is, with slight variations, duplicated in section 587.

The last part of section 700, under the "Department of the Interior," is duplicated in section 1396, under "The judi-Section 1413, under "The judiciary," is duplicated in section 5907 under "Public printing, advertisements, and public documents.

Section 1414, under "The judiciary," is substantially duplicated in section 5872 under "Public printing, advertisements, and public documents."

The last sentence of section 1490, under "The judiciary," is duplicated in section 10731 under the "Penal Code."

Section 1519, under "The judiciary," is duplicated in section 10740 under the "Penal Code."

Sections 2876, 2877, 2878, 2895, and 2901, 2902, 2903, 2904 are duplicated in a section found between those sections and numbered 2879.

There are many other duplications of sections, some in exact language, others in language substantially the same, and there are other sections which duplicate sections in part.

Other duplications will be noted elsewhere.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE

TITLE 19 .- DIPLOMATIC AND CONSULAR OFFICERS.

Many suggestions have been made by the Department of State concerning various sections of the code relating to that department. Attention is directed to the following sections:

department. Attention is directed to the following sections:

Section 3215. Salaries: This section purports to set out the salaries paid to ambassadors and envoys on March 4, 1919. It does not correctly set out the salaries paid those officers on that date. The appropriation act of March 4, 1919 (40 Stat. 1325), provides for salaries for such offiers as follows:

"Ambassadors to Austria-Hungary, Argentina, Brazil, Chile, France, Germany, Great Britain, Italy, Japan, Mexico, Peru, Spain, and Turkey, each $17,500.

"Envoys to Belgium, China, Cuba, the Netherlands and Luxemburg, Czechoslovakia, and Poland, each $12,000.

"Envoys to Bolivia, Bulgaria, Colombia, Costa Rica, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, Greece and Montenegro, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Nicaragua, Norway, Panama, Paraguay, Persia, Portugal, Rumania, Salvador, Serbia, Slam, Sweden, Switzerland, and Venezuela, each $10,000."

Attention is also called to the fact that this section speaks of "legations" to Japan, France, Germany, and Great Britain instead of "embassies."

Section 3216: The department asks, Should not this section, together with section 3217, relating to the ambassador to Argentina; 3219, relating to Paraguay; 3220, relating to Uruguay; 3221, relating to other countries; and 3222, relating to Haiti and Liberia; 3223, relating to an agent and consul general at Egypt; 3224, relating to chargé and consul general at Teheran, all be incorporated in section 3215, wherein the salaries of ambassadors and ministers are set out?

I call the especial attention of the Committee on Foreign Re-

I call the especial attention of the Committee on Foreign Relations to section-

SEC. 3221. Ministers to Guatemala, Costa Rica, Honduras, Salvador, and Nicaragua: This section provides for one minister resident for all of those countries, inclusive, and gives the President the power to select the residence for the minister in any one of those States. There is now a minister in each of those countries.

SEC. 3222. Representatives to Haiti and Liberia: The representative to Haiti is referred to as minister resident and consul general, with a salary of $7,500.

He appears to have been accredited as envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary since 1901. He now receives a salary of $10,000. (31 Stat. 884.)

SEC. 3224. Chargé and consul general at Teheran: This provision specifically amended section 1675, Revised Statutes. tion 1675 is found in section 3215 of this bill. It is difficult to understand why the amendment was not carried into the section, instead of making it a separate section. Further, the representative to Persia, since at least 1905 (32 Stat. 916), has been designated not charge and consul general but "envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary," and his salary in the act of March 4, 1919 (40 Stat. 1326), was fixed at $10,000.

The section has been obsolete for more than 15 years and should be omitted from the bill.

Sec. 3230. Secretary of legation to Turkey: This section provides that the consul general at Constantinople shall be the secretary of the legation to Turkey, but shall receive compensation only as consul general.

This provision of law seems now obsolete. The legation at Constantinople was a number of years ago raised to the rank of embassy. For several years a secretary of legation was provided for in the annual appropriation acts. (38 Stat. 443.) Since the passage of the act of February 5, 1919 (38 Stat. 805), providing that secretaries should be appointed by commission to the office of secretary, and not by commission to any par-ticular post, secretaries have been assigned to the mission at Constantinople.

Sec. 3231. Interpreter to legation to Turkey: The word "legation" should apparently be changed to "embassy," which is now the designation of our diplomatic mission.

Sec. 3232. Interpreter of legation to Japan: This provides for a salary of $2,500 to the interpreter to the legation to Japan. In more recent years the interpreter to the legation to Japan. In more recent years the interpreter has been referred to in appropriation acts as "Japanese secretary and interpreter to embassy to Japan, $3,000" (34 Stat. 288); as "Japanese secretary of embassy to Japan, $3,600" (39 Stat. 1048); and as "secretary interpreter of embassy to Japan, $3,600" (40 Stat. 520).

Similar provisions have also been made for the embassy in Turkey and the legation in China, as will be noted from the acts cited.

SEC. 3246. Consul assistant's salary: This provision, with the exception of the last three lines, which seem to have no particular value, is duplicated in section 3258, upon the following page of this compilation. One or the other might be omitted. The last three lines of section 3246 read as follows: "and section 1704, Revised Statutes, its amendatory act of June 11, 1874, and all other acts inconsistent with this provision, are so amended.'

Section 3248. Can draw one salary only: This same provision is contained in the last three lines of section 3239, on the preceding page of the compilation,

Section 3249. Interpreter for consulates in China and Japan: This provision providing for interpreters for consulates at the places named therein appears to have been taken from an appropriation act for the fiscal year ending in 1875, and does not appear in recent appropriation acts, and consequently it is hardly to be considered as permanent legislation.

Section 3250. Interpreter at Bangkok: This section provides that the salary of the interpreter at the consulate of Bangkok shall not exceed $500 a year. Appropriation acts for the past several years have allowed the interpreter at Bangkok $1,500.

(40 Stat. 520.)

Section 3282. Notarial fees: This section should be included within the first part of section 3304, as it imposes upon consular officers the duty of taking acknowledgments and administering oaths when requested. Under section 3304 it was to a certain extent optional with the officer whether he would take an acknowledgment or administer an oath or not.

Section 3286. Penalty for wrongful conduct: Since passage of the act of March 4, 1915 (38 Stat. 1164, 1167, 1170), under section 18 of that act, the authority of consuls to "re-claim deserters" from vessels was repealed, and this section should be amended to conform to the change made by the act of TITLE 37 .- FOREIGN RELATIONS.

Section 6294: Arrest of seamen.

Section 6295: Commitment and discharge.

So much of these sections as related to the arrest or imprisonment of officers or seamen, deserting, or charged with desertion, and for the cooperation of the local authorities in effecting such arrest or imprisonment, was specifically repealed by sections 16 and 17 of the act of March 4, 1915 (38 Stat. 1184), and these sections should be corrected accordingly. This Gov ernment has abrogated all treaty provisions which would permit arrest or imprisonment for desertion.

Section 6297. Judicial authority: The extraterritorial juris diction of the United States in Egypt results from a treaty with the Ottoman Empire made in 1830, and not with Egypt, as stated in the section.

With respect to China, the jurisdiction of the minister to China was taken away by the act of June 30, 1906 (34 Stat. 814), and most of the jurisdiction that had theretofore been exercised by consuls was vested in the United States Court for China by that act. The section should be corrected to state the Section 6300: Laws of the United States extended over citizens.

Section 6305: Appellate jurisdiction of ministers.

Section 6307: Arb!tration of civil cases.

Section 6311: Capital offenses.

Section 6312: Execution and pardons. Section 6317. Minister's jurisdiction defined.

Section 6329. Turkey embraced within provisions of title. In connection with each of these sections, reference is made to the comment on section 6297.

Ministers, since the passage of the act of June 30, 1906 (34 Stat. 814), exercise no jurisdiction, civil or criminal, in China, and each of these sections should be corrected to conform to the Section 6333. Tripoli, Tunis, Morocco, Muscat, and Samoan Islands, and other countries: The United States, as a result of treaties and conventions, has not exercised extraterritorial jurisdiction in Tripoli, since 1913 (see Foreign Relations 1913, p 608); in Tunis, since the convention with France on March 15, 1905; in Zanzibar, since 1907 (see Foreign Relations 1907, p. 574); and in the Samoan Islands since the convention of 1899, between the United States, Germany, and Great Britain, went into effect.

RIVERS, HARBORS, AND CANALS. TITLE 39.

This title, excluding therefrom chapter 11, relating to the Panama Canal Zone, is made up of 78 sections. Of this number at least one-fourth have been repealed, executed, or are obsolete, or are special provisions applying to particular rivers or Most of the sections in chapter 11 relate to the Panama Canal Zone and have no proper place in this title, but belong under the title "Insular affairs," and do not relate to the canal but to the government of the Canal Zone.

In this title-"Rivers, harbors, and canals"-are a number of sections which apply only to particular rivers or creeks, such as acts which declare certain streams to be navigable or non-navigable, which authorize the lease of water powers, or which authorize the purchase or condemnation of certain canals.

Acts of this character are no more to be considered general laws than are the acts which authorize certain companies or persons to construct bridges over particular streams,

It may be that with respect to New York Harbor, or perhaps Chicago Harbor, in view of the extent of the provisions applying to them, it might be convenient to include them in this If the omission of the other provisions should cause doubt, such doubt could be removed by omitting such acts and by including among the general and repealing provisions of H. R. 12 a section to the effect that nothing in this bill shall affect, modify, or repeal such acts.

It is desired to call especial attention to a few of these sec-

Section 6806: This section appears to be a paraphrase of paragraphs (a) and (b) of the flood control act of March 1, 1917 (39 Stat. 948). As drawn it is inaccurate, as well as

The entire section from which this section is drawn is set out in this bill as section 6819.

Section 6817: This section is subject to the same criticism as the foregoing. It merely repeats a portion of section 6820 of the bill and should be eliminated.

Section 6833: This section is obsolete. The Louisville and Portland Canal has been owned and operated by the Government for nearly 50 years. Tolls and operating charges upon the Government-owned canals were abolished by the act of July 5, 1884. This section was amended March 3, 1909, and the amendment is set out in section 6827 of this bill.

Section 6843: The act from which the first part of this section is taken was repealed by the act from which the second part of this section is taken, as can be seen upon careful exami-

Section 6861: The first three paragraphs of this section refer to a privilege granted a Michigan power company to divert water from the St. Marys River into its canal, but this grant was repealed by the act of March 3, 1909, and both paragraphs should therefore be omitted.

Section 6864: This section is taken from section 10 of the river and harbor act of September 19, 1890 (26 Stat. 454), which was repealed and superseded by sections 10 and 12 of the river and harbor act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. 1152), which appear as sections 6863 and 6867 of this bill. The section having been specifically repealed, it should, of course, be omitted.

Section 6865: This section from the river and harbor act of 1875 (19 Stat. 139) was repealed by section 14 of the act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. 1152), which act is set out in section 6870 of this bill. This is another illustration of what we find frequently throughout this compilation, namely, two flatly contradictory sections.

Section 6874: This section, taken from section 11 of the river and harbor act of September 19, 1890 (26 Stat. 455), was repealed by section 17 of the act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. 1153), which is fully set out in the preceding section, No. 6873, two more flatly contradictory sections.

Section 6879: This is a special provision of a temporary The work has already been done. There is no reason for including this section in the bill.

Section 6880: The first part of this section is set out in section 6805 and should not be repeated. The latter part of the section is a special provision in the river and harbor act of August 8, The changes there authorized have been made and the work completed. The section should be omitted.

Section 6885: This is a special provision of a temporary nature in the river and harbor act of July 27, 1916 (39 Stat. 403). By the terms of the item the experiment was to be made within two years. It, therefore, no longer has any force, and the section should be omitted.

Section 6890: This is a small part of a special provision in the river and harbor act of June 13, 1902 (32 Stat. 340), which is fully covered by the general provision found in section 6889, which latter provision vests in the Secretary of War the authority to use such means as he may deem necessary to accomplish the purpose named. It adds nothing to the general authority conferred by section 6889, and should be omitted.

Section 6892: This section contains a special grant to James A. Moore, in the act of June 11, 1906 (34 Stat. 231), to construct a canal to connect the waters of Puget Sound with Lake Washington. Later (34 Stat. 1108), the grant was modified. Later, Congress, by the act of June 25, Stat. 666), made an appropriation for the construction of the canal, and under which the canal and locks have been completed and the grant to Moore extinguished. The section. therefore, is dead matter.

Section 6910: This section is merely a duplication, it being set out in section 6896, and should be omitted.

Section 6933: This is an act authorizing the purchase of certain land which has long ago been obtained and paid for by the Government and the Government has been in possession of it for several years.

Section 6951: By this section the Secretary of Commerce is authorized to establish anchorage ground in Chicago Harbor. By a later act this authority is vested in the Secretary of War (sec. 6957). Flatly contradictory sections, only six sections apart.

Sections 6960 to 6991: These sections under the title "Rivers, harbors, and canals," contain the entire law providing a government for the Panama Canal Zone. A few of the sections, namely, 6960, 6961, 6962, 6966, 6968, and probably portions of two or three other sections which relate to the ownership and operation of the canal, should be included in this chapter; but why should section 6965, providing for the government of the Canal Zone, and sections 6967 and 6968, relating to courts and judicial procedure, and section 6973, a part of which regulates the passage of persons through the Canal Zone, why should these sections and a number of others be placed in this chapter? These sections should be placed under the proper title in this compilation, "Insular affairs." In this compilation, laws relating to Territories and insular possessions are found in the two separate titles. Title 25 bears the heading "The States and Territories," and contains four chapters which bear headings as follows:

Chapter 1. The States; Chapter 2. Alaska; Chapter 3. Hawaii; and Chapter 4. Territorial provisions.

Under title 26, entitled "Insular affairs," there are four chapters with headings as follows:

Chapter 1. Porto Rico; Chapter 2. The Philippine Islands; Chapter 3. Guam and Guano Islands; and Chapter 4. The Virgin Islands.

Porto Rico is placed under the title "Insular affairs," while Hawaii is placed in the title "The States and Territories."

There are many other errors under this title to which attention will not now be called.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I came into the Chamber after the Senator had begun his speech. Is the Senator now giving the reasons why, in his opinion, this legislation codifying the laws should not be passed by the Senate at this time?

Mr. ERNST. That is correct.

Mr. HARRISON. The reason why I asked the question is that I did not hear the preliminary statement of the Senator. The Senator is now giving the reasons why, in his opinion, the legislation should not be passed at this time?

Mr. ERNST. That is correct.

THE NAVY.

I desire to call the especial attention of the Senate to a number of objections made by the Navy Department.

There are many mistakes running all through this title and they begin with the first section.

Section 2438: The section speaks of rear admirals (first nine) and rear admirals (second nine). This is not correct. The proper titles of these officers are "rear admirals, upper half of grade or rank." and "rear admirals, lower half of grade rank." (39 Stat., 577, 578.) Section 2452: The last sentence of this section should be or rank."

omitted, as it is a duplication of the last sentence of section 2456, and belongs in that section.

Section 2463: This section is from the naval appropriation act of August 22, 1912 (37 Stat., 344); but the provision carried into this section was expressly repealed by the provision in the naval appropriation act of July 1, 1918 (40 Stat., 708). So this section, as well as section 2464, are dead matter and have no place in this bill.

Sections 2465 to 2470: These sections are taken from the naval appropriation act of August 22, 1912 (37 Stat., 344).

The naval appropriation act of July 1, 1918 (40 Stat., 710), provided for a Dental Corps, which provisions are carried into sections 2472 to 2475, inclusive, and then repealed.

All acts or parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of that

The only provision in the act of 1912 which is not inconsistent with the provisions of the act of 1918 is that which declares that appointees in the Dental Corps-

Shall not exercise command over persons in the Navy other than dental surgeons and such enlisted men as may be detailed to assist them by competent authority.

The only portions, then, of sections 2465 to 2470 which were not inconsistent with the provisions of the act of 1918 is the above provision just quoted. It can be carried into its proper place in section 2472 and sections 2472 to 2475 omitted from the bill.

Section 2471: This was a special provision, applying only to one officer. A similar provision was carried into the act of 1918 and carried into the first proviso of section 2475. I am advised that the officer specifically referred to in these provisions had reached the age of 70 years and had been placed on the retired list prior to March 1, 1919. Section 2471, as well as the similar provision in section 2475, should be omitted.

Section 2479: This last sentence of this section, "The Secretary of the Navy is empowered to limit and fix the numbers in the various ratings," relates to the ratings of the enlisted men only, and not to pharmacists, and should be transposed to and made the last sentence of section 2482. The "enlisted ratings" are given in section 2478 of the bill.

Section 2486: The provision carried into this section is obsolete, having been superseded by the provision from the naval act of August 29, 1916 (39 Stat. 576), carried into section 2439.

Section 2489: The words in the last two lines of the section. subject to such examinations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Navy," should be omitted. Being staff officers, under the provision carried into section 2709 they are not required to take examinations except for "regular advancements in rank." Sections 2781 et seq. regulate the examinations for promotions in grade.

Section 2500: The act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. 1005), abolished the Engineer Corps of the Navy and transferred the officers thereof to the line of the Navy. There are, therefore, no longer "chief engineers" as such in the Navy. To state the law as it stands at present, the section should read:

The President may designate among the officers of the Navy performing engineering duty only, and appoint to every fleet or squadron an engineer, who shall be denominated "engineer of the fleet."

Section 2512: The proviso in this section is obsolete, as It has been superseded by the provision carried into section 2439. which provides that the commissioned officers of the Construction Corps shall be 5 per cent of the total number of commissioned officers of the line of the Navy. The proviso should be omitted, as it is dead matter.

Section 2513: This section provides that certain officers having not less than three years' service shall be eligible for transfer to the grade of assistant naval constructor. That provision of the section has been superseded by the later provision in section 2441, that-

Hereinafter ensigns of not less than one year's service as such shall be eligible for transfer to the Construction Corps.

The section should be corrected to conform to this later provision.

The proviso to the section has been superseded by the later law found in sections 2439-2441 of this bill, and should be omitted:

Section 2525: The provisions of this section were superseded by the later provision found in section 2795. The law governing the examinations of officers for promotion are set out in sections 2781 et seq. The section is dead matter.

Section 2531: The provision contained in this section is repealed and superseded by the later provision found in the next, section 2532.

Section 2534: This provision is repealed by the act contained in section 2532.

Section 2536: The act of April 25, 1917 (40 Stat. 38), provides that any enlistment for minority in the Navy or Marine Corps may be extended as provided for extending a term of enlistment for four years. The words "four year," in line 7 of this section, should be omitted, and 40 Stat. 38, cited as authority for this action.

Section 2542: The provision contained in this section has been dead matter for many years. The enlisted strength of the Navy gead matter for many years. The enlisted strength of the Navy is fixed by the law in section 2541.

Section 2547: The second sentence of this section, as compiled, provides that "honorable discharges may be granted to all enlisted persons in the Navy who have enlisted for four years." The act of June 11, 1896 (29 Stat. 476; 2 Supp. 531) extends the benefits of honorable discharge to "all enlisted or the provider of the provide Therefore the words "who have enlisted for four years" in the fourth line of the section should be omitted.

Section 2549: The three months granted by law as the limit of time in which to receive the pecuniary benefits of discharge was, by the act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. 1003; 2 Supp. 973), extended to four months; and that provision was again amended (in other respects) by the act of August 22, 1912 (37 Stat. 331). The words "three months" in the fifth line of the section should be changed to "four months."

Section 2538: This section is not of a general nature, but relates to the acceptance, from the State of Rhode Island, of Coaster's Harbor Island for use as a naval training station. The cession was made and accepted 40 years ago, and this section can serve no purpose here, its provisions being fully exe-

Section 2559: What is said with respect to section 2558 is true of this section. Its provisions have been fully executed, and It has no place in this compilation.

Section 2563: The provisions of this section were repealed by the provisions of the act of May 13, 1908 (35 Stat. 128), which provides that "an officer of the Navy," after 30 years in the service, may, upon his own application, be retired. This language includes all officers of the Navy who have served 30 years. Section 2563 should be omitted.

Section 2564: There is no officer now on the active list of the Navy to whom this provision can apply, all officers to whom it could apply having been retired. It should be omitted as being executed.

Section 2579: As here set out, this section is inaccurate in that it provides that all officers failing to pass the physical examination should be retired with the rank to which their seniority entitled them to be promoted, and Thirty-sixth Statutes, 1267, is cited as the source of the section.

This provision was amended by the naval act of August 29, 1916 (39 Stat. 579), with respect to the grades of commander, captain, and rear admiral. By this amendment officers falling to pass the physical examination "shall not be considered, in the event of retirement, entitled to the rank of the next higher grade.

Then the act of July 1, 1918 (40 Stat. 718), extended the provisions of the act of 1916 to officers of the line.

To correctly state the law will require the insertion of the words "below the rank of lieutenant commander" after the word "Navy" ord "Navy" in the second line of the section. Section 2580: The word "sea," in the last line of the section, should be eliminated, as the act of May 30, 1908 (35 Stat. 501), declares that the 10 per cent additional allowed for service beyond the limits of the United States should not be included in computing the retired pay of naval officers. See section 2678 of the bill.

Section 2583: The Navy Department states that this section is executed and obsolete, as there is no officer now in the Navy who can possibly be affected by this provision. Section 2586: The act of August 29, 1916 (39 Stat. 579) fixed 64 years as the age for retiring, instead of 62 years. The words "sixty-four" should be substituted for "sixty-two" in the third line of the section.

Section 2587: This section as compiled provides that the next officer in rank shall be promoted to the place of a retired officer, but the act of August 29, 1916 (39 Stat. 579), and the act of July 1, 1918 (40 Stat. 718), provide that in the case of an officer in the rank of commander and above the vacancy shall be filled by selection and promotion and not by seniority, so that the provisions of this section apply only to the grades below commander. The words "except as otherwise provided in this title" should be inserted at the beginning of the section.

Section 2589: Standing as it is this section is in conflict with section 2596 (from a later statute), which provides that officers on the retired list restored to active duty, under certain conditions, may receive an increase of pay. Section 2589 should therefore be amended by inserting at the beginning thereof the words "Except as provided in section 2596."

Section 2590: This section as it is compiled is in direct conflict with section 2590 (from a later act). To reconcile this conflict section 2590 should be amended by inserting at the beginning of the section the words "Except as provided in section 2500;" or the latter section added as a proviso to section

Section 2595: This section as it stands is in direct conflict with respect to some of its provisions with the later act of March 2, 1907 (34 Stat. 1217). This later act is entitled "An act providing for the retirement of noncommissioned officers, petty officers, and enlisted men of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps of the United States"; and it repeals "all acts and parts of acts so far as they conflict with the provisions of this act." This act appears as section 2052 in the title The Army.

Section 2601: All that part of this section beginning with the words "and the accounting," in line 10 and to the end of the section, were remedial, the accounts have been adjusted and paid, and the provision fully executed. It is therefore dead matter and should be omitted.

Section 2602: This section fixes the pay of admiral at $13,500. At the time the act from which the section is taken was passed Admiral Dewey was the only admiral, but in the Later the act of March 3, 1915 (38 Stat. 941, 942), provided that while holding the position of commander of the Atlantic, Pacific, and Asiatic Fleets the officers holding such positions should have the rank and pay of admiral, and fixed the pay at $10,000, and also provided that the second in command should have the rank of vice admiral, and fixed the pay at $9,000 per annum.

The provisions of this later law are carried into section 2443 of this bill, where the pay of admiral and of vice admiral is correctly stated.

Section 2604: Under the provisions carried into section 2602 all commissioned officers of the active list of the Navy shall receive the same pay and allowance, according to rank and length of service." Naval constructors, assistant naval constructors, professors of mathematics, and civil engineers are "commissioned officers" whose pay is fixed by the law found in section 2602. Section 2604 should be corrected by striking out all matter, beginning with the words "naval constructors," is line 8 to and including the words "two theyeard civ hum. in line 8, to and including the words "two thousand six hundred dollars," in line 3, top of page 230.

In addition to this conflict of provisions there are several other minor errors in the section.

Section 2608: The first sentence of this section is from the act of March 3, 1899 (31 Stat. 1108; 2 Supp. 1548), and includes officers of the Navy and officers and enlisted men of the Marine Corps.

The second sentence, while it sets out the exact language of the act of May 13, 1908 (35 Stat. 128), in the act itself refers only to officers of the Navy. The pay of officers of the Marine Corps is the same as the pay of officers of the Army (see sec. 2917 of the bill), which is to be found in sections 2069 et seq. of this bill. The sentence should be changed so as to apply only to officers of the Navy, and should read:

All commissioned officers of the Navy on sea duty and all such officers on shore duty, etc.

Section 2613: The act of May 13, 1908 (35 Stat. 127) provides that all commissioned officers of the active list of the Navy shall receive the same pay and allowances according to rank. It also provided that nothing in that act should be construed so as to reduce the pay or allowances now (on May 13, 1908) authorized by law for any commissioned officer, etc., of the active or retired lists of the Navy.

The provision carried into section 2613 is from the act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. 554). This act fixed the pay of chaplains then in the service. The section should be corrected so as to preserve the pay of the chaplains in the service on that date.

Section 2614: The provision found in this section was repealed by a later enactment, found in section 2602 of this bill. The section should be omitted.

Section 2617: The provisions of law found in this section were modified by the provision in the act of May 22, 1917 (40 Stat. 86), section 5, and also in the act of July 1, 1918 (40 Stat. 716). Concisely stated, the section should read:

Midshipmen graduated from the Naval Academy may be commissioned effective from date of graduation, and shall be allowed the pay of the grade in which so commissioned from the date they take rank as stated in their commissions to the date of qualifications and acceptance of said commissions. (27 S. 716; 32 S. 686; 40 S. 86; 40 S. 716.) (See sec. 2704.)

Section 2618: The provision in this section is superseded by a later enactment contained in section 2619 of the bill; and section 2618 should be omitted as dead matter.

Section 2621: The provisions of this section have been superseded by the later law found in section 2619 of this bill.

Section 2626: The act carried into this section was superseded by a subsequent enactment found in section 2627 and in section 2628.

Section 2631. The provision found in this section was superseded by the provision carried into section 2632.

Section 2638: This provision of law was superseded by the provisions of the later act found in section 2602 of this bill.

Section 2641: The first part of the section which authorizes the President to fix the pay of petty officers, excepting mates, etc., was repealed by the provisions in the act of May 13, 1908 (35 Stat. 128), which increased the pay of those officers and provided that the pay as so fixed should remain, until changed by act of Congress. The section should be changed to conform to the act of 1908, to read:

The rates of pay provided for all active and refired enlisted men of the Navy, prior to May 13, 1908, are increased 10 per cent and, as so increased, shall remain in force until changed by act of Congress. (35 S. 128.)

Section 2644: The provision carried into this section was repealed by section 3 of the act of February 28, 1919 (40 Stat. act conferring upon him this title it was provided that upon his death the title should cease (30 Stat. 1045; 2 Supp. 988). 1203), which is found in section 2169 of this bill, in the title "The Army." Changed to apply only to the Navy and the Marine Corps, the section should be changed to read:

An enlisted man honorably discharged from the Navy or Marine Corps shall receive 5 cents per mile from the place of his discharge to his actual bona fide home or residence or original muster into the service, at his option: Provided, That for sea travel on discharge, transportation and subsistence only shall be furnished to enlisted men: Provided further, That naval reservitsts duly enrolled who may be honorably released from active service shall be entitled likewise to receive mileage as aforesaid (40 Stat. 1203).

Section 2646: The law contained in this section is also included in section 2554 of this bill.

Section 2659: The provision carried into this section was superseded by the act carried into section 2661.

Section 2675: This section is section 1588, Revised Statutes. That section provides, among other things, what the retired pay shall be for officers who have performed 45 years' service, after reaching the age of 16 years. As compiled, to be entitled to retired pay, the officer would have to serve 45 years after reaching the age of 64 years, in other words, the officer would have to be 109 years of age before he would be entitled to re-tired pay. The word "sixteen" should be substituted for "sixty-four" in the third line of the section.

As a matter of fact, section 1588, Revised Statutes, has been modified by several later acts. See sections 2561, 2579, 2580, 2581, 2584, and 2792.

Section 2676: As compiled, this section in some of its provisions is in conflict with the provisions of section 2596. reconcile this conflict there should be inserted at the beginning of the section the words "Except as provided in section 2596."

Section 2679: There should be inserted at the beginning of this section the words "Except as otherwise provided in this for the reason that there are other and later provisions of law which modify the law carried into this section. See sections 2596, 2597, 2600, and 2681.

Section 2683: This section is in direct conflict with the provisions of the later law carried into section 2589.

Section 2686: The provision in this section is superseded by the later law, found in section 1828, title "The Army." Section 2692: The act of August 29, 1916 (39 Stat. 576), increased from 10 to 15 the number of midshipmen the President was authorized to appoint annually to the Naval Academy, and the act of March 4, 1917 (39 Stat. 1182), increased from 25 to 100 the number that might annually be appointed to the Naval Academy by the Secretary of the Navy. If this section should become a law in the form in which it appears in this bill, the effect will be to increase from 15 to 30 the number of midshipmen the President annually may appoint to the academy

Section 2694: This section is merely a duplication of the provisions regulating the appointment of 100 midshipmen annually by the Secretary of the Navy. It is a useless repetition and should be omitted from the bill.

Section 2719: The first sentence of this section is from the naval act of March 2, 1895 (28 Stat. 837)

The remainder of the section is from the naval act of March 3, 1897 (29 Stat. 661). The only purpose of the provision was to authorize the proper pay officer to pay the professors the increase in their compensation which had been granted in the act of 1895 from July 1, 1896. It was merely temporary legislation and long since executed, and should be omitted.

The first sentence is obsolete, as it is superseded by the provision in the naval act of August 29, 1916 (39 Stat. 607), which appears as section 2714 of this bill.

Section 2719, therefore, is obsolete, and should be omitted. Section 2758: This section is obsolete, having been super-seded by the provision in the naval act of July 1, 1918 (40 Stat.

717), carried into section 2625 of this bill.

Section 2760: This section is likewise dead matter, having been superseded by the provision of law carried into section 2625 of this bill.

Section 2764: As to officers entering the service after March 4, 1913 (37 Stat. 892), they take precedence according to their respective dates of commission, which provision is found in section 2809 of this bill. The latter section should be a proviso to section 2764, or the words "except as provided in section 2809" should be inserted at the beginning of the section.

Sections 2767, 2768, 2769: The provisions found in these sections were superseded and repealed by the act of August 29, 1916 (39 Stat. 577), carried into section 2441 of this bill. Section 2772: The provision appearing in this section was repealed by the act of June 30, 1914 (38 Stat. 404), which is found in section 2504 of this bill.

Section 2782: This section is in direct conflict with the provisions of a later law, carried into section 2800 of this bill. Section 2782 is, therefore, dead matter.

Section 2785: Under the terms of this section the whole record and finding shall be presented to the President for his approval or disapproval of the finding.

The provisions of the act of May 22, 1917 (40 Stat. 90) authorize the President to direct the Secretary of the Navy to take such action on the records of promotion boards is now required by law to be taken by the President," which has been carried into section 2795 of this bill. This later provision is in conflict with section 2785.

Section 2794: This section provides that any officer of the Navy below the rank of commander who upon examination promotion is found not professionally qualified shall be suspended from promotion for a period of six months, whereas by the later law of August 29, 1916 (39 Stat. 579), any officer selected to pass an examination for promotion who shall fail to pass the professional examination "shall thereafter be in-eligible for selection and promotion." This later provision is carried into section 2791 of this bill, and is in direct conflict with the provisions of section 2794.

Section 2797: This section furnishes another illustration of the careless manner in which the sections have been arranged in this bill.

The provision of law found in this section is from the act of August 29, 1916 (39 Stat. 579). This section forms a part of the law found in sections 2788-2791, and should follow section 2789. The board spoken of in the section is the board of selection provided for in section 2788. Without going to the source of the law, no one could tell what board is referred to in the section-whether an examining board or the board of selec-

Section 2828: This section shows upon its face that it is merely temporary legislation, and has no place in this compilation.

TITLE-THE NAVY.

CHAPTER IX-THE MARINE CORPS.

Attention is specially called to the duplications in this chapter.

Section 2874: The act of August 29, 1916 (39 Stat. 609), changes the title of "commandant," as set out in section 2874, to that of "major general commandant," and this section should be changed accordingly.

Section 2879: This section seems to be the parent section from which several other sections are drawn.

The first four lines of the section and the word "follows," in the fifth line, are a "made up" provision, and might be con-strued in their present form to be in addition to the officers named in section 2875, and should be changed to state the fact or omitted.

Here are some of the duplications from the section:

The first proviso of the section is duplicated in section 2876.

The second proviso is duplicated in section 2878. The fifth proviso is duplicated in section 2877.

The sixth proviso is duplicated in section 2902. The first part of the seventh proviso is duplicated in section

The second sentence of the seventh proviso is duplicated in section 2903.

The remainder of the seventh proviso is duplicated in section

Section 2883: This section, while correctly fixing the ages between which persons may be appointed to the grade of lieutenant from civil life, does not contain the provision in the act of March 3, 1903 (32 Stat. 1198), that appointees to the grade of lientenant from noncommissioned officers shall be between the ages of 21 and 27 years.

I have been unable to find this provision in the bill; and if not in the bill this section should be amended by incorporating that provision.

Section 2884: This section is drawn from the act of August 29, 1916 (39 Stat. 611); and in that act, immediately following the provision found in this section, is the following:

That no midshipman at the United States Naval Academy or cadet at the United States Military Academy who fails to graduate there-from shall be eligible for appointment as a commissioned officer in the Marine Corps until after the graduation of the class of which he was should be added to this section.

I have been unable to find this provision in this bill.

Section 2899: This section states that the staff of the Marine Corps shall be separate from the line; while the act of August 29, 1916 (39 Stat. 610), declares that vacancies thereafter oc-curring in any grade of the staff department should be filled by detail, for a period of four years, from the line. This latter provision appears in sections 2879 and 2901.

Section 2899 should therefore be omitted.

Section 2900: This section provides for the composition of the staff of the Marine Corps, as provided in the act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. 1009), but that provision has been modified by the act of August 29, 1916 (39 Stat. 610).

This section does not, therefore, state the law with respect to the staff of the Marine Corps.

The foregoing are not the only errors under the title "The Navy," but are some of the serious mistakes and duplications that are to be found therein. Many more, of a more or less serious character, are to be found in it. So, too, but few of the omitted provisions are referred to. The foregoing are sufficient, however, to indicate the character of the compilation and the confusion that will exist in attempting to execute the laws relating to the Navy should House bill 12 become a law.

It is not surprising, therefore, that the Secretary of the Navy in his letter, calling attention to the foregoing and to other defects in the bill, states:

It is obvious that the inclusion of provisions which have heretofore been and now stand repealed would be enacting law which, for reasons best known to Congress and the department, have been specifically repealed. The result would be confusion compounded and result in an intolerable situation. * * *

It is reasonable to believe that if the compilation in its present form should become law it would be impossible for the department to determine the status of the law in a large number of instances affecting the personnel of the naval service, and, further, that it would be necessary to request immediate legislation on these points reenacting the law as it now exists but as it has not been incorporated in said compilation.

In a subsequent letter the Secretary of the Navy adds:

In a subsequent letter the Secretary of the Navy adds:

To reenact these repealed provisions would not only result in constructive legislation detrimental to the naval service, but would also result in such confusion that it would be impossible to administer the naval service in several important particulars until subsequent legislation had been obtained to eliminate the damage done by enacting this codification into law.

Suffice it to say that this department is very anxious to promote a careful and comprehensive codification of all the laws of the United States, and that it is particularly interested in a proper codification of the laws relating to the Navy. It must, however, recommend that it be not enacted into law until the very many obvious errors contained therein have been corrected and the provisions of law omitted therefrom incorporated therein.

You are advised, therefore, that this department is of the opinion that H. R. 12 in its present form should not be enacted, and that in respect to those titles which affect the naval service only a most careful revision and in many instances a complete reconstruction thereof will suffice.

Territorial Provisions.

TERRITORIAL PROVISIONS.

TITLE 25, CHAPTER 4.

Most of the sections in this chapter are taken from the Revised Statutes and are dead matter, having become obsolete when Arizona and New Mexico, the last of the Territories to which they applied, became States.

They can serve no useful purpose in this bill.

Alaska: Alaska has a complete system of government—legislative, executive, and judicial—which is set out in the organic act of August 24, 1912. (37 Stat. 512.)

Hawaii: The organic act of April 30, 1900 (31 Stat. 141) establishing a complete system of Government—legislative, executive, and judicial-for Hawaii.

Porto Rico: The new organic act of March 2, 1917, an act entitled "An act to provide a civil government for Porto Rico, and for other purposes," establishes a complete government for Porto Rico with legislative, executive, and judicial departments.

Philippine Islands: The new organic act of August 29, 1916 (39 Stat. 545), is that of a completely organized Territory, and it has a governmental organization with legislative, executive, and judicial departments.

These organic laws governing these Territories are fully set out in the other chapters, title 25 and in title 26 of the code.

There is no necessity to have further enactment of other laws relating to these Territories which can not be applied to them and which will but serve to confuse. It simply encumbers the new compilation with dead matter which can be of no possible use.

For the purpose of demonstrating the obsolete character of the sections in this chapter, reference is here made to a few of the sections and then to the corresponding section of H. R. 12, which relate to Alaska, Hawaii, and Porto Rico:

Section 3957. Governor: 3796, Alaska; 3925, Hawaii; and 4046,

Section 3958. Veto power: 3776, Alaska; 3914, Hawaii; and 4071, Porto Rico.
Section 3959. Secretary: 3797, Alaska; 3926, Hawaii; and 4049

Section 3969. Section; of the Section 3961. Legislative power: 3766, Alaska; 3884, Hawaii; and 4060, Porto Rico.

Section 3968. The legislature: 3766, Alaska; 3902-3910, Hawaii; and 4061-4062, Porto Rico.

Chapter 4 of title 25 contains sections in the code 3957 to 4038, inclusive. An examination of each one of these sections will demonstrate that there are but very few of them which can possibly be applied to our Territorial possessions.

50

These obsolete sections should be omitted from the code.

There is submitted herewith a memorandum prepared in the office of the Judge Advocate General of the War Department, which sets out with great care and minuteness the laws and conditions covering Alaska, Hawaii, Porto Rico, and the Philippine Islands, a careful examination of which should be made by anyone interested in this new compilation. It clearly demonstrates that much confusion, uncertainty, and litigation would necessarily follow the enactment of this bill.

Unanimous consent is asked that the memorandum above referred to be printed in full in the RECORD at the end of these remarks, and also that a letter from John Rustgard, attorney general of Alaska, in a report upon this bill (H. R. 12) to the governor of Alaska, be also printed in the RECORD at the end of these remarks.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered. (See Appendix 1.)

Mr. Rustgard, in concluding his letter, makes the following

These are a few of the objections to the new compilation which occur to me at the present time after, as I have stated, a cursory examination of the subject.

If Alaska could be left out of the new code, it would give me considerable pleasure to assist in compiling and revising the Federal enactments of a permanent nature touching this Territory. I am satisfied that such task must be undertaken in the near future. At any rate, an effort should be made to have some changes made in the compilation in question before it becomes a law.

PUBLIC PRINTING -- TITLE 84

Section 5769: This section provides that "every bill and joint resolution in each House of Congress at the stage of the consideration at which it was engrossed prior to November 1, 1893, shall be printed, and such printed copy shall take the place of what was known before that as, and shall be called, the engrossed bill or resolution," and so forth.

The law with respect to printing bills or resolutions as it existed prior to November 1, 1893, is not set out in the compilation, and therefore it can not be determined at what stage of passage the bill should be printed.

Section 5771: The provision in this section was superseded by the provision in section 5770. There is now no time "when there is no joint committee of the two Houses of Congress."

The section should, therefore, be omitted.

Section 5788: By the act of May 27, 1908 (35 Stat. 381, 382), Congress created the office of a Deputy Public Printer and defined his duties, and provided that he should perform the duties theretofore performed by the chief clerk. Among such duties were those set out in this section. The words "chief clerk" appear three times in this section as compiled. These words appear three times in this section as compiled. These words should be stricken out and the words "Deputy Public Printer" substituted therefor.

Section 5802: The same change should be made in this section as in section 5788 and for the same reason.

Section 5821: This section is obsolete and is superseded by the provisions of the sundry civil act of May 27, 1908 (35 Stat. 382), which is set out in the last paragraph of section 5786 of H. R. 12.

Section 5830: The word "otherwise" in the fifth line of this section should be changed to "hereinafter" to conform to exist-

Section 5870: The Superintendent of Documents and not the Secretary of State is authorized to sell copies of the pamphlet laws. The words "Superintendent of Documents" should be substituted for the word "him" in the fourth line of the section, inasmuch as the word "him" refers to the Secretary of Section 5872: The first sentence of this section is contained in section 1414 in the chapter on "Evidence" in the judiciary title, where it properly belongs, because it makes competent as evidence pamphlet copies of the statutes.

Section 5884: This section is obsolete. The Government's interest in the Union Pacific Railway ceased in 1807 and the last report was issued in 1898.

Section 5891: The third paragraph of this section and the second paragraph of section 5916 are duplicates.

The second paragraph of section 5016 should be omitted and the first part of the same section carried into section 5891, since it relates to matters which should be included in the Official Register.

Section 5898: While this section contains the provision regulating the size of the bulletins to be issued, it does not contain the provisions which authorize their publication and the number to be printed. That provision is found in the concurrent resolution of April 27, 1900 (31 Stat. 1992).

LOSIESUS TUESDA POR

Section 5905: The provision found in this section is an amendment of the law found in section 5900 and should be carried into that section. Standing as two separate sections, one contradicts the provisions in the other.

Section 5914: This section is dead matter, having been superseded by a later provision, which is set out in section 5836, which increases from 6 to 10 the number of copies of the daily CONGRESSIONAL RECORD to be furnished to the Library of Con-

Section 5943: This section has been superseded by the provision set out in section 5773.

Section 5969: This section is superseded by the act of May 12, 1910 (36 Stat. 366), which is set out in section 6614 of this bill.

Omitted provision: Section 5 of the act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. 631), authorizes the distribution at the beginning of the first session of each Congress to any Senator or Representative who may apply for them a copy of the Revised Statutes and the supplements thereto, one copy of each to be furnished during the term of service of the Member. This provision can not be found in H. R. 12.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION.

The Interstate Commerce Commission in a communication of considerable length, dated February 13 and addressed to the Hon. Edward C. Little, and a copy of which was sent to the Committee on Revision of the Laws of the Senate, withdrawing sundry objections made to the bill in a former letter and setting out various other objections to it, state as follows:

Out various other objections to it, state as follows:

We appreciate fully the magnitude and importance of this work. It is this very fact that leads us to refer to these matters. We do not mean to intimate that the code has not been most carefully and critically prepared. In a work of this character it is practically impossible to prevent inaccuracies. In an endeavor to be helpful rather than critical we have attempted to call attention to some matters which it seems to us should be further considered. Many of the doubts that griss can be settled only by Congress or by the courts which in the last analysis means the Supreme Court. The law under which the commission functions has been growing since its original enactment and thas taken many years to determine its application to various combinations of facts or circumstances. If the code is enacted, it may again require many years before the courts will have decided many of the questions which will arise. This would leave all concerned with the application of the laws relating to the commission's work in a state of uncertainty, in many instances, pending these court decisions. It is also conceivable that the construction placed by the courts upon some of the questions that will arise may vary from the intent of Congress. Congress, in the first instance, determines what the law shall be and the effect that it shall have. It would seem preferable in the enactment of the code that Congress rather than the court should resolve these doubts and that steps should be taken to eliminate such doubts as far as it is possible to do so.

Unanimous consent is asked that this communication from Unanimous consent is asked that this communication from the Interstate Commerce Commission be printed in full in the RECORD at the end of these remarks. It is worthy of serious consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered. (See Appendix 2.)

THE CAPITAL.

TITLE XXI-CHAP, II.

Section 3420: The law from which this section was taken was repealed and superseded by section 10 of the legislative appropriation act of March 1, 1919 (40 Stat. 1269), which appears as section 3462 of this bill.

Section 3435: This section is taken from the act of March 3. 1891 (26 Stat. 868), and does not state the law, as the act from which it is taken was expressly amended by the act of June 21, 1906 (34 Stat. 385), the last sentence of which reads as follows:

And hereafter no such permits shall be granted except upon special application and with the concurrence of all of said commissioners, and, where such extensions are to be placed upon buildings to be erected on land adjoining United States public reservations, the approval of the Secretary of War.

Section 3451: The latter part of this section, which provides that Rock Creek Park shall be under the joint control of the Commissioners of the District and the Chief of Engineers, was repealed by the act of July 1, 1918 (40 Stat. 650), which declares the park to be a part of the park system of the District of Columbia. As a result, this park is now under the exclusive control of the Chief of Engineers (see section 3448), and the Commissioners of the District have no control over the park. The last two sentences of section 3451 are in direct conflict with the law as set forth in section 3448, and they should, therefore, be stricken from the section.

Section 3466, determination of harbor lines: The act carried into this section was repealed by a provision in the river and harbor act of July 25, 1912 (37 Stat. 206), which reads:

The provisions of section 11 of the river and harbor act of March 3, 1899, are hereby made applicable to the Potomac and Anacostia Rivers; and hereafter harbor lines in the District of Columbia, or elsewhere on said rivers, shall be established or modified as therein provided; and all laws or parts of laws inconsistent with this proviso are hereby repealed.

The provisions of section 11 of the river and harbor act of March 3, 1899, which were made applicable to the Potomac and Anacostla Rivers, are found in section 6866 of the bill, in which appears the language from the act of July 25, 1912, above quoted.

The section should be omitted as being dead matter.

TITLE XV .- THE JUDICIARY. SECTION 988, PARAGRAPH THIRD.

Congress, by the act of October 6, 1917 (40 Stat. 395), attempted to amend paragraph third of this section by the addition of the words "and to claimants the rights and remedies under the workmen's compensation law of any State"; but the Supreme Court, in Knickerbocker Ice Co. v. Stewart (253 U. S. 149), held the provision unconstitutional, as being an attempt on the part of Congress to delegate its legislative power.

The words quoted should be omitted from the section as being dead matter.

Section 1209, paragraph third: Congress by the act of October 6, 1917 (40 Stat. 395), attempted to make the same amendment to this paragraph that it did to paragraph third of section 988, but it was likewise held void by the Supreme Court in the case above cited.

The attempted amendment is therefore dead matter and should be omitted from the paragraph.

HEADLINES TO THE SECTIONS.

Some of the headlines to the sections of the code are crude and meaningless. I cite a few:

Section 206. Mileage or neglect of messengers.
Section 1358. Husband or wife competent in bigamy.
Section 1358. Husband or wife competent in bigamy.
Section 1847. Appointment to above colonel; vacancy.
Section 1970. Superior punished if detached six years.
Section 2573. Disability by otherwise than in service.
Section 2933. Exchange of machines and things.
Section 4049. Sanitary bonds of municipal corporations, Section 4044. United States laws apply except on internal-revenueceptrs.

Section 4095. Harbors and navigable waters transferred. Section 6838. Construction of bridges or dams over waters.

Section 7250. Killing female or seal less than 1 year old.
Section 8204. The Lighthouse Establishment things.
Section 9693. Neat cattle and hides prohibited; penalty.

CITATIONS.

The citations are frequently inaccurate and incomplete.

I have many other letters which I should like to have placed in the Record, but I shall not now ask to have that done. I simply desire to say in conclusion that no attempt has been made to set out more than a part of the defects in this bill, consisting of errors of omission and commission. A number of the titles have not been touched or commented upon in any

To read this bill as one would a novel, as I said a moment ago, would require some three hours a day for two months.

A critical and complete examination of the entire compilation, with its 10,747 sections, would require the continued labor for many, many months of an able and experienced lawyer and a force of assistants familiar with this character of work. It can not be performed by novices.

It would have been a far pleasanter task to report this bill favorably than to point out its defects. Such course would have saved many weeks of hard work.

Its passage is not favored, solely because the bill in its present form is fatally defective, and, in my judgment, it can not be cured by amendment.

APPENDIX 1.

UNITED STATES SENATE, COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY, September 23, 1921.

Senator R. P. ERNST, United States Senate.

DEAR SIR: Inasmuch as the bill referred to in the inclosed letters from the Governor of Alaska and the attorney general of Alaska is in the hands of your committee, I beg leave to refer the communications to you for your consideration and attention.

Yours very truly,

KNUTE NELSON.

TERRITORY OF ALASKA, OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR, Juneau, September 9, 1921.

Hon. Knute Nelson,
Chairman Judiciary Committee,
United States Senate, Washington.

My Dear Senator Nelson: I am transmitting to you herewith a letter received by me from the attorney general of Alaska in which he calls my attention to House bill No. 12, now pending in the Senate and evidently in your committee, to codify, revise, and reenact the general and permanent laws of the United States, and which he believes in its Alaska provisions may produce complications in this Territory.

I am submitting his letter for your information and such consideration and action as you may think necessary.
With very good wishes, I am,
Sincerely yours,
Scott C. Bone, Governor,

TERRITORY OF ALASKA, OFFICE OF ATTORNEY GENERAL, Juneau, Alaska, September 2, 1921.

Hon. Scott C. Bone, Governor of Alaska, Juneau, Alaska,

Hon. Scott C. Bone,

Governor of Alaska, Juneau, Alaska.

My Dear Governor: Permit me to call your attention to House bill No. 12, entitled "A bill to consolidate, codify, revise, and reenact the general and permanent laws of the United States in force March 4, 1913."

This bill passed the House of Representatives May 16, 1921, and is presumably at the present time pending before the Senate.

As the title indicates, this is a bill not only to compile, but to revise and reenact the general and permanent laws of the United States in force March 4, 1919, and as such it purports to compile, revise, and reenact the Federal laws applicable to Alaska.

Under the circumstances, I have hastily examined the Alaska provisions and find that if this bill becomes a law it is likely to cause many complications in this Territory; section 3823 contains the provisions relative to the distribution of the Alaska fund, but I find that it omits the first part of section 7 of the act of February 6, 1909, entitled "An act relating to the affairs of the Territories" (35 Stat. L. 601). This is the provision which authorizes he 5 per cent of the Alaska fund formerly devoted to the care of the insane to be diverted to the used for schools.

Sections 3832 and 3833 contain the old provisions in regard to the establishment of school districts in and outside of incorporated towns, respectively. I have formerly suggested that these sections be repealed. But there is another enactment of importance which has been omitted, so far as I can find, and that is the act of March 3, 1917 (39 Stat. 1131), entitled "An act to authorize the Legislature of Alaska to establish and maintain schools, and for other purposes" (39 Stat. L., ch. 167). Unless this last act is embodied in the new revision of the Federal States it is likely that the Legislature of Alaska will have no authority over schools.

Some of the penal laws applicable to Alaska are embodied in the new codification, but I do not find that the penal code of 1899 is included. What effect this wi

Some of the penal laws applicable to Alaska are embodied in the new codification, but I do not find that the penal code of 1899 is included. What effect this will have I am not at present prepared to state.

I also find that a portion of the act of June 6, 1900, is embodied in the new compilation, but not all of it. I find by section 10742 of the proposed new codification it is provided:

"All acts of Congress passed prior to the 4th day of March, 1919, any portion of which is embraced in any section of this code are hereby repealed, and the sections herein applicable thereto shall be in force in lieu thereof; all parts of such acts not contained in this codification having been repealed or superseded by subsequent acts or not being general and permanent in their nature."

There is serious question under this provision whether or not a large part of our civil code, as well as our code of procedure, may be repealed by the bill here in question. This, of course, was not the intent. The act of June 6, 1900, entitled "An act making further provisions for civil government for Alaska, and for other purposes," contains both a political code, civil practice codes, and the civil code in one enactment. Only the political code is amended in the new compilation, but inasmuch as this political code is a part only of a larger act the question is whether or not the other part not included in the codification is repealed by the new enactment.

I also observe that amendments and modification of the civil code of the Territory enacted subsequent to 1900 are incorporated into the above-named compilation.

Personally I feel that the political code of Alaska should be rewritten, and inasmuch as the legislature of the Territory has made several amendments to the remainder, the latter should not be at the present time touched by Congress, as serious complications would thus arise.

The new compilation, for instance, contains the old provisions of 1900 concerning notaries public. These provisions have been to some extent amended by th

2 Supp. 1194). This reenactment would have the effect of legalizing any unauthorized act done by the governor prior hereto touching the same subject.

Section 3796 also contains a provision making it the duty of the governor to "from time to time inquire into the operation of any person, company, association, or corporation authorized by the United States, by contract or otherwise, to kill seal or other fur-bearing animals in the Territory, and any and all violations by such person, company, association, or corporation of the agreement with the United States under which the operations are being conducted, and shall annually report to Congress result of such inquiries."

This, of course, is antiquated, but a reenactment at this time might impose upon the governor duties which it was not the intention to require him to perform.

These are a few of the objections to the new compilation which occur to me at the present time after, as I have stated, a cursory examination of the subject. If Alaska could be left out of the new code it would give me considerable pleasure to assist in compiling and revising the Federal enactments of a permanent nature touching this Territory. I am satisfied that such task must be undertaken in the near future. At any rate, an effort should be made to have some changes made in the compilation in question before it becomes a law.

Yours truly,

JOHN RUSTGARD, Attorney General.

APPENDIX 2.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION, Washington, February 13, 1923.

Hon. RICHARD P. ERNST, United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: I herewith beg leave to inclose a copy of a letter I have this day sent to Hon. Edward C. Little.
Yours very truly,

JOHN J. ESCH, Commissioner.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION, Washington, February 13, 1923.

Hon. Edward C. Little, Washington, February 13, 1923.

Chairman Committee on Revision of Laws,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

Mx Dear Little: I have your recent letters commenting on former Chairman Clark's letter of February 26, 1921, to Senator Wolcott, with respect to H. R. 9389, Sixty-sixth Congress.

The explanatory statements made in that letter were probably not as explicit as they might have been, and thus have led to a misapprehension of the purpose of that letter. I take the liberty of quoting from it as follows:

"Some examination has been made of this bill, but it has been impossible to make that careful examination and criticism which its great importance demands. At this time I can only point out certain apparent errors and omissions which seem important and should be considered."

Upon reflection you will probably agree that we did not be considered."

importance demands. At this time I can only point out certain apparent errors and omissions which seem important and should be considered."

Upon reflection you will probably agree that we did not intend to suggest that the matters omitted should be included in the code. These omissions were merely matters which the hasty examination we were obliged to make of the code in the time available brought to light. We realized, of course, that the importance of the work demanded a most careful examination, and it was with the thought in mind that the effect of these omissions should not be overlooked rather than that the parts omitted should be included in the code that we directed attention to them. It seems only fair to all concerned that this explanation be made.

Before proceeding to a consideration of the effect of these omissions, permit me to refer to your comments with respect to the use of the commission's pamphlet prints of the law. We appreciate, of course, that these pamphlets are not authoritative texts of the law and, in fact, they are not intended to be. They do, however, contain the various acts, under which the commission functions, and there was less possibility of failing to consider some one of these acts in the check made of H. R. 9389 through use of the pamphlet print than through use of the Statutes at Large. Our pamphlet prints contain appropriate references to the Statutes at Large. In the preparation of this letter we have not relied upon our print but have consulted the texts of the various acts as contained in the Statutes at Large which cover the points discussed. It is necessary to refer frequently in this letter to various acts, and as it is easier to associate various acts by their usual designation in stead of the correct citation, we are using the former. For convenience these designations, together with the correct citations, are listed below: Cullom Act, or act to regulate commerce, approved February 4, 1887. (24 Stat. L. 379.)

Elkins Act, approved June 18, 1910. (36 Stat. L. 539.)

You will note from our letter of November 22, 1922, to Senator Eanst, copy of which you have, that our letter of February 26, 1921, relating to H. R. 9389, is equally applicable to H. R. 12. For convenience, H. R. 12 is hereinafter referred to as the code.

In taking up the various paragraphs contained in our letter of February 26, 1921, we will consider them in the order in which they there appear. We do not mean to imply that our position with respect to these various omissions is indisputable, but it does seem to us that the very fact that it may be disputable should lead the committee to exercise extreme care in omitting these portions of the act to regulate commerce as amended. T.

ACT TO REGULATE COMMERCE.

ACT TO REGULATE COMMERCE.

1. The eleventh and twelfth paragraphs in section 1, appearing on pages 10, 11, and 12 of the June, 1918, print, are omitted. These are contained in the act approved August 19, 1917 (40 Stat. L. 272). We withdraw these from further consideration. (See note A.)

2. The words "after January first, nineteen hundred and seven," appearing in the lifteenth paragraph of section 1 on page 13 of the June, 1918, print, are omitted. These are contained in section 1 of the Hepburn Act. They are withdrawn from further consideration. (See note B.)

3. The sixteenth paragraph in section 1, appearing on page 14 of the June, 1918, print, is omitted. This is contained in the act of February 17, 1917 (39 Stat. L. 922), relating to free transportation to the trustees of the Cincinnati Southern Railway. It is withdrawn from further consideration. (See note C.)

4. The words "From and after May first, nineteen hundred and eight," appearing in the seventeenth paragraph in section 1, on page 14 of the June, 1918, print, are omitted. These are contained in section 1 of the Hepburn Act. They are withdrawn from further consideration. (See note D.)

5. The second proviso in section 4, appearing on page 16 of the June, 1918, print, is omitted. This proviso, which reads "Provided further, That no rates or charges lawfully existing at the time of the passage of this amendatory act shall be required to be changed by reason of the provisions of this section prior to the expiration of six months after the passage of this act, nor in any case where application shall have been filed before the commission, in accordance with the provisions of this section, until a determination of such application by the commission," was added to section 4 of the act to regulate commerce, as amended, by section 8 of the Mann-Elkins Act, which amended that section "to read as follows." This proviso in a modified form is contained in the transportation act, 1920. Under the code would probably cover any situation arising prior to that date,

Panama Canal act. Under this paragraph the commission is authorized to permit the continuance of water-line operations by railroads under certain conditions. There seems to be no reason for omitting this paragraph from the code.

8. The following sentence appearing in the third paragraph in section 12, on pages 29 and 30 of the June, 1918, print, is omitted:

"The claim that any such testimony or evidence may tend to criminate the person giving such evidence shall not excuse such witness from testifying; but such evidence or testimony shall not be used against such person on the trial of any criminal proceeding."

This is contained in section 12 of the act to regulate commerce. It is withdrawn from further consideration. (See note E.)

9. The following proviso appearing in the second paragraph in section 15, on page 34 of the June, 1918, print, is omitted:

"Provided further, That until January 1, 1920, no increased rate, fare, charge, or classification shall be filed except after approval thereof, has been secured from the commission. Such approval may, in the discretion of the commission, be given without formal hearing and in such case shall not affect any subsequent proceeding relative to such rate, fare, charge, or classification."

It was added to this paragraph by section 4 of the act approved August 9, 1917 (40 Stat. L. 270). This law, which is general, was in effect on March 4, 1919, and continued in effect for nine months after that date.

OTHER AND RELATED ACTS.

August 9, 1917 (40 Stat. L. 270). This law, which is general, was in effect on March 4, 1919, and continued in effect for nine months after that date.

II.

OTHER AND RELATED ACTS.

1. That part of the amp appropriation act approved August 29, 4101 (39 Stat. L. 568, 649), and appropriation act approved rates of members of the National Guard travellogeration at reduced reacts of members of the National Guard travellogeration at reduced reacts of members of the National Guard travellogeration at reduced reacts of members of the National Guard travellogeration at reduced reacts of members of the National Guard travellogeration in the first four lines of page 55 of the June, 1918, print, is omitted.

Paragraph No. 9, under this heading, relates to the omission from the page 10 of the following, which is contained in the same act on page 65 of the June, 1918, print, is omitted.

"The President, in time of war, is empowered, through the Secretary of War, to take possession and assume control of any system or systems of transportation, or any part thereof, and to utilities the same, to the exclusion as far as may be necessary of all other material, and equipment, or for such other purposes connected with the emergency as may be needful or destrable."

In connection with the former, you say: "In the first place, it is from an appropriation act, which, of course, is not general and part in the section 10742 of the code reads, in part; "That the incorporation in this codification of any general and permanent provisions, taken from an act making appropriation * "" We did not intend to suggest that the appropriation act is included in the code of the foregoing quotation from the code would seem to preclude possibility of any doubt as to the inclusion of these provisions are general, and that the one relating to reduced rates for members when the supply to "any appropriation or any provision of a private, local, or temporary is the value of the inclusion of the provision and the code of the foregoing quotation from the code

"That under the immunity provisions in the act entitled 'An act in retation to testimony before the Interstate Commerce Commission, etc., approved February 11, 1893, in section 6 of the act entitled 'An act to establish the Department of Commerce and Labor, approved February 14, 1893, and in the act entitled 'An act to further regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the States,' approved February 19, 1903, and in the act entitled 'An act to further regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the States,' approved February 25, 1903."

The acts described are—"Compulsory testimony act, Twenty-seventh Statutes at Large, 443; act to establish Department of Commerce and Labor, Thirty-second Statutes at Large, 825; Elkins Act, Thirty-second Statutes at Large, 825; ilkins Act, Thirty-second Statutes at Large, 847; legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation act, Thirty-second Statutes at Large, 847.

The compulsory testimony act provided that no person shall be excused from restifying, etc., in any proceeding 'based upon or growing out of any alleged violation of the act of Congress entitled 'An act to regulate commerce,' approved February 4, 1887, or of any amendment thereof "".

The immunity provisions of the compulsory testimony act are contained in section 7034 of the code includes the unomitted portion of the immunity of witnesses act. As there stated, it reads: "Under the immunity of witnesses act which is contained in section 7034, although under the immunity of witnesses act which is contained in section 7034, although under the immunity of witnesses act which is contained in section 7034, although under the immunity of witnesses act which is contained in section 7034, although under the immunity of witnesses act which is contained to section of the code covering the immunity provisions in the four acts described the provision which restricts the immunity provisions of those four acts to natural persons.

We have not checked to ascertain whether the immunity provisions contained in the cod Stat. L. 450), appearing on page 105 of the June, 1918, print, is omitted. This omission is withdrawn from further consideration.

(See note F (b).)

9. This was considered in connection with paragraph No. 1 under this heading.

10. The Federal control act, approved March 21, 1918 (40 Stat. L. 1290), appearing on pages 106-117 of the June, 1918, print, is omitted. We note your statement that the matter in Fortieth Statutes at Large, 1290, is contained in section 6918 of the code. That section contains section 8 of Fortieth Statutes at Large, 1290, while the matter referred to by our letter of February 26, 1921, is the amendment of the Federal control act, contained in section 7 of Fortieth Statutes at Large, 1290.

The omission of the Federal control act and the amendment are withdrawn from further consideration. (See note G.)

The omission of the Federal control act and the amendment are withdrawn from further consideration. (See note G.)

11. The first paragraph of section 6 of the safety appliance act, approved April 14, 1910 (36 Stat. L. 298), appearing on page 125 of the June, 1918, print, is said to be omitted.

We note your statement that this is contained in section 7407 of the code.

We desire to call attention to another point in this connection which examination of section 7407 has disclosed. The first paragraph of section 8 of the safety appliance act approved April 14, 1910, provides that it shall be the duty of the Interstate Commerce Commission to enforce the provisions "of this act." The various sections "of this act" are contained in sections 7407, 7418, 7419, 7420, 7425, and 7426 of the code. Section 7407 in restating this provision refers to "this act" are contained in sections 7407, 7418, 7419, 7420, 7425, and 7426 of the Code of Laws of the United States." Section 7416, 7418, 7419, 7420, 7425, and 7426 of the Code of Laws of the United States. Section 7416, 7418, 7419, 7429, 7425, and 7426 of the Code of Laws of the United States. Section 7416, 7418, 7419, 7429, 7425, and 7426 of the June, quired of all railway common carriers, including the number, equipment, size, and construction of the cars necessary for the transaction of the business; the character and speed of the trains which are to carry the various kinds of mail; the service, both terminal and en route, which the carriers are to render; and all other information which may be material to the inquiry, but such other information may be filed at any time in the discretion of the commission."

The words at the end of the quotation, "but such other information may be filed at any time in the discretion of the commission," are retained in section 6686 of the code. With the omission of the words underscored they do not seem to have a definite meaning.

We note that our reference to section 7033 on page 9 of the letter of February 26, 1921, was in error and that the correction in section 7360 has been made. We also note that the duplication between sections 7057 and 7077 of H. R. 9389 has been corrected in H. R. 12.

We have covered the point raised on that page with respect to section 7076 more fully in this letter.

This concludes the consideration of the various points indicated in our letter of February 26, 1921. The examination of the statutes and of the code in connection with the preparation of our comments above has disclosed several other matters to which it seems desirable to direct attention.

The code is entitled "An act to consolidate, codity, revise, and recent

We have covered the point raised on that page with respect to section our letter of February 26, 1921. The examination of the statutes and of the code in connection with the preparation of our comments above has disclosed several other matters to which it seems desirable to direct. The code is entitled "An act to consolidate, codify, revise, and arenaet the general and permanent laws of the United States in force March 4, 1919. The effect of the word "revise" on some of the changes in the than is at present apparent.

For instance, section 7064 of the code restates section 1 of the Elkins Act, as amended. The first sentence of section 7064 reads as follows: Carrier subject to chapter 104. Twenty-fourth St tartor commendation of the code of the code of the code and the code are committed to be done by any director or officer thereof, or any receiver trustee, lessee, search, or person acting for or employed by such corporation, and upon conviction thereof it shall be adjusted to the code of the code of the code of the code and the

The only means of determining the corresponding sections of the code is by a comparison of the code with the act to regulate commerce and the various amendatory acts. That can be done with the aid of an adequate index. The courts may hold that under the provisions of the code the amendments made by the transportation act, 1920, to the act to regulate commerce, as amended, will apply as amendments to the corresponding sections of the code. But many difficulties will be encountered in the application to the code of these amendments.

Section 5 of the act to regulate commerce, as amended, affords a excellent illustration of some of these difficulties. The first paragraph of this section was enacted in the act to regulate commerce. Section 11 of the Panama Canal act specifically amended section 5 of the act to regulate commerce, as amended, by adding a new paragraph. These two paragraphs are contained in section 7077 of the code. Section 11 of the Panama Canal act also contains other paragraps under which the commission functions. The first of these additional paragraphs is contained in section 7058 of the code; the second, as indicated in paragraph No. 7 under "I. An act to regulate commerce "above, has not been found in the code; and the third is contained in section 7138. Section 408 of the transportation act, 1920, provides that the first and second additional paragraphs of section 11 of the Panama Canal act "are hereby made a part of section 5 of the interstate commerce act."

If it can be said that under the provisions of the code the amendments to the act to regulate commerce, as amended, made by the transportation act, 1920, are applicable to the corresponding sections of the code, in what manner will section 408 of the transportation act, 1920, are applicable to the corresponding sections of the code, in what manner will section 408 of the transportation act, 1920, apply? Will section 7058 of the code be repealed and the matter there appearing be made a part of section 7077, or will no change in the code i portant, but they are at least indicative of the doubts that arise in connection with the application under the provisions of the code of the transportation act, 1920, to the code. Who shall resolve these doubts?

We have never suggested and do not suggest now that the transportation act, 1920, or any other law passed subsequent to March 4, 1919, should be included in the code, but surely the code should not be enacted until the effect of its enactment upon such subsequent laws has been fully considered and effective provision made to eliminate all possibility of confusion as to what is the law under which various rights would accrue, liabilities be incurred, and causes of action arise.

We also note one correction which should be made in section 7078. That section corresponds to section 9 of the act to regulate commerce, as amended. It provides that any person claiming to be damaged by any common carrier may make complaint to the commission as 'here-inafter' provided. Section 13 of the act to regulate commerce, as amended, which contained the provisions with respect to the filing of complaints with the commission will become section 7035 of the code, and thus 'hereinafter' lis incorrectly used in section 7078 of the code. We appreciate fully the magnitude and importance of this work. It is this very fact that leads us to refer to these matters. We do not mean to intimate that the code has not been most carefully and critically prepared. In a work of this character it is practically impossible to prevent inaccuracles. In an endeavor to be helpful, rather than critical, we have attempted to call attention to some matters which it seems to us should be further considered. Many of the doubts that arise can be settled only by Congress or by the courts, which in the last analysis means the Supreme Court. The law under which the commission functions has been growing since its original enactment and it has taken many years to determine its application to various combinations of facts or circumstances. He the code is e

JOHN J. ESCH. Chairman.

NOTES. A.

Fortieth Statutes at Large, 272, amends section 1 of the act to regulate commerce, as amended, "by adding thereto the following." "The following" is the text of these paragraphs which relate to penalties for obstructing interstate commerce and to priority in transportation "during the war in which the United States is now engaged." This, of course, is a "temporary" law, and although the paragraphs form a part of section 1 they will not be repeated by the code, inasmuch as no part of this act is contained in the code.

These words are contained in the paragraph prohibiting, with certain exceptions, the issuance of passes, etc., and constitute an "effective date."

Although this is shown by the June, 1918, print as a part of section 1 of the act, it is not part of section 1, and as it is not a "general" law, it should not be included in the code.

These words establish the effective date of the commodities clause.

The provisions of the compulsory testimony act (27 Stat. L. 443) would seem to cover the portion omitted from section 7033 and are contained in section 7034 of the code.

(a) Section 9: The laws relating to the attendance of witnesses, etc., existing at the time the Hepburn Act was passed, are probably contained in the code. We do not now perceive the consequences that may attach to the emission of this section from the code.

(b) Section 10 repeals conflicting laws. Under section 10742 of H. R. 12 the Hepburn Act will be repealed. Will the repeal of this omitted repealing section revive prior conflicting laws? Section 4, chapter 1, title 1, rules and terms, reads:

"Effect of repeal: Whenever an act is repealed which repealed a former act such former act shall not thereby be revived, unless it shall be expressly so provided. The repeal of any statute shall not have the effect to release or extinguish any penalty, forfeiture, or liability incurred under such statute, unless the repealing act shall so expressly provide, and such statute shall be treated as still remaining in force for the purpose of sustaining any proper action or prosecution for the enforcement of such penalty, forfeiture, or liability."

This is a restatement of Sixteenth Statutes at Large, 431, approved February 25, 1871. Under this the repeal of the omitted repealing sections would not revive prior conflicting laws.

(c) Section 11 and the joint resolution: Under the code sections of the Hepburn Act included in the code are "reenacted" and "shall be in force in tieu thereof." It is possible that those sections may thus be held to become effective as of March 4, 1919, but it would seem that section 10743 of the code is sufficient to cover any situation that may arise by reason of this change.

Section 15 of the External control and many arise by reason of this change.

Section 16 of the Federal control act specifically provides that "this act is expressly declared to be emergency legislation." Its operation is limited to the period of Federal control. It will not be repealed by H. R. 12.

This is the provision of the Ekkins Act making the published rate the legal rate and any departure from such rate an offense "under this section of this act." The words in italics are omitted. Section 7064 of the code contains the words "under this section." There seems to be no reason for including the words "of this act."

The omitted part was added to section 1 of the expediting act (32 Stat. L. 823) by the amendment of that section made by Thirty-sixth Statutes at Large, page 854. Under the code the part omitted will be repealed. The amendment was approved June 25, 1910. It seems improbable, especially as this is the expediting act, that any proceeding pending on that date would now be pending. Even if such situation did exist, it is possible that it would be covered by section 10743 of the code.

The words omitted are contained in section 8 of the appropriation act approved August 24, 1912 (37 Stat. L. 539, 558). This was restated in section 6 of the appropriation act approved July 28, 1916 (39 Stat. L. 412, 431), which does not contain the words said to be omitted. Section 6 of Thirty-minth Statutes at Large, page 412, is contained in section 6518 of the code.

The words omitted are contained in section 2 of Thirty-ninth Statutes at Large, page 61, section 1 of which amends section 3 of Thirty-fourth Statutes at Large, page 1415. "to read as follows." As shown in the commission's print of June, 1918, they form a part of section 3 of the latter act, but, of course, they are not, although they do preserve the status que of matters arising under section 3 before it was amended. Section 10743 of the code would seem to cover the same situations, even though the omitted words would be repealed by section 10742.

APPENDIX 3.

WAR DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE JUDGE ADVOCATE GENERAL, Washington.

(Memorandum for Senator Richard P. Ernst.)

Subject: Chapter 4 of title 25 of "The Code of Laws of the United States."

States."

I have been asked to comment upon the question whether or not any or all of the provisions of chapter 4 of title 25 of "The Code of Laws of the United States." hereinafter referred to as the new code, have been superseded or rendered obsolete by other legislation.

The new code is entitled "An act to consolidate, codify, revise, and recnact the general and permanent laws of the United States in force March 4, 1919. Section 10742 thereof provides that—

"All acts of Congress passed prior to the 4th day of March, 1919, any portion of which is embraced in any section of this code, are hereby repealed and the sections herein applicable thereto shall be in force in lieu thereof; all parts of such acts not contained in this codification, having been repealed or superseded by subsequent acts or not being general and permanent in their nature: " " "."

BRIEF SKETCH OF THE ORIGIN AND HISTORY OF OUR TERRITORIAL

RRIEF SKETCH OF THE ORIGIN AND HISTORY OF OUR TERRITORIAL GOVERNMENTS.

The development of the United States began with the original thirteen Colonies. The territory outside came to be considered later. Although the charter limits of the different Colonies conflicted, the western boundary of the new country was limited to the Mississippi River by the treaty of peace with Great Britain in 1782. The claims of the Colonies to the western lands was ceded to the Confederation, thereby transferring to the confederate management the territory northwest of the Ohlo River, which territory was included in the treaty with Great Britain. The Confederate Congress on July 13, 1784, and is entitled "An ordinance for the government of the territory of the entitled "An ordinance for the government of the territory and the united States northwest of the Ohlo River." There were, after the United States northwest of the Ohlo River." There were, after the Water, in the Confederate Congress on July 13, 1784, and adoption of the Constitution, cessions to the United States of territory south of the Ohlo. Kentucky was admitted in 1792 as the first new State, it having been a district of Virginia and not having hed any northwest territory being called Indiana Territory, from which was cut off Illinois and Michigan Territories (2 Stat. 38, 173, 201, 428, 514; 3 Stat. 289, 399, 528).

Tennessee was ceded to the United States in 1789 and accepted by the act of April 2, 1799 (1 Stat. 109), followed by the act of May 26, 3 Stat. 289, 399, 528.

Tennessee and the line of 31' claimed by Georgia and South Caronessee and the line of 31' claimed by Georgia and South Caronessee and the line of 31' claimed by Georgia and South Caronessee and the line of 31' claimed by Georgia and South Caronessee and the line of 31' claimed by Georgia and South Caronessee and the line of 31' claimed by Georgia and South Caronessee and the line of 31' claimed by Georgia and South Caronessee and the line of 31' claimed by Georgia and South Caronessee and the line of CHAPTER IV, TITLE XXV, OF THE NEW CODE.

Chapter 4 of title 25 of the new code is entitled "Territorial provisions" and contains sections 3957-4938. Of these, 30 sections are essentially the same as the corresponding section of the Revised Statutes from which they were taken, and no reference to other statutes is given as the source of their origin. While 13 other sections are taken in the main from the corresponding sections of the Revised Statutes, reference is also made to various Statutes at Large. The remaining 39 sections refer only to the Statutes at Large for the source of their origin.

39 sections refer only to the Statutes at Large for the source of their origin.

All sections and parts of sections which have their origin in the Revised Statutes appear in Title XXIII, Chapter I, entitled "Provisions common to all the Territories," of the Revised Statutes. The Congress was then speaking as of January I, 1870, when we had no noncontiguous organized Territories. The District of Columbia was not then and is not now a Territory within the meaning of Chapter I, Title XXIII, of the Revised Statutes, for "it is well settled that the District of Columbia has no legislative power, it being merely a municipal corporation bearing the same relation to Congress that a city does to the legislature of the State in which it is incorporated." United States ex rel. Daly v. MacFarland (2S Dist. of Col. Apps. 552, 558, and cases cited).

The result is that Chapter IV, Title XXV, of the new code has been superseded in its entirety in so far as contiguous Territories are concerned by the admission of those Territories into the Union as States.

If the provisions of Chapter IV, Title XXV, of the new code are not applicable to or in force in either Alaska or the Hawaiian Islands or Porto Rico or the Philippine Islands, they are not applicable to or in force in any Territory or elsewhere. An examination into the nature, character, or kind of governments which have been set up in those Territories will not be out of place at this time.

Alaska remained from the date of the cession until 1884 an unorganized Territory, subject very largely to the provisions of the act of July 27, 1868 (15 Stat. 240). The provisions of that act were reproduced in sections 1954 to 1976, inclusive, of the Revised Statutes, under the title of "Provisions relating to the unorganized Territory of Alaska." Steamer Coquitlam v. United States, 163 U. S. 346

Alaska remained from the date of the cession until 1884 an uncranized Territory, subject very largely to the provisions of that act of July 27, 1888 (15 Stat. 240). The provisions of that act were reproduced in sections 1956 to 1976, inclusive, of the Revised Territory of Alaska." Steamer Ocquittum v. United States, 163 U. S. 144, and it is not only an organized Territory in a craniced Territory in Incorporated into the United States. Bassmussen v. United States, 1971 U. S. 516. The present organic act is that of August 24, 1912 (37 Stat. 512), which established a complete system of States, 1971 U. S. 516. The present organic act is that of August 24, 1912 (37 Stat. 512), which established a complete system of States, 1971 (1972), and the complete system of the Complete duced had been superseded by the Hepburn Act, of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. 585), so that the power was not vested in the Interstate Commerce Commission alone. Would the reenactment of the law as it now stands in section 5211 of the new code override this court decision so that the Secretary of the Interior would again take such power? Or would the simultaneous enactment of section 1 of the Hepburn Act by section 7036 of the new code continue the status quo? Whichever view is taken, there would be a contradiction between the two provisions which would probably result in litigation.

The general result of this short study may be summarized as follows:

The general result of this short study may be summarized as follows:

(1) The sections of the new code in Title XXV, Chapter II, dealing with statutory laws of the United States directly applicable to and in force in Alaska do not contain all of said laws nor do they appear to contain the specific provisions of law applicable to Alaska on March 4, 1919, as modified by the Territorial legislation of Alaska under the power given it by section 3 of the organic act of August 24, 1912. Consequently as such modifications have been made, it would be a question of statutory construction of considerable difficulty whether the enactment of the new code without containing such modifications would not in effect be a repeal thereof.

The provisions in the new code found in Title XXV, Chapter IV, are almost entirely covered by the specific provisions above referred to and only in isolated instances, if at all, will there be room for these provisions to operate in Alaska. Consequently, to determine whether or not one of these general provisions in Chapter IV is in force in Alaska, it would be necessary to ascertain by detailed examination of Chapter II whether or not there is a special provision for Alaska rendering the general provision in operation.

The results of my investigation in respect to Hawaii, Porto Rico, and the Philippine Islands will be set forth less in detail than that of Alaska.

The Republic of Hawaii continued in existence from the adoption of the joint resolution of July 7, 1898, until the passage of the organic act of April 30, 1900 (31 Stat. 141), when the "Territory of Hawaii" was organized. Hawaii v. Mankichi (190 U. S. 197). That organic act established a complete system of government, legislative, executive, and judicial. Chapter III of Title XXV of the new code, embracing sections 2874 to 3956, inclusive, reproduce those provisions of the statutory laws of the United States deemed by the revisers specifically applicable to and in force in Hawaii. Of these 83 sections not one contains a reference to the Revised Statutes; 60 sections contain reference only to the organic act of April 30, 1900, supra; 18 to that organic act and other acts; and 5 to acts other than the organic act. The five sections which contain no reference to the organic act have to do with public lands (sec. 3951), personal or movable property ceded to the United States (sec. 3952), assumption of the public debt by the United States (sec. 3952), assumption of the public debt by the United States (sec. 3952), assumption of the public debt by the United States (sec. 3952), assumptions," to Chapter II, "Hawaii." Ifind that by section 3878 of the new code 47 sections of Chapter IV, are expressly declared inoperative in Hawaii. The presumption, therefore, arises that the remaining 35 sections of Chapter IV were intended to be operative in Hawaii, and this presumption stands until there is found a special provision for Hawaii covering the subject matter of each of these 35 sections in Chapter III or elsewhere in the code. As to three sections, it appears that the general provisions of Chapter IV were intended to be operative in Hawaii, and this presumptions of Chapter IV are inapplicable by reason of the comprehensive language of the sections in Chapter III, The corresponding sections in the two chapters are as follows:

Chapter IV covered by Chapter III.

3968 4007 4012 3916

As to six sections there is a question of more doubt, for while the specific provisions in Chapter III deal more or less generally with the subject matter they do not cover it as comprehensively as in the first group. These sections are as follows:

Chapter IV covered by Chapter III. 3911 3916, 3939

Are there justices of peace in Ha-waii: No reference found to them in the laws of Hawaii.

3923 3891 3939, 3937, 3942 3945

3986 3939, 3945

There remain 26 sections of Chapter IV which do not appear to be covered either expressly or by implication in Chapter III. Of these 26 sections it seems clear that there is a reason why at least seven of them should not be included in Chapter III. These sections are as follows: Sections 4016-4018 apply only to the District of Columbia; section 4037 and section 4038 are general provisions of Federal law rather than Territorial provisions; while section 4009 is not included in the list of those sections not applicable to Hawaii under section 3878; said section 4009 is an amendment of chapter 818 (24 Stat. L., 170), and amendments of that chapter are expressly excelled from operation in Hawaii by the provisions of section 3878; section 4010 relates to the provisions of sections 4004 to 4008, inclusive, but sections 4004 to 4006 and 4008 are, by section 3878, not applicable to Hawaii and section 4007 is expressly covered by section 3916, and section 4009 is not applicable to Hawaii for the reasons just stated. There is, therefore, nothing on which section 4010 can operate.

There seems no reason for including the 16 sections running from 4019 to 4034 in Chapter III, because there are no coal mines, no mining, in the Territory of Hawaii to which these elaborate provisions could apply.

This leaves the provisions of sections 4014 4015, and 4020 decline.

in the Territory of Hawaii to which these elaborate provisions could apply.

This leaves the provisions of sections 4014, 4015, and 4020 dealing with the rights of aliens to hold land in Hawaii. By section 3929, taken from the organic act, it is provided that aliens can not acquire homesteads in Hawaii except under certain conditions. The compilers of the Revised Laws of Hawaii, 1915, on page 52 of their work query "whether Federal statutes (24 Stat. 476; 25 Stat. 45; 29 Stat. 618) relating to disabilities of aliens to hold land in the Territories in general are applicable to Hawaii," although that question does not appear to have been passed upon by the courts. Assuming the answer is in the affirmative, however, the general result of this hasty examination would seem to be that these three sections are the only ones that are not covered by the provisions of Chapter III, and that otherwise the omission of Chapter IV of Title XXV of the new code would not materially affect the present laws in force in Hawaii.

It is worthy of note that the local Legislature of Hawaii may have covered by legislation a part of the subject matter covered by some of the 35 sections of Chapter IV, for the legislature is given, by section 55 of the organic act, as amended by the act of May 27, 1910 (Sec. 3916 of the new code), legislative power extending to all rightful subjects of legislation not inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States locally applicable, except those subjects therein specifically mentioned. For instance, section 3937 provides that the judical power of the Territory shall be vested in one supreme court, circuit courts, and in such inferior courts as the legislature may from time to time establish. Whether the legislature has established courts of fustices of the peace, I do not know. However this may be, it would seem that the establishment of such courts would be a rightful subject of legislation. I pursue this point no further.

What sections, if any, of Chapter IV, Title XXV, of the new code, relating to the organization and functioning or procedure of the three departments of government in an organized Territory, apply to Porto Rico? An understanding of the kind of government which has been erected for the people of Porto Rico will aid in the solution of the question.

What sections, if any, of Chapter IV, Thic XXV, of the new code and the three defenting to the organization and functioning to procedure of the three defents to the organization of the three defents to the control of the process of the people of Porto Rico will aid in the solution of the erected for the people of Porto Rico will aid in the solution of the erected for the people of Porto Rico will aid in the solution of the Control of the Porto Rico is a completely organized Territory, sithough not incorporated into the Union. To the same effect is the holding in American Railroad Company of Porto Rico v. Didrichsen (227 U. S. 145). And in People of Porto Rico v. Didrichsen (227 U. S. 145). And in People of Porto Rico v. Didrichsen (227 U. S. 145). And in People of Porto Rico v. Didrichsen (227 U. S. 145). And in People of Porto Rico v. Didrichsen (227 U. S. 270) it was beld that the government established the process of the Control of the Revision of the Revis

I am not advised as to the number of other instances, if any, where local legislation in conflict with Federal legislation has been enacted by the Porto Rican Legislature.

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS

Again, what section, if any, of Chapter IV, Title XXV, of the new code relating to the organization and functioning or procedure of the three departments of government in an organized Territory are in force in the Philippine Islands. The status of the Philippine Islands under the new organic act of August 29, 1916 (39 Stat. 545), is that of a completely organized Territory—a possession of the United States not incorporated into the Union. Section 5 provides that the statutory laws of the United States hereafter enacted shall not apply to the Philippine Islands "except when they specifically so provide, or it is so provided in this act." Section 1 of the former organic act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. 691), provided that the provisions of section 1891 of the Revised Statutes of 1878 shall not apply to the Philippine Islands.

of the Revised Statutes of 1878 shall not apply to the Philippine Islands.

The Government of the Philippine Islands is now, like that of Porto Rico, a complete governmental organism, with legislative, executive, and judicial departments. The separation of powers is just as complete as that of the Federal and State systems. The act of August 29, 1916, supra, is the practical equivalent of a State constitution. Sections 6, 7, and 8 of this act give the Philippine Legislature general legislative power, subject to the limitations contained therein, including the power to amend, alter, modify, or repeal any law continued in force by the act, provided such action be not in conflict with the said act. And by section 31, "All laws or parts of laws applicable to the Philippine Islands not in conflict with any of the provisions of this act are hereby continued in force and effect." The other sections of the act make complete provisions for the organization and operation of the three great departments of the Philippine Government. The provisions of the new organic act of August 29, 1916, supra, are reproduced in Chapter II, Title XXVI, of the new code, except the provisions appear in some other section of the new code I do not know.

So it is clear that the operation of each and every provision in Chapter IV, Title XXV, of the new code, which has to do with the creation, organization, and functioning of the three great departments of government as such, are excluded from the Philippine Islands by the new organic act of August 29, 1916, supra.

One other observation: The act of Congress of February 6, 1905 (33 Stat. 690), limited the authority of the Philippine Government in lending financial aid to the railroad corporations operating in the islands to the guaranteeing of interest on bonds issued by such corporations. The new code.

By Act No. 3008, the Philippine Legislature authorized the Philippine to the guaranteeing of interest on bonds issued by such corporations. The pertinent provisions of that act are reproduced in section 4224 of the new code.

By Act No. 3008, the Philippine Legislature authorized the Philippine Government to guarantee the payment of both the principal and interest of certain bonds to be issued by the Manila Railroad Co. The legality of this guaranty was submitted to the Attorney General of the United States, and he held, on April 21, 1922 (33 Ops. Atty. Gen. 147), that the act of February 6, 1905, supra, was continued in force by the act of August 29, 1916, supra, and that:

"The provisions of Act No. 3008, above quoted, must be construed as amending section 4 of the act of February 6, 1905, supra, to permit the Philippine Government to guarantee the principal as well as the interest of bonds issued by the railroad companies organized pursuant to the laws of the said government."

While Act No. 3008 of the Philippine Legislature was enacted subsequent to March 4, 1919, it is cited for the purpose of showing that both the Philippine Legislature and the Attorney General of the United States are of the opinion that the former has the power to repeal or modify any act of Congress in force in the Philippine Islands, provided that such action on the part of the local legislature be not in conflict with the new organic act of August 29, 1916, supra. This is the only instance that has been called to my attention wherein the Philippine Legislature has modified an act of Congress, although I might point out that a few months after the approval of the act of August 29, 1916, supra, the Philippine Legislature passed, effective on October 1, 1917, Act No. 2711, known as the Administrative Code, which contains 2,768 sections. This Administrative Code was enacted "for the purpose of adapting it to the Jones law (act of August 29, 1916) and the reorganization act (Act No. 2666 of the Philippine Legislature). Whether any of the provisions of the Administrative Code, which contains 2,768 sections.

OBSERVATIONS COMMON TO BOTH PORTO RICO AND THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

There are indications which tend to show that chapter 4, title 25, of the new code is not applicable to Territories not incorporated into the Union, such as Porto Rico and the Philippines, for the chapter is entitled "Territorial provisions," and Porto Rico and the Philippines are not mentioned in section 3961 along with Alaska and Hawaii. True it is that both Porto Rico and the Philippines are mentioned in section 4038, but the proviso takes the Philippines out of the operation of the section. With this single exception in respect to Porto Rico, I find no provision in the entire chapter, as a result of this somewhat hasty study, which is applicable to either Porto Rico or the Philippines.

The most important question upon this branch of the Inquiry is, in my opinion, the one which was considered in Two hundred and seventy-second Federal Report 924 and in Thirty-third Opinions Attorney General 147. As I have heretofore indicated, I have not examined chapters 1 and 2, title 26, section by section and the related sections, for the purpose of pointing out just what provisions therein have been amended, modified, or repealed by the organic act of August 29, 1916, and March 2, 1917, supra, or by the local legislatures.

I note that the preamble to the organic act of August 29, 1916, is entirely omitted in the new code. No legal objection can be raised on this point. A great many of the Filipino people, however, consider this preamble as the most sacred and important declaration yet made by the Congress in so far as the islands are concerned.

CONCLUSIONS.

My sole purpose in submitting these comments and observations is the hope that they may be of some assistance to you in your study of this important legislation, knowing at the same time that the Congress will pursue its traditional policy of moving cautiously in such matters so as not to disturb the existing condition of things any further than is necessary under the circumstances. GRANT T. TRENT.

Table showing sections in Chapter IV, Title XXV, of new code, entitled "Territorial provisions," covered in Chapter II, Title XXV, entitled "Alaska," with comments on such sections as do not appear to be thus covered.

Chapter IV ("Territorial Provisions"),	Covered by section in Cha ter II (Alaska
3957	3796
3958 3959	8776 3797
3960	8797
3961 3962	3766	Can operate only prospectively and
3963	3783-3795	hence not applicable to Alaska in any event.
3964	3779	any event.
3965 8966	3771 3768
3967	3768
3968 3969:	3766 3773	Probably se construed.
3970	3807 8802	No militia in Alaska; hence not ap-sulfill distributed	111111111111111111111111111111111111111	plicable.
3973)	3771	See act of Apr. 28, 1904 (33 Stat. 529) re municipalities in Alaska
3974		(not in new code).
3975 3976	3767 3782
8977 3978	3782 3769
3979	3781
3980 3981	3783-3795 3800	是1600年1617年在1月1日 1518日 1119日
3982	3800
3983 3984	3802 3800
3985	3800-3801 3800-3801
3986 3987	3802	St. Despuis on the following the property
3988	3802 3802
3989	3801
3991 3992	3801 3804
3993	3805
3994	3807	Requirement of oath of office. This
3995 1		is covered by sec. 795, Comp. Laws, Alaska 1913. Salaries not to com-
3996		money until onth of office taken arried at least in	query as to whether 3996 appli- cable to Alaska in view of 3807?
3997 3998	3807 3807–3808
3999	0001 0000	No salary to officer of a Territory absent from duties; exception. Probably applicable to Alaska by 40000	977.6	reason of sec. 3807 of New Code.
4000	3704 3777
4002 4008	377T 3777
4004	3771	the second of the second of the second of the second
4005	3771 3771
4007	3771	and the contract of the same and the same
4008	3771	See act of Apr. 28, 1904 (33 Stat. 529), as to municipal indebted-
4009	3771	ness.
4010	3771
4011	3779 3771
4013		Ownership of real estate by religious societies, etc. Repealed by chap.
		12. Laws of Alaska 1913?
4014	THE REPORT OF THE	Ownership of real estate by aliens.
4015		These provisions still apply to Alaska (133 Fed, 216).
4016]	1	Provisions applicable to District of
4017	(Columbia.
4019	and algular	Mine inspection is covered in several Alaskan acts, the latest of which is chap 51, Session Laws of Alaska,
4021-4034		is chap. 51, Session Laws of Alaska,
4035	3821	1917.
4036	3765	Use of Federal penitentiaries by Ter-
4037		ritories—a general rather than a Territorial provision.
4038		Territorial provision. Shipping laws to apply to Alaska.
The state of the s	WITH THE PERSON NAMED IN	to apply to maska.

UNITED STATES VETERANS' BUREAU.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of Senate Resolution 466, creating a committee for the investigation of the Veterans' Bureau affairs. It is recommended by the committee which has been conducting that investigation, except that this resolution provides for a committee of three to report to the next Con-

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, I shall not object if it does not take any time.

Mr. ROBINSON. I hope there will be no objection to that resolution. I do not believe that it will require any considerable length of time to pass the resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Jones of Washington in the chair). Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution? The Chair hears none. The Secretary will read the resolution.

The resolution (S. Res. 466) was read, as follows:

Whereas complaints are being made against alleged delay by the Veterans' Bureau in the adjustment of claims for relief of invalid and disabled veterans of the World War under the various acts of Congress;

Veterans' Bureau in the adjustment of claims for relief of invalid and disabled veterans of the World War under the various acts of Congress; and

Whereas it is claimed that there has been great and needless delay in the construction of hospitals and in providing proper hospitalization for the relief of disabled veterans, as a result of which much unnecessary suffering exists; and

Whereas it is claimed that an unnecessarily large proportion of the appropriations made by Congress for the relief of the veterans is being improperly consumed in overhead expense, duplication of duttes, excessive rent of properties and quarters, and in the employment of an unnecessarily large number of agents, doctors, inspectors, instructors, and other persons; and

Whereas it has been charged that certain sales of surplus property belonging to the Government and under the supervision of the United States Veterans' Bureau were made improperly: Therefore be it

Resolved, That a committee consisting of three Senators, Members of the Skate, is authorized and directed to investigate the leases and contracts executed by the United States Veterans' Bureau or the Treasury Department for vocational schools and hospitals and for the purchase; rental, and sales of real estate and supplies used or to be used directly or indirectly by the Veterans' Bureau for the benefit of the veterans of the World War and the matters and conditions in the premises set forth and to report their findings, together with recommendations for the improvement of such conditions, to the next regular session of Congress. Such committee is authorized to sit during any recess of Congress and send for persons and papers, to administer oaths to witnesses, and to incur necessary expenses for clerical and other services not exceeding $20,000, which shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to. The preamble was agreed to.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I ask unanimous consent that S. J. Res. 288, authorizing the appointment of a committee to investigate the leases and contracts executed by the United States Veterans' Bureau, and for other purposes, which is the resolution reported by the committee, for a committee of five; be indefinitely postponed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it will be indefinitely postponed.

Mr. ROBINSON. Will the Senator explain why he did not ask for the passage of the committee resolution?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I can do that in a sentence, I think, Mr. President.

Mr. ROBINSON. I do not want to take up very much time about the matter.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. The committee resolution was a joint resolution, and the House has not acted on it. Therefore It is necessary for us to make this a Senate resolution if anything is to be done.

Mr. ROBINSON. Very well.

FREE ENTRY OF CERTAIN DOMESTIC ANIMALS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Jones of Washington in the chair) laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendments of the Senate to the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 422) permitting the entry, free of duty, of certain domestic animals which have crossed the boundary line into foreign countries, and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. McCUMBER. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, agree to the conference asked by the House, and that the conferees on the part of the Senate be appointed by the Chair.

The motion was agreed to, and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. McCumber, Mr. Smoot, and Mr. Jones of New Mexico conferees on the part of the Senate.

RECLASSIFICATION OF CIVILIAN EMPLOYEES.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8928) to provide for the classification of civilian positions within the District of Columbia and in the field services.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, I now ask that the reading of the bill be proceeded with.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the bill. The READING CLERK. The Committee on Civil Service has reported an amendment to the bill to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert:

SEC. 2. That the term "compensation schedules" means the schedules of positions, grades, and salaries as contained in section 13 of this act.

The term "department" means an executive department of the United States Government, a governmental establishment in the executive branch of the United States Government which is not a part of an executive department, the municipal government of the District of Columbia, the Botanic Garden, Library of Congress, Library Building and Grounds, Government Printing, Office, and the Smithsonian Institution.

The term "the head of the department" means the officer or group of officers in the department who are not subordinate or responsible to any other officer of the department.

The term "board" means the personnel classification board established by section 3 hereof.

The term "position" means a specific civilian office or employment, whether occupied or vacant, in a department other than the following: Offices or employments in the Postal Service; teachers, librarians, school attendance officers, and employees of the community center department under the Board of Education of the District of Columbia; officers and members of the Metropolitan police, the fire department of the District of Columbia, and the United States park police; and the commissioned personnel of the Coast Guard, the Public Health Service, and the Coast and Geodetic Survey.

The term "employee" means any person temporarily or permanently in a position.

The term "employee" means any person temporarily or permanently in a position.

The term "service" means the broadest division of related offices

The term "service" means the broadest division of related offices and employments.

The term "grade" means a subdivision of a service, including one or more positions for which approximately the same basic qualifications and compensation are prescribed, the distinction between grades being based upon differences in the importance, difficulty, responsibility, and value of the work.

The term "class" means a group of positions to be established under this act sufficiently similar in respect to the duties and responsibilities thereof that the same requirements as to education, experience, knowledge, and ability are demanded of incumbents, the same tests of fitness are used to choose qualified appointees, and the same schedule of compensation is made to apply with equity.

The term "compensation" means any salary, wage, fee, allowance, or other emolument paid to an employee for service in a position.

SEC. 3. That there is hereby established an ex-officio board, to be known as the personnel classification board, to consist of the Director of the Bureau of the Budget or an alternate designated by him. a member of the Civil Service Commission or an alternate designated by that commission, and the Chief of the United States Bureau of Efficiency or an alternate designated by him.

Mr. STERLING. In section 3, page 39, in line 16, of the com-

Mr. STERLING. In section 3, page 39, in line 16, of the committee substitute, after the word "alternate," I move to insert the words "from that bureau"; in the same line to strike out the words "from that bureau"; in the same line to strike out the word "him" and to insert in lieu thereof the words "the director"; in line 17, after the word "alternate," to insert the words "from that commission"; in the same line, to strike out the word "that" and to insert the word "the" in lieu thereof; in line 19, after the word "alternate," to insert the words "from that bureau"; and in the same line to strike out the word "him" and to insert the words "the chief of the bureau.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendments to the amendment will be agreed to.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, the Secretary has been reading the bill quite rapidly—

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, I think, perhaps, I know what the Senator from New Mexico has in mind, but if he will let the reading continue for the present until we get through with a couple of committee amendments we shall return to the portion of the bill he wishes to amend and an opportunity will be given for individual amendments.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. That will be satisfactory to me.

Mr. STERLING. Very well.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. For what purpose, however, is the bill now being read—for committee amendments?

Mr. STERLING. The bill is being read for committee amendments

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. If that be true, and if we are adopting committee amendments as we go along, then, from a parliamentary point of view, there would be no opportunity to amend the bill unless Senators should now offer their amend-

Mr. SMOOT. There will be ample opportunity for Senators to offer amendments to the committee amendment later.

Mr. STERLING. The amendments which Lam now offering are committee amendments.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Strictly speaking, I do not think so; but I am willing to act in accordance with the general understanding.

Mr. STERLING. I will see that the Senator from New Mexico has an opportunity to present his amendments.

Mr. CURTIS. Is it understood that after the amendments which are now being offered by the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. Sterling] on behalf of the committee to the pending substitute are agreed to it will then be open to amendments by Senators?

Mr. STERLING. Certainly. That is the understanding I have had all along.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered. The reading clerk resumed and continued the reading of the committee substitute, as follows:

The Director of the Bureau of the Budget or his alternate shall be chairman of the board.

Subject to the approval of the President, the heads of the departments shall detail to the board, at its request, for temporary service under its direction, officers or employees possessed of special knowledge, ability, or experience required in the classification and allocation of positions. The Civil Service Commission, the Bureau of Efficiency shall render the board such cooperation and assistance as the board may require for the performance of its duties under this act.

The board shall make all necessary rules and regulations not inconsistent with the provisions of this act and provide such subdivisions of the grades contained in section 13 hereof and such titles and definitions as it may deem necessary according to the kind and difficulty of the work. Its regulations shall provide for ascertaining and recording the duties of positions and the qualifications required of incumbents, and it shall prepare and publish an adequate statement giring (1) the duties and responsibilities involved in the classes to be established within the several grades, illustrated where necessary by examples of typical tasks, (2) the minimum qualifications required for the satisfactory performance of such duties and tasks, and (3) the satisfactory performance of such duties and tasks, and (3) the mate additional classes within the output of the content of the satisfactory performance of such duties and tasks, and (3) the mate additional classes within the output of the content of the satisfactory performance of such duties and tasks, and (3) the mate additional classes within the output of the promptly report the duties and responsibilities of new positions to the board. The board shall make necessary adjustments in compensation for positions carrying maintenance and for positions requiring only part-time service.

Sec. 4. That after consultation with the board, and in accordance with a uniform procedure prescribed by it, the head of each department shall allocate all positions in his department in the District of Columbia to their appropriate grades in the compensation schedules and shall be reviewed and may be revised by the board and shall become final upon their approval by said board. Whenever an existing position or a position hereafter created by law shall not fairly and reasonably be allocable to one of the grades of the several services described in the compensation schedules, the board shall adopt for therein, no change shall be made in the existing compensation.

4. If the employee is receiving compensation within the range of salary prescribed for the appropriate grade, but not at one of the rates fixed therein, the compensation shall be increased to the next higher rate.

5. If the employee is receiving compensation in excess of the range of salary prescribed for the appropriate grade or class thereof, no change shall be made in the existing compensation.

6. All new appointments shall be made at the minimum rate of the appropriate grade or class thereof, but the board may authorize appointments at rates above the minimum for the grade if such action is necessary in the interest of good administration.

7. In determining the rate of compensation which an employee shall receive, the principle of equal compensation which an employee shall receive, the principle of equal compensation for equal work irrespective of sex shall be followed.

SEC. 7. Increases in compensation shall be allowed upon the attainment and maintenance of the appropriate efficiency ratings: Provided, housever, That in no case shall the compensation of any employee be increased unless Congress has appropriated money from which the increased beyond the maximum rate for the grade to which his position is allocated. Nothing herein contained shall be construed to prevent the promotion of an employee from one class to a vacant position in a higher class at any time in accordance with civil-service rules, and when so promoted the employee shall receive compensation according to the schedule established for the class to which he is promoted.

SEC. 8. That nothing in this act shall modify or repeal any existing preference in appointment or reduction in the service of honorably discharged soldiers, sailors, or marines under any existing law or any Executive order now in force.

SEC. 9. That the board shall have powers of review and revision over uniform systems of efficiency rating established for the various grades or classes thereof, which shall

Mr. STERLING. On page 45, line 12, after the word "compensation," I move to insert the words "in accordance with civil-service rules," so that it will read:

a higher rate of compensation in accordance with civil-service rules.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment to the amendment is agreed to.

The reading clerk resumed the reading of the committee substitute, as follows:

stitute, as follows:

Provided, That nothing herein shall be construed to authorize or permit the transfer of an employee of the United States to a position under the municipal government of the District of Columbia, or an employee of the municipal government of the District of Columbia to a position under the United States.

SEC. 11. That nothing contained in this act shall be construed to make permanent any temporary appointments under existing law.

SEC. 12. That it shall be the duty of the board to consider what rates of compensation consistent with efficiency and economy in the Government service and the maintenance of a reasonable standard of living should be paid to the civilian employees of the Government; to make a study of the rates of compensation provided in this act for the various services and grades with a view to any readjustment deemed by said board to be just and reasonable. Said board shall, after such study and at such subsequent times as it may deem necessary, report its conclusions to Congress with any recommendations it may deem advisable.

SEC. 13. That the compensation schedules be as follows:

PROFESSIONAL AND SCIENTIFIC SERVICE.

PROFESSIONAL AND SCIENTIFIC SERVICE,

PROFESSIONAL AND SCIENTIFIC SERVICE.

The professional and scientific service shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to perform routine, advisory, administrative, or research work which is based upon the established principles of a profession or science, and which requires professional, scientific, or technical training equivalent to that represented by graduation from a college or university of recognized standing.

Grade 1, in this service, which may be referred to as the junior professional grade, shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to perform, under immediate supervision, simple and elementary work requiring professional, scientific, or technical training as herein specified, but little or no experience.

The annual rates of compensation for positions in this grade shall be $1.860, $1,920, $2,000, $2,100, $2,200, $2,200, and $2,400.

Grade 2, in this service, which may be referred to as the assistant professional grade, shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to perform, under immediate or general supervision, individually or with a small number of subordinates, work requiring professional, scientific, or technical training as herein specified, previous experience, and, to a limited extent, the exercise of independent judgment.

The annual rates of compensation for positions in this grade shall be applied to the second standard standa ment.

The annual rates of compensation for positions in this grade shall be $2,400, $2,500, $2,600, $2,700, $2,800, $2,900, and $3,000.

Grade 3, in this service, which may be referred to as the associate professional grade, shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to perform, individually or with a small number of trained assistants, under general supervision but with considerable latitude for the exercise of independent judgment, responsible work requiring extended professional, scientific, or technical training and considerable regions experience.

the exercise of independent judgment, responsible work requiring extended professional, scientific, or technical training and considerable previous experience.

The annual rates of compensation for positions in this grade shall be $3,000, $3,100, $3,200, $3,500, $3,500, and $3,600.

Grade 4, in this service, which may be referred to as the full professional grade, shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to perform, under general administrative supervision, important specialized work requiring extended professional, scientific, or technical training and experience, the exercise of independent judgment, and the assumption of responsibility for results, or for the administration of a small scientific or technical organization.

The annual rates of compensation for positions in this grade shall be $3,800, $4,900, $4,200, $4,400, $4,600, $4,800, and $5,000, unless a higher rate is specifically authorized by law.

Grade 5, in this service, which may be referred to as the senior professional grade, shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to act as assistant head of a large professional or scientific organization, or to act as administrative head of a major subdivision of such an organization, or to serve as consulting specialist, or independently to plan, organize, and conduct investigations in original research or development work in a professional, scientific, or technical field.

The annual rates of compensation for positions in this grade shall be $5,000, $5,000, $6, search of development work in a professional, scientific, or technical field.

The annual rates of compensation for positions in this grade shall be $5,200, $5,400, $5,800, $5,800, and $6,000, unless a higher rate is specifically authorized by law.

Grade 6, in this service, which may be referred to as the chief professional grade, shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to act as the scientific and administrative head of a major professional or scientific bureau, or as professional consultant to a department head or a commission or board dealing with professional, scientific, or technical problems.

The annual rates of compensation for positions in this grade shall be $6,000, $6,500, $7,000, and $7,500, unless a higher rate is specifically authorized by law.

Grade 7 in this service, which may be referred to as the special professional grade, shall include all classes of positions the duties and requirements of which are more responsible and exacting than those described in grade 6.

The annual rates of compensation for positions in this grade shall be $7,500, unless a higher rate is specifically authorized by law.

Subprofessional Service.

SUBPROFESSIONAL SERVICE.

The subprofessional service shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to perform work which is incident, subordinate, or preparatory to the work required of employees holding positions in the professional and scientific service, and which requires or involves professional, scientific, or technical training of any degree inferior to that represented by graduation from a college or university of recognized standing.

Grade 1 in this service, which may be referred to as the minor subprofessional grade, shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to perform, under immediate supervision, the simplest routine work in a professional, scientific, or technical organization.

The annual rates of compensation for positions in this grade shall be $900, $900, $1,020, $1,080, $1,140, $1,200, and $1,290.

Grade 2 in this service, which may be referred to as the undersupprofessional grade, shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to perform, under immediate supervision, assigned subordinate work of a professional, scientific, or technical character, requiring limited training or experience but not the exercise of independent judgment.

The annual rates of compensation for positions in this grade shall be $1,240, $1,200, $1,320, $1,380, $1,440, and $1,500, and professional grade, shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to perform, under immediate supervision, subordinate work of a professional, scientific, or technical character, requiring considerable training or experience, but not the exercise of independent judgment.

The annual rates of compensation for positions in this grade shall be $1,320, $1,330, $1,440, $1,500, $1,620, and $1,680.

Grade 4 in this service, which may be referred to as the assistant subprofessional grade, shall include all classes of positions the duties of work of a professional, scientific, or technical character requiring considerable training or experience, and, to a limited extent, the exercise of independent judgment.

The annual rates of compensation for positions in this grade shall be $1,500, $1,560, $1,620, $1,680, $1,740, $1,800, and $1,800.

Grade 5 in this service, which may be referred to as the assistant subprofessional grade, shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to perform, under immediate or general supervision, subprofessional grade, shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to perform, under immediate or general supervision, subprofessional grade, shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to perform, under immediate or general supervision, subprofessional grade, shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to perform

CLERICAL, ADMINISTRATIVE, AND FISCAL SERVICE

CLERICAL, ADMINISTRATIVE, AND FISCAL SERVICE.

The clerical, administrative, and fiscal service shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to perform clerical, administrative, or accounting work, or any other work commonly associated with office, business, or fiscal administration.

Grade 1 in this service, which may be referred to as the under clerical grade, shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to perform, under immediate supervision, the simplest routine office work, such as the following:

Accounting and auditing: Entering in registers, cashbooks, or journals, from verified original documents, without classification or distribution, or with distribution in columns according to classification indicated on original documents. (Loughand as distinguished from machine work.)

Editorial and correspondence: Comparing printed or typewritten mat-r with copy and indicating discrepancies.

Mails and files: Sorting papers numerically or alphabetically.

Indexing papers by names; filing by names or numbers.

Filing punch cards where the work requires merely the ability to read e cards.

Searching indexes.

e cards.
Searching indexes (numeric or alphabetic).
Reading and classifying mail for distribution where the classification is large office divisions.
Miscellaneous: Operating telephone switchboard.
Sorting and counting valuable paper, stamps, currency, coin, coupons.

sorting and counting variable paper, stamps, currency, ton, exceptions, etc.

Verifying shipping lists of currency, securities, etc.

Hand copying from simple text; addressing envelopes.

Filling acknowledgment and similar forms.

Verifying bills, checks, notices, statements, letters, etc., with records from which prepared.

Proof reading and correcting errors in embossed plates and stencils.

Office appliance operation: Operating addressing machines (addressograph, Belknap, Elliott, etc.), or duplicating machines, mimeograph, etc.).

Operating listing adding machines (Burroughs, Dalton, Sunstrand, etc.).

Punching cards for tabulating machines (Hollerith, Powers, Peirce, Punching cards for tabulating machines (Hollerith, Powers, Peirce, etc.).

Embossing names, addresses, and other information on metal plates for use in addressing machines (graphotype).

Operating punch-card sorting machines (Hollerith, Powers, etc.).

Stenography and typing: Typing from plain copy nontechnical material, with little or no tabular matter.

Preparing stencils for addressing machine (Belknap).

The annual rates of compensation for positions in this grade shall be $1,140, $1,200, $1,260, $1,320, $1,380, $1,440, and $1,500.

Grade 2 in this service, which may be referred to as the junior clerical grade, shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to perform, under immediate supervision, assigned office work requiring training or experience but not the exercise of independent judgment, such as the following:

Accounting and auditing: Operating bookkeeping machines for register, journal, or billing work (Underwood, Remington-Wahl, Eilliottfisher, etc.).

Entering in registers, cashbooks, or journals, from verified original documents, with distribution in columns or otherwise according to a classification made by the entry clerk himself. (Longhand as distinguished from machine work.)

Editorial and correspondence: Reviewing circulars, letters, and reports for errors in grammar, punctuation, and spelling.

Selecting correspondence forms and filling in appropriate items.

Mails and files: Indexing papers by names and indicating subject matter.

matter.

matter.

Searching subject files for specific information.

Miscellaneous: Copying tabular matter in longhand.

Office appliance operation: Operating nonlisting machines, principally addition only (comptometer, Burroughs calculator, etc.).

Operating automatic-feed addressographs.

Operating tabulating machines (Hollerith, Powers, etc.).

Setting type for multigraph.

Personnel: Keeping time records of personnel and preparing pay rolls.

Purchases and supplies: Receiving and issuing supplies and stores. Statistical: Selecting and transcribing figures from reports, publications, and documents to tabulation sheets.

Making simple statistical tabulations that require no knowledge of the subject matter, but merely the following of simple instructions. Coding schedules, questionnaires, reports, or other documents for use in punching tabulation cards.

Stenography and typing: Typing from plain copy in which technical or unusual words, expressions, and phrases occur frequently; typing involving tabular matter where operator is responsible for arrangement.

ment.

Preparing stencils for mimeograph.

Performing ordinary stenographic work, such as taking in shorthand and transcribing routine nontechnical dictation.

The annual rates of compensation for positions in this grade shall be $1,320, $1,380, $1,440, $1,500, $1,660, $1,620, and $1,680.

Grade 3 in this service, which may be referred to as the assistant clerical grade, shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to perform, under immediate or general supervision, assigned office work requiring training and experience and knowledge of a specialized subject matter or the exercise of independent judgment or to supervise a small section performing simple cierical operations.
The positions of employees performing the following duties, and positions requiring similar qualifications of their incumbents, shall be allocated to this grade.

Accounting and auditing: Operating bookkeeping machines for ledger and statement work (Underwood, Remington-Wahl, Burroughs, ElliottFisher, etc.).

Pisher, etc.).
Posting detail ledgers from registers, cashbooks, or journals or from separate posting media, locating errors in such ledgers and taking trial balances thereof. (Longhand as distinguished from machine

Making routine examination of fiscal officers' accounts where a limited knowledge of regulations, comptroller's decisions, and minor points of law is required.

Examining and settling property returns and accounts, including passing upon the validity of papers filed as vouchers to property accounts.

Auditing passenger transportation claims and bills not involving land grants and express claims and bills.

Receiving cash or cash items and keeping primary accounts thereof. Editorial and correspondence: Preparing correspondence in cases which require little special knowledge and in which the facts are clear and the action to be taken is obvious.

Briefing or digesting simple cases for action by administrative officers.

nnd the action to be taken is obvious.

Briefing or digesting simple cases for action by administrative officers.

Legal: Performing clerical work in connection with the proceedings of cases instituted before a court, board, or other similar body, such as keeping dockets of hearings, petitions, appeals, etc.

Mails and files: Indexing or marking papers for filing by subjects according to a simple system.

Reading and classifying mail embracing a wide variety of subjects, which must be routed to many groups of employees, or where the work and organization of the office is involved and overlapping of functions between divisions is frequent.

Miscellaneous: Operating telegraph.

Performing routine clerical work in connection with receiving, sorting, storing, issuing, and shipping currency, bonds, securities, and valuable stamped paper, and keeping records of receipts, withdrawals, and balances thereof.

Office appliance operation: Operating computing and calculation machines, involving subtraction, multiplication, and division (comptometer, Burroughs calculator, Monroe Millionaire, Marchant, etc.).

Personnel: Performing clerical work in connection with personnel administration, involving the application of civil-service and departmental rules and regulations.

Purchases and supplies: Reviewing requisitions for supplies where the work requires the exercise of little discretion.

Secretarial: Performing the work of secretarial clerk to the head of a minor branch of the service.

Statistical: Examining simple statistical reports or schedules to determine their accuracy and completeness and preparing them for tabulation.

Stenography and typing: Having direct supervision over a small group of typists.

Performing stenographic work of more than average difficulty, such as taking in shorthand and transcribing routine dictation in which technical words, expressions, and phrases occur frequently or taking in shorthand and transcribing dictation with constant variation of subject matter (not routine) but containing few technical words, expressions, and phrases.

The annual rates of compensation for positions in this grade shall be $1,500, $1,560, $1,620, $1,620, $1,740, $1,800, and $1,860.

Grade 4 in this service, which may be referred to as the main clerical grade, shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to perform, under immediate or general supervision, responsible office work requiring training and experience, the exercise of independent judgment or knowledge of a specialized subject matter, or both, and an acquaintance with office procedure and practice, or to supervise a small stenographic section or a small section performing clerical operations of corresponding difficulty. The positions of employees performing the following duties, and positions requiring similar qualifications of their incumbents, shall be allocated to this grade.

Accounting and auditing: Under a simple accounting system, journalizing routine transactions (or posting them directly to a ledger) where the bookkeeper must use judgment as to the accounts affected posting of general ledger, locating errors therein, and taking trial balance thereof. (Longhand as distinguished from machine work.)

Analyzing personal or partnership income-tax returns not involving a field sudit in order to determine the trasble income under the Provincial and correspondence: Edition ganuscripts for form and marking them for the printer, indicating style of type, headings, etc.; reading and revising gailey and page proof; preparing title pages, tables of contents, indexes, etc.

Reviewing letters, telegrams, reports, etc., composed by correspondence clerks and others; criticizing such material as to general appearance, style, diction, and grammatical construction to see that it conveys the correct information in as concise form as possible.

Briefing or digesting cases of moderate complexity for action by administrative officers.

Malls and files: indexing or marking papers for filing by subjects according to a system of moderate complexity.

Being responsible for opening, reading, routing, dispatching, classifying, indexing, and filing mail in a small Government organization where the responsibility for such functions is vested in one position, and supervising or administering a large storeroom or warehouse.

Personnel: Having direct supervision over the work of a group of clerks engaged on time records and the preparation of pay rolls.

Personnel: Having direct supervision over the work of supervision of administering a large storeroom or warehouse.

S

Making examinations of fiscal officers' accounts where a thorough knowledge of regulations, comptroller's decisions, and minor points of law is involved.

Analyzing corporation income and profits tax returns for the purpose of determining the taxable income under the Federal income tax laws and the tax liability.

Analyzing personal and partnership income and profits tax returns, which have been given a field audit, for the purpose of determining the taxable income under the Federal income tax laws and the tax liability.

Directing and having independent responsibility for the receiving and paying of money in a small bureau or establishment where the disbursements relate almost exclusively to salaries and travel.

Editorial and correspondence: Conducting correspondence in cases of moderate complexity requiring considerable special knowledge, in which the determination of the facts and the action to be taken involves the exercise of judgment and discretion.

Legal: Performing responsible clerical work in connection with the proceedings of cases instituted before a court, board, or other similar body, such as acknowledging, classifying, and docketing appeals, petitions, and other documents and referring them to an adjudicating organization.

Passing upon claims or other matters, disposition of which involves knowledge of particular laws, regulations, and office procedure, but not a general legal knowledge; conducting correspondence arising in connection therewith.

Miscellaneous: Having general supervision over a group of counters of money and securities and directing distribution of the work.

Personnel: Having general supervision over a central time record and pay-roll organization involving the management of a large group engaged on time records and pay rolls.

Performing work involving supervisory responsibility or the exercise of independent judgment and discretion in connection with the personnel administration of a Government organization; administering and applying, or assisting in the administration and

Grade 6 in this service, which may be referred to as the principal clerical grade, shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to perform, under general supervision, exceptionally difficult and responsible office work, requiring extended training and experience, the exercise of independent judgment or knowledge of a specialized and complex subject matter, or both, and a thorough knowledge of office procedure and practice, or to serve as the recognized authority or adviser in matters requiring long experience and an exceptional knowledge of the most difficult and complicated procedure or of a very difficult and complex subject, or to supervise a large or important office organization engaged in difficult or varied work. The positions of employees performing the following duties, and positions requiring similar qualifications of their incumbents, shall be allocated to this grade:

Accounting and auditing: Under a complex accounting system, journalizing transactions (or posting them directly to a ledger) when the bookkeeper must use judgment as to the accounts affected, posting of general ledger, locating errors therein, taking trial balance thereof, and preparing periodical and special financial statements, such as balance sheets and operation statements.

Assisting in the designing and installing of accounting systems of a complex nature requiring a knowledge of accounting theory and practice.

Auditing transportation claims and bills, verifying transportation rates and charges invalving allocations.

practice.

Auditing transportation claims and bills, verifying transportation rates and charges involving allowances, divisions, or land grants, and handling correspondence in connection therewith.

Supervising the work of auditing and settling claims and accounts in a section of an auditor's office or performing the more difficult work in a section of an auditor's office or performing the more dimensional of the section.

Editorial and correspondence: Editing and revising material for public distribution, advising with authors as to arrangement of materials, and laying out copy for printers guidance. Preparing summaries of reports for the press.

Briefing and digesting cases of exceptional complexity for action by administrative officers.

Conducting correspondence in complex cases requiring much special

Briefing and digesting cases of exceptional complexity for action by administrative officers.

Conducting correspondence in complex cases requiring much special knowledge, in which the determination of the facts and the action to be taken requires independent judgment and discretion.

Mails and files: Indexing or marking papers for filing according to a complex subject system embracing a great variety of subjects.

Having responsible supervision over a large mail and file division where the subject matter of the correspondence is of a varied nature, and devising methods for the expeditious conduct of the work.

Miscellaneous: Having direct charge of a large stock vault or a group of vaults and supervising a group of clerks receiving, storing, safeguarding, issuing, and shipping securities, keeping records and indexes thereof, taking inventories, and making reports as required, where the transactions are numerous, and conducting correspondence relating to the work.

Supervising the work of a large group engaged in the distribution of publications, devising methods of facilitating and expediting the work, and making necessary reports and conducting correspondence.

Personnel: Having general supervision over the personnel office of a small Government organization.

Purchases and supplies: Passing upon requisitions for printing and binding and supervising the distribution or sale of publications, including maps, charts, and departmental forms and blanks, in a department or large bureau.

Stenography and typing: Making verbatim reports of the proceedings of formal conferences and meetings.

The annual rates of compensation for positions in this grade shall be $2,100, $2,200, $2,300, $2,400, $2,500, $2,600, and $2,700.

Grade 7 in this service, which may be referred to as the assistant administrative grade, shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to perform, under general supervision, responsible office work along specialized and technical lines, requiring specialized training and experience an transportation.

Accounting and auditing: Settling the accounts of common carriers on the basis of commercial rates less the proper land-grant deductions. Revising disbursing officers' accounts involving payments for freight transportation.

Directing and having independent responsibility for the receiving and paying of money in a small bureau or establishment where the disbursements are somewhat varied.

Analyzing consolidated corporation income and profits tax returns not involving a field audit for the purpose of determining the taxable income under the Federal income tax laws and the tax liability, (The position of an employee who has been engaged upon these duties for a period of not less than one year, and whose responsibilities have increased proportionately may, in the discretion of the head of the department concerned, be placed in grade 9, subject, however, to the approval of the Personnel Classification Board.)

Editorial and correspondence: Supervising and laying out the work of a group of clerks engaged in conducting important or specialized correspondence.

correspondence.

of a group of clerks engaged in conducting important or specialized correspondence.

Legal: Supervising the work of a group engaged in receiving, acknowledging, classifying, docketing, indexing, filing, examining, and assigning appeals, pleadings, petitions, or other documents used in the proceedings of cases instituted before a Government board, commission, or other body possessing powers of adjudication; conferring with attorneys, plaintiffs, and others, and advising them as to the practice, procedure, and preparation of cases; deciding matters of practice and procedure; and similar duties.

Miscellaneous: Having direct charge of a large vault or group of vaults containing large quantities of securities, and supervising a group of clerks receiving, storing, safeguarding, issuing, and shipping securities held in trust by the United States, making substitutions and exchanges, clipping coupons and accounting therefor, keeping records and indexes thereof, taking inventories and making reports as required where the transactions are numerous, and conducting correspondence relating to the work.

Personnel: Performing the duties of assistant to a personnel officer in a large Government establishment where the personnel work requires a large force.

Purchase and supplies: Having responsibility for the procurement, receiving storage, issue and maintenance of supplies and equipment of a a large force.

Purchase and supplies: Having responsibility for the procurement, receipt, storage, issue, and maintenance of supplies and equipment of a varied nature in an executive department, large bureau, or independent establishment.

Secretarial: Performing the work of private secretary to the head of a bureau having jurisdiction over a group of major divisions or subdivisions.

visions.

The annual rates of compensation for positions in this grade shall be $2,400, $2,500, $2,600, $2,700, $2,800, $2,900, and $3,000.

Grade 8 in this service, which may be referred to as the associate administrative grade, shall include all classes of positions the dutles of which are to perform, under general supervision, difficult and responsible office work along specialized and technical lines, requiring specialized training and experience and the exercise of independent judgment, or to supervise a large or important office organization engaged in work involving specialized training on the part of the employees.

of which are to perform, under general supervision, difficult and vesponsible office work along specialized and technical lines, requiring specialized training and experience and the exercise of independent judgment, or to supervise a large or important office organization engaged in work involving specialized training on the part of the employees.

The annual rates of compensation for positions in this grade shall be $2,700, $2,900, $3,000, $3,100, $3,200, and $3,300.

Grade 9 in this service, which may be referred to as the full administrative grade, shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to perform, under general supervision, exceptionally difficult and responsible office work along specialized and technical lines, requiring the service of independent judgment, or as chief clerk, to supervise the general business operations of a large independent establishment or a major burseau or division of an executive department, or to supervise a large or important office organization engaged in work involving technical training on the part of the employees.

The annual rates of compensation for positions in this grade shall be $3,000, $3,100, $3,200, $3,300, $3,400, $3,500, and $3,500.

Grade 10 in this service, which may be referred to as the senior of which are to perform, under general supervision, the most difficult equiring extended training, considerable experience, and the exercise of independent judgment, or to supervise a large or important office organization engaged in work involving considerable technical training and experience on the part of the employees.

The annual rates of compensation for positions in this grade shall be $3,300, $3,400, $3,500, $3,500, $3,00, and $3,900.

Grade 11 in this service, which may be referred to as the assistant of independent judgment, or to supervise a large or important office organization engaged in work involving extended training and considerable experience in the part of the employees.

The annual rates of compensation for positions in this g

CUSTODIAL SERVICE.

CUSTODIAL SERVICE.

The custodial service shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to supervise or to perform manual work involved in the custody, maintenance, and protection of public buildings, premises, and equipment, the transportation of public officers, employees, or property, and the transmission of official papers.

Grade 1, in this service, which may be referred to as the junton messenger grade, shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to run errands, to check parcels, or to perform other light manual or mechanical tasks with little or no responsibility.

The annual rates of compensation for positions in this grade shall be $600, $630, $690, $720, $750, and $780.

Grade 2, in this service, which may be referred to as the office-laborer grade, shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to handle desks, mail sacks, and other heavy objects and to perform similar work ordinarily required of unskilled laborers; to operate elevators; to clean office rooms; or to perform other work of similar character.

vators; to clean omce rooms; or to perform other work of similar character.

The annual rates of compensation for positions in this grade shall be $900, $960, $1,020, $1,080, and $1,140: Provided, That charwomen working part time be paid at the rate of 40 cents an hour and head charwomen at the rate of 45 cents an hour.

Grade 3, in this service, which may be referred to as the minor custodial grade, shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to perform, under immediate supervision, custodial or manual office work with some degree of responsibility, such as guarding office or storage buildings; operating paper-cutting, canceling, envelope-opening or envelope-sealing machines; firing and keeping up steam in boilers used for heating purposes in office buildings, cleaning boilers, and oiling machinery and related apparatus; operating passenger or freight automobiles; packing goods for shipment: supervising a large group of charwomen; running errands and doing light manual or mechanical tasks with some responsibility; carrying important documents from one office to another; or attending the door and private office of a department head or other public officer.

The annual rates of compensation for positions in this grade shall be $1,020, $1,080, $1,140, $1,200, and $1,260.

Grade 4 in this service, which may be referred to as the understodial grade, shall include all classes of postitions the duties of which are to perform, under general supervision, custodial work of a responsible character, such as supervising a small force of unskilled laborers; directly supervising a small detachment of watchmen or responsible character, such as supervising a small force of unskilled laborers; directly supervising a small detachment of watchmen or building guards; firing and keeping up steam in heating apparatus and operating the boilers and other equipment used for heating purposes; or performing general semimechanical new or repair work requiring some skill with hand tools.

The annual rates of compensation for positions in this grade shall be $1,140, $1,200, $1,260, $1,320, $1,380, $1,440, and $1,500.

Grade 5 in this service, which may be referred to as the junior custodial grade, shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are general supervision over a small force of watchmen to such employees; to supervise the operation and maintenance of a small heating plant and its auxiliary equipment; or to perform other work of similar character.

The annual rates of compensation for positions in this grade shall be $1,320, $1,380, $1,440, $1,500, $1,560, $1,620, and $1,680.

Grade 6 in this service, which may be referred to as the assistant custodial grade, shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to assist in the supervision of large forces of watchmen and building guards, or to have general supervision over smaller forces; to supervise a large force of unskilled laborers; to repair office appliances; or Caperform other work of similar character of the property of the supervise of the supervise of supervise the work of similar character.

The annual rates of compensation for positions in this grade shall be $1,500, $1,560, $1,560, $1,560, $1,560, and $2,060.

Grade 7 in this service, which may be referred to as the main custodial grade, shall include all class

The annual rates of compensation for positions in this grade shall be $2,400, $2,500, $2,500, $2,500, $2,500, $2,900, and $3,000.

SKILLED TRADES SERVICE.

The skilled trades service shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to perform, assist in, or supervise apprentice, helper, or journeyman work in a recognized trade or craft.

Grade 1 may be referred to as the apprentice grade, and the compensation for classes of positions in this grade shall be in accordance with the prevailing practice.

Grade 2 may be referred to as the helper grade, and the compensation for classes of positions in this grade shall be in accordance with the prevailing practice.

Grade 3 may be referred to as the journeyman grade, and the compensation for classes of positions in this grade shall be in accordance with the prevailing practice.

Grade 4 may be referred to as the foreman grade, and the compensation for classes of positions in this grade shall be in accordance with the prevailing practice.

Grade 5 may be referred to as the general foreman grade, and the compensation of classes of positions in this grade shall be in accordance with the prevailing practice.

Grade 6 may be referred to as the mechanical supervisor grade, and the compensation of classes of positions in this grade shall be in accordance with the prevailing practice.

Grade 6 may be referred to as the mechanical supervisor grade, and the compensation of classes of positions in this grade shall be in accordance with the prevailing practice.

the compensation of classes of positions in this grade shall be in accordance with the prevailing practice.

COMMON AND SPECIALIZED LABOR SERVICE.

The common and specialized labor service shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to perform or direct manual work requiring more or less special skill or experience but no knowledge or skill in a trade or craft coming within the skilled trades service.

Grade 1 may be referred to as the common labor grade, and the compensation for classes of positions in this grade shall be in accordance with the prevailing practice.

Grade 2 may be referred to as the specialized labor grade, and the compensation for classes of positions in this grade shall be in accordance with the prevailing practice.

Grade 3 may be referred to as the semiskilled labor grade, and the compensation for classes of positions in this grade shall be in accordance with the prevailing practice.

Grade 4 may be referred to as the labor supervisory grade, and the compensation for classes of positions in this grade shall be in accordance with the prevailing practice.

Where it is provided for any grade of the skilled trades or the common and specialized labor service that the compensation shall be in accordance with the prevailing practice, such practice shall be determined by agreement between the head of the department and a representative of the class affected, in the employment of the Government, such agreement to be subject to the approval of the board. In the event of a failure to agree on such prevailing practice, or in the event of the nonapproval of any agreement reached by the head of the department and the representative of such class, then such prevailing practice shall be determined by the board.

In fixing the rates of pay for employees of the skilled trades or the common and specialized labor service, leave privileges, continuity of employment, payment for holidays and Sundays, and other conditions of employment peculiar to the Government service shall be taken into consideration.

SEC. 14. The rates of compensation fixed in accordance with the provisions of section 4 hereof shall become effective July 1, 1923, and all provisions of existing law fixing or limiting the rates of compensation of the positions covered by the compensation schedules contained in this act are hereby repealed as of that date.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, on page 83, line 1, after the word "employment," I move to insert the words "including cost of living.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment to the amendment will be stated.

The READING CLERK. On page 83, line 1, after the word "employment," it is proposed to insert a comma and the words "including cost of living."

Mr. KING. Mr. President, how will the paragraph read

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the paragraph as it would read if amended.

The reading clerk read as follows:

In fixing the rates of pay for employees of the skilled trades or the common and specialized labor service, leave privileges, continuity of employment, payment for holidays and Sundays, and other condi-tions of employment, including cost of living, peculiar to the Govern-ment service shall be taken into consideration.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, I should like to call the attention of the Senator from South Dakota to rule 5, which we were discussing some little time ago, and inquire if he is not willing to accept the provision which passed the House. It is on page 43, at the top of the page-paragraph 5 of section 6.

The House had a provision there which is precisely in keeping with my thought on the subject. The House provision can be found on page 6, paragraph 5, beginning at line 9. If the Senator from South Dakota will agree to that, it will save time. Otherwise, I should feel like asking for the presence of a quorum, so that the Senate might understand the situation.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I just want to call the Senator's attention to the reason why this wording was put in the Senate bill in preference to that of the House.

After making an examination of the employees who would be affected by paragraph 5 on page 43 we found that most of those who would be affected were old soldiers who were in the Government service, and we really felt that we did not want to change the compensation received to-day by those old men. do not say that those soldiers are the only employees that will be affected; there may be some older people in the service, but I think the wording of this provision that we have is the best possible wording that could be devised to take care of the situation that exists to-day in the District of Columbia.

If this applied to the field service—and there is where the great bulk of the Government employees are—then I should say that the Senator from New Mexico was right, and I think whenever the field service is taken in the provision of the House bill is the provision that will apply and that should apply, but I thought it was rather unfortunate

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, it is quite apparent that we are not going to come to an agreement regarding this amendment; but before calling for a quorum, and in the presence of those who are here now, I want to say that with about 75 or 80 people working for a year under the classification commission, of which I was chairman, we investigated the subject to which the Senator from Utah now refers, and we did not find the state of facts which he has just stated.

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from New Mexico exactly what he meant by his earlier statement?

Does he mean that this paragraph No. 5 contains the idea which he had in mind for legislation, or that this notion of reducing the compensation of these employees is repugnant to him? I probably was not paying sufficiently close attention to what the Senator said at the outset of his remarks.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I am sorry to say that I am sure the Senator from New Hampshire did not hear my former statement at all, because I made it about an hour and a half ago, when the Senator was not in the Chamber.

Mr. MOSES. I did not hear the statement; I was not in the Chamber then, Mr. President.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, may I say to the Senator that as far as I am personally concerned, and other members of the committee, I have no objection at all to that provision; in fact, I insisted upon it, as the Senator from South Dakota knows.

Mr. MOSES. Does the Senator from Utah mean paragraph 5

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Paragraph 5, on page 6, should be inserted for paragraph 5 on page 43.

Mr. MOSES. Is there an issue of fact here between the Senator from New Mexico and the Senator from Utah?

Mr. SMOOT. No.
Mr. MOSES. I want to get this clear in my own mind if I have to vote on an amendment offered by the Senator from New Mexico. The Senator from Utah, as I understand, points out that the employees affected by this provision are chiefly veterans of the Civil War.

Mr. SMOOT. And I will say to the Senator that there are only a very few of those. The Senator was right as to the employees generally; but some of the old soldiers did take the civil-service examination, and they have been kept in the service, and perhaps

Mr. MOSES. How about the application of the retirement act to these men?

Mr. SMOOT. That is what I say; that will come into effect; but there are quite a number of them that have asked that they be kept on until the two-year period, amounting to four years in all, has elapsed. It can not amount to more than a year or two at most.

Mr. MOSES. Yes; but of course I assume that the Senator from New Mexico does not want paragraphs in legislation of this character, which is designed to be permanent legislation, drawn to affect a small, selected group of people who can receive the benefits of the legislation only through a limited period of time.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I do not believe the Senator understands the provisions of this bill, Mr. President. I move, on page 43, to strike out paragraph 5 as it appears in the amendment reported by the committee and to insert in lieu thereof paragraph 5 as it appears in the House bill on page 6, without the strike-out.

Mr. McKELLAR. What page is that?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Page 43. Mr. STERLING. It will be the corresponding rule in the House bill.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Yes. I move that the corresponding provision which passed the House be inserted instead of that reported by the Senate committee.

Mr. MOSES. Will the Senator yield to me a moment? am very much gratified to see the interest that is being manifested in this proposal by the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKellar], because the Senator from Tennessee, who sat with the Senator from South Dakota and other Members of the Senate and the House on the commission of which I was a member to reclassify the salaries in the Postal Service, took exactly the position which is taken in paragraph 5, on page 43. The Senator from South Dakota and the Senator from Tennessee will corroborate me in the statement that we did not undertake to do any injustice to anybody anywhere in the Postal Service by reduction of salaries. Now I understand that the Senator from New Mexico wishes to insert in this bill-a bill whose central purpose is to increase salaries, and therefore to ameliorate the condition of civil-service employeession which, if I understand it, will probably work a hardship on a considerable group of people within the civil service, a group who should have our utmost consideration, having been described by the Senator from Utah, who probably knows as much about the civil service as any Member of this body, as a group made up almost wholly of veterans of the Civil If I misinterpret the purpose of the Senator from New Mexico in what he is attempting to do to the bill now, I hope that he will clarify my judgment on the subject.

Mr. McKellar. Mr. President, my attention was temporarily diverted to something else, but I should like to have an explanation. What is the provision that is referred to?

Mr. SMOOT. It is on page 43.

Mr. McKellar. What section?

Mr. SMOOT. Section 5, at the beginning of the page.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, I can explain the matter to the Senate in just a few words; but if there is to be any contest about it, I prefer that we get a quorum here so that the Senate may understand what is going on.

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President, it is perfectly within the prov-ince of the Senator from New Mexico to suggest the absence of quorum.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

The roll was called, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Gerry Glass
Gooding
Hale
Harris
Harrison
Heffin
Johnson
Jones, N. Mex.
Jones, Wash.
Kellogg
Kendrick
Keyes
King
Ladd
La Follette Ashurst Bayard Lenroot Robinson Robinson
Sheppard
Shortridge
Smith
Smoot
Stanfield
Sterling
Sutherland
Swanson
Wadsworth
Walsh, Mont.
Warren
Watson
Weller
Willis Lodge McCumber Borah Brandegee Brookhart McKellar McKinley McNary Broussard McNary Moses New Norris Oddie Overman Owen Page Phipps Ransdell Reed, Pa. Bursum Capper Colt Curtis Dial Dillingham Edge Ernst Frelinghuysen George

The VICE PRESIDENT. Sixty-three Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. MOSES. Let the amendment be stated. Mr. JONES of New Mexico obtained the floor.

Mr. McKELLAR. May we have order while we listen to what the Senator from New Mexico has to say?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, I asked for a call of the Senate for the reason that I think we have before us a question of very considerable importance. It is easily understood, however, and I think the Senate will bear with me in making a short statement.

In 1919 Congress established a joint commission for the purpose of providing a plan for the reclassification of the civilian employees in the District of Columbia. I was chairman of that We had a number of experts and other people emcommission. ployed to assist us in that work. It continued for about a year, and we made a most thorough investigation of the situation regarding the compensation of the employees in the District.

We found this situation to exist: In one case there was a man doing a certain job getting $2,000 a year. Immediately by his side another man, doing precisely the same kind of work, and no better, was getting $4,000.

Mr. MOSES. Of course, that condition of affairs existed before any sort of classification had been attempted in the Government service.

Mr. SMOOT. Before there was any allocation at all.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Certainly. That was in 1919, when we started in.

Mr. STERLING. Further, that was due then largely to war conditions. There was a rush to get things done.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. It was during war times, and it came about by reason of the conditions which prevailed during the war, to a very great extent.

May I interrupt the Senator once more? Mr. MOSES. Mr. JONES of New Mexico. In just a moment. The way it came about was this: Each department of the Government was struggling to get assistance and help in the organization of new bureaus, and as we made appropriations for the organization of new bureaus we did not undertake to classify the employees who should be engaged, but we gave lump-sum appropriations, and that had the result, largely, to which I have just referred, and there was absolute discrimination. As I said, salaries varied from $2,000 to $4,000 for precisely the same kind of work.

There were thousands of cases where the variation was great, but not so great as I have indicated in the illustration which I gave awhile ago. Now I yield to the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President, I am very glad the Senator has brought out what he has, because it bears directly upon the question I intended to propound to him. He has pointed out with emphasis the evil of lump-sum appropriations by showing clearly to the Senate and to the country that under that system we had two sets of employees doing exactly the same character of work, in most cases doing the same work side by side in the same room, often at adjoining desks, one paid under a statutory provision and the other paid out of a lump-sum appropriation, where the latter salary was fixed by the whim of the superior officer, to the discredit of the service, to the production of in-efficiency in the service, as I believe, and absolutely to the emicency in the service, as I believe, and assolutely to the ravishment of the Treasury in most instances. I am very glad the Senator has brought that out.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I thank the Senator from New Hampshire for his contribution to this discussion. It is for the purpose of doing away with that very sort of thing that this legislation is proposed.

The question immediately before the Senate is, What are we going to do with the present employees? Under this bill there is established, in the first place, a service, which is a very broad division of public employment, and that service is divided into various grades. In one service there are as many as 13 different grades. Within each grade are various classes. The compensation for the various grades varies in a very substantial degree. There are as many as eight or nine different amounts of compensation within the same grade. It is specified in this bill that these employees shall be allocated to certain classes of certain grades by a board established by this bill.

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President-

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Just a moment. There are some people in the Government service to-day who are receiving compensation which is higher than the highest rate provided in this bill for the highest class within a grade; and the question is, What are we going to do with those who are now engaged in a job and who are getting compensation higher than the highest rate provided for in this bill?

My proposition is to let them have the highest rates provided for in the grade, and in that way you get them at least within There are some people to-day, for instance, getcertain bounds. ting $4,000 a year in a position which is worth only $2,000 a year, and the man holding such a position can keep that place for life at $4,000 a year, while everybody around him and everybody who comes in the service hereafter will have to sit by his side and get $2,000 a year.

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator if he understands the purpose of this bill is to continue at their present salaries all these lump-sum employees?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. If the Senator will read the paragraph on page 43-

Mr. MOSES. I have just read it.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. It does precisely that thing. Mr. MOSES. Am I to understand that this bill makes no discrimination whatever between those civil-service employees who hold their positions by statute, under a fixed appropriation, where there is a limited number of employees to whom that appropriation can be paid, where merely the multiplication table is applied to an item in an appropriation bill, and those people who are paid out of a lump-sum appropriation, paid, as I have recently said, at the whim or caprice, or through the favor, of a superior officer? Will the former class be put upon exactly the same basis under this bill with the latter class, who receive the high salary through some good fortune, to be carried over into a civil-service classification which will give them those positions and those salaries for the balance of their natural lives?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I mean precisely that, if I understand the bill, and I may call attention to the language of the I read from page 38, if the Senator from New Hampshire will give me his attention, where it is provided

The term "employee" means any person temporarily or permanently

It is those people we are undertaking to fix compensation for in this bill, and under this paragraph 5, at the top of page 43, the salary of a single one of them can not be reduced.

Mr. SMOOT. Will the Senator yield?
Mr. MOSES. I understand the Senator intends presently to offer his amendment in a modified form?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Yes.

With a view of preventing an injustice being Mr. MOSES. done to this limited class of employees, whom the Senator from Utah describes as the veterans of the Civil War and their widows, but that does not go to the root of the evil which the Senator from New Mexico has been describing. That will not cure the evil at all. The modification which the Senator from New Mexico has in mind to make to the amendment which he originally proposed will have to be broadened so that these originally proposed will have to be broadened so that these lump-sum employees can not secure all these permanent benefits from the legislation, which the Senator from New Mexico thinks will apply to them, and which he has convinced me will apply to them.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, I may say that these lump-sum employees, under my proposal, will not retain their present compensation, unless it be low enough to come within the grade fixed in the bill.

Mr. MOSES. Let me ask the Senator if he has reported his amendment in its perfected form?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I have not. I have not had an opportunity yet to do that.

Mr. MOSES. I beg the Senator's pardon. I was addressing myself to the amendment which he originally proposed, and which I understood was to be modified with reference to veterans of the Civil War. Mr. JONES of New Mexico. That is true.

Mr. MOSES. What I want to get at is whether, when he has perfected his amendment, as he has in mind to do, it then will be effective over the whole field of civil-service employees. whether they are paid from a statutory roll or whether they are paid from a lump-sum appropriation?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. It will.
Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, just for the Record, if the Senator will yield, so that Senators may know the situation, every employee in the District of Columbia has been classified and allocated to one of the grades within whatever class he or she may fall. No employee in the field has been classified, and this bill does not cover the field service. It could not cover the field service because of the fact that it will take nearly two years to classify and allocate the field service.

Mr. MOSES. May I ask the Senator a question at that point?

Mr. SMOOT Yes.

Mr. MOSES. Does the Senator intend to give the impression to the Senate that every individual now borne upon the Government pay roll in the District of Columbia has been allocated within one of the various classifications set up by this bill, not that they have been allocated by grades and in groups but that every individual has been allocated "in his own proper per-son," if I may use the language with which President Wilson signed the treaty of Versailles?

Mr. SMOOT. I will say to the Senator that every employee in the District of Columbia, under the order of the President of the United States, through the Bureau of Efficiency, has been classified.

Mr. MOSES. By name?

By name. I have handled thousands and tens Mr. SMOOT. of thousands of the returns, and they will be allocated to whatever places the classification provided in this bill carries them.

The classifications in grades in the bill cover every employee in the District and he will naturally fall just where his examination would take him. I think that the amendment of the Senator from New Mexico is absolutely just. As I said, the only reason why a change was made was to take care of a very few people whom we thought ought to be taken care of. Now, the Senator in accepting that as to veterans and widows of the Civil War, I hope his amendment will be agreed to in place of paragraph 5, on page 43, as now worded.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I have the amendment ready. On page 43, in line 1, after the numeral "5" strike out the remainder of the paragraph and insert the following:

If the employee is not a veteran of the Civil War or a widow of such veteran, and is receiving compensation in excess of the range of salary prescribed for the appropriate grades, the compensation shall be reduced to the rate within the grade nearest the present compensation.

Mr. MOSES. That, of course, means the highest rate? Mr. SMOOT. That would be the highest rate within That would be the highest rate within the

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The READING CLERK. On page 43, line 1, strike out all after the numeral "5" and the period, down to and including the word "compensation" in line 4, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

If the employee is not a veteran of the Civil War or a widow of such veteran, and is receiving compensation in excess of the range of salary prescribed for the appropriate grades, the compensation shall be reduced to the rate within the grade nearest the present compensation.

Mr. STERLING. The amendment is to strike out and insert? Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Yes; to strike out all after the numeral "5" in the first four lines, and insert the amendment that has just been read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment to the amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to. Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I desire to call the attention of the chairman of the committee to the language at the bottom of page 44, as follows:

Reductions in compensation and dismissals shall be made by heads of departments in all cases whenever the efficiency ratings warrant, as provided herein, subject to the approval of the board.

Does that give the heads of departments carte blanche to dismiss employees at will? Just what is the effect of it? do not know what is the effect of it and I would like to have the Senator explain it.

Mr. STERLING. The law governs the matter of dismissal. The law of 1912 provides that there shall be no dismissal by the head of a department without notice to the employee.

Mr. McKELLAR. Would not this provision repeal that law? Mr. STERLING. Oh, no; it would not repeal the law.

Mr. SMOOT. I want to call the Senator's attention to another matter so that he can see that it does not repeal the law. In line 13, page 44-

Mr. McKellar. I have that language before me.
Mr. SMOOT. The Senator will notice it is provided that—

The board shall have powers of review and revision over uniform systems of efficiency rating established for the various grades or classes thereof * * * (d) dismissal.)

So any employee dismissed has the right to take the matter to the board for review and revision.

Mr. McKELLAR. I recall the law of 1912 provided that a civil-service employee should have the right of trial before dismissal.

Mr. STERLING. Oh, not the right to trial. He has a right to notice and a right to make an answer.

Mr. McKELLAR. To make answer to charges filed against

Mr. STERLING. If he chooses, but there is no trial, and the law provides that there shall be no trial.

Mr. McKELLAR. It is not exactly a trial, but at the same time he has to be heard before dismissal. According to the language in the bill, the head of the department is given the absolute right to dismiss an employee for inefficiency at any time he sees fit, and then the employee may appeal to the board. That is about the substance of it.

Mr. SMOOT. But the Senator has not read the balance of the paragraph.

Oh, yes; I have. It says, "subject to the Mr. McKELLAR. approval of the board."

Mr. SMOOT. Yes; that is right. Mr. McKELLAR. Under that language is it meant that the employee shall be dismissed before the board takes up the matter, or has the head of the department got to have the approval of the board before the dismissal of an employee? It seems to me he ought to have the approval of the board first.

Mr. STERLING. I think under the plain language of the paragraph there can be no dismissal without the approval of the board. That is what it means.

Mr. McKELLAR. I think that is the proper construction of it, but I think, too, that we ought to be perfectly clear about it and that it should read: "Subject first to the approval of the board." Then we would have it exactly as the Senator said he intends it to be. Then there could be no dispute

Mr. STERLING. An employee would not be dismissed until the board approved the order.

Mr. NORRIS. There might be cases where a dismissal ought to take place immediately. There will be cases where a removal ought to be made instanter. Something may happen to an employee where there must be a removal before there can be a trial. Somebody must have authority to do that. I take it that it could be done under this language. But after that is done, there should then be a hearing and a full opportunity given to the person discharged, and that would mean, as I understand it, that before it could become permanent and be a real removal, the board would have to approve the act.

Mr. SMOOT. If the Senator will read section 9, he will see that there is where the power is given:

That the board shall have powers of review and revision over uniform systems of efficiency rating established for the various grades or classes thereof, which shall set forth the degree of efficiency which shall constitute ground for (a) increase in the rate of compensation * * *, (c) decrease in the rate of compensation * * *, and (d) dismissal.

So they have that power even of dismissal by review and reduction.

Mr. NORRIS. Of course, that power must exist somewhere. I think we must all admit that.

Mr. McKELLAR. I call attention to the words at the top of page 45 "as provided therein." Of course, that evidently refers to section 9.

Mr. SMOOT. That has reference to the rate of efficiency. The language at the top of the page has reference to that matter.

Mr. McKELLAR. I think it would be very much wiser to have it the other way. However, it is the consensus of opinion that the employees are to have trial by the board, and if that is the understanding of everybody there is no use pursuing it any further.

Mr. STERLING. Let me say to the Senator from Tennessee that if this had been confined to dismissals alone there would have been no need for the paragraph, because that matter is governed by the law and must be upon notice. But it relates to reductions in compensation also, and we did not want it provided that there should be a reduction in compensation without the approval of the board.

Mr. McKELLAR. What is in my mind could be very easily arranged by striking out the language "subject to the approval of the board," and saying instead, "having first obtained the approval of the board."

Mr. SMOOT. That is the same as "subject to the approval of the board."

Mr. McKELLAR. Under this language summary action could be had and then the employee would have to go before the board and make his own fight. In the other case, the head of the department could go before the board and submit the matter and then have the employee discharged or his salary reduced. I think that would be nothing more than fair.

Mr. SMOOT. It provides that "dismissals shall be made by heads of departments in all cases whenever the efficiency ratings warrant, as provided herein, subject to the approval of the board."

Mr. McKELLAR. If that were made to read "subject first to the approval of the board," it would be all right according to my view.

Mr. MOSES. The trial is on appeal. I understand there is going to be some summary decision rendered by the head of the department. No hearings will be had until after appeal. The deficiency rating having been sufficient in the judgment of the head of the department to warrant a reduction or a dismissal, the reduction or dismissal takes place summarily. victim may then take an appeal.

Mr. McKELLAR. That is contrary to the law of 1912 under which, up to this time, as I recall, is what was done. An employee could be summarily dismissed. But there was some resolution passed, or some law enacted since 1912 which changed that to some extent. Has the Senator that before him?

Mr. MOSES. I understand the Senator from South Dakota in his opening statement with reference to the bill, which, unfortunately, I did not hear completely, adverted to those stat-utes which are abrogated by the provisions of the bill. In a conversation I have just had with him I gained the impression that the abrogation of those statutes was had under section 9 of the bill, with a good deal of deliberation on the part of the conferees on the measure.

Mr. STERLING. The Senator from New Hampshire has the wrong idea as to the statutes to which I referred. I referred to one statute of 1907 and another of 1917 relating to transfers and relating to promotions. Those are repealed by the provisions of the bill. They do not refer to dismissals at all. law of 1912 is still the law, and is not repealed by any provision of the pending bill.

Mr. MOSES. Is it affected in any way by it? Mr. STERLING. I do not think so. As to dismissals referred to in the bill, they must be governed by the provisions of the law, as follows:

No person in the classified civil service of the United States shall be moved therefrom except for such cause as will promote the efficiency said service and for reasons given in writing.

"For dismissal" relates to lack of efficiency in the service, and there may be dismissal for that cause.

As will promote the efficiency of said service and for reasons given in writing, and the person whose removal is sought shall have notice of the same and charges preferred against him.

Then the removal must be had according to the bill.

Mr. MOSES. Just what is the modus operandi of dismissal or reduction under the provision of section 9, beginning with line 23, page 44, and continuing to line 2, on page 45? Does it mean that after the efficiency rating has been discovered to be of such a character as to warrant reduction or dismissal the employee shall be served with a notice reciting those facts and shall be then reduced or dismissed, or will be then be permitted to take an appeal to the board and finally to the President, if I interpret the bill correctly, prior to having been reduced or dismissed? In other words, does the employee retain his status after the notice has been served upon him until it has finally been passed upon by the board or ultimately by the President?

Mr. STERLING. I will say to the Senator from New Hampshire that I think it means that in case of the proposed dismissal or reduction of the salary of the employee there must be the approval of the board to the contemplated reduction or to the contemplated dismissal, and then notice of the contemplated reduction or dismissal must be served upon the employee.

Mr. MOSES. What right will the employee have in the

Mr. STERLING. What right will he have?

Mr. MOSES. And further, as the Senator from Wisconsin suggests, what will be the status of the employee? Does the Does the employee continue in his existing grade at his existing salary or has he gone out of the service or is he permitted in the interval to go to the board with his appeal before the final judgment is rendered; or does the board, having established the ratings and having taken them to the head of the department, do all that without the knowledge of the implicated employee?

Mr. STERLING. I think the status of the employee is that of an employee in the service until a final order of removal is issued after the proceedings required by law; after the approval of the board in the first instance, and then the subsequent proceedings

Mr. McKELLAR. With that understanding, I am entirely satisfied

Mr. MOSES. But, even so, Mr. President, what is the situa-tion of the employee? The board would have made his ratings in the meantime.

Mr. McKELLAR. He is in the employ of the Government. Mr. MOSES. He is in the employ of the Government, yes, until the board has approved his reduction or his dismissal; but the board and the head of the department may have acted all the time without the knowledge of the employee and the employee have had no occasion to present his case until a final decision has been rendered on it.

Mr. McKELLAR. But the old law has not been repealed.

The employee has to be served with notice.

Mr. MOSES. The old statute of 1912 has not been repealed, but the clear implication of the statute as now read to us is a modification, a dilution of the rights of the employee under that earlier statute.

Mr. McKELLAR. That is why I called the attention of the Senator in charge of the bill to that paragraph.

Mr. MOSES. The Senator from Tennessee may think what the Senator from South Dakota has said about this language is adequate to protect the rights of the employee.

Mr. McKELLAR. I hope it is, but if it is not I hope some amendment will be offered which will protect the employee.

Mr. MOSES. If the Senator from South Dakota, who has the floor, will permit me, I will say that the Senator from Tennessee understands perfectly well that an assertion made here on the floor of the Senate by a Senator in charge of a bill is not necessarily a binding interpretation of the language of the statute

Mr. McKELLAR. Of course not.

Mr. MOSES. And if there is any question here with reference to the status of these employees during the time when their efficiency record is under scrutiny, possibly with the purpose of reduction or dismissal, the language of the measure should be made explicit in that regard.

Mr. McKELLAR. That is why I suggested the insertion of the words "subject first to the approval of the board." would make the meaning of the language plain beyond the shadow of a doubt.

Mr. MOSES. Now, just what is the suggestion of the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. McKELLAR. That on line 1, page 45-

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, if the Senators will permit me

The Senator from South Dakota has the floor. Mr. STERLING. I believe I can make this plain by reading the language of section 9 of the bill.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, if the Senator from South Dakota will permit an inquiry, he may answer my question at the same time, because I am sure the suggestion he is about to make will be in answer to at least some of the points which are in my mind.

First, I desire to ask the Senator whether, under the bill as it is now before us, it would be more easy than at present to get rid of or to reduce an employee under the civil service within the District of Columbia, and, secondly, does it give greater protection to inefficient and incompetent employees and make more difficult their reduction or their expulsion from the service?

Mr. STERLING. I do not think it does. I think the present law and procedure in that respect are substantially the same as proposed under this bill.

Let me read section 9 and Senators will then see that it does not provide for an order of dismissal at all, but the purpose of the efficiency rating is to ascertain whether there is ground for promotion or advancement; whether there is ground for leaving the employee in his present status; whether there is ground for demotion; or whether there is ground for his dismissal. It does not provide that there shall be an order of dismissal. The bill

Sec. 9. That the board shall have powers of review and revision over uniform systems of efficiency rating established for the various grades or classes thereof, which shall set forth the degree of efficiency which shall constitute ground for (a) increase in the rate of compensation for employees who have not attained the maximum rate of the class to which their positions are allocated, (b) continuance at the existing rate of compensation without increase or decrease, (c) decrease in the rate of compensation for employees who at the time are above the minimum rate for the class to which their positions are allocated, and (d) dismissal.

Just follow that word "ground" as the antecedent all the way through before these various subdivisions, and Senators will understand it.

If the board shall find that there is ground for dismissal, then the employee will receive notice. Of course, there will have to be first the approval or the disapproval of the board. If the board approves of the contemplated order of dismissal, notice will be given to the employee, and he will have his chance to be heard.

Mr. MOSES. Let me ask the Senator a question in view of what he has said. Assuming absolutely that underlying all action under this section is the "ground" upon which action shall be taken, will the Senator take a typical case and go forward with it and show to the Senate exactly what would happen to John Smith, let us say, who is a $1,800 a year clerk? He is being rated, his rating being made by the head of the department in accordance with a certain system. The rating is to be open to the inspection of John Smith, who is affected by it, under conditions to be determined by the board after consultation with the department head. John Smith might have a feeling that his rating for some personal or other reason was not such as he was entitled to, for we all know, Mr. President, that such sentiments exist in the minds of Government employees in Washington; that there are many clerks who feel that the chief of the division or the head of a bureau or their immediate superior officer is hostile and unfriendly or desires to bring about a demotion or otherwise to get rid of an individual employee. Under those conditions John Smith, having that feeling, finds that he can have access to his current ratings, which are being made for him day by day as he goes on with his work in the Government service, but he may not find out how he is carried on the official roll of the Government except under conditions which a hostile head of the department may have made for him.

If I am not stating the successive steps in a typical case accurately I hope the Senator from South Dakota will correct me as I undertake to enumerate them; but that much we do know, that the rating of John Smith is going to be made from day to day as he goes on with his work in the department in Washington, and that rating is recorded, and that he may have access to it under conditions which are prescribed by the board after consultation with the department head. He may have great difficulty in getting access to his record, but nevertheless there the record is, and his rating is made upon that record. His rating having been made upon a record kept in such fashion and accessible in the manner in which I have described, John Smith suddenly learns that on the basis of the rating—for the language is "in all cases whenever the efficiency ratings warrant, as provided herein"; that is to say, I assume, as provided in section 9—John Smith suddenly receives notice that he is reduced or that he is dismissed. Now, what is his

Mr. STERLING. Let me go over the case supposed by the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. MOSES. The case is that of John Smith.

Mr. STERLING. Yes. In the first place, John Smith has access to his efficiency rating.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. He has if those over him will allow him to have such access.

Mr. STERLING. Wait a moment. I presume we have a right to assume—that is a presumption of law—that officials will do their duty, and that they will, as the law requires, allow John Smith to examine his efficiency rating to see where he stands.

But in the event they should not do so, in the event they themselves should violate the spirit of the law, John Smith is not without his remedy. After what has been ascertained through the efficiency rating which the records show John Smith attained—and it may be wrong—will come the contemplated order of the head of the department for the purpose of dismissing John Smith, subject to the approval of the board.

Mr. MOSES. But John is out before the board could get to him.

Mr. STERLING. No; he is not out. I do not concede that he is out. He is not out until the order of dismissal is finally issued, and that time has not as yet arrived. He is not dismissed when it is found that his efficiency rating does not come up to the mark; he is not dismissed until the order is made. and the order can only come after the processes fixed by the statute itself and after the proceedings prescribed by the statute.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me that I may offer an amendment intended to clarify the meaning?

Mr. STERLING. Yes.

Mr. McKELLAR. I offer an amendment, to come in on line 2, on page 45, to strike out the period-

Mr. MOSES. Let me ask the Senator not to offer the amendment formally; we may desire to perfect the text to some

Mr. McKELLAR. Very well; I am perfectly willing. The amendment which I desire to propose, however, is to strike out the period and insert in lieu thereof a colon and the following proviso:

Provided, That no employee shall be reduced or dismissed without the notice and hearing before the board and without the approval of the board.

Mr. STERLING. Where would the Senator from Tennessee insert that amendment?

Mr. McKELLAR. In line 2, on page 45. The amendment provides exactly what I understand the Senator has argued is provided for in this section. If so, let us make it perfectly plain, so that it may not be misunderstood.

Mr. MOSES. I did not understand the Senator from South Dakota to maintain that. The Senator from South Dakota, if I understood him correctly, maintained that section 9 of this act, read in conjunction with the act of 1912, would so provide.

Mr. STERLING. Certainly.
Mr. McKELLAR. In conjunction with the law.

Mr. MOSES. But the suggestion of the Senator from Tennessee makes it perfectly clear in this act what is the intention of its framers.

Mr. STERLING. In view of the law of 1912 and the language of the bill itself, I see no necessity for the amendment suggested by the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. MOSES. What harm could come from it?

Mr. McKELLAR. In order to relieve the situation, why can we not adopt such an amendment?

Mr. STERLING. Will the Senator state the language of his amendment again?

Mr. McKELLAR. If the Secretary has it, I will ask him to read it.

The Assistant Secretary. On page 45, at the end of line 2, it is proposed to strike out the period and insert a colon and the following proviso:

Provided, That no employee shall be reduced or dismissed without due notice and hearing before the board and without the approval of the board.

Mr. STERLING. I would say "reduced in compensation."
Mr. McKELLAR. "Reduced in compensation"—that will be entirely satisfactory.

Mr. MOSES. Does reduction in compensation mean exactly the same thing as reduction in grade under this act?

Mr. McKELLAR. Yes; that might have that effect-"in compensation or grade."

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, before the Senator from South Dakota agrees to that, I want to ascertain whether that would not lead us into difficulties. As I said awhile ago, there might be a case where a dismissal must take place instanter. Suppose you had a clerk who was handling money, for instance, and the head of the department learned that he was defrauding the Government by taking the money, stealing it.

Mr. McKELLAR. He would be arrested at once.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; but it seems to me that in a case of that kind, where immediate action was necessary, somebody ought to have authority to take that action, but with a proviso that the employee should be immediately heard upon the proposition; in other words, that somebody ought to have a right to suspend the employee at least while the trial is going on.

I want everyone to have a trial. I do not think employees ought to be finally separated from the service without it. They ought to be confronted with the witnesses against them, and they ought to be given an opportunity to examine the charges and defend themselves properly, but it seems to me that there must be of necessity cases occasionally arising where summary action is necessary. I do not care whether we call that dismissal or whether we call it suspension, or something of that kind, but we ought not to put in a provision here that would make it necessary, if a man were charged with some such offense as I have indicated, for him to be retained in his position while they were going through the formality of trying him.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, I am afraid that in order to carry out the thought suggested by the Senator from Nebraska. the departments would be engaged all the time in holding trials. so far as that is concerned, if there was a right view of what the Senator from Nebraska calls a trial-a regular trial.

Mr. NORRIS. When I speak of a trial I have reference to the hearing provided for in the bill.

Mr. STERLING. Yes.

Mr. NORRIS. As I understand, that is already provided for. I do not want to deprive anybody of it, but I can realize that occasions might arise where, for the good of the service, summary action would be demanded.

Mr. STERLING. Yes. Let me read the language of section 6 of the law of 1912:

That no person in the classified civil service of the United States shall be removed therefrom except for such cause as will promote the efficiency of said service and for reasons given in writing, and the person whose removal is sought shall have notice of the same and of any charges preferred against him, and be furnished with a copy thereof, and also be allowed a reasonable time for personally answering the same in writing, and affidavits in support thereof, but no examination of witnesses nor any trial or hearing shall be required except in the discretion of the officer making the removal.

Mr. President, I think that is as far as we can go in the Government service. I think it would utterly disrupt the service if we were to have what might be termed anything in the way of a formal trial in every case.

Mr. NORRIS. The Senator from South Dakota has not understood what I said. I was trying to impress upon the mind of the Senator from South Dakota that before he accepted this amendment it seemed to me he ought to be sure that he was not making it impossible for some official to take summary action while the trial was in progress.

Mr. STERLING. The Senator from South Dakota believes that the employees' rights are fully protected by the provisions of the bill and by the law of 1912; and I do not think I can accept the amendment of the Senator from Tennessee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. REED of Pennsylvania in the chair). The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Tennessee to the committee amendment, which will be

The Assistant Secretary. On page 45, line 2, after the word "board," it is proposed to insert a colon and the following proviso:

Provided, That no employee shall be reduced in compensation or grade or be dismissed without due notice and hearing before the board and without approval of the board.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Tennessee to the committee amendment. [Putting the question:] The "noes" have it; and the amendment to the amendment is rejected.

Mr. MOSES and Mr. McKELLAR called for a division. On a division, the amendment to the amendment was rejected.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I want to offer an amendment to the committee amendment. I presume when the Chair says "the committee amendment" he refers to the entire substitute?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. He does.

Mr. NORRIS. Therefore I can offer an amendment to any part of it?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator can.

Mr. NORRIS. I send the amendment to the desk and ask to have it read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment to the amendment will be stated.

The Assistant Secretary. On page 80 it is proposed to strike out all after line 16, to and including line 2 on page 83, and in lieu thereof to insert the following:

Provided, That none of the provisions of this act shall include or apply to the skilled trades service, which shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to perform, assist in, or supervise, appendice, helper, or journeyman work in a recognized trade or craft; or the common and specialized labor service not otherwise specially provided for, which shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to perform or direct manual work requiring more or less special skill or experience, but no knowledge or skill in a trade or craft coming within the skilled trades service: Provided jurther, That all employees excluded from the provisions of this act and who received the $240 benus during any portion of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, shall on July 1, 1923, receive an increase at the rate of $240 per annum in addition to their present base pay.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, the latter clause, as I understand, is, as a matter of fact, no increase.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, is not the Senator mistaken in that?

Mr. NORRIS. I understand not, Mr. SMOOT. That is one of the things that we had up here before when an effort was made to give these employees $240 a year over and above the rates paid for the same class of service in private institutions. Their salaries are based upon existing law, which provides that they shall be paid the amount which is paid in like industries in the vicinity in which the labor is performed. This is only another scheme for adding $240 a year to their employment.

Mr. NORRIS. No; at least, that is not my intention. Mr. SMOOT. I do not say that that is the Senator's inten-

Mr. NORRIS. My understanding is that as a matter of fact it makes no increase, because these people would have the bonus. They are excluded from this bill. If this bill is passed no bonus bill will be passed, and consequently those who are excluded from this bill, with no bonus bill passed, would get no bonus, and there would be a reduction in their salaries by If we should pass the bonus bill and this bill, $240 a year. too-which nobody intends to do-then there would be an in-

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, this bill does not apply to the field service in any way. This bill applies just to the employees in the District of Columbia, with the exception of the Postal Service, the Board of Education of the District of Columbia, officers and members of the Metropolitan police, the fire department of the District of Columbia, the United States park police, the commissioned personnel of the Coast Guard, the Public Health Service, and the Coast and Geodetic Survey. Those are exempted from the provisions of the bill. All of the other employees in the District of Columbia are covered by the bill.

Mr. NORRIS. Why does the Senator exempt those?

Mr. SMOOT. As to the officers and members of the Metropolitan police and the fire department of the District of Columbia, the Senator knows that the United States pays only 60 per cent of the appropriations made for the District of Columbia, and not only that, but the appropriations are made directly Congress; and while the United States does not pay the full amount, they have had special legislation, particularly as to the police and firemen, and increases have been made for them, so that I think it is absolutely satisfactory to all of There is no necessity of bringing them under this bill. I mention also the United States park police.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I have not asked the Senator why the ones he has mentioned are excluded with any critical plan in mind. I approve it myself. I was glad to have the Senator outline the particular classes that were omitted by the express terms of the bill.

The Senator says, in his closing statement, that these people are satisfied with being excluded. I agree to that. They wanted to be excluded, and the committee excluded them. Now, here comes another class of people who want to be excluded likewise, and yet the committee puts them in. I can give reasons, I think, why these should be excluded that do not apply even to the others.

Mr. SMOOT. I referred simply to the police and the firemen in the District of Columbia as those that desired to be excluded from the bill.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; and you excluded them. Now, I do not criticize that. I approve that. Mr. SMOOT. And I gave th

Mr. SMOOT. And I gave the reasons for it.
Mr. NORRIS. I am not finding fault. I was simply using the Senator from Utah as a witness in favor of the amendment I am offering.

Mr. GERRY. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Rhode Island?

Mr. NORRIS. I do. Mr. GERRY. The Senator from Utah [Mr. Smoot] stated that these sections with regard to the skilled-trade service and the common and specialized labor service, on pages 80 and 81, applied only in the District of Columbia. That is true, as I understand the bill; but it is also true that on page 41 of the bill there is a provision that the board shall make a survey of the field service and shall report to Congress.

In this survey the board will go into all the wage schedules of different branches of the Government's activities, and determine a wage scale which it will report back to Congress. If these sections on pages 80 and 81 are left in the bill, it will include in that report a wage scale for such activities as the torpedo stations, and the different navy yards, all the wages of which are now determined by special boards under different department heads, to meet particular conditions.

Mr. NORRIS. Let me say right there that, so far as I know. this arrangement is satisfactory to the people who are being controlled by those special boards.

Mr. GERRY. It is satisfactory.

Mr. MOSES. That is always a reason for legislation, if it is satisfactory to the people drawing the Government salaries.

Mr. GERRY. It is not only satisfactory to the different individuals, but it is also satisfactory to the different departments, like the Navy Department and the War Department. I feel sure of that, and I do not believe we could get the same initial justice with this sort of legislation as we can if it is left under the present condition.

Mr. MOSES. Why not?
Mr. SMOOT. I will answer the Senator by this statement, that there has been no survey made, and the Senator is mistaken when he thinks that whenever that survey is made it will fall under the provisions of this bill. There will have to be additional legislation, because I have no question of a doubt that a clerk, we will say, working in a small city somewhere in this country, can live a great deal cheaper than that same clerk. doing the same work, could live for in the District of Columbia. All those things are to be taken into consideration in the survey which will be made.

Mr. NORRIS. I have no doubt of that, but the Senator must realize that when that survey was made, as the Senator from Rhode Island has pointed out, these people who are not excluded may be put in, and I have included in my amendment a provision that will prohibit that. I want to keep them out permanently.

Mr. SMOOT. It will take two years to make that survey. Mr. GERRY. If the Senator will yield to me further, at the present time the Navy Department is conducting an investigation as to the wages to be paid in the different yards and establishments. It has to determine conditions in each one, and, in my opinion, it is much better able to determine what are the proper rates of wages than will a board constituted as this is to be, which will be much more centralized. If we open the door now, and do not amend these sections on pages 80 and 81, we will have a report coming back to Congress for a general schedule, and will have to meet that condition then, and will have to fight then, and I would rather meet it now.

Mr. SMOOT. There is no fight to be made.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, briefly as I may, I want to add another reason which it seems to me ought to differentiate this class of employees from the ordinary clerks in all of these departments. These employees are satisfied as they are. They are afraid to go under this provision, because they will come under the jurisdiction of people, honest and conscientious though they may be, who are engaged in a business entirely different from what these people are engaged in. In other words, you would have the skilled trades service under the supervision and jurisdiction of boards which are familiar with and are handling ordinary clerks in the various departments. Their work is entirely different. It is skilled in both in-stances, but in no sense are they related to each other.

Would it not be better, and would we not get better service, if these employees were under boards which were particularly skilled in the line of their employment, as they are now, instead of putting them under the jurisdiction and control of a board that has no knowledge of their business or their occupation, more or less scientific and distinguished, and entirely different from the one with which the board and those above them would be familiar?

Mr. STERLING. Let me suggest to the Senator that there may be an agreement, under the terms of the bill, between the head of the department under whose jurisdiction the particular employee comes, or that class of employees come, and the representative of the class of employees affected. employees affected are represented in a conference with the head of the department when it comes to determine what the prevailing practice is. Of course, that agreement is subject to the approval of the board, consisting of a representative of the bureau of efficiency

Mr. NORRIS. I hope the Senator will not get any idea that I am trying to insinuate, even indirectly, that this board is going to be moved by any improper motives. I am not. I am simply saying that from the very nature of things they are not as well qualified to pass on the questions that will arise, which will be mainly as to salaries, I take it, in every case, as they would be for clerks.

Mr. STERLING. Can not the representative of the head of the department present all the facts and circumstances and say what the commercial rate is?

Mr. NORRIS. Oh, yes; but, after all, the final disposition is in the hands of a board that has practically no knowledge whatever of the business in which the employee is engaged.

Mr. SMITH. May I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield. Mr. SMITH. Under the present conditions, each these departments employing skilled labor has a board which passes upon the efficiency and the pay of the different employees?

Mr. NORRIS. Yes.

Mr. SMITH. That board is constituted of men who know the business and the qualifications of those who are engaged in the business?

Mr. NORRIS. Exactly.
Mr. SMITH. The bill, as I understand it, proposes to unify in this board in Washington the power to do that supervisory work and to fix the compensation without the members of the board here in Washington having the qualification that the members of the boards have in these different departments, and it seems to me that when we are attempting to bring about efficiency, we should have efficiency of supervision as well as efficiency in the performance of work, because a man might pass upon the character of a job who knew no more about the job than some layman who never had been familiar with it, and who therefore would be as likely to do harm as to do good.

If the present arrangement is working efficiently and is bringing about the proper returns, and the boards are efficient in these skilled departments, why go afield, when the object of this bill is to operate among the mere clerical workers, to see that the clerk gets a proper wage for the labor performed?

Mr. STERLING. If the Senator from Nebraska will permit me

Mr. NORRIS I yield to the Senator from South Dakota.

Mr. STERLING. The fundamental question here is as to whether the employee should receive more than is paid according to the prevailing practice, or whether he is satisfied with the prevailing practice; in other words, the commercial rate for employment of that kind. That is the question. He ought to have that much, and I do not think he ought to have any more. This is a way of determining what that prevailing practice is, as provided in the bill.

Mr. SWANSON. Will the Senator from Nebraska yield to me?

Mr. NORRIS. Before I yield I want to make a reference to a matter presented by the Senator from South Dakota. In my humble opinion the Senator from South Dakota would not accomplish his object as well by the bill as drawn as if this amendment were adopted as a part of the bill. Certainly these boards, as far as I know, have worked satisfactorily. There is no complaint in regard to them. The men who are at work, and those who are above them, are both satisfied, as far as I know. If that is not true, I have not heard of it. It seems to me, if that is the condition which exists, we ought to let it alone, unless we have some reason to change it that is sufficient to warrant our interfering with a situation which is satisfactory.

The Senator from South Dakota says that the question is whether they shall get wages which correspond with the wages paid for similar work in private business. The boards who are familiar with the kind of work these employees do, I submit, are better able to determine that question than some fellows here who are familiar only with clerks and clerkships. They know more about it. They can do better, it seems to me, both for the Government and for the men.

As far as taking these men in is concerned, when they do not want to come in, a precedent has already been practically established, and a lot of these bureaus are left out expressly. The people who are in are satisfied. Those who are out do not want to come in, and the Government is satisfied. Here is another situation where employees should be left out, but in this case there is a better reason. They are doing a different kind of work, entirely foreign to the work that is going to be controlled or handled by this board. They are doing a work similar to the work in the navy yards, manual labor of an expert kind, high class technical labor. A great many of them have nothing to do with the keeping of books and the ordinary work of a clerk. If they are satisfied, and if you have let others stay out because they are satisfied, even though in other cases there is nothing else but clerks to handle and control, why should we step outside and take these men in when everything is satisfactory, as it is, and when the Government and the men both

Mr. LENROOT. I would like to ask the Senator concerning the proviso. Under this proviso it would seem that if a messenger had received, during any portion of the year, the $240 bonus, and then on the 1st of July got employment in the excluded class, he would receive $240 a year or $20 a month more than any of his fellows. Surely the Senator does not intend that.

Mr. NORRIS. It would depend on the position he would get. I thought I made that plain; at least I have outlined what my idea was as to the effect of my amendment. Just let me go over that briefly again. Here is a reclassification bill. If it is passed, those under it get the benefit of the bonus, and we do not need to pass a bonus bill. I think that is conceded. If we exclude these people, they will not get the benefit of that, of course. They will be left outside. Now they, have the bonus. The bonus bill will not pass, and hence their salaries, if that provision were not in the pending bill, would be reduced $240 a year.

Mr. LENROOT. I am in sympathy with that.

Mr. NORRIS. I am only trying to effect the object I have in mind. I do not want to raise anybody's salary

Mr. LENROOT. May I ask the Senator whether he would accept this as an amendment to his amendment?

Provided further, That all employees excluded from the provisions of this act and who would, if employed on June 30, 1923, be entitled to the $240 bonus, shall, on July 1, 1923, receive an increase at the rate of $240 per annum in addition to their present base pay so long as they shall hold any position which would have entitled them to receive said bonus had the present law regarding the same been continued.

Mr. STERLING. May I ask the Senator one question? Does he say "this act" or "these provisions"?

Mr. LENROOT. "This act." I am taking the language of the amendment.

Mr. STERLING. Should it be so broad as that? I do not think so. I think the Senator is concerned with the skilled trades, and I think it had better be confined to those provisions.

Mr. NORRIS. I will say to the Senator from that I have sent the only copy of the amendment I have to the desk, but at first blush, and on the reading of his proposal, I do not see any objection to the change the Senator has suggested. Before I would commit myself to it definitely I would like to study his proposal and compare the two. I want the Senate to understand that I am not trying to put anything in to increase anybody's salary. I want to leave them just as they would be. If they go under this bill, their salaries are automatically increased. If the bill is not passed and the bonus bill is passed, they will still receive $240 above their base pay. What I want to do is to keep them out of the bill and protect them from a reduction in pay. That is what I am trying Mr. SWANSON and Mr. SMITH addressed the Chair. That is what I am trying to do.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. REED of Pennsylvania in the chair). Does the Senator from Nebraska yield; and if so, to whom?

I yield first to the Senator from Virginia. Mr. NORRIS.

Mr. SWANSON. Mr. President, I think the Senator from Nebraska is entirely right in regard to these exceptions. It is illustrated by the situation in the Navy. Under the present law the salaries or wages of the mechanics, the boiler makers, the ship fitters, in the Navy are fixed in accordance with the salaries in the neighborhood. Each year a board is constituted who visit people in the neighborhood; evidence is heard as to the salaries paid in the neighborhood to mechanics of a similar kind, and that forms the basis for the wages paid. These men are much more capable of determining what the salaries of the boiler makers ought to be in the navy yards or one of the arsenals of the Army than a board composed of the Chief of the Civil Service Commission, the Efficiency Board, and those people who simply handle clerical work, as the Senator from Nebraska has well stated.

Each year the board meets and decides what are fair wages paid in the community, and the Government's wages are based upon this determination. To have the wages of boiler makers, skilled mechanics, and men of that class engaged in expert work fixed by a board sitting here in Washington, consisting of persons connected with the Civil Service Commission or the Efficiency Board or the Bureau of the Budget, who know nothing whatever about the matter, who have their hands full of clerical work, is turning the work of the Government over to inexperienced people instead of experienced people.

The local board which fixes the wages, as I have described. usually has a representative from the Navy Department and one from the laboring people as well. They hear the evidence, take the testimony, and make investigations. They go to the private shipyard and ascertain the wages paid there and try to adjust the wages for the Government on that basis. In Philadelphia they go to the private shipyards and find what the mechanics get there, what the boiler makers and other skilled workers get there, and try to pay the same wage. To require these people to come here to a central board in Washington, with all the business incident to it, simply means to turn this class of people over and allow their wages to be fixed by inexperienced people. There is no reason for doing it and no justification for taking action of that sort. There is no reason why they should be compelled to come to Washington and appear before a board of inexperienced people of that kind.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I understand the Senator from South Dakota is willing to accept the amendment I have offered if I will accept the modification presented by the junior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. Lenroot].

Mr STERLING. On behalf of the committee I accept the amendment as modified by the substitute offered by the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. SMITH. Will the Senator have the amendment as modified read?

Mr. NORRIS. It is a substitute for the last paragra Mr. SMOOT. Let the modified amendment be reported. It is a substitute for the last paragraph.

The Assistant Secretary. It is proposed-

NORRIS. Mr. President, it seems there is a misunder-

Mr. STERLING. I did not quite understand the scope of the amendment

Mr. NORRIS. The suggestion of the Senator from Wisconsin was not a substitute for my amendment, but only a substitute for the proviso in the amendment.

Mr. SMOOT. Let the amendment be reported.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated. The Assistant Secretary. On page 80, strike out all after line 16, to and including line 2 on page 83, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

thereof the following:

Provided, That none of the provisions of this act shall include or apply to the skilled trades service, which shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to perform, assist in, or supervise, apprentice, helper, or journeyman work in a recognized trade or craft; or the common and specialized labor service not otherwise specially provided for, which shall include all classes of positions the duties of which are to perform or direct manual work requiring more or less special skill or experience, but no knowledge or skill in a trade or craft coming within the skilled trades service: Provided further, That all employees excluded from the provisions of this act and who would feed employed on June 30, 1923, be entitled to the $240 bonus, shall on July 1, 1923, receive an increase at the rate of $240 per annum in addition to their present base pay so long as they shall hold any position which would have entitled them to receive said bonus had the present law regarding the same been continued.

Mr. NORRIS. I want to make a suggestion to the Senator

Mr. NORRIS. I want to make a suggestion to the Senator from South Dakota. There is a dispute here about the bonus. I think I am right about it, but I may be wrong. The Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] is very positive that he is right about The only way to correct that, if we correct it at all, is to include the employees in the amendment. If the conferees find that the men are not getting the bonus, of course they can rectify it, but I would not want the amendment agreed to with the bonus item stricken out, because, as I understand the situation, it would mean a reduction in salary of $240 for each of those

Mr. SMOOT. Since I made the statement on the floor I have telephoned down and I now say positively to the Senator from Nebraska that they do not receive the $240 bonus. ceive the base pay.

Mr. NORRIS. Then the acceptance of the amendment will not do any harm, because it only applies to those who do receive the bonus. That is what the amendment is for.

ceive the bonus. That is what the amendment is lot.

Mr. SMITH. The amendment, as I understood it when read, was that the $240 bonus is added to the base pay and would only apply to those who have been receiving it.

Mr. NORRIS. If they are not getting the bonus, it will not apply to them.

I ask that the provision be read. I know that am right as it was first read, but the Senator may have changed it from the way it was first read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The proviso of the amendment offered by the Senator from Nebraska will be read.

The Assistant Secretary read as follows:

Provided further, That all employees excluded from the provisions of this act and who would, if employees excluded from the provisions of this act and who would, if employed on June 30, 1923, be entitled to the $240 bonus, shall, on July 1, 1923, receive an increase at the rate of $240 per annum in addition to their present base pay so long as they shall hold any position which would have entitled them to receive said bonus had the present law regarding the same been continued.

That is right. Mr. SMITH.

Mr. NORRIS. Will the Senator from Utah admit that he was mistaken?

I do not know whether there has been any Mr. SMOOT. change made in it since it was first read.

Mr. NORRIS. I have made no change except the penciled memorandum of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. Lenboot]. think the Secretary read the proviso in the original amendment.

Mr. SMOOT. Oh, no.
Mr. NORRIS. Then read that and see whether it applies. Mr. SMOOT. This is what the Senator read, and this is just what it said:

Provided, That all employees excluded from the provisions of this act who received the $240 bonus during any portion of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, shall, on the 1st of July, 1923, receive an increase at the rate of $240 in addition to their present base pay.

Mr. NORRIS. Now, the Senator will admit he was for once mistaken?

Mr. SMOOT. Oh, I have been mistaken more than once in my life, I will say to the Senator.

Mr. WATSON. Mr. President, what is the question before the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska, as modified, to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MOSES. Now, there will be required some perfection of the bill, the amendment having been agreed to.

Mr. STERLING. In view of the action of the Senate in striking out the language proposed by the committee, I must offer an amendment that will include certain employees. send to the desk and ask the Secretary to read the amendment which I now offer.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, if we are to open up a new line of debate I wish to state that while I am very anxious to get the bill through, I think we must have an executive session. There are some appointments of very great importance that ought to be confirmed before the 4th of March, members of the International Debt Commission among others. There is also a brief treaty which must be ratified and must come before the Senate to-day so that we can dispose of it to-morrow, relating to the halibut fisheries on the western coast. If possible we want to have a short executive session and dispose of those matters

Mr. WATSON. Does the Senator want to have the executive session before the conclusion of the consideration of the

Mr. LODGE. The conclusion of the bill is so indefinite that I think we ought to get the nominations confirmed. It will take but a few moments.

Mr. STERLING. I do not think it will take long to conclude the consideration of the bill. Anyway, the Senator from Massachusetts has all day to-morrow.

Mr. MOSES. It will take some time to conclude the bill unless we get it perfectly clear that the amendment just agreed to is not going to interfere with the operation of the Government Printing Office.

Mr. STERLING. I think I have an amendment here that will cover that situation.

Mr. MOSES. I am not clear about that. I want to be very certain about it.

Mr. LODGE. I will withhold the motion for a little while, but I shall make it within a very few minutes unless the bill is disposed of promptly.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from South Dakota will be stated.

The READING CLERK. On page 41, line 21, after the word "Columbia," add the following:

and shall not apply to employees in positions the duties of which are to perform or assist in apprentice, helper, or journeyman work in a recognized trade or craft, and skilled and semiskilled laborers, except such as are under the direction and control of the custodian of a public building, or perform work which is subordinate, incidental, or preparatory to work of a professional, scientific, or technical character.

Mr. NORRIS. I want to inquire where the amendment is proposed to be inserted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On page 41, line 21, after the word "Columbia." The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from South Dakota to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MOSES. I want to offer an amendment now.

Mr. STERLING. Just a moment. I offer another amendment from the committee, which I send to the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The READING CLERK. On page 80, line 17, in lieu of the matter relating to the skilled trades service insert the following:

CLERICAL-MECHANICAL SERVICE.

The clerical-mechanical service shall include all classes of positions which are not in a recognized trade or craft and which are located in the Government Printing Office, the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, the mail equipment shop, the duties of which are to perform or to direct manual or machine operations requiring special skill or experience or to perform or direct the counting, examining, sorting, or other verification of the products of manual or machine operations.

Mr. STERLING. The amendment is the same as that handed the secretary with the exception that the Government Printing Office and the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and the mail equipment shop are specified and they were not specified in the other amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from South Dakota to the committee amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to,

I offer to the committee amendment the Mr MOSES amendment which I send to the desk and ask that it may be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment to the amendment will be stated.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, only a part of amendment No. 2, which was offered by the Senator from South Dakota, was agreed to. The portion relating to the grades was not agreed to, and those grades will have to be included in the amendment in order to take care of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and the Government Printing Office.

Mr. STERLING. The grades are a part of the amendment, but I omitted so to state when I presented the amendment.

Mr. SMOOT. I ask that the vote whereby the amendment to the amendment was agreed to may be reconsidered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah asks that the vote whereby the last amendment to the amendment was agreed to may be reconsidered. Without objection, it is so ordered. The question now is on the amendment of the Senator from South Dakota, as now modified with the inclusion of the grades, to the amendment. The Secretary will state the amendment to the amendment in the form in which it is now presented.

The Reading Clerk. On page 80 it is proposed to strike out all after line 16, down to and including line 2 on page 83, and to insert:

CLERICAL-MECHANICAL SERVICE.

and to insert:

CLERICAL-MECHANICAL SERVICE.

The clerical-mechanical service shall include all classes of positions which are not in a recognized trade or craft and which are located in the Government Printing Office, the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, the mail equipment shop, the duties of which are to perform or to direct manual or machine operations requiring special skill or experience, or to perform or direct the counting, examining, sorting, or other verification of the product of manual or machine operations.

Grade 1 shall include all classes of positions in this service the duties of which are to perform the simplest operations or processes requiring special skill and experience.

The rates of compensation for classes of positions in this service the duties of which are to operate simple machines or to perform operations or processes requiring a higher degree of skill than those in grade 1.

The rates of compensation for classes of positions in this service the duties of which are to operate machines or to perform operations or processes requiring a higher degree of skill than those in grade 1.

The rates of compensation for classes of positions in this service the duties of which are to operate machines or to perform operations or processes requiring the highest degree of skill or supervise a small number of subordinates.

The rates of compensation for classes of positions in this grade shall be 55 to 70 cents an hour.

Grade four shall include all classes of positions in this service the duties of which are to perform supervisory work over a large unit of subordinates.

The rates of compensation for classes of positions in this grade shall be 80 to 90 cents an hour.

Grade four shall include all classes of positions in this grade shall be $5.00 do the provision of the provision of the administration of a major division of a large bureau or establishment with varied work.

The rates of compensation for classes of positions in this grade shall be $2.90, $3.180, $3.420, and $3.640 a year:

Provided,

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment as modified offered by the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. Sterling] to the committee amendment.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, may I inquire of the Senator from South Dakota if this amendment to the amendment relates to the printers in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing?

Mr. STERLING. It does not relate to the printers. It merely relates to some semiskilled workers. The crafts and skilled trades are now altogether eliminated by the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the adoption, as modified, of the amendment of the Senator from South Dakota to the committee substitute.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, may I inquire of the Senator from South Dakota what are the differences between the various grades and what will be the duties of the employees in the grades calling for the highest compensation?

Mr. STERLING. The duties are to some extent, although I agree to a limited extent, described in the paragraphs before the rates of compensation are fixed. Beginning with grade 1, for example

Grade 1 shall include all classes of positions in this service the duties of which are to perform the simplest operations or processes requiring special skill and experience—

Mr. KING. Such as printers and engravers?

Mr. STERLING. Printers and engravers who are yet outside of a recognized trade or craft and below that grade.

I will take grade 5, as another example-

Grade 5 shall include all classes of positions in this service the duties of which are to be responsible for the administration of a major division of a large bureau or establishment with varied work.

Of course the duties referred to there are those largely of a supervisory character and they involve great responsibility upon the part of the person who has charge.

Mr. KING. Without taking the time to ask for an explanation for each grade, may I ask the Senator whether the duties embraced in the last grade, calling for the highest compensation, are comparable to the duties that in private printing establ'shments would be devolved upon persons having supervisory care and if the compensation here provided is comparable to the compensation in private establishments, not now when wages are perhaps exceedingly high in some trades, but in ordinary, nor-

Mr. STERLING. I think the compensation is fairly comparable with that paid in ordinary times. I wish to say further to the Senator that the idea is to give the employees of this grade about their present basic salary with the bonus added. That has been the intention all through this bill.

Mr. KING. And the basic salary was established some years ago, I believe.

Mr. STERLING. It was.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the adoption, as modified, of the amendment of the Senator from South Dakota to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the adoption of the committee amendment as amended.

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President, I now offer the amendment which I previously sent to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment to the amendment will be stated.

The Assistant Secretary. At the proper place in the amendment of the committee it is proposed to add the following:

The compensation for the clerks, first assistant clerks, and second assistant clerks of committees of the Senate, and for the same classification of clerical assistants to Senators who are not chairmen of committees shall be, respectively, $3,600, $2,500, and $2,100 per annum: Provided, That the salaries of the clerks and messengers of the Senate Committees on Appropriations, Finance, and Interstate Commerce shall be as now established by law.

The compensation for additional clerks now provided by law for committees of the Senate or for Senators who are not chairmen of committees shall be $1,500 per annum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from New Hampshire to the amendment of the committee.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, the Senator from New Hampshire has just offered a very interesting amendment, which is scarcely germane to the bill under consideration. In view of that fact, and it probably being a diversion, I shall take the opportunity of creating a little further diversion, under the latitude permitted in debate, by inviting attention to a very interesting communication appearing in the New York Herald of this day.

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President, will the Senator permit me to interrupt him?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. KING. I yield for a question.
Mr. MOSES. I wish to make a personal explanation. have no intention, of course, of depriving the Senator or any person within these walls from any diversion that might be had here this afternoon. I wish to assure the Senator, however, that I have not offered this amendment as a diversion. I have offered it in grim and deadly earnest, and it is germane to legislation which is classifying the duties and fixing the salaries of Government employees.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I am so good-natured that I will consider that it is not a diversion, that it is offered in grim and good earnest, and is perfectly pertinent and germane; and having made that concession, I shall proceed.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS-CONFERENCE REPORT.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me to present a conference report?

Mr. KING. I yield to the Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. WARREN. I send to the desk the conference report on the deficiency appropriation bill, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read.

The Assistant Secretary read the report, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 14408) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, and prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 13, 23, 27, 29, 34, 35, 39, 42, 44, 46, 47, 48, 50, 52, 53, 55, 59, 60, 61, 68,

and 73.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 25, 26, 28, 30, 81, 33, 37, 41, 43, 49, 56, 57, 58, 62, 63, 65, 67, 69, 70, 71, 74, 75, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, and 84, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 21: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 21, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Omit the matter stricken out and inserted by said amendment, and, on page 5 of the bill, in line 4, strike out the title "Botanic Garden"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 32: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 32, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment, insert "$7,500"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 38: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 38, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed, insert "$25,000"; and the Senate agree to

Amendment numbered 45: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 45, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 2 of the matter inserted by said amendment strike out the word "rebuilding" and insert in lieu thereof the words "repairing, reconstructing"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 51: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 51, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 5 of the matter inserted by said amendment, after the word "river," insert the words "on public lands"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 64: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 64, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 5 of the matter inserted by said amendment, before the sum "$4,380.67," insert "fiscal year 1918"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 85: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 85, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out the last five lines of the matter inserted by said amendment; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered S6: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 86, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the number proposed insert "4"; and the Senate agree to the same. The committee of conference have not agreed on amendments numbered 22, 24, 36, 40, 54, 66, 72, and 76.

F. E. WARREN, CHARLES CURTIS. LEE S. OVERMAN. Managers on the part of the Senate. MARTIN B. MADDEN, D. R. ANTHONY, Jr., JOSEPH W. BYRNS Managers on the part of the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming asks for the immediate consideration of the report. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider

Mr. WARREN. I move the adoption of the report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the report of the conference committee.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, if nobody else wants to speak on it, I want recognition on that question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I yielded for the purpose of submitting the conference report. Does the Senator desire to debate the report?

Mr. NORRIS. I do.

Mr. KING. Not the bill that is before the Senate?

Mr. NORRIS. No.

Mr. KING. I think in good faith, then. I should yield to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. NORRIS. I am not asking the Senator to yield. I do not think he ought to. A motion has been made to adopt the conference report. I realize that the Senator has the floor, but a conference report can not be put through here without permitting it to be debated merely because somebody has the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There was no objection to the consideration of the conference report, and therefore debate on the adoption of the report seems to the Chair to be in order.

Mr. KING. I yield to the Senator from Nebraska, as I understand that he desires to discuss the conference report.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, this is a conference report on a bill which passed the Senate last night about 10 o'clock. Nobody has read it. Nobody has had an opportunity to read it. It has not been printed. It has been only partly read even by the Clerk. Can we expect intelligent legislation when we do business in this way on a bill that involves a great many millions of dollars, and 50 or 60, perhaps a hundred, amendments?

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, if the Senator will allow me, there are not a hundred amendments to the bill,

Mr. NORRIS. Well, it will run along toward that number. The report speaks of disagreeing to amendments from 1 to 30. Nobody here knows what that means. It might just as well have been read in French; it would have been just as under-Unless we have a printed bill before us with the amendments numbered, we can not tell what they are.

Mr. WARREN. I wish to state to the Senator that this report was made in the same way that every other report is made.

Mr. NORRIS. Oh, I am not criticizing the manner in which the report is made. Everybody seems to think that he is criticized when a Senator will not permit a thing to go through here without saying something about it. I am not criticizing anybody. I suppose this report is made, as the Senator says, just the same as every other report of a similar character is made. I have not claimed otherwise; but that does not do away with the fact that none of us knows anything about it.

Mr. WARREN. It is open for debate or for inquiry.
Mr. NORRIS. That is what I am trying to do—to debate it.

Mr. President, the report ought to be printed. We ought to have an opportunity to see what there is in it.

Mr. WARREN. May I say to the Senator that, as the Senator knows, it is desired to have the report acted on here so that it can go to the House.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, we can not hear a word that is going on in the Senate Chamber. I make the point of order that the Senate is in disorder.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order, and Senators now standing will take their seats.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, what we ought to have is an explanation of all these amendments. The Senate spent all day yesterday upon this bill. It adopted in good faith a lot of amendments. Now they are all brushed aside without knowing just what, or how many, or in what condition they are, and we are going to vote blindly to approve the report. We are going to do it because we are just a few hours away from the time when we know we shall have to adjourn.

I have taken this occasion again to call attention to the slipshod way in which the Senate of the United States is legislating where there are involved hundreds of millions of dollars of the money of the people, who have to raise it by toil and labor, all because we are in a legislative jam here at the end of a short session, worse than we were ever in before, perhaps, but not as bad as we will be in two years from now, because the legislation continues to become more important year by year.

Here we are, like a lot of boys, spending all day conscientiously and earnestly debating and considering amendments to the appropriation bill. We send it to conference, and it comes back in five or six hours, and the conferees say all amendments up to 30 are rejected, and all amendments up to 10 are agreed and all the other amendments are still in disagreement. There is not a man here except the conferees who knows what amendment No. 1 is, or amendment No. 2, or 3, or 4, or 5, or any other amendment; and we are going to vote to undo to-day everything that we did yesterday, and we are going to do it because we have not time to give it proper consideration.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, I will say that we have used all the time we have to-day in the consideration of the matter. We have saved everything the Senate put in that it was possible to save. The bill was printed with the amendments that went to conference numbered, and I presume a copy can be furnished to any Senator who desires it. As to explaining the amend-ments, I should be perfectly willing to do that if time permitted.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, if the Senator should explain these amendments, it would take nearly as long as it took us when we adopted them. If we had the amendments before us and saw just what they were, perhaps they would not require an explanation in some instances. If the Senator wants to explain them, I will ask him to go ahead and explain every one of them.

Mr. WARREN. I am perfectly willing to do it. I simply dislike to waste a lot of time.

Mr. LODGE. Of course, that would result in the defeat of the bill.

Mr. NORRIS. The Senator says it is a waste of time. realize that. I am not criticizing the Senator; but the Congress has to adjourn on the 4th of March. I want to emphasize to this body, I want to emphasize to the country, that on account of the way the sessions of Congress must end, Congress must necessarily be practically impotent for the purpose of doing anything in the way of legislating for the country.

I know that after we have worked all day and amended the bill in various ways, when we take it all back the next day it is something that it is necessary for us to do. We might just as well pass these bills without reading them and let them go. After all, we are going to be at the mercy of conferees. When they bring in a report we are going to agree to it, because we know that if we do not agree to it, it means the death of the whole thing; so we are legislating by conferees and not by the House or the Senate. We have abdicated; we have turned over our powers to three men; and I am not criticizing those three men. They may be doing the best they can. very condition of things we can not accomplish anything.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. LODGE. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. KING. Mr. President— Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, I hope the Senator from Massachusetts will defer that motion for just a little while. We are on the eve now of passing the reclassification bill. For the most of the business of the Senator from Massachusetts, I think, there is ample time. I sat here last night until 10 o'clock for the purpose of getting up the reclassification bill. I got it up at the last minute before adjournment, and now, I think, we can wait a few minutes for the conclusion of the consideration of the bill.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I have been told that since 11 o'clock this morning. It will take only a few minutes to get this executive business out of the way, and it must be disposed of if we are to dispose to-morrow of the important nominations that have come in to-day.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state his inquiry. Mr. HEFLIN. Is it the purpose of the Senator to have the Senate return to legislative session?

Mr. LODGE, It is. Mr. HEFLIN. I ha I have no objection to the motion.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Massachusetts that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After two hours and five minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, I ask that the bill be laid again before the Senate.

RECLASSIFICATION OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8028) to provide for the classification of civilian positions in the District of Columbia and in the field services.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I want to discuss for a moment the pending amendment before we vote on it.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President-

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Tennessee yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

COMMISSION OF GOLD AND SILVER INQUIRY.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, I desire to submit a unanimous-consent request. On Wednesday the Senate by a unanimous vote passed Senate Joint Resolution 287, provid-ing for the appointment of a commission of gold and silver inquiry, to inquire into the condition of the gold and silver industry in the United States, and providing for the appointment of five Members of the Senate and five Members of the House. I am told that the condition of the business in the House is such that it will make it impossible for the joint resolution to receive consideration in that body. I ask unanimous consent that I may be permitted to tender the same measure as a Senate resolution, for the appointment of a Senate commission of five Members of the Senate, to sit during the recess of the Senate, and make the inquiry which was contemplated to be made by a joint commission of the two Houses.

Mr. SMOOT. That will entail some expense, and will have to go to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I ask leave to present it and have it referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

The resolution (S. Res. 469) was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate,

as follows:

Resolved, etc.. That a Senate commission is hereby created, to be known as the Senate Commission of Gold and Silver Inquiry, which shall consist of five Senators, three of whom shall be members of the majority party and two of whom shall be members of the minority party, to be appointed by the President of the Senate.

Said commission shall investigate and report to the Congress on January 1, 1924, upon the following subjects:

1. The causes of the continuing decrease in the production of gold and silver.

2. The causes of the depressed condition of the gold and silver.

and sliver.

2. The causes of the depressed condition of the gold and sliver industry in the United States.

3. The production, reduction, refining, transportation, marketing, sale, and uses of gold and sliver in the United States and elsewhere.

4. The effect of the decreased production of gold and sliver upon commerce, industry, exchange, and prices.

The said commission is further authorized:

1. To confer with citizens, associations, or corporations of foreign countries with a view to the stabilization and wider use of silver in exchange.

2. To propose, either formally or informally, to the President of the United States.

countries with a view to the stabilization and wider use of silver in exchange.

2. To propose, either formally or informally, to the President of the United States, or the heads of the proper departments, plans for negotiations with foreign governments to the same end.

The commission shall include in its report recommendations for legislation which in its opinion will tend to remedy existing conditions and shall specifically report upon the limitations of the powers of Congress in enacting relief legislation.

The commission shall elect its chairman, and vacancies occurring in the membership of the commission shall be filled in the same manner as the original appointments.

The commission or any subcommittee of its members is authorized to sit during the sessions, recesses, or adjournments of the Sixty-seventh and Sixty-eighth Congresses in the District of Columbia or elsewhere in continental United States, to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, to summon and compel the attendance of witnesses, to employ a stenographer at a cost not exceeding 25 cents per folio to report such hearings as may be had in connection with any subject which may be before said joint commission, and to employ such personal services and incur such expenses as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this resolution; such expenditure shall be paid from the countingent funds of the Senate upon vouchers authorized by the committee and signed by the chairman thereof. thereof.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. In this connection I desire to submit a table supplementary to the one which I submitted a few days ago, which shows the alarming decline in the production of gold and silver in the United States. It shows the decline in production of gold and silver in the world, the decline being startling, as this statement will show.

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Silver production of the world by continents, United States Mint Reports, 1915-1921.

		[In]	ine ounces.	Sealin	Sen Liller	e Pfends Irkin
Continents.	1915	Per cent of world pro-duction.	1921	Per cent of world production.	Increase (+), decrease (-), 1921 from 1915.	Per cent of in- crease (+), de- crease (-), 1921 from 1915
United States Canada. Mexico. North America. Central America. South America. Europe. Australia. Asia. Africa.	74, 961, 075 26, 625, 960 39, 570, 151 141, 157, 186 2, 920, 496 13, 687, 464 10, 107, 556 4, 295, 755 5, 494, 004 1, 188, 639	41.9 14.9 22.1 78.9 1.6 7.7 5.7 2.4 8.1	53,052,441 13,134,926 64,513,540 130,700,907 2,000,000 15,065,610 7,990,662 19,446,363 8,903,316 1,161,376	30. 2 7. 5 36. 8 74. 5 1. 1 8. 6 4. 6 5. 4 5. 1	-21,908,634 -13,491,034 +24,943,389 -10,456,279 -920,496 +1,378,146 -2,116,894 +5,150,608 +3,409,312 -25,663	-29. 2 -50. 8 +63. 0 -7. 4 -31. 5 +10. 1 -20. 9 +119. 8 +62. 0 -2. 2
Total for world	178, 850, 500	100.0	175, 268, 234	100.0	-3, 582, 266	-2.0

Table compiled and computed by H. N. Lawrie, managing director American Gold and Silver Institute.

Silver production in the United States by States, United States Mint Reports, 1915-1921-1922.

[Fine ounces.

		trine ounc	69.1		SNIII
State.	1915	1921	19224	Increase (+) or decrease (-) 1921 from 1915.	Per cent of in- crease (+) decrease (-) 1921 from 1915.
Alaska Arizona California Colorado Idaho Michigan Montana Nevada New Mexico Oregon South Dakota Texas Utah Washington Other States and possessions	1, 054, 634 5, 665, 672 1, 689, 924 7, 199, 74 13, 042, 466 581, 874 14, 423, 173 14, 453, 085 2, 337, 064 125, 499 197, 589 724, 580 13, 073, 471 213, 877	753, 999 2, 519, 200 2 3, 606, 708 6, 310, 694 7, 200, 319 316, 551 9, 677, 020 6, 998, 774 579, 374 53, 118 111, 670 548, 827 14, 028, 661 147, 584	652, 251 4, 198, 695 8, 119, 002 5, 951, 593 5, 965, 698 361, 912 9, 601, 648 8, 108, 027 657, 231 193, 121 121, 757 601, 765 15, 588, 734 210, 885	-300, 635 -3,146, 472 +1, 916, 784 -889, 051 -5,842, 147 -265, 323 -4, 746, 153 -7, 454, 311 -1, 757, 690 -175, 783 -955, 190 -66, 293 +21, 500	-28.53 -55.52 +113.42 -12.35 -44.79 -45.53 -32.15.57 -75.22 -57.60 -43.43 -24.28 +7.61 -30.84 +12.09
Total	74, 961, 075	53, 052, 441	⁸ 55,510, 859	-21, 908, 634	-29.23

1 Preliminary estimate of the Bureau of the Mint in cooperation with the Geologi-

¹ Prenimary estimate of the Bureau of the Mint in cooperation with the Geological Survey.

² Increase from 1915 due to rich discovery.

³ Production from siliceous ores is estimated to be less in 1922 than in 1921, the increase in the total production for 1922 over 1921 is attributed to the increase in silver derived as a by-product of lead and copper, the production of both of which increased materially in 1922.

Table compiled and computed by H. N. Lawrie, managing director, American Gold and Silver Institute.

AMENDMENT OF REVENUE LAW OF 1921-CONFERENCE REPORT. Mr. McCUMBER submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to bill (H. R. 13775) to amend the revenue act of 1921 in respect to credits and refunds, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 4. That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1 and 3, and agree to the same. Amendment numbered 2: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 2, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Omit the matter proposed to be inserted by said amendment, and on page 2 of the House bill, line 16, after the word "taxpayer," insert a colon and the following: "Provided further, That if the taxpayer has, within five years from the time the return for the taxable year 1917 was due, filed a waiver of his right to have the taxes due for such taxable year determined and assessed within five years after the return was filed, such credit or refund shall be allowed or made if claim therefor is filed either within six years from the time the return for such taxable year 1917 was due or within two years from the time the tax was paid"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 5: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 5, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by said amendment insert "b"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 6: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 6, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by said amendment insert the following: "SEC. 2. "Sec. 2. Section 3226 of the Revised Statutes, as amended by section 1318 of the revenue act of 1921, is amended by inserting before the period at the end thereof a comma and the following: unless such suit or proceeding is begun within two years after the disallowance of the part of such claim to which such suit or proceeding relates. The commissioner shall within 90 days after any such disallowance notify the taxpayer thereof by mail."

And the Senate agree to the same.

P. J. McCumber, REED SMOOT, PETER G. GERRY, Managers on the part of the Senate. W. R. GREEN, NICHOLAS LONGWORTH. W. C. HAWLEY, J. W. COLLIER, W. A. OLDFIELD, Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I ask the Senator from North Dakota to state the substance and effect of the conference agreement so that we may understand it.

Mr. McCUMBER. This bill came from the House as a simple bill to meet those cases where the department asked the taxpayer to waive the five-year limitation on the 1917 taxes. The bill gave another year for the department to examine the tax reports, and it also gave another year to the taxpayer to ask for a refund. We made several amendments, but we had to recede from the principal amendment, which related to the payment of taxes by the Alien Property Custodian, which the House refused to agree to, and so we let it go out. The others are mere clerical changes. That is all that is effectuated by the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

FREE ENTRY OF DOMESTIC CATTLE-CONFERENCE REPORT.

Mr. McCUMBER. I have another conference report to present. It is relative to importing cattle, allowing them to remain more than the eight months permitted under the present law. It relates to cattle which are brought in from Mexico, and which have had to be kept there on account of drought for a little longer period. It allows them to be returned for a period of four months beyond the eight months. The two Senators from New Mexico join most heartily in the measure.

The report was read, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 422) permitting the entry free of duty of certain domestic animals which have crossed the boundary line into foreign countries, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 1 and 2.

> P. J. McCumber, REED SMOOT, A. A. JONES, Managers on the part of the Senate. W. R. GREEN, NICHOLAS LONGWORTH, W. C. HAWLEY, J. W. COLLIER, WM. A. OLDFIELD, Managers on the part of the House.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.
Mr. McCUMBER. I am much obliged to the Senator from Tennessee for yielding.

Mr. McKELLAR. I now yield to the Senator from Louisiana.

CONTROL OF FLOODS ON THE MISSISSIPPI.

Mr. RANSDELL. I report back favorably from the Committee on Commerce House bill 18810, to continue the improvement of the Mississippi River and for the control of its floods. I ask for its immediate consideration. I do not think there will be any debate on it.

Mr. SMOOT. I object at this time. I want to get the classification bill through.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It will go to the calendar.
Mr. ROBINSON. I suggest that the Senator request that the report lie on the table.

Mr. RANSDELL. I ask that it may lie on the table.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It will lie on the table.

Mr. ROBINSON. I hope the Senator from Utah will investigate the matter as soon as he can, so that we may consider the bill at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. RANSDELL. I would like to say to the Senator from Utah that if we can not pass it this evening it can not be enacted at all at this session. It is a bill for flood control, and is of very great importance.

JUDICIAL DISTRICTS IN IOWA.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I desire to call up from the calendar Senate bill 4614, adding a place for the holding of a Federal court in Iowa. The situation in the House is such that if it is passed here and can go to the House in the morning it will be enacted; otherwise it will fail. It will take but a minute.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 4614) to amend section 81 of the act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary," approved March 3, 1911, which was read, as follows:

He it enacted, etc., That section 81 of the act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary," approved March 3, 1911, as amended by the act of Pebruary 23, 1916, and the act of April 27, 1916, be, and the same is hereby, amended to read

Be it enacted, etc., That section S1 of the act entitled "An act to colify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary," approved March 3, 1911, as amended by the act of February 23, 1916, and the act of April Tr, 1916, be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC SI. The State of Iowa is divided into two judicial districts, to be known as the northern and southern districts of Iowa.

"The morthern district shall include the Allamakes, Dubrague, Buchanua, Clayton, Delaware, Fayerte, Winneshiek, Howard, Chickasaw, Bremer, Blackhawk, Floyd, Mitchell, and Jackson, which shall constitute the eastern division of said district; also the territory embraced on the date last mentioned in the counties of Jones, Cedar, Linn, Iowa, Benton, Tama, Grundy, and Hardin, which shall constitute the castern division of said district; also the territory embraced on the date last mentioned in the counties of Emmer, Palo Alto, Pocahonta, Calhoun, Carroll, Kossuth, Humboldt, Webster, Winnebago, Hancock, Wright, Hamilton, Worth, Cerro Gordo, Franklin, and Butler, which shall constitute the central division; also the ierritory embraced on the date last mentioned in the counties of Dickinson, Clay, Buena Vista, Sac. Oscoola, O'Brien, Cherokee, Ida, Lyon, Sioux, Flymouth, Woodbury, and Monona, which shall constitute the western alvision.

The produce on the Gurth Thesday in April and the first Tuesday in December, and at Waterloo on the second Tuesdays in May and September; for the Cedar Rapids division, at Cedar Rapids on the first Tuesday in April and the fourth Tuesday in September; for the central division, at Fort Dodge on the second Tuesdays in May and September; and for the western division, at Sloux City on the fourth Tuesday in May and the third Tuesday in October.

"The southern district shall include the territory embraced on the late last mentioned in the Counties of July, 1910, in the counties of Crawford, Harrison, Shelby, Audubon, Cass, Pottawattamie, Mills, and Montgomery, which shall constitute

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment. ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RECLASSIFICATION OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8928) to provide for the classification of civilian positions within the District of Columbia and in the field services.

Mr. McKELLAR. I understand the pending question is on the amendment of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That is correct.

Mr. McKELLAR. I want to read the amendment. It is as

The compensation for clerks, first assistant clerks, and second assistant clerks of committees of the Senate, and for the same classification of clerical assistants to Senators who are not chairmen of committees shall be, respectively, $3,600, $2,500, and $2,100 per annum: Provided, That the salaries of the clerks and messengers of the Senate Committees on Appropriations, Finance, and Interstate Commerce shall be as now established by law. The compensation for additional clerks now provided by law for committees of the Senate or for Senators who are not chairmen of committees shall be $1,500 per annum.

I favor this amandment. We are just about to recommend

I favor this amendment. We are just about to pass a reclassification bill in which the salaries of all employees of the Government are raised. Practically everyone seems to think it is the proper thing for the Congress to do. Surely we should treat our own employees in the same fair way that we treat the employees of the other branches of the Government. It does seem to me that our own clerks are entitled to the sums provided for in the amendment presented by the Senator from New Hampshire.

I hope Senators will agree to it. I want to say for my chief clerk that he has earned, ever since he has served me, fully $3,600 a year and even more. I think probably most of the Senators have clerks who have well earned that much money and are entitled to it. It seems to me the amendment ought to be adopted.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President— Mr. McKELLAR. I ask the Senator from South Dakota if he will not accept the amendment and let it be agreed to?

Mr. STERLING. I had thought at one time that I could not accept the amendment and that I would move to lay it on the table, but on reflection I have concluded to accept the amendment and let the matter go to conference.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, it seems to me that if Senators will stop and think they will realize that the proposed legislation is illogically placed on the pending bill, if it is placed there. Here we have clerks serving the committee of the Senate, and it is proposed to put them in a law. If the provision should stay in and is passed by the Senate and House and signed by the President, we will have lost control of the clerkships of the Senate committees at once. If we conclude to change one in any way, we would have to pass a law through the House and Senate and have it signed by the President before we could do so.

What would the House think if we should go over there with the reclassification measure covering the clerkships of the Government if we have included in it the committee clerks of the Senate? The House committee clerks and Members' clerks are not included. What would we think if they put that kind of an amendment on general legislation for us to pass? Would we not say, "That is your business. Handle your own clerks; handle your own committees. Provide for whatever assistants you want, and that is what we will do."

It seems to me we are loading the bill down with a fundamentally illogical proposition. It will come home to roost if we put it in the bill. We have control of our committees now, We can regulate, without the action of the House or the President, the assistants that we shall have, but if we once establish the precedent, either House must then go through all the formality of providing through the means of a law before we can change a committeeship or clerkship to a committee, and we will then realize what we are really into.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Does not the Senator also be-lieve that the House might very justly refuse to ask for a con-

Mr. NORRIS. I should think they might. It seems to me that the House would be justified in resenting the attempt of the Senate to put its clerkships into permanent law.

Mr. CAMERON. Mr. President, I have an amendment which I desire to offer. I ask that the amendment follow the amendment offered by the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. KING. Is it an amendment to the amendment, or is it an original amendment.

Mr. CAMERON. It is an amendment to the amendment.

Mr. KING. Let it be reported.

The READING CLERK, Add at the end of the amendment offered by the Senator from New Hampshire the following:

Press gallery assistant superintendent, $1,800; messenger for service to press correspondents, $1,400; office of Sergeant at Arms and Doorkeeper, 43 messengers at $1,800 each.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Nebraska will state the inquiry.

Mr. NORRIS. What was done with the amendment of the Senator from New Hampshire?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Arizona is moving an amendment to the amendment of the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. NORRIS. Why does not the Senator include the pages,

Mr. KING. Does the Senator from Arizona desire to occupy the floor?

Mr. CAMERON. I do not.

THE INTERNATIONAL COURT.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, the admonitions of the able Senator from Nebraska ought to receive the attention of the Senate, but they will probably be unheeded, because congruity and consistency in legislation are not virtues possessed by this Congress. Nor are appeals for the Treasury considered with Congress. Nor are appeals for the Treasury considered with approval. Indeed, whenever an effort is made to increase appropriations there is in most cases a strong and triumphant affirmative vote. The Treasury of the United States by many is regarded as common prey. Of course, I am speaking wholly impersonal, but there is, in my opinion, too little regard for the Government, in the matter of appropriations, as a result of which the expenses of the Federal Government are constantly mounting to great heights and the burdens of taxation are becoming more oppressive to the people.

But I did not rise to dilate upon the amendment which was offered by the Senator from New Hampshire, and which I think the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. STERLING] ought not to have accepted. Its incongruity must be manifest to everyone.

The Senator from Nebraska very pertinently inquired why not put upon the reclassification bill a provision for the pages and for every employee in the Capitol-temporary employees, -converting the reclassification bill into a measure dealing with the employees of the Senate, and which are regarded as temporary positions, wholly within the control of the Senate, regardless of their importance. It is to me a most absurd proposition, and I regret that the able Senator in charge of the bill has felt constrained, evidently in his anxiety to secure the prompt passage of the bill, to accept an amendment dealing with matters not pertinent, not germane, and indeed inconsistent.

Mr. JONES of Washington. May I ask if the Senator from South Dakota has accepted the amendment?

Mr. KING. The Senator indicated quite clearly that it was his purpose to accept it. I think there was some vacillation in his position, but I assume he expected to accept the amendment in order that it might go to conference.

Mr. McKELLAR. I thought the Senator was very outspoken in his acceptance of the amendment.

Mr. KING. I prefer not to accept the statement of the Senator from Tennessee upon the prospective action of the Senator from South Dakota. He may speak for himself, as he does with great lucidity, and I prefer to hear from the Senator from South Dakota as to his purpose in dealing with this amendment.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Utah yield?

Mr. KING.

Mr. KING. Certainly. Mr. NORRIS. The Senator from South Dakota can only accept an amendment as far as he is individually concerned.

Mr. KING. Certainly. There are many Senators who do not accept it.

Mr. NORRIS. We do not accept it at all. Mr. KING. We rebel against his leadership.

Mr. NORRIS. We rebel against his leadership. We are revolutionists!

Mr. STERLING. I want to say for the benefit of the Senator from Washington that it was my impression that I should move to table the amendment, just as I stated awhile ago when it was presented. But I concluded that I would accept it to end debate and that it might go to conference.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Apparently it is bringing on more debate.

Mr. STERLING. It appears that it has done so.

Mr. KING. I hope that I may now be permitted to conclude the observations which I rose to submit. I shall occupy but

Before the Senate went into executive session I had secured recognition and was about to call attention to an interesting article appearing in this morning's Republican newspaper, the New York Herald. I was taken from the floor by a motion to proceed to the consideration of executive business. I desire to complete my reference to that article and have it read for the benefit of Republican Senators.

It is a great pleasure to occasionally find a common ground upon which I can stand with the President of the United States. He has recommended many measures, among them the ship subsidy bill and the Fordney tariff bill, which I could not support. He urged with the utmost pertinacity the ship subsidy hill, which a majority of the American people regarded as unwise and subversive of the best interests of the country. But I am glad to support the President in his efforts to secure the adhesion of the United States to the protocol and the statute by which our country will become a member of the permanent court of international justice. The recent message of the President asking the Senate to advise and consent to this action upon the part of this Government is exceedingly important and deserves the commendation of the American people. This policy is in harmony with the best traditions of our country and follows the course advocated by many of our Presidents and ablest statesmen. It will, if accepted, make for world peace and progress.

The President has asked that the United States become a member of the Permanent International Court which has recently been organized and is now functioning at The Hague. He perceives that this great judicial tribunal, in the organization of which Hon. Elihu Root played a most conspicuous part, is important for the peace of the world and that it will contribute powerfully to a diminution of the causes and possibilities of war.

I understand that the Committee on Foreign Relations, a majority of the members being Republicans, has agreed to take no action upon the matter submitted by the President with the earnest request that it should receive the attention of the Senate before adjournment. The senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. Lodge] has stated that further consideration of the President's message and request would be postponed until the next session of Congress; and if we are to believe the public press, the President of the United States has acquiesced in this suggestion. I can not believe that the Senator from Massachusetts has been accurately quoted, nor can I believe that the President, who urged in his message the consideration of this important subject before adjournment, has changed his view and is willing that his message be silently buried by the Republicans of the Senate in the musty vaults of the committee room.

Now, Mr. President, I direct attention to the article appearing in this morning's issue of the New York Herald, written by Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, an eminent Republican, a man of ability and erudition, and who is able to speak with authority upon national and international questions. I ask that the article may be read at the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The article will be read as requested

The reading clerk read as follows:

THE INTERNATIONAL COURT-NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER IS IN FAVOR OF OUR JOINING IT.

The reading clerk read as follows:

THE INTERNATIONAL COURT—NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER IS IN FAVOR OF OUR JOINING IT.

To the New York Herald: It is with profound regret that I see the great influence of the New York Herald thrown against prompt acceptance of President Harding's recommendation that the United States take steps formally to share in the organization and work of the existing international court of justice and to accept its jurisdiction in justiciable controversies arising between our Nation and any other.

This is not only fixed American policy but in particular it is oft declared Republican Party policy. A reading of the national platforms adopted by the Republican Party at the conventions of 1990, 1994, 1998, 1912, 1918, and 1920 will show the party's developing sense of the importance of this step and the various forms of its declared adherence to the principle involved. The New York State Republican convention which met at Saratoga in 1918 by unanimous vote made a still more definite and specific declaration.

The Sixty-fourth Congress, on August 29, 1916, enacted into law a declaration of the international policy of the United States, which specifically includes a plan for a court of arbitration or other tribunal to which disputed questions between nations shall be referred for adjudication and peaceful settlement.

President Roosevelt's notable speech at Christlania included this principle among the four points of the international program which be then advanced and supported.

The proposal of President Harding is that the American Government shall now definitely act in a way that will make good its oft-repeated declarations of policy. He proposes that we move forward in the early way that is now practicable, namely, by making use of the existing court, whose very framework was fashioned by American thought and on the basis of American experience.

The acceptance of President Harding's recommendation no more involves membership in or dependence on the Holy Roman Empire. The League of Nations as

NEW YORK, March 1.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, just a word. It is evident that this distinguished Republican considers that there is still an unsettled international problem, one which affects the relations of the United States to other nations. He does not say that the League of Nations is dead, but it is apparent from his presentation that he perceives that there must be cooperation between world powers and that an international court is important in the development of a better international spirit and in the promotion of world peace. May I say to those who lay the flattering unction to their souls that the League of Nations is dead and that the advocates of national selfishness have destroyed any future hope of international cooperation that they will have a rude awakening. The world is vibrant with the spirit of fellowship and cooperation, and notwithstanding the animosities and conflicts which now threaten another conflagration, there are forces, moral and ethical and spiritual, which, operating powerfully throughout the world, will in the end still the tempests and bring into happy accord the nations and peoples of the world. This is not the time for the cynic, the narrow and selfish individualist or nationalist; it is the hour when real leadership is needed, when men of vision and faith and loyalty to the universal truths of nature and the indestructible forces of righteousness, and the principles of Christian unity and fellowship shall carry the banner and point the way to world solidarity. The American people are in favor of cooperation between the United States and other nations; they are in favor of an economic conference for the purpose of stabilizing exchange, aiding in trade and commerce, and in the promotion of the peace of the world. They are particularly anxious that the United States should participate in the great international tribunal now functioning at The Hague and contribute, materially and otherwise, to the establishment of this great court, which though outgrowth of the League of Nations, has been recognized as a world tribunal and as an assurance of the development of the spirit of law and the forces which promote order and international good will.

RECLASSIFICATION OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 8928) to provide for the classification of civilian positions within the District of Columbia and in the

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Arizona [Mr. Cameron] to the amendment of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. Moses].

Mr. CAMERON. I ask for a division.

The question being put, on a division, the amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. McKellar. Mr. President, I do not see the author of the amendment here, but I desire to offer the following amendment to the amendment:

The secretary to the Vice President, $5,000.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment to the amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from New Hampshire to the committee amendment. [Putting the question.] The Mr. McKELLAR. I ask for the yeas and nays. The noes have it.

The yeas and nays were not ordered, and the amendment to the amendment was rejected.

Mr. SMOOT. I desire to offer another amendment which I have just noticed should be made. Title by which the act may be cited is stated as being "The classification act of 1922." I move, on page 1, line 4, to strike out the figures "1922" and to insert "1923."

Mr. STERLING. I had it in mind to offer that amendment. The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment to the committee amendment is agreed to. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment as amended.

Mr. McKELLAR. I offer the following amendment to the bill, to be inserted in the proper place:

The compensation for the clerks, first assistant clerks, and second assistant clerks of committees of the Senate and for the same classification of clerical assistants to Senators who are not chairmen of committees shall be, respectively, $3,300, $2,200, and $2,000 per annum: Provided, That the salaries of the clerks and messengers of the Senate Committees on Appropriations, Finance, and Interstate Commerce shall be as now established by law. The compensation for additional clerks now provided by law for committees of the Senate or for Senators who are not chairman of committees shall be $1,500 per annum. The compensation for the secretary to the Vice President shall be $4,500.

Mr. President, I merely wish to say that, as compared with the amendment offered by the Senator from New Hampshire, my amendment proposes a reduction of $300 in the salaries of the principal clerks of Senators, $200 in the salaries of the first assistant clerks, and $100 in the salaries of the second assistant clerks, so that their salaries will be, respectively, $3,300, $2,200, and $2,000, leaving the salary of the fourth clerk as heretofore, It seems to me that the clerks are entitled to this amount of consideration, and I hope that Senators will vote for the amend-

Mr. SMOOT. What did the Senator from Tennessee say the increase would be in the salary of the first clerks of Senators? Mr. McKELLAR. The salary of those clerks would be $3,300 instead of $2,750 per annum.

Mr. SMOOT. That $2,750 includes the bonus.

Mr. McKELLAR. It includes the bonus, as everybody knows. They get $2,750 now, while under the amendment they would get $3,300. It does seem to me we ought to do this much in justice to our clerks, and I hope the Senate will adopt the amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Tennessee to the committee amendment.

Mr. NORRIS. I ask that the amendment proposed by the Senator from Tennessee to the committee amendment may be read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Tennessee to the committee amendment will be

The reading clerk read the amendment to the amendment.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, if that amendment should be adopted and should become a law, how could a Senator get rid of his secretary or clerk if he wanted to? Senators are not going to release all their power over the clerks in their offices; but if this bill shall finally be passed with this amendment in it the provisions of the amendment would become law, and would be fixed.

Mr. McKELLAR. Will the Senator explain why that would SMOOT. Because the provisions of the amendment would become statute law, and hereafter the Appropriations Committee would have nothing to do with making any changes so far as the clerks of committees and other clerks are concerned.

Mr. McKELLAR. There is a law now fixing the salaries of these employees precisely in the same way.

Mr. SMOOT. No; the number and salaries of these employees are fixed every year and changes are made from year to year. This amendment, if adopted and finally passed, would become the fixed law. I do not want to be in a position where I am compelled to have a clerk that I can not get rid of.

Mr. STANLEY. Mr. President, I wish to ask the Senator from Utah a question.

Mr. SMOOT. I yield.
Mr. STANLEY. I will ask the Senator to explain how this amendment changes the tenure of office of the secretaries and clerks to Senators who are now in office.

Mr. SMOOT. The amendment, if adopted, would fix by permanent law the salaries of the clerks. Under present conditions if I want to make a change I simply appoint another man and give notice of that appointment to the financial clerk of the Senate. In that way I can make a change in my office any time I want to do so.

Mr. McKELLAR. That could be done in precisely the same way under this amendment if it should become a part of the law.

Mr. SMOOT. There is nothing in the amendment which so provides.

Mr. McKELLAR. There is nothing to provide that it can not be done. I might also say there is nothing in the present law which provides that it can or can not be done, but, of course, a Senator can change his secretary or clerk whenever he desires to under the present law, and he could do so under this amend-

I wish to say to the Senator that if the amendment should finally be adopted its provisions would become a law just as any other act of Congress and would remain on the statute books until a subsequent act of Congress repealed it. The appropriations for our employees are made annually, and there is not a year that some kind of a change is not made, not only as to the number of clerks in some of the committees, due to changed conditions, but likewise salaries are changed and made different in the case of one committee as compared to another. Under this amendment, however, if it should finally prevail, if a change were desired, we would have to amend the law, which would open the whole question every year, and perhaps even twice a year.

Mr. STANLEY. Could the amendment of the Senator from Tennessee be so amended as to remedy that defect?

Mr. SMOOT. I do not think so. The Senate has always maintained the right of appropriating whatever they wanted to provide for their employees and for all expenses to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate. The House has maintained the same right on its part. The Senate never undertakes on an appropriation bill to affect in any way the employees of the House. I remember one case during the 20 years I have been here when such an attempt was made, and I recall what occurred in the House of Representatives. I felt that the House was absolutely right. The custom to which I have referred of each House providing for its own employees has prevailed ever since the two Houses were first organized.

Mr. HARRELD. Mr. President, who fixes the salaries under the present system? I have never known the question to come before the Senate.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, they are fixed by the Appropriations Committee.

Mr. HARRELD. No one else has anything to say about them?

Mr. SMOOT. Each Senator has a say. There is not a year that some Senator does not come before the committee and ask that a change be made.

Mr. HARRELD. I do not see why Senators would not have the same right under the proposed amendment.

Mr. SMOOT. If the amendment were adopted, then, in order to change a salary, we would have to amend the law, for an act of Congress would provide what the salaries shall here-

Mr. HARRELD. Does not the Senator think it is a good time to let the Senate have some say in these matters, rather than merely the Appropriations Committee?

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, the Senate does act on them. The Senate itself has fixed the salaries of its employees and can now fix by rule the salary of each one of its employees. It can say that the Committee on Civil Service shall have a certain number of clerks and provide what their salaries shall be. The House in the case of a similar committee or any other committee can do and does do the same thing. It would not be proper for us to say to the House, "Your Committee on Agri-culture shall have two clerks and one of them shall receive such a salary and the other a certain other salary." They insist on determining the number of their employees and the compensation they shall receive and change it when they please, and we do the same thing here.

Here is an amendment which, if finally adopted, will become a law-not a Senate resolution-and if we should want to change it, it would be necessary to pass a law through both Houses of Congress and it would have to be signed by the President.

Mr. HARRELD. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator

Mr. NORRIS. If this is put on the bill, and goes to the House, the House, in my judgment, will either resent it and refuse even to go to conference on it, or they will pass it and put it in the law as a joke on the Senate.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, the Senator will recall that just six years ago, I believe—I think the bill was voted on after I was elected to the Senate, and while I was still a Member of the House-the House increased the salaries of their clerks by adding some $1,500, I believe.

Mr. NORRIS. We did not have anything to do with that, Mr. McKELLAR. Oh, yes; it was passed by the House, and the Senate agreed to it.

Mr. NORRIS. No; the House fixed that.
Mr. McKELLAR. Oh, no; it was in the form of a law, and was put in the appropriation bill, and the Senate had to agree to it.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; when we pass an appropriation bill, no matter who gets the money or where it goes, it has to be in the form of a law.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senate had to agree to it, and it did agree to it, just exactly as the House will agree to the compensation of our employees being fixed here. Why, of course the House is not going to take issue with the Senate about what compensation shall be paid to Senate employees. believe it will object to it in the slightest degree.

Mr. President, of course we are changing the law; yes. The salaries of our clerks now are $2,500, and while this reclassification bill is being passed some of us believe that our secretaries should receive more. I think they earn more. I know mine does, and I believe the secretaries of other Senators do, and it is nothing but fair and right.

This talk about a Senator not having control of his clerk under this law is simply-well, I will not characterize it. I will just say that the Senator is wholly mistaken about it. A Senator will have the same right to discharge or change his clerk that he has now. There is no change in the world in the status of the clerk. A Senator has a perfect right to discharge his clerk or change his clerk at any time. The only effect of this amendment will be to increase the salary from $2,740 to $3,300, in the case of the chief secretary. I think that when we are raising the salary of every other employee of the Government here in the city of Washington, it is as little as we can do to give to our secretaries a fair and reasonable wage for the work done.

Every Senator knows how valuable his secretary is to him. He has to go early and late. He is at the departments every day. He is at work all the time in the majority of cases, and he is entitled to $3,300 rather than $2,750. The only issue here is whether we are going to give him the increase in salary to which he is entitled, or whether we are not. There is no other question involved.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, to accomplish what the Senator wants to accomplish will require a Senate resolution only. It is not necessary to pass a bill to get it, and we will not get anywhere with this law.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. President, I am in favor of this increase. I so voted yesterday. I shall vote against this amendment, however, because there is only a slight possibility at best of the reclassification bill being passed by the House to-morrow. It is certain that it will not be passed if we are to include the salaries of secretaries and clerks to Senators, not because the House would attempt to fix them, but because if we include ours they will insist upon amendments including theirs, and in my judgment it will mean the certain defeat of the bill. Therefore, I shall vote against the amendment to the amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKellar] to the amendment of the committee. [Putting the question:] The 'noes" have it, and the amendment to the amendment is rejected.

Mr. McKELLAR and Mr. HEFLIN called for the yeas and

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is the demand seconded?

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Let the roll be called.

The roll was called, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ball Fernald McCormick McCumber McKellar Sheppard Shortridge George Hale Brandegee Brookhart Bursum Calder Cameron Hale Harreld
Harris
Heflin
Jones, Wash.
Kellogg
Keyes
King
La Follette
Lenroot
Lodge Smith McKinley McNary Moses Norris Oddie Smoot Stanley Sterling Sutherland Wadsworth Walsh, Mass. Willis Capper Cummins Curtis Dial Overman Pepper Ransdell Dillingham Reed, Pa. Robinson Ernst

The VICE PRESIDENT. Forty-nine Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee as amended.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

Mr. STERLING. I move that the Senate insist on its amendment and request a conference with the House, and that the Chair appoint the conferees upon the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Vice President appointed Mr. Sterling, Mr. Smoot, and Mr. McKellar conferees on the part of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED.

Mr. SUTHERLAND, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that on March 2, 1923, they presented to the President of the United States the following enrolled bills:

S. 4197. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to issue to certain persons and certain corporations permits to explore, or leases of, certain lands that lie south of the medial line of the main channel of Red River, in Oklahoma, and for other purposes;

S. 4583. An act granting the consent of Congress to the State of South Dakota for the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River between Charles Mix County and Gregory County, S. Dak.; S. 4579. An act to authorize the Lee County bridge district No. 2, in the State of Arkansas, to construct a bridge over the St. Francis River;

S. 4122. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Interstate Toll Bridge Co. for construction of a bridge across Red River between Montague County, Tex., and Jefferson County, Okla.;

S. 4235. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Charlie Bridge Co. for construction of a bridge across Red River between Clay County, Tex., and Cotton County, Okla.;

S. 4387. An act to authorize the building of a bridge across the Tugaloo River, between South Carolina and Georgia.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Overhue, its enrolling clerk, announced that the House had passed without amendment the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 282) to amend the resolution of December 29, 1920, entitled "Joint resolution to create a Joint Committee on the Reorganization of the Administrative Branch of the Government.'

The message also announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 4160) to amend the act of Congress entitled "An act to establish a commission for the purpose of securing information in connection with questions relative to interstate commerce in coal, and for other purposes," approved September 22, 1922, with amendments, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message further announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 4216) authorizing the sale of real property no longer required for military purposes, with amendments, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message also announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 14401) to amend and modify the war risk insurance act, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

MISSISSIPPI RIVER FLOOD CONTROL.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, I move that the Senate take a recess until 11 o'clock to-morrow morning.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, I hope the Senator will withhold that motion for a moment.

Mr. McCUMBER. I hope the Senator will withhold the

Mr. CURTIS. I am willing to withhold it for a moment, just for routine business, but not for any debate.

Mr. RANSDELL. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from Louisiana?

Mr. CURTIS. I yield to the Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. RANSDELL. I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the flood control bill which is lying on the table.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the title of the bill.

The READING CLERK. A bill (H. R. 13810) to continue the improvement of the Mississippi River and for the control of its floods

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

Mr. SMOOT. Let it be read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the bill. The reading clerk read the bill, as follows:

The reading clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That for controlling the floods of the Mississippi River and continuing its improvement from the Head of the Passes to the mouth of the Ohlo River, in accordance with the provisions of section 1 of "An act to provide for the control of the floods of the Mississippi River and of the Sacramento River, Calif., and for other purposes," approved March 1, 1917, the Secretary of War is hereby empowered, authorized, and directed to carry on continuously, by hired labor or otherwise, the plans of the Mississippi River Commission heretofore or hereafter adopted, to be paid for as appropriations may from time to time be made by law; and a sum not to exceed $10,000,000 annually is hereby authorized to be appropriated for that purpose for a period of six years beginning July 1, 1924.

Any funds which may hereafter be appropriated under authority of this act, and which may hereafter be appropriated oner authority of the Passes and Rock Island, Ill., and upon the tributaries and outlets of said river in so far as they may be affected by the flood waters of said river in so far as they may be affected by the flood waters of Said river.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I do not understand why that Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I do not understand why that last paragraph is in the bill.

Mr. CURTIS. If it is going to lead to debate, I must object. Mr. RANSDELL. It will not lead to debate. I can explain it, I think, to the Senator's satisfaction in two minutes.

Mr. SMOOT. I just want to call attention to the reason why it seems to me so improper to be in this bill, and then the Senator can aswer or not, as he pleases. I want to call the attention of the Senator to the wording of that paragraph:

Any funds which may hereafter be appropriated-

It makes no difference when, no difference what amount is to be expended as this measure provides if it becomes a law, I do not remember any such provision ever being put into a law. If the Senator has any reason why any such provision as that should be enacted into law, I should like to know it.

Mr. RANSDELL. I will say that those terms were very carefully worked out by the president of the Mississippi River Commission and the Chief of Engineers. It is to authorize the Mississippi River Commission to expend such sums as we may appropriate under the terms of this act on any works of flood control on the river, or on the tributaries, where we have authorized the commission to expend money.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, that has been in the law all the time, ever since the jurisdiction of the Mississippi River Commission was extended.

Mr. RANSDELL. It does not change the law at all, as I understand it.

Mr. SMOOT. I dislike to even suggest that the Senator from Arkansas is mistaken, and I do not know that he is.

Mr. ROBINSON. I am not mistaken. My own recollection is confirmed by the statement of one more familiar with floodcontrol matters than anyone else, the senior Senator from Louisiana; and it is necessary, especially for the administration of the funds in cases of emergency. It would be difficult to provide for emergent conditions if that provision were not in the law.

Mr. SMOOT. I want to call attention to one more thing, and then I shall say no more. This bill calls for $60,000,000. Yesterday evening, just before adjournment, the Republican Party was charged with making extravagant appropriations, and with appropriating more money than we did a year ago. Now we are faced with a $60,000,000 appropriation.

Mr. RANSDELL. The bill does not appropriate a cent. It authorizes an appropriation for a term of six years.

Mr. SMOOT. Of course, the Senator knows the money is to be paid. If it was not, the Senator would not be asking for the passage of the bill.

Mr. RANSDELL. Only as hereafter appropriated.

Mr. SMOOT. Of course, we know it will be appropriated. Does the Senator think there is a Senator on this floor who would hesitate one moment to vote to appropriate the money after the passage of this act?

Mr. RANSDELL. It is not an appropriation now; it is to cover a period of six years, and it may last a longer period than six years. The flood control act did.

Mr. SMOOT. I think we all understand just what it means. I know that if it passes, Senators will never see me standing upon the floor of the Senate and objecting to an appropriation to conform with the act as it is passed to-day. Any Senator would be unreasonable and unjust; he would have no reason to advance for such an act. It means an appropriation of

If the Senate and the House feel that the money should be appropriated, well and good. I am not objecting to it, but I simply wanted to call attention to the fact that Senators cry loudly about appropriations made by this administration, caused many and many and many a time on account of the recent war, and to readjust conditions which have been caused in this country through the war, by the last administration. If they are to be charged to an administration, though I do not want to do that, I want to say that those things ought to be taken into consideration.

I am not going to object to the passage of the bill at this time. I simply wanted to say that, because I want at least to have some semblance of justice and right in criticisms which may be directed to this side of the Chamber.

Mr. RANSDELL. I sympathize with the Senator's remarks, and I hope we can have a vote.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. CURTIS. I yield to the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. McCumber].

INCOME TAX OF NONRESIDENT ALIENS,

Mr. McCUMBER. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 14050) to amend the revenue act of 1921 in respect to income tax of nonresident aliens.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be read for informa-

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enucted, etc., That section 210 of the revenue act of 1921 is amended, to take effect January 1, 1922, to read as follows:

" NORMAL TAX.

"SEC. 210. (a) That in lieu of the tax imposed by section 210 of the revenue act of 1918 there shall be levied, collected, and paid for each taxable year upon the net income of every individual (except as provided in subdivision (b) of this section) a normal tax of 8 per cent of the amount of the net income in excess of the credits provided in section 216, except that in the case of a citizen or resident of the United States the rate upon the first $4,000 of such excess amount shall be 4 per cent.

"(b) In lieu of the tax imposed by subdivision (a) there shall be levied, collected, and paid for the taxable year 1922 and each taxable year thereafter, upon the net income of every nonresident alien individual, a resident of a contiguous country, a normal tax equal to the sum of the following:

"(1) Four per cent of the amount of the net income attributable to compensation for labor or personal services performed in the United States in excess of the credits provided in subdivisions (d) and (e) of section 216; but the amount taxable at such 4 per cent rate shall not exceed $4.000; and

"(2) Eight per cent of the amount of the net income in excess of the sum of (A) the amount taxed under paragraph (1) plus (B) the credits provided in section 216."

Sec. 2. That subdivision (e) of section 216 of the revenue act of 1921 is amended, to take effect January 1, 1922, to read as follows:

"(e) In the case of a nonresident alien individual, or of a citizen entitled to the benefits of section 262, the personal exemption shall be only $1,000. The credit provided in subdivision (d) shall not be allowed in the case of a nonresident alien individual unless he is a resident of a contiguous country, nor in the case of a citizen entitled to the benefits of section 262."

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the imme-

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

READJUSTMENT OF LOSSES OF DISBURSING AGE

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, last evening we placed an amendment on the deficiency appropriation bill, urged very strongly by the Secretary of Commerce, to provide for the readjustment by the accounting office of the losses of disbursing officers for exchange, and so forth, provided under appropriation acts, but which thereafter they were deprived of by a ruling of the comptroller just for certain years. The conferees on the deficiency appropriation bill had to leave the amendment out of the report, because it was legislation on the

The Committee on Commerce has authorized a favorable report upon the measure, and I want to say that it has been favorably reported by the Interstate Commerce Committee of the House and is on the House Calendar. I believe if we can pass it now, we can get it through the House, and it will enable not only a correction of an injustice to men who deserve this action but will also save others from a very great injustice. I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration,

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill S. 4637 will be reported for the information of the Senate.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the General Accounting Office is hereby authorized and directed to allow credit in the respective accounts of disbursing agents under the Department of Commerce for payment of loss by exchange on salary and per diem checks issued under appropriations respectively for the fiscal years 1917 to 1922, inclusive, containing a provision for "exchange on official checks," the accounts of which payments may have been heretofore settled or may hereafter become the matter of settlement.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, the provisions of the bill having passed the Senate in connection with the deficiency appropriation bill, I see no objection to the passage of the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to its immediate consideration?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment. ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. CURTIS. I understand there are some House bills which were not disposed of this morning, and therefore I move that the Senate adjourn until 11 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. SMITH. Before the Chair puts the motion, is it proposed that we shall have a morning hour to-morrow?

Mr. CURTIS. Yes. I move that the Senate adjourn until 11 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President-

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Kansas yield to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. CURTIS. No: I can not yield.

Mr. McNARY. I want to call up a House joint resolution. It will not take-

I can not yield for that to-night. I insist on my motion to adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate (at 8 o'clock and 55 minutes p. m.) adjourned until to-morrow, Saturday, March 3, 1923, at 11 o'clock a. m.

CONFIRMATION OF JUDGE JOHN F. M'GEE.

In executive session this day, during the consideration of the nomination of John F. McGee, of Minnesota, to be United States district judge for the district of Minnesota, on request of Mr. LA FOLLETTE, and by unanimous consent, the injunction of secrecy was removed from certain votes and proceedings in connection therewith, as follows:

Mr. La Follette moved that the nomination be postponed during the remainder of this session of Congress

Mr. McNary moved to amend the motion of Mr. La Follette so as to postpone the consideration of the nomination until tomorrow, Saturday, March 3, 1923.

On Mr. McNary's motion, Mr. La Follette called for the yeas and nays, and they were ordered.

The question being taken by yeas and nays, resulted-yeas 30, nays 31, as follows: THAN

	I.E.	As—au.
Bayard Brookhart Broussard Capper Caraway Couzens France George	Gerry Harris Harrison Johnson Jones, N. Mex. Jones, Wash. King La Follette	Lenroot McCormick McNary Moses Norbeck Norris Owen Ransdell	Robinson Sheppard Smith Stanley Walsh, Mass, Walsh, Mont.
	NA NA	YS-31.
Ball Brandegee Bursum Calder Cameron Colt Cummins Curtis	Dial Dillingham Edge Ernst Fernald Frelinghuysen Hale Harreld	Kellogg Keyes Lodge IcCumber McKinley Oddie Reed, Pa. Shields	Shortridge Smoot Sterling Sutherland Wadsworth Weller Willis
	NOT V	OTING-35.
Ashurst Borah Culberson Elkins Fletcher Glass Gooding Heffin Hitchcock	Kendrick Ladd McKellar McLean Myers Nelson New Nicholson Overman	Page Pepper Phipps Pittman Poindexter Pomerene Reed, Mo, Simmons Spencer	Stanfield Swanson Townsend Trammell Underwood Warren Watson Williams

So Mr. McNary's motion was rejected.

The question then recurred, on the motion of Mr. La Follette, to postpone the consideration of the nomination for the remainder of the session.

On this motion Mr. LA FOLLETTE called for the yeas and nays. and they were ordered.

The question being taken by yeas and nays resulted-yeas 13. navs 45, as follows:

2000	YE	AS-13.
Brookhart Capper Couzens Johnson	Jones, N. Mex. King La Follette Norbeck	Norris Owen Sheppard Stanley	Walsh, Mass.
	NA	YS-45.
Ball Bayard Brandegee Broussard Bursum Calder Cameron Caraway Colt Cummins Curtis Dial	Dillingham Edge Ernst Fernald France Frelinghuysen George Gerry Hale Harreld Harrison Jones, Wash.	Kellogg Keyes Lenroot Lodge McCormick McCumber McKinley Moses Oddie Reed, Pa, Robinson Shields	Shortridge Smith Smoot Sterling Sutherland Wadsworth Walsh, Mont, Weller Willis
	NOT V	OTING-38.	MASSAGE STATE
Ashurst Borah Culberson Elkins Fletcher Glass Gooding Harris Heffin	Kendrick Ladd McKellar McLean McNary Myers Nelson New Nicholson Overman	Page Pepper Phipps Pittman Poindexter Pomerene Ransdell Reed, Mo. Simmons Spencer	Stanfield Swanson Townsend Trammell Underwood Warren Watson Williams

So the motion was rejected.

The question then was, Shall the Senate advise and consent to the nomination? on which Mr. La Follette called for the yeas and nays, and they were ordered.

The question being taken by yeas and nays resulted—yeas 46, nays 11, as follows:

YEAS-46.
Ball	Cummins	George	Lodge
Bayard	Curtis	Gerry	McCormick
Brandegee	Dial	Hale -	McCumber
Broussard	Dillingham	Harreld	McKinley
Bursum	Edge	Harrison	Moses
Calder	Ernst	Jones, Wash.	Myers
Cameron	Fernald	Kellogg	Oddie
Caraway	France	Keyes	Reed, Pa.
Colt	Frelinghuysen	Lenroot	Robinson

Shields Shortridge Smith	Smoot Sterling Sutherland	Wadsworth Walsh, Mont. Weller	Willis
TALL SING	NA NA	YS-11.
Brookhart Capper Johnson	Jones, N. Mex. King La Follette	Norris Sheppard	Stanley Walsh, Mass.
	NOT V	OTING-89.
Ashurst Borah Couzens Culberson Elkins Fletcher Glass Gooding Harris	Hitchcock Kendrick Ladd McKellar McNary Nelson New Nicholson Overman	Owen Page Pepper Phipps Pittman Poindexter Pomereng Ransdell Reed, Mo. Simmons	Spencer Stanfield Swanson Townsend Trammelf Underwood Warren Watson Williams

So the Senate advised and consented to the nomination of John F. McGee, of Minnesota, to be United States district judge for the district of Minnesota.

It was ordered that the President be notified of the confirmation.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate March 2, 1923.

MEMBERS OF THE WORLD WAR FOREIGN DEBT COMMISSION.

The following-named persons to be members of the World War Foreign Debt Commission, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved February 28, 1923;

Carter Glass, of Virginia, United States Senate.

Charles R. Crisp, of Georgia, House of Representatives.

Richard Olney, of Massachusetts.

ASSOCIATE JUDGES OF THE UNITED STATES COURT OF CUSTOMS

Oscar E. Bland, of Indiana, to be associate judge of the United States Court of Customs Appeals, vice Marion De Vries, who was appointed presiding judge.

Charles S. Hatfield, of Ohio, to be associate judge of the United States Court of Customs Appeals, vice George E. Martin, who was appointed presiding judge.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGES.

John S. Partridge, of California, to be United States district judge, Northern District of California. (Additional position created by the act approved September 14, 1922.)

William P. James, of California, to be United States district judge, Southern District of California. (Additional position created by the act approved September 14, 1922.)

UNITED STATES ATTORNEY.

A. E. Bernsteen, of Ohio, to be United States attorney, Northern District of Ohio, vice Edwin S. Wertz, resigned, effective March 1, 1923.

UNITED STATES MARSHAL.

Stanley Borthwick, of Ohlo, to be United States marshal, Southern District of Ohlo, vice Michael Devanney, resigned.

COAST AND GEODETIC SURVEY.

Howard Oscar Olson, of South Dakota, to be aid (with relative rank of ensign in the Navy) in the Coast and Geodetic Survey, vice G. H. Everett, resigned.

PROMOTIONS IN THE COAST GUARD.

Lieut. Commander Harry C. Hamlet to be commander, "to rank as such from January 12, 1923, to fill an original va-cancy created by the act of January 12, 1923.

Lieut. John S. Baylis to be lieutenant commander, to rank as such from January 12, 1923, in place of Lieut. Commander

H. G. Hamlet, promoted. Lieut. (Junior Grade) Raymond T. McElligott to be lieutenant, to rank as such from January 12, 1923, in place of Lieut. E. D. Jones, promoted.

Lieut. (Junior Grade) Robert M. Kaufholz to be lieutenant, to rank as such from January 12, 1923, in place of Lieut. J. S. Baylis, promoted, (Engineering) Webb C. Maglathlin to be lieutenant commander (engineering), to rank as such from January 12, 1923, to fill a vacancy as extra number authorized by the act of January 12, 1923.

Lieut. (Junior Grade) Joseph E. Stika to be lieutenant, to rank as such from January 12, 1923, in place of Lieut. Le Roy Reinburg, promoted.

Each of the above-named officers has passed the examinations required by law.

POSTMASTERS.

ALABAMA.

Martin E. Forsyth to be postmaster at Union Springs, Ala., in place of B. L. Perry. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.

Harry G. White to be postmaster at Glendale, Ariz., in place of J. W. Hawks. Incumbent's commission expired September

Alfred R. Kleindienst to be postmaster at Winslow, Ariz., in place of J. H. Gibson. Incumbent's commission expired November 21, 1922.

ARKANSAS

Hillary H. Dawson to be postmaster at Prescott, Ark., in place of Jack Grayson, deceased.

Bing Moody to be postmaster at Bald Knob, Ark., in place of

R. H. Clark, resigned.

Milton R. Stimson to be postmaster at Brinkley, Ark., in place of J. H. Stack. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.

John S. Bowden to be postmaster at Russellville, Ark., in place of J. L. Ragsdale, resigned.

Carrick W. White to be postmaster at Walnut Ridge, Ark., in place of J. W. Pinnell, removed.

CALIFORNIA.

H. D. Priest to be postmaster at Mount Lowe, Calif., in place of N. B. Vickrey, resigned.

William Junkans to be postmaster at Redding, Calif., in place of Alexander Ludwig. Incumbent's commission expired January 24, 1922.

Charles S. Graham to be postmaster at Pleasanton, Calif., in place of I. F. Sylvia, resigned.

Anna R. Mixon to be postmaster at Woodland, Calif., in place of E. I. Leake. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.

Cassius C. Olmsted to be postmaster at San Rafael, Calif., in place of Michael F. Cochrane. Incumbent's commission expired January 24, 1922.

COLORADO.

Harry A. Cobbett to be postmaster at Cedaredge, Colo., in place of F. W. Childs, resigned.

Idamay Spurlock to be postmaster at Fair Play, Colo., in place of Idamay Spurlock. Office became third class January 1, 1923.
Wiley O. Reynolds to be postmaster at Fort Lyon, Colo., in place of W. O. Reynolds. Office became third class January 1, Jesse W. Noble to be postmaster at Manitou, Colo., in place of C. E. Leibold, deceased.

CONNECTICUT.

Edward S. Lewis to be postmaster at Portland, Conn., in place of E. F. Daly. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922

Edwin H. Keach to be postmaster at Danielson, Conn., in place of R. E. Allen. Incumbent's commission expired December 6,

FLORIDA.

Mabel Miller to be postmaster at Littleriver, Fla., in place of T. O. Norris. Office became third class October 1, 1922.

GEORGIA.

Ralph A. Waters to be postmaster at Alpharetta, Ga., in place of G. D. Rucker, deceased.

Mattie M. Lewis to be postmaster at Fayetteville, Ga., in place of S. B. Lewis. Incumbent's commission expired August 7, 1921, Huram R. Hancock to be postmaster at Maysville, Ga., in place of C. C. Jarrard, resigned.

George H. Ray to be postmaster at Norwood, Ga., in place of E. S. Ray. Office became third class January 1, 1921.
Will C. Woodall to be postmaster at Woodland, Ga., in place of R. E. Trussell. Office became third class July 1, 1922.

TDAHO.

Allen H. Smith to be postmaster at Roselake, Idaho, in place of L. V. LeGore, resigned.

Fred V. Diers to be postmaster at Mackay, Idaho, in place of W. A. Criswell. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.

ILLINOIS.

Walter B. Dunlap to be postmaster at Bath, Ill., in place of W. B. Lindsay, declined.

William S. Brownlow to be postmaster at Chapin, Ill., in place of Alice Anderson. Office became third class January 1, 1923.

Levi H. Perryman to be postmaster at Cowden, Ill., in place of S. A. D. Howe, resigned.

Edward S. Breithaupt to be postmaster at Gifford, Ill., in place of J. S. Barnes. Office became third class April 1, 1922.

Raymond W. Pfeifer to be postmaster at Mascoutah, Ill., in place of Carl Montag. Incumbent's commission expired October 24, 1922.

Herman Meyer to be postmaster at Niles Center, Ill., in place of George Busscher, jr. Office became third class October 1, 1922.

William McKinley to be postmaster at Ogden, Ill., in place of P. J. McKinney, removed.

Mary A. Barkmeier to be postmaster at San Jose, Ill., in place of G. H. Barkmeler, deceased.

George H. Duncan to be postmaster at Villa Grove, Ill., in place of O. C. Hays, resigned.

Russell F. Jones to be postmaster at Catlin, Ill., in place of G. S. Fleming, removed.

William M. Karr to be postmaster at Flora, Ill., in place of B. F. Wineland, removed.

Amanda L. Kobisk to be postmaster at Lombard, Ill., in place of W. J. Dobberstein, declined. David S. Cossairt to be postmaster at Potomac, Ill., in place of E. R. Duncan, removed. William A. Bussert to be postmaster at Sheldon, Ill., in place of H. R. Hootman, resigned. Raymond B. Pearce to be postmaster at White Hall, Ill., in place of J. E. Wyatt, resigned.

Emery S. Waid to be postmaster at Winchester, Ill., in place of T. B. Lyons, resigned.

William H. Weathers to be postmaster at Magnolia, Ill., in place of J. J. Dunne. Office became third class October 1, 1922.

Sylvester H. DePew to be postmaster at Zion, Ill., in place of M. N. Price. Incumbent's commission expired October 24, 1922.

INDIANA.

Andrew G. Kauffman to be postmaster at Atlanta, Ind., in place of H. E. Snyder, removed.

Walter R. O'Neal to be postmaster at Carlisle, Ind., in place of Tilghman Ogle. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.

Harvey E. Mayall to be postmaster at Decker, Ind., place of M. J. Mayall. Office became third class July 1, 1922.

John M. Sweeney to be postmaster at Dugger, Ind., in place of N. W. Ringo. Incumbent's commission expired January 27, 1922.

Alfred W. Hill to be postmaster at Shelburn, Ind., in place of R. H. Heath, resigned.

Addison N. Worstell to be postmaster at Valparaiso, Ind., in place of J. T. Scott, resigned.

IOWA.

Calvin L. Sipe to be postmaster at Sioux Rapids, Iowa, in place of C. P. Sickles. Incumbent's commission expired November 21, 1922.

Eva L. Woods to be postmaster at Cambridge, Iowa, in place of J. T. Larson, resigned.

Charles B. Abbott to be postmaster at Imogene, Iowa, in place of F. W. Gee. Office became third class October 1, 1922.

Albert L. Clark to be postmaster at Lanesboro, Iowa, in place of Agnes Brand. Office became third class October 1, 1922.

Arthur C. Schnurr to be postmaster at New Hampton, Iowa, in place of H. F. A. Hilmer. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.

Isaac J. Phillips to be postmaster at Hiteman, Iowa, in place of J. V. Frew, resigned.

Hiram E. Morrison to be postmaster at Seymour, Iowa, in place of W. B. Perkins. Incumbent's commission expired September 7, 1920.

Fred A. Hall to be postmaster at Van Wert, Iowa, in place of

M. E. Edwards. Office became third class October 1, 1922.

Kate R. Weston to be postmaster at Webster City, Iowa, in place of W. S. Weston, deceased.

KANSAS.

William H. Dittemore to be postmaster at Severance, Kans., in place of V. J. Kirvan, resigned.

Melyin F. Gardner to be postmaster at Greenleaf, Kans., in place of D. G. M. Keen, deceased.

Joseph P. Fern to be postmaster at Scammon, Kans., in place of J. P. Fern. Incumbent's commission expired September 13, 1922.

Louisa Allender to be postmaster at Axtell, Kans., in place of Imogene Ream, resigned.

Robert T. Smith to be postmaster at Caldwell, Kans., in place of Bowles Unsell. Incumbent's commission expired September 13, 1922.

Edward R. Dannefer to be postmaster at Cuba, Kans., in place of Bertha McDonald. Incumbent's commission expired March 16, 1921.

M. Blanche Perry to be postmaster at Culver, Kans., in place of N. A. Lockard. Office became third class April 1, 1922. Howard F. Heleker to be postmaster at Frankfort, Kans., in place of Adelaide Brandenburg. Incumbent's commission expired September 13, 1922. Charles N. Wooddell to be postmaster at Nickerson, Kans., in place of G. W. Sain, jr. Incumbent's commission expired September 13, 1922.

Herbert M. Bentley to be postmaster at Sterling, Kans., in place of J. M. Little. Incumbent's commission expired September 13, 1922

KENTUCKY.

Jewell S. Webb to be postmaster at Earlington, Ky., in place of I. E. Newton. Incumbent's commission expired December 6, 1922

Samuel W. Crump to be postmaster at Glasgow Junction, Ky., in place of J. B. Hatcher. Office became third class October 1,

Harry Beall to be postmaster at Warsaw, Ky., in place of G. W. Snyder. Incumbent's commission expired October 3, 1922. Herbert B. Duncan to be postmaster at New Castle, Ky., in place of A. M. Edwards, resigned. James Osborne to be postmaster at Wayland, Ky., in place of E. Hart. Office became third class January 1, 1921.

Leander Johnson to be postmaster at Weeksbury, Ky., in place of Leander Johnson. Office became third class January 1, 1921.

LOUISIANA.

Jesse L. Fowler to be postmaster at Oak Grove, La., in place of J. L. Fowler. Incumbent's commission expired December 18, 1999

Laurence E. Wilson to be postmaster at Oil City, La., in place of L. E. Wilson. Incumbent's commission expired November 21. 1922.

Frank S. Gianelloni to be postmaster at Paincourtville, La., in place of F. S. Gianelloni. Office became third class January 1, 1923.

Adelbert J. Burns to be postmaster at National Soldiers' Home, Me., in place of E. R. Hayes, removed.

MARYLAND.

William L. Marcy to be postmaster at Annapolis, Md., in place of T. J. Linthicum. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.

Gustavus R. Timanus to be postmaster at Laurel, Md., in place of E. P. Haslup. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Russell B. De Wolf to be postmaster at Duxbury, Mass., in place of H. B. Nichols, appointee declined.

William R. Farrington to be postmaster at Middleboro, Mass., in place of J. H. Creedon. Incumbent's commission expired October 1, 1922.

Josephine E. Dempsey to be postmaster at South Ashburnham, Mass., in place of J. E. Dempsey. Incumbent's commission expired May 14, 1921.

MICHIGAN.

Thomas P. DeClaire to be postmaster at Clawson, Mich., in place of L. R. Wells. Office became third class October 1, 1922. Orin T. Mallory to be postmaster at Blissfield, Mich., in place of Edson Porter. Incumbent's commission expired September 13, 1922.

Emile J. Crete to be postmaster at Caspian, Mich., in place of H. M. Lawry, deceased.

Charles S. Wilcox to be postmaster at East Lansing, Mich., in place of C. D. Aldrich. Incumbent's commission expired September 13, 1922.

Frank A. Miller to be postmaster at Gladstone, Mich., in place of F. A. Miller. Incumbent's commission expired April 19, 1921.

Lottie E. Bultman to be postmaster at Hermansville, Mich., in place of M. R. Bradley. Incumbent's commission expired

September 13, 1922. Charles B. Curtis to be postmaster at Houghton Lake, Mich., in place of C. B. Curtis. Office became third class January 1.

1923.

Frank E. Darby to be postmaster at Kalkaska, Mich., in place of H. B. Whalley, deceased.

Olive F. Gowans to be postmaster at Mackinaw, Mich., in place of C. O. Barrett, resigned.

Fred R. Griffin to be postmaster at Manistique, Mich., in place of F. J. L. Carroll. Incumbent's commission expired September 13, 1922.

William H. Palmer to be postmaster at Newberry, Mich., in place of Malcolm McPhee. Incumbent's commission expired

Fred H. Johnson to be postmaster at St. Ignace, Mich., in place of Michael Hoban. Incumbent's commission expired September 13, 1922.

Albert Sanders, jr., to be postmaster at Stephenson, Mich., in place of M. W. Doyle. Incumbent's commission expired September 13, 1922.

Webb W. Walter to be postmaster at Three Rivers, Mich., in place of H. I. Wright. Incumbent's commission expired September 13, 1922.

Charles S. Sisson to be postmaster at White Pigeon, Mich., in place of Freeman Ware. Incumbent's commission expired November 15, 1922.

MINNESOTA.

Mary E. Stark to be postmaster at Buffalo, Minn., in place of M. E. Stark. Incumbent's commission expired September 26, 1922.

Claus H. Lepler to be postmaster at Clara City, Minu., in place of M. C. Benson. Incumbent's commission expired April

Ralph G. Hosfield to be postmaster at Medford, Minn., place of W. A. Balley. Office became third class July 1, 1922. Folmer Bjorge to be postmaster at Bigfork, Minn., in place of Folmer Bjorge. Office became third class January 1, 1923.

MISSISSIPPI. William D. Fields to be postmaster at Doddsville, Miss., in place of L. I. Coleman, resigned.

Starling L. Pake to be postmaster at Dundee, Miss., in place of Lee Bankston, resigned.

Thomas L. Cotten to be postmaster at Summitt, Miss., in place of S. E. Carruth. Incumbent's commission expired September 26, 1922.

MISSOURI.

Abraham B. Peters to be postmaster at Bonnots Mill, Mo., in place of H. V. Party. Office became third class October 1, 1922.

Elliot Marshall to be postmaster at St. Joseph, Mo., in place of Frank Freytag. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.

John C. Datwieler to be postmaster at Clinton, Mo., in place of Clay Adair. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.

Albert R. Lebold to be postmaster at Lawson, Mo., in place of

B. Neville, resigned.

William R. Lytle to be postmaster at Fredericktown, Mo., in place of A. T. Lacey. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.

Tom D. Purdy to be postmaster at Harris, Mo., in place of J. T. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.

Paul C. Campbell to be postmaster at Osborn, Mo., in place of E. J. Everett. Incumbent's commission expired December 20, 1920.

Harry Korf to be postmaster at South St. Joseph, Mo., in place of H. J. Bowen. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.

MONTANA.

Jennie W. Chowning to be postmaster at Ennis, Mont., in place of J. W. Chowning. Office became third class October 1, 1922.

Frederick B. Gillette to be postmaster at Hinsdale, Mont., in place of J. H. Rutter. Incumbent's commission expired September 13, 1922.

Wilfred J. Hazelton to be postmaster at Townsend, Mont., in place of W. J. Hazelton. Incumbent's commission expired October 14, 1922.

Stephen E. Sande to be postmaster at Winifred, Mont., in place of T. H. Hayden, resigned.

NEBRASKA.

Edward H. Springer to be postmaster at Brady, Nebr., in place of David Johnson, resigned.

James M. Fox to be postmaster at Gretna, Nebr., in place of P. J. Melia, resigned.

Claude A. Barker to be postmaster at Pawnee City, Nebr., in place of A. E. Ovenden, resigned.

Eugene Roddy to be postmaster at Union, Nebr., in place of L. E. Borne, resigned.

Freemont L. Neely to be postmaster at Wayne, Nebr., in place of C. A. Berry. Incumbent's commission expired November 21, 1922.

Frederick H. Crook to be postmaster at Paxton, Nebr., in place of C. V. Kildare. Incumbent's commission expired October 3, 1922.

NEW JERSEY.

Berta Brown to be postmaster at Leonardo, N. J., in place of B. J. Haulboskey. Office became third class October 1, 1922.

Margarethe Grund to be postmaster at New Milford, N. J., in place of N. A. Terhune. Office became third class April 1, Robert E. Bromley to be postmaster at Haddon Heights, N. J., in place of G. H. Abel. Incumbent's commission expired October 24, 1922.

Mina A. Crowell to be postmaster at Minotola, N. J., in place of L. A. Shaw, resigned.

Lemuel H. Greenwood to be postmaster at Elmer. N. J., in place of C. H. Hitchner. Incumbent's commission expired October 24, 1922.

NEW YORK.

J. Edward Uline to be postmaster at Ransomville, N. Y., in place of H. S. Ransom. Incumbent's commission expired October 24, 1922.

Guy R. Dodson to be postmaster at Wyoming, N. Y., in place of Henry Webster, deceased.

Elbert J. Eckerson to be postmaster at Cobleskill, N. Y., in place of Silas Springstead. Incumbent's commission expired November 15, 1922.

Ida L. Baxter to be postmaster at Port Washington, N. Y. in place of M. T. Hutchinson. Incumbent's commission expired October 24, 1922.

Frank R. Hanson to be postmaster at Sea Cliff, N. Y., in place of W. F. Britt, resigned.

Edwin P. Bouton to be postmaster at Trumansburg, N. Y. in place of C. E. Thompson. Incumbent's commission expired September 19, 1922.

Herbert L. Merritt to be postmaster at Katonah, N. Y., in place of M. F. Doyle. Incumbent's commission expired November 21, 1922

Beulah H. Kelly to be postmaster at Lisbon, N. Y., in place Bessie Sullivan. Incumbent's commission expired October of Bessie Sullivan. 24, 1922.

Augusta H. Tilden to be postmaster at New Lebanon, N. Y., in place of A. H. Tilden. Incumbent's commission expired November 21, 1922.

George W. Morton to be postmaster at Pulaski, N. Y., in place of J. L. Hutchens, deceased.

Charles L. Carrier to be postmaster at Sherburne, N. Y., in place of H. J. McDaniel, resigned.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Theophilus H. McLeod to be postmaster at Buies Creek, N. C., in place of B. F. McLeod, resigned.

May C. Campbell to be postmaster at Norwood, N. C., in place of G. R. Upchurch, resigned. Sarah A. Lunceford to be postmaster at Smithfield, N. C., in place of S. A. Lunceford. Incumbent's commission expired February 3, 1923. Samuel W. Watts to be postmaster at Southport, N. C., in place of D. O. Daniel. Incumbent's commission expired March 16, 1921. William F. Outland to be postmaster at Woodland, N. C., in place of O. L. Snipes, resigned.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Hugh C. Corrigan to be postmaster at Fargo, N. Dak., in place of J. P. Hardy. Incumbent's commission expired November 21, 1922, William F. Legler to be postmaster at Robinson, N. Dak., in place of W. F. Legler. Office became third class January 1, Sylvester Macking to be postmaster at Scranton, N. Dak., in place of M. O. Hagenson. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.

OHIO.

T. Howard Sapp to be postmaster at Bainbridge, Ohio, in place of H. W. W. Spargur. Incumbent's commission expired September 19, 1922.

Harry A. McConnell to be postmaster at Dorset, Ohio, in place of J. E. Wilderson. Office became third class October 1, 1922.
William S. Kindle to be postmaster at Thornville, Ohio, in place of R. J. Neel, resigned.

James W. McHenry to be postmaster at Elyria, Ohio, in place of D. W. Seward, removed.

Hattie E. Johnston to be postmaster at Lagrange, Ohio, in place of T. V. Feagler. Office became third class October 1, 1922. Pearl H. Cheney to be postmaster at South Charleston, Ohio, in place of J. L. Carr. Incumbent's commission expired November 21, 1922.

Clyde S. Perfect to be postmaster at Sunbury, Ohio, in place of O. F. Barcus. Incumbent's commission expired December 6, OKLAHOMA.

John W. Comer to be postmaster at Chickasha, Okla., in place of G. W. Barefoot. Incumbent's commission expired October 24, 1922.

James G. Sprouse to be postmaster at McCurtain, Okla., in place of J. G. Sprouse. Incumbent's commission expired January 27, 1923.

William C. Wallin to be postmaster at Watts, Okla., in place of Henryetta Wilson. Office became third class October 1, 1922. Ora W. King to be postmaster at Meeker, Okla., in place of W. C. Parnell, resigned.

George D. Graves to be postmaster at Norman, Okla., place of F. L. Swank. Incumbent's commission expired September 13, 1922.

George F. Benge to be postmaster at Tahlequah, Okla., in place of W. A. Thompson. Incumbent's commission expired January 27, 1923.

George C. Hill to be postmaster at Shidler, Okla., in place of F. T. Gale. Office became third class October 1, 1922.

Orland H. Park to be postmaster at Wright City, Okla., in place of O. E. Thompson, declined.

Claude E. Ingal's to be postmaster at Corvallis, Oreg., in place of V. P. Moses. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.

Darwin E. Yoran to be postmaster at Eugene, Oreg., in place of E. L. Campbell, deceased.

Robert N. Torbet to be postmaster at Albany, Oreg., in place of C. H. Stewart, resigned.

PENNSYLVANIA,

Russell C. Parry to be postmaster at Walnutport, Pa., in place of J. P. Andreas, removed.

Walter V. Dingman to be postmaster at Milford, Pa., in place of J. P. Van Etten, resigned.

George C. Noblitt to be postmaster at Brockwayville, Pa., place of J. A. Cooper. Incumbent's commission expired February 3, 1922.

Liola R. Thoman to be postmaster at Hatboro, Pa., in place of J. S. Leidy, declined.

David K. Clements to be postmaster at Sagamore, Pa., in place of G. C. Schrecongost, Incumbent's commission expired February 4, 1922.

John D. Williams to be postmaster at Shoemakersville, Pa., in place of H. S. Madeira, deceased.

John J. Nichols to be postmaster at Lansdowne, Pa., in place of F. M. Longstreth, removed.

Charles P. Hipple to be postmaster at Marietta, Pa., in place of John Orth. Incumbent's commission expired February 5, Hugh T. Williams to be postmaster at Union Dale, Pa., in place of H. A. Reynolds. Office became third class April 1, William H. Smith to be postmaster at Valencia, Pa., in place of G. S. Dickson. Incumbent's commission expired October 24, 1922.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Carl G. Schoenberg to be postmaster at North, S. C., in place of A. A. Glover, resigned.

Fred Mishoe to be postmaster at Greelyville, S. C., in place of Fred Mishoe. Incumbent's commission expired December 23, Walter L. Gettys to be postmaster at Clover, S. C., in place of J. A. Barrett, resigned.

Jacob M. Bedenbaugh to be postmaster at Prosperity, S. C., in place of J. M. Bedenbaugh. Incumbent's commission expired October 28, 1922.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Israel R. Krause to be postmaster at Java, S. Dak., in place of I. R. Krause. Incumbent's commission expired December 23, 1922.

Claud I. Force to be postmaster at Clear Lake, S. Dak., in place of C. I. Force. Incumbent's commission expired January

Ernest F. Roth to be postmaster at Columbia, S. Dak., in place of H. C. Roth, resigned.

Charles E. Smith to be postmaster at Lemmon, S. Dak., in place of H. J. Mensing, removed.

James E. McLaughlin to be postmaster at Onida, S. Dak., in place of William Spencer, resigned.

Joseph Matt to be postmaster at Vivian, S. Dak., in place of H. E. Kelly, removed.

TENNESSEE.

Joseph R. Lane to be postmaster at Church Hill, Tenn., in place of R. L. Long. Incumbent's commission expired January

Isaac A. Smith to be postmaster at Halls, Tenn., in place of H. Moore. Incumbent's commission expired February 13, 1923.

Ella M. Grubbs to be postmaster at Adams, Tenn., in place of G. Byrd, resigned.

Beecher D. Phillips to be postmaster at Algood, Tenn., in place of R. C. Boatman. Incumbent's commission expired May 10, Daniel L. Hyder to be postmaster at Elizabethton, Tenn., in place of D. M. Brumit, resigned.

John W. Chumley to be postmaster at New Tazewell, Tenn., in place of J. L. Goin, resigned.

William T. Starbuck to be postmaster at Hohenwald, Tenn., in place of A. W. Ashton. Incumbent's commission expired January 27, 1923.
Rufus C. Thompson to be postmaster at Milan, Tenn., in place of W. A. Howard, resigned.

Lucy D. Campbell to be postmaster at Brazoria, Tex., in place of E. B. Hopkins. Incumbent's commission expired January 24, 1922

Edward S. Dougherty to be postmaster at Edinburg, Tex., in place of E. S. Dougherty. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.

Harry B. Strong to be postmaster at Iredell, Tex., in place of J. P. Williamson, resigned.

James J. Dickerson to be postmaster at Paris, Tex., in place of A. G. Hubbard, resigned.

Charles A. Andrews to be postmaster at Wolfe City, Tex., in place of J. F. Painter, deceased.

William T. McDonald, jr., to be postmaster at Wylie, Tex., in place of W. T. McDonald, jr. Incumbent's commission expired October 24, 1922.

Harvey L. Pettit to be postmaster at Bloomburg, Tex., in place of J. A. Bentley. Office became third class October 1, 1921.

William C. Simmons to be postmaster at Murchison, Tex., in place of W. L. Adair. Office became third class January 1, 1921.

Harry H. Cooper to be postmaster at Nacogdoches, Tex., in place of A. Y. Donegan. Incumbent's commission expired

William H. Mallory to be postmaster at Port Lavaca, Tex., in place of G. R. Rubert. Incumbent's commission expired October 24, 1922.

James P. Kersey to be postmaster at Ozona, Tex., in place of W. C. Esterling, removed.

David F. Johnson to be postmaster at Brownwood, Tex., in place of W. D. McChristy. Incumbent's commission expired September 5, 1922.

UTAH.

William T. Boyle to be postmaster at Beaver, Utah, in place of Isadore Lessing. Incumbent's commission expired September 28, 1922.

T. J. Wadsworth, jr., to be postmaster at Santaquin, Utah, in place of A. R. Hudson. Office became third class October 1, 1922.

VERMONT.

Margaret I. Southgate to be postmaster at Concord, Vt., in place of M. I. Southgate. Office became third class January

Edward N. Aldrich to be postmaster at Graniteville, Vt., in place of A. M. Carey. Office became third class January 1, 1921.

Ruth S. Sheldon to be postmaster at Pawlet, Vt., in place of V. W. Weeks. Office became third class July 1, 1921.

Otis B. Dauchy to be postmaster at Townshend, Vt., in place of O. B. Dauchy. Office became third class January 1, 1923.

Preston C. Skinner to be postmaster at Orleans, Vt., in place of F. H. Pierce. Incumbent's commission expired July 21, 1920. William B. Needham to be postmaster at Bridgewater, Vt., in place of C. I. Davis. Office became third class July 1, 1922.

Jonas H. Brooks to be postmaster at St. Johnsbury, Vt., in place of A. H. Gleason. Incumbent's commission expired January 24, 1922.

VIRGINIA.

Mary I. Wight to be postmaster at Charlotte Court House, Va., in place of J. D. Shepperson. Incumbent's commission expired July 15, 1920.

Charles P. Smith, jr., to be postmaster at Martinsville, Va., in place of T. H. Self, resigned.

Edward P. Schultz to be postmaster at Onancock, Va., in place of E. E. Miles, resigned.

WASHINGTON.

Blanche A. Sines to be postmaster at Chelan, Wash., in place of L. R. Sines, removed.

Alonzo E. Emerson to be postmaster at Ellensburg, Wash., in dace of R. A. Turner. Incumbent's commission expired October 14, 1922.

Charles A. Bowen to be postmaster at Clayton, Wash., in place of C. A. Bowen. Office became third class October 1, 1922.

Levi H. Niles to be postmaster at Ephrata, Wash., in place of P. F. Billingsley. Incumbent's commission expired January 24, 1922

Andrew J. Cosser to be postmaster at Port Angeles, Wash., in place of A. J. Cosser. Incumbent's commission expired November 21, 1922.

Arthur Bailey to be postmaster at Monroe, Wash., in place of Arthur Bailey. Incumbent's commission expired October 24, 1922

WEST VIRGINIA.

Ruth Lewis to be postmaster at Buffalo, W. Va., in place of N. J. Knapp, resigned.

Carl A. Dehner to be postmaster at Chester, W. Va., in place of W. B. Stewart, deceased.

Cecil B. Dodd to be postmaster at Follansbee, W. Va., in place of A. T. McCort. Incumbent's commission expired March 1, 1923

Andrew Smith to be postmaster at Filbert, W. Va., in place of N. P. Johnston, resigned.

WISCONSIN.

Maurice Morrissey to be postmaster at Delavan, Wis., in place of C. M. Tallman, removed.

Hattle B. Greene to be postmaster at Darlington, Wis., in place of George Ward. Incumbent's commission expired May Adolph C. Sveen to be postmaster at Westby, Wis., in place of Jens Davidson, resigned.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate March 2, 1923. ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

McKenzie Moss to be Assistant Secretary of the Treasury. ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF WAR.

Dwight Davis to be Assistant Secretary of War.

MEMBERS OF WORLD WAR FOREIGN DEBT COMMISSION.

CARTER GLASS to be a member of the World War Foreign Debt Commission.

CHARLES R. CRISP to be a member of the World War Foreign Debt Commission.

Richard Olney to be a member of the World War Foreign Debt Commission.

MEMBER OF THE FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD.

D. R. Crissinger.

DIRECTOR OF WAR FINANCE CORPORATION.

Frank W. Mondell.

GOVERNOR OF PORTO RICO.

Horace M. Towner.

DIRECTOR OF UNITED STATES VETERANS' BUREAU.

Frank T. Hines.

COMMISSIONER OF BUREAU OF IMMIGRATION.

John D. Nagle, commissioner at the port of San Francisco, Calif.

MEMBER OF THE UNITED STATES EMPLOYEES' COMPENSATION COMMISSION.

Charles H. Verrill.

COMPTROLLER POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT.

Francis P. Sullivan to be comptroller, Bureau of Accounts. UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGES.

F. C. Jacobs to be district judge, district of Arizona.

John F. McGee to be district judge, district of Minnesota. William Bondy to be district judge, southern district of New Paul Jones to be district judge, northern district of Ohio. Harry M. Hoffheimmer to be district judge, southern district of Ohio.

Xenophen Hicks to be district judge for the eastern and middle districts of Tennessee.

John J. Gore to be district judge, middle district of Ten-

UNITED STATES ATTORNEY.

Benson W. Hough to be attorney, southern district of Ohio. UNITED STATES MARSHAL.

Richard J. White to be marshal, eastern district of Wis-

PROMOTIONS IN THE COAST GUARD.

To be captain.

Andrew J. Henderson.

To be commander.

Randolph Ridgely.

To be lieutenant commanders.

George C. Alexander. Charles F. Howell. William T. Stromberg. George E. Wilcox. James A. Alger. Muller S. Hay Howard E. Rideout.

Ralph W. Dempwolf. Roger C. Weightman. Le Roy Reinburg. Lloyd T. Chalker. James L. Ahern. Stanley V. Parker.

To be lieutenant commanders (engineering).

Albert C. Norman. Christopher G. Porcher. Charles A. Wheeler, John I. Bryan, Samuel M. Rock.

Edwin W. Davis. Charles S. Root. Michael N. Usina. Robert B. Adams.

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY.

William Reese Scott to be chaplain with rank of major. Albert Leslie Evans to be chaplain with rank of captain. Goodwin Compton to be lieutenant colonel, Infantry James Edmund McDonald to be lieutenant colonel, Infantry. Stephen Clark Reynolds to be major, Quartermaster Corps. James Louis Guion to be captain, Ordnance Department. Stewart Elvin Relmel to be captain, Ordnance Department. Henry Lord Page King to be captain, Signal Corps.

Stanley Koch to be major, Cavalry.
Philip Raymond Ward to be colonel, Field Artillery. Lloyd Marlowe Hanna to be first lieutenant, Field Artillery. Samuel Rixey Deanes to be first lieutenant, Field Artillery. William Topping Merry to be colonel, Infantry

Thomas Worthington Hollyday to be lieutenant colonel, Field

Albert Louis Rhoades to be lieutenant colonel, Coast Artillery

Thomas Albert Harkins to be chaplain with rank of captain. Frank Pearson MacKenzie to be chaplain with rank of captain.

Joseph Lester Brooks to be captain. Quartermaster Corps. Eugene Luther Vidal to be first lieutenant, Air Service Amos Stanhope Kinzer to be first lieutenant, Medical Administrative Corps

Berban Huffine to be first lieutenant, Medical Administrative Richard Homer McElwain to be first lieutenant, Medical Administrative Corps.

Willard Mortimer Barton to be first lieutenant, Medical Administrative Corps

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY.

MARINE CORPS. To be captains.

Bruce J. Millner. William P. Richards.

Willett Elmore. Francis Fisk

To be second lieutenants.

Wilson B. McCandless. Corpl, Jonathan O. Becker. Sergt. Franklin W. R. Brown. Sergt. Harold C. Roberts.

Sergt. Will H. Lee. Sergt. Will H. Lee.
Sergt. Monroe S. Swanson.
Corpl. William E. Lee.
Corpl. August L. Huhn, jr.
Gunnery Sergt. Charles R. Barrett.
Corpl. Joshua B. Langley. Sergt. John G. Walraven. Gunnery Sergt. William R. Hughes. Corpl. James K. Reid.

POSTMASTERS.

GEORGIA.

John L. Callaway, Covington.

John Stahl, Lawrenceburg. Frances Ambler, Pine Village. Dehn P. Keller, Warren.

Karl J. Baessler, Livermore. Edgar A. Greenway, Pleasantville. Silas L. McIntire, Pocahontas.

KANSAS.

John F. Mitchell, Fort Dodge. John Irving, Jetmore. Louis T. Miller, Ness City. Lewis E. Glasco, Piedmont. Herman C. Walter, Wilson.

MARYLAND.

Roscoe C. McNutt, Fallston. George W. Stevens, Sudlersville.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Arthur F. Cahoon, Harwich. Howard M. Douglas, Plymouth. MINNESOTA.

Mott M. Anderson, Hammond. Winnifred L. Batson, Odessa.

J. Orville Gochnauer, Belton. J. Orville Gochnauer, Benton.
Maria B. Cassity, Gentry.
Owen S. Randolph, Gideon.
Thomas J. Richardson, Koshkonong.
Oscar H. Remmert, Leslie.
Melvin Lutes, Lutesville.
Alpha DeBerry, Stoutland.

MONTANA.

Andrew Kolnitchar, Geraldine. Samuel P. Eagle, West Yellowstone. NEBRASKA.

Arthur H. Babcock, North Loup. Myrtle T. Anderson, Republican City.

NEW JERSEY.

Isaac E. Bowers, Groveville. John Rotherham, Jersey City.

NEW MEXICO.

Harvey Springer, Dawson. Vida B. Brittingham, Fort Sumner.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Benjamin E. Atkins, Apex. Hosea L. Early, Aulander. Robert D. Herndon, Chapel Hill. Sam J. Smith, Erlanger. Jay Shoaf, Mooresville.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Robert D. Hand, Ambrose. Mina H. Aasved, Carson. Ada M. Patterson, Jud. Martin E. Larson, Marion.

Hylos L. Vesey, Perry. George R. Irwin, Upper Sandusky.

OKLAHOMA.

John M. Sappington, Holdenville. Dixon L. Lindsey, Marlow. Paul J. Fournier, Quinlan.

George R. Steiger, Albion. Sara A. Conrath, Dixonville. William E. Mutthersbough, Driftwood. George B. Stevenson, Lock Haven.

UTAH.

Annie Palmer, Farmington.

VIRGINIA.

Virgie C. Goode, Bassetts. Blodwyn R. Jones, Cambria. Henry P. Holbrook, Castlewood. John W. Delaplane, Delaplane. Gunyon M. Harrison, Fredericksburg. John D. Williamson, Fries. Margaret I. Lacy, Halifax (late Houston). Lawrence L. Jacobs, Hanover. Charles F. Flanary, Jonesville. Henry E. Bailey, Newsoms. George R. McCall, Raven. George H. McFarland, Reedville, Archer H. Staples, Stuart. Dandridge W. Marston, Toano.

WISCONSIN.

Harry T. Ketcham, Abbotsford. Bernard A. McBride, Adams. Bernard A. McBride, Adams. Nicholas Hubing, Belgium. Albert L. Marsh, Elroy. Forrest T. Durner, Evansville. Dean J. Hotchkiss, Foxlake. Edward Schroeder, Granton. Stephen S. Summers, Milton. Stephen S. Summers, Milton.
George B. Keith, Milton Junction.
Oarl V. Dahlstedt, Port Wing.
R. Claire Dixon, Silverlake.
Julian C. Colby, Union Grove.
Oscar C. Wertheimer, Watertown.
Joseph F. Huber, West Bend.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

FRIDAY, March 2, 1923.

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m. and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore, Mr. Campbell of Kansas. The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O God, who art the eternal source of every hope and whose goodness crowns each succeeding day, to Thee our hearts be-long. Thy mercy is wider than our utmost need and extends to creation's bounds. Do Thou continue to bless us with Thy sheltering arm and let Thy compassion veil our transgressions. Bestow Thy revealing presence upon us. Help us to pursue our tasks with sweet, obedient, unmurmuring toil, and may every impulse be soothed by reflection. Be with us all the time, and as we onward go may the luster of the Cross become more precious. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

D. K. HEMPSTEAD.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution and ask for its adoption.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That D. K. Hempstead be, and he is hereby, appointed a special employee to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Clarence Cannon named in the resolution adopted by the House May 19, 1919.

The resolution was agreed to.

THURSTON W. TRUE.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (S. 2984) for the relief of Thurston W. True. The conference report was read, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 2984) for the relief of Thurston W. True, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses that the House recede from its amendment.

B. H. SNELL, JOHN C. KLECZKA, Managers on the part of the House. ARTHUR CAPPER, SELDEN P. SPENCER, Jos. T. ROBINSON. Managers on the part of the Senate.

The conference report was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Craven, its Chief Clerk, announced that the Senate had passed with amendments bills of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

H. R. 8086. An act to prohibit the shpiment of filled milk in interstate or foreign commerce; and

H. R. 14408. An act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, and prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, and for

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2703) to allow the printing and publishing of illustration of foreign postage and revenue stamps from defaced plates.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed the following resolution:

Senate Resolution 464.

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with profound sorrow the announcement of the death of Hon. W. BOURKE COCKRAN, late a Representative from the State of New York.

Resolved, That a committee of six Senators be appointed by the Vice President to join the committee appointed by the House of Representatives to attend the funeral.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the decaysed.

the deceased.

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased Representative the Senate do now adjourn.

ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION PRESENTED TO THE PRESI-DENT FOR HIS APPROVAL.

Mr. RICKETTS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that this day they had presented to the President of the United States, for his approval, the following bills and joint resolution:

H. R. 13978. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Hudson River Bridge Co., at Albany, to maintain two bridges

Already constructed across the Hudson River;
H. R. 10677. An act for the relief of Quincy R. Craft;
H. R. 14317. An act granting permission to Capt. Norman Randolph, United States Army, to accept the decoration of the Spanish Order of Military Merit of Alfonso XIII;
H. R. 7267. An act granting permission to Mrs. H. S. Abernethy, of Lincolnton, N. C., to accept the decoration of the bust of Bolivar; and

H. J. Res. 453. Joint resolution requesting the President to urge upon the governments of certain nations the immediate necessity of limiting the production of habit-forming narcotic drugs and the raw materials from which they are made to the amount actually required for strictly medicinal and scientific purposes.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED.

Under clause 2, Rule XXIV, Senate bills of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and referred to their appropriate committees, as indicated below:

S. 3874. An act granting the consent of Congress for a bridge across the Rio Grande River; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

An act granting consent of Congress to the Eagle Pass & Piedras Negras Bridge Co. for construction of a bridge across the Rio Grande between Eagle Pass, Tex., and Piedras Negras, Mexico; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign

S. 4638. An act authorizing the Great Northern Railway Co. to maintain and operate, or reconstruct, maintain, and operate, its bridge across the Columbia River at Marcus, in the State of Washington; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Com-

S. 4631. An act granting the consent of Congress to the counties of Bowie and Cass, State of Texas, for construction of a bridge across Sulphur River at or near Paces Ferry, in said counties and State; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

S. 4609. An act to authorize the President in certain cases to reduce fees for the visé of passports; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. SMITH of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Idaho asks unanimous coosent to extend his remarks in the Record, Is there objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. I assume that they are the gentleman's own remarks

Mr. SMITH of Idaho. Yes.

There was no objection.

The extension of remarks referred to is here printed in full

Mr. SMITH of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, it was the celebrated French anatomist, Georges Cuvier, who, given the fragmentary bone of a prehistoric vertebrate, built up the animal as it had once existed, and a subsequent discovery proved that his restoration was complete in every detail. It is said that our own Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, of the National Museum, given a small section of the jawbone, could completely restore the pachydermous free trader of the 90's. And if one should enter the editorial lair of the New York Journal of Commerce, he would find that all but extinct homo sapiens in the flesh, a living testimonial to Hrdlickian expertness in the correlation of parts.

It is my purpose to-day to take a few skeletal remains to be found in the loess of subsiding tariff debate, and in the statistical collections now being assembled by the Department of Commerce, and to reconstruct, so far as I may, that mastodonic but sentient creature, American industry, as I anticipate it, for 1923 and onward. I am confident that the near future will show that the creature, which was paralyzed by the Underwood tariff law of 1913, reanimated by the European blood transfusion of 1914-1918, relapsing under the strain of 1920, and given first aid by the emergency tariff law of 1921, will be fully restored and revivified in the coming year. The renascence of American industry is under way. That is a fact which brooks no denial. It needs but to be guarded from those twin witches. free trade and internationalism.

But before I push out into the main current of my thought, I shall devote a few moments to a very cursory review of the tariff period immediately preceding and that included in the span known as "The New Freedom."

The Payne law of 1909 was a grossly maligned and libeled measure. It is by the average ad valorem duty rates that we measure the stature of a tariff law. The average ad valorem rate of duty on all imports during the entire period of the Payne law was less than 20 per cent, beginning with 21, in 1910, and ending with 17.69 in 1913. The average rate of duty on dutiable goods alone was 41 per cent. In both instances these rates were below those prevailing under the old Wilson law-1894-of evil memory, and markedly lower than the Dingley law, whose average ad valorem on all goods for the 12 years of its operation was about 26 per cent, and on dutiable goods a trifle over 47 per cent. Yet, under the scientifically adjusted rates of the Republican tariff law of 1909 our export trade increased from $1,745,000,000 in 1910 to $2,466,000,000 in 1913, and our favorable balance of trade grew from $188,000,000 to $653,000,000. And still a healthy development of import trade was permitted by the law.

But slander spoke with multiple and brazen tongues, there was divided council in the party of protection, the two factions of which polled a combined vote of 7,600,000 in 1912 and the party which supported what the late Ebenezer Hill, of Connecticut, called "free trade with a handlcap" came into power by a vote of 6,300,000 on the strength of two distinct and solemn promises to the people: First and foremost, to reduce the cost of living by reducing customs duties to a revenue basis; second, to increase customs revenues by encouraging imports. Duties were reduced and imports were increased, while customs revenues fell off and the cost of living went up. It was as pretty a double-cross as was ever perpetrated on a gullible public.

In looking over some records compiled by the Department of Labor under the previous administration, fixing 1913 as a base year for the index figure at 100, I find that of 15 food articles of everyday consumption the retail prices of but 3 were lower The reduced in 1914 than in 1912-flour, corn meal, and sugar. rate on suger went into effect March 1, 1914, but in the mean-time the sugar producers had gotten rid of their entire stock and the market was loaded up. By the last week in June sugar stood at 4.21 cents, or precisely what it was in the last week of June, 1913, under Republican law. In February, 1914, just before the sugar rate went into effect, the refiners' margin was 47.7 cents per 100 pounds, and in July, 1914, it was 92.6 cents. The New York Annalist index number showing the average wholesale price of 25 food commodities selected and arranged to represent a theoretical family's food budget, tipped the beam at nearly 150 the last of December, 1915, was 146 for the year 1914, and under 140 for 1913, nine months of which was under Republican law. I can not say why the Annalist dealt with a theoretical family budget unless it was because so many people were down and out that a real budget could not be established. And what applied to food held good for clothes.

I have the utmost confidence in the new tariff law. * * * I am absolutely confident that this law will reduce the cost of living in the United States—

Declared Mr. Underwood as President Wilson affixed his signature to the law which bore his name. What a pitiful augury!

As a revenue producer the Democratic tariff law of 1913 was never a success in its palmiest days. At one stage of its career the average ad valorem sank below 6 per cent. From 1914 to 1921 its total average was 8.8 per cent, being raised to 14 per cent in 1922 through the assistance of the emergency tariff law. In 1920 on $5,238,000,000 worth of imports it produced but $326,000,000 in revenues, or just what was produced by the Payne law in 1910 on $1,557,000,000 of imports. mighty small return on bankrupted American industry. "Has he been successful?" inquired one friend of another, discussing the affairs of an absent manufacturer in 1914. "Successful? I should say he had," was the response. "He failed for

In 1918 and 1919, 72 per cent of our imports under that law came in without paying a Russian ruble into the United States Treasury. Small wonder that the people began to rear up and demand a change of tariff policy!

I shall only mention the fact that in mid-year 1914 over 4,000,000 workingmen had been benched by the Underwood law, hence nearly 20,000,000 mouths had relinquished a well-rounded and plentiful diet of farm products for the bread of charity and the husks of defeat.

In 1917 the American Federation of Labor, in convention at Buffalo, alarmed at the prospect of a continuance of the freetrade policy after the Great War, adopted without a dissenting vote the resolution which I here quote:

Resolved, That this convention go on record in favor of a policy of industrial preparedness and the enactment of laws by Congress that will adequately protect all wage earners of our country against loss of employment through any invasion of the products of any other nation.

I earnestly suggest that Mr. Samuel Gompers, the president of the American Federation of Labor, who works indefatigably for the success of the Democratic Party, and therefore the policy of free trade, raise his hat and paste a copy of that resolution thereunder, meanwhile recalling that the country of his nativity, after 75 years of experiment, has returned to the protective policy under a bill entitled "The safeguarding of industries act." That act carries a 33½ per cent ad valorem.

I shall not recount the titanic trade movements outward which reached $6,000,000,000 in 1917 and 1918, over $8,000,-000,000 in 1920, and sank to $3,700,000,000 in 1922, further than to remark that the party which attempted to make political capital out of the conduct of the war could hardly be expected to treat with justice the farmer, miner, mill operative, and manufacturer of America. Suffice to say that when the close of the calendar year 1920 showed imports at the record figure of $5,279,000,000 and competition almost equally divided among foodstuffs, manufactured goods, and the crude group which includes minerals, the Republican Party, at last restored to power, saw the necessity of immediate action.

As we know, one of the first pieces of remedial legislation essayed by the Republican majority in the House was the emergency tariff law, which, vetoed by President Wilson in his final birching of protection, was signed by President Harding on May 27, 1921. It is utterly useless to deny that this law materially aided the American farmer, further prostrated by the too rapid deflation of 1920. The official figures give the lie to any such denial. In 1921 we imported nearly $1,300,-000,000 worth of crude and manufactured foodstuff and food animals. In 1922 that figure was cut almost exactly in half. How can any man have the brass-bound effrontery to say that, given a larger share of his domestic market, the American food producer is not benefited thereby? The fact was immediately reflected in better prices to the farmer, and yet the prices of foodstuffs to the man who bought at retail showed a pronounced decline.

Hearings on the general tariff bill were begun by the Ways and Means Committee the first week in January, 1921, and continued for about six weeks. Already a large amount of data has been collected by the committee for use in revising the tariff on the basis of protection. The hearings were carefully and fairly conducted, and the index of those hearings shows that something like 1,600 organizations, firms, and individuals took advantage of the opportunity to present to the committee their arguments for or against duty rates and administrative features proposed by the framers of the bill.

On June 30 the bill was reported to the House, and after heated debate, it passed, July 21, 1921, by the record vote of 288 to 127, 14 not voting. I pause to remark that while the silken-haired pet of the gentleman from Texas was given far better consideration in the Fordney bill than was it in the Underwood law, he took his chances of the bill going through and smacked the Angora full on the snout with the kiss of betrayal. Yet he voted for 15 per cent on goat hair in 1913, after he had adroitly separated the goats from the sheep and voted for free wool.

The Fordney bill had encountered bitter opposition from the importing interests while it was in the House, and while 't was in the Senate drive after drive of the organized importers was sent against it. It was truthfully asserted by many seasoned tariff veterans in both Houses of Congress that never in the history of American tariff legislation had there been such a frantic determination on the part of the importers' combine to defeat, by fair means or foul, the effort of the Republican Party to return to the policy of protection. Torrents of invective, rivers of expostulation, were turned on the supporters of the measure, and oceans of propaganda flooded the length and breadth of the land, the originators thereof hoping to create a backwash which would knock the stanchest champion of protection off his feet. The amount of money spent to defeat the Fordney tariff law will never be known, but that it reached into the millions of dollars is confidently asserted.

Early in 1922 the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee made public some figures officially vouched for showing some of the prices at which the importers' combine was bringing in goods, the duties, if any, paid thereon, and the huge profits at which those goods were being sold to the American consumers. For a day or two "the silence was that orful you were 'arf afraid to speak." And then the pack broke loose in a bedlam of denial. This was only the first gun. In August a booklet was published based on a follow-up investigation which had been quietly pursued by the Treasury Department. Said the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Mellon:

This data was prepared in the office of the appraiser of merchandise at the port of New York from invoices and entries on file in the customs office at that port. Each sheet submitted bears an identification letter and number corresponding to the letter and number appearing on the particular article to which the sheet relates, the articles representing identical items of merchandise, or duplicates thereof, covered by the invoice and entry from which the data was secured.

The exhibits in question were presented to the appraiser's office and inspected and identified by examiners who pass upon the particular lines of merchandise involved.

* Additional information of this kind is being prepared by the appraiser.

The exhibits referred to embrace 122 articles of foreign importation in daily use and to be found at all times on the counters of the department stores of the importers' combine. They by no means exhausted the list. They showed the country or origin and the value therein, the charges-transportation, insurance, freight, and so forth—the duty assessed, the landed cost in the United States, the retail price in the United States, the company from which purchased, and, finally and most important, the percentage of retail price to landed cost. astounding information was divulged that profits ranging from 275 to 2,300 per cent were being exacted of American purchasers of these articles who patronized the agents of this combine.

The Treasury Department established in a manner which could not be successfully controverted that the foreign cost of producing these articles was lower than American manufacturers could possibly achieve; that the duties collected by the Government under the rates of the Democratic law were extremely low; that the duty collected and the duty proposed in the then pending tariff bill should not increase the price of this merchandise to the consumer; that the duty proposed by the then pending bill would in no instance prohibit importation; and that the importer could easily pay the proposed tariff duties without increasing the selling price. Or, in other words, that the spread between the foreign purchase price and selling price by the importer was sufficient to absorb the tariff duty many times over without any increase of the selling price of any of these imported products.

That report was an eye opener for the public and an closer for the importers' combine. Thenceforth, while their hearts may have been in their work, their minds were dazed by the denouement. I shall have occasion to refer later on to the campaign methods which they are at present following.

Identified, and in some instances party in interest, with the importers' combine which had set out to wreck the protectivetariff program, was a rabble of irresponsible theorists and doctrinnaires, internationalists, cancellationists, damnationists, and the whole surrenderbund spawned by that Æsopian frog, the League of Nations, "some in rags, and some in tags, and some in velvet gowns." Many of them, to be sure, were sincere, even if bemused. Most of them had their own selfish interest to the fore. The burden of their plaints was that if we returned to protection we would thereby exclude imports, and that the nations owing us could not possibly carry out their design to pay us with goods instead of gold—they could pay us not at all; that to wall out imports would be to wall in exports; that to protect our own would be a wicked and cowardly desertion of the unfortunate of other lands; that charity began abroad and not at home; that penitential retaliations and reprisals would prod us, sniveling futilely, from one European doorstep to another in quest of trade.

But the Joseph who was stripped of his coat and sold to the Ishmalites in 1913, who fled from Potiphar's wife in 1920, had found his real friends in 1922, and the tariff bill, after heart-sickening deferment, became a law on the 21st of September, 1922. Already that law gives substantial promise of making him a prosperous man.

This leads me to the point, Mr. Speaker, where I shall have recourse to official figures which point unerringly to the beneficent results already being attained and to continue under the new tariff law. The protectionists felt confident that some increase would be recorded in our export trade once the new law began operation, but the record for the first four months of that law has not only confounded those who made the dire predictions last year but it has actually astounded its friends. Remarkable to relate, comparing the period October, 1922, to January, 1923, inclusive, with the similar period the year before, our export trade has increased by 20 per cent, or from $1,212,000,000 to $1,434,000,000. That is 50 per cent greater than the record for the first four months of the Underwood law, October, 1913, to January, 1914, inclusive, which period itself showed a decrease in exports, compared with the similar period under the Payne law, 1912–13, of $55,000,000. I insert a table to substantiate this statement, the figures expressing millions of dollars:

The Act
Totat	exports.

Month.	1912-13	1913-14	1921-22	1922-23
October November December January	$255 278 250 227	$272 246 233 204	$343 294 296 279	$371 880 344 339
Total (4 months)	1,010	955	1, 212	1,434

What have the prophets of evil to say to that? They assured us that Europe in particular would curtail buying from us so soon as the tariff law went into effect. But they were wrong again, notwithstanding the troublous times that still persist on that continent. Let us study the exports by grand divisions, on which we have figures for the last three months of last year, and compare them with the other periods indicated, again the figures, which I insert, being expressed in millions of dollars:

Exports October-December, inclusive

Zapono o castr 2 c			EDUALS, DUST	White St
Grand division.	1912	1913	1921	1922
Europe North America South America Asta Oceania Africa	$536 153 37 29 21 9	$505 139 36 40 24 7	$504 211 44 141 29 13	$609 261 64 117 31
Total (3 months)	785	751	842	1,095

The importers of French luxuries declared that the restoration of protection would cause our market in France to dwindle; that Germany, already bowed down with the weight of her woe, would cease to be a customer; that Italy would boycott us if we protected our lemon and olive industry; that the United Kingdom, despite her safeguarding of industries act, would cut off her patronage of Uncle Sam; that Canada would take her trade elsewhere if we protected our wheat; that Cuba would sour on our goods if we protected our sugar producers; and that Australia would treat us coldly if we protected our wool. Let us see how those countries responded to those predictions during the first three months of the law; exports to them, herewith inserted, expressed in millions of dollars:

Exports October-December, inclusive.

The state of the s		preconstate,	HALP.
Country.	1912	1913	1921	1922
France Germany Italy United Kingdom. Canada Cuba Australia and New Zealand.	$62 126 25 223 98 20 15	$63 129 24 202 90 20 16	$62 72 46 214 121 27 20	$87 81 53 254 167 88 31

These free-trade oracles declared that if we enacted a protective-tariff law the market for our minerals and crude products would shrink; that the farmer would find his products spoiling on his hands for lack of foreign consumers; that the manufacturer would lop off his labor pay roll for lack of markets for his exportable surplus. And how were these oracles confuted? Let us glance at the commodity groups of exports, inserted at this point, again expressed in millions of dollars:

Exports October-December, inclusive.

Group.	1912	1913	1921	1922
Crude materials for use in manufacturing Foodstuffs, crude, and food animals Foodstuffs, partly or wholly manufactured Manufactures for further use in manufacturing. Manufactures ready for consumption Miscellaneous Foreign merchandise, exported	$333	$340	$299	$391
	65	31	99	101
	90	88	127	139
	96	91	95	102
	189	192	292	334
	2	2	2	3
	9	8	16	16

Arranging our exports according to the new classifications adopted by the Department of Commerce, and comparing the last three months of 1922 with the similar period for 1921, I insert the following in millions of dollars:

Exports.	1921	1922
Group O: Animals and animal products except wool and hair Group 1: Vegetable food products, oll seeds, expressed oils, and	$92	$105
Deverages	157	168
Group 2: Other vegetable products, except fibers and wood	64	75 332
Group 3: Textiles	255
Group 4: Wood and paper.	32	37
Group 5: Nonmetallic minerals	121	138
vehicles	75	78
Group 7: Machinery and vehicles	83	99
Group 8: Chemicals and allied products	75 83 24	26
Group 9: Miscellaneous	19	99 26 22

Here we find an increase in every group of the export trade, and in the majority of instances a very substantial one.

It is when we attempt to get a line on the imports under the new law that we encounter difficulties. The new law made a general reclassification of imports essential, and following out the instructions of the Department of Commerce the customs collectors have been delayed in rendering returns. Once the reclassifications are established I am assured that the monthly reports of imports will be handled expeditionally. As mattersnow stand the department is working on the summary of imports for the first month of the new law, which includes the period September 22 to October 31, inclusive. From the figures already made public we are somewhat astonished to find that imports for the first 40 days of the new law totaled $345,082,000. Of these about $60,000,000 came in during the nine days of September, leaving $285,000,000 for October alone. This is $97,000,000 more than came in October, 1921, and once more the lie is given to the free trade prognosticators. I insert here the imports by grand divisions, comparing October, 1921, with September 22 to October 31, 1922 (000 omitted):

Grand division.	October—
	1921	1922
Europe. North America. South America. Asia. Oceania. Africa.	$66,769 53,442 17,711 45,325 1,915 2,842	$116, 524 81, 050 38, 860 99, 998 4, 625 4, 023

Here will be noted a decided increase from every grand division. Imports from the United Kingdom increased from $19,000,000 to $46,000,000; from France, $10,000,000 to $17,000,000; from Germany, $7,600,000 to $13,000,000; from Canada, $29,000,000 to $47,000,000; from Cuba, $10,000,000 to $17,000,000; from Japan, $17,000,000 to $47,000,000. Is there anyone now foolish enough to assert that the Fordney law is a prohibitive law?

I have recently been shown a list containing 69 items which entered into this import trade, of which 33 came in free and 36 were dutiable. They accounted for 86 per cent of the total imports. With the exception of sugar from the Philippines, crude petroleum, copper ore and concentrates, articles of United States manufacture returned on the free list, and fruits (except bananas), nuts, and cotton manufactures, on the dutiable list, there was a marked increase in importation of every commodity listed. The free list totaled $222,624,000, the dutiable $122,458,000, whence it will be seen that 65 per cent of the imports came in free. The duty collected for the 40 days in question amounted to $54,984,464, or at the rate of $1,374,600 a day. Dividing the customs revenues by the total imports, we establish an average ad valorem slightly under 16 per cent on all imports, and another operation shows that the rate on dutiable imports was a trifle under 45 per cent. Certainly, in view of depreciated foreign exchanges and the consequent purchasing power of the American dollar in foreign lands, coupled with the much wider disparity to-day in labor cost of production here and abroad than it was in 1913, this rate can not be deemed excessive.

Information which I received to-day from the Department of Commerce shows that the imports for last November amounted to $294,000,000, on which customs duties amounted to $41,-647,032. This means an average ad valorem for that month of 14 per cent and for the first two months and nine days of the new law of a flat 15 per cent.

However, I shall assume 16 per cent as the average ad valorem rate on all goods, to remain somewhat constant throughout the year, whence we may arrive at some approximation of our foreign trade, using that rate as the anatomical key to the future. I insert a table at this point showing the customs receipts thus far realized, the known imports for October, those estimated on the 16 per cent basis up to March 1, and the known exports:

Month.	Customs receipts.	Imports.	Exports.
Sept. 22-Oct. 30. November. December. January February.	$54, 984, 464 41, 647, 032 37, 446, 000 46, 345, 991 55, 000, 000	$343, 083, 000 294, 000, 000 234, 000, 000 289, 000, 000 343, 000, 000	$371,000,000 389,000,000 344,000,000 339,000,000 1 370,000,000
Total (5 months)	235, 423, 487	1, 505, 000, 000	1, 804, 000, 900

¹ Estimated.

On this basis we should find a favorable balance of trade over five months of something like $300,000,000. trade maintain this pace throughout the first full-year operation of the new law, we should record $4,300,000,000 in exports and $3,600,000,000 in imports, or a favorable balance for the first year of $700,000,000. That is running pretty close. I am informed, however, that officials in the Department of Commerce and the Treasury look forward to a trade for the first year of $4,500,000,000 in exports and more nearly $3,250,000,000 in imports, whereby we could realize a favorable balance of $1,250,000,000.

At this point I insert a quotation from the predictions of the Treasury Department which appeared in a recent issue of the Washington Post;

Customs officials some weeks ago revised their earlier estimate of $450,000,000 in collections for the current fiscal year ending June 30 and declared that Government revenue from duties assessed at the customhouses would aggregate $480,000,000. Some of the more optimistic predicted receipts of $500,000,000. These latter officials are arguing that their forecast will prove good unless unforeseen changes occur in international trade, which may cut American imports readically. radically.

GREATER TRADE FORECAST.

While the troubled European situation may affect American imports adversely to some degree, most Government officials who are acquainted with foreign-trade conditions insist that those nations striving hardest to sell in the American markets are maintaining the world position they held when imports into the United States began to creep upward early last year. The Ruhr situation is not expected to have any appreciable effect on world trade, in so far as shipments to the United States are concerned. On the contrary, it was said in some quarters here that the stoppage in production in the Ruhr may have the effect of increasing American exports. If that be true, it was argued, there is likely to be increasing imports into the United States in exchange.

SEE END OF GOLD IMPORTS.

In discussing the import situation, officials here pretty generally hold that the time is rapidly approaching when imports of gold will cease, or be reduced to negligible proportions. The inbound gold shipments have been going down steadily for many months, and the tendency of gold imports to decrease and exports to increase, although the increase has been small, has been most gratifying to Government officials, who believe that an outward flow of gold from the United States would mean a healthier world condition, at least until the enormous stocks of gold held here are spread again among the nations whence they came during the war.

Taken as a whole, the trade situation, in the view of officials, is good, and indications point to a progressive improvement in the situation, barring, of course, world developments that would again impede industrial production. Secretary Mellon recently stated he regarded the domestic industrial situation as "very good," and this view is generally shared by other administration spokesmen, who say that such a condition acts as a leaven in the bread of world trade.

The forecast of the Department of Commerce as to imports, assuming a constant average ad valorem of 16 per cent, would the law, so the indications are that the estimates of the two departments are not wide apart, and we must accept them as the best available.

In view of what is transpiring, I am personally inclined to think that the Fordney law was, if anything, too low, for imports reaching this huge figure will undoubtedly mean a displacement of American goods, by the time those imports are on the market, of over $6,000,000,000. Our population has increased less than 10 per cent since the Payne law was repealed, and during its last year we imported $1,813,000,000 worth of goods, or, say, at the rate of $18 per capita annually.

The present estimate will give us importations of over $30 per capita, or nearly $60 by way of displacement. Per capita imports will thus have increased 67 per cent while population has increased about 10 per cent. Certainly this favorable balance will be stretched to the limit to pay off so-called invisible balances, build hospitals for the pseudopsychologists from France, succor the starving but militant Russians, enrich longhaired European musicians, their rotund opera singers, their scantily attired muscle dancers, and their anemic painters, without all of which art would stop short of the cultivated sort in these days of old "King Bunk."

turn now, Mr. Speaker, to a somewhat cursory review of industrial conditions as we find them five months after the restoration of the protective-tariff policy, and I include the farmer, whose industry is such that certain strikers who recently invaded the farming belt to work while their affairs at the factories were in a position of stalemate, were mighty glad to get back in the mills on any reasonable terms because they found life on the farm too all-fired industrious.

I have said that the renascence of American industry is under way. No one who scans the reports which daily come thronging in will find it worth while attempting to disprove that statement.

Steel is frequently referred to as the barometer of the The census reports dealing only with those Nation's business. establishments which operate blast furnaces, steelworks, rolling mills, forges, and bloomeries show that under the four years of the Payne law there was a steady growth in production of this industry from 26,000,000 long tons in the calendar year 1910 to over 31,000,000 in 1913.

In 1914, notwithstanding the advantage accruing to this industry by five months of war orders, production fell off nearly 10 per cent. During the war years, from 1915 to 1918, inclusive, it averaged 41,000,000. It reached peak in 1920 with 42,000,000 long tons. In that year Germany was still out of the competition, Great Britain was harassed with labor troubles, and there was a large demand for building and ship construction materials abroad. Our exports that year totaled $1,113,000,000. but in the same year our imports reached $50,000,000, which in itself had a very material effect on the domestic production of the ensuing year, when it fell to less than 20,000,000 long tons. Last year, as the country settled down to a realization that protection was to be restored, steel production again began to increase

According to the most recent report, unfiled orders on the books of the United States Steel Corporation on January 31 showed an increase of 165,073 tons over the preceding month. Orders on books were 6,910,776 tons against 6,745,703 tons a year ago. It may also be compared with the 3,800,000 at the close of the first quarter following the passage of the Underwood law in 1914, and with the 6,000,000 tons the first quarter following the passage of the Payne law in 1909.

From Chicago comes the report that the steel mills in that district are practically sold out for the second quarter of the year. Youngstown, Ohio, reports a large number of furnaces blown in which had been idle since November, 1920. Duluth steel mills, closed last winter, now employ 3,500.

Here is an industry which employs easily 500,000 men when operating at normal, at wages undreamed of abroad, and with a high capacity for the consumption of agricultural products. The iron and steel industry, as a whole, employs nearly 1,600,000 hands. The reports show that, whereas the mills have increased production to about 90 per cent of capacity, they find labor an unknown quantity. Despite an advance of wages last September the steel mills are finding it difficult to secure sufficient help. Says the Chicago report:

While steel makers in this district are confronted with a tremendous demand for steel on all sides, operations are not being increased because of a shortage of labor and the uncertainty of the fuel situation.

Similar reports come from the Pittsburgh region. Steel is protected to-day and as a barometer it records fair weather for the entire country.

The tin industry is one of the prize creations of the protecproduce about $520,000,000 of revenue the first full year of tive policy. McKinley put it on the map in this country and the free traders have tried several times since to break it up. In 1919 it produced 3,200,000,000 pounds of tin and terne plate. Prior to 1890 we were entirely dependent upon Great Britain for our supply. If you will read the hearings of just 83 years ago, you will be amused at the fears expressed by the canning industry, which implored McKinley not to protect tin plate, declaring such an act would completely ruin the canning business in this country.

In 1889 we had imported 728,000,000 pounds of plate. We were taking three-quarters of the British supply. Strangely enough, one of our largest consumers of tin plate, the Standard Oil Co., was obliged recently to depend upon British plate again, and that company made a huge purchase of British tin plate to be brought over here in its own boats and made up into oil cans for shipment to the far corners of the earth. And why were they obliged to purchase abroad? They wanted to purchase at home, and they are still in the market for the commodity, but the fact is the tin plate manufacturers are completely sold up and they are unable to meet the require-ment of the Standard Oil at this time. What a testimonial that is to the prosperity of that industry!

As for the canning industry, evidently their fears failed to materialize, for in 1919 it counted 72,000 wage earners, $290,000,000 of invested capital, and it was buying $320,000,000 worth of materials. And, what is more important, they are getting tin plate for their cans to-day far cheaper than they were buying it when the British held the monopoly. That is what protection has done for the tin-plate makers and the tin-

Let us consider the automobile industry, which has so rapidly forged to the front that it now ranks second to the steel industry in this country. Something like 2,500,000 workers make their living from this vast business directly or indirectly. Says an authority on the subject, Mr. Hubert McDonnell:

Twelve million cars and trucks is the point of saturation for new cars for new users, which but a few years ago was freely conceded by many authorities but is now admittedly too small. How many vehicles the country can use we do not know, but it looks like 16,000,000 to 18,000,000 at least. Possibly 600,000 new users were added to the list in 1922 without much farmer buying. Possibly that many more may be gathered into the fold this year, especially as rural purchasing power is gradually improving. * * It is estimated that 1,800,000 cars and trucks will be needed this year for replacement.

The Copper and Brass Research Association after a careful survey predicts that 1923 production will reach 2,800,000 cars and trucks, which will account for 120,000,000 pounds of copper on the present basis of the copper content in the stock car. grand total of copper consumption chargeable to the automobile industry for 1923 is 135,000,000 pounds. At this point I call attention to the fact that since copper manufactures were given protection there has been an increase of business and mines formerly closed are now reopening.

The lumber industry gives employment to thousands of operatives. How is it responding to the prosperity gong? The National Lumber Manufacturers' Association recently reported that the lumber movement continued at a high level:

Production, shipments, and orders, especially the last two, show large gains over this period for last year, and the first five weeks of 1923 overtop those weeks of 1922 by about 60 per cent in orders and shipments and about 12 per cent in production.

The American cotton textile industry is one which the British manufacturers, personified by Cobden, have attempted for a century to destroy. In more recent years other nations have joined in the attempt, and they have been ably assisted by the free-trade enemy within our gates. In 1832 Senator Hayne, of South Carolina, that prince of free traders, declared:

If trade was free the goods manufactured in this country would be imported from England and paid for in our cotton, but in cutting off the imports you, of course, to the same extent diminish our exports.

But the southern cotton manufacturers have long since repudiated the Hayne idea, and they were as insistent as their New England brethren for protection to their industry in the present law.

The Fordney tariff law gave to the cotton manufacturers what the majority of us believed to be a fair measure of protection. How has the cotton industry responded to that law? I let the Census Bureau speak for me:

ACTIVE SPINDLES PASSED 35,000,000 MARK IN JANUARY FOR FIRST TIME—MONTH'S CONSUMPTION, 610,375 BALES—CENSUS BUREAU DECLARES GROWTH OF INDUSTRY IN COTTON-GROWING STATES IS RESPONSIBLE FOR INCREASE.

Washington, February 14.—Cotton manufacturing showed greater activity during January than at any time in the history of the industry. The number of cotton spindles active during January passed the 35,000,000 mark for the first time, the Census Bureau's monthly report, Issued to-day, showing the number to have been 35,240,853.

Consumption of cotton during January totaled 610,375 bales, which bas been exceeded only twice heretofore—in March, 1916, when 613,754 bales were consumed, and in May, 1917, when 613,412 bales were used.

GROWTH OF INDUSTRY.

The growth of the cotton-spinning industry in cotton-growing States is largely responsible for the increased activity. In January cotton-growing States consumed more cotton than in any month in their history, and the number of active spindles was larger than ever before. Active spindles for the whole country increased from 30,359,843 in January, 1913, to 35,240,853 in January, this year, while in the cotton-growing States the number increased from 11,740,465 to 15,966,294. Consumption of cotton in the same period increased from 533,743 bales to 610,375, the cotton-growing States' consumption increasing from 278,504 bales to 384,019.

COTTON CONSUMED.

Cotton consumed during January amounted to 610,375 bales of lint and 49,804 of linters, compared with 527,945 of lint and 49,078 of linters in December and 526,698 of lint and 13,626 of linters in January linters in December and 526,698 of lint and 13,526 of linters in January last year.

Cotton on hand January 31 in consuming establishments was 1,986,605 bales of lint and 143,415 of linters, compared with 1,921,295 of lint and 123,104 of linters on December 31 last and 1,668,668 of lint and 172,341 of linters on January 31 last year, and in public storage and at compresses 3,481,689 bales of lint and 45,821 of linters, compared with 4,074,945 of lint and 38,103 of linters on December 31 last and 4,621,708 of lint and 132,963 of linters on January 31 last year.

Cotton spindles active during December numbered 35,240,853, compared with 34,968,440 in December and 34,441,419 in January last year.

Imports and exports not available.

Let us glance at the silk industry. Appearing before the Ways and Means Committee on February 3, 1921, the official representative of the Silk Association of America said of the Underwood law:

If any demonstration was needed of the danger of this competition (Japanese and Italian) it has been amply proved under the operation of the Underwood-Simmons bill. It has amply demonstrated that fact.

And referring to the free-trade policy in general, he de-

The fallacy of the old free-trade attitude that a country should produce only those things which most readily were produced in its economic condition was never more thoroughly demonstrated than in the case of the silk industry in the United States.

Here is an industry which can take care of 125,000 operatives if it can get them. A short time ago the Second International Silk Exposition was held in New York. It was visited by more than 200,000 people and declared to be "the most beautiful than 200,000 people and declared to be "the most beautiful exposition of art, industry, and general spectacular magnificence ever witnessed in the history of the world." Mr. Augustin, president of the Silk Travelers' Association, declared:

The activity that developed within the past year has turned into prosperity, and I believe that good times are here to stay for a long time. On all sides we have evidence of increasing demand for raw material, labor, and finished products. * * * The railroads are preparing to carry the largest quantity of freight in their history, and this will include the largest quantity of silk goods the country has ever produced because the silk looms of America will be called upon to produce a full cancelity. duce at full capacity.

In Paterson, N. J., the silk manufacturers are confronted with a shortage of labor. They can not get enough men to put out their orders. "The greatest problem faced by the silk industry of Great Britain is a lack of protection," declared the British delegate to the exposition. Thanks to the Republican Party our silk manufacturers do not have that problem to wrestle with now.

The wool mills have taken up the song. They have been somewhat handicapped by labor disputes, but the skies have brightened and the shuttles are breaking records. In the western market sales of knit goods are active. Wool stocks can not keep up with the demand. Total reported stocks of domestic raw wool in dealers' hands 10 days ago were almost 50,000,000 pounds less than in September. A New York trade paper reports-and I hope those who phophesied increased clothing costs will note-that:

Judging by the opening prices of the American Woolen Co., an organization which is the pacemaker for the market, it can scarcely be denied that there are plenty of fabrics to chose from which will enable the clothing producer to put out a substantial suit at from $25 to $30.

Again this paper says:

Again this paper says:

In the men's division of the woolen market, the talk during the past week or 10 days has centered on the subtle propaganda that is being pushed assiduously by certain clothing interests to create the impression that, owing to advances in the price of cloths, suits and overcoats will cost from to $5 to $10 more next fall. Any impartial observer who cares to study the opening prices of the mills must inevitably reach the conclusion that the latter have almost unanimously named prices that were not anywhere near the figure which had been anticipated. The propaganda of the clothing men is therefore regarded in the woolen market as being wholly uncalled for and insidious.

And so it goes, Mr. Speaker. I could spin the tale of industrial and agricultural rebirth until my hearers were weary and the enic had taken on the proportions of a tome. Reports of the epic had taken on the proportions of a tome. Reports of revitalized industry are coming in so fast that it is well-nigh impossible to keep up with them. In fact, I have depended very largely for the information I have received upon the New York Journal of Commerce, which in the main is journalistically sound and almost without exception editorially inconsistent.

The Journal's own news sheets over a period of two weeks in which this information was carried have given the lie to almost everything its editor has said in derogation of the Fordney law.

I preface my remarks on the agricultural situation by quoting from a recent summary of the Department of Agriculture surveying 1922, which-showed that in the case of all but 5 of our 31 major crops output was greater than in 1921. The volume of these 31 crops was 7 per cent larger than in 1921; and as the December 1 farm prices averaged 25 per cent higher than a year ago, the total value, $7,500,000,000, was about one-third more than in 1921.

1922 PROFITABLE IN LIVE STOCK.

The growers of live stock generally also had a profitable year. The cattle feeders of the Corn Belt bought their lean cattle in the fall of 1921 at very favorable prices and marketed their fat cattle at unusually high levels, so that for them conditions were just the reverse of those of 1921.

In the range situation 1922 showed little improvement over 1921. Prices of range cattle little more than held their own. During the period of inflation western growers speculated heavily in cattle, mostly on borrowed money. Cattle bought in the early autumn of 1920 and sold in the autumn of 1922 did not, after being kept two years, bring the upset price despite the heavy liquidation in cattle during this period. These growers were still in a precarious condition and in the autumn of 1922 forced liquidation of immature cattle and breeding stock reached unprecedented proportions.

There are indications, however, that the worst is over for this class of farmers and that the coming year should show decided improvement. Beef consumption is on a much healthier basis than a year ago, and the terrific liquidation should bring about a better balance between supply and demand.

RECOVERT IN SHEEP AND WOOL.

RECOVERY IN SHEEP AND WOOL.

The recovery in the sheep situation in 1922 over that of the preceding year was truly remarkable. The 1922 wool clip and lamb crop brought record peace-time prices. It is conservatively estimated that there was a 35 per cent falling off in the flocks. It is not strange, therefore, that prices of breeding sheep were more than doubled. This advance greatly improved the sheep grower's credit standing at the Bear in mind in this connection that the emergency tariff law went into effect May 27, 1921, carrying protective rates on practically all farm products. According to the department, live stock in the United States—cattle, hogs, and sheep—were appraised at $2,973,000,000 in 1922 and $3,323,000,000 for the present year, an increase of nearly 12 per cent.

While we are considering the tariff and its effects in promoting the prosperity of the farmer I desire to quote from a recent statement of Mr. David Friday, president of the Michigan Agricultural College, who exhorts the farmer to cater to the domestic market instead of flying to evils that he knows not of in foreign fields. Says President Friday:

in foreign fields. Says President Friday:

The best evidence available indicates that the total wages and salaries paid by Government and by industries other than agriculture amounted to $38,000,000,000 for the year 1920. They fell in 1921 to $30,000,000,000. They can not be less than $33,000,000,000 for the year 1922, and will probably be larger in 1923. It is doubtful whether these payments ever were as large as $18,000,000,000 in any pre-war year. The purchasing power of the inhabitants of our cities and towns is therefore adequate to absorb a large volume of agricultural products at prices materially higher than those of the pre-war period.

Nor do wages and salaries constitute the entire income of the people living in the cities and towns who buy and consume the products of our farms. They are less than three-quarters of that income. Rents, interests, and profits make up another $12,000,000,000 of income of the urban dwellers. When this is added to the wages and salaries we have a total spending power in our cities and towns of $45,000,000,000 for 1922. It prosperity continues for 1923 it will amount to even more.

The greatest foreign market that the food producers of this

The greatest foreign market that the food producers of this country ever enjoyed was in 1919, when the war-swept pantries of the European powers had to be replenished biding the time when they could make some shift for themselves. That year we exported $2,641,000,000 worth of foodstuffs, crude and prepared, and food animals. At the rate business is booming it is wholly probable that by the middle of the current year, certainly by the end of the year, the purchasing power of those employed in industries other than agricultural will exceed by twenty times our exports of foodstuffs in the banner year 1919. Is any man so brain stricken as to believe that the farmer can be cozened into abandoning his domestic market, a prey to free trade, while he goes on the still hunt for foreign markets to take its place?

In the Saturday Evening Post for February 10 one of those "economic experts," with which the country is at present cluttered, makes this statement:

That a high protective tariff on manufactured goods is not to the interest of farmers, whose products are largely sold on the basis of prices fixed in international markets, ought to require no argument by this time. * * Yet farmer Republican votes two years ago elected the Congress which coolly enacted a tariff law carrying rates even higher than those in the Payne-Aldrich bill. Many farmer Representatives in Congress voted for the last tariff bill.

I have discussed the rates of the present law, and have shown the falsity of that statement. It is just such statements as these, made by half-baked students of the tariff who never had a callous on their hands, which characterized the campaign against the Payne tariff law.

As for the assertion of this gentleman that the farmer's prices are fixed in the international markets, is any farmer in this land ninny enough to believe that the $15,000,000,000 worth of farm products raised in 1919 had their prices set by international markets, when exports of foodstuffs were $2,500,-000,000? When did the tail was the dog? What does happen is, that when the domestic market is flooded with cheap foreign foods the prices which the American farmer receives at home are depressed.

Mr. Speaker, it has been the classic argument of the opponents of protection that if we could not produce a commodity in this country as cheaply as it could be produced somewhere abroad, then the domestic producer should quit and go into some other line of business, just what is not stated. I have often wondered how that would work out in actual practice, but I have never heard it intelligently discussed. Let us consider the proposition for a moment:

Taking some of our basic industries as they existed in 1919, I find from the Statistical Abstract for 1921 that there were 447,000 wage earners in the cotton goods, lace, and small wares industries, earning $369,000,000 in wages. The capital employed totaled nearly $5,000,000,000, the cost of materials came to $1,315,000,000, the value of products was $2,200,000,000, and the value added by manufacture, $880,000,000. can produce these goods more cheaply in Great Britain, Germany, and Japan, so we will wipe out the American cotton manufacturing industry and send the workers on their way.

In the silk-goods industry are employed 127,000 hands, earning $108,000,000; capital employed, $533,000,000; value of products, $688,000,000; value added by manufacture, $300,000,000. But they can manufacture silk goods more cheaply in Japan, China, France, and Italy than we can in the United States, so we will pitch the silk manufacturers into the silken free-trade web of these foreign producers and go out of the silk business, leaving the operatives to find some other work.

In the woolen and worsted industries we employ about 170,000 hands, earning wages totaling about $174,000,000; capital employed, $856,000,000; cost of materials, $700,000,000; value of products, $1,118,000,000; value added by manufacture, $418,-000,000. Wool consumption averaging nearly 600,000,000 pounds is about their average when busy. In 1919 we had about 49;-000,000 sheep, valued at $568,000,000, and produced 314,000,000 pounds of wool. But they can raise wool more cheaply in Australia, South Africa, Argentina, and Uruguay, and they can make it up into clothing more cheaply in Great Britain, Germany, and Belgium; so we will strike out protection and decide that the American sheep and the American wool mill do not belong to our scheme of things.

To these three industries we may add the knit-goods industry, employing 173,000 wage earners, receiving $125,000,000 in wages; capital employed, $516,000,000; cost of materials, $427,-000,000; value of products, $713,000,000; and value added by manufacture, $286,000,000. Unravel the knit-goods industry.

It is an outlander.

The printing and publishing, book and job industry employs 123,000 operatives, earning $141,000,000, cost of materials $211,-000,000, and value of products $598,000,000. But they can handle that work cheaper in Europe, so we will put that in the discard and feed ourselves to surfeiting on European propaganda.

The tobacco business employs 157,000 hands, earning $124,-It purchases $483,000,000 worth of materials, and the value of its products is $1,013,000,000. With respect to this industry our southern Democrat friends are singularly silent, but logically it should go with the rest and be consigned to the scrap heap, since there are other countries which can produce more cheaply; therefore tobacco is an exotic in the United States.

Our total sugar crop in 1919 was valued at $162,000,000: tatoes, $639,000,000; wheat, $2,074,000,000; corn, $3,508,000,000; farm animals, excluding sheep, $8,300,000,000; orchard fruits, $431,000,000; grapes, $95,000,000; subtropical fruits, $115,000,-000; nuts, $30,000,000. But Cuba has the edge on us in producing sugar and subtropical fruits, Canada on wheat, Bermuda on potatoes, Argentina on corn and farm animals, Spain and the Orient on nuts and peanuts, and some other countries on orchard fruits. So what right have we to continue in such business? According to our free trade friends, to continue in such industries is to perpetuate economic heresy.

There were over 9,000,000 wage earners in the manufacturing industries in 1919, earning $10,500,000,000 in wages, and those industries purchased $37,000,000,000 worth of materials, the value of their products being $62,000,000,000. This does not include the so-called "white-collared" worker, the banker, the professional men and women, and countless others who are the professional men and women, and countiess others who are next to feel the pinch of hard times when the mills close down and the laboring man steps out. But, altogether, the incomes of these people go to make up the $45,000,000,000 referred to by Mr. Friday, and when those incomes are cut the purchase of farm products is cut. Free trade is like a knife on the protective insulation of a cable. The moment you cut through the protection you short-circuit the entire system, and the fuse at the Treasury Department blows out in the form of a bond issue.

What would have become of us, Mr. Speaker, if the free trade party had had its way in 1897, or even in 1909? Talk about who won the war! Why, protection won the war! From July 1, 1914, to December 31, 1918, we exported over $22,000,000,000 worth of crude materials, farm products, and manufactured goods, and the great bulk of that vast amount was consigned to Europe. They had no adequate commissary but ours, and since an army moves on its belly the Allies could not have moved-they could not have maintained their groundwithout our food supplies. They would have been powerless without our titanic mill development. We struck like the hammer of Thor and they directed the blows, as long as we were noncombatants.

The imperial war lords were thoroughly cognizant of that fact, and that was why they attempted to rule us off the Atlantic. It was common gossip and was admitted by England that she would starve in two weeks if the lanes of supply from the United States were closed. The repeal of the corn laws in 1846 had reduced her to the extremity where she could not feed her insular population in time of peace let alone war and the colonies cut off.

Had the Democratic tariff policy prevailed over any length of time the opening of the war in Europe would have found us utterly incapable of meeting the demands of the Allies for food and munitions, and I prophesy the day will come when some future Creasy will declare that the economic strength of the United States was the dominating factor which prevented the Hun from overrunning Europe and perhaps the world. That strength was nurtured and developed by the protective-tariff policy which, with two slight interruptions, had kept its vigil over American industry ever since the Civil War. That should be our justification, Mr. Speaker. That should be our pride: That we were able to reinforce the Allies with our substance and strengthen their arms. But to argue the success of free trade by pointing to the profits taken from the hell of war creates a stench in the nostrils and a positive disgust for the political sophist who is driven to such an expedient.

Placed under the yoke of free trade for a decade and we would practically be without sheep and wool, one of the most necessary commodities for our soldiery. Dependent in large measure upon Australia for our wool, we would find ourselves in dire straits in case of war with an oriental power, which I pray will never come, but which is not beyond the range of possibility. And to carry the free-trade principle and the argument which supports it to its logical conclusion, we would revert to mere hewers of wood and drawers of water. In that way we would conserve the potential wealth of the United States for the aliens of the earth who, under the ægis of internationalism, might be invited into the New World to gorge themselves at a banquet board from which we had been debarred. I for one shall countenance no such national sacrifice.

Mr. Speaker, if there is one thing on earth which is satisfying to the average employer it is to be able to give a job to a man who is willing to work and needs employment. Picture Uncle Sam as the boss of the greatest industrial establishment in the world, of which the Government service is the clerical force. And picture him with his wheels blocked, his furnaces blown out, his spindles silent, his plows rusting, his mines flooded, his rails warped under the blight of free trade. A man comes to him and demands work, because "in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread." And Uncle Sam replies, "I am very sorry, my man, but my stockholders have placed in charge as foreman of the works the free-trade party. He has been given complete authority for four years, at least, to conduct the plant as he sees fit. He has seen fit to cut down its output-eventually to close it out-believing it is wiser to purchase our textiles, our steel manufactures, our farm products, and everything we need to make life worth while from foreign nations. I can not give you a job and will not, for he is retrenching on output.

What would that man think? If he thought at all, he would suddenly make the discovery that he was a partner of Uncle Sam; that it was a majority of just such as himself who had put the foreman on the job and himself off the job. And he would say at the first opportunity, "Here, Mr. Foreman, you get out. I want my job back, and you are keeping me out of it." And that is exactly what he said in 1920.

I wish to refer now somewhat briefly to the style of campaign that is being waged against the present tariff law with a view to returning those to power in 1925 who, like the Bourbons, "learn nothing and forget nothing," and who will revert to free trade as readily as the dog is turned to his vomit.

In the fall campaign of last year the Democrats spread the falsehood that the new tariff law would mulct the Ameri-can people of $4,000,000,000 annually. There were no authentic figures on which to base such a statement, and none could be produced. It was simply a bald statement. A short time ago the New York World, which almost daily repudiates the caption of its editorial column, scaled this amount down to $3,000,000,000, a revision downward of 25 per cent, without ryhme or reason for the figure given. Still more recently another of those "economic experts" who spring from the head of the Democratic donkey full panoplied with statistics which are almost solely the fruit of introspection, declared that the tariff law means an additional tax to the people of $1,715,000,-000 annually, and that producers of protected farms gain $125,-000,000 through protective duty rates, but they are set back $95,000,000 by increased cost of imports, leaving but $30,000,000 as their gain.

The purveyor of these nonsensical figures set down in "Who's Who" as a Democrat. Not one of the three sums mentioned has the slightest scintilla of fact for its foundation, and the farmer who permits his credulity to accept them is lending himself to a wicked propaganda which, if successful, will work to his undoing.

Working hand in hand with these "economists" is the president of the National Drygoods Association, who was recently reported in a local paper as predicting that the average farmer and his family will not be much of a tariff beneficiary. Straus," says the reporter, "is in a position to obtain very accurate information on the subject. His association is probably the greatest distributing organization on earth. Its 2,000 members employ 400,000 people and purchase $2,250,000,000 worth of merchandise yearly." I dare say they do, Mr. Speaker, and I dare say among their membership will be found most of those concerns which make up the importers' combine to which I have referred. And I make bold to say that they would be glad to purchase that entire $2,225,000,000 worth of goods from Europe and bring it in free of duty and continue their netarious 2,300 per cent gouging of the American people. And I am confident that the Secretary of the Treasury is in a position to obtain very accurate information on the subas he did last fall, as I have shown heretofore. And I pause to ask what percentage of that great purchasing power of merchandise represents farm products?

These people have no primary desire to sell to the farmer. What they do is to shake the urban dweller down for all they can get and then pass their surpluses on to the small town stores if they can not otherwise dispose of them. They put the thumbscrews on the metropolitan press by threatening to remove their advertising, and they are now seeking the farmer's vote to help them displace American goods with their foreign dress goods and fancy toilet preparations, and the hundred and twenty-two other commodities and more, referred to by the Treasury report. I have indicated what we may expect in the way of imports. To equal the $1,700,000,000 charge on our people the average rate on the dutiable goods would have to average about 140 per cent. To equal the charge set by the Democratic Party in the late campaign it would have to be

As indicative of the fallacy of such assertions let us cite po-tatoes as an example. Last fall the New York Herald, con-demning the proposed Senate rate of 35 cents a bushel on potatoes, stated that our daily consumption was 1,000,000 bushels. and declared:

On a million bushels of potatoes consumed a day, 35 cents runs up a neat total of $350,000 or $127,750,000 annually as a tariff charge to a neat total of $350, on the American people

Since the law as passed carried a duty of 50 cents a 100 pounds, or 30 cents a bushel, according to such reasoning this should result in a charge of $110,000,000 annually. A recent crop report of the Department of Agriculture informs us that-

An estimate of the potato stocks on hand January 1 showed a larger quantity, a larger percentage of the crop, and a larger proportion in the hands of the growers than in any of the nine years preceding. Plainly the growers have had extreme difficulty in moving the record-breaking potato crop. The great surplus is in the West. Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, Colorado, and Idaho have more potatocs on hand than in any recent season, while Michigan. South Dakota, and Nebraska also have unusually large reserves. On the other hand, Maine has less than in any one of the past five years, while New York and Pennsylvania have only about an average quantity on hand. Thus the situation favors the eastern holders. Because of the light supplies within easy shipping distance, eastern markets have shown a much stronger tendency than western. Shippers in the Rocky Mountain section have been selling No. 1 sacked potatoes at 40 cents per 100 pounds f. o. b., while the Great Lakes regions quoted around 60 cents, and western New York and northern Maine 90 cents to $1. Prices paid to growers were still less, ranging from 15 cents per bushel in the Rocky Mountain section to 45 cents in western New York.

Certainly the growers are not adding that 30 cents a bushel duty to their prices, and it is equally apparent, when the cost of handling is considered, that the shippers have not added 50 cents a hundred to theirs. The law of supply and demand has thoroughly punctured the argument of added duty, and what applies to potatoes applies to other commodities. When I pay 20 cents for one Idaho baked potato at a first-class hotel I do not blame that price to the 30-cents-a-bushel tariff. Any man who had even the eye of a potato would see the asininity of the assertion that the duty on an imported article is unconditionally added to the price of the domestic article with which It competes. The fact is that by giving the American producer a chance to compete the foreign importer will be compelled to stop gouging the public.

Mr. Speaker, no tariff law was ever framed that gave complete satisfaction to all concerned. This one is no exception. In the turmoil of compromise—and nearly all legislation is compromise—there must be some who think they did not get that to which they were justly entitled. The greatest good to the greatest number is the best for which we can hope.

The present law contains some features with which I am not in sympathy. I believe that we should have protected potash. The assertion that the farmers would have suffered thereby, and which prevailed, is identical with that made its 1890 by the canners. We have untold possibilities for producing potash if the industry can be encouraged and not rendered a victim to German monopoly. The United States Geological Survey, after a complete investigation, has just discovered that there is enough potash in the green sand marks of New Jersey to supply the needs of this Nation for 1,000 years. The survey says:

For more than a hundred years the green sands of New Jersey were dug and marketed for use as fertilizer, and in the late sixtles the quantity so used annually amounted to nearly 1,000,000 tons. With the introduction of prepared fertilizers the green sand mari industry gradually died.

* While several companies have undertaken to produce potash from New Jersey green sand, and some of the companies have marketed small quantities of potash, there are none now actually producing.

In Utah and other parts of the country there are potash possibilities. But the potash duty was thrown out in conference and we reverted to our former dependence upon Germany. The gentleman from New York [Mr. Crowther] recently said:

Of course, just the minute the tariff is taken off an article, naturally the price goes up. We had a great furor here with the agricultural bloc about potash, and they took potash off the tariff list and put it on the free list, and since then it raised 200 per cent in price at one jump and 145 at another, and to-day it is 345 per cent higher.

And it is still going. A cable report recently received by the New York office of the Alsatian Potash Society said there had been a rush on the French mines "for fear that there will be a big advance in the price as a result of the possibility of the German mines not being able to fulfill the orders which they have received." Of course, the substitution of a French they have received." Of course, the substitution of a French for a German potash monopoly is not going to help American consumers, as any American doughboy who has served in France can tell you. It is ridiculous to suppose that the American potash producers, if they had received protection, would have elevated prices 345 per cent. Even had they been disposed to do so, they would have been deterred from such action by the potentialities of German or French competition. But the German and French producers have no fear of the American industry under free trade. Soon after the tariff went into effect it was announced that a German monopoly had made arrangements with its selling agent in the United States to handle the entire German export to this country and to set the price for all the traffic would stand, but if the American producers should start up, the price was to be lowered below our production cost in order to chloroform them again. It is a game of "pussy wants a corner" with the Germans holding the corner and the Americans crowded out. And the Nation is the loser.

I think it was a cruel and inhuman act to place Pima long-staple cotton on the free list. It carried 7 cents a pound under the emergency tariff, and that was good Republicanism. The industry, thanks largely to war prohibition of imports, had expanded from 375 bales in 1912 to 92,561 bales in 1921. The report of the United States Tariff Commission declared last fall "the fine-cloth mills afford the most striking instance of the substitution of the cheaper Pima for Sakellarides during recent months. These mills, when they use Egyptian, require mainly Sakellarides, but their consumption of Egyptian cotton has decreased and their consumption of Pima greatly increased." During the second week in February it was reported from Boston that—

The largest cargo of Egyptian cotton ever brought to this country by a vessel flying the American flag arrived here to-day on the Shipping Board steamship Hog Island from Alexandria. It was the eighth cargo of Egyptian cotton to arrive at this port this season. The Hog Island brought 14,380 bales, valued at $3,500,000. Not only were the vessel's holds filled to the hatch combings, but all her storerooms, the firemen's forecastle, and every inch of available space on the ship was utilized for cargo.

That represented the sacrifice of the Arizona producer to the Egyptian employer of fellaheen labor, and the probabilities are that the American Pima cotton industry will perish in its cradle in order that the progeny of old Tut-ankh-Amen may prosper. The free traders may say "amen" to that, but I will wager that it is not the language used in Arizona. I am inclined to believe that as the Luxor investigation proceeds the Egyptologists will be confirmed in their surmise that it was the late Mr. Tut who decreed the expulsion from Egypt, and that he was dealing with the importers' combine of 33 centuries ago.

I believe we were wrong in not protecting hides. That is a tariff field on which many a long-drawn-out battle has been fought, and to marshal its intricacies would be to burden the Record. But, after all, it comes down to this, that anything which lowers the price which the American cattle producer receives for his product will sooner or later be felt all along the line and not beneficially. The press already reports vast orders being placed in South American countries for hides, and the time is not far off when our hide producers will feel the pinch of unprofitable prices. A compensatory duty on leather manufactures would have satisfied the producers of leather, and would have injured no one.

I think we would have done well to restore the Payne rate of 8 cents a hundred on imported cement. The American cement industry counts 115 plants with an invested capital of $310,000,000, employing 36,500 men who are paid $61,500,000 annually, or $6.50 a day on a 300-day basis. We placed cement on the free list with the proviso that any country or dependency which placed a duty on our cement should have a like duty placed on cement coming into this country from there. But the evidence adduced was that Canada, particularly in the West, possessed much cheaper labor; free cement will encourage the establishment of mills in Mexico to compete with our mills on that border; and slace the cement factories of Europe were unscathed by war, they will have no difficulty getting into our market, shipping cement in ballast, if necessary. We have invited competition without restriction, and sooner or later we will get it.

In these days, when the international struggle for the control of petroleum sources is so pronounced, I think we might well have afforded some protection to our own producers in Pennsylvania, Texas and Louisiana, California, Oklahoma, and the Middle West. I apprehend the day will come during the life of the present law when we will regret that we free listed this product, for sooner or later the imports from Mexico, Colombia, and other quarters will be cutting the ground from under the American producers.

As for the 50 per cent sliding scale provided for in section 315 of the law, I wish it well, but I have some doubts as to its expediency:

"There is strong likelihood that we have witnessed the last general political revision of the tariff," declares John E. Edgerton, president of the National Association of Manufacturers. "Whatever differences of opinion may arise with respect to rates and schedules in the tariff act of 1922, its administrative provisions represent a great constructive advance. Within a standard established by the Congress, the Chief Executive, upon the investigation and recommendation of the Tariff Commission, may adjust rates within 50 per cent limits to equalize costs of production in our competition with foreign producers. If the validity of the legal principle is sustained, as I have no doubt it will be, and the administrative experiment is successful, as I helieve it must be, the occasion for general political revisions of the tariff is passed."

It seems to me that in adopting this provision we surrendered to expediency a very high prerogative of the House; that, acknowledging our impotence in tariff matters, we "passed the buck." This is but another manifestation of that intense centralization of power in the hands of the Chief Executive which we all deplore but to which we of late years have been all too prone to submit. However, it has been done, and we must hope for the best.

It was my thought, while collecting the data for these remarks, to ask leave to place in the Record the reports made public by the United States Employment Service of the Department of Labor and by other agencies—amazing improvement in the labor situation since the new tariff law went into effect. But the truth is it is well-nigh impossible to keep up with the pro-

The director for the Middle Atlantic district reports cession. that in New York

despite the release of thousands of workers on outside construction who have been absorbed in other lines of trade, a growing scarcity of labor continues to exist throughout several districts in the State. Weather has not interrupted operations in mills and factories, although transportation in some sections has been impeded. Locomotive works and car-building plants are increasing employment, likewise shop repairs and equipment, metal and machinery, metal furniture and wood-working plants, leather and shoe industries, silk mills, paper and printing plants, shipbuilding and repairs, and structural fabricating shops. Cotton and cotton-goods manufactures continue to make gains. Heavy demands for railroad, automobile, and building-material manufactures reflect the unprecedented activity in the iron and steel industry.

In New Jersey shortages of skilled and semiskilled workers.

In New Jersey shortages of skilled and semiskilled workers and common labor obtain in all parts of the State, while the "farmers are calling for help." Pennsylvania can not achieve more than 85 per cent capacity in basic industries for lack of labor. In New England practically all plants are operating full time, and Massachusetts faces a shortage of cotton-mill op-From the mountain district, comprising Montana, eratives. Idaho, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, and Nevada, Director Record states that increased mining activities have caused the supply and demand to become fairly well balanced, with a shortage of certain classes of labor. In California, advancing winter has caused some cessation of work in the construction and lumber camps of the higher altitudes, but "lumber mills continue to operate at capacity and in some places are working double shifts." In Oregon the lumber mills are operating on unfilled orders. It is no longer a question, as it was in 1914 and again in 1921, of what to do with our workers. The question now is, Where are we to find enough of workers. The question now is, where are we to them? Wilson failed to keep them out of war. We have not

Mr. Speaker, as I recall the enervated and narcoticized in-dustries of 18 months ago and compare them with the bustle and activity of to-day I am forcibly reminded of that passage in Tennyson's "Day Dream" picturing the revival, after the "Sleeping Beauty," whom we may take to represent industry, had been kissed by the "Happy Prince," to whom we may assign the rôle of protection :

of protection:
A touch, a kiss! The charm was snapt,
There rose a noise of striking clocks,
And feet that ran, and doors that clapt,
"And barking dogs, and crowing cocks;
A fuller light illumined all,
A breeze through all the garden swept,
A sudden hubbub shook the hall,
And sixty feet the fountain leapt.
The hedge broke in, the banner blew.
The butler drank, the steward scrawl'd,
The fire shot up, the martin flew,
The parrot screamed, the peacock squall'd;
The maid and page renewed their strife,
The palace banged and buzzed and clacked,
And all the long-pent stream of life
Dashed down in a cataract.
O center the last phase of my discussion.

And now to enter the last phase of my discussion, a phase to which but little attention has been paid in all the welter of tariff debate.

Mr. Speaker, for the past few years this country has had an oversupply of those who, while preaching free trade and inter-nationalism, have busied themselves in what they are pleased to call uplift for the farm dwellers and the urban workers. The amount of energy they expend in attempting to foist their ill-digested theories on a long-suffering public is appalling. The amount of real, honest, constructive labor they perform does not, all told, represent sufficient kinetic energy to place one brick upon another. I have no doubt that many of them believe they are carrying out some Heaven-assigned mission. I know that some of them are too utterly lazy to do anything but yammer for a living.

The people of this Nation have little need for the services of the professional uplifter who is constantly attempting to make the wage earner dissatisfied. Our workingmen are far and away the best paid, best fed, best clothed, best educated, best housed, and best advertised workingmen in the world. Our farmers, though they have experienced much economic suffering, when compared with the brothers to the ox in Europe and Orient are infinitely better environed.

That great British economist and publicist, J. Ellis Barker, some years ago-before the war-came over here to investigate the conditions of the British operatives in the textile mills of New England and the effect of protection on their livelihood. He reported that without exception every Britisher who counted thrift among his virtues was able to live better, work shorter hours, earn higher wages, and get more enjoyment out of life than he could in England. But the point which interested Barker most was that the British workman could save more money here than he earned in the English mills. And England, next to the United States, pays the highest wages.

Millions of men have come here from Europe, many of them to remain permanently, because of the high wages they could depend on in this country. The glory that was Greece's has wellnigh been restored, economically, by the money sent home by the Greek fruit dealer and the Greek restaurateur. The grandeur that was Rome's has been brought back, economically, by the earnings of South Italians who have labored in our mines and on our railroads. The whole southern part of Italy and nearly all of Sicily are dotted with comfortable little houses erected by men who went to America to "earn-a da mon," The Baltic States, Poland, France, Germany, and the Scandinavias, all have either been benefited by wages saved here and sent back or by the relief of economic pressure caused by emigration to this country. From the Hebrides to Syria, from Finland down to Crete, the influence of the American pay roll has been felt and appreciated. These races came here because of the enlarged opportunities for material welfare. They came because American wages were the wonder of the century-because the share which labor received for Its contribution to the upbuilding and development of this Nation was the largest anywhere received. And the wages we were able to pay were the direct result of the protectivetariff policy. Not America alone has protection built up, but our largess has been distributed over the face of the earth. Under free trade we could not possibly have developed as we have. Any growth which we might have attained would have been a slow, laborious, and painful process had free trade been the rule. And the level of the American wage earner would have been precisely that of the European, offering no temptation to the latter to come here and better his condition.

Of late years organized labor has taken the stand that labor is not a commodity; that no man's toil should be the subject of barter and sale, but that the laborer is worthy of his hire; that he is entitled to just compensation, the highest wage permissible with profitable operation. With that view we have no quarrel. But Gresham's law that "bad money drives out good" has its parallel in a law equally well established, namely, that the products of low wages drive out the products of high wages unless the former are restricted.

We can not, we will not, impose upon our wage earners the pittful standards of Europe and the Orient. And I say to these uplifters that if they must find an outlet for their energies, let it be in those countries where peasantry exists. Let them propagandize the workingmen and the capitalists of the Old World and work to raise the standards abroad to the level of the standards at home, not try to pull American standards down to the level of the European peasant and the oriental coolie, There is the field for their efforts. This is no place for them to foment discontent.

As for the employer class, I say to them: Get down among your men; mingle with them, learn their psychology. Factory absenteeism breeds more envy than landlord absenteeism ever did. Remember the words of Webster:

Labor in this country is independent and proud. It has not be patronage of capital, but capital solicits the aid of labor.

The employers who come into personal contact with their copartners in production are the ones who are least harassed with industrial strife.

And now, Mr. Speaker, I will conclude my remarks by declaring that, all things considered, having in mind the innumerable problems with which Congress had to wrestle, this Fordney tariff law as a protective measure, a revenue raiser, and a stimulus to industry and agriculture is a splendid piece of work. The Republican Party can go to the country with it in the presidential campaign of 1924 in perfect confidence that represents a duty well performed. It presents a defense which is impregnable to Democratic assault so long as the great majority of the people hold steadfast to the principles which they have supported for generations. The Underwood law dragged out a miserable existence of nine years, nearly five of which were years of war embargo. I bespeak for the Fordney law at least a decade, wherein the blessings of peace, protection, and prosperity may be showered upon the most wonderful nation under the sun.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

A message in writing from the President of the United States was presented by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries, who also informed the House of Representatives that the President had approved and signed bills and joint resolutions of the following titles:

On February 26, 1923: H. R. 4619. An act for the relief of the Link-Belt Co., of Philadelphia, Pa.;

H. R. 4620. An act for the relief of Th. Brovig;

H. R. 4622. An act for the relief of the Lloyd Mediterraneo Societa Italiana di Navigazione, owners of the Italian steamer Titania: and

H. R. 6177. An act for the relief of the owner of the fishing smack Mary S. Dolbow.

On February 27, 1923:

H. R. 9049. An act declaring the act of September 19, 1890 (26 Stat., ch. 907, sec. 7), and the act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat., ch. 425, sec. 9), and all acts amendatory of either thereof, shall not hereafter apply to a portion of the west arm of the south fork of the South Branch of the Chicago River, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 8214. An act to compensate the owners of the American steamship Vindal for damages and expenses in repairing the said steamship, and to make an appropriation therefor, On February 28, 1923:

H. R. 14254. An act to amend the act entitled "An act to create a commission authorized under certain conditions to refund or convert obligations of foreign governments held by the United States of America, and for other purposes," approved February 9, 1922;

H. J. Res. 418. Joint resolution authorizing the use of public parks, reservations, and other public spaces in the District of Columbia; and the use of tents, cots, hospital appliances, flags, and other decorations, property of the United States, by the Almas Temple, Washington, D. C., 1923 Shrine Committee (Inc.), and for other purposes;

H. R. 3836. An act for the relief of Nolan P. Benner; H. R. 10529. An act for the relief of Harry E. Fiske;

H. R. 13660. An act making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of such District for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, and for other purposes

H. R. 3461. An act for the relief of Eugene Fazzi; and H. J. Res. 460. Joint resolution accepting the sword of Gen.

Richard Montgomery.

On March 2, 1923:

H. R. 13793. An act making appropriations for the military and nonmilitary activities of the War Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, and for other purposes; H. J. Res. 453. Joint resolution requesting the President to urge upon the governments of certain nations the immediate necessity of limiting the production of habit-forming narcotic drugs and the raw materials from which they are made to the amount actually required for strictly medicinal and scientific purposes

H. R. 6423. An act to detach Pecos County, in the State of Texas, from the Del Rio division of the western judicial district of Texas and attach same to the El Paso division of the western judicial district of said State;

H. R. 7267. An act granting permission to Mrs. R. S. Abernethy, of Lincolnton, N. C., to accept the decoration of the bust of Bolivar;

H. R. 9862. An act for the relief of the Fred E. Jones Dredg-

H. R. 10003. An act to further amend and modify the war risk insurance act;

H. R. 10816. An act to fix the annual salary of the collector of customs for the district of North Carolina;

H. R. 12751. An act to convey to the Big Rock Stone & Construction Co. a portion of the hospital reservation of United States Veterans' Hospital No. 78 (Fort Logan H. Roots) in the State of Arkansas;

H, R. 13032. An act to authorize the sale of the Montreal River Lighthouse Reservation, Mich., to the Gogebic County Board of the American Legion, Bessemer, Mich.;

H. R. 13827. An act relating to the sinking fund for bonds and notes of the United States;

H. R. 14317. An act granting permission to Capt. Norman Randolph, United States Army, to accept the decoration of the Spanish Order of Military Merit of Alfonso XIII;

H. J. Res. 47. Joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to receive for instruction at the United States Naval Academy, at Annapolis, Mr. Jose A. de la Torriente, a citizen of Cuba;

H. R. 1290. An act for the relief of Cornelius Dugan;

H. R. 2702. An act for the relief of J. W. Glidden and E. F.

H. R. 5251. An act for the relief of Ruperto Vilche;

H. R. 7010. An act for the relief of Southern Transportation

H. R. 9309. An act for the relief of the Neah Bay Dock Co., a corporation;

H. R. 6358. An act authorizing the accounting officers of the Treasury to pay to A. E. Ackerman the pay and allowances of his rank for services performed prior to the approval of his bond by the Secretary of the Navy

H. R. 6538. An act for the relief of Grey Skipwith; H. R. 8046. An act for the relief of Themis Christ; H. R. 8921. An act for the relief of Ellen McNamara;

H. R. 11340. An act to advance Maj. Ralph S. Keyser on the lineal list of officers of the United States Marine Corps so that he will take rank next after Maj. John R. Henley ;

H. R. 11738. An act for the relief of Maj. Russell B. Putnam; H. R. 13272. An act granting a license to the city of Miami Beach, Fla., to construct a drain for sewage across certain Government lands:

H. R. 13078. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Hudson River Bridge Co., at Albany, to maintain two bridges already constructed across the Hudson River; and H. R. 14081. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Valley Transfer Railway Co., a corporation, to construct three bridges and approaches thereto across the junction of the Minnesota and Mississippi Rivers, at points suitable to the interests of navigation.

BELLEAU WOOD MEMORIAL ASSOCIATION.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, I call up from the Speaker's table S. 4552, to incorporate the Belleau Wood Memorial Association, an identical bill having been reported by the Judiciary Committee of the House and now being on the cal-

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Minnesota calls up a bill from the Speaker's table, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Ira E. Bennett, Tasker H. Bliss, Nathalie Boynton, Marie Moore Forrest, Elizabeth Van Rensselaer Frazer, James E. Freeman, Margaret Overman Gregory, Harry V. Haynes, John A. LeJeune, A. L. McChellan, Wendell C. Neville, Frank B. Noyes, John Barton Fayne, Augusta Reath, Alice Hay Wadsworth, John Walsh, and their associates and successors are hereby created a body corporate by the name of "Belleau Wood Memorial Association."

John Walsh, and their associates and successors are hereby created a body corporate by the name of "Belleau Wood Memorial Association."

SEC. 2. That the purposes of this corporation shall be: (a) To erect such buildings and monuments and establish such institutions as it may deem appropriate as a memorial to the men of the American Expeditionary Forces who fell at Belleau Wood and vicinity during the Werld War; (b) to acquire and maintain the whole or any portion of Belleau Wood, Department of Aisne, France, for memorial purposes; (c) to solicit and obtain members; (d) to charge and collect membership dues, and to solicit and receive contributions of money, to be devoted to carrying out such purposes; and (e) to engage generally in work for the benefit of those who suffered during the World War on the side of the allied and associated governments.

SEC. 3. That the corporation (a) shall have perpetual succession; (b) may suc and be sued; (c) may adopt a corporate seal and alter it at pleasure; (d) may adopt and alter by-laws not inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States or of any State; (e) may establish and maintain offices for the conduct of its usiness; (f) may appoint officers and agents; (g) may choose a board of trustees consisting of not more than 15 persons nor less than five persons, to conduct the business and exercise the powers of the corporation; (h) may acquire, by purchase, devise, bequest, gift, or otherwise, and hold, encumber, convey, or otherwise dispose of such real and personal property as may be necessary or appropriate for its corporate purposes, and especially the whole or any portion of Belleau Wood, Department of Aisne, France, to the extent that it may be or become consistent with or permitted by, the laws of the French Republic; and (i) generally may do any and all lawful acts necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes for which the corporation is created.

SEC. 4. That the Belleau Wood Memorial Association, a corporation heretofore in each year, trans

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Will the gentleman yield for a question? Mr. VOLSTEAD. Certainly.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Does this measure create a corporation of the District of Columbia?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Of the United States.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. I know the purpose of it, and I am in entire sympathy with it, but we have not been accustomed for long years to create any corporation without giving it a situs, and that situs has been the District of Columbia,
Mr. STAFFORD. If I may be permitted, there is existing to-day a Belleau Wood Memorial Association, incorporated under the laws of the District of Columbia, and it is the purpose to transfer all their rights to these persons named, who are to be incorporated by Congress. They are persons, I assume, who have a local habitat and that in the District of Columbia.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee, Some reside in the District and some in other States.

Mr. STAFFORD. I thought they were mostly residents of the District of Columbia. My acquaintance with them is not as broad as that of the gentleman from Tennessee, but I thought a larger number of names were mostly local people.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. The matter of the place in

This is a which the individuals reside is not of importance. corporation, and it ought to have a situs. I wonder if the gentleman would object to inserting the words "of the District of Columbia "?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. That is what we are trying to avoid. By making it a national corporation the difficulty of securing title to the land in France will not be so great as if it were a District of Columbia corporation.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. The effect of it is merely to give it a citizenship and give it a situs. If you create a national corporation you provide that it may sue and be sued, and where is it going to be sued?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Wherever an officer can be found.

incorporators want a national incorporation to get this Belleau

Wood, some 150 acres of land.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. I know the purpose of it, and I am in entire sympathy with the purpose. I am also interested in preserving the proper legal situation in regard to this as in all other corporations. The Red Cross is a corporation.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. It could be sued wherever the officers of the company could be found. There is no probability that this concern will ever be sued. The incorporators have secured the money necessary to purchase this property, and it is important to get this through at once because their option to purchase will expire in a few days.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. I understand; the matter has been discussed with me. The purposes are very worthy. Let us have no misunderstanding about that.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. If it were a commercial organization I could see readily that it might be very important to have a situs, but this is an organization that in all probability will never be sued. If it is sued there will be no difficulty in finding its officers.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. They are incorporated now under the general laws of the District, not by special charter of Congress. All that they desire, and that I am willing to give, is the recognition that comes by reason of Congress passing a special charter, but the situs ought to be fixed.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. I can not see what difference it makes. If the gentleman could suggest any real reason why it should make any difference, with a corporation like this, which can not carry on commerce in any sense, it might appeal to me. I do not suppose it will ever be sued. Whenever there is any occasion to sue it the officers can be found and suit instituted.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. This is not a commercial organization at all?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. No; not all. It is simply to purchase certain land and erect a few monuments in France.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. I understand the purpose of it and what they are going to do, and I am in sympathy with it, but what I am talking about is the local situation of a corporation which is created. For whatever purpose it may be created, it ought to have a situs.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Yes.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I am not entirely clear as to the question in the mind of the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. If the gentleman from Texas will permit me, I do not suppose that this organization will ever be sued or have occasion to sue, but that is not the only question. It is bad enough to create corporations by special act of Congress

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. That is an objection that I have always had.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. But if they are created by special act they ought to be given a local habitation as well as a name. This ought to be given a local residence, and that ought to be in the District of Columbia. Would not the gentleman be willing to insert the words "a corporation of the District of Columbia"?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. That would change the character of this corporation. It is a District of Columbia corporation now.

There is difficulty in securing title to the land sought unless we have a national corporation. The object of this is to give this corporation a national character, so that it will be able to get the French Government to consent to have this land turned over to this corporation.

Mr. HICKS. Is not that the real object—to have a Federal charter so that the French Government will know that they are dealing with a national proposition and not a local organization?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. That is not the matter referred to in the inquiry of the gentleman from Tennessee. tleman from Tennessee simply said by way of inquiry that there ought to be some provision in this act which would locate this corporation at a definite place, a habitat, so that it could be sued there, and so forth. My impression is—and I am embarrassed to discuss a matter without having investigated with respect to it-that in so far as suits against the corporation are concerned, the venue would depend upon the law of the State where the cause of action might arise. This being a Federal corporation, the Federal courts would not, it would seem, acquire jurisdiction under the diversity of citizenship provision. About that, however, I have no certainty of knowledge, because I have never had occasion to investigate.

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. The other day, as I recall, we had under consideration the Federal incorporation of the Texas & Pacific Railway Co. That was a general Federal incorporation, and the original act did not undertake to fix a situs.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Was that regarded as of advantage to the corporation?

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. I am only stating that this bill is not without precedent,

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I think if the gentleman will look at it that he will find that even the Red Cross, which was incorporated by special act of Congress, is an incorporation of the District of Columbia.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Oh, no; I think not. A number of charters have been granted that are not of the District of Colum-I have had occasion to examine them at different times, and the Supreme Court has practically held in the case involving the Gettysburg convention that we can create a corporation of this kind. I can not see that there is any real objection to it.

Mr. TILSON. Did we not a few days ago attempt to give a local habitat to the Texas & Pacific Railroad Co., fixing Dallas as its situs, and yet it has a Federal incorporation?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I suggest to the gentleman that as originally drawn that was complained of as being to the advantage of the corporation. I understood the inquiry of the gentleman from Tennessee to be with reference to the position of those who might desire to institute suits against this corporation.

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. The Texas & Pacific Railway Co.

has been sued a thousand times.

Mr. TILSON. That has a national charter, and at the same time without vitiating the national character of it we gave it a local habitation.

We MILLER. What is the objection to putting in this proposed charter a statement that the office or place of business of the corporation shall be Washington, D. C.?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Its principal place of business is going to be in France. It has got to buy the land, erect the necessary monuments, and make necessary provisions for caring for them.

Mr. MILLER. Is not the gentleman of opinion that it is necessary in order to organize this corporation to give local situs, that it should have some office and principal place of business?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. No.
Mr. BLANTON. Would the gentleman object to offering an amendment fixing its home office in Washington, D. C.? That would cover the point.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Why, there is no objection except the danger of not passing it at this session. Otherwise I would be willing to amend it.

Mr. BLANTON. Fix the office at Washington, D. C., and there would be no objection.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I am not sure that if we fix the home office here the board of control would not be compelled to hold, possibly, an annual meeting in the District of Columbia, when it might be more convenient to hold meetings somewhere else. Now, I am not certain, but that would be the only possible objection. In this particular matter it does not seem to be important, because the only contemplated activity is to purchase some property in France, erect monuments, and maintain the property as a memorial. Mr. EVANS. Will the get

Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VOLSTEAD, I will,

Mr. EVANS. What is the objection to providing in your bill that the corporation as created will have a right to conduct business in France and in the District of Columbia?

To-morrow Mr. VOLSTEAD. There is not any except this. is Saturday, and to-morrow is the last day for anything to be done. What we will do on Sunday morning will simply be to They have try to close up some little matters here and there. got a very large number of bills on the calendar in the Senate, and I do not want to send the bill back if I can help it, and besides I can not see any reason why this should not pass in this form. The corporation can be sued in any place in the United States where its officers can be found. I ask for a vote.

The bill was ordered to be read the third time, was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. Volstead, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Mr. Speaker

The SPEAKER pro tempore. For what purpose does the gentleman from Indiana rise?

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, in a few hours the Sixty-seventh Congress will be numbered with the things of What it has accomplished and what it has failed the past. to accomplish will soon be a part of the annals of our country. If its success is to be measured by the economic and business conditions prevailing throughout the United States, its place in history will be an enviable one.

When this Congress was ushered in the country was perilously near a financial panic. Business generally was in a most deplorable state, and the number of idle men and women in the United States at that time was greater than ever before in the history of the country. Samuel Gompers, head of the American Federation of Labor, stated that on April 1, 1921, there were 5,000.000 men and women going up and down the highways and byways of the country seeking something to do. States Government bonds were selling around 83, and all other corporate securities were at a very low ebb. What a change for the better has transpired in the last 24 months!

INDUSTRY AND TRANSPORTATION.

The unprecedented peace-time activity of our American industries would indicate that we are not only supplying the needs of our own people but the needs of outside nations. Never in the history of American industry has there been such productive At first blush this may seem an exaggeration, but an analysis of the situation fully warrants it. Basic industries, such as iron and steel, textiles, leather, and automobiles, are running capacity. Running capacity to-day means from 50 per cent to 100 per cent greater output than running capacity in pre-war times, because during the war practically every basic industry increased its capacity at least 50 per cent and some doubled their capacity.

If an industry increased its capacity 50 per cent during the war and is now running 80 per cent of its total capacity, it is producing 120 per cent more than it did in pre-war days. This producing 120 per cent more than it did in pre-war days. certainly is clear. Therefore, when statistics show that the United States Steel Corporation is operating 90 per cent of its capacity that indicates a production far in excess of anything ever attempted in pre-war times. Despite this tremendous pro-ductivity, the United States Steel Corporation's unfilled orders increased 165,000 tons during the month of January. Its unfilled orders to-day are approximately 7,000,000 tons, the largest recorded since the war period. This is in the face of the fact that its production during the month of January was 3,717,000 tons, which was the largest output of the steel industry since March, 1920. Pig-iron production for the month of January was 3.230,000 tons, the largest since October, 1920, and within a few thousand tons of its high record made in Septem-

The charge that we are losing our foreign trade is not sub-stantiated by the reports of the Department of Commerce. In quantity and valuation we are leading by far above the level of any pre-war year. The European war began August 1, 1914, one month after the close of the fiscal year. The exports of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, were $2,364,579,148, while our exports for the 12 months ending December 31, 1922, were in value $3,831,932,194. So that, from point of valuation, our exports for the calendar year ending last December exceeded the exports of the last year of world peace by over $1,400,000,000. We are to-day the greatest exporting nation in the world.

Reports from the textile industry show that it is working at capacity. A statement just issued by the Census Bureau shows that the number of textile spindles in this country in January was the greatest ever recorded, and that the purchase of cotton by the domestic textile industry, notwithstanding the high price, has never before been equaled. Simultaneously with this, and largely because of it, comes the news from business and commercial organizations that the South is experiencing the greatest prosperity it has enjoyed since the Civil War, which means the greatest prosperity it ever experienced.

The total motor-vehicle production for 1922 was 65 per cent greater than in 1921. It was the greatest year in the history of the automotive industry. Every State in the Union showed an increase in the number of cars purchased and operated. The agricultural sections were the biggest buyers, the States in those sections showing gains over 1921 of from 7 per cent to 15 per cent in the number of motor vehicles registered. Data issued by the American Automobile Association is authority for the statement that the American farmer to-day owns and operates more motor cars than are owned and operated by all the world outside the United States.

It is estimated that there are 12,800,000 automobiles and automobile trucks in the world. Of this number, 84 per cent, or 10,752,000, are owned in the United States, there being but 2,048,000 owned and operated in all the world outside of the United States.

Nineteen hundred and twenty-two was the largest building year in the history of the United States, but according to the estimates of all authorities upon building construction the year 1923 will far eclipse it. Already contracts are made for construction during the present year in the sum of $5,116,-600,000. The Federal Reserve Board announced that reports from country-wide sources show the purchase of farm implements during the months of December and January were more than double those of the corresponding months a year ago. The reports of the War Finance Corporation demonstrate in a striking way the fact that the American farmer has weathered the worst storm of economic adversity that has been experienced by this generation. Up to January 1, 41 per cent of the amount of money originally loaned to farmers by the War Finance Corporation had been repaid, and since January 1 the repayments have exceeded in ratio those of any month of

The transportation world is in better shape than it was a year ago. The reports made by the Interstate Commerce Commission for the calendar year 1922 show that class I railroads as a whole, on an average, earned 4.14 per cent on their tentative valuation, as compared with only 3.28 per cent for the calendar year 1921. For December, 1922, an even better showing was made, as they earned at the rate of 5.15 per cent on their valuation during that month. This was accomplished in two ways: First, by a tremendous reduction in operating expense; and, second, by a tremendous increase in the amount of traffic handled. Car loadings during 1922 were the greatest in the history of American railroads. This had to be because during the year 1922 the Interstate Commerce Commission made reductions of rates in thousands of specific cases and in score or more of general classifications.

More cars were loaded with agricultural products during the year 1922 than ever before in the history of the railroads. Loading of grain and grain products alone increased approximately 7 per cent over 1921, the heaviest year previously on record. Live-stock railroad shipments, according to last reports, increased approximately 9 per cent over 1921. Forest products surpassed those of 1921 to a very marked degree. Merchandise and miscellaneous freight, including manufactured products, were considerably higher than in the previous 12 months, viz, 14 per cent above 1921, and approximately 6 per cent over 1920, hitherto the banner year. The total cars loaded with revenue freight during 1922 aggregated 43,713,519, compared with 39,- 347,158 in 1921 and 45,131,188 cars in 1920. The number of freight cars ordered for use in the United States in 1922 amounts to 180,154, the largest total since 1912, contrasting with only 23,446 and 84,207 cars in the years 1921 and 1920, respectively. Locomotives ordered for domestic service in 1922 totaled 2,600, the largest figure since 1918, as compared with only 239 in 1921 and 1,998 locomotives in 1920. Altogether it is estimated the railroads contracted for the expenditure of more than $471,224,000 during the year for freight and passenger cars and locomotives combined. The average cost of freight cars is now said to be about $1,700, passenger cars about $22,000, and locomotives about $50,000.

It should be borne in mind that this tremendous revival in industry took place during a calendar year that was marked by serious strikes affecting basic industries—the coal strike, the railroad strike, and the textile strike. Had not these industrial disturbances occurred to retard the rapid return of prosperity in industry, our conditions to-day would be better than they are, splendid though they may be.

EMPLOYMENT AND WAGES.

However, it needs no statistics to prove the return of industrial activity and prosperity. That is proved most conclusively by the lack of idle men. Unemployment to-day, except among that chronic class of shirkers who do not wish to work, is un-known in America. Where two years ago the classified ad columns of newspapers were filled with advertisements of men seeking employment, to-day they are filled with advertisements of employers seeking men and offering wages nothing short of fabulous. Newspapers within the city of Washington within the past 30 days have carried advertisements for men in building trades offering $16.50 a day. A report just issued on February 21 by the United States Department of Labor is authority for the statement that the number of men employed in the automobile industry increased 42 per cent last year and the amount of wages paid out by that industry increased 135 per cent. The number of men employed in the iron and steel industry increased 40 per cent last year, and the amount of wages paid increased 108 per cent. The number of men employed in the leather industry increased over 11 per cent, and the amount of wages paid increased 16 per cent.

The number of people employed in the manufacture of woolen textiles increased nearly 9 per cent and the amount of wages paid increased over 16 per cent. It is known of all men that the coal strike was settled by the operators agreeing to sign a scale that maintained the scale established during the war times and the textile strike was settled by the mill owners agreeing to forego a reduction of wages from the war-time level. Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, is quoted in the public press as stating that on the whole wages are only 5 per cent less than they were at their peak in 1920. Our Democratic friends are fond of asking us to compare conditions now with those of peaceful days under the beneficent reign of Woodrow Wilson. A comprehensive survey of the industrial field, embracing 23 basic industries, employing over 600,000 workers, shows that the average weekly wage paid in these industries in December, 1922, was 101 per cent higher than the wages paid in the same industries in July, 1914. It shows, furthermore, that employment in identical plants at the beginning of this year was 27 per cent greater than in July, 1914.

PINANCE.

The report of the Comptroller of the Currency, issued only a few days ago, shows the aggregate resources of the national banks of this country on December 29, 1922, to have been $2,031,215,000 greater than on December 31, 1921. The resources of the national banks in each of the 12 Federal reserve districts show a consistent and substantial increase during the year. The total deposits of the banks showed an increase of $2,345,379,000 for the year. On the other hand, the banks showed a reduction during the year in their obligations of $446,727,000.

Postal savings showed an increase for the calendar year of $569,408,000.

The savings banks and the savings departments of national banks and trust companies showed an increase during the calendar year of $1,500,000,000 in deposits and an increase of 2,300,000 in the number of depositors.

The total amount of life-insurance purchases for 1922 was in excess of $9,000,000,000, which represented an increase of $600, 000,000, or 7 per cent, over the amount purchased in 1921

United States Government bonds have been maintained practically at par throughout the year, for the first time since they were issued. Their desirability as a permanent investment and their value as a marketable security have been increased and stabilized by the arrival at a settlement of the terms upon which Great Britain is to pay her debt, which constitutes 35 per cent of the total amount of foreign loans made by this Government during the World War. Had this settlement not been concluded, it was inevitable that new bonds equal in amount to the loan made to Great Britain would have to be issued, which would have undoubtedly depreciated the value of all United States securities.

BUSINESS CONDITIONS.

The retail business of the country experienced a return to prosperous basis during the calendar year. Reports by such organizations as the large mail-order houses, which serve a wide and varied trade, show a tremendous increase in sales during the year 1922 as compared with 1921. Ward & Co., of Chicago, one of the largest of such concerns in the United States, showed their gross sales in 1922 to have been 21.6 per cent greater than in 1921. Without exception the holiday business transacted by retail merchants throughout the country last December-was the greatest since 1919. Commercial agencies report during the month of January the number of business failures were 600 less than in January, 1922, while the aggregate liabilities of these failures dropped from $73,000,-000 to $49,000,000, a decrease of 20 per cent in the number of failures and of 45 per cent in the amount of aggregate liabilities. And yet our Democratic friends insisted that a Republican administration and a Republican tariff would ruin the country.

All commercial agencies regard the post office receipts as being one of the most accurate indexes of business conditions. Post office receipts ever since last September have consistently shown a tremendous increase, month by month, over the corresponding months of previous years. For the month of January, just reported, the postal receipts of 50 typical cities which are selected by the Post Office Department showed an increase of 18.99 per cent over January, 1922. No cities showed a decrease. Twelve cities showed an increase greater than 20 per cent. It is the highest increase for the month of January since 1913. It clearly indicates that as a result of putting more business in government we are also putting more business on its feet and putting more prosperity in all business.

AGRICULTURAL CONDITIONS.

The farmer is getting on his feet. This is evidenced by the fact that he is paying off his debts—debts held by private banking institutions, debts held by national banks, and debts held by such governmental agencies as the War Finance Corporation. It is proved by the fact that he is coming into the market for agricultural implements. It is proved by the fact that he was the largest single purchaser of automobiles last vear

According to the Department of Commerce, the average price of all kinds of farm products, including live stock and grain, was 17 per cent higher in 1922 than in 1921.

According to the United States Department of Agriculture's crop report of January 27, 1923, the prices of all kinds of live stock averaged higher in 1922 than in 1921. Lambs averaged $3.54 per hundred pounds more in 1922 than the average for 1921. Despite the fact the receipts of hogs were over 3,000,000 head, or over 7 per cent more in 1922 than in 1921, the average price of hogs for 1922 was 71 cents per hundred pounds higher than in 1921. The receipts of cattle at public stockyards during 1922 were 3,430,000 head greater than in 1921, an increase of over 17 per cent. It was the largest receipt of cattle since 1919 and has been exceeded only once in eight years. Despite this tremendous supply of cattle, the net advance for cattle for the year amounted to $1.51 per hundred pounds.

The foregoing detail of facts establishes beyond all possible dispute that our country to-day is in a splendid business and financial condition. The future is full of promise for still greater business activity.

The American people have faith in the policies of the Re-publican Party, and the best evidence of that faith is to be found in the contrast between conditions existing now and conditions existing at the time this administration began.

It is assuring to the public to know that these policies will be continued through the next Congress and so long as the Republican Party is in power, and with a continuance of the Republican Party in power the business prosperity of our country will continue to advance.

EMBASSY BUILDING, PARIS, FRANCE.

Mr. FAIRCHILD. Mr. Speaker-

The SPEAKER pro tempore. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. FAIRCHILD. To call from the Speaker's table the bill S. 4594, an identical bill having been previously reported by the Committee on Foreign Affairs and now on the calendar, and move to suspend the rules-

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair does not recognize the gentleman to suspend the rules at this time.

Mr. FAIRCHILD. I call up the bill then. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York calls up the bill S. 4594 and asks unanimous consent for its present consideration. Is there objection?

Mr. BLANTON. Let us know what it is. The SPEAKER pro tempore, The Clerk will report the bill by title.

The Clerk read as follows:

An act (S. 4594) to authorize the Secretary of State to acquire in Paris a site, with an erected building thereon, at a cost not to exceed $300,000 for the use of the diplomatic and consular establishments of the United States.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I object.

FILLED MILK BILL.

Mr. HAUGEN. Mr. Speaker, I call from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 8086 with Senate amendments and ask to agree to the Senate amendments.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Iowa calls up the bill which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 8086) to prohibit the shipment of filled milk in inter-state or foreign commerce.

The Senate amendments were read.

Mr. STAFFORD. Will the gentleman from Iowa explain the Senate amendments?

Mr. HAUGEN. The Senate amendment strikes from section 1 the words "and such is an adulterated and deleterious article of food and when marketed as such constitutes a fraud upon the public" and inserts in section 2 practically the same language as this stricken out of section 1. It also adds to section 1 this language:

This definition shall not include any distinctive prepared food compound not readily taken for milk or cream or for evaporated or condensed or powdered milk, or cream; provided that such compound (1) is prepared and designed for feeding infants and young children and customarily used on the order of physicians; (2) it is packed in individual cans containing not more than 16½ ounces and bearing a label in bold type that the contents is to be used only for said purpose; (3) is shipped in interstate and foreign commerce exclusively to physicians, to wholesale and retail druggists, orphan asylums, child welfare associations, hospitals, and similar institutions and generally disposed of by them.

The amendments are satisfactory in every respect so far as

Mr. Speaker, I regret that the bill (H. R. 13810) for the improvement of the Mississippi River and control of its floods should come up for passage under the suspension of the rules which bars amendments to it. I had thought, as most of the Members had, that it would be brought in by a special rule which would have permitted amendments to it.

I had intended to offer an amendment to the bill proposing to extend the jurisdiction of the Mississippi River Commission, as concerns the construction of levees, to St. Paul, Minn., which is proposed in my bill, H. R. 8908.

I am advised that under present legislation the Mississippi River Commission had, up to January, 1921, completed south of Rock Island 2 districts and had 20 others under construction. The largest district has 218 miles of levees, which reclaims 3,500 square miles of farming land.

My bill provides that Federal aid be extended so as to include all of that area of the Mississippi River that lies between the city of Rock Island, Ill., and the city of St. Paul, Minn. The Federal Government has made a complete and detailed survey of the islands and the river above Rock Island. The main stream of the river averages about 1,000 feet in width, while the distance from mainland to mainland averages, over the same area, about 2 miles. This area between the mainlands consists mostly of islands interwoven by a network of sloughs and ponds that are constantly draining and diverting from the main channels water that ought to be confined to this channel in order to be of benefit to navigation during low stages of water. It goes without saying that these islands and sloughs are of no benefit to navigation, that they are a constant source of worry and annoyance, and if left to themselves may entirely impede navigation. These islands have been estimated to be between 700 and 1,500 square miles in area. Under present conditions not one acre can be depended upon to produce a crop because of flood water, which destroys everything in the nature of a crop. In Crawford County one area that is ready for organization into a reclamation district and awaiting the passage of this bill contains 12,000 acres of the most fertile soil in the world and is capable of raising cereals and tobacco. It is claimed that it can be made to produce from $300 to over $700 worth of tobacco per acre each year. It is claimed that every acre can be made abundantly productive by the simple process of shutting off flood waters therefrom-by removing the shifting sands from the river bed and depositing it around the island tracts, thus shutting off flood waters therefrom.

The Federal Government has passed laws for the reclamation of arid lands and, as I have stated, all islands and for the deepening of the channel south of Rock Island, with most excellent results.

In its plans of deepening the channels by dikes it has taken into partnership the owners of the lands benefited by the operation, each contributing toward the construction. in every case south of Rock Island the owners of islands contributed toward the building of dikes in liberal sums, besides the landowners paid for the clearing of the lands for tilling where necessary and for the pumping plants. It is now suggested in my bill that the same plan be continued in the improvements of the river above Rock Island. It has proven itself a tremendous success from the standpoint of deepening the channel and making it permanent and at the same time reclaiming large tracts of otherwise waste agricultural land.

Much interest has been manifested in agriculture. We now more than ever realize that upon the tiller of the soil depends the stability and greatness of our Nation-in fact the progress, prosperity, and happiness of our people. In view of the prevailing high transportation rates and the importance of agriculture, naturally we are interested in water transportation and increasing our food supplies. If so, the proposed legislation having for its object the improvement of one of the greatest, if not the greatest, of our navigable streams, to thus furnish transportation at a greatly reduced rate to the producers of the great Northwest and the other to increase production, naturally seems worthy of friendly consideration at this time.

The question was taken, and the amendments were agreed to. Mr. BOX. Mr. Speaker, I ask leave to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The extension of remarks referred to is here printed in full

as follows:

Mr. BOX. Mr. Speaker, H. J. Res. 171, reported by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SHAW] for the House Committee on Immigration and Naturalization, is remarkable in several respects. It is remarkable in having been reported by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Shaw], who is not the chairman of the committee, and opposed by Hon. Albert Johnson, the chairman of the committee. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Shaw] makes the report recommending the passage of the measure. Four other members of the committee appear to be supporting it. The committee is composed of fifteen members, but five members can be, and sometimes are, a majority of a quorum of the committee. Be that as it may, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Shaw], reports this resolution for the committee, urging its passage, and seven other members of the committee, including the chairman, joined in the minority views opposing it, which I had the honor to present. In order to advise the House and the readers of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of some of my own objections to this resolution, I shall restate them here in almost exactly the same language in which they were stated in that portion of the minority views prepared by me.

This resolution is designed to hide the wrong its proponents want it to do. The only purpose hidden in its indefinite phraseology is to import 30,000 to 40,000 Chinese coolies to the United States Territory of Hawali (hearings, pp. 238, 395, 396, 440) to work as peons and serfs in the fields and mills of the sugar manufacturing corporations and in the abject service of some other associated interests of the Territory. These interests dominate the islands industrially and politically and have so dominated them since before their annexation. Not one person in ten among the inhabitants of the islands is Caucasian. Americans or other white men will not go there and the few who have gone there to work have usually gotten away as quickly as possible. (Hearings, pp. 222-223 (top), 416, 432-433, 546.)

Climatic and industrial conditions in Hawaii are such that the sugar planters and manufacturers and other smaller, kindred interests have no hope of inducing any but miserable coolies, who can be held in semibondage, to endure them. Even the blacks from America or Africa can not or will not endure the life there. (Hearings, pp. 225, 539.)

The sugar interests of Hawaii are centralized in about 45 strong corporations (hearings, pp. 296-297), whose industrial and political power has been the directing force in Hawaii for many years, and whose interests have prompted most of its important policies and now promote this proposition. prevalence of the financial interests of that dominating group must be recognized by all who deal with Hawaiian problems. Several important developments have attended or resulted from the activities and powers of this group. These and related in-terests have been enormously benefited rather than injured by the relations of the Hawaiian Islands with us and their coming under our laws.

Agriculture and trade: The production of sugar was greatly increased during this reign owing to the importation of laborers from abroad and to the hope of reciprocity with the United States.

(Alexander's History of the Hawaiian People, p. 297.)

Progress of the country to 1890: The development of the resources of the islands under the stimulus of reciprocity with the United States surpassed all expectation. The production of the principal staples of the country—sugar and rice—increased to eight times what it was before the treaty. (Alexander, pp. 311-312.)

The acreage of sugar cane in 1909 was 186,230 and the number of farms growing sugar cane in 1909 was 186,230 and the number of farms growing sugar cane was 1,028, compared with 184 in 1899. The production of cane in 1909 was 4,240,000 tons, compared with 2,239,000 tons in 1899. The value of the sugar crop was $26,306,000, compared with $18,63,000 in 1899. The production and value of sugar since 1909 has been, then, as follows: 1910, 518,127 shore tons; 1911, 566,821 short tons: 1912, 595,258 short tons; 1913, 543,220 short tons; and this was valued at about $37,000,000. The yield of cane sugar per acre is the greatest in the world. About half the acreage planted to cane is irrigated. The development of the sugar industry on a large scale dates from 1875, when the reciprocity treaty, passed in that year, established practically free trade between the islands and the United States. (Int. Ency., vol. 11, p. 2.)

Exclusive of sugar, the value of the manufactures increased from $4,099,000 in 1899 to $11,454,000 in 1999, or 179.4 per cent. Nearly all the sugar manufactured is exported to the United States. (Int. Ency., vol. 11, p. 4.)

The cane-sugar production in Hawaii for seven years, beginning in 1913 and ending in 1920, has ranged from 1,056,023,998 pounds to 1,280,863,812 pounds. The production of Louisiana during the same period has ranged from 241,998,400 pounds to 621,799,360 pounds. During the same period the production of beet sugar in continental United States has ranged from 1,385,-112,000 pounds to 1,748,440,000 pounds.

It will be seen that Hawaii produces from two to four times as much cane sugar as Louisiana and from two-thirds to threefourths as much sugar as the beet growers of the United States.

The financial and commercial interests of this and kindred groups were active in promoting the annexation of these islands to the United States. Alexander's History of the Hawaiian People, published by order of the board of education of the Hawaiian Islands, furnishes much valuable and interesting information on this subject. On page 277 of this work Alexander says:

Alexander says:

Proposed annexation: The history of this reign would be incomplete without a reference to the agitation in favor of annexation to the United States that went on during the years 1853 and 1854. (Although mostly confined to the foreign residents, it was so great as to lead in 1854 to a general belief of the certainty of the event.)

Petitions in favor of it were presented to the King in August, 1856, and in January, 1854. There were at that time strong commercial interests in its favor, and the prospect of it stimulated speculation and led to new enterprises. The missionaries, however, of both denominations were generally opposed to the project, believing that its effects would be disastrous to the native race. But it was favored by the King, as a refuge from impending dangers. He was tired of demands made upon him by foreign powers, and of threats by filibusters from abroad and by conspirators at home to overturn the government.

On page 317 Alexander further says:

On page 317 Alexander further says:

Proposed treaty of annexation: On the 19th of January, 1893, the steamer Claudine was dispatched to San Francisco with five commissioners, fully empowered to negotiate a treaty of union with the United States. They arrived in Washington February 3 and were favorably received by President Harrison. A treaty of annexation was then drawn up by the Secretary of State and the Hawaiian commissioners, which was signed on the 14th. It was laid before the Senate for its concurrence on the 17th, but was not acted on before the end of the session. One of the first acts of President Cleveland after his inauguration was to withdraw the treaty from the consideration of the United States Senate on the 9th of March.

The establishment of the Republic: As all hope of early annexation was now abandoned by the provisional government, steps were immediately taken to establish a republican form of government. A constitutional convention was called to meet May 30, 1894, for the purpose of framing a constitution for the Republic of Hawaii. The convention finished its labors on the 3d of July, and on the following day the Republic of Hawaii was proclaimed, with Sanford B. Dole as its first President. The new constitution was in the main modeled after that of the United States. (Alexander, pp. 818-319.)

The well-known activity of the sugar and other interests for

The well-known activity of the sugar and other interests to carry Chinese coolle, Japanese, and other Asiatic coolie labor to Hawali and the conditions which such policy was creating in the islands, its variance with the fixed policy of the United States, and the menace which the continuance of it would be to continental United States after annexation, probably caused the insertion of the following, which appears in the annexation resolution:

There shall be no further immigration of Chinese into the Hawaiian Islands, except upon such conditions as are now or may hereafter be allowed by the laws of the United States; and no Chinese, by reason of anything herein contained, shall be allowed to enter the United States from the Hawaiian Islands.

Hawaii promptly accepted the provision of that resolution and became a Territory of the United States under it.

The necessity for such a stipulation as a fundamental condition of the union brought about so largely by the commercial and sugar-producing interests of Hawaii, representing the dominating power there, though American people were then, as they are now, comparatively few in numbers, is made plain by a review of the history of the importation of oriental coolie labor to Hawaii in order to get cheap labor for the sugar fields and factories. These and related interests have always demanded the importation of great numbers of laborers from Asia and other countries.

Asia and other countries.

Immigration.—A bureau of immigration was formed, and in April, 1865. Doctor Hildebrand was sent on a mission to China. India, and the Malay Archipelago to make arrangements for the importation of laborers, to procure valuable plants and birds, and to collect information, especially in regard to leprosy. In July he sent 500 laborers from China under contract with the Government, who were followed by many others. (Alexander, p. 290.)

In 1884 the consent of the Japanese Government was obtained for the emigration of its subjects to these islands under certain conditions. The first company of 956 Japanese sent under this agreement arrived in the City of Tokio February 9, 1885. In six years over 10,000 immigrated to these islands, of whom 1,260 returned to Japan. During 1878 and the next six years about 2,000 Polynesians, malnly from the Gilbert Islands, were introduced into this country. These laborers, as a general rule, did not give satisfaction, and nearly all of them have since been returned to their homes. (Alexander, p. 304.)

After 1876 the Chinese came in great numbers until their immigration was checked in 1886. (Alexander, p. 304.)

As early as 1850 Chinese coolies were imported to work for a

As early as 1850 Chinese coolies were imported to work for a period of five years at $3 per month in addition to food, clothing, and passage money, the latter being about $50 per man. Boys were brought to work for $2 per month for five years, with passage money of $50 per man and support. "It was estimated by those who employed them that their wages and support would amount to a trifle under $7 per month." (Hearings, p. 433.)

The proponents of this measure urge that it is necessary as a precaution against the Japanese menace. The very interests which now clamor for the introduction of more Chinese coolies as a defense against the Japanese induced the Japanese to go to Hawaii, as is shown by the above quotation from page 304 of Alexander's History of the Hawaiian People. Many times have these interests resorted to Japan as the source of a cheap labor supply. (Hearings, pp. 536-537.)

From 1885 to 1899 great numbers of Japanese were being carried to Hawaii, their immigration being aided by appropriations from the public treasury of Hawaii. (Hearings, p. 542.)

As late as 1908 the Governor of Hawali wrote to the United States Secretary of the Interior, under date of January 24, 1908, expressing apprehension that the measure then pending mightmaterially limit Japanese immigration; in which case, if the immigration bill does not pass, we shall be cut off at both ends, a result that may prove very disastrous. * * We do not wish to lose the Japanese until we can get Europeans or Americans. (Letter Secretary Hughes, hearings, p. 929.)

The people of Hawaii, like the people of California, have heretofore been alarmed by the menace of Chinese immigration.

ALARM OF KING KAMEHAMEHA IV.

King Kamehameha IV, who was probably much nearer the end of the rule of his people and much nearer the extinction of his race than he then realized, nevertheless foresaw, though with some vagueness, the dire ending of his line and his people. In his speech to the legislature of 1855 he said:

In his speech to the legislature of 1855 he said:

It is to be regretted that the Chinese coolie immigrants to whom has been given a trial of sufficient length for testing their fitness to supply our want of labor and population, have not realized the hopes of those who have incurred the expense of their introduction. They are not so kind and tractable as it was anticipated they would be, and they seem to have no affinities, attractions, or tendency to blend with this or any other race. In view of this failure it becomes a question of some moment whether a class of persons more nearly assimilated with the Hawaiian race could not be introduced to settle on our soil.

A report compiled from the official archives by the libraries.

A report compiled from the official archives by the librarian of the Territory of Hawaii follows the statement of King Kamehameha, with the following:

The wishes of the Government and the employers were not identical in this respect. The Government wanted settlers who would infuse new blood in a declining race; the employers, workers alone, who would be an immediate source of profit. (Hearings, p. 534.)

After 1876 the Chinese came in such great numbers that their immigration had to be checked in 1886. (Alexander, p. 304.) (See also testimony of Mr. Chilton, hearings, p. 764.)

WOULD CURE ONE SORE WITH ANOTHER.

After engaging for some 60 years in the business of bringing tens of thousands of Japanese coolie laborers to Hawaii, and having spent large sums of Territorial moneys thereon, these importers of labor, whose policy conflicted with that of the old King, who was trying to save his race, become much alarmed over the result of their own work in importing labor, and as a method of righting the great wrong and guarding against the menace caused thereby, now propose to bring tens of thousands of Chinese coolies. Our own country, Canada, Australia, and many other countries recognize the peril involved in the measures which this resolution proposes. Our country so clearly recognized it that a special stipulation against it was inserted in the act of union which has been quoted above. However, it is now desired that we forget or violate that provision.

One result produced by this fatal policy and other cooperating causes has been the destruction of the Hawaiian race, which has proceeded far toward its consummation. Small-pox was carried from China to Hawaii in 1881 by tramp stcamers. The use of intoxicants, social diseases, the new life carried to Hawaii from Europe and America, and the continued importation of coolies and kindred laborers from many countries, chiefly Asiatic, has proceeded far in the destruction of the once gentle, happy, and harmless Hawaiian race.

of the once gentle, happy, and harmless Hawalian race.

The first census of the kingdom was taken in 1832 and gave 130,313 as the total population of the islands at that time. Another census was taken in 1836 and gave only 108,000 as the total. By all counts the decrease of the native population at that period was alarming, (Alexander, p. 214.)

No census of the kingdom was taken between 1836 and 1850, but it is certain that the decrease in population was rapid. (Alexander p. 260.)

In 1910 the strictly Hawalian population numbered 26,041. In 1920 it was 23,723. (Hearing, p. 219.)

These conditions indicate that the practical extinction of the race is only a matter of time. (Int. Ency., vol. 11, p. 6.)

Of a population of 255,912 in 1920 only 19,708 were Caucasians.

Of a population of 255,912 in 1920 only 19,708 were Caucasians, of whom only 15,323 were American-born Americans, which is only about 6 per cent of the population. The importation of Asiatic laborers has given the islands a Chinese population of 23,507, considerably more than the Caucasian population, and a Japanese population numbering 109,274, nearly six times the Caucasian population.

Chinese intermarry and intermix with other coolie and mongrel races freely in Hawaii. Doubtless many of their women will accompany them. In any event, these thirty to forty thousand Chinese coolies will have many thousands of children born to them in Hawaii under the flag and under the Constitution of the United States. Every one of these children will be entitled to remain in Hawaii and to come to the United States. No surer method of introducing great numbers of Chinese coolie laborers into the continental United States can be found than that contemplated by this resolution.

We have enough Chinese now in the United States who have proved that they were born here to make our statistics show that every Chinese woman in the country has been the mother of at least 1,000 children—every one of them. (Hon. Albert Johnson, chairman, hearings, p. 242.)

If Chinese cunning, serving the intense Chinese desire to get into the United States, will enable it to make such proofs as that mentioned by Chairman Johnson, when the supposed births have taken place in America, can anybody set a limit to the number of Chinese who 25 years hence will be able to prove that they were born in Hawaii if we bring Chinese there in blocks of thirty to forty thousand now? The menace which this feature of this measure would present would require its

These coolies are to be held in a state of servitude in violation of the spirit if not the letter of the Constitution of the United States. Hon. John L. Cable, a member of this committee, prepared a statement of the legal difficulties involved in this resolution which he presented to the committee. For lack of space, only a small portion of that statement is copied herein, but the attention of Members is respectfully called to the whole statement, as shown on pages 788 to 790 of the hearings.

I quote from Mr. Cable's statement:

Peonage laws: Peonage is a crime in the United States and has been Promage laws: Peonage is a crime in the United States and has been defined thus:

"Peonage Is a status or condition of compulsory service based upon the indebtedness of the peon to the master. The basic fact is indebtedness." (Clyatt v. United States, 197 U. S. 207.)

"Peonage Is a crime in the United States." Section 269, the Criminal Code (25 Stat. 1142), provides:

"Whoever holds, arrests, or returns, or causes to be held, arrested, or returned, or in any manner aids in the arrest or return of any person to a condition of peonage shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned not more than five years, or both."

In section 3944, United States Compiled Statutes, 1918, the law provides that peonage is abolished.

"The holding of any person to service or labor under the system known as peonage is abolished and forever prohibited in the Territory of New Mexico, or in any other Territory or State of the United States; and all acts, laws, and resolutions, orders, regulations of the Territory of New Mexico, or any other Territory are State which have heretofore established, maintained, or enforced, or by virtue of which any attempt shall hereafter be made to establish, maintain, or enforce, directly or indirectly, the voluntary or involuntary service of labor of any persons as peons in liquidation of any debt or obligation, or otherwise, be, and the same is hereby, declared null and void."

and void."

It will be noted that the crime of peonage is complete when a person holds any person to a condition of peonage; that is, according to the above definition, in a condition of compulsory service based on indebtedness.

indebtedness.

Under the resolution, as drawn, a Chinese not being able to pay his passage would be indebted to some one when he took work in the islands of Hawaii. He would be compelled to continue work of an agricultural nature, because if he left the plantation and went into the city he could be arrested and deported. Debt, therefore, holds him to work.

So far as those 10 provisions are concerned, in my opinion, this resolution would suspend them so far as Hawaii is concerned. Of course, Cengress would have the lawful right to de that, but so far as constitutional provisions being violated is concerned, the resolution could not do that. (Hearings, pp. 789-790.)

The passage of the resolution would enable the sugar interests of Hawaii, who were active in procuring the annexation of that Territory to the United States in order to get their sugar admitted duty free, to have a very unfair advantage over American sugar producers. Neither the cane growers of Louisiana and the South nor the sugar-beet growers and manufactured to the sugar beet facturers of the West could compete with the producers of Hawaii, whose climate and soll give them a great advantage to begin with. If they are furnished a limitless supply of coolie labor, what will become of American producers, whose labor must live like human beings?

The resolution violates a cardinal stipulation of the act of union between Hawaii and the United States. That union was unquestionably in large measure produced by the very interests which clamor for the adoption of this resolution. American statesmen foresaw the danger of such measures as this and stipulated against it in the clause quoted above. Hawaiian sugar producers and commercial interests had already greatly profited by favorable trade treaties with the United States. They have grown more wealthy and powerful since the act of union. They agreed to the stipulation mentioned. They should not now ask for it to be broken

The passage of this resolution might be construed by Japan as authorizing her to send more of her own laborers to Hawaii. In his letter to Chairman Johnson about this bill, Secretary Hughes significantly quotes from the correspondence between the United States and Japan, which, in part at least, embodies "the gentlemen's agreement." This correspondence seems to authorize either Government, Japan or the United States, "if it should be at any time represented that additional Japanese laborers can find profitable employment there," to take such action "that the immigration to follow be limited to the requirements as may be thus ascertained." Japan's letter, which followed, recites that the step removing prohibition against immigration to Hawaii "should only be taken after ascertaining through an American official source the labor conditions prevailing in the islands and the need thereof.'

The two paragraphs of Secretary Hughes's letter, from which these excerpts are taken, the first quoting from the American letter and the second from the Japanese letter, forming a part of the basis of the gentlemen's agreement, read as follows:

It is noted with pleasure that the present intention of your excellency's Government is to prohibit altogether emigration to Hawaii. As to the future, if it should be at any time represented that additional Japanese laborers can find profitable employment there, it is suggested that the Japanese Government will cooperate with the Government of the United States in ascertaining the true conditions and that the emigration to follow be limited to the requirements as may be thus ascertained, similar inquiry and action to be taken from time to time thereafter at the instance of either Government.

raken from time to time thereafter at the instance of either Government.

The Japanese minister for foreign affairs replied that he was "gratified to find in the ambassador's statement, with reference to the course to be adopted in the event of future renewal of Japanese emigration to Hawaii, substantial accord with the opinion entertained by the Imperial Government, which is that if at any time hereafter it should appear desirable to depart from the present policy of prohibitition, that step should only be taken after ascertaining through an American official source the labor conditions prevailing in the islands and the need thereof." (Hearings, p. 929.)

To pass this resolution means: To violate the act of union between Hawaii and the United States and abandon the material safeguard which it carries. To make Hawaii still more oriental and less American in character. It is too oriental now.

It would menace the United States by creating a bountiful source of Chinese immigration into continental United States and the opportunity for much fraud besides.

It would introduce into the United States a form of peonage and servitude which should not be tolerated anywhere under the flag.

If Hawaiian sugar growers and manufacturers are entitled to a liberal supply of the cheapest and most degraded labor on earth, with what face will supporters of this resolution deny a like supply of cheap labor to the great numbers of Americans who want it?

It is unfair to American beet and cane producers to enable a few favored competitors in Hawaii to enjoy such an advantage over them.

The passage of this resolution or any action taken under it by the President, the Department of Labor, either or all, would seem to be such an official ascertainment of a labor shortage in Hawaii as would justify Japan in sending her laborers there under the terms of the correspondence above quoted. Therefore, those who propose this measure not only propose to admit Chinese coolies, but they probably open the way for the admission of Japanese laborers.

For these and many kindred reasons this resolution should never have been reported by the committee and should not be passed by the House.

EMPLOYMENT FOR FEDERAL PRISONERS.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, I call up from the Speaker's table the House Concurrent Resolution 53 and move to agree to the Senate amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the concurrent resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Concurrent Resolution 53, to create a joint committee of the Senate and House of Representatives to determine what employment can be provided for Federal prisoners, and for other purposes.

The Senate amendment was read.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

TO EXTEND THE FLOOD CONTROL ACT OF 1917.

Mr. RODENBERG. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the following bill which I send to the Clerk's

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois moves to suspend the rules and pass the bill which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 13810) to continue the improvement of the Mississippi River and for the control of its floods.

River and for the control of its floods.

Be it enacted, etc., That for controlling the floods of the Mississippi River and continuing its improvement from the Head of the Passes to the mouth of the Ohio River, in accordance with the provisions of section 1 of "An act to provide for the control of the floods of the Mississippi River and of the Sacramento River, Calif., and for other purposes," approved March 1, 1917, the Secretary of War is hereby empowered, authorized, and directed to carry on continuously, by hired labor or otherwise, the plans of the Mississippi River Commission heretofore or hereafter adopted, to be paid for as appropriations may from time to time be made by law; and a sum not to exceed $10,000,000 annually is hereby authorized to be appropriated for that purpose, for a period of six years beginning July 1, 1924. Any funds which may hereafter be appropriated under authority of this act, and which may be allotted to works of flood control, may be expended upon any part of the Mississippi River between the Head of the Passes and Rock Island, Ill., and upon the tributaries and outlets of said river in so far as they may be affected by the flood waters of said river.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demandar.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. STAFFORD. I demand a second. Mr. RODENBERG. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Rodenberg] is recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. STAFFORD] is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. RODENBERG. Mr. Speaker, I desire to make a brief statement in regard to this hill. The purpose of the bill is indicated by the title. It is to extend the life of the flood control act, passed in 1917. Under the terms of the flood control act an initial appropriation of $45,000,000 was voted by Congress for the twofold purpose of controlling the flood waters of the Mississippi and the continued improvement of the river. this sum a little over $39,000,000 has been expended, and the balance is appropriated in the Army appropriation bill that has passed Congress.

This work has been done under the direct supervision of the Mississippi River Commission, which is composed of seven members, three of whom are Army engineers, two civillan engineers, one a member of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, and one a prominent citizen. I believe it is conceded that the commission as at present constituted is the ablest and most efficient that we have ever had. It is, of course, a matter of great importance that this bill should be passed during this session, in order to prevent the possibility of a situation arising where the commission might find itself without funds to carry on this great national work. The author of the flood control act [Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi] is a member of the committee that reported this bill. He has made a more exhaustive study of the question of flood control than any other man in this body, and no one is so well qualified to give expert advice as he. He lives in the section of the country that is vitally affected by this legislation, and he knows in every detail the work that has been done and that must be done; and in order to conserve the time of the House, I will ask the distinguished gentleman from Mississippi to explain the details of the bill.

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I think before I begin to discuss this bill I ought to make some public apology to the majority léader for the nuisance I have made of myself for the past four weeks in endeavoring to get this bill up for consideration. I feel very deeply obligated to him for his patience and for the manifestation by him of that quality of leadership which finally put him in command here in the House of Representatives. [Applause.]

And another thing before I say anything about the bill: word about the distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RODENBERG], the chairman of this Committee on Flood Control. He and I entered the House of Representatives together 20 years ago. It is a source of very great pleasure to me to have served with him during those years. That service has been rather more intimate than is usual between Members of the

We served on the Committee on Rivers and Harbors together. and then we have been on this committee ever since its creation. It has been a source of very great personal regret to me, and I know it is to the House, that in a very few days he will retire from this House. [Applause.] But when he goes he will carry with him, I know, the very best wishes of all the Members who have served with him. [Applause.]

In a few minutes when the glad tidings are carried over the wires down to the people of the Mississippi Valley that the Rodenberg bill has passed the House I am authorized, I know. to speak for all the people behind the levees, and I do speak their voice when I say that when they hear these glad tidings they will join me in saying, "Billy, God bless you." [Ap-plause.] I really think that that is the only explanation that this bill needs. [Laughter.]

The first paragraph of the bill simply continues the authorization as it now exists under the law for making appropriations for the Mississippi River both for navigation and for flood control.

The second paragraph changes the existing law in this: Originally the Mississippi River Commission had jurisdiction of the Mississippi River from the mouth of the Ohio to the Head of the Passes for all purposes, navigation and flood control. Subsequently it was provided by Congress that money allotted for purposes of levee construction might be spent up as high as Cape Girardeau, and subsequently up to Rock Island. This paragraph provides that now the money allotted for flood control, whether for levees or otherwise, can be expended above the mouth of the Ohio as well as below the mouth.

Mr. RHODES. How far above?

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. Up to Rock Island, Ill. Then Congress decided that the jurisdiction of the Mississippi River Commission should be extended to the tributaries of the river below the mouth of the Ohio in so far as they were affected by the flood waters of the river. This bill proposes to extend the jurisdiction of the commission to the tributaries north of the Ohio. It is agreed all around that it was a slip of the pen whereby the Senate put in the amendment when it extended the jurisdiction of the river to the tributaries, in so far as they were affected by the flood waters of the river, that somewhere they put in the words "below the mouth of the Ohio." That was explained before the House when the conference report was considered. It was intended to apply above as well as below. So this bill simply corrects that original error.

Now, Mr. Speaker, if there are any questions to be asked, I will be glad to answer.

Mr. STAFFORD rose.

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippl. Are you going to oppose this bill?

Mr. STAFFORD. Yes. Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. Then I will reserve the rest of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Mississippi reserves the balance of his time.
Wisconsin [Mr. Stafford] is recognized. The gentleman from

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, the Mississippi River Commission has not only control over floods, over revetments and levees, but it has absolute control over the appropriation for navigation of the Mississippi River from the mouth of the Ohio down to the Passes of the Mississippi. The total authorization made for that work was $45,000,000. The balance of the $45,000,000 was appropriated in the War Department appropriation bill for the ensuing year, amounting to $5,990,000. That virtually completes the work of the flood control so far as the Mississippi River is concerned from Cairo to the world. Mississippi River is concerned from Cairo to the mouth!

Last year—and here is the point to which I wish to direct the attention of the House—in the river and harbor authorization act the jurisdiction of the Mississippi River Commission was extended from the mouth of the Ohio to Cairo and its tributaries, so far as the purpose of levy protection and banks protection is concerned. I think it is a wrong principleand if I am in error I wish to be corrected by the gentleman who is the author of the flood-control legislation-to take out of the jurisdiction of the Chief of Engineers the authority over the improvement of the Mississippi River from Cairo to Rock

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. That is not done by this bill.

Mr. STAFFORD. Let me ask the gentleman this question: Under the present law the commission has full authority over the expenditure of the funds for making the Mississippi River Now you navigable from the mouth of the Ohio to the Passes. seek to give that same authority to the Mississippi River Commission from the mouth of the Ohlo up to Rock Island.

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. The gentleman is mis-

Mr. STAFFORD. The language that the gentleman incorporates is not guarded like the authorization that was carried in the river and harbor organization act. Let me call attention to what that authority was. That authority conferring jurisdiction on the Mississippi River Commission was extended only so far as levee protection and bank protection was concerned.

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. What is the language of this bill?

Mr. STAFFORD. It extends the jurisdiction above the outlet of the Ohio to Rock Island.

In the War Department appropriation act a lump sum for the Mississippi River Commission is voted without any limitation as to its use. You attempt to give them complete control without the jurisdiction of the Corps of Engineers as to the improvement of navigation of the Mississippi from the mouth of the Ohio up to Rock Island. You do not say that the authority will be conferred only so far as levy protection and bank protection is concerned, but you give them full control.

I know something about levee protection-perhaps I would not if I had not been placed on the War Department subcommittee two years ago, but I have given it some consideration. Under that act we required the local municipalities, so far as levee protection is concerned, to contribute one part to the Government's two parts. Why did we not require the 50-50 contribution? As Gen. Harry Taylor, Assistant Chief of Engineers, stated before the subcommittee, it was due to the fact that the local communities from Cairo down had previously spent so much money that it virtually amounted to 50-50 contributions. So there was placed in the law the provision that the local community from Cairo down should contribute one part to the Government's two parts. As to that part of the river from Cairo to Rock Island, the local communities have not to any great extent expended funds for the protection of As far as they are concerned, they should be required to contribute 50-50.

I am opposed to this idea of extending the jurisdiction of levce protection to the tributaries of the Mississippi. It is necessary so far as the Mississippi is concerned, but when you give them authority over the tributaries of the river you assume State activities. Why, in Wisconsin to-day we have before the legislature a proposal to appropriate many thousands of dollars for that purpose. Wisconsin is not seeking any contribution from the National Government. Why should we prefer certain local communities on purely State streams from the burden of providing for their own flood protection? These are the two main objections I have to the bill in its present form. First, by the phraseology you are conferring on the Mississippi River Commission the same authority that it has south of Cairo north of Cairo as far as Rock Island.

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. The hearings disclose what we are satisfied would be the fact that when we passed the flood control bill that the local interests have contributed more than 50-50 under the flood control act.

Mr. STAFFORD. I do not dispute that position south of Cairo, but I do not north of Cairo.

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi, I said that since the passage of the flood control bill in 1917.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi two minutes of my time. Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. The bill requires two-thirds of the money put into levee construction to be paid by the Federal Government, and the local interests shall provide the right of way, pay all damages, and take care of the main-

Experience shows that that is more than 50 per cent. This bill does not extend any jurisdiction except above the mouth of the Ohio. Below the jurisdiction is already extended up the tributaries, but a very short distance, it is true, "in so far as they are affected by the flood waters of the river." In this last flood that meant 2,000,000 acres which were overflowed by back water. The other major objection is that we give the commission jurisdiction over navigation above the mouth of the Ohio when the bill expressly limits jurisdiction above the Ohio to "purposes of flood control." The commission has jurisdiction for both purposes-navigation and flood control-south of the Ohio River and has had ever since its creation in 1879. North of the Ohio River moneys allotted for the purposes of flood control only can be spent, but not for navigation. The gentlemen can not fairly read that into the bill.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, in the voting of money for the Mississippi River Commission for purposes under the act of 1917, we vote the money not only for flood control but for navigation purposes. It is one lump-sum appropriation that is granted the commission to expend, and you can not construe this second section without construing it that you are going to take away from the Chief of Engineers authority over the improvement of the Mississippi, so far as navigation is concerned, between the mouth of the Ohio and Rock Island.

Let us get back to the question as to whether we should vote $10,000,000 for six years, as this bill proposes. The hearings before the Flood Control Committee disclose that $24,000,000 is the maximum amount that will be used to improve not only the Mississippi River, which is virtually completed, as far as protection of the bank is concerned, but all of the tributaries south of Cairo. You are proposing to vote $60,000,000 authorization, it is true, when even the hearings do not justify any such amount. All the hearings show is that they merely wish to have $3,000,000 each year for revetment and levee work. Why this policy of voting more money-$60,000,000-when only $24,000,000 can be utilized for levee protection revetment work?

Mr. MONDELL. But this is simply an authorization. Mr. STAFFORD. Oh, I have heard that old song many times before

Mr. MONDELL. The gentleman is a true economist, and in the main I agree with him.

Mr. STAFFORD. I doubt that "in the main." The gentleman sometimes does.

Mr. MONDELL, I do not want the gentleman to make a speech here that will be quoted in the future in justification of larger appropriations for this purpose than ought to be made, and if the gentleman is not careful he will lay the foundation for extravagant appropriations.

Mr. STAFFORD. Oh, no one will ever charge me in any Congress with having laid any foundations for an extravagant To continue, when I was fighting the proposal of $1,000,000 for a fine embassy building at the exposition grounds at Rio de Janeiro, and called attention to the fact that $500,000 was adequate because of the rate of exchange of 1 to 3 in favor of our country, the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL] said, "You know this is merely an authorization," but the very next day or two the Committee on Appropriations came in with an appropriation for $1,000,000, and we find to-day that they have a surplus of $140,000 that they do not know what to do with. If we had made it $500,000, as I proposed, we would have had a pretty nice building there, and would not have made more money available than for an embassy in London or

Mr. HUSTED. The building at Rio cost only $300,000.

Mr. STAFFORD. But the rate of exchange was 1 to 3 in favor of our country. When the matter was under consideration in the House I called attention to the fact that the rate of exchange, so far as Brazil was concerned, was 1 to 3. When you visit Rio you will see this very fine, palatial residence, which has been provided for embassy purposes under the guise of an exposition building to celebrate the centennial of Brazil at an exposition that lasted only nine weeks.

Mr. BLANTON. I understand there is a very fine banquet hall in the building.

Mr. STAFFORD. Oh, of course, we would have to have a banquet hall to have it complete. Perhaps the gentleman from Texas would not approve of it, but in these South American and European countries there must be some place provided to pass out the viands and the liquid refreshments. I know the gentleman from Texas disapproves of that very much, but coming from liberal Milwaukee and still living in the past, I approve of it. Mr. Speaker, this is altogether too great an authorization, and in all seriousness my objection is that we are going to take away authority from the Chief of Engineers over the improvement of the Mississippi and delegate it to the Mississippi River Commission. All that it is estimated will be the cost for the maintenance of the Mississippi north of Cairo is $500,000 a year. Why are you going to allow these men to go ahead and develop that without any control whatever?

Mr. CHALMERS. Is the Chief of Engineers a member of this commission?

Mr. STAFFORD. No. The Chief of Engineers states that all they do, so far as supervising the work of this commission is concerned, is to merely pass on the plans. They have no control whatsoever over their work. Gentlemen, you are launching into an extravagant program. There is no reason whatsoever for our voting this authorization at this time. They have more money at present than they can use. million nine hundred and ninety thousand dollars is what was voted this year, and that is money that is available not only this year but until it is used. You are going wild in the closing days of the Congress in the authorization of proposi-tions which should not be allowed. You should leave this to a succeeding Congress for more thorough consideration. I reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I congratulate the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Stafford] upon the accuracy and precision with which he misstated the facts. [Laughter and applause.] The commission south of the Ohio has jurisdiction for both purposes. The money, of course, we appropriate in a lump sum, so the bill provides that when the commission charged with authority of allotting so much for navigation, allotting so much for flood control, when it makes its allotment for flood control that money may be spent north of the Ohio River, and only below the mouth of the Ohio can it be expended for naviga-

Mr. STAFFORD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. I have only two minutes.
Mr. STAFFORD. I will yield the gentleman one minute.
How much time have I? I have already yielded the gentleman two minutes.

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. Well-

Mr. STAFFORD. Much more than I shall occupy, How much time have I remaining?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman has three minutes remaining.

Mr. STAFFORD. I yield him a minute. Does the gentleman dispute the fact that the hearings before his committee show that all that will be necessary for the completion of flood control south of Cairo will be $24,000,000?

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. Yes; $24,000,000 will be required for the tributaries if they ever decided to embark on that. That is all there is to that. This bill has nothing to do with that; that was a law passed long ago and this bill has no reference to it. It has nothing to do with this bill. It will take $24,000,000 to finish the levees on the main river and that will be done before the tributaries are ever going to be treated. The tributaries are absolutely an academic question, but it is already the law. The only provision in this bill is that north of the Ohio the law shall be the same as it is south of the Ohio, and everybody agreed that is what we thought we did last summer, but we found by some mischance we put in the words, so far as flood control is concerned, " south to the mouth of the Ohio River," and it was agreed to upon the floor. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. GRAHAM] offered a protest against the conference report on the appropriation bill and it was Mr. HAUGEN. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. I will.

Mr. HAUGEN. Does the gentleman object to extending it to St. Paul or Minneapolis?

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. I do not know. We have not had hearings on that subject. I do not know what is up there to be protected and I do not know what it would cost.

Mr. HAUGEN. I take it that the improvements of the river are just as important north.

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. We never have had any hearings on it. How is the time?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RODENBERG] has 10 minutes.

Mr. RODENBERG. I yield that time to the gentleman from Mississippi to dispose of as he sees fit.

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. UNDERHILL].

Mr. UNDERHILL. Mr. Speaker, there has been published recently in some newspapers correspondence and criticism on what is usually designated as congressional junkets. I want to set myself down, by virtue of my experience on the Missis-sippi River, as absolutely in favor of so-called junkets, providing they result in information of such great value as I acquired during a short visit to Tennessee, Mississippi, Arkansas, and Louisiana at the height of the flood last spring. If I had my way I would provide in the Constitution that when a man is elected to Congress, in the interval from the 4th of March until the 1st of December, when he would take his seat in Washington, he should be obliged to visit other sections of the country than his own section in order that he might become familiar with the necessities of the Nation or the United States of America as a whole. [Applause.] Then we would not have the narrow, restricted view of our country that so many Members of the House have. I believe that out of the 18 States that do not empty their waste waters into the Mississippi or its tributaries that the New England States, consisting of 6, furnishes one-third of the number. Not one drop of waste water from Massachusetts or New England drains into the Missis-sippi River, but Louisiana, Mississippi, and Arkansas do take care of waste waters from 30 States of this Union. They have no control over the source of this river, and if you had witnessed, as I did, and had seen the splendid endeavor and wonderful work which the people down there have accomplished by their own efforts you would gladly grant them this aid. It was a stupendous battle against the gigantic forces of the devastating river demon, and I am convinced that the amount asked for in this bill is not only just but that we should give them even more if needed. They can not prevent these floods or do anything more than control the river when it is at the height of its flood. This is a national proposition, not a proposition which affects the Mississippi Valley alone, not a proposition which affects solely these States devastated by the floods, but it concerns the Nation in its economic aspects

When one sees thousands of acres and mile after mile of fertile, productive land and great tracts of timberland under water, houses and cabins swept away, live stock and poultry by the thousands drowned, the lives and property of hundreds of our people menaced, threatened, and destroyed annually; when one takes land trips by water and water trips by land, running 23 miles on a railroad train almost out of sight of land on tracks from 8 to 18 inches under the flood waters, and sees great river steamers tied up in the midst of the tops of trees, the trunks of which extended 20 to 25 feet under water, then, Mr. Speaker, one realizes something of the necessity of Government action and aid.

The Government has spent millions of dollars for irrigation and reclamation. It is perfectly proper that it should spend something for protection.

These people have spent $125,000,000 and over which they have raised through their own efforts. They are now asking for a comprehensive program which will eliminate the danger and economic losses shared in part by all of the people of the Such industry, effort, and sacrifices as displayed by those residing in the territory affected by these floods are appreciated by the people of Massachusetts. It might well serve as an example to the citizens who are asking help without effort to help themselves. I think I speak for Massachusetts when I pledge her sympathy and assistance. I trust the bill may pass unanimously.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has

Mr. UNDERHILL. I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I yield two minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Husted].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York recognized for two minutes.

Mr. HUSTED. Mr. Speaker, this bill provides for a continuation of the existing authorization for the improvement of the Mississippi River. I happened to be a member of the Committee on Flood Control which reported the existing authorization. I supported it because I believed it to be a good business proposition from the Government standpoint to have this work done continuously instead of being done piecemeal, as had been the former plan. I realized that the Government was committed to this proposition; that it had been committed to it for 75 years; that we were going to spend the money anyhow, and as long as we were going to spend the money, I thought it should be spent in a businesslike way. I was for that authorization, and I am for this authorization more than I was for the original authorization, because every prediction made by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Humphreys] and by the people directly interested in this legislation has been completely fulfilled. They told me that if the money was provided and these levees were constructed and revetted in accordance with the Government standards, they would endure, and they have endured. Not one or one section of one has ever given way. [Applause.]
Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, how much time remains?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Mississippi has five minutes.

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. I yield to the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. Driver].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Arkansas is recognized for three minutes.

Mr. DRIVER. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, in the time allotted to me to discuss the levee proposition involved in this bill I feel that I can only indorse the statements made by those who have advocated the bill. No longer can there, be any question as to the efficiency of the plan of the Mississippi River Commission, for it is a matter well known to all that not one inch of levee built according to the grade and section established by the Mississippi River Commission has ever been breached by the flood waters of the Mississippi River. I think that that proves the value of the plan of the commission, the agency created to deal with the problems of the Mississippi River.

Now, it seems that the gentlemen opposing this bill are disposed to question the value of the work in the upper reaches. In that territory there are 2,000,000 acres of land in Missouri, Illinois, and Iowa recently brought within the limits of levee districts. There the people have expended thousands of dollars in building up levees in front of their lands—22 in number. There are 9 on the east side and 13 on the west side of the river. These people are just as much entitled to assistance in their efforts to control these flood waters as the other citizens of this great valley of ours. They are no more responsible for the enormous flow of surface waters from the tributaries of the Mississippi than the people of Louisiana, Arkansas, and Mississippi are responsible for the fact that this great drainage channel, carrying the surface waters of 41 per cent of this entire Nation of ours, must be controlled in order that these alluvial valley lands shall be protected. We are doing a wonderful work down there, and the people in the upper regions will do the same work if you afford them the same encouragement.

Mr. Speaker, the levee problem of the Mississippi River, like Topsy, "just growed up" and addressed itself to the first inhabitant. The permanent settlement of the Mississippi Valley had its beginning with the location of the city of New Orleans in the year 1717, where the engineer in locating its site provided for the construction of a levee to protect the city from inundation. At that time the territory to the north, stretching over 2,000 miles of the Mississippi and its 10,000 miles of tributaries, was an unbroken forest and prairie, retaining the surface water in the humus, lakes, and pools, with the possibility of floods only in years of unusual rainfall combined with melting snows. The extension of settlement followed a course north from the base at New Orleans and in time spread to the south from the upper valleys. It is a matter of common knowledge that all rivers flow through a ridge plane, the plane being the creation of flood waters forced out of banks, leaving the heavier deposits of sediment at the place where the current is first retarded, and which drops the surface of the country to the interior by an easy slope. It was on these high banks that the first settlements were made in the Mississippi Valley. The pioneers of the upper reaches likewise located on the banks of the streams in order to obtain the benefit of transportation. As accessions were made to the ranks of the dwellers in the lower valley development extended to the lower planes, and as others joined the people of the north developments were pushed back from the banks into the interior, resulting in the felling of the forests, the lessening of the humus, and the drainage of the lakes and pools, and thus was commenced the precipitation of the flood waters upon the Mississippi Valley, and with the raising of the flood heights the water found its way through the natural depressions and bayous upon the farm lands of the lower planes, necessitating the construction of barriers across the outlets; and with the increase in the progress on the upper rivers further increases in the flood waters were made below, requiring the construction of a continuous levee line.

The levee work at this period of time was an individual task, each landowner constructing and maintaining the levee along his river front. As the recurring floods passed down the Mississippi, finding outlets through the depressions, the river bed commenced to fill, creating bars and on which timber found lodgment, presenting a serious problem to navigation. The jurisdiction then, as now, was confided to the War Department, which yielded to the complaints and selected two engineers, Bernard and Totten, in the year 1822, who made a thorough investigation of the conditions of the river with respect to navigation, and as a means for its improvement and control recommended the construction of dikes through which the current could be diminished above, and thus economize the expanse of water and constrain the current to act with greater velocity. They also reported "that while the waters of the river are over its banks, the operation of the current being in proportion to its elevation and consequent increase of velocity, the changes produced in the bed of the river were great, sudden, and numerous." Notwithstanding this report, no official action was had, no provision made for levee construction, and no authority given to revet the banks. The local landowners continued to add to the small levees in an individual way, and the river continued to pour over the low banks and through the depressions, and navigation continued in a critical condition. Bear in mind that no complaint had been or was made by the landowners, but the appeal came from those engaged in the operation of boats and barges, and evidently the appeal continued, for we find that in the year 1845 the matter was so persistently urged upon Congress that James Gadsen and James Guthrie, as a subcommittee, made further investigations and indorsed the theory for the improvement of navigation. Again the matter slumbered and the navigation of the river continued more difficult. The Secretary of War was finally prevailed upon to make further investigations, and for the purpose he appointed two eminent engineers, Colonel Humphreys and Captain Abbott, who spent several years in one of the most thorough and comprehensive studies of the river, and in an extensive report, made in the year 1861, dealt with every possible phase of the control of the river for navigation. The reservoir system was considered and rejected as in the highest degree chimerical, the cut-off system was considered and rejected, because the system would raise the surface of the river at the foot of the cut quite as much as the depression at the head, and the report adhered to and approved the theory announced by Bernard and Totten to confine the water to the channel by artificial embankments and thereby regulate the discharge.

Upon the filing of the report special committees were created by Congress for the consideration of the subject. While the investigation by Humphreys and Abbott was in progress much impetus was given to the levee construction through the act of Congress of date September 28, 1850, donating the swamp and overflowed lands along the rivers for levee and drainage purposes to the respective States in which they were located. This resulted in community action through the organization of districts, and in many instances with the power to levy taxes, and the levee system rapidly approached a continuous line from Memphis, Tenn., on the east side, and Helena, Ark., on the west to the Gulf, and along the front from Helena north on the west side much levee was constructed. But the dwellers in the upper reaches utilized the donated lands for drainage purposes exclusively and added to the drained area all of the adjoining lands, and thereby added an enormous amount of surface waters to the accustomed flow upon the lower valley, requiring increases in height and base, creating heavier burdens upon the levee builders. Before the committees of Congress could organize and proceed with an investigation war commenced, with everything subordinated to its demands, entailing absolute neglect of the levees during the time, and in fact for several years thereafter, during which time three heavy overflows occurred, causing a loss of many miles of levees through penetration, and caving banks were responsible for the loss of an equal amount. Navigation was also seriously impaired in consequence, and again conditions were presented to the Congress, resulting in the appointment of the Warren Commission, following disastrous floods in the year 1874, and on January 18, 1875—printed as House Executive Document No. 127, second session, Forty-third Congress—filed a report indorsing and approving the reports of the engineers theretofore made, and recommending the construction of dikes or levees, the organization of levee districts for the purpose of obtaining concert of action, and the carrying out of a definite action on the part of the Congress for an agency with authority to deal with the problem in an expert way, and resulted in the creation of the Mississippi River Commission in the year 1879.

In the course of the many years, while the various investigations were under way, much agitation was aroused over the proper method of providing navigation and caring for the flood waters. Many theories were advanced by engineers and laymen, and which, when boiled down, consisted of three distinct plans. First, the reservoir system, through which it was proposed to impound the flood waters by diverting the excess into specially constructed places and thereby regulate the amount of flow; second, the construction of levees, with provision for spillways at intervals, through which the excess waters could pass and spread over the valley; third, the construction of a continuous system of levees and the stabilization of the banks by revetment, and thereby confine the waters within the channel, and by increasing the velocity carry the sediment in suspension and avoid the deposit which creates the barriers and shoals. By reason of the various contentions urged upon Congress, and because, as it was contended by those in dispute, that the Army engineers theretofore assigned to the investigation had reached the same conclusion in each instance that other engineers from the same environment would be influenced to accept the plan as recommended by their predecessors, demand was made for a mixed commission, and in providing the qualifications the act of creation required that at least three of the members should be selected from civil life, two of whom should be engineers, one member selected from the Coast and Geodetic Survey, and three Army engineers, who were directed to make an independent investigation of the problem, "for the purpose of taking into consideration and maturing such plans and estimates as will correct, permanently locate, and deepen the channel and protect the banks of the Mississippi River, improve and give safety and ease to the navigation thereof, prevent destructive floods, and promote and facilitate commerce, trade, and the Postal Service." Here is contained a positive declaration of a policy to protect against the recurring floods of the river, but notwithstanding such declaration the commission evidently approached the subject of levees as they would bear on the question of channel improvements. In the first report of the commission, filed on the 17th day of February, 1880, it was said:

They are regarded as a desired, though not a necessary, adjunct in the general system of improvement submitted, and there is no doubt that the levees exert a direct action in deepening the channel and en-larging the bed of the river during those periods of flood by preventing the dispersion of the flood waters over the adjacent lowlands.

In a restricted sense, as an auxiliary to the plan of channel improvement only, the construction and maintenance of a levee system is not demanded; but in a larger sense, as embraces not only beneficial effects upon the channel but as a protection against destructive floods, a levee system is essential; and such system controls, promotes, and facilitates commerce, trade, and the Postal Service.

In the report of the commission filed in 1881 is this statement: Levees judiciously erected under the system indicated by the commission would produce the maximum effect in channel improvement at a minimum of cost.

The agitation continued after the organization of the commission and before an opportunity was afforded to place in operation its plan of improvement-in fact, while the commission was engaged in experiments at two places in the work of restricting the channel-and on the 7th day of August, 1882, a select committee was appointed, consisting of eight Members of the House, with Hon. J. C. Burrows as chairman, to make an investigation of the work on the Mississippi; and after visiting and making observations on the river, examining the work of the commission, and taking testimony, a report was made to the House on the 24th day of February, 1883, to the effect that the efficacy of the plan determined upon by the Mississippi River Commission for the channel improvement of the river was not sufficiently advanced to establish a policy, and recommended that the works then engaged in at Plum Point and Lake Providence reaches be brought to a state of completion. Thus the proposition depended on the success of the experiments at the two places mentioned, known to those familiar with the lower valley to be two of the widest places in the river and where the greatest difficulty occurred to navigation. This work proved to be eminently successful, and thereupon the Mississippi River Commission adopted the policy of confining the waters to the channel through a system of levees and the revetment of the banks for the purpose of stabilization and the control of the currents and, in addition thereto, for the protection of the levees from caving banks.

The commission rejected the reservoir system as being impractical and involving an expenditure beyond the hope of realization. As an evidence of the stupendous character of a reservoir sufficient to contain waters which would lessen the flood to the capacity of the channel, it is estimated that it would require a space of 7,000 square miles to the depth of 15 feet, or an excavation of an amount of earth with which 7,000 miles of levee, 150 feet high, could be constructed. The question of impounding waters at the source—and which, in this instance, means the upper Mississippi, Missouri, and the Ohiowas not feasible, because it is the judgment of the engineers capable of speaking on the subject that all of the waters be-yond St. Joseph, on the Missouri, above St. Paul, on the Mississippi, and beyond Pittsburgh, on the Ohio, if poured into the Mississippi at Cairo, the mouth of the Ohio, at extreme flood stage, it would make a difference of but little more than a foot in the flood heights. The suggestion of diverting the flood waters through a separate channel was rejected for the same reason—the element of expense involved. The Mississippi River south of Cairo discharges 1,000,000 second-feet, if within its natural boundaries; at extreme flood heights it carries 2,000,000 second-feet. Therefore a parallel channel to accommodate the flood waters would require a bed of the same depth and width as the present river, and its construction would be so staggering that no sane person would be heard to suggest such a plan. The outlet theory runs counter to every plan suggested by those who have made a particular study of the problem, including the Mississippi River Commission from the time of its organization. The improvement of the channel depends entirely upon the control of the waters within such channel. No dispute can be made of the fact that the moment the current is arrested the heavy sediment with which the water is charged immediately finds lodgment on the surface of the bed, and when the water is permitted to escape through an opening following the recession of the flood at that particular place elevations are found in the bed of the river, bars and drift accumulate, and navigation is interfered with. This is not only true but if the outlets were permitted the same arrest of the current could cause the outlets to receive the deposits of sediment, and the expense of maintaining an open way would prove prohibitive and the limited time in which the open ways could be utilized would not compensate for their construction. Therefore, even if the waters of the channel could be separated without damage to navigation, the control of such water would require the construction of a system of levees on each side, entailing against that a burden of expense which denies the possibility of such plan.

On the heels of the organization of the commission appeared in rapid succession adverse conditions which amounted to a catastrophe. Three unusually heavy floods, following in succession in the years 1882, 1883, and 1884, each of which created many breaches in the newly constructed levees, caused the erosion of many miles of bank, and tumbled into the river many miles of the levees. In each instance when the waters left the channel and turned through the crevasses bars were formed, which were added to through the subsequent breaches of the dikes until navigation was practically made impossible, and it was at this period that the commerce of the river lessened and the boats and barges commenced to disappear. It was at this period that the larger vessels, operating between Cincinnati, St. Louis, and New Orleans, were forced to cease operation and remain at the bank, in most instances an absolute loss to the owners, and the light-draft vessels, constructed to take the place of the larger boats, were able to operate for such limited periods of time that schedules were broken until no longer dependable, and the business on the river was diverted to the smaller vessels operating in local trade. The river commission, with a limited appropriation, was unable to cope with the situation, and for emergency purposes devised a system of dredge boats and made the best possible efforts under the handicap to provide emergency relief for transportation. For the first time in all of the strenuous years of their existence the dwellers of the valley became discouraged, many abandoning their homes. Millions of acres of land were forfeited to the State for the nonpayment of the small tax exactions levied against the same; especially was this true of the large acreages owned by the nonresidents and the undeveloped acreage of the local landowner. But the old citizen who cleared his farm lands along the bank of the stream, realizing the potential value of his property, would not be discouraged and held on, hoping for relief to the end. He knew that as a local proposition he was unable to combat the flood waters from 31 States, comprising 41 per cent of the area of the United States. He knew that, according to the theory of those familiar with the physics and hydraulics of the river, the full measure of his burden had not fallen upon him, but he was inspired with confidence that ultimately an appreciation of the importance of the problems confronting him would be reached by the people of the Nation and assistance would ultimately come. He held his ground. With the assurance of a sympathetic interest by the agency created to deal with his interests levee organizations were rapidly formed under the laws of the States and prepared to tackle the levee problem in a more concerted manner and in a bigger way, and within a few years after the operations of the river commission commenced the valley from Cairo to the lower reaches was completely organized and levee construction was prosecuted as never before. Depending upon the continued cooperation of the commission and attracted by the publicity given to the situation, and especially to the fertility of the soil of the valley, home seekers poured into the country by the thousands from all States of the Union. They entered the forfeited lands under the homestead laws or acquired the same by purchase and settled there, adding their weight and influence to the work at hand, carved out homes, and established permanent abodes.

As an evidence of the activities of the local districts and the spirit of the people of the valley, their readiness to use every possible effort in supporting the commission, I point to the report of the Chief of Engineers, compiled in pursuance to section 11 of the rivers and harbors act approved March 4, 1915, wherein the Chief of Engineers, acting through the commission, was directed to investigate and report on the expenditures made by the several districts. The report of the Chief of Engineers was filed on the 1st day of February, 1916, House Document No. 654, which discloses that up to the 31st day of December, 1914, the total appropriations by the Government to the Mississippi River were $77,369,017, of which the sum of $32,342,556 was contributed to levee construction and $45,026,461 for channel improvements and revenuent work. In the same time the local people had expended the sum of $107,297,286.

The advent of the home seekers and the construction of continuous lines of levee presented new problems to the people there. They acquired and occupied the undeveloped lands on the lower planes, and with barriers across the depressions and bayous through which the surface waters were accustomed to drain disposition of such waters became emergent and drainage systems were made necessary. This required the disposal of the surface waters through the back areas away from the river front and entailed a very heavy expense, averaging from $15 to $20 per acre. In addition, permanent roadways became necessary in order that the people might reach the business centers and transportation points, necessitating the organiza-tion of road districts at an additional expense of from $20 to $25 per acre. In the meanwhile it was necessary to continue more vigorously the prosecution of the levee work, the taxes for which were greatly increased until at this time the lands in the levee districts of the lower Mississippi Valley are staggering under an annual exaction of from $4 to $5 per acre for governmental and improvement purposes, which is a fair and reasonable rental value of the most highly improved lands of the country. The expense of maintaining the levees fastens upon the lands a continuing burden, and, of course, will ultimately exceed all other charges. Much has been said of the value of these fertile lands. Values, of course, vary according to the improved state of the lands and their accessibility to transportation and business centers.

The process of bringing these lands into cultivation is a very expensive one, entailing a reasonable cost of $25 per acre for clearing and the construction of the necessary houses, and because of the unusual expense incurred in developing farm lands and the necessity of paying the unusual expense imposed by the levee, drainage, and road districts most of the lands are burdened with heavy liens, in the language of a prominent Member of Congress, "having all modern improvements, including two or three mortgages." Much of the highly developed land has a value of $150 per acre, much more of it has a reasonable value of $100 per acre, but by far the greater part of the improved area is valued at $50. However, the organization of the various improvement districts and the impetus to the rapid development of these valley lands dates largely from the year 1912, when the dilemma of the valley landowner received recognition by the three national conventions held that year, all indorsing the flood problem as a national prob-lem and pledging their respective support thereto. The real value of these indorsements is contained in the legislative act of this body to the year 1917, known as the flood control bill, which divorced the Mississippi River problems from the rivers and harbors work and gave it an individual status. It in no manner changed the status of the levee from the dual relation in which it stood from the very beginning of channel improve-ment work in the Mississippi River. It remained both neces-sary to navigation and of primary importance as a reclamation The War Department and the Mississippi River Commission adopted the levee system and utilized it in holding the flood waters in the channel for the purpose of improving such channel, while the local interests constructed levees for the protection of their lands against inundation by the flood waters. Naturally there should have been some reasonable apportionment of the contributions. The system theretofore had depended upon the efforts of the local people who located, constructed, and maintained the systems, while the Army engineers and afterwards the Mississippi River Commission constructed independently portions of the levee at emergency points and made contributions to the people or agencies in the most important reaches, Thereafter the Flood Control Committee entered upon an investigation of the matter and framed a bill which provided that the Government and the local districts should share equally in the burden.

Under the provisions of the bill it was arranged and made one of the conditions to an apportionment of the money for levee purposes that the levees should be constructed to the commission's grade and section and located in accordance with the recommendation of the commission's engineers; that of the moneys allotted to levee construction the local agencies should pay to the commission one-half of the amount so apportioned, and in addition thereto that the local agencies should procure and pay for all right of way and crop damage and maintain the levees. The act authorized the appropriation of $45,000,000, with provision that not exceeding $10,000,000 should be appropriated for any one year, the intention being to authorize the appropriations covering a five-year period, the maximum being the ability of the commission to economically proceed with the work. It was intended that $30,000,000 of the amount authorized should be apportioned to the levee work, with the view of completing the same and caring for bank revetment during said period of time. Following on the heels of the enactment of the flood control bill, on March 1, 1917, came the declaration of war, with its consequent disorganization, interruption of work, shortage of engineers and material, unusually high prices, and all of the difficulties incident to such conditions, which caused the appropriations to be stretched over a period of seven years instead of five, curtailing the activities of the commission and resulting in the loss of many miles of levee, due to the inability of the commission to prosecute the revetment work with dispatch and requiring the greater amount of the appropriations to be used for other than levee construction. Instead of applying $30,000,000 to levee construction, the sum of $17,705,856 has been expended, which amount includes an apportionment of $2,283,000 out of the rivers and harbors appropriation for the year 1916, and with but $2,386,000 to be applied to such work out of the appropriation carried in the bill recently passed by this body and now before the Senate for consideration. aggregates $20,091,856.

Since the enactment of the flood control bill the jurisdiction of the Mississippi River for flood control purposes has been extended to Rock Island, Ill., embracing in the projects dealt with levees in Illinois, Missouri, and Iowa, to which has been apportioned and there will be applied out of the amount provided in the bill of this year several hundred thousand dollars in aid thereof. While the local interests under the flood-control measure, in view of the large contributions made in the past, were required to contribute one-third of the moneys to be spent in the construction of levees and the necessary amount for rights of way and maintenance, they were anxious to complete the system and guarantee protection, and notwithstanding the enormous burdens imposed through drainage and road improvements they have continued to issue bonds, collect taxes, and spend the money arising therefrom in the earnest endeavor to complete the work once and for all. Many of the districts have exhausted their power to finance themselves further and must rely upon taxation alone to meet the future demands for contributions.

I have compiled statistics as nearly as possible from all of the levee districts within the jurisdiction of the Mississippi River Commission extending from Rock Island to the Passes. If these local people had remained content to accept the conditions imposed by the flood control bill, contributing one-third of the money entering into the construction of levees, their contributions to date would have amounted to $8,852,928, with $1,198,000 to be contributed against the appropriation available July 1, 1923, but instead these districts have actually expended since the 31st day of December, 1914, when the amounts were ascertained and reported by the Secretary of War to Congress, the sum of $47,396,027, as follows:

Arkansas, with 6 districts	$10, 321, 758
Mississippi, with 3 districts	15, 365, 166
Louisiana, with 9 districts	11, 589, 609
Missouri, with 10 out of 19 districts	6, 354, 247
Tennessee, with 1 district	66, 808
Illinois, with 13 out of 32 districts	2, 826, 890
Iowa, with 2 out of 7 districts	871, 549

The amounts expended in the States of Arkansas, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Tennessee were exclusively for levee purposes, practically all of the amount expended in the State of Missouri was for levee purposes, but north of Cape Girardeau, Mo., in Iowa, and in the northern part of Illinois the amount expended was by levee and drainage districts, and some portion of the amounts reported was for drainage purposes, but my familiarity with the situation in Illinois, from Chester south to Cairo, and the information I have with respect to conditions elsewhere in that State and in Iowa, is such that I am prepared to say that 75 per cent of the expenditures in Iowa were for levee purposes. Of the amount mentioned, less than $4,000,000 was spent north of Cairo within the recent extension of jurisdiction, and which, boiled down, means that not less than $43,500,000 was spent between Cairo and the Passes, which embraces 1,525 miles of levee. This amount added to the $20,091,856, the full amount appropriated and to be appropriated under the flood control bill, aggregates $67,402,548, and amounts to 70 per cent of all amounts expended on the levees during said period of time by the local people.

Further, from the beginning of channel work on the Mississippi River to the present time the sum of $139,329,698 was appropriated for all purposes from Cairo to the Passes, of which $32,342,556 was expended for levees to December 31, 1914, and added to the amount appropriated to levees under the flood control act, $20,091,856, aggregates $52,444,412, while in the same length of time the local interests expended up to December 31, 1914, $107,297,286, and from that date to the present time $43,500,000, aggregating $150,797,286, which does not include about $4,000,000 expended by the levee and drainage districts north of Cairo. The bonded indebtedness of the various levee districts amounts to the sum of $29,856,287, with certificates of indebtedness in addition thereto outstanding amounting to $2,227,138, and aggregating $32,083,425.

It is disclosed in the hearings on the present bill that the levees are 80.5 per cent complete, according to the commission's specifications of grade and section, and it is estimated that it will cost to complete the same $24,900,000, or $16,600,000 by the Government, according to the fixed apportionment, and $8,300,000 by the levee districts, in addition to the right of way and maintenance. The purpose of the Flood Control Committee in fixing the contribution of the local interests at one-half of the amount to be contributed by the Government was that the expenditure would be on the basis of 50-50, and taking into consideration the fact that navigation received the full benefit from the expenditure and that the local interests received a like benefit, and in view of the requirement on the part of the local interests that they should purchase and pay for the right of way and maintain all levees, the distribution would be In addition to the completion of the levees south a fair one. of Cairo, 63 miles of levee on the Illinois side have accepted the provisions of the act and will share in the next appropriation to the extent of $949,000, aggregating $25,854,000. In addition to bringing the levees to the commission standard of grade and section, the local districts in most instances have adopted, with the approval of the commission, the banquette system, a banquette being additional base on the land side of the levee, with a 4 to 1 slope; that is, it goes out 4 feet for every foot it drops. This banquette reenforces the levee and particularly protects against boils or seepage through the levee, and its addition is responsible for the large amount of money expended by the local districts in the past six years. The levee has a 3-foot slope on each side—that is, 3 feet of base for every foot of slope-and with an 8-foot top, according to the commission grade and section.

The amount of land embraced in the levee districts between Cairo and the Gulf is 29,790 square miles, with an acreage of 19,065,600, of which it is estimated that 27,146 square miles can be fully protected by the construction and maintenance of levees, which is an area of 17,373,440 acres, of which 3,000,-000 is improved land. Seventy-eight districts are organized along the river from Rock Island south, of which 15 are major districts—that is, districts comprising a large acreage—and 63 small districts-that is, districts with a limited acreage. Of sman districts—that is, districts with a limited acreage. Of the major districts, 6 are located in Louisiana, 4 in Arkansas, 2 each in Mississippi and Missouri, and 1 in Tennessee, with 3 minor districts in Louisiana, 1 in Kentucky, 32 in Illinois, and 7 in Iowa. In the extended jurisdiction there are 15 basins on the west bank, containing 349,440 acres, and 9 basins on the east side, containing 453,120 acres, all highly developed. The expense of building levees will amount to $100,000 per mile south of Cairo and an average of $25,000 north, while the cost of revetment will amount to $150,000 per mile. Revetment work does not require all of the river banks to be revetted. but only such places along the banks as have a tendency to cave, threatening not only the contour of the banks, and thereby affecting the channel, but also for the protection of the levees located in most instances near the bank. On account of the rapidity with which the alluvial banks disappear, especially following flood waters, at which time the soil becomes saturated, and as the water drops eddles form, gradually cutting the sand at the foundation and undermining the shore line, years in which it has been used, and at no time has there been a loss of revetment work when funds were available to cover the danger point. Much was said in the discussion of the flood control bill, when the same was considered in the House, about the ultimate cost of revetment, those opposing the bill quoting from the estimate made by Major West, a member of the commission at the time, and applying the estimate made to the entire length of the river. Of course, the explanation was made at the time and has only been proven since that, compared with the entire length of the river, the amount of revetment work required is not appreciable. Caving banks are only found in concave bends, and if proper and immediate attention is given to the point where the current assails it, it can be remedied in a short distance and with little funds. This is proven true beyond question, that of the entire amount expended for revetment work, more than 75 per cent was used where, if funds were available, the work could be accomplished for 25 per cent of the amount necessary at the beginning of the danger. Through the want of the necessary funds to do this work, many miles of levees, built at an enormous expense, were destroyed, and this waste and extravagance is continued to-day for the same reason.

I dare say that out of the $60,000,000 expended since De-

I dare say that out of the $60,000,000 expended since December 31, 1914, one-tenth, or $6,000,000, has been destroyed through the failure to revet. To those who hesitate to accept the levee theory, I will state that from the beginning of the work by the Mississippi River Commission, under its fixed standard of grade and section, not one inch has been lost through crevasses, not one particle has been washed away by the floods; every inch destroyed went into the channel of the Mississippi River.

One of the most valuable development projects inaugurated in the history of our country, one of the most valuable investments made by this Government, was in the great reclamation work through which the unproductive sand lands of the West have been made fertile and are now producing hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of agricultural products every year and furnish homes for 31,462 families. The area reclaimed is, comparatively speaking, a small one, and for that reason the expense appears very considerable. According to the last report 1921-22, House Document No. 410, it is disclosed that 4,300,900 acres is possible of reclamation, of which amount 1,675,000 acres have been furnished with a complete water supply, and about 1,100,000 additional acres have been furnished a supplemental supply. Under the provisions of the Warren Act the latter areas include any private or district projects not usually designated as Government projects. All this at a cost of $135,000,000, and $13,000,000 of which amount has been According to this figure, the 2,775,000 acres is at a cost of $48.60 per acre, and, deducting the amount paid in, leaves a present investment of $43.90 per acre. The annual interest on the fund remaining would amount to $5,185,000 per annum at 41 per cent.

The amount invested in levee construction by the Government and local interests is $11.85 per acre, divided as follows: Government, $3.11; local, $8.74.

The landowners of the Mississippi Valley are not engineers by profession; they are farmers. Cities of importance are located upon the valley lands, where merchants, lawyers, physicians, and other business and professional activities are engaged in; they are not engineers. They have their fortunes there, the accumulations of a lifetime of endeavor, all dependent for security upon the successful prosecution of a feasible and effective control of the flood waters. They are not interested in any fine-spun theories. It is practical results they look to, and are contributing to the very maximum of their ability to obtain a solution of their difficulties. These people, with their property and their families—their all—at stake, are willing to rely upon the advice of the expert commission now engaged in this vital task. They believe that the results have fully demonstrated the correctness of the conclusions of these experts, and through the prosecution to completion of the plan determined by the commission success will be assured.

The enormous potential values involved in this vast alluvial region are such that as an investment nothing comparable exists, but the future depends upon the continued cooperation of the experts constituting the Mississippi River Commission and the favorable consideration of the Congress. [Applause.]

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, how much time have I?
The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman has two min-the sand at the foundation and undermining the shore line, it is very necessary that the revetment work be prosecuted with diligence just at the time the danger appears. This revetment is permanent, with but little lost throughout the lone of the defects of the bill. But so far as I have heard, no one has shown the necessity of authorizing an expenditure of $60,000,000. Originally it was provided that $45,000,000 could be used for this work south of Cairo. That work to-day is virtually completed, and now they are coming in here for $60,000,000 additional, without showing what it is for. It is nothing more than laying the foundation for a wholesale raid on the Treasury for local improvement in a large way.

Further, it takes away from Congress and from the juris-diction of the Chief of Engineers the authority for continuing the supervision as to navigation over the Mississippi River from Cairo up to Rock Island.

You will see as the years go by that the position that I have taken is confirmed by the events. Gentlemen on the other side have not explained in any way the need of this large authorization. They ought to, in all fairness, if their contention is right. They should ask unanimous consent to amend with respect to levee protection and bank protection.

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. The Chief of Engineers suggested this language.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen, relative to the objections raised by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Staf-FORD] against this bill on account of the fact that it extends the jurisdiction of the Mississippi River Commission from Cairo up to Rock Island, Ill., for the purposes of "flood control," I will say that this language was placed in the bill at the instance of the Chief of Engineers and the Mississippi River Commission, and it in no way changes the law as it now stands in respect to navigation. There is no danger of a conflict and no reason why the gentleman from Wisconsin should be so frightened about the matter. This clause meets the approval of the very authorities who are to execute the law.

Also, relative to his objection about extending the jurisdiction of the Mississippi River Commission and making provision for the tributaries, you will note that the language says only so far as these tributaries are affected by the flood waters of the Mississippi River. The law is not changed in so far as the work in respect to navigation on the tributaries is concerned.

In my judgment, one of the most important features of the bill is that it makes provision for controlling the flood waters of the Mississippi River as it affects the various tributary streams. The water that fills those tributaries and inundates the adjacent lands is the very same water and presents the same problems as on the main river itself. There are in the States of Iowa, Missouri, Arkansas, Mississippi, and Louisiana some six million acres of the finest land in the world affected by back waters from the Mississippi River. And there is the same obligation on the part of the Government to protect this territory and to come to the relief of the people living there as in the sections immediately adjacent to the Mississippi,

We have been contending here for the past six years for the extension of the jurisdiction of the Mississippi River Commission to these tributary streams. The principal rivers affected on the lower stretches are the St. Francis, the White, and the Arkansas Rivers, in Arkansas; the Yazoo River, in Mississippi; the Red, the Black, and the Ouachita Rivers, in Louisiana.

Some objection has also been raised on account of the use of the word "outlets" in addition to tributaries. The word 'outlets" was inserted in the bill in order to give jurisdiction and bring relief to the section affected by the Atchafalaya Since the enactment of the original flood control law the Atchafalaya has been termed and recognized as an outlet We have not only extended the jurisdicof the Mississippl. tion of the commission to these tributaries and outlets but the present bill goes further and provides definitely that "any funds which may hereafter be appropriated under the authority of this act, and which may be allotted to works of flood control, may be expended upon any part of the Mississippi River between the Head of the Passes and Rock Island, Ill., and upon the tributaries and outlets of said river in so far as they may be affected by the flood waters of said River." In other words, the appropriations made by authority of this bill, when enacted into law, will be available for use upon the tributaries and outlets for protection against the floods of the Mississippi River in the same manner as upon that river itself, and under like conditions.

WHAT THE BILL PROVIDES.

The present bill, in effect, makes available for the improvement of the Mississippi River for the purposes of navigation and flood control $60,000,000, to be expended in a period of six years. This is in addition to $6,000,000 already appropriated for 1923. The work of channel improvement, bank revetment, and all other activities relating to navigation will be solely at the expense of the Federal Government. construction and other works of flood control, the Government will contribute two-thirds and the local interests one-third.

It is estimated that the total expenditures by the Government and the local interests will be at the rate of $12,000,000 per year. It is the opinion of the Mississippi River Commission and the Chief of Engineers that this amount is as much as can be economically and profitably expended in any one

THE LEVER SYSTEM.

There has recently been much discussion in respect to the value of the levee system as an adequate means of protection from the floods of the Mississippi River. After a careful study of every phase of the problem and every suggestion offered by the general discussion, it appears to be conceded that adequate levees up to commission grade and section are the only practi-cal means for this purpose above Red River. Even advocates of outlets and spillways are in practical agreement upon this point. From Red River south there is a diversity of opinion among laymen and engineers as to whether additional means supplemental to levees should not be adopted.

No stronger argument can be offered in support of the effectiveness and value of levees than the following extract from statement of Maj. Frank M. Kerr, chief State engineer for Louisiana, before the Committee on Flood Control at the recent hearings in Washington. Referring to the great flood of

1882, Major Kerr said:

1882, Major Kerr said:

When the waters from this flood had subsided it was found that the lines of levees in the valley had been breached in no less than 750 places, 300 of which were in the lines of levees of Louisiana alone, and said breaches aggregating over 60 miles in width and submerging over 75 per cent of the cultivatable alluvial lands of the State.

The losses were incalculable and despair filled the minds of all of us; but just then new hope was inspired in the form of the first authorization by the Government to render financial aid and under Government control. This came through the recommendations of the Mississippi River Commission, which body had been created three years earlier to study and cope with the problem.

He then refers to the enertment of the flood control law in

He then refers to the enactment of the flood control law in 1917 and the progress made since that date by the joint effort of the commission, the various States and levee boards concerned, and says:

Every year thereafter the levee system under the joint care of the Government and the riparian States grew better and better. Every high water was carried to the sea between the levees with greater success and less toll, down to and including that of 1922, when in spite of its volume and duration no actual breaches occurred in the valley until reaching Louisiana, where four in number, in some seventeen hundred miles of levees in the State, unfortunately developed. These four breaches, however, aggregated less than 1.5 miles in width, overflowing directly less than 1 per cent of the cultivatable alluvial lands of the State, as compared with 75 per cent in 1882.

It may be said in connection with this statement from the chief engineer of the State of Louisiana that only two of the breaches in the levee system referred to were of much consequence, namely, the one in Concordia Parish, opposite Natchez, Miss., and the other at Poydras, just below New Orleans. The levees where these breaches occurred are admitted to have been defective and far below the standard fixed by the com-No break has occurred at any time or anywhere in levees up to the required Government standard.

The complaint is often made that as levee construction continues and the waters of the river held within a uniform channel, flood heights have increased in an unusual if not to a dangerous degree, and frequently we are referred to conditions as they existed in the lower stretches of the valley 50 or 75 years ago, when there were practically no levees worthy of the name and when flood heights were much lower. it is suggested that without levees at present the same conditions would exist as in the former period. But these statements are made without full knowledge of the facts. It is true that the more adequate levee system is to some extent responsible for gradually increasing flood heights. But there are other important factors adding to this increase which make it imperative to construct levees on the lower river. The drainage and reclamation of the vast areas on the upper reaches of the Mississippi River and its tributaries precipitate the flow of water into lower sections of the stream in volumes that were unknown 50 years ago. And even in the States of Missouri, Arkansas, Mississippi, and Louisiana, where levees have been built on the front, vast drainage projects have been inaugurated for the reclamation of great basins which have heretofore been reservoirs; and since this process will continue, flood levels will be increased upon the lower sections of the river, whether levees are constructed or not.

SPILLWAYS.

While admitting that from Red River north a levee system is the only practical method, that it can be made successful, and that we can conduct safely between the levees a flood of any magnitude heretofore known down to that point, it is contended with much force and upon an interesting array of facts by men whose opinions are entitled to much credit that safety below Red River can only be secured by the adoption of some additional means—some works of flood control supplemental to and coordinate with the levee system. For this purpose outlets or regulated spillways are proposed. The Committee on Flood Control was much impressed by the arguments presented by the people of Louisiana in relation to this phase of the subject. These arguments were presented not only by laymen but by very able engineers who have been intimately associated with the problems involved, and this phase of the subject was not overlooked by the Committee on Flood Control. I quote from the report:

I quote from the report:

As the country above has been developed and drainage districts created which precipitate the surplus water into the river the flood level in the lower reaches of the river has continuously and progressively been elevated. Due to this fact many people of Louisiana, particularly of New Orleans, have advocated other methods of controlling the floods in addition to those heretofore employed by the commission. The necessity of regulated spillways below Red River, both above and below the city of New Orleans, was urged upon the committee with great earnestness and force. The committee is not composed of engineers, and must, of necessity, leave the determination of all purely technical questions of engineering to the engineering authority established by the Government and charged with the responsibility and authority to make the work of flood control effective, which, in this instance, is the Mississippi River Commission and the Chief of Engineers.

The flood control at gives the Mississippi River Commission full power to control the floods by any method which they may adopt with the approval of the Chief of Engineers. Under this authority they may, if they deem proper, provide spillways, outlets, or any other method. It would be unwise to the last degree for Congress to undertake to direct the engineers in such matters or to go farther than the present law.

In respect to matters of this kind it is not within the province

In respect to matters of this kind it is not within the province of Congress to adopt the method by which the result shall be achieved, or to direct that any particular project be adopted or carried out in a way or by a method specified in the legisla-tive act. Where the Federal Government undertakes a work and establishes its agency for that purpose the money appropriated therefor is spent exclusively and only upon the plans and recommendations of that agency to achieve the end desired.

After this bill was reported by the Committee on Flood Control the question of authority for the adoption of spillways was submitted to the Chief of Engineers and the Mississippi River Commission, and these authorities have gone on record as follows. I quote from a letter of Gen. Lansing H. Beach, Chief of Engineers, addressed to me:

1. I have the honor to reply to your letter of the 9th instant relative to the authority of the Mississippi River Commission of maturing plans for flood control.

2. Section 1 of the flood control act, approved March 1, 1917 (of which this is a reenactment), empowers and directs the Secretary of War to carry on continuously the work of flood control and river improvement in accordance with "the plans of the Mississippi River Commission heretofore or hereafter adopted," but limits the expenditure therefor, etc.

And now I quote from a letter of Col. Charles L. Potter, president of the Mississippi River Commission:

I have your letter of January 9 asking my opinion as to whether the commission has at present full authority to consider "spillways and other works of flood control" in its handling the flood problem on the lower river. There is not the slightest doubt of our full authority to consider such measures and to use them if we think advisable. No further legislation along those lines is at all necessary.

So there is no language that could be framed to give more complete authority for the adoption and construction of spill-ways and outlets than now exists. I feel safe, from actual knowledge of the situation, in saying that the minds of the Chief of Engineers and the Mississippi River Commission are not closed against arguments in favor of spillways. ing before the Committee on Flood Control indicated very clearly that they have not approved this method, and had they done so heretofore the money to execute such plans has not been provided. Assurances have been given that permission would be granted to the people of New Orleans and Louisiana to construct the proposed spillway at Poydras, just below New Orleans. If this should be done the results therefrom would probably be the most convincing argument that could be made.

OUR PROBLEM BETTER UNDERSTOOD.

Mr. Speaker, this bill proposes to make available the largest sum ever authorized for this all-important work, and in my judgment its passage by Congress is made possible at this time by the fact that the problems of the Mississippi Valley have come to be known and appreciated by the people of the Nation. Senators and Representatives from every section of the country | way, and pass it as soon as possible.

have had the opportunity to see and know the difficulties involved, the vast interests at stake, and the determined and heroic efforts of our people. These Senators and Representatives have taken the message home to their fellows, who have received it in that spirit of fairness and justice characteristic of the American people of all sections.

For this and other opportunities for the American public to have possession of the information necessary to form a fair and proper judgment I wish to acknowledge our indebtedness not only to the States and various levee organizations concerned for their splendid activities, but also to the patriotic and unselfish associations of public-spirited citizens such as the Mississippi River Flood Control Association, of Memphis, Tenn., and the Safe River Committee of the city of New Orleans.

When it was realized that the flood control act of 1917 would expire with the work far from complete and with new problems pressing for solution, these associations rendered valuable assistance in connection with public conventions at various points, in disseminating information, and in contributing to the general discussion that resulted in a united and definite line of procedure which is now about to culminate in the passage of legislation so much needed.

The passage of the present bill does not complete our work for flood control. We have now pending bills affecting other sections of the country and providing for surveys and reports preliminary to legislation of a protective character. We also have pending before the Committee on Flood Control a bill known as the Dupré bill, providing means for a general study of the whole problem of stream flow and flood prevention in a comprehensive way, and which I hope shall have the earnest consideration of the next Congress.

NAVIGATION.

I refer to navigation because the dreams of those who have for a number of years been advocating a revival of navigation on the Mississippi River are being realized. The present service, under the direction and control of the War Department, has surpassed the fondest expectations of its advocates. It is en-tirely sufficient on this phase of the discussion for me to refer you to the testimony of Col. Q. T. Ashburn, who is in charge of the Federal Barge Line service on the Mississippi River, before the Committee on Flood Control. I quote:

the Committee on Flood Control. I quote:

Whether or not we have been able to make good, I think, is illustrated by the appropriations which have been made. The appropriation for the first year was $10,000,000; the next year, $4,000,000; last year, $1,250,000; and you will note that out of a million and a quarter dollars, $600,000 is coming back into the Treasury. Last year there was appropriated $330,000. Less than $100,000 has been used in the operation of the barge lines, which shows whether they have been effective or not. The appropriation for this year is for the Washington office only, which is $30,000.

Now, with regard to the barge line, to show whether or not it is of any value to the country, I want to give the figures as to the tomage carried in 1921. The river tonnage carried in 1921 was 237,268 tons. In 1922 it was 655,789 tons, an increase of 176 per cent. The tomage that was carried in the fiscal year 1922 was: Southbound, 414,790 tons; northbound, 240,999 tons. The revenue southbound was $1,397,530; morthbound, $1,139,958; making a total revenue for the year of $2,537,489.

northbound, $1,139,958; making a total revenue for the year of $2,537,489.

Now, when this line was first put in everybody said that there would be no upbound freight. It was a long, hard pull to get any upbound freight. You gentiemen are well aware of the fact that traffic trade travels well-established routes and will not leave one route to go to another route till it is given sufficient dependable service. * * * Now, we got in a condition where we could give most efficient dependable service and we were in a position to handle the traffic, and during the six months of this year the upstream traffic. The upstream traffic, a larger portion of it, would never have come that way at all unless there had been cheap water rates.

Colonel Ashburn further testified that it was not possible to handle the cargoes offered on account of insufficient equipment. Also, that if proper equipment were provided, the present bargeline service could be profitably extended to the navigable tributaries of the Mississippi River.

Whether viewed from a standpoint of flood control or navigation, the expenditure of the money provided in this bill is amply

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Illinois to suspend the rules and pass

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed. Mr. HAUGEN and Mr. LAZARO were given leave to extend their remarks in the RECORD.

The extension of remarks referred to is here printed in full as follows

Mr. LAZARO. Mr. Speaker, I am heartily in favor of the flood control bill, and I hope that the membership of this House will consider this legislation in a nonsectional and nonpartisan

It is the policy of the Government to appropriate money to protect crops from insects and diseases, also cattle and forests, so that the people may have food, clothing, and shelter. With the movement from the farms to the cities we are already threatened with limited production. Certainly legislation of this sort, which would protect millions of acres of our most fertile land from recurring floods, is in the interest of all our people. Take for instance the cotton crop. Every pound of it is needed to clothe our people, and yet every time we have a flood, millions of acres of the most fertile cotton land in the world is flooded and the crop lost. We also have the moral responsibility of the Federal Government to assist in the safeguarding of life from these floods.

In planning work of the magnitude required to control the Mississippi River and its tributaries during flood stages we must look ahead. The money which this bill authorizes will not be available until July, 1924. However, if this bill should fail to become a law before adjournment, March 4, it would be nothing short of a disaster for the lower Mississippi Valley. On the other hand, if the bill becomes a law this session, the levee boards can go ahead with their plans, and also the Mississippi River Commission.

I am glad, indeed, to see a change in sentiment in Congress on this vital question. Some who were not in favor of such appropriation years ago because it did not directly affect them now understand that it is a big American problem which must be met and solved if the entire country is to develop and prosper.

We had no such desperate and critical flood problems years ago. Such floods as came then would spread out more gradually or were controlled by levees that the local people could afford to maintain at their own expense; but to-day, my friends, these floods come so suddenly upon us, because of the destruction of forests and better drainage above, that they are absolutely beyond our control.

The United States has spent considerable money on reclamation. Reclamation is the conversion of waste land, such as deserts, swamps, and cut-over lands, by human labor and artificial means, into productive areas. We have done splendid work in that line and we should encourage it. At the same time we must bear in mind that the main purpose of efforts to control the Mississippi River and its tributaries is the preservation of vast productive areas, great cities and farms already existing, against the ever-increasing floods poured down upon them in ever-swelling volume as a result of the improvement of agricultural lands above. This is not reclamation; it is national conservation of immense established values. Certainly we can not permit these vast values, fruitful acres, and large cities to be given over to destruction. The conversion of waste places to human use, the development of new values, the conservation of existing values constitute one of the highest and truest functions of government.

Let us rise above partisanship and sections and pass this bill to-day, with the hope that the Senate will do likewise and that the President will sign it before March 4.

ENTRY OF ANIMALS FREE OF DUTY.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table House Joint Resolution 422, disagree to the Senate amendments, and ask for a conference.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Iowa asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table House Joint Resolution 422, disagree to the Senate amendments, and ask for a conference. Is there objection?

Mr. CRISP. Let the title be reported.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Joint Resolution 422, permitting the entry free of duty of certain domestic animals which have crossed the boundary line into foreign country.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?
Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Is this an emergency freetrade proposition? [Laughter.]
The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection, and appoints the following conferees:

Mr. Green of Iowa, Mr. Longworth, Mr. Hawley, Mr. Col-LIER, and Mr. OLDFIELD.

THE LATE REPRESENTATIVE WILLIAM BOURKE COCKRAN.

Mr. BURTON. Mr. Speaker, under the direction of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, I ask unanimous consent to present for reading and insertion in the RECORD of a resolution adopted this morning by that committee upon the death of the Hon. WILLIAM BOURKE COCKRAN.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent to present a resolution adopted by the Committee on Foreign Affairs on the death of the Hon. WILLIAM BOURKE COCKBAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BURTON read the following:

MEMORIAL RESOLUTION UPON THE DEATH OF HON. WILLIAM BOURKE COCKRAN, ADOPTED BY THE COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MARCH 2, 1923.

The members of the Committee on Foreign Affairs have heard with the deepest sorrow of the sudden death of Hon. WILLIAM BOURKE COCKBAN.

His association with the committee has left a lasting impression because of his remarkable knowledge of general history and his keen discernment of international policies and relations; coupled with an exalted sense of public duty and untiring industry, worthy of the highest standards of legislative activity and of statesmanship.

His geniality and helpfulness were so constantly manifested that each member of the committee mourns his death as a personal loss.

For 40 years he maintained an unsurpassed position among orators of the English-speaking tongue. His eloquence and readiness in debate on manifold occasions, both in the Old World and the New, have given him a distinctive place among the public speakers of our time.

The eminence of his public service has made his name an inspiration and a permanent heritage for the country which he loved so well.

With a profound appreciation of their own loss, and that of his constituency and the Nation, the members of the committee, by formal resolution, unanimously adopt this memorial and convey to the bereaved wife of Mr. Cockban their most heartfelt sympathy.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this be printed in the Record in 8-point type. It is probable that there will not be time for memorial exercises during this session for our departed colleague, but if a new precedent is needed I shall ask during the next Congress that we may be afforded an opportunity for memorial services.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

AN ADDITIONAL COLLECTION DISTRICT FOR INTERNAL REVENUE.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill 2051, an act to amend section 3142 of the Revised Statutes, to permit an increase in the number of collection districts for the collection of internal revenue and in the number of collectors of internal revenue from 64 to 65. The Clerk reported the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 3142 of the Revised Statutes is amended by adding at the end thereof a new paragraph to read as follows:

"On and after July 1, 1921, the whole number of collection districts for the collection of internal revenue and the whole number of collectors of internal revenue shall not exceed 65."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. COLLIER. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.
Mr. MILLS. I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, this is a bill that can be explained very briefly and be very readily understood. It provides for the increase of the number of internal revenue collection districts from 64 to 65, and I may say, so that the House may have a complete understanding of what is proposed, that if this measure is enacted the Treasury Department proposes to locate the new district in the State of New York and possibly within the limits of the city of New York. Why is this needed? Gentlemen are familiar with the fact that in the course of the development of our tax system during the last 10 years the number of taxpayers has risen from 600,000 to 9,000,000 and that the number of returns handled by this collection district in 1920 was no less than 15,-000,000. The situation in the county of New York is particularly We handled there in 1921 no less than 404,000 individual income-tax returns, and in addition some thousands of special returns, as well as sales-tax returns. Now, it is of the greatest possible value to the Treasury Department that these returns should be expeditiously handled. One of the difficulties, in my judgment, which has arisen in the administration of the income tax and has given rise to a delay amounting to five or six years in auditing returns is the fact that we have attempted too much centralization and have not decentralized. From the standpoint of the taxpayer it is essential for his convenience that these offices be located not only from a convenient standpoint geographically but so that he can be able to deal with the head of the bureau. Subordinates do not satisfy when it comes to a question of paying a large tax. ordinates do not satisfy when there is an intricate question of law. You know and I know, when we have a question of that kind, we want to go to the top, to the man at the head of the bureau of the district.

In our particular district in New York City you can not go to the head of the bureau when there are 404,000 taxpayers. But the head of the bureau

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. there can make no final ruling.

Mr. MILLS. I appreciate that, but the gentleman knows that in many, many cases a personal interview will clarify the matter in so far as the taxpayer is concerned, and may in the future do away with any amount of litigation.

In addition, we have a very peculiar geographical situa-on. To the north of the county of New York we have the counties of Bronx and Westchester, one of which is located within the confines of the city of New York. They are not a part of the second district, although the county of Westchester, for instance, is made up almost wholly of towns and cities, suburban in character, whose inhabitants do business in the city of New York and live within 20 to 25 miles of the city of New York.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, admitting the gentleman's statement that there is a necessity, is there any reason why it should be determined in advance of the passage of this legislation that no white man shall be appointed to this office?

Mr. MILLS. It has not been so determined. Mr. BLANTON. I have understood that.

Mr. MILLS. The gentleman is misinformed. These people in the counties of Westchester and Bronx have to travel 150 miles to Albany to the collector's office there. Can you imagine a greater absurdity than a resident of the city of New York living within the city limits being obliged to travel 150 miles to interview the collector? Can you imagine a greater absurdity than the men who live in one of the cities of Westchester, close to New York, every day in business in New York, being obliged to go to Albany, 150 miles away, on tax questions? It will be suggested, of course, that the Treasury Department has authority, and why does it not combine Westchester and Bronx with the second district? It can not do so because the second district is already overwhelmed with work, and if you added these two other counties, you would have a district which would exceed in magnitude any other district in the United States, and which would be unwieldy from the administrative standpoint. If you adopt this proposition and the Treasury Department should decide to take in the Bronx and Westchester Counties, the resulting district would be as follows: The second district would have a population of 1,142,000, with approximately 204,000 income-tax payers, and the third would have a population of 2,218,000, with 270,000 income-tax returns.

Should the department decide not to include the Bronx and Westchester, but simply from the standpoint of administration to divide the county of New York, you would have the following result: The second district would have 204,919 individual tax returns with a population of 1,142,000 and the third would have returns of 204,000 with a population of 1,142,000. You gentlemen will realize from the situation in your own districts that these are pretty large districts. In fact, in the number of returns filed each district would still be in excess of the number filed in all but seven of existing districts.

What are the arguments against this proposition which will be urged by my friends on the other side? They will say to you that we are creating a new job. I frankly admit that of course we are creating a new job, the job of collector of internal revenue in this new district.

However, there is nothing wrong in the creation of a new job, if the job is needed, even though from a political standpoint it may be objectionable that the job is going to some one of the opposite faith.

Mr. SIEGEL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. MILLS. Yes.

Mr. SIEGEL. Bronx County has had the greatest growth in population of any county or place in the country since the creation of these districts. It grew from a population of 400,000 to 800,000 in less than six years, according to the census of 1920, and since 1920 the Bronx has grown to the extent of another 120,000 population, with all of the big factories moving up there, and the large income-tax payers moving up into that county. There is urgent necessity for an additional revenue district in order to get the money in and collect all that is due to the Government. They are not doing it now and they can not

Mr. MILLS. Again, it will be urged that this means largely increased expenditures. It does not mean largely increased You would have to have a new office, but toexpenditures. day you have a branch office. You may have additional floor space in another building, and you are paying for that same floor space down town to-day. There would not be a single additional clerk or place created by this position, because it takes the same number of clerks to handle 404,000 income-tax returns, whether they be in an office located at Wall Street, or in an office located at Washington Heights.

Mr. ROSSDALE. And floor space in the Bronx at $2 a square foot and in Manhattan, where the office is now located, it is $6 and $7 a square foot.

Mr. MILLS. So that the argument which will be unquestionably urged that we are advocating a measure that means large additional expenditure can not for one minute be sustained. If anything, it should mean decreased expenditures, and the only possible increase in expenditure is the salary of the new collector. Therefore, gentlemen, I urge in all sincerity that you pass this measure as one which the Treasury advocates, as one necessary, from an administrative standpoint, and which we Representatives of the city of New York advocate as a measure necessary for the convenience of the taxpayer.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. COLLIER. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, the minority thinks that the creation of this office is absolutely and entirely unnecessary. The Members of this House will recall that some time ago during the last session of Congress a bill bearing the same recommendations from the Treasury Department that this bill bears was reported by the Committee on Ways and Means over the objection of the minority, and that There was this difference between that it came to this floor. bill and this bill: That bill created more internal-revenue collectors than this bill does, and the Members of the House will recall that after as hot a day's debate as I have ever seen that bill was never brought up again, but was quietly put to sleep. This is just a continuation of that old fight. There is no need for the creation of this office. It is simply to give some one a job. The gentleman from New York [Mr. Mills] has told you that it means only the addition of one man's salary.

Why, the gentleman from New York will know, and I have been informed, that the creation of these new positions will force the Government to either rent or by other means purchase acquire a building which will cost over $30,000. policy of the department has been to concentrate these matters. Under the existing law the Secretary of the Treasury can now so consolidate these districts that by deputy commissioners the work can be done.

Mr. BEGG. Will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. COLLIER. In just a second. I picked up a New York paper yesterday and I saw in that paper a list; I did not count them, but there were hundreds of places in the city of New York where the income-tax payer can now go, and there is absolutely no necessity for this office except to give some one a job. I yield to the gentleman. job. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. BEGG. I think the gentleman is anxious to do justice at all times. That is the credit I give him. Now, there are 64 internal revenue collectors in the United States. There are 5 in the State of New York, and if this bill passes it will make In other words, there will be 6 internal-revenue collectors at this time, if this bill becomes a law, to do one-fourth of the business of the United States, because the State of New York collects and pays one-fourth of the total income. Does not the gentleman think, in all fairness, the request is a reasonable one when they only ask for one more collector to do one-fourth of the work of the United States?

Mr. COLLIER. There is no doubt the gentleman from New York is reasonable in his demand, because we might have expected even a greater demand. I want to say this to the gentleman from Ohio: Now we have not got the same amount of work which we had. We do not collect the excess-profits tax. There was a time when we did more work than now, and that is why I do not think it is necessary to increase the number of collectors.

Mr. ROSSDALE. If the gentleman will permit, in the city of New York in the county of the Bronx there are possibly 900,000 people that have to go to Albany to pay their taxes, despite the fact they are a part of the city of New York.

Mr. COLLIER. That is true; but the Secretary of the Treasury can remedy that if he wants to, when there are two or three hundred districts and substations

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COLLIER. I will.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. The other bill provided 10 additional collectors. I did not think they needed the 10. I do agree it does seem this additional one is necessary.

Mr. SIEGEL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COLLIER. I do. Mr. SIEGEL. I desire to correct what the gentleman said about seeing in the New York newspapers notices in reference to these places where individual revenue agents are present. They are simply banks and similar places where men can go to fill out income-tax blanks. You can not get other informa-tion or correct returns. It is very unfair that taxpayers in New York should have to travel 150 miles to Albany to get any other kind of information.

Mr. COLLIER. The gentlemen could go to the Secretary of the Treasury and present the facts, because under the existing law these internal-revenue collection districts can be rearranged.

Mr. SIEGEL. Some time ago, about three years ago, on the floor of this House I called attention to the additional amount of money which could be brought in by taxes then uncollected. For instance, we had 100 men sent out, and each of those men drew $4 a day allowance. If you create this additional collector you will be bringing in millions of dollars into the Treasury, and the amount that you will expend will be practically nil. This is a question of getting into the Government Treasury millions, whereas the item of expense now involved in the bill under consideration is $7,000 or $10,000.

Mr. COLLIER. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from

Mr. PERLMAN. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. COLLIER. I will.
Mr. PERLMAN. The gentleman just stated in reference to a building costing $30,000-

Mr. COLLIER. I estimated that as costing that more or less. Mr. PERLMAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COLLIER. If I had the time.
Mr. PERLMAN. On Monday last I had a talk with one of the deputy commissioners of internal revenue and he told me it is absolutely necessary to transfer a large staff of men to New York to do the work that is necessary there now, and that will entail an additional expense for office space. If you have to find that space for the men in the locality where the present district office is located it will require a great deal more money for rent than anywhere else in the city of New York, and that cost will be at least three times the amount of salary to be paid to the collector of the additional internal-revenue district provided for by this bill.

Mr. COLLIER. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from

Arkansas [Mr. OLDFIELD], Mr. OLDFIELD, Mr. Speaker, I do not think the establishment of this new district is necessary. As the gentleman from Mississippi has said we fought this out here once before. This bill passed the Senate in 1922, in June of Another thing: last year, and they waited here until the closing days of this session to bring it up. Now that is not fair to the country. We ought to have considered this bill; we ought to have had an opportunity to consider this bill on its merits,

Mr. Mills always makes a splendid argument. He is a very able fellow and a charming gentleman personally, but he is wrong about this proposition. The Secretary of the Trensury has ample authority, and nobody would deny that, to rearrange and have substations and put all of New York City in one district, if he desired, and just save that trip of 150 miles up to Albany. The Secretary of the Treasury has all the authority he needs. Why come in here in the last moments of this Congress and ask us to create a new district? I do not know how many people would have to be put in that office. You would have an internal-revenue collector and everything that goes with an internal-revenue collector's office. I do not know how many thousands of dollars it would cost every year. We ought not to do it, gentlemen, because, as I say, the Secretary of the Treasury has ample authority under the law now to correct this situation, and these gentlemen know it. There is no question about it.

Now I do not want to take up the time here, because other gentlemen desire to say a few words upon this bill. But, gentleman, you ought not to encourage this practice of coming in here in this way at the end of the session with legislation that is not necessary. It was taken up 10 months ago, and you got licked after a day's discussion. Of course, that bill provided for 10 new districts, and this provides for only 1.

Mr. ROSSDALE. Does the gentleman favor an increased collection of taxes? Does the gentleman know that the Government is now two years behind in checking up?
Mr. PERLMAN. Five years behind.
Mr. ROSSDALE. Yes. We pay the money.

Mr. OLDFIELD. We are collecting less taxes from New York and everywhere else in the country now than last year or in the previous year. In other words, internal revenue collections are coming down.

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. The gentleman is experienced in accounting to a sufficient degree to know that the volume of money collected is no criterion of the cost of collection.

Mr. OLDFIELD. That is true. They can collect taxes in the great congested districts much more cheaply than in the scattered territory.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. OLDFIELD. Yes.

Mr. TILSON. The gentleman realizes that if we were to transfer all the business of Bronx County and Westchester County to the downtown district of New York they would have to double the force which they now have, and that would entail an enormous expense.

Mr. OLDFIELD. If you create a new district, a new internal revenue collector, you must have additional space. But you can locate it anywhere.

Mr. ROSSDALE. The rents are one-fourth in the Bronx what they are in New York City proper. It would be cheaper to move the entire establishment to the Bronx.

Mr. OLDFIELD. The Secretary of the Treasury can change the situation and location absolutely. He can put it all in one district. He can put it all in Albany if he wants to. He ought to do this, just as he has the right to do it under the law, and not come in here in the closing days of Congress and ask for a new internal revenue collector and all that goes with it.

Does the gentleman realize that the population of New York is growing tremendously, and that the object in view is to get more individual collections? Does he realize that it can not be done unless we get another collector and another district, so that provision can be had for these additional men.

Mr. OLDFIELD. In the other bill you did not expect more than one additional internal revenue collector in that entire

Mr. SIEGEL. Two, I will say to my friend.
Mr. MILLS. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes of my time to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Husted.]
The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New

The SPEAKER pro tempore, T York is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. HUSTED. Mr. Speaker, as the gentleman from New York [Mr. Mills] remarked, there is not much to be said on this bill, and what little there is to be said he has said extremely

I happen to live in the county of Westchester, and I know what the situation is. Westchester County is within the metropolitan district. We do business in the city of New York. We are only a few miles out. But we are in the fourteenth district for internal revenue and income tax purposes. If we want to talk to a collector we have to go 100 miles or 125 miles away to do it, when we live on the border of New York City and very frequently go there.

Westchester County is not in New York City, yet many of the largest income-tax payers in the United States live in Westchester County; their returns are the most voluminous and the most complicated, and on them a great amount of money is paid into the Federal Treasury.

Now, the situation in the Bronx is even worse than it is in Westchester County. The Bronx is in New York City. county of the Bronx is a part of New York City. I think it is the most rapidly growing section in the United States. people who live in the Bronx, in the city of New York, have to go up to Albany to see the collector there about income-tax mat-

The gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. Oldfield] says that the Secretary of the Treasury has ample authority now to add the county of Bronx to the second New York district. Of course, he has.

Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. SEARS.

Mr. HUSTED. I can not yield now.

And he has ample authority to add the county of Westchester to the second New York district. Why does he not do it? He does not do it for good, sound, administrative reasons. The second district, which is the county of New York, is already the second largest collection district in the United States. have more work now than they can properly attend to, and that is the reason why the Secretary of the Treasury not only does not add the county of Westchester, but can not properly add the county of the Bronx, although it is actually a part of the city of New York.

We should have a new collection district for the convenience of our taxpayers, and when it comes down to the question of expense I firmly believe that what the gentleman from New York [Mr. Siegel] has said is absolutely true, that through better administration so much more money will come into the Federal Treasury that the little amount involved in paying the salary of one additional income-tax collector will amount to nothing in comparison. I believe that this is a good business proposition for the Treasury of the United States and that the only possible objection that anybody could raise against it is that it is being done by the Republican Party and that the man who will get this small position will be a Republican. Well, that is too small a consideration to influence anybody in a matter of this kind. I want this thing, from my point of view, not because a Republican is going to be appointed, but for the convenience of the taxpayers in the county in which I live.

0

I want it for them and for their interests so that they go to the collector in the new district within a reasonable distance from where they live and talk these important matters over with him. I do not want them to have to go to Albany, 125 miles away from home, to take up these matters. It is a good business proposition. If you pass this bill, which adds one additional district, which increases the number from 64 to 65, you will greatly convenience our income-tax payers and at the same time, as I believe, help the Federal Treasury by providing for better administration of the income tax law in one of the most congested and rapidly growing sections of the United States.

Mr. COLLIER. Mr. Speaker, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. Swine].
Mr. SWING. Mr. Speaker, this additional district may be needed. The Secretary of the Treasury says it is and I am not sufficiently informed to say that it is not. But I do criticize the policy of the Secretary in urging an increase in the number of internal-revenue districts while at the same time recommending a reduction in the number of customs districts. A little while ago Mr. Mellon wrote the Committee on Ways and Means advocating an increase of 10 internal-revenue districts, saying that it would give more efficient service to the taxpayers and net more revenue to the Government, notwithstanding that in the same letter he admitted that the amount of money being collected by the internal-revenue bureau had greatly decreased as compared with preceding years. To-day, not-withstanding the tremendous increase in business resulting from the new tariff law, he is supporting a policy of decreasing the number of customs districts on the ground that fewer districts will render better service to the public and at the same time save the Government money. No one can point out any fundamental differences between these two classes of administrative districts. Both are fiscal machinery for collecting money from the public. Consistency would be a virtue, for it is a poor rule which does not work both ways.

On February 1, last, the San Diego customs district was abolished on the request of Mr. Mellon, notwithstanding that official records show that the collections of the district for 1922 had increased over 100 per cent over those of 1921, while the collections for the first six months of the fiscal year 1923 were over 400 per cent over the collections for the preceding six months. The harbor master's report for the San Diego harbor shows that its trade for 1922 had increased over that of 1921, 50 per cent on domestic trade, 250 per cent on intercoastal trade, and 425 per cent on foreign trade. But, notwithstanding these marvelous increases in business transacted by this district, it must fall before the policy of the Treasury Depart-The policy of this same department, however, requires additional revenue districts, even though the work is on the decrease and the collections are less than they have been for a number of years.

You gentlemen may be able to reconcile these two policies; I can not. If it adds efficiency to increase revenue districts, notwithstanding a falling off in business transacted by them, how does it improve the service of customs districts to decrease their number notwithstanding a very heavy increase in work to be performed by them? Let those explain who can.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. Speaker, I make the point that no quorum is present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SNELL). The gentleman from Alabama makes the point of order that no quorum is present. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and sixty-five Members present, not a quorum.

Mr. HICKS. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

Almon Ansorge Anthony

Arentz Atkeson Bird

Bland, Ind. Bewers

Britten Brooks, Ill.

Brown, Tenn. Browne, Wis. Burke Maloney Michaelson Hoch Huck Stoll Sullivan Sullivan
Taylor, Ark.
Taylor, Colo.
Taylor, Tenn.
Ten Eyck
Thomas
Thorpe
Treadway
Upshaw
Walters
Ward, N. Y.
Ward, N. C.
Watson
Wheeler
White, Me.
Williams, Tex.
Wood, Ind.
Woods, Va.
Yates Huck Ireland Montague Moore, III. Jacoway Johnson, Miss. Mudd Johnson, S. Dak. Newton, Mo. Jones, Pa. Olpp Overstreet Kearns Falge Fark, Ga. Kelbey, Mich. Parks, Ark. Kennedy Rind Riodan Riordan Rogers Montague Moore, Ill. Morin Mudd Tenn Byrns, Tenn. Chandler, Okla. Changle, Clague Clark, Fla. Classon Clouse Clouse
Codd
Connolly, Pa.
Crage
Crowther
Cullen
Curry
Davis, Minn.
Denison Kleczka Knight Lanham Denison Drane Edmends Ellis Linthieum Schall Freeman Garner Glynn Little Luhring McArthur Scott. Mich. Shelton Sisson McClintic McFadden Slemp Smith, Mich. Gould Hardy, Tex.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. On this call 317 Members have answered to their names, a quorum.

Mr. HICKS. Mr. Speaker, I move to dispense with further proceedings under the call.

The motion was agreed to.

The doors were opened.

Mr. COLLIER. Mr. Speaker, I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. Andrews].

Mr. ANDREWS of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, this bill proposes an increase of public expenses in the closing days of the session when there appears to be no time for anything except the passing of bridge bills and increasing public expenses by creating new offices. I do not believe the passage of this bill would enlarge the facilities of the taxpayers by the creation of this new internal-revenue district. Let them use the agencles already at hand and employ the necessary deputies and field force to meet the situation.

Moreover, Mr. Speaker, there is another element in the history of these questions that creates suspicion in my mind. Years ago when the Congress passed a law abolishing the fee system for United States attorneys and marshals, it was thought that it covered the whole country. Imagine the sur-prise that developed when we found that the New York gentlemen of that day, not of this day, had incorporated in the bill a clever provision that enabled the district attorney in the city of New York to earn from twelve to fifteen thousand dollars a month. That clever trick raises a suspicion now. Take another example: The Hon. Frank A. Vanderlip, of New York City, who has recently been telling the United States how to grow rich by donating $11,000,000,000 to foreign nations, negotiated the sale of the old customhouse in New York City to the National City Bank. The bank drew its check for the purchase price, less $50,000. That check was immediately turned in her the purchase price. immediately turned in by the representative of the National Treasury at the next window to the receiving teller and placed on deposit and was used by the bank without interest or at a very low rate. The arrangement whereby the deed was withheld from record and $50,000 deferred on the purchase price enabled the bank to escape local and State taxation for several years. Now we are called upon in the closing days of the session to increase the overhead expenses of the internal revenue office in the city of New York. They tell us the collector of internal revenue is the man to whom the people would go to make their tax returns. As a rule the collectors of internal revenue do not understand the law well enough to help anyone make out their tax returns. They are not placed in office for that purpose. They are placed there as executives to handle the trained force of the office that is educated to the interpretation and application of the law to a given state of facts as the taxpayer submits it.

Moreover, why should this House in the closing hours of this Congress follow the chairman of the Committee on Rules and the majority leader in piling up additional expenses for political advantages for somebody in New York City? I am opposed to this bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Nebraska has expired.

Mr. ANDREWS of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The extension of remarks referred to is here printed in full as fellows

Mr. ANDREWS of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, the eighteenth amendment to our Federal Constitution has an important bearing upon the civic and moral welfare of our country. It greatly improves civic affairs by removing the open saloon, which has corrupted American politics to a remarkable degree. It has contributed already a large measure of benefit to the moral welfare of our people by closing the open doors to numerous vices and corruptions that always flowed through the channels of intemperance.

Some of the opponents of that amendment assert that the eighteenth amendment has been a failure because bootleggers and other violators of the law peddle poisonous whisky, which creates drunkenness and sometimes death. The eighteenth amendment does not compel anybody to drink had whisky. It warns them against its use. They seem determined to indulge in drunkenness and even death itself in a vain effort to convince the people of this country and the world that the eighteenth amendment is a failure. If they had observed the requirements of that amendment, drunkenness could have been avoided and lives could have been saved.

may be remarked in passing that the law forbidding stealing does not compel the thief to steal your horse or your money. Such thefts are committed in direct violation of the law, just as drunkenness and the peddling of bad whisky by bootleggers are practiced in direct violation of the law.

There are two agencies that produce all the opposition to the eighteenth amendment and the laws enacted under it. They are appetite and greed for money. These two forces in human nature challenge the peaceful order of society and the constitutions and statutes of the States and Federal Govern-The assertion that prohibition has driven many men to strong drink is ridiculous. Prohibition would save them from that misfortune. Prohibition will save for the drinker his money and his sobriety. Yes; it will save for him his self-respect, his respect for his family, his fellow men, and his God. He by his own choice and largely through the influence of speeches made on the floor of this House in opposition to prohibition marches straightway to misfortune. keeper or bootlegger has ever done or is now doing more harm for the young people of America than the twin brothers that clasp hands on the floor of this House from Boston and Baltimore in opposition to the enforcement of the eighteenth amendment and the laws enacted under it.

We have listened patiently to the intemperate words of the twins from Boston and Baltimore-Messrs. TINKHAM and HILL. They have said and done everything in their power to embarrass and prevent the enforcement of the eighteenth amendment and the laws enacted under it.

would be somewhat unparliamentary to enter into a minute description of things they have done and said in their methods of opposition. Let me call your attention to the widespread debauchery that would prevail in the affairs of this country if some incidents in their recent campaigns should be made the general practice of the Nation. Think of the humiliation that any thoughtful person must realize in his sane moments when he recalls the fact that in a congressional constituency the issue in the campaign turned upon the question as to which candidate was wetter than the other. Think of candidates standing upon beer kegs costreet corners and declaring that they are wetter than anybody else and expect to secure the votes of their fellow citizens for that reason. How can any man with self-respect rest comfortably in his seat in this House having been elected under circumstances of that kind? Such an example as this only illustrates the horrible condition to which the opponents of the eighteenth amendment, the twins from Boston and Baltimore, invite us.

Yes; and there is another gentleman from Boston, Mr. Galli-VAN, who has recently joined the twins, thus forming the triple alliance, whose sole mission seems to be the restoration and reenthronement of King Gambrinus in the kingdom of booze. Think of their exalted ideas of national integrity, honor, and sobriety! Under such leadership what would our Nation be-The people would degenerate to the plane of slavery under the rule of King Gambrinus in his realm of booze.

Back of this triple alliance stands the national association against the prohibition amendment, with headquarters at 511 Eleventh Street NW., Washington, D. C. They announce the first plank in their platform as follows: "Beer and light wines now, but no saloons ever." Think of that ridiculous statement. Meditate upon the deception that it implies. If they had beer and wines free and unlimited, they would demand the return of the saloons in some form as places of necessary distribu-tion. Do you suppose they would stand meekly aside and look upon an unlimited quantity of beer and wine without demanding an opportunity to use it? The distribution would necessitate the opening of places in the form of saloons.

That organization claims that it will have the active support and votes of a large number of new Members in the next Congress on the ground that it helped to elect them. It indorsed them openly before the congressional elections in 1922, and now claims their support for the favors thus extended them. It claims the active support and the votes of three Members from Nebraska whom they indorsed prior to the congressional election in 1922, namely, the Hon. John H. Morehead, the Hon. Edgar Howard, and the Hon. A. C. Shallenberger. The people of Nebraska will watch with care to see whether those men deliver their votes to the wets in the next Congress or not. It is assumed that the national association opposed to the prohibition amendment-eighteenth-had pledges upon that point before the public indorsements were made. The people of Nebraska recognize the fact that the confidence of that association was wisely placed when it made the indorsements.

In that campaign thousands and hundreds of thousands of the temperance people of the country took it for granted that their cause was invincible. In short, they were asleep at the

In the next campaign they must be diligent from first to last in order that they may put the enemies of temperance to rout in every section of the country. The challenge is on, and every temperance man or woman that sleeps on the job will betray a sacred trust and a grave public duty.

This fight for beer and wine for public distribution began when President Wilson submitted his message to the extra session of the Sixty-sixth Congress in 1919. In that message he urged the repeal of war-time prohibition, and emphasized that proposition anew on the 28th of October, 1919, when he vetoed the Volstead bill. If his health and strength had been preserved he would surely have been the leader of the Democracy in the presidential campaign of 1920. When ill-health forced him out of the race the wet forces were thrown into confusion and floundered about until they finally selected Governor Cox, of Ohio, as their presidential standard bearer in

The wets on the floor of this House have already suggested the name of Governor Smith, of New York, on a beer and wine platform as the Democratic nominee for the Presidency in 1924. What will Mr. Bryan and his followers do in the next national Democratic campaign? Will they be able to resist the tide now flowing through the channels of the Democratic Party demanding the repeal of the eighteenth amendment and the laws enacted under it?

The issue has been joined. Shall the eighteenth amendment live and be enforced, or shall it be repealed by the Democratic forces of the country and beer and wine restored to the public through the return of the saloons in some form? What will be the answer? Will the churches and the temperance organizations of the United States close their eyes to the nature of the contest? Will any one of them sit idly by while the enemy is alert and doing everything in his power to return the saloons to American life for the debauchery of American citizens and American politics?

The clock of time has struck the hour for renewed battle. Let the temperance forces of America arise and march to vic-tory, as they can and will if due diligence and patriotic service are properly exercised.

Mr. COLLIER. Mr. Speaker, I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Garrett].

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, of course, if the premises of the gentlemen from New York, Mr. MILLS, Mr. HUSTED, and others, were correct, to wit, that this position is needed, it would not be a sufficient answer to say that it is merely the creation of a new job; but the truth is that there is no more reason that I can see for creating a new collector of internal revenue in New York City than there is for creating a new postmaster somewhere in the city of New York. I have here a copy of the New York Times of February 28. not the time to read all there is, but it gives in detail the arrangements that have been made in that great city, the greatest in the world, for branch offices at which people can obtain blanks and obtain assistance in making out their returns. Of course, that can be extended indefinitely without the creation of a new collector. What is needed to expedite the business there is not a new collector but the requisite number of assistants, and they can be furnished and are being furnished if the report contained in this paper is correct. Therefore it does come back to the proposition, and it is legitimate to say it here, that this is primarily a proposition merely intended to create a new position for the benefit of some individual and not for the benefit of the public service. reason, Mr. Speaker, I am opposed to it and shall resist its passage to the extent of my ability. [Applause.]
Mr. MILLS. Mr. Speaker, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Beeg].

Mr. BEGG. Mr. Speaker, any move that will bring convenience to the great mass of the citizenship of the country ought to have the united support of both sides of the House. There should not be any partisan feeling about a question of service to the Government; and it does not come with very great force to have been on the Democratic side say that the only reason for it is to create a new job, when the facts of the case are that one-fourth of the total revenue of the United States is taken care of by one-eleventh of the internal revenue collectors; and if any readjustment of the revenue collectors were to be made it would be at the deprivation of the service that is being given to some of these gentlemen in their sections of the country, and they certainly would not advocate that. Just what are the facts? As has been stated here, more than 200,000 men are made to go 150 miles to get service. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Garrett] said, of course, that you could put subordinates out there, just as many of them as you wish. If you do that, the cost will be just as great as if you put a principal out there and fewer subordinates; and on the other hand, even if you were to do that, the average taxpayer does not like to deal with a subordinate official. As small a taxpayer as I am, I like to go and see the internal revenue collector over contested points, so that when I make my return and pay my money I know that I am not overpaying the

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Did the gentleman ever get a final answer out of any internal revenue collector?

Mr. BEGG. Oh, indeed I have; and to-day I am taking up all of my contested-tax cases with the internal revenue collector, first, to get his recommendation, and it has its weight and big influence in straightening out things even here in

One objection is made that it has been determined beforehand who is going to be appointed. It seems to me that the sporting blood in every one of you gentlemen on the Democratic side would say that it is none of your business who they appoint in New York under a Republican administration. Suppose the tables were turned, and that you had control of the House, and you needed an internal revenue collector in New Orleans or in Charleston or in any other place, would you believe that we were trying to serve our Government, and would you believe that we were good sportsmen politically, if we said that we would not vote for the bill simply because you determined the matter of appointment beforehand? The men in control of politics in New York have a right to select the internal revenue collector, and the only question that ought to have any bearing with us is whether or not they need the office. I want to say one word now to the gentlemen on the Republican side.

The Democrats have tried to make a partisan question out of this matter of whether or not they need an internal revenue collector in New York. I appeal to the united support of the men on the Republican side to stand by our administration right in the closing hours of this Congress. The gentleman from California [Mr. Swing] objects to the passage of this resolution upon the ground that they closed a customs office in That is a very poor argument.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that a quorum of the House is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Alabama makes the point of order that there is no quorum present. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and ninetyseven Members present, not a quorum.

Mr. HICKS. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

The motion was agreed to. The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

Davis, Minn, Denison Drane Echols Ellis Favrot Kahn Keller Kelley, Mich. Kennedy Kincheloe Kindred Montague Moore, Ill. Moores, Ind. Mudd Nelson, Me. Newton, Mo. Olpp Overstreet Almon Ansorge Benham Bland, Ind. Brennan King Kitchin Kleczka Kline, N. Y. Knight Lanham Briggs Britten Olpp Overstreet Paige Park, Ga. Parks, Ark. Patterson, Mo. Rainey, Ala. Riordan Rodenberg Freeman Frothingham Brooks, Ill. Brown, Tenn. Browne, Wis. Chandler, Okla. Garner Gifford Gorman Gould Chandler, Okic Clague Clark, Fla. Classon Codd Collins Connolly, Pa. Copley Crago Crowther Cullen Larson, Minn. Lazaro Linthieum Hardy, Colo, Hardy, Tex. Hardy, 1ex. Hays Henry Jacoway Johnson, Miss. Johnson, S. Dak. Lubring
McClintic
McDuffie
McFadden
McPherson Rogers Rose Rosenbloom Ryan Schall Scott, Mich. Jones, Pa. Jones, Tex. Maloney Michaelson Shelton

Sisson Slemp Smith, Mich. Stedman Stiness Stoll Sullivan

Summers, Wash. Swing
Taylor, Ark.
Taylor, Colo.
Thomas
Thorpe
Tillman

Upshaw Ward, N. Y. Ward, N. C. Wheeler White, Me. Williams, Tex.

Wood, Ind. Woods, Va. Woodyard Wright Zihlman

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Three hundred and twelve Members have answered to their names.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I move to dispense with further proceedings under the call.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Doorkeeper will open the

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the remainder of my time and demand a vote on the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York yields back the remainder of his time, and the question is on the motion of the gentleman from New York to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table—

Mr. BLANTON. I make the point of order that after the yeas and nays are ordered, the roll call can not be interrupted.

Mr. MADDEN. I want to send to conference the deficiency

Mr. BLANTON. I insist on the point of order.
Mr. MADDEN. Time is precious now.
Mr. BLANTON. There are some things which the gentleman ought to explain before that bill goes to conference.

Mr. MADDEN. I will explain when I come back.
Mr. BLANTON. It will not go to conference until the gentleman can give assurances that we shall be permitted to vote on certain propositions.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk had not started to call the roll.

Mr. BLANTON. I make the point of order that when the yeas and nays are demanded and the Chair says there is a sufficient number, the roll call must be had then. But if the gentleman from Illinois will answer some questions I may not press the point of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. If there is objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. MADDEN. I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 14408, disagree to all the Senate amendments, and ask for a conference.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?
Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object,
I would like to ask the gentleman a question or two.

Mr. MADDEN. I will be glad to answer.
Mr. BLANTON. In regard to the $400,000 additional that is placed in this bill for the so-called Fact Finding Coal Commission, of course that will have to come back for the approval of the House, as it is legislation.

Mr. MADDEN. I will be glad to bring it back.

Mr. BLANTON. I wanted to get the gentleman's attitude on that question.

Mr. MADDEN. I do not think I ought to be asked to do that, but I will bring that back and I will give the House a chance to vote on it.

Mr. BLANTON. A chance to vote will not be worth anything with the whole administration's leader and its forces behind

Mr. MADDEN. But then the bill has to be disposed of in some way or other.

Mr. BLANTON. There is another matter. There is $117,000 in the bill that is designed to remodel one of the conservatories down here in the Botanical Gardens. There is a distinct proposition of great importance involved in the matter. There is a vital question involving the removal of the Botanical Gardens from its present site, and the removal question will largely depend upon what is done with this appropriation for that conservatory. If the Senate amendment is adopted, then probably the Botanical Gardens will be removed; hence will the gentleman give us his attitude on that question?

Mr. MADDEN. I can say personally that I am against the Senate amendment, although I will not bind anybody else.
Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman will bring that item back to us?

Mr. MADDEN. I can not say that. Mr. BLANTON. That is legislation. Mr. MADDEN. No; I do not think so.

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman having decided it is not legislation, contrary to the view of others, will he assure us that he will give us a chance to vote on that proposition?

Mr. MADDEN. I can not give any assurance except what I have said.

Mr. BLANTON. Then I object, Mr. Speaker.
Mr. MADDEN. Of course, if the gentleman does not want this bill to pass, I am satisfied.

Mr. BLANTON. I would rather have the bill killed than to agree to its new provisions, one of which removes the Botanical

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from New York to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 211, nays 94, answered "present" 2, not voting 119, as follows:

YEAS-211.

Anderson	Faust	Kraus	Rhodes
Andrew, Mass.	Fenn	Kreider	Riordan
Anthony	Fess	Lampert	Roach
Appleby	Fish	Langley	Robertson
Arentz	Fitzgerald	Lawrence	Robsion
Atkeson	Focht	Layton	Rogers
Bacharach	Fordney	Leatherwood	Rossdale
Barbour	Foster	Lee, N. Y.	Sanders, Ind.
Beek	Frear	Lehlbach	Sanders, N. Y
Beedy	French	Lineberger	Shaw
Begg	Frothingham	Little
Bixler	Fuller	London	Shreve
Bland, Ind.	Funk		Siegel
Boies	Gahn	Longworth	Sinclair
		Luce	Sinnott
Bond	Gensman	McCormick	Smith, Idaho
Bowers	Gernerd	McKenzie	Snell
Britten	Gifford	McLaughlin, Mich	Snyder
Brooks, Pa.	Glynn	McLaughlin, Nebr	.Speaks
Burdick	Goodykoontz	McLaughlin, Pa.	Sproul
Burton	Graham, III.	McPherson	Stafford
Butler	Graham, Pa.	MacGregor	Stephens
Cable	Green, Iowa	MacGregor MacLafferty	Strong, Kans.
Campbell, Kans.	Greene, Mass.		Strong, Pa.
Campbell, Pa.	Griest	Magee	Sweet
Cannon	Hadley	Mapes	Taylor, N. J.
Carew	Hardy, Celo.	Merritt	Temple
Chalmers	Hawley	Michener	Thompson
Chandler, N. Y.	Hersey	Miller	Tilson
Chindblom	Hickey	Mills	Timberlake
Christopherson	Higher	Mondell	Tincher
Clague	Hill	Moore, Ohio	Tinkham
Clarke, N. Y.	Himes
Clouse	Hoch	Morin	Towner
Cole, Iowa	Hogan	Mott	Underhill
Colton	Fluck	Murphy	Vaile
Cooper, Ohio	Hukriede		Vestal
Cooper, Wis.	Hull	Nolan	Voigt
Couper, W18,		Norton	Volk
Coughlin Cramton	Humphrey, Nebr.	Ogden	Volstead
Станитон	Humphreys, Miss.	Parker, N. J.	Walters
Curry	Husted	Parker, N. Y.	Ward, N. Y.
Dale	Hutchinson	Patterson, N. J.	Wason
Dallinger	Ireland	Perkins	Webster
Darrow	Jefferis, Nebr.	Perlman	White, Kans.
Dempsey	Johnson, Wash.	Petersen	Williams, Ill.
Dickinson	Kearns	Pringey	Williamson
Dowell	Kendall	Purnell	Wilson
Dunn	Ketcham	Radcliffe	Winslow
Dupré	Kiess	Ramseyer	Wurzbach
Dyer	Kirkpatrick	Ransley	Wyant
Edmonds	Kissel		Yates
Elliott	Kline, Pa.	Reece	Young
Evans	Knutson	Reed N V	Zihlman
Fairchild	Kopp	Reed, N. Y. Reed, W. Va.	MINIMUM.
ALC: NO SALES
	NAV	8_04

Abernethy
Andrews, Nebr.
Aswell
Bankhead
Barkley
Bell
Black
Bland, Va.
Blanton
Bowling
Box
Brand
Briggs
Buchanan
Bulwinkle
Burke
Byrnes, S. C.
Bryns, Tenn.
Carter
Collier
Collins
Connally, Tex.
Crisp
Davis, Tenn.

NA	15-94.
Deal Dominick Doughton Dorwry Favrot Fields Fisher Fulmer Gallivan Garrett, Tenn. Garrett, Tex. Gilbert Goldsborough Hammer Hcrrick Hooker Huddleston Hudspeth James Jeffers, Ala. Johnson, Ky. Jones, Tex. Kelly, Pa. Kunz	Lankford Larsen, Ga. Lea, Calif. Lee, Ga. Logan Lowrey Lyon McSwain Martin Mead Moore, Va. Nelson, J. M. O'Brien O'Connor Oldfield Oliver Pou Quin Rainey, III. Raker Rankin Ricketts Rouse Sabath	Sanders, Tex Sandlin Sears Sisson Smithwick Steagall Stedman Stevenson Sumners, Tex Swank Tague Taylor, Ark. Ten Eyck Tillman Tucker Turner Tyson Vinson Wingo Wise Woodruff Wright

AND RESIDENCE OF THE PARTY OF T		SCHOOL PAR
ANSWERED	44	PRESENT "-2
Driver		McArthur

		AND SOME DATES.
	NOT VO	TING-119.
Ackerman Almon	Brooks, Ill.	Classon
Ansorge	Brown, Tenn. Browne, Wis.	Codd Cole, Ohio
Benham	Burtness	Connolly, P
Bird Blakeney	Cantrill Chandler, Okla.	Copley Crago
Brennan	Clark, Fia.	Crowther

Cullen
	Min	n.
Deniso	a	And
Drane	Com
Dunba: Echols	Total !
17114-

	Fairfield Free Free Free Freeman Garner Gorman Gould Greene, Vt. Griffin Hardy, Tex. Haugen Hawes Hayden Hays Henry Jacoway Johnson, Miss. Johnson, S. Dak. Jones, Pa. Kahn Keller Keller, Mich. Kennedy Kincheloe	Kindred King Kitchin Kieczka Kilne, N. Y. Knight Lanham Larson, Minn. Lazaro Linthicum Luhring McClintic McDuffle McFaddea Maloney Mansfield Michaelson Montague Moore, Ill. Morgan Mudd Nclson, Me. Nelson, A. P.	Newton, Minn. Newton, Mo. Olpp Overstreet Paige Park, Ga. Parks, Ark. Patterson, Mo. Paul Porter Rainey, Ala. Rayburn Riddick Rodenberg Rose Rosenbloom Rucker Ryan Schall Scott, Mich. Scott, Tenu. Shelton Slemp	Smith, Mich. Steenerson Stiness Stoil Sullivan Summers, Wash Swing Taylor, Colo. Taylor, Tenn. Thomas Thorpe Treadway Upshaw Ward, N. C. Watson Weaver Wheeler White, Me. Williams, Tex. Wood, Ind. Woods, Va. Woodyard
--	--	--	--	---

So, two-thirds having voted in the affirmative, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On the vote:

Mr. Keller with Mr. Almon. Mr. McFadden with Mr. Taylor of Colorado.

Mr. Paige with Mr. Griffin.

Mr. Treadway with Mr. Williams of Texas. Mr. White of Maine with Mr. Jacoway.

Mr. Kiess with Mr. Linthicum.

Mr. Scott of Michigan with Mr. Sullivan.

Mr. Greene of Vermont with Mr. Woods of Virginia. Mr. Michaelson with Mr. Cantrill.

Mr. Patterson of Missouri with Mr. Thomas.

Mr. Wood of Indiana with Mr. Kindred. Mr. King with Mr. Mansfield.

Mr. Connolly of Pennsylvania with Mr. Rayburn.

Mr. Newton of Missouri with Mr. Stoll.

Mr. Porter with Mr. Upshaw

Mr. Brown of Wisconsin with Mr. Cullen. Mr. Rosenbloom with Mr. Hawes

Mr. Moore of Illinois with Mr. Park of Georgia.

Mr. Shelton with Mr. Montague.

Mr. Steiness with Mr. Kincheloe. Mr. Summers of Washington with Mr. Hardy of Texas.

Mr. Swing with Mr. Drane.

Mr. Morgan with Mr. Ward of North Carolina.
Mr. Kline of New York with Mr. Clark of Florida.
Mr. Smith of Michigan with Mr. Weaver.

Mr. Mudd with Mr. Overstreet. Mr. Ackerman with Mr. Garner. Mr. Cole of Ohio with Mr. Hayden.

Mr. Free with Mr. Kitchin. Mr. Kahn with Mr. McClintic.

Mr. Jones of Pennsylvania with Mr. Parks of Arkansas.

Mr. Denison with Mr. Rucker.
Mr. Freeman with Mr. Johnson of Mississippi.
Mr. Crowther with Mr. Lazaro.
Mr. Johnson of South Dakota with Mr. Rainey of Alabama.

Mr. Davis of Minnesota with Mr. McDuffie.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Crockett, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 13774) to amend the revenue act of 1921 in respect to exchanges of property.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendment the bill (H. R. 14144) to limit and fix the time within which suits may be brought or rights asserted in court arising out of the provisions of subdivision 3 of section 302 of the soldiers and sailors' civil relief act, approved March 18, 1918, being chapter 20, volume 40, General Statutes of the United States, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendment the bill (H. R. 13430) to amend section 370 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments the bill (H. R. 14077) to extend the benefits of section 14 of the pay readjustment act of June 10, 1922, to validate certain payments made to National Guard and reserve officers and warrent officers, and for other purposes, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills and joint resolutions of the following titles:

H. R. 7851. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to provide for the appointment of a district judge, district attorney, and marshal for the western district of South Carolina, and for other purposes," approved September 1, 1916, so as to provide for the terms of the district court to be held at Spartanburg, S. C.

H. R. 11477. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Freeburn Toll Bridge Co. to construct a bridge across the Tug

Fork of Big Sandy River, in Pike County, Ky. H. J. Res. 256. Joint resolution proposing payment to certain employees of the United States.

H. R. 14324. An act to amend section 107 of the act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the " approved March 3, 1911, as heretofore amended. Judiciary.

H. R. 14309. An act to amend section 206 of the transportation act of 1920.

H. R. 14135. An act to amend an act approved September 8, 1916, providing for holding sessions of the United States district court in the district of Maine, and for other purposes.

H. R. 14082. An act to authorize the Valley Transfer Railway Co., a corporation, to construct and operate a line of railway in and upon the Fort Snelling Military Reservation, in the State of Minnesota.

H. R. 13998. An act making section 1535c of the Code of Law for the District of Columbia applicable to the municipal court of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

H. R. 13205. An act for the relief of the American Trust Co. H. R. 13024. An act for the relief of August Nelson.

H. R. 13004. An act authorizing the Secretary of War to lease to the Kansas Electric Power Co., its successors and assigns, a certain tract of land in the military reservation at Fort Leaven-

H. R. 13612. An act authorizing the issuance of patent to the legal representatives of Miles J. Davis, deceased.

H. R. 14087. An act for the creation of an American Battle Monuments Commission to erect suitable memorials commemorating the services of the American soldier in Europe, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed a bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 4528. An act for the relief of the Kansas City, Mexico &

Orient Railroad of Texas, Oklahoma, and Kansas.

THIRD DEFICIENCY BILL, 1923.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois offers a resolution, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Madden moves to suspend the rules and pass the following: "Resolved, That the bill H. R. 14408, with the amendments of the Senate thereto, be taken from the Speaker's table, that the Senate amendments thereto be disagreed to, that a conference be requested with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that the Speaker pro tempore, without intervening motion, appoint the managers on the part of the House."

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas de-

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered. Is there objection?

There was no objection.
Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I reserve my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, it is a very peculiar situation when the chairman of the great Committee on Appropriations moves to suspend the rules and send to conference the eighth deficiency bill passed during the present Sixty-seventh Congress, involving $154,000,000 when it left the House-I think that was the sum. Since it left us there have been added to it hundreds of thousands of dollars more on items, many of which are legislative and on some of which at least this House has placed its condemnation. That is done; yet we can get no assurance whatever from the distinguished chairman in the closing hours of this Congress that we will be given another right to pass upon those questions.

We are the Representatives of the people, we Members of the House. We come directly from the people every two years. We are more directly responsible to the people in our districts than are our brethren at the other end of the Capitol. It is my colleagues here whom the people of this country hold chiefly responsible for the expenditure of public money. want to ask you whether you are going to act blindly in this matter and send this bill to conference without some assurance that we will have the right finally to pass upon these new items in this measure?

Let me call your attention to one of the small items involved in this bill. You may say it involves only $117,000 for the building of a new conservatory in the Botanic Garden. If it involved only that I would not say a word. But there is a bigger question behind it than that. Through this amendment placed upon this bill some people in this District are seeking to remove the Botanic Garden from its present position and send it out to the outskirts of this city where land will be unloaded on the Government at an enormous price, yet not worth one-tenth of what they are asking for it; and you will destroy one of the beautiful features of Washington, because there are many tourists who come to Washington who have not the time to go out on the outskirts of the city to visit a Botanic Garden

In its present position they do have an opportunity to visit it, and they take advantage of it to go there and see the beautiful park, the flowers, and the plants and get valuable information from Superintendent Hess. That is the principle involved in this one minor amendment. Just as sure as this Congress adopts that Senate amendment, just so sure as the sun shines, that Botanical Garden is going to be moved. We are going to lose it. I am not in favor of it.

Now, you have given already to the fact-finding coal commission $200,000. You did that last October. You did it through the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Winsnow], a man for whom I have the greatest admiration. I believe, from my knowledge gained of him here since we have been in Congress together, that that legislation did not appeal to him personally, but he had to favor it under whip and spur, just like you have to do things when the administration demands Thus only last October you gave this coal commission $200,000 of the people's money. What benefit have the people derived from it? Oh, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Rogers], when I objected to this coming up the other day, said it had been of great benefit in forcing the operators to adopt the wage scale, and that was for the benefit of the people.

I just got a telegram from a man in West Virginia whom I never saw and do not know. I asked some of his State delegation about him, and they say he is a substantial citizen of that I want to read the telegram to you, because he says what has been in my mind, and I think in the minds of the American people. The people of the country during this terrible winter, especially in New England and the Northwest, have been without adequate fuel. The poor people of Washington are paying $16.75 for their coal when they ought to get it for $10 a ton. Let me show you what the American people are thinking about this. Here is the telegram:

BECKLEY, W. VA., March 2, 1923,

Congressman BLANTON, Washington, D. C.:

Washington, D. C.:

Have noticed your debate with Congressman Rocers over further moneys to United States Coal Commission and Congressman Rogers's statement "that this commission has already proven its worth by providing a wage settlement for another year in the bituminous industry." We wonder if it has ever occurred to Congressman Rogers that by the interference of this coal commission last January there was fastened upon the American coal consumers a further extension for 12 months' time of the highest wage ever paid the bituminous coal miner; and inasmuch as 70 per cent of the cost of producing coal is in wages there is bound to be reflected on the American people a continuation of the present high price of coal. The United States Coal Commission has already placed a burden amounting to millions of dollars upon our people by their action in advising that the now very high wage scale be continued for another 12 months. Why should our Government provide additional funds to carry on this farce?

Geo. Wolfe.

Now, my colleagues, some of you remind me of the position which the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Underhill] took a few hours ago. He said he was in favor of passing a law that on the 4th of March next all the new Congressmen and others should begin traveling over the United States on the people's money to learn things. He said that it would make them broader; he said that it would give them broader vision, make them broader men so that they would not vote for their localities against the interest of the whole people.

Then I picked up yesterday's RECORD and noticed that when the rural credit bill came up which affects every farmer in the United States, out of a delegation of 16 men in Massachusetts, there were but 2 who voted for that general measure. Two votes only for it from Massachusetts, Mr. Underhill's name votes only for it from Massachusetts. Mr. UnderHILL's name was with the bunch who voted against that general measure. He said he had traveled down the Mississippi Valley, intimating that it was at Government expense, and that he had been broadened by it. [Laughter.] I want to say to my friends that since 1906 I have made seven visits to the city of Boston, but not at public expense and for every time not a dollar came from the

I believe in traveling and so do the Texas people, but the Texas people believe that when they travel they ought to pay their own expenses. The Texas people believe that instead of giving $600,000 to the coal fact-finding commission they would rather have some definite step taken that will see to it that next winter they will not be compelled to pay $16.75 That is what the Texas people are interested in.

You say you do not want to stop this work. You say you want the facts. I will tell you what you want to do-possibly the Democrats have been partly responsible for the necessity In the last election we had no business to make so many lame ducks in this Congress. We are partly to blame, because it seems to be the policy of the present administration to give a fat job to every man who is retiring. So that you see we Democrats are possibly partly to blame.

Mr. Speaker, how much time have I consumed?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman has nine minutes remaining.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield four minutes to the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. GOODYKOONTZ].
Mr. GOODYKOONTZ. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, when the bill creating the fact-finding commission was before the House, the Representatives in Congress from my State, while not believing that any good would ever come out of the proposition, felt that since a great many people believed in commissions and that in order to remedy a bad situation all that was necessary was to appoint a commission—since the people were taking that view of the matter the solid delegation in the House from West Virginia, a great coal-producing State, voted as a unit for the bill. The bill provided an authorization of $200,000 to carry on the work. Now they tell us that the fund has been exhausted, and they are demanding $400,000 more, and by a bill for an enabling act, which will come before no doubt they will seek to perpetuate the body indefinitely The commission is costing the coal industry millions of dollars. A coal operator in my State has informed me that the coal commission had demanded of his company copies of a record so great in volume that the company had to send off to a neighboring city to get a photographer to figure on the cost of making the necessary photographic copies of the record.

the House this afternoon, they propose to extend the life of the commission. So that the object now is to extend the life of the commission until long after the next Congress meets and then

The estimate that the photographer made was that the cost of making the copies would amount to $28,000. The commission demands that the operator go back for years and years and copy the pay rolls, go through old books of accounts, and bring over here a complete exhibit. Why is that being done? Because there is a man on this commission who once had something to do with the Federal Trade Commission, which latter concern does nothing but gather and pile up useless data. One of the things the coal commission proposes to do is to inquire into the titles of coal mines—as to "the ownership and title of the mines." I presume they will want to employ a battery of a thousand or more lawyers to search out all of the titles of the mine holders in the country. Are we going to stand for that sort of thing, we men of the majority who are pledged to economy and to the observance of the mandate of the law of the Budget? Are we going to provide permanent jobs for these people so that they may install themselves in nice comfortable places where they can employ themselves leisurely? When the vernal breezes begin to blow and the ice goes off the Great Lakes in the North, when coal shall be selling cheap, then the members of the commission will come forward and proclaim what a wonderful work they had accomplished, when as a matter of fact all that they have accomplished thus far is the fastening onto the people of the country for another year coal at prices as high as any that have heretofore prevailed in this country

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, the last sentence of the telegram I was reading when my colleague became facetious shows that this citizen wanted to know why all of this expense should be foisted on the American taxpayer when there was no benefit to be derived from it.

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. Does the gentleman know why this coal operator does not want an investigation of the whole coal business?

Mr. BLANTON. I do not know that, but I do know this: The gentleman says that he is a coal operator. He knows more about it than I do. If he is a coal operator, I know this, that the coal operators and the coal miners have been playing this game together for 25 years, and they have been grinding the consumers between the upper and the nether millstones until they can hardly pay their taxes.

Mr. MADDEN. And now the gentleman wants to stop an investigation of that situation.

Mr. BLANTON. Oh, if I had not been in this House for six years and watched investigations, if I had not read the reports that the distinguished special committee on investigation made in the Bergdoll case, I might take some stock in these things, but in that particular case we found out how much money it cost the Government, and then, besides, I have watched for the distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Madden] and the rest of his leaders, the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. Mon-DELL] and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL] and the balance of you to call up that report, and I know that they have all left that report sleep solemnly in a pigeonhole for months and months, although that select committee asked the Congress to take some action against the men who were responsible for Bergdoll's release, but not a single thing has ever been done about that report. I have watched them until I have become discouraged. I have never seen a fact-finding commission yet in the six years that I have been here that has ever brought a penny of benefit to the tax-paying people of the country, and that is why I am against your $600,000 fact-finding coal commission. It brings no relief.

This special select committee to investigate Bergdoll cost the Government $6,441.85. The special select committee presided over by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. with its trip to the Pacific coast cost the Government $43,969.04. The special select committee presided over by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Graham] cost the Government $157,109.91. The Special Select Agricultural Committee in its travels over the United States cost the Government $10,913.21 for the House portion alone. And when I get time I will show how useless they have been.

Just as that fellow said from West Virginia, the operators under the rule of this commission have had to pay the highest wage scale known in the history of this country for the next 12 months, and the people, the poor people of this Nation, have to bear the burden and the consequences. If they get coal at all they have to pay prices that a poor man can not pay, and if they had the money right now they could not get the coal. I am a Member of Congress, and I have good credit, but I have not got a hundred pounds of coal in my cellar to-day, and if a blizzard should come to-morrow I would have a hard time possibly getting coal unless I could borrow it from my neighbors. This coal commission has not done one cent of good. I am against spending $600,000 of the people's money in keeping Federal patronage officeholders in fat jobs for the next two

Mr. MADDEN. This commission is not going to exist for

Mr. BLANTON. I am but following the footsteps once set by my distinguished colleague from Illinois [Mr. Madden], because what I know about economy I learned from him four years ago. However, he has forgotten it all in the last four years while I have not, and still remembering the lesson that I learned from him I endeavor to practice it. Since the gentleman has been elevated to the chairmanship of this great committee he has been placed, unfortunately for the people of the country, where he can not carry on the fights for economy that he used to carry on. I follow like one of his shadows in the House and I am trying to do what he can not do; I am trying to do what he used to do, but which, by reason of present environ-ment, he is kept from doing now. Somebody must do it, some Republicans and some Democrats, if we are to save this Government from bankruptcy. I hope you will not send this bill to conference until we have had an assurance from the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] that he is going to give us a chance to vote for every single item in the bill of any consequence which the House has not passed on heretofore.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a vote.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the resolution offered by the gentleman from Illinois.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Blanton) there were—ayes 197, noes 6.
So (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the resolution was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore appointed the following con-

Mr. MADDEN, Mr. ANTHONY, and Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee.

COAL FACT-FINDING COMMISSION.

Mr. WINSLOW. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill S. 4160, as amended, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. WINSLOW. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill S. 4160, as amended, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the first paragraph of the pact of Congress entition and a to to establish a commession relative to increase and the commerce in coal, and for other purposes," approved September 22, 1922, is amended to read as follows:

"That for the purpose of securing information in connection with problems arising out of and connected with the coal industry, there is hereby established a governmental agency to be known and designated as the United States Coal Commission, to be composed of not more than severn members appointed by the Frederick Coal and state of courts of the United States shall be eligible for appointment as members of commission, and the appointment, qualification, and service of a judge as member shall in no wise affect or impair his tenure as fudge. No trives shall be eligible to serve on said commission, and service of a judge as member shall in no wise affect or impair his tenure as fudge. No trives shall be eligible to serve on said commission. Said commission shall elect a chairman by majority rote of its members and shall maintain central offices in the District of Columbla, but may, whenever it deems if necessary, meet at such other place as it may determine the service of the commission of the commission of the commission will be shall receive a sainty of $7.500 a year, except that if a judge of any court of the United States serves as a stary as judge, and shall receive no salary as a member of the commission, but any such judge here are such as a such as a stary as judge, and in the service of the commission, shall be allowed for make while necessarily away from his place of official residence as judge and in the service of the commission, shall be allowed for make while necessarily away from his place of official residence as judge and in the service of the commission, shall be indived in the commission

SEC. 4. That the last paragraph of such act of September 22, 1922, is amended to read as follows:

"There is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $600,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be available until expended, for carrying out the provisions of this act."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second. Mr. WINSLOW. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Massa-chusetts is entitled to 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Alabama to 20 minutes.

Mr. WINSLOW. Mr. Speaker, I yield seven minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. LEA], a member of the com-

Mr. LEA of California, Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that the experiences of millions of coal consumers in the United States during the past 12 months should assure this bill an earnest and friendly consideration by the House. Before attempting to explain the proposed amendments embodied in this bill, I desire to say, contrary to what has been asserted here, there is no provision extending the life of the commission appointed last fall.

The first amendment proposed is in section 1 which makes judges of the Federal courts of the United States eligible for appointment to membership on the commission. The existing law prohibits the appointment of any judge to such a position as this where his salary exceeds $2,000 a year unless the appointment is specifically authorized by law. So this section specifically authorizes the appointment of a Federal judge. Judge Alschuler, appointed to the Federal court under President Wilson, was appointed a member of this commission. Then the legal objection was raised which prohibited his serving. The adoption of this amendment would permit the continuation of Judge Alschuler as a member of this commission.

In the second place this bill provides for a questionnaire to be sent out to persons having information concerning matters under investigation requiring them to return to the coal commission under oath answers in writing in response to any questions so submitted. There are in the United States 8,000 coal mines. It is utterly impossible to take a deposition from each of those coal-mining concerns. Therefore, this questionnaire is considered important in order to make the information secured by the commission comprehensive, complete, and reliable.

Section 3 provides for two things fundamentally. The first part of the section makes it a crime to refuse to furnish testimony required by the commission, whether by oral or written testimony. The latter part of section 3 makes it a criminal offense to give false testimony in reference to the questions submitted by the coal commission. These provisions are not essentially new or novel. Provisions much the same in sub-stance are found in the Federal Trade Commission act, the Tariff Commission act, and in the interstate commerce act.

The last paragraph in the original bill on page 5 simply makes the Federal courts available for the commission in order to invoke their aid to compel the production of testimony and enforce obedience to the subpænus of the coal commission.

The final proposal in this bill is section 4, which amends the last paragraph of the existing law by providing that the commission shall be authorized to expend $600,000 for the purpose of carrying on the investigation instead of the sum of $200,000 originally authorized. That is the most important of these proposed amendments. I want to call to the serious attention of the House a few things in this connection. In the first place we have already crossed the bridge as to whether or not there shall be an investigation. The investigation has been authorized and it is now being conducted. In the second place, I can say without reservation that the President appointed a commission of well-known men of the highest character and intelligence. No one that I know of in the slightest degree familiar with the reputation of those splendid members of the coal commission doubts their ability or their sincerity of purpose, men regard the additional funds vital to the success of the investigation.

The coal industry of this country involves an investment of over $2,000,000,000. In includes 8,000 mines. We have coal enough in this country to supply the necessary wants of the consumer for 3,000 or 4,000 years to come. Nevertheless, for months people in homes have suffered for lack of sufficient coal to keep them warm. Although prices are extortionate they are still unable to get the coal required for ordinary domestic and commercial purposes.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired. Mr. LEA of California. May I have two minutes additional? Mr. WINSLOW. I yield the gentleman two additional min-

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEA of California. I will.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I have not been able to get a copy of the bill, and I would like to have the gentleman inform me if this measure carries a provision to the effect that questionnaires can be sent out to operators and others and, if they do not give evidence, they can be sent to prison?

Mr. LEA of California. It does. Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Is not that carrying it a little too far?

Mr. LEA of California. It is a drastic provision but not more so than similar provisions in the Federal Trade Commission and interstate commerce acts.

Mr. LONDON. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. LEA of California. I will. Mr. LONDON. I understand that an injunction has been obtained by some of these dealers or coal operators restraining this commission from proceeding under the act of September 22. Am I mistaken about that?

Mr. WINSLOW. Not so far as I know.

Mr. LEA of California. I have no knowledge of such a proceeding. As a matter of fact, the commission is busily engaged at the present time in securing the information authorized.

Mr. LONDON. The object of this amendment is to fortify the commission-

Mr. LEA of California. The object is to make this investigation effective. In substance we propose to confer upon it powers such as the Federal Trade Commission now exercises in order to make this investigation effective.

Mr. LONDON. It is not to meet any objection raised by the court?

Mr. LEA of California. No.
Mr. BANKHEAD. If the gentleman will permit, how long has it been since the Federal Trade Commission went into an extended examination of this whole question?

Mr. LEA of California. The Federal Trade Commission investigated within recent years. But as to the question of whether we shall investigate, Congress has already crossed that bridge. That question is now behind us, and having authorized the investigation we ought to stand behind it by giving the commission the powers and funds necessary to make its work thorough and useful.

The duties imposed upon the commission are very great. is to deal with questions involving countless details and of monumental importance. The commission is charged with the duty of presenting the facts and recommending a solution for one of the greatest unsolved problems of our country-the problem of supply and prices of coal. The amount asked is comparatively small. Six hundred thousand dollars is a small sum compared to nearly 500,000,000 tons of coal annually consumed in the homes, factories, and in transportation in this country.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I renew the request I made a moment ago to extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The extension of remarks referred to is here printed in full as follows

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I have secured this permission from the House to extend my remarks in order to discuss the report filed by the special select committee on the escape of the notorious draft dodger, Grover Cleveland Bergdoll.

On April 18, 1921, the House of Representatives adopted House Resolution No. 12, creating this select committee, granting it clerical and legal help, authorizing it to administer oaths, summon and compel the attendance of witnesses, and the production of documents, and instructing said committee to report its findings to the House "at the earliest possible date," and to make to the House "such recommendations as it shall deem pertinent and advisable."

Four months thereafter, to wit, on August 18, 1921, said committee filed with the House and had printed their report, signed by a majority of said committee, Ben Johnson, O. R. LUHRING, and H. D. FLOOD, same being Report No. 354, first session, Sixty-seventh Congress, which report, with the recommendations of the committee therein, was referred to the House

Calendar on August 18, 1921.

This is March 2, 1923. Nineteen months and twelve days have gone by since said committee made its recommendations, and at no time has the majority steering committee ever made any attempt to have the report called up or any action taken on said recommendations.

This special committee spent $6,441.85 of the people's money out of the Treasury in making this investigation, and after appropriating and spending this large sum, the majority party, having absolute control of all legislative matters, seems to have lost all interest in the matter and buried the report in a pigeonhole.

This is such an important case that I want to call attention to the salient facts as reported found by the committee.

Bergdoll is now under 30 years of age and was subject to He evaded same and became a slacker and fugitive for more than 18 months, and from different points in the United States frequently sent taunting and defiant letters to the highest authorities of our Government.

After the armistice Grover C. Bergdoll returned to his home in Philadelphia and for several weeks hid out in four or five residences in and near Philadelphia. On the morning of January 7, 1920, officers surrounded all of these residences. When they went to the Bergdoll residence his mother refused them admittance, although they told her they had a search warrant. Finally, after wasting much time, an officer shot into the door lock with his pistol, and upon opening the door Mrs. Bergdoll with an automatic pistol confronted the officers. When about to leave, after searching the house without success, an officer raised the top of a window seat and found Grover C. Bergdoll concealed there.

Bergdoll was handcuffed to one officer, the key to the handcuffs being carried by another officer, and thus he was sent to the Government military disciplinary prison on Governors Island, in charge of Maj. John E. Hunt. In due time Bergdoll was tried, convicted, and sentenced to five years' imprisonment for violating the draft laws.

Under usual circumstances he would have been sent immediately to Fort Leavenworth, Kans., to serve his term there in the Federal penitentiary. But he was not sent. Under one pretext and another it was deferred.

On May 20, 1920, he was permitted to leave the prison at Governors Island, dressed in Army uniform, accompanied by a guard of two sergeants, for the alleged purpose of going into the mountains of western Maryland to secure something more than $100,000 in gold which he claimed to have buried there. When he reached Philadelphia on that pretended mission he made his escape, drove through the country in an automobile, accompanied by one Ike Stecker, to the Canadian line, and then went to Winnipeg, Canada, and by false representations secured passports upon which they went to London, thence to Paris, and then into Germany.

Concerning the details of this remarkable transaction, let me quote from the committee report, as follows:

quote from the committee report, as follows:

Shortly after Bergdoll's incarceration at Governors Island it was urged that he was of unsound mind; and, therefore, should be released. However, he was declared to be of sound mind.

Next, habeas corpus proceedings were instituted for the purpose of securing his release. The writ of habeas corpus failed to bring his release. Having been convicted, and both the insanity plea and the habeas corpus proceedings having failed, some other means of securing his escape had to be resorted to.

Until that time D. C. Gibboney, of Philadelphia, was chief counsel for Bergdoll. It is generally conceded that Gibboney was not much of a lawyer, but more of a practical manager for better lawyers. It is in evidence, and undisputed, that Gibboney, representing Bergdoll, sought to employ Judge John W. Westcott, a very eminent New Jersey lawyer. Westcott denies vigorously that he ever accepted the employment; while Gen. Samuel Tilden Ansell and his partner, Edward S. Balley, testified emphatically to the contrary.

It is admitted that Judge Westcott wrote a letter to the Secretary of War, stating that he (Westcott) was "enormously" interested in Bergdoll's court-martial trial and would be glad to have the Secretary of War give his personal attention to the case. The Secretary of War courteously replied, but said that the case had not come to his personal attention, and would not unless it reached him through the regular course of business.

It is also admitted that upon a certain occasion Gibboney gave Judge Westcott a $1,000 bill in payment of "a" fee. Judge Westcott denied that it was in payment of any fee on account of any employments.

Mrs. Bergdoll testified that at one time she paid Gibboney $10,000 denied that it was in payment of any fee on account of any employment by Bergdoll, stating that it was in payment of other employments.

Mrs. Bergdoll testified that at one time she paid Gibboney $10,000 in currency. While she would not state that she ever gave Gibboney a $1,000 bill, she did state that she kept large sums of money in her house, and that upon different occasions she had had many $1,000 bills. Putting those circumstances together it is possible that the $1,000 bill which Judge Westcott received was paid to Gibboney by Mrs. Bergdoll and then by Gibboney to Judge Westcott, but not necessarily on account of Bergdoll.

After Bergdoll had finally escaped and had fied the country, the grand jury was about to meet in Philadelphia for the purpose of returning indictments against all those engaged in the conspiracy through which Bergdoll escaped. Either just prior to the meeting of the grand jury or during their sittings. Judge Westcott wrote a letter to the Attorney General of the United States, confidently expressing the opinion that Gibboney was as innocent of any part in the conspiracy as an unborn child.

That letter was forwarded by the Attorney General to the district attorney at Philadelphia. Gibboney was not indicted.

The law firm of Ansell & Balley was employed in April, 1920, by Gibboney to represent Bergdoll in an effort to have the court-martial conviction reversed or set aside.

As already stated, both Ansell and Balley testified that Westcott was cocounsel, but only in "an advisory capacity," or as "advisor of Mr. Gibboney." General Ansell fell out with Judge Westcott over this question and quit speaking to him because of differences in their statements concerning it. But their falling out has nothing to do with the real issue in the case. Westcott contended for none of Ansell's fee. He merely declined to claim any of the honors (?) accompanying the victory won, not through the courts but through the gold-hunting expedition.

For the purposes of this investigation it is not deemed importa one or the other of those capacities. Neither is it considered important whether General Ansell knew in which of these two capacities Judge Westcott was acting, as General Ansell could have made and did make the same use of Judge Westcott regardless of the capacity in which he was acting.

It is interesting to know that General Ansell until a short time before his employment in the Bergdoll case had been an officer in the Regular Army of the United States for about 25 years, and that during the war he was the next officer in authority to General Crowder, the Judge Advocate General. However, during the war General Crowder was more directly concerned and employed in preparing and executing the draft law, thus virtually leaving General Ansell as the Judge Advocate General.

At the time above indicated General Ansell resigned from the Army and associated himself with the law firm of Ansell & Bailey, making a specialty of military law.

Somebody conceived the idea of concentrating Gibboney's cunning and energy, Westcott's influence with the then administration, and Ansell's standing with the Army officials into one general scheme of defense or escape. Each of these three agencies—purposely or unwittingly—was effectively and concertedly at work at the same time on either one or both of these two propositions.

It was known to Gibboney, Westcott, and Ansell that during the preceding October and November Mrs. Emma C. Bergdoll, the mother of the draft dodger, had in full compliance with law exchanged $105,000 in currency for that amount in gold at the Treasury of the United States, which gold she claims to have buried. It must be that the mind of one or more of the attorneys just mentioned turned to Mrs. Bergdoll's alleged buried gold and upon that story built the one to which reference is made in a letter sent by General Ansell to Adjutant General Harris, dated Tuesday, May 11, 1920. That story was not used by any of the Bergdoll attorneys, nor did it have any semblance of plausibility until General Ansell was employed not sent. In her testimony before the committee she read those notes and reduced them to typewritten copy, reading as follows:

" MAY 11, 1920.

"MAY DRAR GENERAL HARRIS: I wish to confirm, in this informal way, the statement I made to you a few moments ago orally in support of the request that I am making of you and the Secretary of War. I am counsel for Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, a so-called draft deserter, now in imprisonment at Fort Jay pending the review of his case by the War Department. Bergdoll is represented in Philadelphia by Mr. D. C. Gibboney, a gentleman of the highest standing in that city and a lawyer of unquestioned probity. Judge Wescott, formerly attorney general of New Jersey, and who doubtless is well and favorably known to Mr. Baker, is a consulting counsel in the case and adviser of Mr. Gibboney.

"Last Friday Mr. Gibboney, accompanied by Judge Wescott, came to my office and conferred with me about a situation concerning young Bergdoll's property, which was so strange that the truth of it, under normal circumstances, would hardly justify belief. In view of the fact that Mr. Gibboney believes Bergdoll's statement to be true, and in view of the numerous circumstances tending to support I, I myself believed it to be credible and such as to justify counsel in making of the department this present requests to justify counsel in making of the department this present requests to justify counsel in making of the department this present requests to support I, I myself believed it to be credible and such as to justify counsel in making of the department this present requests to face the property from his father. He has not heretofore developed that sense of responsibility required for the care and proper use of a large sum of money. I understand that the courtol and influence of his mother have not tended to the development of an adequate sense of responsibility in such matters. I am advised also that there have been family difficulties which seem to have produced a desire in this young man to get a physical control ere not authorized by other counsel in the case whose names were sed; in some instances, were not warranted by the facts. The letter actually sent reads as follows:

were not authorized by other counsel in the case whose names were used; in some instances, were not warranted by the facts.

The letter actually sent reads as follows:

ANSELL & BAILEY, ATTORNEYS AT LAW,

Suite 710-712 Riggs Building, Washington, D. C., May II, 1920.

MY DEAR GENERAL HARRIS: Please permit me, in compliance with your helpful suggestion of a moment ago, to place before you, in behalf of Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, together with a brief statement of the reasons therefor.

This man, in virtue of his conviction and sentence as a so-called "draft deserter" is now imprisoned at Fort Jay, pending the review of his trial by the War Department. I am his attorney. His home counsel in Philadelphia is Mr. D. C. Gibboney, of unexcelled repute as a man and a lawyer. Of counsel, also, in a consulting capacity, is Judge Westcott, of New Jersey, whom doubtless the Secretary well knows. These gentlemen visited me last Friday and related to me a situation which we believe to be true and which impels us to submit this request.

This young man was reared fatherless under family conditions, which, even when partially revealed, throw considerable light upon conduct of his that, to say the least, is strange if not unintelligible. From his father he inherited wealth. Apprehending the family desire to control his share, he at times has openly submitted and at others has become secretive of his wealth. This latter perhaps is the most influential of the many complex motives for his actions in the instance I now speak of. In any event, it is now known that he did secrete one large sum of money which was recovered a year or so ago. He now declares that he also hid a second large sum, the remainder of his fortune ($150.000) in a lonely spot on a mountainside, distant about a day's journey from this city; that he placed the gold coin in a metallic container and took it himself, unaccompanied, and hid it in a spot which he alone can identify. Circumstances indicate the truth of his statement.

He is now wrought up with fear and

The purpose of these changes is obvious when the two papers are compared and the end to be accomplished considered.

In the first sentence of the letter which was not sent, and which afterwards was pruned and put into more seductive form, he made the request of both General Harris "and" the Secretary of War; while the letter which was actually sent used this language:

"It seems reasonable and right to me, and also to you, and I hope—and doubt not—that it will seem so to the Secretary."

If the letter had been sent as first written, it would have been necessary that the request go to the Secretary of War. The second letter—the one that was sent—merely expressed the hope that the request might seem reasonable to the Secretary, but omitted the specific request that the matter be referred to the Secretary.

Another sentence in the letter which was not sent reads as follows:

"Judge Westcott, formerly attorney general of New Jersey, and who doubtless is well and favorably known to Mr. Baker, is a consulting counsel in the case and advisor of Mr. Gibboney."

That sentence was changed to read as follows in the letter that was sent.

who doubtless is well and tavorably known to all, basel, is a consulting counsel in the case and advisor of Mr. Gibboney."

That sentence was changed to read as follows in the letter that was sent:

"His home counsel in Philadelphia is Mr. D. C. Gibboney, of unexcelled repute as a man and a lawyer. Of counsel also, in a consulting capacity, is Judge Westcott, of New Jersey, whom doubtless the Secretary well knows.'

General Ansell is a man of extraordinary native ability, wonderfully improved by training and education. No man better knows the exact use of words and their effect than does he. The conclusion is irresistible that General Ansell was then using with emphasis the name of Judge Westcott to bring influence to bear upon the Secretary of War, should the communication ever reach him; and, just as certainly, to bring to bear additional influence with General Harris.

Also, in the letter first dictated, he said that Judge Westcott was "advisor of Mr. Gibboney." That expression or assertion is left out of the letter which was sent. Is it possible that General Ansell, even at that time, was giving more or less thought, with the view of later dividing responsibility, to the attitude of nonemployment which Judge Westcott assumed? Westcott admitted that he "advised" with Gibboney, but denied that he was employed by Bergdoll, and there is no contradictory proof.

In the letter which was not sent General Ansell used this language: "Last Friday Mr. Gibboney, accompanied by Judge Westcott, came to my office and conferred with me about a situation concerning young Bergdoll's property, which was so strange that the truth of it, under normal circumstances, would hardly justify belief."

Upon consideration by General Ansell that language must have appeared too strong. No doubt he was apprehensive that that language might raise with General Harris a question as to the plausibility of the whole story. In that language General Ansell stated, in substance, that Gibboney and Westcott had conferred with him about a situation

When General Ansell dictated the statement that "would hardly justify belief," that statement being the result of a conference with Gibboney and Westcott, one must wonder whether or not those two gentlemen, or either of them, consented to the change from lack of belief to one so certain that they were "impelled" by it to ask for Bergdoll's release. It is a self-evident fact—the others not being in Washington—that Ansell made the change without consulting the others. He attributed to each of them a "belief" which, perhaps, neither entertained. In the first draft it is not stated that either believed the story, but in the second all are represented as believers in it.

believed the story, but in the second all are represented as believed in it.

It is interesting to note the reasons assigned by General Ansell for the burial of the gold. In the letter not sent, he uses this language:

"This young man has unquestionably inherited a very considerable property from his father. He has not heretofore developed that sense of responsibility required for the care and proper use of a large sum of money. I understand that the control and influence of his mother have not tended to the development of an adequate sense of responsibility in such matters. I am advised also that there have been family difficulties which seem to have produced a desire in this young man to get a physical control over his property, ungoverned by the other members of the family."

In the letter actually sent to General Harris, General Ansell gave the following as an explanation of the unusual conduct of Grover Bergdoll:

family difficulties which seem to have produced a desire in this young man to got a physical control over his property, ungoverned by the other members of the family."

In the letter actually sent to General Harris, General Ansell gave the following as an explanation of the unusual conduct of Grover Bergoli.

In the letter actually sent to General Harris, General Ansell gave the following as an explanation of the unusual conduct of Grover Bergoli.

Which, even when partially revealed, throw considerable light upon conduct of his that, to say the least, is strange if not unintelligible. From his father he inherited wealth. Apprehending the family desire to control his share, he at times has openly submitted and at others has functioned to the control his share, he at times has openly submitted and at others has functial of the many complex motives of his action in the instance I now speak of."

In the letter not sent General Ansell speaks of certain vague "family difficulties," which "seem" to have caused Bergololl to desire a physical culties, which even the asture mind of Ansell could not overcome, in giving adequate and sufficient explanation of the motives which prompted Bergololl to bury the gold. Some excuse for this conduct had to be given, and the labored efforts of Ansell bave only tended to make "The letter which was not sent used the language: "There can be no danger of escape." That was changed in the letter which was sent to: "This prisoner has no desire to escape." That change makes the statement stronger to General Harris, and also lays the foundation for denial of the control of the c

It has been admitted by General Ansell and by everybody else who trestribed upon that point that at least one of Bergdoll's attorneys was General Ansell himself did not state that he told General Harris that he himself would not accompany the expedition. He merely expedition and the himself was not to go, but convenience to the convenience of the conven to more than $100,000, while, if we believe the mother, she had actually buried the two different sums aggregating approximately the same amount of which Bergdoll himself was speaking.

The conclusion is not an unreasonable one that if Mrs. Bergdoll did bury the gold gotten from the Treasury, and did make two different burials of it, then young Bergdoll must have known of the whole transaction. Otherwise he only imagined or dreamed of a condition that exactly coincided with the undisclosed but actual doings of his mother.

burials of it, then young Bergdoll must have known of the whole transaction. Otherwise he only imagined or dreamed of a condition that exactly coincided with the undisclosed but actual doings of his mother.

On the 19th of April, 1920, General Ansell prepared a contract firing the fee which the firm of Ansell & Bailey was to receive as attorneys for Bergdoll. That tentative contract was submitted by General Ansell to Mr. Gibboney for his approval, but Mr. Gibboney declined to approve it. Thereafter, on the 23d day of April, Mr. Gibboney himself, representing Bergdoll with carte blanche authority, submitted a counter tentative contract to General Ansell.

Under the terms of the first tentative contract Ansell & Bailey, according to the construction put upon it by Mr. Bailey, could have received $55,000.

General Ansell stated in his testimony that the tentative contract submitted by Gibboney to him was never executed, notwithstanding the fact that he also stated that the terms of that tentative contract submitted by Gibboney to him. Now, the question arises: If Gibboney prepared and submitted a paper whereby $55,000 was to be paid, and that paper was fully acceptable to Ansell, why was it not executed? Gibboney, when submitting the countercontract, was personally present with Ansell. All that was necessary was for both of them to sign it. Something, we know not what, only by surmise, must have become them to abandom the executant date from all the committee has been able to the contract nor any other abserver mentioned or pressed by either of the proposed parties to it. General Ansell had gone to the trouble to prepare a contract for employment, and Gibboney had done the same about a counter one; yet, when the accounter one; yet, when the accounter one; yet, when the committee really knows, General Ansell was employed by Gibboney to represent Bergdoll only in the then pending fligation between the United States and Bergdoll. General Ansell represent that he refused to have anything to do with the case until he h

General Anself himself, to go upon the expedition, was Gibboney, and he even failed to accompany the expedition from New York to Philadelphia.

When Bergdoll arrived at the railroad station in North Philadelphia from Governors Island, Gibboney was there to meet him with a letter of identification from Colonel Hunt. However, Gibboney rode only a few blocks in the automobile with Bergdoll and his guards, when he abandoned the party never to join it again.

Mrs. Bergdoll testified that on the next mornling after she received each of the sums of gold, she had her chaufteur to drive her away from her residence to a point where she said she buried it. The Bergdolls owned a farm about 11 miles out of Philadelphia. Mrs. Bergdoll stated that she took the gold in her automobile and took along a shovel with which to bury it. She stated that when she had reached the spot of burial she sent her chaufteur away from the automobile to gather apples, and that while he was gathering apples she buried the gold. If that be true, the gold was buried on the Bergdoll farm, and it was not contemplated that the expedition procured by General Ansell was to go beyond Philadelphia. Can it be possible that an ascertainment of the fact that the gold which Mrs. Bergdoll had gotten from the Treasury had been buried on the Bergdoll farm, not far from Philadelphia, caused all of counsel to repudiate the pledge that counsel was to accompany the expedition?

The fact has been established that when Bergdoll and his guard arrived at North Philadelphia, under direction of Mr. Gibboney, who held Colonel Hunt's letter of identification, they went to the Bergdoll residence accompanied by "Judge" Romig and Ike Stecker. Stecker is the man who fied with Bergdoll, and who now is in Germany with him. The further fact has been just as well established that on that every afternoon these same parties drove out to the Bergdoll farm and roamed about over it, instead of going on to Hagerstown, Md., as represented to General Harris by General Ansell would be done.

his is the character of one who must lead. His ability, his experience, have equipped him to lead even the most intelligent of associates. He could be a second to the concive the plan, he presented it and pursued it to its accomplish. The presented it and pursued it to its accomplish of General Anselt of General Harris. Even if General Anselt did not conceive the plan, he presented it and prusued it to its accomplish to General Anselt of General Harris. Even if General Anselt did not conceive the plan, he presented it and prusued it to its accomplish it. In fact, Gibboney, Rong, and the Bergold I amity, compring among the conceived it. In fact, Gibboney, Rong, and the Bergold was the conceived it. In fact, Gibboney, Rong, and the Bergold was conceived it. In fact, Gibboney, Rong, and the Bergold was conceived it. In fact, Gibboney, Rong, and the Bergold was conceived it. When Bergold was arrested on January 7, 1920, as already said, he was taken, in handerliffs, directly to Governors Island, N. Y., and put the conceived was accomplished was a factor of the confined there Colonel Hunt was several times apprised of the dangerous character of Bergold and of the probability of his attempting to escape. The police authorities at Philadelphia with the property of the confined there of the probability of his attempting to escape. The police authorities at Philadelphia with the property of t own testimony before his court-martial trial on account of the Bergon-escape.

Throughout that whole court-martial trial he contended that Berg-doll should have been treated like the least offending prisoner, not-withstanding the information which had been conveyed to him relative to Bergdoll's dangerous character, and his probable attempts at escape. His contention to that effect was based entirely upon the report of the ps-y-c-h-i-a-t-r-i-s-t-s, the actual and patent facts to the contrary not-withstanding. Besides, Colonel Hunt was conducting the prison on an "uplift" policy. He introduced witnesses to prove, in effect, that it was better to trust Bergdoll to the extent that he did well-known harmless prisoners, than to keep him confined or under close surveillance, as he had been instructed to do.

He resented every suggestion made to him relative to keeping a close watch over Bergdoll. His determination to pursue his own narrow way about things; his ignoring directions and defying instructions from the higher authorities at Washington are not short of being criminal; and Bergdoll's escape is truceable directly to that reiminality as one of the several important happenings contributing to that deplorable end.

The several important happenings contributing to that deplorable end.

The several important happenings contributing to that deplorable end.

The several move that the about the contribution of the insufficient guard by claiming that he alone had the right to determine how much of a guard should accompany the prisoner, and that nobody else had any right even to make suggestions as to the several move that the defendence of the several move that a several defendence of the several move that another had just returned from taking some prisoners out to and that, in consequence, he sent the prisoner out accompanied by any several contribution of the several move that the several move that the defendence of the several move that the several move th

As said, while O'Hare was reading the two letters Hunt was writing a letter in longhand to Gibboney. That letter was shown by Hunt to O'Hare, that O'Hare might be able upon reaching North Philadelphia to identify Gibboney, by whom the letter was to be shown to O'Hare when he reached Philadelphia to report to Gibboney. That letter reads as follows:

GOVERNORS ISLAND, N. Y., May 17, 1920.

Sin: This letter is to serve the purpose of your identification in the matter which was arranged in my quarters on Governors Island.

Very respectfully,

When O'Hare with his prisoner arrived at the North Philadelphia station, Gibboney went to O'Hare and presented the letter which had been written by Hunt, and which O'Hare had seen before it was mailed to Gibboney. O'Hare states positively, and the above letter and every ester dreumstance bears him out that when the expedition reached Nort Arising and the control as to where the party should as a O'Hars collowing the one of the control as to where the party should as a O'Hars collowing the one of identification within the order of the control that the party should be a control that the control that a contr

this "Judge" Romig has been a constant visitor at the Bergdoll residence and their confidential adviser. It was he who accompanied Mrs. Bergdoll and drove her automobile from Philadelphia to Washington upon the two occasions when Mrs. Bergdoll got $105,000 in gold from the Federal Treasury.

Up to this point it is seen that General Ansell procured the release of Bergdoll from Colonel Hunt; and Colonel Hunt placed Bergdoll in the hands of Sergeants O'Hare and York; and they, by Hunt's orders, delivered him to Gibboney, and Gibboney turned him over to Romig, the foster father, who accompanied him to the Bergdoll residence from which he escaped. All that was not accident; it was design.

General Ansell in his letter to General Harris extolled the virtues of Gibboney. Yet, when he came to testify, he disclosed that his information as to Gibboney was acquired after the escape and not before. So his statements were made as facts when he lacked the necessary information upon which to base an opinion as to Gibboney's real character. If General Ansell had said as much to General Harris about Gibboney as he virtually admitted to the committee, no doubt General Harris would have refused, under those circumstances, what he granted under the other unqualified representations.

Almost immediately after the receipt of the letter sent by General Ansell to General Harris on May 11, Hunt, at Governors Island, was advised over the telephone by Colonel Penn that Bergdoll was to be released. On Sunday, May 16, "Judge" Romig went over to Governors Island. He saw Bergdoll upon that occasion. As to who else he saw and what was said the committee is not advised. However, "Judge" Romig sestified that upon that occasion Bergdoll spoke to him of the contemplated expedition to recover the buried gold. According to "Judge" Romig so on as Bergdoll mentioned "gold" to him; and he reprimanded Bergdoll for having even mentioned "gold." Judge" Romig had accompanied Mrs. Bergdoll from Philadelphia to Washington in her automobile; and in the progr

So all five counts were proven, three of them by Hunt's admissions, and yet the court found him "not guilty" on each and every one of

So all five counts were proven, three of them by Hunt's admissions, and yet the court found him "not guilty" on each and every one of them.

There can be no question that Sergeant O'Hare was imposed upon by Colonel Hunt. However, there can be no excuse made for the opportunity of escape which O'Hare gave Bergdoll. O'Hare was guilty of unpardonable negligence during the night spent in the Bergdoll residence in that he permitted Sergeant York to go upstairs and sleep with a bottle of gin while he remained downstairs and sleep in the same room (in another bed) with Bergdoll. Unless Bergdoll had had a safer and just as certain plan of escape, he either would have taken O'Hare's pistol from him while O'Hare was asleep or he would have covered him with one of his seven shotguns, compelled him to hold up his hands and remain silent, and then go away in the automobile, possibly taking O'Hare with him and throwing him out in the road at such point as might best suit his purposes.

There can be no defense whatever made for Sergeant York. On their arrival at Philadelphia he got out of the automobile and went into a saloon. During that night and the next day at the Bergdoll residence on several occasions he drank gin, not only by himself but with the prisoner. He, too, is just as blamable as is O'Hare for letting Bergdoll get out of sight. He even did not sleep in the same room with the prisoner. Besides, when the telephone bells were ringing—no doubt as a signal to Bergdoll that everything was ready—York says he went to another floor of the house to get a drink of water when there was water on the floor which he was leaving.

Lieut, Col. C. C. Cresson, as said, was the judge advocate detalled to prosecute Colonel Hunt in the court-martial trial.

Even before any testimony was introduced, Colonel Cresson made the following statement to the court:

"The Government disclaims, and personally and on behalf of the prosecution, any idea of there being anything crooked or any collusion on the part of Colonel Hunt in this matter,

"Q. You got out to Bergdoll's house about what time? Do you remember?—A. It him it was between 11 and 12, the first time."

"Q. In the mine it was between 11 and 12, the first time."

"Q. In the mine it was between 11 and 12, the first time."

"Q. In the mine it was between 11 and 12, the first time."

"Q. Hand you stayed there until how long.—how long did you stay there?—A. Oh, must have stayed there—we had dinner there and stayed there until about 2 o'clock.

"Q. What did you do this afternoon?—A. Then took a ride around again in the afternoon.

"Q. Now, skip over to the next day. When was the last time you saw Bergdoll, as you remember it? on time to wonder why the prosecution wanted to "skip over" the escapade of that night when Bergdoll was taken to the show by the guard and Sergeant York went into the saloon. Could it be that the prosecution was "whitewashing" Colonel Hunt's guards by concealing those incidents because the "suitableness" of the guard was one of the issues confronting Colonel Hunt?

On page 90 of the court-martial proceedings it is shown that while O'Hare still was on the witness stand the prosecution itself voluntially the stay of the guard was one to testify before the congressional investigating committee, he stated that prior to the Bergdoll affair he did not know him; and that it was impossible for Colonel Cresson did not know him; and that it was impossible for Colonel Cresson did not know him; and that it was impossible for Colonel Cresson did not know him; and that it was impossible for Colonel Cresson did not know him; and that it was impossible for Colonel Cresson did not know him; and that it was impossible for Colonel Cresson did not know him; and that the was impossible for Colonel Cresson did not know him; and that the was incomediated to the court-martial proceedings commenced July 21 thereafter. During the two martial proceedings commenced July 21 thereafter. During the two martial proceedings commenced July 21 thereafter.

Passenger of the court-martial trial, Hunt was pro

Now, let me quote the conclusions finally reached by this special select committee and the recommendations they made to the House of Representatives in their report. The committee while there are many who participated in the conspiracy leading to Bergdoll's escape and the acquittal of those who brought it about, there are three who are infinitely more culpable than the rest. Those three are General Ansell, Colonel Hunt, and Col. C. C. Cresson. But thus far no punishment has been imposed upon anybody that could not be discharged by the Bergdoll millions and counted a mere trifle.

General Ansell is now out of the Army. He is beyond the jurisdiction of court-martial proceedings, but provision should be made against his future practice before any of the departments, before any court-martial, or in the courts of the District of Columbia or the Natlon, above whose safety and integrity he has placed gold.

Colonel Hunt, within the next two months after he had participated so criminally in the escape of Bergdoll, was promoted from major to colonel and immediately retired on the pay of $3,600 a year. It becomes a serious question who is to pay this lifelong reward for his perfidy. Those whose backs already are burdened with the most onerous tax ever imposed must contribute; and, in addition, more than 4,000,000 of our soldier boys must, throughout Colonel Hunt's remaining years, contribute to this munificent retirement fund in recognition only of his instrumentality in this national tragedy. An outraged Nation has the right to demand that Colonel Hunt's annuity be discontinued.

The conduct of Mr. Earl B. Wood should not go unnoticed.

Nation has the right to demand that Colonel Hunt's annuity be discontinued.

The conduct of Mr. Earl B. Wood should not go unnoticed.
On April 30, 1920, John J. O'Connor, a special agent of the Government in the secret service, who had been sent to Philadelphia to look after the Bergdoil case, addressed a letter to Frank Burk, Assistant Director and Chief of Investigation, Washington, D. C.

That letter reads as follows:
"DEAR SIR: On the evening of April 27, Lieut, George C. McDonald, who has been and is cooperating with me in the Bergdoil cases, obtained information through one Jacob Strohm, an uncle by marriage of the Bergdoil boys, that Grover C. Bergdoil is to gain his release within a period of two weeks.

"The information, in substance, is that a Colonel Ansell, a Washington attorney who has been retained by the Bergdoll family to attack the verdict of the court-martial, has guaranteed to bring about the release of Grover C. Bergdoll for a consideration of $10,000. In an effort to gain his freedom, counsel for Bergdoll is expected to apply for the release on bond of Grover C. Bergdoll pending the decision of the court in reapplication for a writ of habeas corpus, which will give Bergdoll sufficient time to depart from the United States.

"If this can be brought about, it will be a repetition of an application which was made before Judge Hand in the southern district of New York, and at the time of the application counsel requested that the prisoner be turned over to the custody of the United States marshal pending decision. Judge Hand refused the request and ordered Bergdoll returned to the custody of the military authorities.

"If there is some way to prevent Bergdoll's being released pending the decision of the court before which the application will be made, we will have prevented Grover Bergdoll's escape, together with protecting Colonel Ansell, whom I believe to be misled, from having to explain the treacherles of his client and of his confederates.

"Yery respectfully,

"John J. O'Connor, Special Agent."

"JOHN J. O'CONNOR, Special Agent."

"Yery respectfully,

"John J. O'Connor, Special Agent."

When that letter reached the department it went to Mr. Wood, he having charge of all correspondence relating to the Bergdoll case.

When Mr. Wood received the letter, he should have immediately brought it to the attention of the War Department, which then had charge of Bergdoll, for the purpose of having double precautions thrown around him.

It seems that every happening—whether of act or omission—resulted to Bergdoll's benefit, and not one to his real detriment.

All this could not have been accident. Somebody, carrying convincing persuasives in great bundles, must have preceded every doing in the case, to see that nothing was left to chance.

"Mr. Johnson. Do you take full responsibility for the failure to bring the contents of that letter to the attention of anybody else?

"Mr. Wood. No, sir.

"Mr. Johnson. Do you take full responsibility for the failure to bring the contents of that letter to the attention of anybody else?

"Mr. Wood. Yes, sir; I take the responsibility for not having brought it to the attention of anybody else?

"Mr. Hohnson. Do you take full responsibility for the way that letter was handled.

"Mr. Johnson. Do you take full responsibility for the way that letter was handled.

"Mr. Wood. I do.

"Mr. Wood is most extraordinary make-up should continue in the public service his dismissal is most earnestly recommended. More, it is recommended that he be forever disqualified from holding any appointive position whatever with the Government of the United States.

It has been said that there is perhaps no crime an exact definition of which is more difficult to give than the offense of c the payment and receipt of the consideration. It becomes a matter of inference from one fact to the existence of another. That is this case.

It must be conceded that the motives which prompted Mrs. Bergdoll, the mother, and "Judge" Romig, the foster father, to take part in the conspiracy were not the motives that actuated either Gibboney, Ansell, Balley, or Hunt. These latter had no affection for Grover Bergdoll, nor can it be said that his plight aroused their humanitarian impulses. What then incited their activities? There was, of course, the Bergdoll fortune ever present.

There are many, many offenses which are, indeed, most difficult of actual proof. There are a few impossible of proof except by circumstances and by reasoning from cause to effect.

The eye of man is far more easily deceived than is his mature reasoning and calm judgment. Money may pass from hand to hand in an instant, and at some obscure place and not be seen. While the passing of it may be proven beyond doubt, the consideration for which it did pass may be disputed. On the other hand, the full performance of the service to be rendered may be fully established, still the passing of the money in payment for the service may be proven only by appeal from the eye to the mental consideration of a chain of established facts. Again, that is this case.

Bergdoll family and their immediate, personal associates, such as Romig. Stecker, Gibboney, and Mrs. Bergdoll. It is hoped that this report bares to the Congress the others who are more guilty than even the Bergdoll family. Shall they go unwhipped of justice?

The mother, the brother, the foster father—only those who gave shelter and comfort out of love for the black sheep of the family—have been convicted. Shall those who, for money, conceived, connived at, and executed the escape continue to practice in our Nation's courts, to wear the uniform of an officer of our Amy, or to collect an annuity from a wronged people?

WHAT WILL THE HOUSE DO WITH 1T?

WHAT WILL THE HOUSE DO WITH IT?

Is the House of Representatives going to bury this report without action? If so, why? Why should not the guilty be punished? Is anybody connected with the Government now shielding the guilty? The House of Representatives has spent $6,441.85 of the public money to make this investigation and obtain the facts in this report. In what way is it going to benefit the people and the Nation?

And what is to be done with General Ansell? Why was he employed as counsel by another select committee of the House, at a $15,000 fee, about the time the Bergdoll committee had him under investigation? Is the Government going to continue to employ him and pay him big fees? Concerning this problem, the Republican Party must make answer to the country.

Mr. JEFFERIS of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extent my remarks in the Record.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? There was no objection.

MUSCLE SHOALS.

Mr. JEFFERIS of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, the Muscle Shoals projects were constructed during the war. Nitrate plant No. 1, costing $13,000,000; nitrate plant No. 2, costing the Mullery Down on which were covered at about $66,500,000; the Wilson Dam, on which was expended $17,000,000; in all, about $106,500,000 were expended from an appropriation of $200,000,000 under section 124 of the national defense act of 1916 and appropriations during the war for armaments of fortifications. The Government has authorized about $24,500,000 since the war to complete the Wilson Dam, including electrical power houses and generating equipment for 120,000 horsepower and certain navigation facilities. It is expected this work will be completed in 1925 or 1926.

For the fixation of nitrogen there was constructed two plants. a modified Haber process for nitrate plant No. 1 and the cyanamide process for plant No. 2. To these plants there are four important adjuncts—the Gorgas power plant, on the Warrior River 90 miles south of Muscle Shoals, costing $3,850,000; the transmission lines to Muscle Shoals, costing $960,000; the Waco Quarry, near Russellville, Ala., 26 miles south of Muscle Shoals, costing $1,300,000.

The synthetic-ammonia plant at nitrate plant No. 1 is a failure. Its capacity is rated at 22,000 tons of nitrates per annum. It is located on a 1,900-acre lot of land. In addition to a number of large, substantial buildings suitable for manufacturing purposes, it contains 112 permanent dwelling houses, complete with furnaces, electric lighting and bathroom facilities, bachelor quarters with modern improvements containing accommodations for 35 people, 80 temporary houses for construction purposes, about 9 miles of macadam road, 8 miles of sewers, 4½ miles of standard-gauge railroad, a water plant, and other necessary auxiliaries. These latter properties $3,500,000.

The three plants at nitrate plant No. 1-for oxidation of ammonia into nitric acid, for the concentration of nitric acid, and for conversion of ammonia and nitric acid into ammonia nitrate—can be successfully operated. Only the synthetic ammonia plant process is a failure, according to the report of Major Burns, of the nitrate division of the Ordnance Department, who says, in his testimony before the Senate Agricultural Committee, that since the armistice a modified construction of a similar plant has been in successful operation on a commercial scale at Syracuse, N. Y. Major Burns further says that the Ordnance Department has made quite an extended study of plans for reconstruction of the synthetic ammonia process plant at nitrate plant No. 1 and that in the light of subsequent experience in this country it can be operated successfully. The Ordnance Department estimates the cost to reconstruct the plant to produce its rated capacity of 22,000 tons of nitrates per annum, including a necessary sulphate of ammonia plant for fertilizer production, would be $4,750,000.

Nitrate plant No. 2 consists of a calcium-carbide plant, including necessary facilities for burning limestone and preparing coke, and a plant for the extraction of nitrogen from air by the liquid-air process, a plant for the welding together of calcium carbide and nitrogen to form cyanamide, a plant for the conversion of cyanamide into ammonia, a plant for the conversion of half of the ammonia so formed into nitric acid, and a sion of half of the ammonia so formed into nitric acid, and a plant for the combination of nitric acid and ammonia for the formation of ammonium nitrate. The plant has a capacity of 475 tons of calcium carbide per day, 600 tons of cyanamide per day, 150 tons of ammonia per day, the equivalent of 260 tons of 100 per cent nitric acid per day, and 300 tons of ammonium nitrate per day, or 110,000 tons of ammonium nitrate per year. The capacity of this plant is five times the capacity of United States nitrate plant No. 1.

This plant cost about $66,500,000. It is located on a site of

This plant cost about $66,500,000. It is located on a site of 2,300 acres and contains a 90,000-horsepower steam plant; 186 permanent houses with electric lights, sewers, and water supply; a hotel with 100 rooms with modern improvements, thoroughly furnished; 366 temporary houses; 24 miles of improved roads, 37 miles of standard gauge railway; 20 miles of sewers; 16 miles of domestic and fire water supply; a 60,000,000-gallon reservoir with filtering and pumping plants; and a 50-ton ice plant. These latter auxiliary facilities represent a cost to the Government of approximately $25,000,000. In addition, it is estimated that there is material on hand worth about $5,000,000.

The evidence before the committee is that it costs about $125,000 per year to finance the caretaking of plants Nos. 1, 2, and the Waco Quarry. The Government is realizing from a lease of the Gorgas steam plant, the transmission line, and the Sheffield steam plant approximately $250,000 per annum.

Power generated at the steam plant at Sheffield has been used for two years to meet the needs of the power market, through interconnected transmission lines, in the States of Georgia and North and South Carolina. At one time during the coal emergency and the drought last year more than 45 cotton mills in these States, and a number of municipalities, were relieved of the necessity of either closing down their plants or materially curtailing their output by reason of power from this source generated with coal transported 100 miles or more from the Alabama coal fields.

OBJECTS OF ORIGINAL LEGISLATION AUTHORIZING THE CONSTRUCTION OF A NITRATE PLANT AND A POWER DAM.

The original purpose stated in section 124 of the national defense act of 1916, under which these plants were first authorized, and the law now in effect, was to provide nitrates for explosives and fertilizers in peace time. The legislation vested in the President very large and discretionary powers in the conduct and management of the plants.

Recently Congress has determined, pursuant to the policy expressed in the national defense act of 1916, to complete the construction of Wilson Dam, including power houses and equipment sufficient to generate 120,000 horsepower, for which approximately $25,000,000 new money has been appropriated or authorized. When complete the power equipment will be sufficient to develop all the available continuous prime power at the site and will have in reserve for any emergency the 90,000-horsepower steam plant which insures sufficient power for the continuous operation of the plants in the use of the processes originally planned. In times of military necessity plant No. 2 is capable of fixing sufficient nitrogen to supply 12 divisions organized and equipped for combat in accordance with the condi-tions existing at the close of the World War, or an army of approximately 500,000 men.

In order to equip nitrate plant No. 2 for the production of fertilizer it is estimated by the Ordnance Bureau that $3,500,000 additional would be required. However, all the testimony of experts before the House and Senate committees and the statements of many scientists who have studied the question is that the cyanamide process is obsolete and that under the most favorable conditions fertilizer can not be manufactured on a commercial scale at prices to compete with other sources of supply. The recent statement of Dr. Charles L. Parsons, a leading authority in this country, supports this conclusion.

THE FORD OFFER. The original offer of Mr. Ford to take over the Muscle Shoals projects has undergone a number of changes, some at the in-stance of the Secretary of War and others at the request of the House Committee on Military Affairs and the Senate Agricultural Committee. In its essentials he offers to take title in fee to the Waco Quarry, consisting of 450 acres of limestone deposits, and a branch railroad 1½ miles long, costing about $1,400,-000; nitrate plant No. 1, located on 1,900 acres of land, with its 125 permanent building structures and plants; a complete industrial community with sewerage, electricity, streets, walks, etc.; the assignment of whatever contractual rights the Government has and its property interests in the Gorgas properties; the 90-mile transmission line to Sheffield; the completion of Wilson Dam and the construction of Dam No. 3, including the installation of power houses and electrical equipment necessary to generate 850,000 horse power, with a 100-year lease thereon. He also offers to take title to plant No. 2, located on 2,300 acres of land, including all its accessories heretofore enumerated and including the steam plant, the largest in the world, which alone cost $12,000,000. The cost to the Government of the properties, building, equipment, etc., title to which his offer contemplates will pass to his company, approximates $90,000,000.

It is estimated by Army engineers that it will cost more than $55,000,000 to complete Wilson Dam and construct Dam No. 3.

In consideration of the transfer of all this property to the Ford Co., and the additional expenditure of more than $55,-000,000 to complete Dam No. 2 and construct Dam No. 3, on which no work whatever has been done on any of the 14,000 acres of necessary overflow lands acquired, the Ford Co. agrees to pay 4 per cent annually as rental on the cost of finishing Dam No. 2 and building Dam No. 3, excluding, however, the $17,000,000 heretofore invested in Dam No. 2. The lease is to run a period of 100 years. The full 4 per cent rental, however, will not begin until six years after the acceptance of the contenance, and operation thereof shall be under the direction, care, and responsibility of the United States during the 100-year period," but without obligation for any excess cost of repairs, maintenance, or operation of the gates and locks. No obligations whatever is assumed by the company in event any portion or all of either of said dams, the gates, or locks should break down, give way, or blow out. He also agrees to pay semi-annually $23,373 to a so-called sinking or amortization fund, which it shall become the duty of the Government to compound over a period of about 100 years estimated in that time to create a fund of $48,000,000 with which the Government may recoup the cost of constructing and equipping the two power dams.

In event the Government does not conclude at the end of 100 years itself to operate the power plants, but to lease or dispose of the same, the Ford Co. is to have the preferred right to renew the lease for the power plants upon such terms as Congress may then prescribe.

The Ford Co., for the benefit of the Government, undertakes to do three things:

to do three things:

1. To maintain nitrate plant No. 2 in its present state of readiness, or its equivalent, for immediate operation in the manufacture of materials necessary in time of war for the production of explosives.

2. That when the national defense shall require "all or any part of the operating facilities at nitrate plant No. 2 for the production of materials necessary in the manufacture of explosives or other war materials" the United States may take over and operate the same.

3. As the principal consideration of his offer, the company expressly agrees continuously for 100 years, except as prevented by reconstruction of the plant or by war, strikes, accidents, fires, or other causes beyond its control, to manufacture nitrogen and other commercial fertilizers. The annual production of such fertilizers shall contain a nitrogen content of at least 40,000 tons of fixed nitrogen.

Scotter, 15 undertakes to hind the Ford corporation to supply

Section 15 undertakes to bind the Ford corporation to supply the farmer fertilizer at "fair prices and without excessive prof-It provides that the "maximum net profits shall not exceed 8 per cent of the fair actual annual cost of production thereof." For this purpose it attempts to create a board, the majority of whose members shall be nominated by certain farmers' organizations, whose duty it will be to "determine what has been the cost of manufacture and sale of fertilizer products and the price which has been charged therefor, and, if necessary, for the purpose of limiting the annual profit to 8 per cent, as aforesaid, shall regulate the prices at which said fertilizer may be sold by the company.'

These are the essential features, obligations, and considerations of the proposed contract between the Government and the Ford corporation.

The direct benefit to the Ford Co. can not be estimated or stated in terms of dollars. Aside from large parcels of real estate, valuable buildings, manufacturing plants thoroughly and completely equipped to begin immediately the operation of a manufacturing industrial center of great magnitude, located in the midst of unlimited raw materials, with railway and water transportation at hand, representing a cost to the American people of $90,000,000 and acquired for the nominal sum of $5,000,-000, payable in five installments, he and his successors in interest will enjoy for 100 years the exclusive, unrestricted, and unregulated use of one of the great water-power resources on the continent, developed and equipped with public funds, on which he will in fact pay less than 3 per cent rental with a preferred right to renewal in event the Government does not at the end of 100 years elect itself to operate the power plants.

It must be remembered that the Government ceases upon acceptance of the Ford offer for $5,000,000 to own or exercise any property right at or in connection with the nitrate plants, notwithstanding it has a standing offer of $3,000,000 cash for its interest alone in the Gorgas plant and the transmission line.

The exclusive and unregulated power franchise alone is worth millions of dollars in the open market. Mr. Ford's immense industrial organization during the 100-year period would enjoy a tremendous advantage over other industrial power users, due to the important factor of a very cheap source of power. This water power will continue to increase in value as coal deposits are depleted and the cost of mining advances. The immense secondary power will increasingly become prime power as the flow of the river is regulated by the construction of additional power dams above and the construction of storage reservoirs on its upper tributaries by other parties to meet the growing demand and increased market value of hydropower.

OBLIGATION TO PROVIDE NITRATES IN TIME OF WAR INADEQUATE AND DOES NOT SECURE ANY ADVANTAGE THE GOVERNMENT OTHERWISE DOES

Emphasis is placed by the Ford adherents upon the continuing obligations to maintain plant No. 2 in stand-by for the pro-The company also agrees to contribute $55,000 annually for repairs, maintenance, and operation of the dams, gates, and locks, "it being understood that all necessary repairs, mainit must be noted, limits the duty of his company to respond to the requirements of the United States in an emergency to "all or any part of the operating facilities at nitrate plant No. 2." Section 14 of the fertilizer clause does not in terms require him to operate plant No. 2 for the production of nitrogen for munitions of war. He is required at the most to maintain it in stand-by condition.

The language permits him to operate an equivalent plant or such other plant or plants adjacent or near thereto as he may construct. Subdivision (b) of the same section requires him to maintain nitrate plant No. 2 in its present state of readiness or its equivalent for the production of explosives or materials necessary in time of war. If the cyanamid plant is obsolete, as insisted by many experts, or should become so, and a more simple, direct, and economical process should be employed, or should Mr. Ford rely for nitrogen upon by-product production, as he may do, under the contract, the obligation to turn over to the Government in an emergency the "operating facilities" at plant No. 2 within a very few years may become of very minor importance and of no value in view of the fact that his obligation limits the right of the Government to take over in case of national emergency only the operating facilities at plant No. 2.

The Government in time of war unquestionably has the right to take over any and all properties, plants, or processes either at Muscle Shoals or elsewhere, whether in the hands of Mr. Ford or a number of concerns, in which case its obligation for compensation extends only to a reasonable remuneration to the owners for the use and occupancy thereof. Mr. Ford, in event such an emergency arises, requires the Government not only to protect his company from losses occasioned by such use, but it must return the property in as good condition as when received and also reasonably compensate the company for the use thereof.

He is not required to operate plant No. 2 or maintain plant No. 2, or any plant whatever, in an up-to-date condition or abreast with the advance of science in the fixation of nitrogen from the air, either for fertilizer or explosives. His obligation extends only to its maintenance in stand-by condition or its equivalent. So far as the obligation of the Ford contract extends, regardless of the lavish expenditures of the United States at Muscle Shoals in an effort to provide an independent and a new source of nitrates both for war and for fertilizer, it will during these 100 years be in no better situation than at present. Its investment of millions of dollars under the authority of Congress will be delivered into the hands of one individual or company without condition or reservation of any value or consequence that will advance the art of fixation of nitrogen from the air either for its use or benefit or that of the American people. There is no obligation to modernize the plant, 10, 20, or 50 years hence. Whatever research or ex-penditures Mr. Ford undertakes to employ, according to sub-division (a) of section 14, is limited to the production of commercial fertilizers by two methods, the electric furnace and in-dustrial chemistry. By such means even now a large portion of our nitrate supply is obtained. Therefore, Mr. Ford as-sumes no burden to the American people to explore new and untried methods for securing nitrates. The delivery to one individual, on such conditions, of immense war resources of great value constructed under authority of law, the principal object of which was to provide nitrates for explosives by air fixation processes as a means of securing independence of foreign importations, can not be justified on any basis of sound public policy.

THE PECULIAR HISTORY OF THE PERTILIZER PROVISIONS AND THEIR INADEQUACY.

Mr. Ford does not contract either directly or indirectly or by inference to reduce the price of fertilizer, nor does he, contrary to the general idea, agree to extract nitrogen from the air, either for explosives or fertilizers. In terms his company is not required to introduce into the fertilizer output of this country nitrogen from the air in any appreciable quantity. The company may without violence to its agreement, for all that appears in its proposed contract, supply the major portion of the 40,000 tons of fixed nitrogen either from importations or from by-product production purchased in the open market or from its own plants, and thus defeat the very purpose which it is in the popular mind that at Muscle Shoals, as a result of the Ford offer, a new and additional supply of air nitrogen will be provided for fertilizer purposes. The only obligation is "to manufacture nitrogen and other commercial fertilizers, mixed or unmixed, and with or without filler, at nitrate plant No. 2, or its equivalent, or at such other plant or plants adjacent or near thereto as it may construct." This is said without reference to quantity, so far as the obligation to manufacture nitrogen and other commercial fertilizers extends. The peculiar language of section 14, as regards the quantity of nitrogen, is that "the annual production of these fertilizers shall have a nitrogen content of at least 40,000 tons of fixed nitrogen."

It must be borne in mind that, regardless of the enormous increase in fertilizer consumption for the next 100 years, the minimum requirements of the Ford offer is that the annual production of fertilizers by his company at or adjacent to Muscle Shoals, not from the air, shall have a nitrogen content of 40,000 tons. Doctor Whitney, of the Department of Agriculture, testified before the congressional committee touching the Ford offer that the normal increase in fertilizer consumption in the United States is about 7½ per cent per annum, and that whereas annual consumption now is from seven to eight million tons, except for the war and recent high prices it would be from ten to twelve million tons. The Ford contract assumes no obligation to keep pace with the enormous increased demand by a corresponding increase in production at Muscle Shoals. He is not required to apply to this minimum production any specific amount of the power acquired at Dams 2 or 3. If through by-product production from his various plants he will construct in that community he is able to secure a minimum of 40,000 tons of nitrogen for fertilizer, his company has performed its obligation and is perfectly free to appropriate to its private, exclusive, and unregulated use all the water power to be developed at Muscle Shoals at Government expense.

Any improvement in the art of nitrogen fixation, whether by the use of hydropower or otherwise, Mr. Ford is under no obligation to employ, except as the result of his own research, limited to electrical-furnace methods or industrial chemistry. In the meantime the Government has for 100 years denied itself or any citizen other than Mr. Ford the opportunity so employ the power or the facilities it has constructed for the production of nitrates for explosives or fertilizer, whether by present methods, their improvement, or new methods brought forward by anyone other than Mr. Ford through the electrical furnace or by industrial chemistry.

 NEITHER ACCEPTANCE OF FORD OFFER NOR GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP AND OPERATION AT MUSCLE SHOALS NECESSARY,

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Madden] bases his entire argument on the assumption that in adopting a policy relating to Muscle Shoals the Government must either engage in the development and operation of a fertilizer business itself or accept the offer of Henry Ford for the property upon the identical terms proposed by Mr. Ford without change or alteration. This is an extraordinary proposition. Even if the Government were planning to accept the services of Mr. Ford for the purposes of carrying out the general plan of the national defense act, as stated by Mr. Madden, there should be and is ample justification for the closest scrutiny of the terms, and unless Mr. Ford is to be allowed to dictate to Congress and the country in the most arbitrary manner every line of the proposed contract should be carefully scrutinized and the public interest safeguarded by suitable amendments.

It is true that certain proponents of the Ford offer have insisted from the first that the offer was not subject to amendment, but it has already been many times amended, and it is now admitted by them that the amendments were beneficial. No public official assuming to deal with the matter impartially has heretofore taken the position now occupied by Mr. MADDEN of presenting the Ford offer on the one hand and Government operation on the other as the only possible alternatives.

The bill embodied in the majority report of the Military Affairs Committee of the House of Representatives, though providing for a contract with Mr. Ford, requires substantial amendment of the Ford offer.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Madden] passes over without the slightest attention the policy recommendation set forth in the minority report of the Military Affairs Committee, concurred in by a majority of the Republican members of the Military Affairs Committee, which is as follows:

The Secretary of War should be authorized and directed to ask for further propositions for Muscle Shouls. Neither nitrate plants No. 1 nor No. 2 should be sold. They cost the taxpayers of this country too much money. They ought to be leased, together with the hydroelectric power created by dam No. 2, but this lease ought to be made under the Federal water power act. The Government would then have absolute authority and control over the lessees and their products. In this way no one man or set of men could have the entire benefit of this great project at that place. Then the Government could regulate the production of fertilizer on the part of the lessee or any other manufactured articles that the lessee would see fit to make.

This sane suggestion contains no proposal for Government operation of the plants in peace times, but avoids the grant of a vast monopoly on unconscionable terms to Mr. Ford.

In the report made at the instance of Mr. Bernard M. Baruch by L. L. Summers, an engineer, the courses open to the Government are summarized as follows:

First. That the Government retain the property as it now stands as reserve for war purposes, expending each year only sufficient money a reserve for war purposes, expending each year.

for the upkeep.

Second. The Government to complete the dams, thereby endeavoring to make it possible to operate the plant commercially in competition with private industry.

Third. The Government to wreck the plant and salvage the material, abandoning, therefore, any possibility of cheap hydraulic power at this time or the improvement of navigation of the Tennessee River.

Fourth. The sale of the property to a group interested in the different industries capable of being developed at this plant.

Fifth. The Henry Ford proposition.

Admitting that the second and third propositions are inadmissible, the summary amply illustrates the absurdity of the position of Mr. Madden in assuming that the Government must choose between the Ford offer-which Mr. Summers describes as "ridiculous as to price"-and objectionable Government operation

Mr. Madden has consequently made a fundamental error in the very inception of his discussion of Muscle Shoals by assuming that the question can be determined by balancing the advantages of the Ford offer against Government ownership and operation of fertilizer works. He has therefore made a totally incorrect analysis of the Muscle Shoals situation, which has resulted in a mere argument in favor of the Ford offer rather than a deliberate and impartial decision with all the factors of the problem taken into account,

2. FORD OFFER VIOLATES PRINCIPLES OF FEDERAL WATER POWER ACT.

In 1920, after many years of deliberation, Congress passed the Federal water power act, dealing with the use of waterpower sites in navigable streams and on the public domain by private parties under Federal and State regulation. The act embodies the policy of the Government and should be strictly adhered to. The report of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry of the United States Senate (S. Rept. 831, 67th Cong., 2d sess., p. 19) contains the following:

adhered to. The report of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry of the United States Senate (S. Rept. 831, 67th Cong., 2d sess., p. 19) contains the following:

Mr. Ford's offer is that Dams No. 2 and No. 3, when completed, together with all of the abutting property, shall be leased to this corporation for a period of 100 years. This provision of itself ought to be sufficient reason for the unqualified rejection of the offer. The question of the development of water power on our navigable streams has received a great deal of attention at the hands of Congress. For a great many years the question was debated not only in Congress but all over the country. The discussion finally culminated in the passage of the existing water-power act, which fixed the leasing term at 50 years.

Congress owes something to the senerations that shall follow. It has no more that belong to future generations. We have no moral right to mortizage unborn generations by giving special rights and privileges to corporations to make millions of dollars out of property that belongs to all of the people. The power that can be developed from our navigable streams belongs to the public. No man or corporation ought to be given an unlimited right to the use of power developed on navigable streams. No one can foresee what the conditions will be in 40, 60, or 100 years. The indications are that water power will be in 40, 60, or 100 years. The indications are that water power will be in 40, 60, or 100 years. The indications are that water power will be continue to increase in value and that if the water power of our streams is given away to corporations without regulation and for unlimited regions of the future to the detriment and the oppression of millions of our fellow citizens yet unborn. To compel by law now unborn generations to surrender their rights to the power that God Almighty has placed in our streams and to give that power ways to corporations, especially when they can not be regulated or controlled in any way. Will meet the condemna

Christian to charge a higher rate for lighting the homes of the city than it would permit an infidel to charge? One of the outstanding features of every just government is that its laws should apply to all of the citizens alike, and it is seldom that citizens who are homest and who have lived a life of uprightness ask the State to permit the capitalization of their reputation by having laws passed that will give them special privileges over the ordinary citizen. There is no attempt made in Mr. Ford's offer to claim that this corporation which he will organize, and which will be the beneficiary of this great gift, will be any better than any other corporation. He is not claiming the many things that are claimed in his behalf by many of those who are spreading the wonderful propaganda over the country demanding that Congress shall accept his offer.

If there were no other reason for rejecting this offer, it ought to be rejected for this one provision alone, and if it is accepted with this provision in it, then Congress ought to lay down the bars and permit any organization organized by any other person to have the same privilege and the same right of a lease for 100 years of complete and unregulated control of power developed from our navigable streams. It is important also to note that this 100-year lease under Mr. Ford's proposition does not begin to run until the construction of Dam No. 2 is completed and until equipment for at least 100.000 horsepower are constructed and installed and ready for service, so that the 100-year period, as a matter of fact, is in reality more than 100 years.

100 years.

In the view submitted by the minority members of the Military Affairs Committee of the House (H. Rept. 1084, 67th Cong., 2d sess., p. 8) the minority members said:

Cong., 2d sess., p. 8) the minority members said:

We desire to direct the attention of the House to the fact that only a short while ago the Congress of the United States passed a water power act that provided, among other things, that no lessee, after the passage of said act, could be given a water-power privilege in any of the waters of the United States for a lease period covering more than 50 years. The Federal water power act further provides that all lessees of water power shall be surrounded by certain governmental restrictions as set forth in said act. It even goes so far as to restrict the profits the lessee can make on whatever his produce may be. It will be noticed that if Mr. Ford's offer is accepted, he will be given a lease covering a period of 100 years, commencing from the day of the finishing of the work of said dams and said power houses and the installing of the machinery therein. He is restricted only in two things, namely, if he can make fertilizers at a profit he will not charge a benefit for himself to exceed 8 per cent per annum on the cost of production. It must, however, be remembered that this company is not to engage in the manufacture of fertilizer except as a side issue. The other restriction is that he shall keep nitrate plant No, 2 in a stand-by condition, ready to be turned over to the Government in case of war.

stand-by condition, ready to be turned over to the Government in case of war.

According to the statements of his own representatives, the manufacturing of fertilizer will be a small part of his activities there provided this gigantic plant is turned over to him. These representatives say that he will engage in the general manufacturing business, and all through their testimony, let it be remembered, they say that he will only make fertilizer provided he finds it to be profitable to his concern. He will manufacture, perhaps, automobiles, surely parts for automobiles, plows, harrows, and other farm implements.

VIOLATION NATIONAL POLICY FEDERAL WATER POWER ACT.

Owing to numerous attacks upon the Federal water power act a committee was recently organized, known as the National Committee for Defense of the Federal Water Power Act. Among the members of this committee are: Ex-Secretaries of the Interior Walter L. Fisher and James R. Garfield, ex-Secretaries of War Henry L. Stimpson, Lindley M. Garrison, and Newton D. Baker, and David F. Houston. Among the other members are Gov. Gifford Pinchot, of Pennsylvania; Gov. Henry J. Allen, of Kansas; Mr. Herbert Knox Smith, former Commissioner of Corporations; Gov. John M. Parker, of Louislana; Mr. Philip P. Wells, ex-counsel for the Interior Department; Mr. Henry P. Graves, ex-Chief Forester of the United States. The committee contains nearly all of the former Government officials who administered the laws of the United States in respect to the use of water-power sites in navigable streams and on the public domain prior to the passage of the Federal water power act. In a public statement by the counsel of the committee, Mr. Philip F. Wells, the committee said concerning the Ford offer:

If this proposal were accepted by Congress every corporation which has or desires a water-power privilege would demand a lease on Mr. Ford's terms; and how could they be denied? The acceptance of his offer would be a deadly blow to the application of the principles of conservation to the use of water power.

The water power act of 1920 embodies those principles, and thereby protects the public interest in securing full development without having to pay monopoly profits. It does this by requiring:

"1. That every water-power lease shall be limited to a maximum of 50 years."

of 50 years.

"2. That the lessee shall pay the Government a small rental for the power privilege when he builds his own dam and other works, and a larger and fair rental when he uses works constructed by the and a larger and fair rental when he uses works constructed by the Government.

"3. That the lessee must submit to regulation by State authority, or if there is no State authority by the Federal Power Commission, of the services he renders and the prices he charges for light and power.

"4. That any excess profits over a fair, liberal return on the actual investment shall be made over to the public in the form of a reduced price for the lessee's works at the end of his 50-year term.

"5. That States and cities have first call on power sites."

None of these requirements would be imposed under the Ford offer, acceptance of which by Congress would therefore be practically tantamount to a repudiation of the Federal water power act.

In a formal statement dealing with the Ford offer one of the

In a formal statement dealing with the Ford offer one of the members of the committee, Mr. Herbert Knox Smith, said:

Its real vice is that it smashes straight through the vital principles of the Federal water power act for the protection of the public.

1. It is a grant for 100 years.

2. It provides for no rental payments whatsoever for the use of the site, and only an absurdly small rental for the use of the works built with Government money.

3. There is no provision whatsoever to prevent the making of excessive profits on the Ford Co.'s actual investment, nor to require any transfer of such excess to the public.

4. There is no regulation whatsoever of the distribution or use of the power.

There is no provision that it shall be used for public service in any way.

6. The Ford Co. is not required in any way to contribute to the cost of storage reservoirs hereafter built upstream. Such reservoirs would enormously increase the value of the Ford Co.'s site, and the Government is now making a survey for such storage develop-and the Government is now making a survey as successions.

Now, $85,000,000, more or less, lost once, while it sounds large to most of us, is not vital in a nation's life. But to break down the great principles that protect our eternal water powers, to which more and more we shall have to turn for the power that drives our industries; to rob indefinite future generations of the protection which we now have on water power and have lost on our other resources; and to do this when our chief other source of power, the coal mines, is becoming more and more of a critical problem—a problem that at this moment is at least brought home to the citizen by his empty coal bin—this is nothing short of national insanity.

These vital considerations were not even alluded to by Mr. MADDEN in his analysis of the Muscle Shoals situation.

3. FORD GUARANTIES NOT SUFFICIENT.

Mr. Madden summarizes the Ford offer in the following terms. He says:

Mr. Ford then agrees—
First. To operate nitrate plant No. 2 in the manufacture of nitrates at its full present capacity, namely, 40,000 tons of fixed nitrogen per annum, for a period of 100 years.

Second. To maintain nitrate plant No. 2 at all times in efficient, modernized operating condition for the use of the Government in time modernized operating condition for the use of the Government in time of war.

Third. To provide fertilizer to the full capacity of nitrate plant No. 2, with profit, if any, limited to 8 per cent above the fair actual cost of production.

Fourth. To supply such quantity of fertilizers, mixed or unmixed. An agreement to furnish mixed fertilizer composed of nitrogen, phosphoric acid, and potash will necessitate the erection by Mr. Ford at his own expense of a phosphoric-acid plant at Muscle Shoals, estimated to cost $15,000,000, which the Government would have to do if we should decide to operate ourselves.

Fifth. To research fertilizer production and to employ such improved methods as may be found successful.

Sixth. That the capital of $10,000,000 of the company to be formed shall be liable for the fulfillment of the contract, backed up—please note this—by Mr. Ford's entire personal estate and that of his heirs and assigns.

And Mr. MADDEN adds:

I do not think any of you entertain any question but that the purposes for which the undertaking was authorized will be entirely fulfilled under this offer, and I think you will all agree that the guaranties are wholly adequate. So assuming, I will now address myself to the consideration proposed by Mr. Ford.

The summary itself is incorrect on the face of the record. For instance, there is not a single word in the contract submitted which requires Mr. Ford to manufacture phosphoric acid, much less to spend $15,000,000 or any other sum in the construction of a phosphoric-acid plant.

Mr. Madden is wholly in error in this statement.

Nor is Mr. Madden's assumption that the so-called guaranties are admittedly adequate borne out by the facts.

In the view of the minority members of the House Military Affairs Committee heretofore quoted, the minority members

If this company that is to be formed to take over Muscle Shouls is indeed in earnest about making fertilizers, why is it that Mr. Ford's representatives have always refused to accept a clause in the contract written by the members of the Military Afairs Committee that would make it binding upon him to make fertilizers in all circumstances whatever else he might do with the Muscle Shouls plant? Such a clause was three times prepared by the committee, and it was three times rejected, and the proposal of Mr. Ford that is now before the House was written by his lawyers and contains no clause whatever that would compel his company throughout the 100-year period to manufacture fertilizer unconditionally.

These responsible Members of the House at least did not. subscribe to the assumption of Mr. Madden that the guaranties are sufficient.

The entire history of the negotiations with Mr. Ford is replete with efforts to secure a binding agreement as to fertilizer, and the record shows that these efforts were skillfully and successfully avoided by Mr. Ford.

The first communication of Mr. Ford on this subject was addressed to Gen. Lansing H. Beach, Chief of Engineers of the United States Army, under date of July 8, 1921. In this letter Mr. Ford offered to organize a company which should agree as follows:

12. If the United States agrees to sell, and the company purchases these several properties, nitrate plants, quarry, steam-power plants, transmission lines, etc., and at prices and on terms mutually satisfactory, the company will operate nitrate plant No. 2 to approximate present capacity in the production of nitrogen and other fertilizer compounds, with the following special objectives:

(a) To determine by research on a commercial scale whether, by means of electric-furnace methods and industrial chemistry, there may be produced fertilizer compounds of higher grade and at cheaper prices than the fertilizer-using farmers have in the past been able to procure, and to determine whether, in a broad way, the application of electricity and industrial chemistry may do for the agricultural industry of the country what they have economically accomplished for other industries.

(b) To maintain nitrate plant No. 2 in a state of readiness to be promptly operated in the manufacture of materials necessary in time of war for the production of explosives.

Secretary Weeks did not consider the above as constituting a binding agreement on the part of Mr. Ford to make fertilizer. His reasons are fully set forth in his testimony before the House Committee on Military Affairs (hearings before the Committee on Military Affairs, House of Representatives, 67th Cong., 2d sess., vol. 1, pp. 28, 29). In the course of this testimony Mr. Weeks reported the following conversation with Mr. Ford .

Mr. Werks. I said to him (Mr. Ford), "Will you guarantee o continue to manufacture fertilizer during the life of the contract?"

He replied that he would not.

I said in effect: "You might stop the manufacture of fertilizer in five years or in any time to the great disappointment of the people down there."

He said: "Of course, I am going to stop if I can not manufacture it profitably."

To meet the objections of the Secretary and to induce him to transmit the proposal to Congress Mr. Ford submitted a modified proposal under date of January 25, 1922, inclosing certain modifications in which the language of the fertilizer paragraph became as follows:

The company agrees to operate nitrate plant No. 2 at the approximate present annual capacity of its machinery and equipment in the production of nitrogen and other fertilizer compounds (said capacity being equal to approximately 110,000 tons of ammonium nitrate per annum) throughout the lease period, except as it may be prevented by strikes, accidents, fires, or other causes beyond its control, and further agrees:

(a) To determine by research whether by means of electric-furnace methods and industrial chemistry there may be produced on a commercial scale fertilizer compounds of higher grade and at lower prices than fertilizer-using farmers have in the past been able to obtain, and to determine whether in a broad way the application of electricity and industrial chemistry may accomplish for the agricultural industry of the country what they have economically accomplished for other industries.

(b) To maintain the description of the country what they have economically accomplished for other industries.

(b) To maintain nitrate plant No. 2 in its present state of readiness or its equivalent for immediate operation in the manufacture of materials necessary in time of war for the production of explosives.

In addition, to meet the further objections of the Secretary of War—as shown by the testimony referred to—Mr. Ford added a new provision to subdivision 19 of his proposal, as follows:

* * Upon acceptance of the promises, undertakings, and obliga-tions shall be binding upon the United States and jointly and sev-erally upon the undersigned, his heirs, representatives, and assigns, and the company * * *

The trouble with that is that it still only binds Mr. Ford All the other agreements are agreements of the company, limited, of course, by its assets. As the company will pay out $5,000,000 immediately to the Government only half of the $10,000,000 remains at most to guarantee fertilizer production.

Subsequently, during the hearings given by the House Military Affairs Committee, Mr. Ford authorized his representatives further to modify the so-called fertilizer guaranty in the following language (new matter italicized):

the following language (new matter italicized):

The company agrees to operate nitrate plant No. 2 using the most economical source of power at the approximate present annual capacity of its machinery and equipment in the production of nitrogen and other commercial fertilizers (said capacity being equal to approximately 110,000 tons of ammonium nitrate per annum) throughout the lease period, except as it may be prevented by strikes, accidents, fires, or other causes beyond its control, and further agrees:

(a) To determine by research whether by means of electric-furnace methods and industrial chemistry there may be produced on a commercial scale fertilizer compounds of higher grade and at lower prices than fertilizer-using farmers have in the past been able to obtain, and to determine whether in a broad way the application of electricity and industrial chemistry may accomplish for the agricultural industry of the country what they have economically accomplished for other industries, and if so found and determined, to reasonably employ such improved methods.

(b) To maintain nitrate plant No, 2 in its present state of readiness or its equivalent for immediate operation in the manufacture of materials necessary in time of war for the production of explosives.

The modifications did not however, appear to the committee

The modifications did not, however, appear to the committee to guarantee the manufacture of fertilizer nor fulfill the promises frequently made to the committee by Mr. Ford's representatives in their verbal communications.

For example, on February 13 (hearings before the Committee on Military Affairs, House of Representatives, 67th Cong., 2d sess., vol. 1, p. 253), Mr. Mayo, chief engineer for Mr. Ford. testifying before the committee, stated:

Mr. Ford intends to make a complete fertilizer.
Mr. MORIN. He intends to produce a complete fertilizer?
Mr. MATO. Yes, sir.
Mr. MORIN. Would it be sold in this form to the farmer?
Mr. MAYO. Yes, sir.

It is well known that a complete fertilizer suitable to be sold to the farmer, which is the promise contained in the above quotation from Mr. Ford's representative, contains suitable proportions not only of nitrogen but also of phosphoric acid and potash.

That Mr. Ford's representatives so understood and were leading the committee to believe that Mr. Ford would manufacture a complete fertilizer in due proportions and that to do so he would be obliged to manufacture fertilizer in large quantities is shown in the further testimony of Mr. Mayo, page 308, as follows:

Mr. James. How many tons does he bind himself under his contract?
Mr. Mayo. That all depends on the mixture and whether you carry a filler or not.
Mr. James. About how many—the least number of tons?
Mr. Mayo. In my judgment, it would run from a minimum of possplit 200,000 tons up to a maximum of about 2,000,000 tons, depending upon the class of fertilizer, whether it carried a filler or not, and the proportion it did carry, if any.

Similar assurances were also given by Mr. J. W. Worthington, who appeared before the committee with authority to speak for Mr. Ford. (Hearings, pp. 266, 267, and 279.)

Relying upon these promises, the committee sought to secure from Mr. Ford a similar statement over his own signature. Accordingly the committee drew up and submitted to all the bidders whose proposals had been referred to the committee a set of standard requirements, containing, as to fertilizer, the following:

Inasmuch as the manufacture of commercial fertilizers for our soils and the sale and distribution of the same to the farmers and other users thereof constitute one of the principal considerations of this offer moving to the Government of the United States and its people, the company expressly agrees that it will continuously through the lease period, except when prevented by war, accidents, fires, unavoidable strikes, or acts of Providence, manufacture annually at nitrate plant No. 2, or at such other plant or plants adjacent or near thereto as it may construct, 40,000 tons of fixed nitrogen, and will manufacture the same into complete fertilizer and fertilizer materials, and for that purpose it will manufacture or otherwise procure the remaining necessary additional fertilizer ingredients in sufficient quantities proportional to the said 40,000 tons of fixed nitrogen and mix and blend such fertilizer ingredients, with or without binder and filler, in such proportions as to make properly balanced commercial fertilizer. If during the lease period said nitrate plant No. 2 is destroyed or damaged from any cause, the company agrees to restore such plant within a reasonable time to its former capacity for all purposes. * *

In reply, Mr. Ford, under date of May 31, 1922, addressed a

In reply, Mr. Ford, under date of May 31, 1922, addressed a letter to Hon. Julius Kahn, chairman of the committee, in which he ignored the fertilizer guaranty requirements of the committee, and said, after a discussion of a matter immaterial to this issue:

I am sending a final proposal containing all the amendments suggested by the committee to which I can consistently agree.

The final proposal transmitted with this letter contained as to the fertilizer guaranty no acceptance of the requirements of the committee in respect to the inclusion of phosphoric acid and potash in the commercial fertilizer suitable for the use of farmers. In fact, Mr. Ford reverted to the language heretofore offered to the committee and rejected by it as insufficient, evasive, and not binding him to carry out the verbal promises made to the committee by his representatives quoted above. In short, Mr. Ford totally ignored the requirement that he should produce and utilize in connection with the nitrogen manufactured by him sufficient quantities of phosphoric acid and potash.

This reply was, of course, unsatisfactory to the committee. and this fact was made known to the representatives of Mr. Ford. Subsequently upon that day Mr. Ford's representatives met with members of the committee, desiring to reach a common ground of agreement, and the so-called fertilizer guaranty was again modified and finally reduced to the following language, and the next day accepted by the committee by an extremely close vote:

tremely close vote:

SEC. 12. Since the manufacture, sale, and distribution of commercial fertilizers to farmers and other users thereof constitute one of the principal considerations of this offer, the company expressly agrees that continuously throughout the lease period, except as it may be prevented by reconstruction of the plant itself, or by war, strikes, accidents, fires, or other causes beyond its control, it will manufacture nitrogen and other commercial fertilizers, mixed or unmixed, and with or without filler, according to demand, at nitrate plant No. 2 or its equivalent, or at such other plant or plants adjacent or near thereto as it may construct, using the most economical source of power available. The annual production of these fertilizers shall have a nitrogen content of at least 40,000 tons of fixed nitrogen, which is the present annual capacity of nitrate plant No. 2. If during the lease period said nitrate plant No. 2 is destroyed or damaged from any cause, the company agrees to restore such plant, within a reasonable time, to its former capacity and further agrees:

(a) To determine by research whether by means of electric-furnace methods and industrial chemistry there may be produced on a commercial scale fertilizer compounds of higher grade at lower prices than farmers and other users of commercial fertilizers have in the past been able to obtain and to determine whether in a broad way the application of electricity and industrial chemistry may accomplish for the agricultural industry of the country what they have economically accomplished for other industries; and if so found and determined, to reasonably employ such improved methods.

(b) To maintain nitrate plant No. 2 in its present state of readiness or its equivalent for immediate operation in the manufacture of mate-rials necessary in time of war for the production of explosives.

This is the version set forth in the McKenzie bill (H. R. 11903), which includes the revised proposed Ford contract.

In the version set forth in the McKenzie bill the personal underwriting clause in section 19 is eliminated.

It is the contention of this memorandum that the above history of the so-called "fertilizer guaranty" clauses of the Ford proposal not only exhibits a complete failure to submit an agreement which when accepted by the United States would bind Mr. Ford or even the company organized by him to make fertilizers suitable for the farmer's use at Muscle Shoals; but also exhibits an adroit and skillful avoidance by Mr. Ford of all effort to draw him into such a binding agreement, notwithstanding the repeated intimations and even assertions of his representatives and agents that he would render in fertilizer production a suitable return to the country for favors sought of untold value in perpetual largess from the Government.

This examination of the various steps in the negotiations with Mr. Ford shows that Mr. Ford's proposal in its present form contains no obligation to make fertilizer suitable for the farmers' use, including phosphoric acid and potash, as such a fer-the form of Government property bestowed upon him in fee at a nominal price and the use for 100 years of one of the country's greatest natural resources without compensation or restriction and with a renewal privilege making such use practically a tilizer requires. This is self-evident from perusal of the so-called "final offer" as set forth in the McKenzie bill. Mr. Ford originally chose this method.

The McKenzie bill entirely omits the personal-liability clause above referred to, though that clause itself, as shown, is fatally defective.

The idea of some personal liability was first introduced in the second proposal transmitted to Secretary Weeks, wording was (subdivision 19):

Upon acceptance, the promises, undertakings, and obligations shall binding upon the United States and jointly and severally upon the undersigned, his heirs, representatives, and assigns, and the Secretary Weeks referred to this (hearings, p. 28) as only a partial remedy. He construed the language as providing that proceedings could be brought against Mr. Ford, but added:

Now, just what those preceedings would amount to in case he stopped manufacturing fertilizer, except a mafter of damages against him or against the company, I am not very clear. • • • That is something that the committee may well take under consideration, but I did suggest that it seemed to me that there should be a forfeit in case of a failure to carry out that part of the agreement, because in my conversation with Mr. Ford I said to him: "Will you garantee to continue to manufacture fertilizer during the life of this contract?" He replied that he would not. I said: "Will you agree to invest a certain definite amount of money in the manufacture of this fertilizer?" and he said he would not. Now, of course, he does, in effect: "You might stop the manufacture of fertilizer in five years or in any other time to the great disappointment of the people down there," and he said: "Of course, I am going to stop if I can not manufacture it profitably."

Now, that being the case, and that idea being apparently in his head, it seems to me there should be some kind of forfeiture in case he fails to carry out this part of the agreement relating to the manufacture of fertilizer.

Mr. Ford is getting on in years. He is not going to be here manufacture of fertilizer, and no one knows what form his estate will be left in; and I think there should be a suitable guaranty that that part of this agreement is to be carried out in good faith by his successors without the necessity of bringing suit for damages.

The claim does not even appear in the McKenzie bill. In the

The claim does not even appear in the McKenzie bill. In the version there set forth Mr. Ford agrees to form a company and provide it with $10,000,000. Half of this will immediately be paid to the United States in exchange for property transferred in fee. Five million dollars will remain as the sole guaranty of the performance of the company's obligation. The company may fail utterly without affecting Mr. Ford's fortunes. He is exempt from liability. His estate is exempt. His heirs are What risks there are he takes to the extent of $10,exempt. 000,000. His liability is specifically limited by the familiar instrumentality of a corporation provided by our laws for the purpose of avoiding extension of personal liability.

However, in spite of Mr. Madden's assumption, the obliga-tion upon Mr. Ford's company to make fertilizer is expressed in terms raising grave doubt as to their binding character.

As shown in the foregoing, Mr. Ford's personal liability in the Muscle Shoals proposal, if any is involved, is specifically limited by the device of causing the agreement to be made by a subsidiary corporation of limited capital. Moreover, the language of the "final offer" respecting fertilizer is such as to at least throw grave doubt upon its binding character.

It should be noted in the first place that the sole obligation of the company is contained in the fertilizer section. Ford's company does not even purport to promise anything else. Vast power resources are turned over to the company practically forever without compensation, but Mr. Ford makes no undertaking to use these enormous power resources for any public purpose whatever. Nor does his company. The power resources are to be exploited unrestrictedly for the private use of Mr. Ford and his company. The public has no reservation of use; Mr. Ford has no restriction of profit. He does not have to furnish power for public service. He does not have to share his profits with the public. In short, all the rest of the contract is for Mr. Ford.

Consequently, the liabilities undertaken, if any there are, must be found in the engagements of the company-not Mr. Ford-with respect to fertilizer.

As above quoted, this section of the proposal contains the following significant words:

* * The company expressly agrees that continuously throughout the lease period, except as it may be prevented by reconstruction of the plant itself, or by war, strikes, accidents, fires, or other causes beyond its control, it will manufacture,

This is the language to which a magnifying glass should be applied. This is the only obligation in the contract, and it is to be carried out "unless prevented by (1) reconstruction of the plant, (2) war, strikes, accidents, fires, or (3) other causes beyond the company's control."

It could probably be contended that the words "or other causes beyond the company's control" would furnish the company an excuse for discontinuing fertilizer manufacture in case market conditions rendered further manufacture unremunerative. There is a clause in the proposal which will be discussed hereafter which indicates that the idea in this business is that Mr. Ford shall have a profit of 8 per cent. Reading the proposal as a whole, a falling market "beyond the control" of the company might easily be considered as relieving it of its obligation, especially as Mr. Ford clearly stated in the process of negotiation that he intended to quit if fertilizer making proved unprofitable. The rule of law is familiar and admits of this interpretation. (United States v. Mescall, 215 U. S. 26.)

But for the purposes of this argument it is sufficient to point out that the words of limitation introduce a grave doubt as to the binding character of the obligation. Why are those words there at all? They were not in the original offer, when Mr. Ford agreed only to experiment awhile with the fertilizer plant. They were introduced when he was compelled to "offer" run the plant "continuously during the lease period." Since then, though several times stricken out by the committee, they have reappeared when Mr. Ford was heard from. These words must be assigned a meaning. They could not be passed overignored—in any proper construction of the language under scrutiny; far less can they be regarded as negligible, in the face of the history of this clause, its frequent modification, Mr. Ford's persistence in retaining them against objection.

There is another obscure phrase in this same critical section. The company must make fertilizer unless prevented "by the re-construction of the plant." What do these words mean—under the microscope? Do they mean that by causing the plant to be reconstructed for use in some other production the obligation to make fertilizer can be avoided? Possibly this is an extreme construction; but what do they mean and why are doubtful words permitted in so crucial a section?

When it is considered that in this section alone is to be found whatever the company gives of real value for the almost priceless favors bestowed on Mr. Ford, the importance of every word in this section is emphasized. On examination, the present language is found to be vague, uncertain, evasive, and at least possibly destructive of that entire portion of the structure in which the public alone is interested. Even if contract is performed, effect upon fertilizer prices is uncertain and there is no suggestion of agreement to lower fertilizer prices. The proposed contract will be searched in vain for any section, clause, or phrase which guarantees or even promises a reduction in the price of fertilizer to the farmer. As in the case of the so-called "fertilizer guaranty" the verbal representations of Mr. Ford's representatives and Ford "offer" propagandists have suggested, implied, intimated, and even promised that "the farmer's fertilizer bill will be cut in half," and so forth. The quoted phrase in particular Ford "offer" has been press-agented throughout the country.

But the only subdivision of the proposed contract dealing with this subject at all is subdivision 15, as follows:

SEC. 15. In order that farmers and other users of fertilizers may be supplied with fertilizers at fair prices and without excessive profits, the company agrees that the maximum net profit which it shall make in the manufacture and sale of fertilizer products shall not exceed 8 per cent of the fair actual annual cost of production thereof. In order that this provision may be carried out, the company agrees to the creation of a board of not more than nine voting members, chosen as follows: The three leading representative farm organizations, national in fact, namely, the American Farm Bureau Federation, the National Grange, the Farmers' Educational and Cooperative Union of America, or their successor or successors to be determined in case of controversy by the Secretary of Agriculture, shall each designate not more than seven candidates for said board in the first instance and thereafter, for succession in office, not more than three candidates. The President shall nominate for membership on this board not more than seven candidates, selected to give representation to each of the abovementioned organizations, said nominations to be made subject to confirmation by the Senate, and there shall be two voting members of said board selected by the company: Provided. That not more than one shall be mominated by the President from the same State; that if the selected by the company: Provided. That not more than one shall be anominated by the President from the same State; that if either or any of said farm organizations or its or their chardidates until the Senate shall have confirmed seven. Provided the president of the seventh o

This subdivision promises nothing in the way of fertilizer price reduction. But it is interesting; what it does promise is a profit of 8 per cent to Mr. Ford. The board which is created has no power to deal with the price Mr. Ford asks for his fertilizer product unless Mr. Ford is selling it at a cost netting him more than 8 per cent on the cost of production. Not an annual 8 per cent on his investment; 8 per cent on the cost of production. This might be any per cent—8, 10, 12, 15, or 20 per cent annually on his investment.

But the board created by the proposed act can not function at all as to prices unless Mr. Ford has his 8 per cent on the cost of production. Even then it could only make a reduction to the point of Mr. Ford's 8 per cent profit on the cost of production, which, as stated, might be any per cent annually on his investment.

(Note.—The use of the word "annual" in the 8 per cent clause quoted above is meaningless, as the same working capital or investment might be several times "turned over" during the annual period.)

A practical guaranty of 8 per cent profit to Mr. Ford of no fertilizer manufacture is the real meaning of his proposal. The fact that the so-called price-fixing subdivision of this proposed contract really contains nothing definite except the promise of 8 per cent profit for Mr. Ford was apparently not accidental. In his testimony before the Senate Committee on Agriculture on May 1, 1922, Mr. Ford's personal representative, Mr. Mayo, being pressed by Ford supporters on the committee to say something definite on the price of fertilizer to farmers, bluntly retorted:

Mr. Mayo. The public is entitled to the fertilizer as cheaply as we can make it out of the best process that we can make it, plus 8 per cent profit.

If Mr. Ford's offer is to be the basis of a Government policy at Muscle Shoals, the so-called fertilizer guaranty (subdivision 14) should be rewritten in the terms proposed by the House committee and summarily rejected by Mr. Ford, which contains the following:

Inasmuch as the manufacture of commercial fertilizers for our soils and the sale and distribution of the same to the farmers and other users thereof constitute one of the principal considerations of this offer moving to the Government of the United States and its people, the company expressly agrees that it will continuously through the lease period, except when prevented by war, accidents, fires, unavoidable strikes, or acts of Providence, manufacture annually at nitrate plant No. 2, or at such other plant or plants adjacent or near thereto as it may construct, 40,000 tons of fixed nitrogen, and will manufacture the same into complete fertilizer and fertilizer materials, and for that purpose it will manufacture or otherwise procure the remaining necessary additional fertilizer ingredients in sufficient quantities proportional to the said 40,000 tons of fixed nitrogen and mix and blend such fertilizer ingredients, with or without binder or filler, in such proportion as to make properly balanced commercial fertilizer. If during the lease period said nitrate plant No. 2 is destroyed or damaged from any cause, the company agrees to restore such plant within a reasonable time to its former capacity for all purposes.

Subdivision 15 should also be rewritten in conformity with the above and should read as follows (new matter in italics):

Subdivision 15 should also be rewritten in conformity with the above and should read as follows (new matter in Italies):

SEC. 15. In order that farmers and other users of fertilizers may be supplied with fertilizers at lover prices than those precalling at the time of the making of this contract, the company agrees to the creation of a board of not more than nine voting members, chosen as follows: The three leading representative farm organizations, national in fact, namely, the American Farm Bureau Federation, the National Grange, the Farmers' Educational and Cooperative Union of America, or their successor or successors (said successor or successors to be determined in case of controversy by the Secretary of Agriculture), shall each designate not more than seven candidates for said board in the first and the secretary of the

EXCLUSIVE PERMANENT OWNERSHIP AND OPERATION NOT NECESSARY TO REFECT THE PUBLIC OBJECTIVES TO BE SECURED AT MUSCLE SHOALS.

The original authority of section 124 of the national defense act of June, 1920, contemplated "the production of nitrates and other products for munitions of war and useful in the manufacture of fertilizers and other useful products by water power or any other power," as in the judgment of the President is best and cheapest. The President was directed to use the products of such plants as might be constructed for military and naval purposes to the extent necessary and to see and to surplus under such regulations as may be prescribed. This is surplus under such to the Muscle Shoals project. This is Government operation. The law specifically prohibits their operation in conjunction with any industry or enterprise carried on by private capital.

It is apparent to anyone who has taken the time to make even superficial investigation that methods, means, or proce for atmospheric fixation of nitrogen have not been simplified or standardized so that nitrogen may be extracted from the air for use either as explosives or as a component part of fertilizer in commercial quantities, although scientists and experts are agreed that the studies and investigations going on throughout the world will in a few years make it possible for capital to engage in the business on a basis that will justify the production of nitrates as a permanent and independent industry.

The Congress has determined to complete the power development at Wilson Dam at an additional cost of about $25,000,000, which, added to the $17,000,000 already expended, will bring the total cost for power development to $42,000,000. The total Government investment at Muscle Shoals will then be about $132,000,000.

The entire project will then have every facility and will in every respect offer the greatest opportunity for the Government to lend its assistance not only through the efforts of its own agencies but at nominal cost, and in a practicable and comprehensive manner it will be in position to afford any citizen, company, or association the opportunity to demonstrate the practicability of methods and processes brought forward from time to time by scientists and experts. In either event the Government itself, to the extent the public good and the best interest of the Government requires, may employ such methods or, if such a course appears best, it may from time to time and for limited periods lease such of its plants or facilities and provide the necessary power for the production of nitrates, both for explosives and fertilizer or other useful products, under proper restrictions and reservations as may be necessary to protect and preserve the interests of the Government and the regulation and control of the price of the products to the ultimate consumer

Rather than transfer title to its immense facilities at Muscle Shoals and lease its entire hydropower for 100 years to one corporation under conditions, viewed in the most favorable light, of doubtful propriety or wisdom, is it not the better policy for the Government not only to provide adequate facilities for its own investigations but for any citizen who may come forward with an offer or plan which has promise of merit looking to the operation of a portion or all of these facilities on a basis that will insure the greatest good to the greatest number?

There is every reason to expect that American business, American ingenuity, and American capital would sooner or later, encouraged and assisted by the Government, work out some means or process of nitrogen fixation that will revolutionize the entire nitrate industry.

Under such a policy the Government could dispose of its surplus material and property and lease the surplus power for distribution to municipalities and the industrial development in the States adjoining, with necessary reservations to recall any or all the hydropower that from time to time may be necessary for the production of nitrates for explosives and for fertilizer. Through this very sensible and businesslike course the Government would properly receive an adequate and continuous return upon its investment in hydropower production without special favor or discrimination and under public regulation.
All the evidence justifies the assumption that the power market demand would immediately absorb the entire output at Wilson

TO ACCEPT THE FORD OFFER WOULD REQUIRE THE GOVERNMENT TO REPUBLIATE ITS CONTRACT.

The Ford offer as amended obligates the Government to assign and transfer to the company all rights, title, interest, powers, and benefit belonging to or that may accrue to it by reason of its contract with the Alabama Power Co., under which the Gorgas plant and the Sheffield transmission line was constructed. Briefly, the facts are that at the time and under the stress of war the Government found itself in immediate need of large blocks of power, which could not be obtained other than from the Alabama Power Co., a public-service corporation in Alabama engaged in the generation and transmission of power to industries and municipalities throughout a major por-tion of the territory of that State. Under the conditions the company was not able to respond to the request of the Government for power and continue to provide energy to municipalities and numerous industries in the State engaged in the production of essential war material. This situation was quite apparent to the officers of the Government. Notwithstanding this fact, it was imperative that it secure for construction purposes and have recourse to a large quantity of power with which to prosecute with expedition the construction of its plants at Muscle Shoals and their operation pending the construction of its own steam plant and a water-power dam. This the officers of the Government realized would require time. They appealed to the Alabama Power Co, for assistance.

The company was unable, as was every public-utility concern during the war, to secure funds or even material, in the absence of priority orders, for the enlargement of its power resources.

Whereupon officers of the War Department agreed to advance funds with which power facilities could be provided. It so happened that at Gorgas on the Warrior River, 90 miles south of Muscle Shoals, the Alabama Power Co. had constructed an auxiliary steam plant at a location where two important factors existed—water in abundance and large coal deposits. It had planned and laid the foundation for three power units as an auxiliary to its hydroelectric system. One unit had been completed and in operation. The Government contracted to furnish funds with which to construct at once an additional and a larger unit than the company had planned to meet its future requirements, and also to provide the funds with which to construct a transmission line to Sheffield. The contract recognized that the lands upon which these facilities were to be constructed would belong to the company and that the facilities for generating and transmitting power, constructed with Government funds, should remain the property of the Government as security for its investment therein pending the time when the Government would provide its own power requirements and relinquish to the company the facilities constructed on their lands. The contract recognized the equities of the situation and the injustice that would be done the company if it were to retain and operate these generating and transmission facilities as a going concern or dispose of them to anyone else than the company. It therefore contracted that on certain contingencies, anticipated that would happen after the close of the war within a certain period, to sell its facilities to the company at a fair value as a going concern, the price to be agreed upon between the parties or determined by arbitration.

The company engaged to buy these properties upon the demand of the Government, and in turn the Government engaged that it would require any other purchaser than the company, if it became necessary to sell to some one else, to remove the properties from the lands of the company. The company in good faith performed its part of the contract and stands ready to pay the Government what its officers regard as a fair value The law officers of the Government have for the properties. submitted opinions that the War Department exceeded its authority when it attempted to bind the Government to an option contract to sell to the company or to provide a method for determining the purchase price.

It is conceded by the officers of the War Department that the Gorgas properties and the transmission line can not be considered in any sense a necessary or essential part of the Muscle Shoals projects, but are temporary facilities provided to meet urgent war demands. If it be true that the Government had no authority in law to enter into the so-called option contract, the fact remains that its solemn contractual obligation is to remove the properties from the lands of the company and not to promote interference with their business operations by turning over to an outsider plants and facilities which they were called upon as a war duty to create for the temporary benefit of the Government. It was perfectly legitimate for the company to seek such assurances, and the contract provides them. Many contracts during the war of similar character were executed and carried out in good faith by both parties.

The solemn obligation of the Government is to deal with this company itself and not to transfer its rights or interests growing out of the contract to an outsider under circumstances and conditions where immediately a conflict of interest may arise that was not in the minds of the original parties to the : ment. The Government can not morally or legally, in a te.... cal sense, transfer to an outsider, in no sense a party to the original agreement, whatever rights, powers, or interests the Government may have growing out of its contract to deal with its citizens, whether a corporation or an individual.

The so-called majority report of the Military Affairs Committee on the Muscle Shoals question properly characterizes such action on the part of the sovereign an unjustifiable method of dealing with the citizen, and would establish a precedent debatable if not unwise. The Secretary of War, discussing this subject, very properly asserts that the Government has a moral obligation, even though it may not be required in a strictly legal sense to do so, to recognize in good faith all contract agreements with its citizens.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Washington asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. Speaker, I make the same request.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

The extensions of remarks referred to are here printed in full

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I desire to present a brief statement concerning the work of the House Committee on Immigration and Naturalization during the Sixtyseventh Congress, and to outline a program for that committee in the Sixty-eighth Congress.

First, let me say that no committee of the House has sat more days, examined more witnesses, received and considered more petitions, documents, written statements and letters. my opinion there is a greater and more widespread demand for the immigration hearings than the hearings of any other committee. I think there is more public interest in immigration than in any other subject. From the leaders of debating teams in the most remote rural schools to the best-known instructors in the most prominent universities come requests for information. From the latest candidates for citizenship to the largest employers of labor come letters asking for copies of hearings, bills, and reports. Petitions come, on one side from the patriotic orders, and on the other side-for freer immigrationfrom the so-called hyphenated alliances and societies, and even from known anarchistic and revolutionary organizations. Letters pour in from the nationals of all the countries of the world, asking this, that, and everything imaginable, while aliens who have reached the United States appear daily at the door of the committee room appealing for the admission of some relative or friend.

Ever is the committee reminded that the problems of immigration carry with them all the problems of the human heart. Every day is some phase of "The Divine Comedy" or "Tragedy" revealed.

But, Mr. Speaker, every day it is made apparent to every member of the committee that the greatest question before the people of the United States is immigration. More, it is not only the greatest but the most vital. All the future of the United States hangs on the problems before this committee. Forty other intermediate problems, each serious—agriculture, manufacture, education, food supply, relations with other nations, wages, the care of dependents and defectives, our standard of living, our language, our birth rate, our customs, our theaters, and so on-all are affected by what the Congress of the United States does with regard to immigration. And remember that each committee of Congress is in itself a little congress which tables some bills, modifies and renders inocuous other bills, and reports through its chairman still other bills, advocating with all the strength permissible within parlia-mentary limitations the passage of those bills and their enactment into law. To secure enactment the House, the Senate, and the Chief Executive must be substantially in accord—which accounts for the failure each Congress of so many bills which to some of us seem so desirable.

Mr. Speaker, I desire to compliment the members of the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization for their patience, their constant attendance at long committee sessions, and for their assistance with the chairman's program, in spite of the great differences of opinion which are bound to exist when 15 men are gathered together, not only from all parts of America but from different parts of the world, to outline our legislative policy. If I may, I shall print the names of the members of this committee in this Congress. They are:

ALBERT JOHNSON, Washington, chairman; Isaac Siegel. New York; J. Will Taylor, Tennessee; John C. Kleczka, Wisconsin; William N. Vaile, Colorado; Hays B. White, Kansas; Guy L. Shaw, Illinois; Robert S. Maloney, Massachusetts; Arthur M. Free, California; John L. Cable, Ohio; Adolph J. Sabath, Illinois; John E. Raker, California; Riley J. Wilson, Louisiana; John C. Box, Texas; L. B. Rainey, Alabama; and P. F. Snyder, clerk.

Five members retire at the close of this Congress. They ISAAC SIEGEL, New York; JOHN C. KLECZKA, Wisconsin; GUY L. SHAW, Illinois; ROBERT S. MALONEY, Massachusetts; and L. B. RAINEY, Alabama.

They have been hard-working members, and the rest of us wish them well. All are men of force, and all have had de-termined views in the committee, one on this question, and one on that question. In fact, this is the one committee that does not divide on political lines. Its divisions are tight restriction versus liberal immigration; on the privilege to be given to citizens, on immigration to the Territories and insular possessions, on the question of asylum in the United States, the question of labor, and so forth.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, is it not remarkable that during this Congress, after acting decisively one way or another on 90 bills and resolutions, as shown by the calendar, this committee should have reported favorably to the House the following bills, as shown by the following extract from the index to the House Calendar of this date, March 3, 1923:

IMMIGRATION.

ALIENS.

Deportation of certain undesirables: H. R. 11118; Mr. Johnson of Washington. Reported from Immigration and Naturalization April 3, 1922, Report No. 867. Union Calendar. Passed House April 5, 1922. In Senate referred to Immigration.

LIMITING ENTRY OF ALIENS INTO THE UNITED STATES.

1922. In Senate referred to immigration.

LIMITING ENTRY OF ALIENS INTO THE UNITED STATES.

H. R. 4075: Mr. Johnson of Washington. Reported from Immigration and Naturalization April 19, 1921. Report No. 4. Union Calendar. Passed House April 22, 1921. In Senate referred to Immigration. Reported in Senate, amended (S. Rept. 17), April 30, 1921. Passed Senate, amended, May 3, 1921. House disagreed and the bill sent to conference May 5, 1921. Agreed to in both House and Senate May 13, 1921. Approved May 19, 1921. Public law No. 5.

For the consideration of H. R. 4075. H. Res. 56; Mr. Johnson of Washington. Reported from Rules April 20, 1921. Report No. 9. Adopted April 20, 1921.

H. J. Res. 153; Mr. Johnson of Washington. Reported from Immigration and Naturalization June 13, 1921, Report No. 169. House Calendar. Passed House June 20, 1921. In Senate referred to Immigration Reported in Senate June 27, 1921. Passed Senate August 15, 1921. Approved August 22, 1921. Public Resolution No. 16.

Extending operation of act of May 19, 1921. H. J. Res. 268; Mr. Johnson of Washington. Reported from Immigration and Naturalization February 17, 1922. Report No. 710. Union Calendar. Passed House February 20, 1922. In Senate referred to Immigration Reported in Senate, amended, April 5, 1922. Passed Senate, amended, April 15, 1922. Senate agreed May 3, 1922. Approved May 11, 1922. Public Resolution No. 55.

Remain in United States in excess of quotas, permitting certain to. H. J. Res. 279; Mr. Johnson of Washington. Reported from Immigration and Naturalization March 7, 1922, Report No. 776. Union Calendar. Passed House March 16, 1922. In Senate referred to Immigration and Naturalization Reported November 21, 1921. Senate agreed to House March 16, 1922. In Senate referred to Immigration and Naturalization Reported November 21, 1921. Senate agreed to House amended, November 21, 1921. Senate agreed to House manched, November 21, 1921. Senate agreed to House amended, November 21, 1921. Senate agreed to House amended November 28, 1921.

CITIZENSHIP.

Women, naturalization and citizenship of married. H. R. 12022; Mr. CABLE. Reported from Immigration and Naturalization June 18, 1922, Report No. 1110. House Calendar. Passed House June 20, 1922. In Senate referred to Immigration. Reported in Senate September 1, 1922. Passed Senate September 9, 1922. Approved September 22, 1922. Public law No. 346.
Fischer, Emil S., granting citizenship: H. J. Res. 34; Mr. SIECEL Reported from Immigration and Naturalization April 14, 1921, Report No. 3. Private Calendar. Committee of the Whole House discharged and rereferred to Immigration and Naturalization June 24, 1921.
S. J. Res. 38. Passed Senate May 2, 1921. Rejected in House May 3, 1921. Motion to reconsider entered in House May 4, 1921. Committed to Immigration and Naturalization June 24, 1921.

After much strenuous labor the committee favorably reported to the House on February 15 its constructive immigration bill as a substitute for S. 4092, which had passed the Senate by manimous consent February 5, 1923. The Senate act provided for the admission into the United States of not more than 25,000 orphaned or homeless Armenian children under 16 years of age and, in addition thereto, the admission, to join relatives in the United States, either citizens or declarants, of husbands, wives, parents, grandparents, unmarried or widowed daughters, granddaughters, sisters, sons, grandsons, and brothers under 18 years of age of the Armenian race who have fled from Turkish territory since 1914; admission to be on the application of the residents, subject to the conditions of the immigrations laws except the quota act.

The House committee's bill, as a substitute for S. 4092, a comprehensive, constructive, permanent bill, more orderly than any heretofore presented; carrying out scientifically the principle embodied in the existing temporary quota law; providing for the admission from each country now sending immigrants a minimum of 400 annually plus 2 per cent of the nationals here according to the census of 1890; exempting therefrom the near relatives of foreign-born citizens and aliens who have declared their intention to become citizens, thus relieving the hardship of dividing alien families; starting registration in accordance with President Harding's recommendation by requiring future immigrants to bring a certificate containing full information about their health, civic record, political activities, and character; permitting aliens here to return to their native lands for temporary visits; ending the present outrageous evasion of the immigration laws by which dangerous, loathsome, and contagious diseased aliens gain admission as seamen under the La Follette law, by simply requiring alien seamen to pass the same immediate inspection and medical examination that immigrant aliens have to pass; excluding all aliens ineligible to citizenship unless entering for business, pleasure, or other temporary purpose; and otherwise perfecting and humanizing the existing immigration laws in order that America may be adequately protected from defective, dependent, and objectionable or surplus aliens as our other laws protect us from defective seeds, diseased plants, inferior live stock, and even surplus foreign goods made by pauper labor.

Two weeks were spent on the alien-seamen provisions. Demands were made for additional provisions which, in my opinion, were beyond the jurisdiction of this committee.

Within a fortnight after this substitute for the Senate bill was reported the legislative situation was about as follows:

The calendars of both House and Senate were congested. filibuster was in progress in one branch and similar obstructionist tactics were threatened in the other. The fear was expressed by leaders that, inasmuch as all immigration matters are highly contentious, much debate and additional opportunity for filibuster would be presented if the substitute bill should be brought up for consideration. Finally the chairman secured a promise of a rule, although he was informed that more rules were at that time authorized than could be considered during the brief time remaining before adjournment. Ascertaining this to be a fact, and after mature consideration, and in order to try to get through some of the immediate and urgently needed provisions of the substitute bill the chairman introduced a short bill providing for admission of the near family relatives of American citizens-fathers, mothers, husbands, wives, and minor children-without regard to quotas, and reducing, by way of compensation, the quotas from 3 per cent to 2 per cent, based on the census of 1910, as at present provided in the act of May 19, 1921.

In my opinion restrictive laws that do not give to American citizens the privilege of sending for the alien members of their own immediate families will not stand. Unfortunately, through the Associated Press and other news agencies, the Members of Congress were misinformed when time was of the essence as to the provisions of the short bill. To pass it under suspension of rules required a two-thirds vote. There was not time in the closing, crowded hours of a long, busy Congress to explain it either by speech or letter. So it failed, like many other With it went the hope of the refugees of the world for the relief it offered in response to appeals for admission of thousands upon thousands from Armenia, Greece, and elsewhere.

The appeals of employers for more common labor from foreign lands fell when the committee voted out its substitute bill. To admit laborers in quantities means that we are to continue to have with us the problem of how many and what classes, to say nothing of the other serious problems of excessive immigration, unemployment, and undermined standards and conditions.

So, Mr. Speaker, in spite of tremendous appeals, this committee stood against two great forces. But, Mr. Speaker, the committee has its big, constructive bill ready to report in De-cember at the very beginning of the Sixty-eighth Congress. We ask for support for it now. It will be pressed. The quota law is not perfect but it has restricted immigration, and the big bill will cure most, if not all, of its defects and imperfec-The quota law has reduced the influx more than 2,000,000 in less than two years. We admit it has created personal hardships, but the bill we have prepared will reduce these to a minimum. Under the proposed bill feasible foreign inspection and examination of immigrants will commence. Few of those who can not be admitted will ever start from their foreign homes.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I believe I voice the sentiment of the country when I say that the great problem in the United States is not what we will do with the immigrant, but what the immigrant will do with us. The real problem is to check the influx so that we can assimilate and Americanize the over 14,000,000 foreign born and 20,000,000 children of foreign born now in our midst. We must not let in a flood that threatens further to swamp our forces of Americanization and foreignize us.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. Speaker, during the present session we have heard a great deal, both in Congress and out, about "propaganda." From the statements which have been made it seems evident that there are Members of Congress who consider that it is "propaganda" when they receive requests from their constituents to vote for or against legislation in which these constituents are interested; it is "propaganda" when literature or letters are mailed to Congressmen by the American Federa-tion of Labor, the American Farm Bureau Federation, National Grange, or other organizations which make it their business to look after the best interests of the people. But when literature and letters are received by these same Congressmen from Wall Street or from the Fertilizer Trust, the Alabama Power Co. or the Nitrate Trust, or other business interests, then such literature and letters are not propaganda but "enlightening information." A distinguished leader of the House says that information." there has been a "chorus of misstatements and of false propaganda with regard to the Ford offer," and I agree with him, In an effort to find an objection to the Ford offer which would ruin that proposal in the eyes of the country there have been no end of misrepresentations made during the past session of this Congress. Henry Ford has been held up before the country as a robber or as an insincere schemer, holding out a meaningless fertilizer bait to catch the farmers while under cover he was planning to get away with a water power of such great value that the figures pass all comprehension.

The very extravagance of the statements of the opposition is sufficient to condemn them in the eyes of intelligent people, and the very bitterness of the fight itself, the determination of these special interests to deny Mr. Ford the right to undertake to work out a great national problem at Muscle Shoals, is conclusive evidence to me that they themselves do not doubt that Mr. Ford will do what he has agreed to do and a great

The distinguished Republican leader says that if the proposition had been made by "anyone but Mr. Ford it would have been smothered by ridicule." My opinion is that if the same My opinion is that if the same offer had been made by the Alabama Power Co., the Fertilizer Trust, or, in fact, "anyone but Mr. Ford," the lame ducks looking for jobs to take the place of the jobs which have been taken away from them by dissatisfied constituents-would have seen to it that the House would have been given an opportunity last June to vote on the proposition.

As it was, these lame ducks refused to give their fellow legislators an opportunity to vote on a measure which they knew would pass Congress by a large majority.

I have examined the arguments of these opponents both in and out of Congress, and in order that the public may appreciate how empty their objections are, I am reviewing these principal objections and at the same time stating the real facts as I have found them.

FORD OFFER NOT A BONANZA.

The opponents have made the most extravagant claims as to the value of what Mr. Ford would receive under his offer. They have said "there is nothing in the history of the world with which this can be compared. Civilization is without a precedent. It is the greatest gift ever bestowed upon mortal man since salvation was made free to the human race."

The truth is that these same properties have been offered under more favorable terms than the Ford offer to the very interests who now oppose the acceptance of the Ford proposal, and these interests would not have them on any terms.

If it were true that Mr. Ford gets $100,000,000 worth of value for $5,000,000, there would have been a rush to secure the Muscle Shoals property, and the opponents of the Ford offer well know it. If it were possible to get 20 for 1 on a private investment at Muscle Shoals, it is absurd to think that Mr. Ford would have been the only one to make a businesslike offer.

The truth is that whoever works out the problems at Muscle Shoals must assume so large a risk of private investment and must undertake such a large responsibility to the country that among the many who might have made a responsible offer for Muscle Shoals Mr. Ford was the only one with sufficient cour-

What he gets has been repeatedly stated. It consists of two nitrate plants; one is a small experimental plant that was not a success and which uses the dangerous Haber process, which no one in this country has undertaken to develop on a large scale, although there is no patent situation that prevents it. The patents on the Haber process are available to anyone. As for the other nitrate plant, which uses the cyanamide process, the experts all agree that this process is obsolete and must be The testimony shows, however, that processes do exist for taking nitrogen from the air whereby it may reasonably be expected that the cost of fertilizer to the farmer may be reduced 50 per cent. This can be accomplished only at great expense. Mr. W. B. Mayo, chief engineer of the Ford Motor Co., testified that Mr. Ford expects to spend at least $50,000,000 in working out these problems.

THE GOVERNMENT GETS A MOST REASONABLE RETURN UNDER THE FORD OFFER.

The opponents claim that "the Ford offer is absurd in its proposed transfer of great properties and great opportunities without reasonable return."

The truth is that, under the Ford offer, the Government and the people get much more than could have been expected, and so much more than any other responsible bidder was willing to offer that the Ford proposal has no competitors.

After a short preliminary period of preparation to utilize the power, Mr. Ford pays the Government 4 per cent on the entire cost of completing Dam No. 2 and completely building Dam No. 3, including full equipment and all reservoir lands, overflow rights, and so forth. This includes not only the portion of the structures devoted to power production, but the navigation locks as well.

The Government also receives annuities from Mr. Ford, which, according to the testimony of the Secretary of War, are suffi-cient, if invested at only 4½ per cent, to return to the Govern-ment more than $70,000,000 during the lease period, and if they were invested in farm-loan bonds at 5 per cent the return would exceed $100,000,000.

The Government is assured of the maintenance in a modernized and up-to-date condition of a great nitrate plant capable of furnishing nitrogen for explosives sufficient for one-third of the greatest military force that the United States was able to organize during the World War.

The Government gets large taxable values and is protected against excess profits by the present income tax law. If Mr. Ford makes the unconscionable profits which have been claimed, then under the present law the Government will get the most of it.

The greatest benefit of the Ford offer, however, is the establishment of a fertilizer plant having a large capacity for nitrate production. Expressed as Chilean nitrate of soda, the amount of nitrate which Mr. Ford agrees to produce annually is 250,000 tons, sufficient nitrogen for 2.000,000 tons of 2-8-2 commercial fertilizer and equal to the full amount of nitrates imported annually by American agriculture in recent years. The Ford offer provides that this great tonnage of nitrate fertilizer mixed with other plant foods according to demand—and as is common knowledge, the only other commercial plant foods are phosphoric acid and potash—shall be delivered directly to the farmer at a profit not to exceed 8 per cent on the fair actual annual cost of production.

But there are other great benefits. The Ford offer establishes a precedent in one respect. When it is accepted there will be one great water power in this country so financed that the original investment-corresponding to the bonds issued in an ordinary power project-is being amortized and eliminated, and with its elimination there is removed the interest on the investment, which constitutes 75 to 80 per cent of the cost of any American water power at the generating station.

This is a benefit to the people of the United States more fundamental than cheap fertilizer, for by adopting this method and bringing the cost of electrical power in this country to the low level that prevails in Canada and Norway cheap fertilizers and other products can be made available all over the country.

Under the Ford offer the navigation of the Tennessee River will finally be placed upon a commercial basis, and a territory nearly the size of England, rich in a great variety of useful resources, for the first time will have water transportation to the great markets of the Mississippi Valley and beyond. To do this requires the construction of Dam No. 3, and the construction of this dam is an important part of the Ford proposal.

Commercial considerations, as shown below, will compel Mr. Ford to construct large reservoirs in the tributary streams of the Tennessee River to stabilize his flow and make useful more than 500,000 horsepower of generating equipment which otherwise must stand practically idle. These reservoirs will reduce the floods which frequently cause great loss in the upper Ten-nessee Valley, and at these dams there can be developed at least 100,000 horsepower of merchantable power for distribution in a section where it is greatly needed.

Under the Ford offer thousands of men would be employed at good wages, and a commercial impetus would be given to a com-mercially backward section of the country which would benefit not only that section itself but every other section which serves this region commercially.

HENRY FORD HAS POSITIVELY AGREED TO MAKE FERTILIZER AT MUSCLE SHOALS UNDER A REASONABLE COMMERCIAL GUARANTY WHICH IS NOT CONDITIONAL ON HIS MAKING A PROFIT,

Some opponents claim that advocates of the Ford offer-gain support because they promise the farmer the much-needed fertillzer. * * * Our position is that this is a hollow promise, made to enlist the support of the farmers and not absolutely binding on any fact contained in the contract or existing outside of the contract.

Other opponents, admitting that Mr. Ford will make fer-tilizer at Muscle Shoals, contend that Mr. Ford "does not agree to make a pound of fertilizer at Muscle Shoals unless he can make it at a profit of 8 per cent to himself."

The truth is to be found in the Ford offer itself. Paragraph 15 of Mr. Ford's signed offer says in plain English:

15 of Mr. Ford's signed offer says in plain English:

15. Since the manufacture, sale, and distribution of commercial fertilizers to farmers and other users thereof constitutes one of the principal considerations of this offer, the company expressly agrees that continuously throughout the lease period, except as it may be prevented by reconstruction of the plant itself or by war, strikes, accidents, fires, or other causes beyond its control, it will manufacture nitrogen and other commercial fertilizers, mixed or unmixed, and with or without filler, according to demand, at nitrate plant No. 2 or its equivalent, or at such other plant or plants adjacent or near thereto as it may construct, using the most economical source of power available. The annual production of these fertilizers shall have a nitrogen content of at least 40,000 tons of fixed nitrogen, which is the present annual capacity of nitrate plant No. 2.

ENOUGH NITROGEN TO MAKE 2,000,000 TONS OF 2-8-2 MIXED FERTILIZER TONS OF 2-8-2 MIXED FERTILIZER ENOUGH NITROGEN TO MAKE 2,000,000 TO ANNUALLY.

I contend, Mr. Chairman, that this constitutes a definite binding agreement to produce at least 40,000 tons of fixed nitrogen annually, which is enough nitrogen to make 2,000,000 tons of 2-8-2 mixed fertilizer. Furthermore, it is not conditional upon Mr. Ford's ability to make 8 per cent profit or any other profit whatever.

I might say in passing that in 1921 there were only 5,000,000 tons of fertilizer consumed in the United States, so that Mr. Ford's obligation represented 40 per cent of the country's entire tonnage for that year.

WHAT THE ACTING JUDGE ADVOCATE GENERAL OF THE ARMY SAYS ABOUT IT.

It has been maintained, it is true, that the expression "except as it may be prevented by the reconstruction of the plant itself or by war, strikes, accidents, fires, or other causes beyond its control" offers a loophole, because the market price itself may be a cause beyond the control of Mr. Ford or his company, and that the inability to compete in the fertilizer market might be sufficient cause to warrant him in stopping the manufacture of fertilizer. Fortunately the highest legal authority in the Army has already passed on this point. On February 10, 1922, Col. John A. Hull, Acting Judge Advocate General, testified before our committee as follows:

Mr. Parker. Then it is a serious matter of doubt whether he would have to go on and have to dispose of the goods at a loss if the market price was below what he could make it for?

Colonel HULL. He would have to do it, unless relieved either by Congress or a court of equity.

Mr. Parker. But it says, "other causes beyond his control," and the price of the goods on the market would be beyond his control?

Colonel HULL. As I said, in my judgment the courts would not hold that price would be "other causes beyond his control."

Mr. Parker. You think not?

Colonel HULL. No, sir.

The Acting Judge Advocate General also gave us the following testimony that day:

Ing testimony that day:

Mr. Hull. If we accept this contract with Mr. Ford, does that leave us free of any contract or liability with any other company?

Colonel Hull. I should say so.

Mr. Hull. You had something to do, as I understand it, with the drafting of this contract?

Colonel Hull. It was drafted in the office.

Mr. Hull. Then I presume you know something about the liability of Mr. Ford under that contract?

Colonel Hull. Yes, sir; it has been studied.

Mr. Hull. Would he be bound to produce fertilizer under that contract if it was found possible?

Colonel Hull. As now drafted?

Mr. Hull. As now drafted he would have to produce at least—
Colonel Hull. (interposing). To the maximum capacity of plant No. 2.

Mr. Hull. There would not be any question about that?

Colonel Hull. There is not any, in my mind.

The CHAIRMAN. Under what section?

Colonel Hull. Section 14.

Mr. Hull. Suppose he could not produce it; that it was found physically impossible to produce the fertilizer compound in paying quantities; what would be the result so far as the contract with the Government goes?

Colonel Hull. If the Government insists, a court of equity would ernment goes?

Colonel HULL. If the Government insists, a court of equity would grant relief, and not compel the performance of the impossible.

Mr. HULL. What section of the second contract with Mr. Ford that?

covers that?

Colonel HULL. Section 14.

Mr. HULL. If it was found impossible to produce this fertilizer, I presume of course he would be enabled to take the hydroelectric power that was supposed to go into the production of the fertilizer and use it or sell it as he saw fit?

Colonel HULL. Yes; but of course he would be obligated to maintain his laboratory and experiments and try to produce.

Mr. HULL, He would have to keep experimenting and trying to produce fertilizer?

Colonel HULL. Yes, sir.

Other concents have also claimed that: "Reading the pres-

Other opponents have also claimed that: "Reading the proposal as a whole, a falling market 'beyond the control' of the company might easily be considered as relieving it of its obliand cite the case of United States v. Mescall (215 U. S. 26). In this citation Mr. Justice Brewer, delivering the opinion of the court, stated that in interpreting the meaning of a general expression (such as "other causes beyond their control") the rule for interpretation "is never applied to defeat the real purpose of the statute as that purpose may be gathered from the whole instrument." And the legal practice which is folthe whole instrument." And the legal practice which is fol-lowed when general and specific words, which are capable of similar meaning, are associated together, is that they "take color from each other so that the general words are restricted to a sense analogous to the less general." (15 Cyc. 247, note 6.) It is evident that the opinion of Colonel Hull is supported by the highest legal authorities.

CHEAP PERTILIZERS UNDER THE FORD OFFER ARE A REASONABLE EXPEC-

The opponents claim that the demand for the acceptance of the Ford offer "is predicated almost wholly on the entirely groundless assertation that if the Ford offer is accepted Mr. Ford will furnish the farmers of the country with cheap fer-tilizer." "It is amazing," they say, "how persistent these mis-statements are reiterated, notwithstanding the fact that a reading of the Ford offer makes it very clear that Mr. Ford makes no pledge or promise of cheap fertilizer."

The truth is that the record may be examined from end to end, but nowhere will be found a statement from those advocating the Ford offer to the effect that Mr. Ford has promised or guaranteed to reduce the cost of fertilizer. It is entirely true that the Ford offer does not contain a guarantee to cut the price of fertilizer in half, no prudent business man would recklessly guarantee such a thing, but the manufacture of cheap fertilizer under the naturally favorable conditions that exist at Muscle Shoals is a far less difficult undertaking than was the development of the Ford automobile.

The supporters of the Ford offer have maintained constantly from the beginning that it is a reasonable expectation that Mr. Ford can and will reduce the cost of fertilizers to the consumer if his offer for Muscle Shoals is accepted. When the advan-tages of Muscle Shoals are available such an accomplishment is merely a matter of a competent organization backed with sufficient capital.

MR, FORD CAN PRODUCE HALF-PRICE PERTILIZER BY AIR-FIXATION METHODS AT MUSCLE SHOALS.

The opponents claim that even if Mr. Ford has agreed to make fertilizer at Muscle Shoals he will not be able to do so, for, they say, "the fact is that neither Mr. Ford nor anybody else could make any fertilizer or fertilizer materials through the use of the Muscle Shoals nitrate plant in time of peace, even with cheap water power, except at a cost of production substantially greater than the present wholesale market price."

The truth is that Mr. Ford has not agreed to use present processes or present equipment at Muscle Shoals and is not tied down to the use of the present nitrate plant, for in paragraph 15, quoted above, Mr. Ford says that his company will produce 40,000 tons of fixed nitrogen annually "at nitrate plant No. 2, or its equivalent, or at such plant or plants as it may construct, using the most economical source of power available."

Throughout the hearings during the past six years there runs the definite statement that air-fixation processes do exist whereby fertilizers may be furnished to the farmer for about one-half of what he would otherwise pay for them. That was the statement of Mr. F. S. Washburn, president of the Amer-ican Cyanamid Co., before the House Committee on Agriculture, on February 9, 1916, when he said:

My anticipation is that the establishment of the nitrogen industry as it can be established, with what I believe and what I believe would appeal to those who study the subject is the proper and legitimate Government cooperation, will give the farmer his fertilizer for one-half of what he would otherwise pay for it.

And in the same year Dr. L. H. Baekeland, one of the foremost independent American chemists, member of the United States Naval Consulting Board, member of President Wilson's nitrate supply committee, testified before the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, March 24, 1916:

The statement is made by the present Government monopoly in Germany that after the war is over and after what they know now about the synthetic manufacture of nitrogenous fertilizer from the air, after all the experience they have acquired during this war while making nitric acid, that they will be in such condition that they intend to furnish the farmers of Germany nitrogen fertilizer at about one-half the price it is costing the consumer here in the United States. If Germany can do that, gentlemen, there is not the slightest doubt in my mind that we can do the same here or that we can do better.

WHAT GERMANY HAS DONE.

How have these predictions been fulfilled? Germany is the great outstanding example of a country which, driven by the necessities of relentless warfare, was compelled to install and adopt these improved processes; and Doctor Parsons, testifying before our committee on March 10, 1922, said:

Ammonium sulphate is selling in Germany to-day, on our exchange, r approximately one-half the price it is selling in the market here.

And the Koppers Co. of Pittsburgh, in arguing for a duty on sulphate of ammonia to protect them, as they claim, against these war-built air fixation nitrate plants of Germany, state on page 8:

The cost of operating these plants is relatively low, so that even to-day sulphate of ammonia is being sold in Germany at half the price in the United States, based on the present rate of exchange.

The facts are that the Ford offer is backed not only by the assets of his company, having a paid-in capital of not less than $10,000,000, but it binds Mr. Ford personally as well as his heirs and assigns.

The opponents claim that "Mr. Ford makes no proposition by which he is bound in any particular as an individual.

The truth is plainly stated in paragraph 20 of the Ford offer, as follows:

The above proposals are submitted for acceptance as a whole and not in part. Upon acceptance, the promises, undertakings, and obligations shall be binding upon the United States and jointly and severally upon the undersigned, his heirs, representatives and assigns, and the company, its successors and assigns.

The position of the opponents is that the only promise of Henry Ford is his agreement to organize the company, while the company itself assumes all other obligations. But the Acting Judge Advocate General, Colonel Hull, testified regarding these provisions that-

A careful study of the language convinces me that Mr. Ford is bound as well as his company, and is not discharged the minute the company is organized and undertakes these matters. * * * Mr. Ford obligates his estate and the company when organized.

(House hearings, pp. 190 and 196.)

THERE IS MORE REGULATION OF MR. FORD AND HIS COMPANY AT MUSCLE SHOALS THAN OF ANY LICENSEE UNDER THE FEDERAL WATER POWER ACT.

The opponents claim that at Muscle Shoals Mr. Ford and his company are "as unrestrained and as unlimited and as unregulated as any pirate that ever sailed the seas."

The truth is exactly the contrary. When a corporation secures rights for power development under the Federal water power act it purchases the necessary lands and secures a title to them which it can sell or transfer as it pleases.

At Muscle Shoals, on the other hand, Mr. Ford would get deeds to Government property, but, as is stated in paragraph 13 of the Ford offer, "each of said deeds shall refer to or contain the provisions of this offer, and said deeds shall be so drawn as to make such provisions covenants running with the land."

For 100 years neither Mr. Ford nor his company can give a clear title to the property they purchase, for the sale is conditional, and if Mr. Ford falls to live up to his contract the Government can cancel his deeds at once and take its property back. In such a case the Government would not only get back its real estate but all the improvements, including all new buildings, together with their principal items of equipment. The courts have held that buildings and their principal equipment become a part of the realty and revert to the original owner when the deeds are canceled.

As a further penalty for failure to live up to the terms of his offer it is provided in paragraph 19 that certain definite legal steps can be taken for the canceling of his lease of both dams.

What Mr. Ford gets is not a speculation in real estate that he can quickly sell at a large profit, as the opponents have claimed. On the contrary, he shoulders a heavy burden, which he can not lighten by selling off parts of the land he buys, for the sale is expressly a conditional one.

Whenever Mr. Ford distributes power he must do so under the laws of the State in which he does business. The laws of the State of Alabama define persons or corporations engaged in the public distribution of power as public utilities; and require public utilities to come under the regulation of the Alabama Public Service Commission as to rates, service, and security issues.

Under the Federal water power act no licensee using his water power in his own private business is definitely limited as to the profits which he shall make on the products manufactured by means of the water power. This must necessarily be so, for the Federal Power Commission would have no right to attempt to specify the profits made on any manufactured article; but Mr. Ford voluntarily limits his profits to a maximum of 8 per cent on the "fair actual annual cost of production" in the manufacture of fertilizer; and, as has been shown in the testimony of Government experts, the manufacture of fertilizer undoubtedly will be the most important part of Mr. Ford's operations, requiring nearly if not all of the merchantable power developed at both dams. No private manufacturer licensed under the Federal water power act is limited in his profit on his principal product as is Mr. Ford at Muscle Shoals.

As for the secondary or unreliable power available at various intervals during certain seasons of the year, this power has been properly declared by the four great southeastern power companies to have little or no commercial value for public-utility If Mr. Ford makes it useful by building storage dams for the regulation of the stream flow of the Tennessee River, then he is securing this additional useful power at his own expense, and should not be made subject to further regulation.

MR. FORD'S PAYMENTS FOR MAINTENANCE OF DAMS ARE SUFFICIENT.

Opponents claim, regarding Mr. Ford's annual payment of $55,000 for maintaining the Muscle Shoals dams, that "it is well known among engineers that $55,000 for this purpose is hardly a drop in the bucket."

The truth is that a great concrete dam, such as that at Muscle Shoals, is one of the most permanent forms of construction that can be built.

The Chief of Engineers has reported regarding this fund: The payments specified for the operation and maintenance of the dams are considered adequate to meet all ordinary operation and maintenance costs. (House hearings, p. 19.)

The experience of the United States Engineer Corps with spillway dams is stated by Gen. H. Taylor, Assistant Chief of Engineers, in a recent letter, as follows:

Engineers, in a recent letter, as follows:

The following is a partial list of the concrete dams which have been constructed by this department:

Dam No. 2. Allegheny River, completed in 1908.

Dam No. 5. Coosa River, completed in 1914.

Dams Nos. B and C, Cumberland River, completed in 1912.

Dam No. 21. Cumberland River, completed in 1911.

Dam No. 6, Green River, Ky., completed in 1905.

Dam on Hudson River, Troy, N. Y., completed in 1916.

Dams Nos. 11, 12, 13, and 14, Kentucky River, constructed at various dates from 1906 to 1916.

Twin City lock and dam, St. Paul, Minn., completed in 1917, Dams Nos. 2, 3, 4, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, and 15, Monongahela River, completed at various dates between 1903 and 1906.

Dam at Lake Washington Locks, Seattle, Wash., completed in 1916.

Dam at Lake Washington Locks, Seattle, Wash., completed in 1916.

Dams Nos. 1, 14, 15, 16, 17, and 18, Warrior River, completed at various dates between 1909 and 1915.

In addition, 10 dams on the Muskingum River, and an equal number on the Kentucky River, have concrete crests placed on top of the original crib dams.

According to my best recollection, no expenditures have ever been necessary in the maintenance of the dam structure proper of these dams, many of which, as you will observe, have been in service for 15 years and over.

For the Chief of Engineers.

Very respectfully.

Very respectfully,

H. TAXLOR, Brigadier General, Assistant Chief of Engineers.

It is also true that no licensee of a Government dam, built under the Federal water power act, is compelle! to bear the cost of the maintenance and operation of the dam and locks. NOT REASONABLE TO TRY TO COMPEL MR. FORD TO REPLACE DAMS IF ACCIDENTALLY DESTROYED.

Opponents complain because Mr. Ford asks the Government to maintain the dams during the lease period, although Mr.

Ford provides a fund of $55,000 a year for doing so.

Mr. Ford is merely a lessee of Government property. The title to the dams always remains in the Government. If the Government should operate the dams themselves, or lease them under the Federal water power act, the cost of the dams would not be returned to the Government in either case, if the dams should be destroyed.

MR. FORD ALREADY A LICENSEE UNDER THE FEDERAL WATER POWER ACT.

None of the objections mentioned above would be overcome if Mr. Ford should agree to take a license for the Muscle Shoals dams under the Federal water power act. He is already a licensee under that act at the Troy, N. Y., dam on the Hudson River, and preliminaries have been arranged for his license at the Twin City dam, on the Mississippi River, near St. Paul,

The opponents have claimed that the water power act "throws safeguards around our national resources throughout all time to come.'

I maintain, Mr. Speaker, that the public welfare is safeguarded in the Ford offer to a greater extent than under the Federal water power act. At St. Paul Mr. Ford leases a Government dam for about 4 per cent of the Government's investment. He does not provide any contribution toward the operation or maintenance of the dam nor its locks, the Government does it all; he assumes no obligation to replace the dam in case it is destroyed by flood, earthquake, or a national enemy, or any other cause; he provides no amortization fund to return the cost of the dam and locks to the Government; he has announced his intention of utilizing all of the power generated, and there is no specified limitation upon the profits which he shall made in the use of this power; he pays a fair rental for the use of the Government's property, but nothing for the use of the water.

In only one particular are the contentions of those who obstructed water-power development for years in this country observed in the Ford lease of the Government dam at St. Paul; that one particular is the length of the lease period. The Ford lease at St. Paul is for 50 years.

THE HUNDRED-YEAR LEASE PERIOD.

Throughout the lengthy hearings in both the House and the Senate opponents of the Ford offer have repeatedly argued that the life of the lease should be limited to 50 years, because, it is claimed, it might be possible for the Government to make a new lease more advantageous to the public at the end of that period.

In reply, Mr. Speaker, I want to say that the supporters of the Ford offer have found nothing in the history of the past 50 years which would justify Congress in rejecting this offer on the ground that either at the present time or in the course of 50 years they will secure a more advantageous one.

Public interest is best served by legislation that enables the greatest amount of water power to be developed at the least cost to the ultimate consumer. It does not matter whether this power is distributed directly by a public-service corporation or whether it enters into the manufacturing cost of any article con-sumed by the public. The interests of the public are best served when the power, or the products of the power, are distributed to the public at the least possible cost.

Since the length of the lease period does not affect the rate charged for the power nor the price of the goods produced by the use of the power, it has no effect in protecting the interests of the public. It is true that it gives an opportunity to charge a greater rental for the use of the power at the end of the lease period, but such arbitrary charges are merely an unjustified addition to the cost of the power, and these charges, with repeated percentages of profit, accumulating as they pass through various hands, are finally added to the consumers' bill.

This is true no matter whether the consumer buys power or any article whatever made by the use of the power. It is merely an indirect form of taxation and of no benefit to anyone except as a means of securing Federal revenue from a certain group or class of consumers. If Federal revenue is what is desired, then let us tax all water powers alike, whether the streams on which they are located are navigable or not. That, to my mind, would be the fair way to do it. Arbitrary charges for the use of the water for power purposes at one point on a stream, and no charges whatever for the use of the same water at another point simply because a boat can pass one point and can not pass the other point, is an utterly absurd, unfair discrimination against the development of power on our navigable streams. It has no sound basis either in law or equity.

Those who support the Ford offer believe that a maximum profit of 8 per cent on the principal article of manufacture is as much as should be asked of a lessee of any Government dam.

This consideration, together with the maintenance in mod-ernized up-to-date condition of a nitrate plant ready for use by the Government in time of war and the guaranteed annual for producing the equivalent of 250,000 tons of Chilean nitrate, taken with other valuable considerations of the Ford offer, constitute a proposal obviously more in the interest of the public than anything which the opposition has been able to offer, in spite of their clamor. The advocates of the Ford proposal do not believe that it is reasonable to expect that any responsible party will do better than has been offered by Mr. Ford.

Consequently, since the Ford offer is vastly more than a mere water-power proposition, its advocates see no reason why it should come under the Federal power act. If 50 years is a fair lease period in which to work out the comparatively small problems of the average water-power development, then 100 years is none too long a time for working out the great undertakings in nitrogen fixation, fertilizer manufacture, and power development that constitute the legal, moral, and commercial responsibility of Mr. Ford under his offer.

MR. FORD, AS PURCHASER OF THE NITRATE PLANTS, IS ENTITLED TO THE GORGAS STEAM PLANT.

The opponents claim that it has "never been clearly explained" why Mr. Ford should ask that the Government's plained" why Mr. Ford should ask that the Government's Gorgas steam plant and transmission line be included in the Muscle Shoals property.

The truth is that this plant has always been recognized as a necessary part of the nitrate properties; it was so regarded in 1920, and was included in the properties scheduled for Government operation under the Wadsworth-Kahn bill.

When the question of the Alabama Power Co.'s so-called option to purchase the Gorgas steam plant was before the House Committee on Military Affairs, the committee asked for the opinion of the Judge Advocate General as to the legal obligation of the Government to sell this plant to the Alabama Power Co.

Col. John A. Hull, the Acting Judge Advocate General, stated .

The option to purchase, purporting to be given by the contract, is unauthorized and void. Consequently the only action necessary is to condemn the land constituting the right of way and plant sites, authority for which is granted by the statutes above cited. (House hearings, p. 134.)

In order to further satisfy the committee an opinion of the Attorney General was requested, and Mr. Daugherty stated his opinion in the following language:

opinion in the following language:

The inquiry made of the Attorney General may, in substance, be stated as follows:

Is that part (article 23) of the contract with the Alabama Power Co. binding on the Government, which gives that company at any time after December 1, 1926, or such earlier period after the United States shall finally cease to take power, the right to demand that the value of the Warrior extension and the Warrior substation shall be determined by three arbitrators, and shall obligate the Government to sell to that company at the figure thus to be determined? * * * My answer is no.

company at the ngure thus to be determined? —— My answer is no.

No one can carefully analyze the long and rather complex contract made with this company without being impressed with the harsh and even drastic provisions which it imposes on the Government. When its intricate provisions are closely scrutinized and their full significance fully realized it becomes at once apparent that the company lost no opportunity of turning to its own advantage every possible change of circumstances.

NO MORAL OBLIGATION TO ALABAMA POWER CO. INVOLVED.

Finding no support for their contention that there was a legal obligation on the part of the Government to sell its power plant at Gorgas to the Alabama Power Co., opponents of the Ford offer have insisted that there was a moral obligation on the part of the Government to sell this property to the Alabama Power Co.

The truth is that there was no obligation of any kind, for it was specifically provided in the contract with the Alabama Power Co. that that company's use of the Gorgas steam plant was subject to the prior claim of any successor of the United States to whom the Government might "sell or lease its sald nitrate plants at Sheffield and at Muscle Shoals, or either or any part of said plants," And article 23 of the contract with the Alabama Power Co., recognizing the necessity for the Gorgas plant in any commercial operation of the Muscle Shoals project, protected the Government's Interest in that property as against the interest of the Alabama Power Co. by providing that if-

* * the United States shall sell or lease its said nitrate plants at Sheffield and at Muscle Shoals, or either or any part of said plants, the United States may assign and transfer to the purchaser or lessee thereof (in this contract referred to as the successor of the United States) the right to demand and receive electric energy under this contract to the extent of the capacity of the Warrior extension at the time. * * * *

THE REAL MORAL OBLIGATION.

It is evident that if there was a moral obligation involved on the part of the Government it was the moral obligation topreserve the usefulness of the nitrate plants for the manufacture of fertilizer in time of peace in accordance with the expressed purpose which Congress had in mind in authorizing their construction under section 124 of the national defense act.

This was the moral obligation of the Government to the taxpayers, and section 23 of the contract with the Alabama Power Co. emphasizes the Government's right to protect its own property by making this power available, first, to the lessee or purchaser of the nitrate plants, and, second, to the Alabama Power Co., if not required for the operation of either of the nitrate plants. It is easy, therefore, to understand the position of the members of the minority of the Senate Committee on Agriculture when they reported concerning the Gorgas plant-

Agriculture when they reported concerning the Gorgas plant—With reference to the contention about the Gorgas steam plant, we feel that we can make little comment. Mr. Ford has advised our committee that "if my revised offer for Gorgas is rejected, then I must understand that the acceptance of my offer for Muscle Shoals as a whole, and not in part, is refused."

Therefore, believing, as we do, that the United States has every right in the world to accept Mr. Ford's offer for Gorgas, and since Mr. Ford's offer will stand rejected unless his proposal for Gorgas is accepted, we have no difficulty in deciding what ought to be done. We are not unmindful of the interests of the Alabama Power Co., but, as a matter of duty, we are more mindful of the interests of the Government at Muscle Shoals. The Alabama Power Co. desires Gorgas as an auxiliary to Muscle Shoals water-power development. This phase of the case seems very clear to us. case seems very clear to us.

Since the contract with the Alabama Power Co. provided that the purchaser or lessee of the nitrate plants should have the prior right for an indefinite period to receive the full amount of power that can be developed at the Government's Gorgas plant, the sale of this plant to Mr. Ford merely provides him indefinitely with the full amount of power which can be developed at the Gorgas plant—a provision agreed to in the contract. In choosing between the interests of the Alabama Power Co. and those of the farmer at Muscle Shoals, Members of Congress have had in mind that under the Ford offer this power was to be used to operate the nitrate plant to its full capacity every year in the manufacture of fertilizer, in accordance with the purpose of Congress. Members of Congress have felt that the use of this power plant in this way would aid in bringing about a great national benefit, while its use as a part of the system of the Alabama Power Co. would serve merely a local and comparatively insignificant purpose.

In view of the fact that the Alabama Power Co. was obligated under its contract to furnish power to the full extent of the capacity of the Government's Gorgas plant to any lessee or purchaser of the nitrate plants, it is no argument for the opponents to say, as they do, that it will cripple the service of the Alabama Power Co. to 58,500 consumers if this power is diverted to Muscle Shoals.

They knew that they were obligated to furnish this power to the nitrate plants and they had no business to depend upon it to serve these 58,500 consumers. It is typical of the methods of the Alabama Power Co. that, although they had only conditional use of the power at the Gorgas plant for their own purposes, nevertheless they went out, according to the statements of their own advocates, and sold this power to some 58,500 consumers, and then when about to be called upon to make good and permit this power to be used indefinitely for the nitrate plants, they come forward with the complaint that to do so would cripple their service. Under their contract the Alabama Power Co. is a custodian of the Gorgas steam plant and its power supply. Having been admittedly unfaithful to the terms of their trust and finding themselves in distress as a result, they seek to place the blame on Mr. Ford, when they would be equally at fault no matter what outside party became the successor to the United States at Muscle Shoals.

The necessity for cheap power from the Gorgas steam plant located at the mouth of a coal mine for use in supplementing the power of the Tennessee River at times of low water has been repeatedly explained in the hearings and the fact that this is a small unit, only half the size of a single unit which comprises the steam-power plant at nitrate plant No. 2, is an additional reason why this Government-owned war-built steam-power plant at Gorgas is properly considered a necessary part of the Muscle Shoals project.

FERTILIZER THE PRINCIPAL PRODUCT UNDER THE FORD OFFER.

The opponents have repeatedly claimed that Mr. Ford "is going to get, at practically Government expense, 900,000 horsepower to use as he may see fit."

The truth is that no such amount of power exists at Muscle Shoals. Col. W. J. Barden, United States district engineer in charge of the Muscle Shoals work, placed in the record a clear statement of the amount of power at both dams, and stated (Senate hearings, p. 34) that the total amount of primary or dependable power at both dams, supplemented by both the steam plants, amounts to only 241,300 horsepower.

It is true that Mr. Ford asks for a total installation of 850,000 horsepower, but every horsepower above 241,300 is operated by irregular flow that can not be depended upon, and, according to expert testimony, even when this flow is available for 10 months in the year it has little or no commercial value. The power at both dams at Muscle Shoals, including the use of both steam plants, as stated by Colonel Barden, amounts to 241,300 primary, dependable power for 12 months, and an additional 75,200 horsepower of irregular power from 10 to 12 months, and an additional 232,500 horsepower of irregular power from 6 to 10 months, and an additional 188,500 horsepower of irregular power from 4 to 6 months. The first of these figures represents useful power. The remainder represent power which must be stabilized and supplemented before it can be used commercially, and it is no more possible to add the foregoing quantities together than it is to add apples and oranges—they are not the same thing at all.

On the other hand, the leading nitrate expert of the Ordnance Department, Maj. J. H. Burns, former chief of the Nitrate Division, has given figures which show that to produce 40,000 tons of fixed nitrogen at nitrate plant No. 2 and to supply sufficient phosphoric acid so that it may be furnished in a mixed fertilizer in accordance with demand, as is required under the terms of the Ford offer, it would be necessary to use 100,000 continuous horsepower, or its equivalent, to fix the nitrogen, and 145,000 continuous horsepower, or its equivalent, to produce the phosphoric acid. Mr. Ford therefore must use the equivalent of 245,000 continuous horsepower to carry out his fertilizer obligations alone. Therefore, instead of being "seven parts water power to one part fertilizer" the fertilizer becomes Mr. Ford's principal product.

MR. FORD MUST BUILD STORAGE RESERVOIRS AT HIS OWN EXPENSE.

The opponents claim "he agrees to pay nothing for the great reservoirs that the Government built to hold the water that is backed away from Dam No. 3."

The truth is that there is no reservoir capacity back of the proposed Dam No. 3, as has been testified by Colonel Barden.

(Senate hearings, p. 35.)

Storage dams, however, must be built to increase the primary power and stabilize the secondary power. This can be done by regulating the flow of the river to a reasonable extent and by developing power at storage dams and transmitting the power. The sites of these dams are on the upper tributaries of the Tennessee River, and their cost has been estimated at not less than $20,000,000. Mr. Ford has agreed to pay interest on over 500,000 horsepower of equipment, which must stand practically idle with no dependable water supply for its operation until these dams are built. He therefore pays a large cash penalty every year until he builds these storage dams.

NO DISPOSITION ON THE PART OF MR. FORD TO BE ARBITRARY IN MAKING HIS OFFER.

Opponents claim that-Congress is arrogantly told that it must accept this offer just as Mr. Ford has written it without the changing of a sentence. * * * We must sign on the dotted line.

The truth is that no less than 27 changes in the wording of Mr. Ford's offer have been made since it was first submitted on July 8, 1921. Mr. Ford made changes at the request of the Secretary of War; he made changes at the request of the chairman and other members of the House Committee on Military Affairs and also at the suggestion of the chairman of the Senate Committee on Agriculture, while other changes were made at the suggestion of the farm organizations, and it was only when it became evident that opponents were merely asking for changes for the purpose of delaying and defeating the Ford offer, and only when Mr. Ford had gone as far as he considered prudent in the matter of concessions, that he finally declined to make further changes in his offer.

BENEFITS OF MUSCLE SHOALS CAN BE MORE WIDELY DISTRIBUTED AS CHEAP FERTILIZER THAN AS CHEAP POWER.

Opponents claim that "power that originates from property owned by the people of the country ought to receive as wide a distribution as possible." Therefore the Muscle Shoals power should be broadcasted, they say, instead of being used locally to build up a great electrochemical fertilizer industry.

The truth is that the comparative value between available public utility power and cheap fertilizer is the difference between an electric light and a loaf of bread. By far the majority of the people of the United States do without electric light, but they must have the loaf of bread; and those who support the Ford offer contend that this power, so well adapted to electrochemical purposes, will find its greatest usefulness not by lighting the homes and driving the small motors in a limited area in Alabama, Mississippi, and Tennessee but by its use in electrochemistry to show this country how fertilizer can be produced by modern methods not only at Muscle Shoals but at many other points and delivered to the farmer at a fraction of the present cost, and how such useful metals as aluminum may be próduced and sold at much lower prices than are now demanded by the aluminum monopoly.

No industries in time of war are more important than those based upon electrochemistry and electrometallurgy; and to build up a great center of these industries at Muscle Shoals, utilizing the cheap secondary power of the Tennessee River, stabilized and rendered useful, is to create a great national asset the value of which in time of war may well be beyond calculation.

MR. FORD AT MUSCLE SHOALS WOULD NOT BE EXEMPT FROM TAXATION.

The opponents claim that "Mr. Ford would be tax exempt on these dams, because the dams belong to the Government."

The truth is that Mr. Ford would pay taxes just as any other

The truth is that Mr. Ford would pay taxes just as any other citizen does. It is true that the dams are Government property and therefore are not subject to taxation. The lease of the dams, however, is not Government property and can be taxed, and any business that Mr. Ford or his company builds up in the State of Alabama is subject to taxation under the laws of that State.

It may certainly be expected that the taxing authorities will not overlook the fact that by the simple expedient of taxing Mr. Ford's lease and taxing his business he and his company can be taxed the same as any other individual or company in the State.

the State.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Bankhead] is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, the rules should not be spended and this bill should not be passed. Those of us who suspended and this bill should not be passed. are opposed to this bill have not had the privilege of securing We do not know exactly what the provisions are, copies of it. and I do not understand why it is that without notice this matter was brought up. The original bill upon this proposition was approved on September 22, 1922, and carried an appropriation of $200,000, or, rather, an authorization of an appropriation of that amount.

I was opposed to the passage of the original bill. opposed to the passage of the bill establishing the office of Fuel Administrator, a bill which passed coincidentally with the passage of this bill; and I was opposed to both of them because from my careful observation for a period of six years since I have been a Member of this House these so-called commissions never resulted in any practical good to the taxpayers of this country or those whose interests are supposed to be subserved by these commissions. I believed then that the original authorization of $200,000, so far as practical results were concerned, would be an absolute waste of that much of the people's money.

There were appointed under the authority of that bill some high-class men as these fact-finding commissioners-Vice President Marshall, John Hays Hammond, a distinguished mining engineer, and some other gentlemen whose names I do not now recall. But, gentlemen, I want to say to you that these men, if they desired it, could have secured from other branches of this Government, without the expenditure of $10,000, every material fact necessary for the consideration of this problem.

Now they come before the Committee on Appropriations, as you will observe if you will read the hearings, and say that they need $400,000 more to add to the original appropriation of $200,000. For what purpose? Why, as Mr. Hammond says in the hearings, and as the other gentleman who testified, Mr. Smith, says, they want this money for the purpose of paying high salaries to college professors and others to make studies as to the cost of production and studies as to whether they should recommend to the Congress of the United States the nationalization of the coal mines of the country and make other recommendations which they propose to make to the Congress of the United States, some of which under the Constitution of the United States the Congress could not enact, even if those recommendations were thought to be desirable to accept. Federal Trade Commission, as the gentleman from California [Mr. Lea] only a few minutes ago admitted, only a short time ago, under the ample authority conferred upon it, made a very searching investigation of all the material inquiries that these gentlemen on this fact-finding commission are now collecting under the provisions of this bill; recent information upon basic facts involved in the industry. And, gentlemen, this fact-finding commission is now seeking, by the amendment to the original bill, to have us clothe them with very unusual and very extraordinary power, and they are going to entail upon that industry and the country an entirely unnecessary expense. [Applause.] They have called upon the coal operators of the country to produce all of the pay rolls, and that shows you the extent to which they are going; the paper pay rolls of all the individual mines of the country, showing the amount they have paid to every coal digger over a period of 10 years. Some of the operators down in Kentucky and out in Ohio, in answer to that summons, had to charter two or three box cars to take those pay rolls and send them here to this commission.

Gentlemen, those gentlemen could take a few typical mining districts in this country-for example, in West Virginia, or Ohio, or Pennsylvania, or Alabama-and only a few investigators in a very short time, if they were diligent and intelligent in their inquiry, could obtain every essential piece of information necessary to enable them to make recommendations upon this proposition. It is an absolute wanton waste of the people's moneythe proposition of coming here and asking for $400,000 more, making a total appropriation of $600,000, in order to get information which, as I say, is already practically available to those gentlemen here in these other Government bureaus, such as the Bureau of Mines, the Federal Trade Commission, the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Geological Survey, and other bureaus, if they would only seek it. But they want to make an inde-pendent investigation, with a lot of highly paid men on their pay roll, and they want to increase the number to nearly 200 above the number which the hearings show they now have.

Members of the House, if I believed that the expenditure of this money would result in any substantial benefits to the coal diggers of this country, whose interests I have always attempted to represent here on the floor of this House; if I believed it would result in any practical good to the consumers of coal in this country; if I believed it would solve the transportation problem, or the problem of distribution which is involved in this great industry, I would be glad to vote for this increased appropriation, although it is rather extravagant in sum. But from my observation of these commissions in the past I believe that no practical good will result, but only irritation, and in the end it will accomplish no good to the people of this country. I think this proposition ought to be defeated by this House. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time. How much time have I used?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman has used seven

Mr. WINSLOW. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Graham].
Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Mr. Speaker

Mr. LONDON. Will the gentleman yield for a question before

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Yes. Mr. LONDON. To what extent has this bill been made necessary by the experience of the commission?

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. That is a very pertinent inquiry. Former Vice President Marshall, a member of the commission, was one of the principal witnesses that appeared before our committee in the hearings. Mr. Marshall went into the thing very extensively. I do not think there is anybody on either side of the House who would think that Mr. Marshall was wanting to get money for junketing trips or spending it unnecessarily. I know that I do not believe so, and I do not believe you do. He said in the most unequivocal way that they have to have an increase of funds or they could not function and do the things that they desire to do. He told us what they were trying to do. They are trying to make an exhaustive study of the whole subject so, as the result of it, they can come to Congress and tell us the facts on which we can legislate, having in his mind, as do the most of us, that some fundamental changes may be made by the American people in handling the fuel situation-even, perhaps, to the point some time of the Government taking over some or all of the mines in the country. I do not think that is one of the things toward which the commission is necessarily traveling, but I want to call the attention of the House to the fact that that is one problem involved.

The suggestions made by the gentleman from Alabama will not cover the proposition; to have here and there a sporadic report of some coal mine and a partial analysis of the situation will not do us any good. This commission by operation of law must finish its work next September, and to do so must have a force that will enable them to do that. The men engaged in this work want to get at all of the facts, and to do it largely as a result of their desire to do their duty to the country in the fullest way

I am in favor of this proposition. Originally I favored the House bill. I asked the chairman for a few minutes of this discussion that I might allude briefy to one proposition that has troubled me somewhat. I have resolved the doubt that I have in favor of the Senate bill, and I am going to support it because I believe the most important thing for the country to have now are the facts, and I believe this commission will get them, and in order to get them we ought to give them what funds they need.

I want to call your attention to the provision permitting the judges of the court to sit on the commission. I am not in harmony with that provision although I shall vote for the bill. It is on the theory that I shall subvert my doubts to the general Here is the trouble about having a judge on the commission: In the present unsettled condition among the miners of the country I do not believe it is wholesome to put a member of the judiciary on a commission, especially a commission of this kind which is to deal with the relations of labor and capital and which puts a man from the bench on a commission where he must deal with industrial problems, and as a result of which he will be accused by one side or the other as taking a partisan I believe that that sort of thing weakens the judiposition. ciary and has a tendency to break down the courts, and is not a good thing for the country. While I shall vote for this, and while I know Judge Alschuler to be a worthy man and highly qualified for the work, in view of the fact that he has been engaged on the work continuously, knows about it, and up to a few days ago has been employed in that work, I shall not make any serious objection to it. But I want to say to the House that I am opposed to the policy, and in the future reserve to myself the right to oppose any further proposition of that kind while I am in the House as against public policy. I think there ought to be no hesitation about approving this bill in its present nrm. [Applause.] Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM].

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I certainly agree with the remarks of my colleague from Illinois with reference to the appointment of judges on this commission. I think it is calculated to injure the judiciary. I think its result will be unwholesome. We want to keep the judiciary on the bench deciding matters of law and transacting judicial Why there should be a necessity for appointing judges is an inexplicable proposition to me.

But, my colleagues, it seems to me that there is a stronger objection than that of selecting a judge, which this bill would enable the President to do. Here is one of the most drastic measures that it has been my privilege to read as a proposed piece of legislation in this House during my term of service. When you read the phraseology of this proposed legislation, it must be apparent to every thoughtful man that such a bill as this ought not to be called up at the heel of a session and put upon its passage when there is no opportunity for deliberation and full and mature consideration of it. [Applause.]

In general I am opposed to the appointment and multiplication of commissions. This country is cursed with too many commissions that are made and selected and have accom-plished no good to the country or for the cause which they are appointed to serve. It seems to be a very popular thing to-day to appoint a commission. Is there any difficulty confronting us? Go and have an act of Congress passed. Is there any measure about which men are differing? Go and have an amendment to the Constitution passed, and if we do not stop this course of procedure the Constitution will soon be so amended that the dear old document will be unknowable in the future. It will be a patchwork of legislation instead of a fundamental charter. Then, if there is any trade or economic difficulty, the thing to do seems to be to appoint a commission that will rove around and oppress the citizens of the United States for a period of time, file a report, which will be pigeonholed and forgotten and never heard of in the future. you gentlemen to reflect upon this sort of provision that we are asked to enact into law, namely, that this commission or any employee or any agent may prepare a catechism to be submitted to any one or more of citizens of this country which they shall be required to answer under oath or go to fail. Such a questionnaire ought at least to have the approval of the commission, and every irresponsible employee or agent ought not to be permitted to address these questions to the people of the different communities and compel citizens to answer them on oath. I am unalterably and conscientiously opposed to this wasteful, extravagant, and oppressive measure, and it ought to receive the condemnation of this House.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Tucker].

Mr. TUCKER. Mr. Speaker, I have never seen this bill until this moment, but, like my colleague from Alabama [Mr. BANK-HEAD], I had the honor to oppose the original proposition last I do not claim to be a prophet nor the son of a prophet, but I had occasion to say at that time that if that commission were organized, as it was to make a sweeping investigation of this whole question and to make a report on the 1st of January, we would find, if there was no change in the condition between employer and employee in the coal business, that when January came they would report to us not telling us how we could get coal to keep from freezing but would come to us and tell us why we did not have it. I have that report now in my hand.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Did the gentleman ever hear of a commission of this kind ever getting through?

Mr. TUCKER. Never in the world. Here is a report of that commission that was to make a "sweeping" investigation, and they report here that they have bought the brooms to make the sweep, but they have not yet made the sweep; that they have secured 56 technical and 96 nontechnical employees—

Mr. WYANT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TUCKER. Yes.

Mr. WYANT. Do I understand the gentleman to say that that is the report which costs the Government $200,000?

Mr. TUCKER. Yes, indeed; that is all.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. I call attention to the fact that as Congress adjourns in a day or so and will not be in session until December, if they go ahead and investigate and make another report, Congress could not act upon it either to help this winter or next winter.

Mr. TUCKER. No; but Congress will be called upon next winter to pay the bill. Mr. Speaker, as my friend from Pennsylvania [Mr. Graham] said, the time has come when commissions, bureaus, autocrats, and autocracy must be driven from our councils or this country is to be bankrupt. Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TUCKER. Yes.

Mr. HILL. Did the gentleman vote yesterday for the farm credits bill?

Mr. TUCKER. I did not. How did the gentleman vote?

Mr. HILL. I did not vote for it.

Mr. TUCKER. Mr. Speaker, when this bill originally was before the House I remember it was pointed out in the discussion, and if not in the discussion it was a point made in the hearings, that the salvation and the cure of this great question was for Congress to undertake to fix the price of coal at the mines.

Mr. WYANT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman again yield?

Mr. TUCKER. Yes.

Mr. WYANT. In speaking of the price of coal at the mine, I wish to state for the gentleman's information that bituminous coal can not be sold at the mine to-day for more than $2 a ton. and I understand the same coal is being sold for $15 and $16 a ton in the city of Washington.

Mr. TUCKER. I am obliged to the gentleman. The fundamental question at the bottom of this whole matter is a question between capital and labor. Why do you not attempt to meet it? Ah, you say you are going to try to fix the price of coal at the mines. Where do you get the power? In the remarks I submitted last summer I had the honor to declare that Congress had no such power, and since that time the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia has so decided; that if such power resided anywhere under the decisions of the court from Munn v. Illinois down to the present time, the States may fix the price of coal at the mines. Why do not they tackle the question that is at the bottom of this trouble? Instead of that, as my friends here say, $10,000 would pay the expense of the investigation to get all of the information that is desired. There is a houseful of testimony here that has been made by commissions in the last 20 years, and there is not a fact which the fact-finding commission is asked to go after that has not been found before. There are carloads of volumes of it. do you want with facts? You have got them. You are shirking the real fact, you are shirking that great fact that is at the basis of this whole question, and that is the question between the employer and the employee. Until we are willing to meet that, we can not accomplish anything by spending money to give commissions the power to go on and on forever.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Virginia has expired.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. MOORE].

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, when this bill was originally before the House I ventured to predict that we were in possession of practically all of the material facts in reference to the coal industry, the operation of mines, and the distribution of the product. About the same time a statement was made in the Senate by a very prominent Member that we knew practically all of the facts. I venture to believe that when the report of January 1, which we have already received from this commission, is followed by a report next July or some time later, it will parallel in character the report that has already come in. There is not one single fact covered by the report of January 1 of which my friend from Illinois [Mr. GRAHAM] or my friend from Massachusetts [Mr. WINSLOW], the chairman of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, or any other intelligent man, was ignorant. There is likely to be the same result when further reports are made. If a force of something like 175 employees, and that I understand is the force that has been built up by the commission, was not able to get anything of value up to the 1st of January, is it to be thought that the expenditures of $400,000 additional will in a very short period, and an increased force, assist in furnishing data to this Congress which will be found in any way useful?

Now, it is just as true as it can be, as my colleague from Virginia said a minute ago, that you have had investigation after investigation and report after report with reference to the coal industry until the subject is practically exhausted, the late Vice President of the United States and the distinguished engineer, Mr. John Hays Hammond, to the contrary notwithstanding. I happened, for instance, to be connected before I came to this I happened, for instance, to be connected by the Inter-House with most extensive investigations made by the Inter-Compared Commission on this very subject. There were state Commerce Commission on this very subject.

elaborate hearings, arguments, and reports. There was no phase of the entire situation overlooked.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. When voluminous reports are brought in here a few months hence is there anyone within the sound of my voice who thinks they will get much consideration or prove of real value? I submit that question to the gentlemen of the House. [Applause.]

Mr. WINSLOW. Mr. Speaker, early last autumn this Congress brought out a bill and passed it by a big vote, and we hoped thereby, through the creation of a coal commission, to find out, if possible, the matter with the coal industry in all its phases. What did we tell that commission to do?

It shall be the duty of the commission to study the problems and questions relative to the coal industry, with a view to and for the purpose of aiding, assisting, and advising Congress in matters of legislation which will insure a supply of this commodity to the industries and to the people generally throughout the country and maintain an uninterrupted flow of commerce among the States, or any legislation which Congress may, after said investigation, deem wise, and which, under the Constitution, Congress has the power to enact.

And what else?

And what else?

To this end said commission shall ascertain and report to the President and Congress: As to the ownership and titles of the mines; prices of coal; the organizations and persons connected with the coal industry; cost of production; profits realized by the operators or owners of said mines during the last 10 years; profits of other persons or corporations having to do with production, distribution, or sale of coal; labor costs; wages paid; wage contracts; irregular production; waste of coal and suggestions as to the remedy for the same; the conditions generally under which coal is produced; distribution; the causes which from time to time induce strikes, thereby depriving interstate carriers of their fuel supply and otherwise interrupting the flow of interstate commerce; and all facts, circumstances, or conditions which would be deemed helpful in determining and establishing a wise and efficient policy by the Government relative to said industry.

Again we directed them thus:

Again we directed them thus:

Again we directed them thus:

Said commission shall, under the provisions of this act, make a separate investigation and report for the anthracite industry, which investigation and report shall cover all of the matters specified in the last preceding paragraph, and shall cover also every other phase of the anthracite industry, including the production, transportation, and distribution of anthracite, and the organized or other relationships, if any, among the mine operators or the mine workers, or among any persons engaged in the production, transportation, or distribution of

Why, it would take the ordinary man two months to find out what that paragraph meant, let alone bringing any results. The approval of this act was in 1922, and they had only October and November to organize and get in motion. They could not be expected to make a report on the 15th of January for a much longer period than up to the 1st of December. What should we expect in a great undertaking like that started here and put upon the shoulders of mortals only about two months before? The thing could not be done. Why camouflage it? It is simply useless. Now, as to the amount of money involved, when the Secretary of Commerce brought this matter to me. as chairman of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, we agreed the amount of money which should be reported in the bill for the use of the commission be $750,000. We felt that perhaps it would look pretty large. However, in the report of the Interstate Commerce Committee we cut it down to $500,000, and believed that amount of money would be used, and we brought the same as a recommendation in a provision of the bill in here; and in order to please people and facilitate its passage we agreed on $300,000— Mr. BANKHEAD. Will the gentleman yield for a question? Mr. WINSLOW. If it is quick and sharp.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Is it the gentleman's opinion ultimately that they will spend $750,000 and-

Mr. WINSLOW, I would not be surprised if they did. I say, we cut it to $300,000. Then we went into conference, and the Senators wanted it $100,000, on the assumption that If the money was not enough the commission would probably come back to Congress for more. So we compromised on $200,000, and there it stood. No rhyme nor reason about it. It stood there at $200.000.

First of all they came to the Director of the Budget and made him believe, as they made our committee believe and as they made the President believe, that the commissioners need an extra sum of money which would be in total $100,000 more than the $500,000 our committee asked the Congress to appropriate in the first instance. Time is fleeting. I want to answer questions. But here is the situation, my friends: The Congress of the United States in good faith, at a time most acute with respect of the coal situation, told the people of this country that Congress would undertake some way to find out what was at the bottom of what the people regarded as a devilish, monstrous business—the coal business. Our way was through the medium of this bill as it was originally passed. Now, shall we stop in the middle of the river or go on through and keep faith with our suffering citizens? [Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Winslow] to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I demand a division.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. A division is demanded. The House divided; and there were—ayes 98, noes 32.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote because there is no quorum present, and I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently there is no quorum present.

Mr. WINSLOW. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House. A call of the House was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will bring in the absentees, and the Clerk will call the roll. Those in favor of suspending the rules and passing the bill will when their names are called answer "yea"; those opposed will answer "nay."

The question was taken; and there were-yeas 212, nays 76, not voting 138, as follows:

YEAS-212.

Ackerman	Fess	Kreider	Reed, N. Y.
Anderson	Fields	Lampert	Rhodes
Andrew, Mass.	Fish	Larson, Minn,	Ricketts
Andrews, Nebr.	Fisher	Lawrence	Roach
Appleby	Fitzgerald	Lazaro	Kobertson
Arentz	Fordney	Lea, Calif.	Rogers
Atkeson	Foster	Leatherwood	Rossdale
Bacharach	Free	Lee, Ga.	Sanders, Ind.
Barbour	French	Lee, N. Y.	Sanders, N. Y.
Barkley	Frothingham	Little	Sandlin
Beck	Fuller	Logan	Shaw
Beedy	Fulmer	Longworth	Shreve
Begg	Gahn	Luce	Siegel
Benham	Gallivan	McArthur	Sinchair
Black	Gernerd	McKenzie	Simpott
Blakeney	Gifford	McLaughlin, Mich
Bland, Ind.	Gilbert	McLaughlin, Nebr
Boies	Glynn	McLaughlin, Pa.
	Goldsborough	McPherson	Sproul
Bond Burke	Graham, Ill.	MacLafferty	Stafford
		Madden	Steenerson
Burton	Greene, Mass.	Magee	Stephens
Butler	Griest
Byrns, Tenn.	Hardy, Colo.	Mapes Mead	Strong, Kans. Summers, Wash
Cable Kann			Swank
Campbell, Kans.	Haugen	Merritt Michener	Sweet
Campbell, Pa.	Hawley
Carew	Hayden	Miller Mills	Swing
Chalmers	Henry		Tague N. Y
Chindblom	Herrick	Moore, Ohlo	Taylor, N. J.
Christopherson	Hersey	Moores, Ind.	Ten Eyck
Clague	Hickey	Mott	Thompson
Clarke, N. Y.	Hicks	Murphy	Tilson
Cole, Iowa	Hill	Nelson, Me.	Tincher
Cole, Ohio	Hoch	Nelson, J. M.	Tinkham
Collins	Hogan	Newton, Minn.	Underhill
Colton	Huck	Newton, Mo.	Upshaw
Couper, Ohio	Huddleston	Norton	Vaile
Cooper, Wis.	Hull	O'Brien	Vestal
Coughlin	Humphrey, Nebr.	O'Connor	Vinson
Curry	Husted	Ogden	Voigt
Dallinger	Hutchinson	Parker, N. Y.	Volk
Dempsey	Ireland	Paul	Volstead
Dickinson	James	Perkins	Wason
Doughton	Kearns	Petersen	Watson
Dowell	Kelly, Pa.	Porter	White, Kans.
Dunn	Ketcham	Pringey	Williams, Ill.
Dupré	Kiess	Purnell	Williamson
Dyer	Kirkpatrick	Quin	Wilson
Elliott	Kissel	Raker	Winslow
Evans	Kline, Pa.	Ramseyer	Woodruff
Fairchild	Knutson	Rankin	Wurzbach
Favrot	Kopp	Ransley	Yates
Fenn	Kraus	Rayburn	Young
THE PARTY OF THE P		S-76.	CONTRACT OF THE PROPERTY OF TH
Contract of the Contract of th			LIVE EURINE
Abarnathy	Darrow	Johnson Wash	Reher

Bankhead Bell Bixler Bland, Va. Blanton Bowers Bowling
Box
Briggs
Brooks, Pa. Buchanan Bulwinkle Carter Collier Connally, Tex.

Deal

Drewry Driver Dunbar

Echols

Classon

Cramton Crowther Cullen Dale Davis, Minn. Denison

Clouse Codd Connolly, Pa. Copley Crago

Drane

Almon Anthony Bird Brand Brand Brennan Britten Brooks, III. Brown, Tenn. Browne, Wis. Burdick Burtness Burtness Cannon Cantrill Chandler, N. Y.

Darrow Davis, Tenn. Jones, T Kendall Dominick Kincheloe Larsen, Ga. London Echols Edmonds
Garrett, Tenu.
Garrett, Tex.
Graham, Pa.
Hammer
Hardy, Tex.
Hooker
Hudspeth
Humphreys, Miss.
Jeffers, Ala.
Johnson, Ky. London
Lowrey
Lyon
McDuffle
McSwain
Mansfield
Moore, Va.
Oldfield Oliver Parker, N. J. Pou Radgliffe Johnson, Ky. NOT VOTING-138. Chandler, Okla. Clark, Fla.

Ellis Fairfield Faust Focht Frear Freeman Funk Garner Gensman Goodykoontz Gorman Gould Greene, Vt. Griffin Hadley

Reed, W. Va. Riordan Robsion Rouse Rucker Sanders, Tex. Sisson Steagali Stevenson Strong, Pa. Sumners, Tex. Tillman Tucker Turner Tyson Weaver Wright Wyant

Hawes Hays Himes Hukriede Hukriede Jacoway Jefferis, Nebr. Johnson, Miss. Johnson, S. Dak. Jones, Pa. Kathn Keller, Mich. Kennedy Kindred King

Thomas Thorpe Timberlake Moore, Ill. Kitchin Ryan Sabath Schall Scott, Mich. Scott, Tenn. Kleczka Kline, N. Y. Knight Morgan
Morin
Mudd
Nelson, A. P.
Nolan
Olpp
Overstreet
Paige
Park, Ga.
Parkes, Ark,
Patterson, Mo.
Patterson, N. J.
Perlman
Rainey, Ala, Timberlake
Towner
Treadway
Walters
Ward, N. Y.
Ward, N. C.
Webster
Wheeler
White, Me.
Willams, Tex. Kunz Lanham Sears Shelton Slemp Smith, Mich. Layton Lehlbach Lineberger Linthicum Linthicum Luhring
McClintic
McCormick
McFadden
MacGnegor
Maloney
Martin
Michaelson
Mondell
Montague Snell Snyder Stedman Stiness Wingo Wise Wood, Ind. Woods, Va. Woodyard Zihlman Rainey, Ala. Rainey, Ill. Stoll Sullivan Taylor, Ark. Taylor, Colo. Taylor, Tenn, Temple Reece Riddick Rodenberg Rose

So, two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

The following additional pairs were announced:

Mr. Faust and Mr. Browne of Wisconsin (for) with Mr. Goodykoontz (against).

Additional pairs: Mr. Snyder with Mr. Brand.

Mr. Patterson of New Jersey with Mr. Lanham. Mr. Lineberger with Mr. Wise.

Mr. Cramton with Mr. Stedman. Mr. Anthony with Mr. Martin. Mr. Crowther with Mr. Cullen. Mr. Denison with Mr. Garner.

Mr. Denison with Mr. Garner.
Mr. Frear with Mr. Kitchin,
Mr. Morin with Mr. Rainey of Illinois.
Mr. Snell with Mr. Wingo.
Mr. Temple with Mr. Sabath.
Mr. MacGregor with Mr. Linthicum.
Mr. Timberlake with Mr. Sears. Mr. Lehlbach with Mr. Drane.

Mr. Connolly of Pennsylvania with Mr. Taylor of Arkansas.

Mr. Davis of Minnesota with Mr. Stoll.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The doors were opened.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Craven, its Chief Clerk, announced that the Senate had insisted upon its amendments to the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 422) permitting the entry free of duty of certain domestic animals which have crossed the boundary line into foreign countries, disagreed to by the House of Representatives, had agreed to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. McCumber, Mr. Smoot, and Mr. Jones of New Mexico as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that, pursuant to the provisions of Senate Resolution 464, the Vice President had appointed Mr. Walsh of Montana, Mr. Robinson, Mr. Walsworth, Mr. WATSON, Mr. CALDEB, and Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts as the committee on the part of the Senate to attend the funeral of the Hon. W. Bourke Cockban, late a Representative from the State of New York.

The message also announced that the Senate had insisted upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 14408) making approopon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 14408) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the iscal year ending June 30, 1923, and prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, and for other purposes, disagreed to by the House of Representatives, had agreed to the conference asked by the House, and had appointed Mr. WARREN, Mr. CURTIS, and Mr. Overman as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

AMENDING AND MODIFYING THE WAR INSURANCE ACT.

Mr. SWEET. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 14401) to amend and modify the war insurance act as amended.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 29 of the war risk insurance act as amended by act approved August 9, 1921, is hereby amended to read amended by act approved August 9, 1921, is nereby amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 29. The discharge or dismissal of any person from the military or naval forces on the ground that he is guilty of mutiny, treason, spying, or any offense involving moral turpitude, or willful and persistent misconduct, of which he has been found guilty by a court-martial, or that he is an enemy alien, conscientious objector, or a deserter, shall terminate any insurance granted on the life of such person under the provisions of article 4 and shall bar all rights to any compensation under article 3 or any insurance under article 4: Provided, That, as to converted insurance, the cash surrender value thereof, if any, on the date of such discharge or dismissal shall be paid the insured, if living, and if dead to the designated beneficiary: Provided further. That an enemy alien who volunteered or who was drafted into the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps of the United States during the World War, and who was not discharged from the service on his own application or solicitation by reason of his being an enemy alien, and whose service was honest and faithful, shall be entitled to the benefits of the war risk insurance act and all amendments thereto: Provided further, That in case any person has been dishonorably discharged from the military or naval forces as a result of a court-martial trial, and it is thereafter established to the satisfaction of the director that at the time of the commission of the offense resulting in such court-martial trial and discharge that such person was insane, such person shall be entitled to the compensation and insurance benefits of the war risk insurance act: Provided further, That this section as amended shall be deemed to be in effect as of April 6, 1917, and the director is hereby authorized and directed to make provision by bureau regulation for payment of any insurance claim or adjustment in insurance premium account of any insurance contract which would not now be affected by this section as amended."

SEC. 2. That section 300 of the war risk insurance act, as amended by the act approved August 9, 1921, is hereby amended to read as follows:

insurance calam or adjustment in insurance premium account of any insurance calam or adjustment in insurance premium account of any insurance calam or adjustment in insurance premium account of any insurance calam or adjusted by the act approved August 9, 1921, is hereby amended to read as Soc. 2. That section 300 of the war risk insurance act, as amended by the act approved August 9, 1921, is hereby amended to read as follows:

Soc. 2. That section 300 of the war risk insurance act, as amended by the act approved August 9, 1921, is hereby amended to read as follows:

1917, or for an aggravation of a disability existing prior to examination, acceptance, and enrollment for service, when such aggravation acceptance, and enrollment for service, when such aggravation are acceptance, and enrollment for service, when such aggravation of the Army Nurse Corps (female) or of the Army Nurse Corps (female) or or or the Army Properties of the Army Nurse Corps (female) or or the Navy Nurse Corps (female) or or the Navy Nurse Corps (female) or or the Navy Nurse Corps (female) or or of the Navy Nurse Corps (female) or or the Navy Nurse Corps (female) or in the discretion of the director, separately to his or her dependents, compensation as hereinsfere provided, but no compensation shall be paid if the injury, discretion of the director, separately to his or her dependents, compensation as hereinsfered to the purposes of this section every such officer, enlisted man, or other member employed in the active service under the War Department or Navy Department on or before November 11, 1918, who on or after August 1918, 1921, is discharged or resigns shall be conclusively held and taken by the provided of the compensation of a civic service to the extent to provide of a provided provided to the compensation of a civic service to the extent to provide of the provided of the provided provided to the compensation from the active military or many difference of disability or more in accordance with the provident provided and active the

the amount which would have been payable to them if they had been the sole original beneficiaries.

"(6) As between the widow and the children not in her custody, and as between children, the amount of compensation shall be apportioned as may be prescribed by regulation.

"(7) The term 'widow' as used in this section shall not include one who shall have married the deceased later than 10 years after the time of injury, and shall include widower whenever his condition is such that if the deceased person were living he would have been dependent upon her for support.

such that if the deceased person were living he would have been dependent upon her for support.

"(8) That section 301 of the war risk insurance act, as amended, shall be deemed to be in effect as of April 6, 1917: Provided, hoverer, That before compensation thereunder shall be paid there shall first be deducted from said sum so to be paid the amount of any payments such person may have received by way of gratuities or payments under pension laws in force and existence between April 6, 1917, and October 6, 1917."

sion laws in force and existence between April 6, 1917, and October 6, 1917."

Sec. 4. That subdivision (6) of section 302 of the war risk insurance act is hereby amended to read as follows:

"(6) In addition to the compensation above provided, the injured person shall be furnished by the United States such reasonable governmental medicinal, surgical, and hospital services and with such supplies, including wheel chairs, artificial limbs, trusses, and similar appliances, as the director may determine to be useful and reasonably necessary, which wheeled chairs, artificial limbs, trusses, and similar appliances may be procured by the United States Veterans' Bureau in such manner, either by purchase or manufacture, as the director may determine to be advantageous and reasonably necessary: Provided, That nothing in this act shall be construed to affect the necessary military control over any member of the Military or Naval Establishments before he shall have been discharged from the military or naval service: Provided, That all hospital facilities under the control and jurisdiction of the United States Veterans' Bureau shall be available for veterans of the Spanish-American War, the Philippine insurrection, and the Boxer rebellion, suffering from neuropsychiatric or tubercular all ments and diseases, including transportation as granted to those receiving compensation and hospitalization under the war risk insurance act."

Sec. 5. That section 306 of the war risk insurance act, as amended the act approved August 9, 1921, is hereby amended to read as ecting compensation and bospitalization under the war risk insurance act.

SEC. 5. That section 306 of the war risk insurance act, as amended by the act approved August 9, 1921, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 306. That no compensation shall be payable for death or disability which does not occur prior to or within one year after the activation of the compensation of one year after the passage of this amendatory act to the effect that the injured person at the time of discharge or resignation was suffering from injury likely to result in death or disability, such certificate, except in case of frand, shall be incontextable evidence that the injury for amendation of the provisions of Article III of the war risk insurance act, as amended, for death or disability whenever occurring, proximately resulting from such injury: Provided, That such certificate shall issue only where there is an official record of the injury during service or at the time of separation from active service, or where before March I, 1924, satisfactory evidence is furnished the bureau to establish that the injury was suffered or agravated during with the provisions of said Article III for death or disability whenever occurring, proximately resulting from such injury."

SEC. 308. That no compensation shall be payable for death inflicted as a lawful punishment for crime or military offense exceptions of service from which such disability whenever occurring, proximately resulting from such injury."

SEC. 308. That no compensation shall be payable for death inflicted as a lawful punishment for crime or military offense exceptions of the war risk insurance act is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 308. That no compensation shall be payable for death inflicted as a lawful punishment for crime or military offense exceptions of the war risk insurance act is hereby amended t cther than total permanent disability, and where said soldier has since died from said wounds or disease or has become permanently and totally disabled by reason thereof, then and in that event the United States Veterans' Bureau is hereby authorized and directed to pay to said soldier or his beneficiarles the amount of insurance attempted to be reinstard less the premiums and interest thereon at 5 per cent per annum compounded annually in installments as provided by law's additional property of the United States Veterans' Bureau for all payments of insurance installments hereafter made, without verification of the deductions on the pay roll of such premium as may have accrued prior to January 1, 1921, while the insured was in the service.

SEC. S. That section 409 of the war risk insurance act is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 409. The United States Veterans' Bureau for the payment of more management of the accordance with regulations whereby the payment of premiums on a caccredance with regulations whereby the payment of premiums on a caccredance with regulations whereby the payment of premium and the cases of the following persons, to wit: (a) Those who are confined in a hospital under said bureau for a compensable disability during the period while they are so confined; (b) those who are rated as temporarily totally disabled by reason of an injury or disease entiting them to compensation during the period of such total disability during the period or which they have been or hereafter may be so rated, the waiver in such cases to be made without application and for whom no legal guardian had been or has been appointed; allowed or may allow their insurance to lapse while such rating is effective where necessary: Provided, That such relief from payment of premiums on yearly renewable term insurance on the due date thereof shall be for full calendar months beginning with the month in the refer to the payment of which when due is waived as above provided shall be a management of which when due is waived

"SEC. 412. That all premiums paid on account of insurance converted under the provisions of Article IV of the war risk insurance act shall be deposited and covered into the Treasury to the credit of the United States Government life-insurance fund and shall be available for the payment of losses, dividends, refunds, and other benefits provided for under such insurance. Payments from this fund shall be made upon and in accordance with awards by the director.

"The United States Veterans' Bureau is hereby authorized to set aside out of the fund so collected such reserve funds as may be required, under accepted actuarial principles, to meet all liabilities under such insurance; and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to invest and reinvest the said United States Government life-insurance fund, or any part thereof, in interest-bearing obligations of the United States or bonds of the Federal farm-loan banks and to sell said obligations of the United States or the bonds of the Federal farm-loan banks for the purposes of such fund."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. BARKLEY. I demand a second. Mr. SWEET. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a econd be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Iowa is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. SWEET. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, this bill has been well considered. Some complaint may be made of its length, but I wish to say to the gentlemen of the House that, following a well-established custom in our committee, we usually set forth the section in full, even if there is a slight amendment to it, and that is what has added to the length of the bill in appearance. The truth is that many of the sections set forth in the bill are the present law with the exception of a slight modification.

Section 1 of the bill changes the law so that persons guilty of mutiny, treason, spying, or any offense involving moral turpitude or willful and persistent misconduct will not be deprived of insurance and compensation benefits unless they have been found guilty by a court-martial. We have modified the law in that respect so that it does not deprive all of those who may have bad-conduct discharges, but simply those who have been found guilty by a court-martial. This section is made retroactive, and under the rules and regulations of the Veterans' Bureau insurance may be reinstated. There are about 8,000 who have been deprived of insurance at the present time by reasen of the above causes. This will apply to about 2,000 cases, and, provided they pay all back premiums, their insurance can be reinstated. It is estimated that about 300 cases of compensation will be affected by this provision.

Section 2 of the bill amends section 300 of the war risk insurance act, so that a person who is suffering from a neuropsychiatric or tubercular disease developing within three years after separation from the service shall be considered to have acquired such disease while in the service. The present law limits the period to two years.

The word "pulmonary" is also stricken from the present law. The bill includes all persons suffering from neuropsychiatric or tubercular diseases, provided they have been examined by a medical officer of the bureau or a legally qualified physician and found to be suffering from a disability due to these diseases of more than 10 per cent degree within three years after sepa ration from the active military or naval service of the United

The tuberculosis cases that would fall within the provisions of this section as amended would probably total about five to ten thousand and would cost the Government about $400,000 monthly, and a total of fifteen millions to cover a period of This is exclusive of expenses of medical treatthree years. ment and hospitalization, and the estimate is that this latter cost would equal the cost of compensation.

The mental cases, it is estimated in the first year, will cost in compensation about three millions, and the total cost, exclusive of the first year will be about fifteen millions, which will extend over a period of 11 years. This estimate does not include the cost of medical treatment and hospitalization, and this will probably be greater than the cost of compensation.

The total cost of the new provisions of this bill extending over a period of from two to three years for compensation would approximately be between thirty and forty millions, and when the cost of medical treatment and hospitalization is added to the above the total cost of the new provisions in this section will be substantially increased.

Mr. BARKLEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SWEET. I will.

Mr. BARKLEY. In order to make that clear in the act, the service man that is examined by the physician and found to be suffering with more than 10 per cent disability of tuberculosis is presumed to have contracted it in the military service.

Mr. SWEET. The gentleman is correct, and the word "pulmonary" is stricken out. It is not confined to the lungs.

Mr. BARKLEY. But if he has tuberculosis of any sort.

Yes. Mr. SWEET.

Mr. JEFFERS of Alabama. Under the present law the time is two years, and this changes it to three years.

Mr. SWEET. It does.

Mr. JEFFERS of Alabama. Are the requirements about proof the same as they have been?

Mr. SWEET. The only change is the extension of one year. Mr. JEFFERS of Alabama. The bureau now, in addition to the two years, demands a certain leeway of a month or twothat is, they give him two years and some months.

Mr. SWEET. In tubercular cases, Mr. JEFFERS of Alabama. Will Will the bureau still be able to conduct it in the same way?

Mr. SWEET. Provided the man has been examined by a medical officer of the bureau or a legally qualified physician outside of the bureau within the three years

Mr. JEFFERS of Alabama. Can they add their regulations to the three years, as they have added to the two years?

Mr. SWEET. If they have been examined by a medical officer of the bureau, or a legally qualified physician, and found to be suffering from a disability due to these diseases of more than 10 per cent within the three years after separation from the service.

Mr. JEFFERS of Alabama. Just as they have done within

Mr. SWEET. I think so, provided he has been examined by a medical officer of the bureau or a legally qualified physician within the three years.

Mr. MILLER. Did I understand the gentleman correctly when he said that section 2 would affect between ten and fifteen thousand men?

Mr. SWEET. Yes. Mr. MILLER. Then there are that number of men who are neuropsychiatric and tubercular cases, developed since they left the service?

Mr. SWEET.

Mr. BLANTON. Where a man can show that when he entered the service he was physically sound and can show within three years after he was discharged that he has active tuberculosis, then he comes within the provisions of this bill?

Mr. SWEET. He does.

Mr. COLE of Iowa. Would he have to be examined within three years?

Mr. SWEET. 'He must have been examined by a physician within three years under this provision.

Mr. COLE of Iowa. He can not be examined now. Mr. SWEET. If it is beyond the three years after his separation from the service; no.

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. As a matter of fact, he is presumed to have left the service and to have been sound in body and mind when he entered the service.

Mr. SWEET. Yes; that is true. Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. The examination by the physician in the bureau or outside of the bureau within the threeyear period must of course show either a nervous ailment or an active tubercular ailment within the definition of the statute.

Mr. SWEET. Yes; within the three years; that is true. The tubercular cases that fall within the provisions of this section probably total from five to ten thousand and will cost the Government about $400,000 monthly, or a total of $15,000,000 or over covering a period of three years.

Mr. BRIGGS. Is it not the intent and purpose of the committee recommending this legislation that this law shall be construed liberally?

Mr. SWEET. Yes; it should be construed fairly.
Mr. BRIGGS. I mean with a liberal intent in favor of the soldier instead of strictly against him? Is not that the purpose? Mr. SWEET. That is the intent of the gentleman on the

Mr. BRIGGS. Does the gentleman not think that is the intent of the committee?

Mr. SWEET. Yes.
Mr. BRIGGS. And the intent of the Congress?
Mr. SWEET. I think it is. The mental cases estimated in the first year will cost in compensation about $3,000,000; and the total cost, exclusive of the first year, will be about $15,000,000, which will extend over a period of 11 years. This estimate does not include the cost of medical treatment and hospitalization, and this would probably be greater than the cost of compensation.

Mr. HUDSPETH. I want to ask why the committee fixed the time at three years for tubercular cases—those who contracted tuberculosis? Might they not contract tuberculosis caused by the

Mr SWEET. The medical testimony shows quite conclusively that if a man has not shown any signs of tuberculosis within three years after separation from the service, in all probability it is not connected with the service, I am not saying that there are no cases of that kind, but the three years will cover the greater part of all those cases.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Would the gentleman object to an amendment extending the time to four years, so that there would not be any question about that?

Mr. SWEET. I am satisfied that full justice in this matter will be done by leaving it as it is in the bill. Of course, this bill is not subject to amendment in the manner in which we are considering it at this time,

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. As a matter of fact the threeyear period is just a period of presumption. A person may have tuberculosis after that time and trace it to the service, if there was something in the service that would lead a physician to form that opinion. There is nothing to prevent that. This three years is a matter of presumption.

Mr. HUDSPETH. But he would not come within the provisions of this bill, would he?

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. Yes.
Mr. HUDSPETH. After three years, if he could trace it back to the service he would come within the provisions of the

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. Oh, yes. The three years' time is just a presumption period.

Mr. SWEET. I may say in answer to the gentleman from Texas that if a man can show by satisfactory evidence that his disease of tuberculosis is connected with the service, even if it be five years, he is entitled to the benefits of the act.

Section 3 provides that where a veteran of any war dies after discharge or resignation from the service and does not leave sufficient assets to meet the expense of burial and transportation of his body the United States Veterans' Bureau shall pay for a flag to drape the cusket (and after burial to be given to the next of kin of the deceased) a sum not exceeding $5, and also for burial expenses a sum not exceeding $100. If death occurs while such person was receiving governmental medical, surgical, and hospital treatment or vocational training, the bureau shall pay in addition to burial expenses actual and necessary cost of transportation of the body, including the preparation of the body, to a place of burial within the continental limits of the United States. This provision is applicable to the veterans of all wars

Mr. SWING. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SWEET. I will.

Mr. SWING. They have a rule now, handed down by the comptroller, that if a service man dies in his home and not in the service of the Government they will not pay his burial There are cases where the local Veterans' Bureau representative has directed an undertaker to bury the body, and when the bills were sent in to the Government, the ex-service man not having anything, the Veterans' Bureau turned it down.

I may say to the gentleman whatever law we have on that subject is found in appropriation acts; it is not fundamental law.

Mr. SWING. It is not the law, but the King Totem, the high comptroller, who makes this practically the law in addition to the Congress

Mr. STAFFORD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SWEET. I will.

Mr. STAFFORD. Has any estimate been made of the total cost on the Treasury of the United States for the liberalization proposed by the gentleman.

Mr. SWEET. Somewhere between $30,000,000 and $40,- 000,000.

Mr. STAFFORD. For all time?

Mr. SWEET. To cover a reasonable period. It is simply an

Mr. STAFFORD. The gentleman just stated there would be expended $15,000,000 by the Government on the liberalization of those developing tuberculosis in three years on the presumption it was of Army origin.

Mr. SWEET. Yes; three years.
Mr. STAFFORD. That will amount to the life of the World War veteran?

Mr. SWEET. That has not been figured out.

Mr. STAFFORD. With the average life of the World War

Mr. STAFFORD. With the average life of the world war veteran it may reach pretty high.

Mr. SWEET. Of course, with tubercular patients the payments do not run very long in most instances. How much time have I consumed up to the present time?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Fifteen minutes.

Mr. BRIGGS. Will the gentleman yield for one other question?

Mr. SWEET. I will.

Mr. BRIGGS. The purpose of the committee in eliminating the word "pulmonary" was to broaden the term "tubercu-

Mr. SWEET. Yes.
Mr. BRIGGS. The object in keeping in the term "neuro-psychiatric" instead of specifying nervous complaints was to make that term more comprehensive and cover the problems that might arise.

Mr. SWEET. Yes; that is true.

There are now living 180,631 Civil War veterans, 234,000 Spanish-American War veterans, and 4,382,225 World War veterans, and it is estimated that 30 per cent of the above number will in all probability come under the provisions of this section. In all probability during the year 1924 about 22,000 persons will take advantage of this provision, and it is estimated the cost to the Government will be a little over $2,000,000. The estimated cost by years of providing burial expenses in the amount of $105 for each United States veteran of any war who dies after separation from the service and does not leave sufficient funds to meet these expenses, based on the number surviving January 1, 1923, as stated above, and assuming that deaths occur in accordance with the American experience table of mortality, and that 30 per cent of those dying will come within the provisions set forth in this bill, it would ultimately cost the Government of the United States $151,000,000, extending over a period of 64 years. I attach an estimate prepared by H. P. Brown, actuary of the Veterans' Bureau, on February 20, 1923, as follows:

Estimated cost, by years, of providing burial expenses in the amount of $105 for each United States veteran of any war who dies after separation from the service and does not leave sufficient funds to meet these expenses, based on the following number surviving January, 1923:

Civil War (actual figures)
Spauish-American War (estimated)
World War (estimated) 180, 631 234, 000 4, 382, 225

[Assuming that deaths occur in accordance with the American experience table of mortality and that 30 per cent of those dying each year come within the provisions stated above.]

Year.	Number dying dur- ing year.	$105×number dying during year.	$105×30 per cent of number dying.
1923	66 614	$6, 994, 470	$2,098,341
1924	65, 274	6, 853, 770	2, 656, 131
1925	63,726	6,691,230	2, 656, 131 2, 607, 369 1, 950, 701
1926 1927	61, 927	6,691,230 6,502,335 6,305,985	1,950,701
1928	66, 614 65, 274 63, 726 61, 927 60, 057 58, 270 56, 487 54, 834	6 118 350	1, 950, 701 1, 891, 705 1, 835, 505 1, 779, 341 1, 727, 271 1, 671, 957 1, 619, 009 1, 575, 977 - 1, 547, 312 1, 533, 704
1929*	56, 487	0, 931, 130	1,779,341
1930 1931	54, 834 53, 078	5, 151, 510	1,727,271
1931 1932	51, 399	5, 573, 190 5, 396, 895	1 619 009
1933	50,031	5, 253, 255	1,575,977
1934	49, 121	5, 157, 705	1,547,312
1935 1936	48,689 48,763	5,112,345 5,120,115	1,533,704
1937	49,373	5, 184, 165	1,555,250
1938	50, 531	5, 305, 755	1,591,727
1939	51,939 53,583	5, 453, 595 5, 626, 215	1,636,079
1940 1941	55, 483	5,825,715	1,687,865 1,747,715
1942	57, 534	6,041,070	1,812,321
1943	59,790	6,277,950	1,883,385
1944	62,211	6,532,155 6,799,590	1,959,647 2,039,877
1945 1946	64,758	7,091,070	2,127,321
1947	70,399	7 391 895	2,127,321 2,217,569
1948	73, 457	7,712,935	2,313,896
1949	76,668 80,060		2,415,042 2,521,890
1951		8,406,300 8,779,260	2,633,778
1952	87,318	9,168,390	1 - 2.750.517
1953 1954	91, 219	9,168,390 9,577,995 9,994,425	2,873,399
1955.	87, 318 91, 219 95, 185 99, 186 103, 227 107, 348 111, 411 115, 364 119, 144	10, 414, 530	2,998,328 3,124,359
1956	103, 227	10, 838, 835	0, 201, 901
1957	107, 348	10, 838, 835 11, 271, 540	3, 381, 462
1958. 1959.	111, 411	11,098,155	3, 509, 447 3, 633, 966
1960	119, 144	11, 698, 155 12, 113, 220 12, 510, 120 12, 867, 225	3 753 036
1961		12, 867, 225	3, 860, 168
1962	125, 531 127, 905	13, 180, 755 13, 430, 025	3, 860, 168 3, 954, 227 4, 029, 008
1963 1964	129, 463	13, 593, 615	4,078,085
1965	130, 037	113,653,885	14, 096, 166
1966	129, 566	13, 604, 430	4, 081, 329
1967 1968	128, 133 125, 755	13, 453, 965 13, 204, 275	4, 036, 190 3, 961, 283
1969	122, 534	12, 866, 070	3, 859, 821
1970	118, 508	12, 443, 340	3, 733, 002
1971	113, 587 108, 163	11, 926, 635	3, 577, 991
1972 1973	101, 587	11, 357, 115 10, 666, 635	3, 199, 991
1974	93, 937	9, 863, 385	2, 959, 016
1975	85, 244	8, 950, 620	2, 685, 180
1976 1977	76,038 66,830	7,983,990	2, 395, 197 2, 105, 147
1978	57, 623	6, 050, 415	1, 815, 12
1979	45, 201	7, 017, 150 6, 050, 415 5, 067, 405 4, 040, 820	1,020, 222
1980. 1981	38, 484	4,040,820	1, 212, 24
1981 1982	28, 708 19, 915	2,091,075	904, 303 627, 323
1983	12,725	1, 336, 125	400, 838
1984	1,001	744, 135	223, 241 94, 500
1985	3,000 931	97, 753	29, 327
1987	155	3,014,340 2,091,075 1,336,125 744,135 315,000 97,755 16,278	4,88
Total	4, 796, 856	503, 669, 880	151, 100, 983
Total	1, 130, 330	000,000,000	101, 100, 983

1 Maximum annual cost

Section 4 provides that transportation be furnished to veterans of the Spanish-American War, the Philippine insurrection, and the Boxer rebellion, who are receiving hospitalization facilities at the present time through the United States Veterans' Bureau. At the present time under a ruling of the Comptroller General these veterans, although entitled to hospitaliza-tion, are not entitled to transportation to and from the hospitals.

The expense of this section can not amount to a very substantial sum, for the number of Spanish-American War veterans who are receiving hospitalization under the provisions of the amendment to the second Langley bill are at the present time less than 100. The exact figures given at the hearing were 37. Mr. Robinson, who represented the Spanish-American War veterans, stated before the committee as follows:

We only have right now 37 Spanish War veterans with T. B. or N. P. in hospitals, but we would have a lot more if they had the transportation to get there.

Section 5 extends the time for obtaining a certificate of disability from the Director of the Veterans' Bureau to March 1, 1924, in compensation cases, and provides that such certificate shall issue where there is an official record of injury during service or at the time of separation from the service, or where satisfactory evidence is furnished the bureau to establish the injury. This section allows the limitation to remain the same; that is, that compensation will not be payable for death or disability that does not occur within one year from the date of separation from the service, unless a certificate was obtained. This section as amended does, however, extend the time for obtaining a certificate to March 1, 1924.

The immediate cost to the Government of the changes made in the present law in this respect would not amount to any substantial sum. This section does not propose the incorporation of any limitations upon compensation that does not already exist. The bureau has had occasion to deny a few applications for certificates of injury but the number is not great, probably not 200. This can not be accepted as having any great significance, however, because it has been advertised as widely as possible that certificates must have been requested before August 9, 1922. Therefore it is believed that persons who might originally have been entitled to a certificate are not now making applications, as they are fully aware that it will The proposed amendment allowing the limitations to remain the same—that is, that compensation will not be payable for death or disability that does not occur within one year from the date of separation from the service, unless a certificate was obtained-does, however, extend the time for obtaining a certificate to March 1, 1924. A certificate issued except for fraud is to be considered as incontestable evidence that the injury covered by the certificate was incurred in or aggravated by service. It is believed that a certificate should be incontestable except for fraud and definitely protect the claimant in the future.

The amendment is designed to take care of veterans who have a definite service record that the injury was suffered or sustained while in the service. Such veteran should be entitled to the right of obtaining a certificate of injury if he so desires. An example would probably make this more clear: A soldier received a gunshot wound of the leg, resulting in osteomyelitis, which completely recovered to all appearances before discharge from the service. At the time of discharge the physical condition is good and there is no evidence of disability except a scar at the site of the injury. It is a well-known fact, however, that in many instances of this kind the osteomyelitis will again become active through no discoverable cause, sometimes several years subsequent to the time when an apparent cure had been accomplished. Such claimant would be entitled to a certificate of injury, but through motives of one sort or another, either his desire to not claim any benefits from the Government, or he feels that he is entirely well, or does not know of his rights to a certificate, he fails to obtain such certificate within the limitation of time. He has no disability within a year from the date of discharge, yet six or eight years later the osteomyelitis again become disabiling and he passes through a long period of invalidism that possibly terminates fatally, as conditions of this sort are of doubtful prognosis, some resulting in cure, some in incomplete recovery, with complications, or possibly death. The amendment would protect these cases and would not cover any cases where there was no official record of service injury.

Section 6 provides that no compensation shall be payable for death inflicted as a lawful punishment for crime or a military offense, except one inflicted by the enemy. A dismissal or discharge by sentence of court-martial from the service shall bar and terminate all right to any compensation under the provisions of this article for the period of service from which discharge is given. This section of the war risk insurance act is amended to conform with the changes made in section 29 of the war risk insurance act, as set forth in section 1 of this bill. It will be remembered that section 1 of the bill changes the law so that persons guilty of treason, mutiny, spying, or any offense involving moral turpitude or willful and persistent misconduct will not be deprived of insurance and compensation benefits unless they have been found guilty by a court-martial benefits unless they have been found guilty by a court-martial.

Section 7 of the bill amends section 408 of the war risk insurance act. The bureau has had much difficulty in arriving at a proper construction of the third proviso of section 408 of the act approved August 9, 1921. It would seem that that proviso was intended to be double-barreled and to apply both to the case where the insured died leaving uncollected compensation sufficient to pay his premiums and the case of where a man attempted to reinstate his insurance and was denied reinstatement by reason of physical condition. The trouble the bureau has had with this proviso is that the concluding words are to the effect that "said policy shall not be considered as lapsed." An extreme construction of this proviso in so far as it relates to reinstatement would be that where the insured having a policy for $10,000 applied for reinstatement of $1,000 and was denied reinstatement the result of this denial would be that his whole policy of $10,000 would not lapse; and, further, that this would be the case even though at the time the soldier applied for insurance he was then totally and permanently disabled. In fact, the confusion arising from the peculiar wording of this proviso has resulted in the legal division of the Veterans' Bureau looking to the comptroller's opinions where reinstatements were involved rather than to the proviso.

In order to clear up all doubt we have separated this proviso into two parts, the first part of which in effect provides that insurance shall not lapse where the bureau has sufficient uncollected compensation to pay the premiums, this irrespective of whether application for reinstatement was made or not. second portion of the proviso submitted covers the question of reinstatements and in effect provides that where the soldier has applied for reinstatement and such reinstatement has been denied because of health conditions, and where at the time of such application the soldier was suffering from a disease of service origin but was not permanently and totally disabled, then the bureau is authorized to pay the soldier or his beneficiaries the amount of insurance attempted to be reinstated less the premiums, and so forth. This provise applied only in cases where the soldier had died and has no application where the soldier has become totally and permanently disabled. The result of this has been that the bureau has found many cases where a soldier prior to August 9, 1921, had applied for rein-statement and at the time of such application was not permanently and totally disabled and had his application denied because of health conditions and subsequently became permanently and totally disabled. The result in such a case was that the man could not get the benefits of the third proviso of section 408, nor could be reinstate under the first portion of section 408, because he was permanently and totally disabled. Since Government insurance matures both upon permanent and total disability and death, the committee believes that the third proviso should be so worded as to give the soldler the benefit of the insurance under either state of the case. This inconsistency crept into the law through an amendment adopted on the floor of the House when the act of August 9, 1921, was being considered.

Section 8 amends section 409 of the present law, whereby the payment of premiums on yearly renewable term insurance and United States Government life insurance (converted insurance) on the due date thereof may be waived and the insurance may be deemed not to lapse in the cases of those who while mentally incompetent and for whom no legal guardian had been or has been appointed allowed or may allow their insurance to lapse while such rating is effective during the period for which they have been or hereafter may be so rated, the waiver in such case to be made without application and retroactive where neces-The law now provides that the payment of premiums may be waived and the insurance may be deemed not to lapse in the cases of those who are confined in a hospital under said bureau for a compensable disability during the period while they are so confined. Also those who are rated as temporarily totally disabled by reason of an injury or disease entitling them to compensation during the period of such total disability and while they are so rated. The amendment to this section relates solely to those who are mentally incompetent and for whom no legal guardian has been appointed. If this section becomes a law, their insurance will not lapse during the period of such incompetency. The last proviso has been added to this section to take care of reimbursement of the United States Government life-insurance fund from the military and naval insurance appropriation in cases where premiums on converted insurance are waived and the insurance is never thereafter continued to maturity.

Section 9 of the bill amends section 411 of the present law so

Section 9 of the bill amends section 411 of the present law so that a policy of insurance shall be incontestable after it has been in force six months, instead of providing that the policy shall be incontestable six months after date of issuance or reinstatement. Section 411 now provides that, subject to section 29, a policy of insurance heretofore or hereafter issued in accordance with article 4 of the war risk insurance act shall be incontestable after six months from date of issuance or date of reinstatement, except for fraud or nonpayment of premiums. The bureau has found upon investigation that a large number of cases construing a similar proviso in insurance policies have held that the maturity of the policy did not stop the running of the statute, and that the statute could be stopped from running only by action brought in court to cancel the policy. other words, if an insured paid one month's premium and no more and died or became permanently disabled within that month the Government would be bound to pay the policy (if the bureau followed these opinions) unless the Government, within six months from the date of issuance of the policy or reinstatement had begun a suit to cancel the policy. The amendment, instead of providing that the policy shall be incontestable six months after date, provides that it shall be in-contestable after the policy "has been in force six months." All the cases hold that where the provision in the policy is that it must be in force six months that the maturity of the policy stops the running of the statute and the insurer can contest. Recognizing the fact that where the only method of contest is by suit in court the statute would become absolutely useless to the bureau. The amendment provides that a letter mailed to the insured at his last known place of residence informing him of the invalidity of his policy shall be deemed a contest within the meaning of the section.

Section 10 provides that the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to invest and reinvest the United States Government life-insurance fund or any part thereof in interest-bearing obligations of the United States or bonds of the Federal farm-loan banks, and to sell said obligations of the United States or the bonds of the Federal farm-loan banks for the purposes of such fund. This section of the bill simply amends section 412 of the war risk insurance act by adding the words "or bonds of the Federal farm-loan banks."

I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. The bill now before us makes certain changes in the war risk insurance act, the general effect of which is to clarify and also to liberalize certain terms and provisions in the existing laws.

The original law provided compensation to the disabled soldier, providing the disability was of service origin. This feature has been retained, with two exceptions. In the second Sweet bill any soldier or ex-soldier of the late war developing active pulmonary tuberculosis or a neuropsychiatric disease within two years following his discharge was conclusively presumed to have contracted the disease by reason of his service. Development of either of these diseases within the two-year period obviated the necessity of proof, providing that the disability was at least 10 per cent. If either of the diseases developed at any time thereafter, compensation is allowable whenever the proof shows service origin.

In the present bill the presumption is enlarged so as to include not only pulmonary tuberculosis but all tuberculosis that is active in character. The presumption is changed from two to three years, providing that within a period of three years the service man is found by either a physician of the bureau or a competent physician outside of the bureau to have either active tuberculosis or neuropsychiatric trouble constituting at least a 10 per cent disability. The point is that in order to obtain the benefit of this three-year presumption a physician, either within or without the bureau, must within the three-year period find this 10 per cent disability to exist. If the service man does not consult a physician until after three years, no matter what his condition then may be, he can not have the benefit of this presumption. He must then rely upon the proof which traces his disability to service origin.

There are a number of other changes both as to compensation and insurance which the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce feel should be made in order to better carry out the purposes of the act, but I think it can be said that this change striking out the word "pulmonary" and extending the period from two to three years are the principal changes.

Mr. MADDEN. Will the gentleman yield for a minute for me to present a conference report?

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. I yield to the gentleman.
Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I present a conference report on the bill H. R. 14408, for printing under the rule.
The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the bill

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 14408) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, and prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, and for other purposes.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the report, but I will reserve it until I can ask a ques-Will the gentleman state to the House what has been done about the $400,000?

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order—
Mr. MADDEN. The report speaks for itself.
Mr. BLANTON. I make the point of order that the conferees have exceeded their authority in bringing back before the House a report that embraces an item of legislation involving $400,000.

Mr. DOWELL. I make the point of order that the gentleman can not-

Mr. BLANTON. I want to state my point of order first, to wit, what is known as the fact finding coal commission legislation, and that is a matter-

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is ready to rule. there is a point of order this is no time to make it. The Chair directs the report to be printed under the rule.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 14408) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, and prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 13, 28, 27, 29, 34, 35, 39, 42, 44, 46, 47, 48, 50, 52, 53, 55, 59, 60, 61,

68, and 73.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 25, 26, 28, 30, 31, 33, 37, 41, 43, 49, 56, 57, 58, 62, 63, 65, 67, 69, 70, 71, 74, 75, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, and 84; and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 21: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 21, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Omit the matter stricken out and inserted by said amendment, and on page 5 of the bill, in line 4, strike out the title "Botanic Garden" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 32: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 32, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment insert "$7,500"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 38: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 38, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$25,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 45: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 45, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 2 of the matter inserted by said amendment, strike out the word "rebuilding" and insert in lieu thereof the words "repairing, reconstructing"; and the Senate agreed to the

Amendment numbered 51: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 51, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 5 of the matter inserted by said amendment, after the word "River," insert the words "on public lands"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 64: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 64, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 5 of the matter inserted by said amendment, before the sum "$4,380.67," insert "fiscal year 1918"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 85: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 85, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out the last five lines of the matter inserted by said amendment; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 86: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 86, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the number proposed insert "4"; and the Senate agree to the same.

The committee of conference have not agreed on amendments numbered 22, 24, 36, 40, 54, 66, 72, and 76.

F. E. WARREN, CHARLES CURTIS, LEE S. OVERMAN, Managers on the part of the Senate. MARTIN B. MADDEN, D. R. ANTHONY, Jr., JOSEPH W. BYRNS. Managers on the part of the House.

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 14408) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, and prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, and for other purposes, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conference committee and submitted in the accompanying conference report:

On Nos. 1 to 15, inclusive, relating to the Senate: Appropriates $500 for additional compensation to the reading clerk, fiscal year 1924; increases the compensation of the Assistant Doorkeeper and Acting Assistant Doorkeeper to $4,200 per annum each and appropriates $1,600 in consequence thereof; increases the compensation of the two floor assistants to $3,600 per annum each and appropriates $2,933.34 in consequence thereof; appropriates $2,500 for services performed pursuant to Senate Resolution 130, Sixty-seventh Congress, first session; appropriates to pay to two persons $1,000 each for expert personal services in connection with the investigation of the fiscal relations of the District of Columbia and the United States; appropriates $1,200 to pay for extra and expert services rendered the Committee on Pensions during the third and fourth sessions of the Sixty-seventh Congress; appropriates $900 to pay for services rendered various committees of the Senate; appropriates $50,000 for miscellaneous items; appropriates $5,000 for stationery; appropriates $7,000 on account of Senate kitchens and restaurants, all the foregoing as proposed by the Senate; strikes out the authorization proposed by the Senate to pay additional compensation at the rate of $240 per annum to all employees of the Senate kitchens and restaurants; appropriates $200, as proposed by the Senate, for additional compensation to messenger at card door; increases the pay of a laborer to $1,100 per annum, effective July 1, 1923, and appropriates $200 in consequence of such increase, as proposed by the Senate.

On Nos. 16 to 19, inclusive, relative to the House of Representatives: Appropriates $7,500 to pay the widow of the late W. Bourke Cockran, as proposed by the Senate; appropriates $3,312.51, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $3,305.56, as proposed by the House, on account of the employment of the person named in the resolution approved February 13, 1923; and appropriates $397.50, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $396.67, as proposed by the House, on account of the compensation of the chief janitor.

On No. 20: Appropriates $20,000, as proposed by the Senate, on account of the Senate Office Building.

On No. 21: Strikes out the appropriations proposed by both the House and Senate on account of the main conservatory of the Botanic Garden.

On No. 23: Strikes out the authorization proposed by the Senate with respect to taxes on the estate of Charles L. Freer,

On Nos. 25 and 26, relating to the recorder of deeds, District of Columbia: Authorizes the lease of additional space and the purchase of additional book typewriters, as proposed by the

On Nos. 27 to 35, inclusive, relating to the District of Columbia: Appropriates $25,000, as proposed by the House, instead of $50,000, as proposed by the Senate, on account of repairs to suburban roads; repeals the appropriation of $16,800 for repaing Fifteenth Street NW., H to I Streets, as proposed by the Senate; strikes out the appropriation of $2,730, proposed by the Senate, for Americanization work; appropriates $15,000, as proposed by the Senate, for replacing textbooks and school proposed by the Senate, for replacing textbooks and school supplies destroyed or damaged by fire; authorizes the use of $90,000 of the policemen and firemen's relief fund, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $50,000, as proposed by the House; appropriates $7,500 for repairs and improvements to the Courthouse and Court of Appeals Building, instead of $15,300, as proposed by the Senate; appropriates $1,000 for contingent expenses of the municipal court, as proposed by the Senate; strikes out the appropriation of $9,000, proposed by the Senate, for board and care of children under the Board of Children's Guardians; and strikes out the appropriations proposed by the Senate aggregating $25,869.50 on account of medical charities.

On Nos. 37 to 39, inclusive, relating to the Department of Agriculture: Appropriates $375,000 for fighting and preventing forest fires, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $340,000, as proposed by the House; appropriates $25,000 for controlling and preventing the spread of the Japanese beetle, instead of $15,000, as proposed by the House, and $40,000, as proposed by the Senate; and makes the appropriation available for the fiscal year 1923 only, as proposed by the House, instead of for 1923 and 1924, as proposed by the Senate.

On No. 41: Makes the appropriation of $40,000 for the fiscal year 1923 on account of a fish-rescue station on the Mississippi River available during the fiscal year 1924, as proposed by the

On No. 42: Strikes out the authorization proposed by the Senate with respect to allowing credits for payments of loss by exchange on salary and per diem checks issued to employees of the Department of Commerce.

On Nos. 43 to 48, inclusive, relating to the Bureau of Indian Affairs: Appropriates $17,471.25, as proposed by the Senate, for payment to the Allied Contractors (Inc.), of Omaha, Nebr.; strikes out the authorization proposed by the Senate for payment of $350 to R. P. Rueth, of Chamita, N. Mex.; appropriates $10,000, as proposed by the Senate, on account of the shop building at Fort Totten (N. Dak.) Indian School; and strikes out the authorizations proposed by the Senate allowing credits for payments made to Frank L. Van Tassel, of Yankton, S.

On Nos. 49 to 51, inclusive, relating to the National Park Service: Strikes out the appropriation of $50,000 proposed by the Senate on account of the Rocky Mountain National Park, and appropriates $133,000, as proposed by the Senate, on account of the Zion National Park.

On No. 52: Strikes out the appropriation of $1,000 proposed by the Senate for books for the law library of the Department of Justice.

On No. 53: Appropriates $4,500, as proposed by the House, instead of $6,000, as proposed by the Senate, on account of a marble bust and oil portrait of the late Chief Justice Edward Douglass White.

On No. 55: Strikes out the appropriation of $495.69 proposed by the Senate on account of damage claims under the Bureau of Immigration.

On Nos. 56 to 60, inclusive, relating to the Navy Department: Appropriates $52,531.45 in the aggregate for the settlement of claims, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $21,341.13, as proposed by the House; and strikes out the prohibitions proposed by the Senate against acquiring articles which can be made, manufactured, or produced in navy yards.

On No. 61: Strikes out the appropriation of $1,000 proposed by the Senate for reimbursing postal employees for fines levied for carrying arms while in the performance of duty.

On Nos. 62 to 64, inclusive, relating to the Postal Service: Appropriates $1,500,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $1,250,000, as proposed by the House, for temporary and auxiliary clerk hire; appropriates $300,000, as proposed by the Senate, for pay of letter carriers; and appropriates $4,380.67, as proposed by the Senate, for the settlement of an audited claim.

On No. 65: Reappropriates and makes the appropriation of $20,000, fiscal year 1914, on account of the adornment of the Peace Palace at The Hague, available during the fiscal years 1923 and 1924.

On No. 67: Fixes the amount which may be used of the appropriation on account of the International Exposition at Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, for the purchase of additional land at $35,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $30,000, as proposed by the House.

On No. 68: Strikes out the appropriation of $13,511.13, proposed by the Senate, to satisfy a claim on account of losses sustained by a French citizen in connection with the search for the body of John Paul Jones.

On Nos. 69 to 71, inclusive, relating to the Treasury Department: Appropriates $15,000, as proposed by the Senate, for contingent expenses, public moneys; appropriates $50,000, as proposed by the Senate, for additional vault facilities in the Denver (Colo.)) mint building; and makes the appropriation for the fiscal year 1923 on account of the West Roxbury (Mass.) Public Health Service Hospital No. 44, available for mechanical equipment, as proposed by the Senate.

On No. 73: Strikes out the appropriation of $4,803, proposed by the Senate, for payment of claims growing out of river and harbor activities under the War Department.

On No. 74: Makes the appropriations in the War Department appropriation acts for the fiscal years 1923 and 1924 for the rental of buildings and parts of buildings for military purposes in the District of Columbia available for the rental of the Lemon Building, as proposed by the Senate.

On No. 75: Appropriates $30,000, as proposed by the Senate, to pay awards for land condemned for use by the War Department at nitrate plant No. 2, Muscle Shoals, Ala.

On No. 77: Strikes out, as proposed by the Senate, the limita-tion proposed by the House in connection with the appropriation for the construction or improvement of roadways on the Fort Riley (Kans.) Military Reservation.

Riley (Kans.) Military Reservation.

On Nos. 78 to 80, inclusive, relating to judgments, United States courts: Appropriates $402,274.12, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $401,836.62, as proposed by the House.

On Nos. 81 to 84, inclusive, relating to judgments, Court of Claims: Appropriates $259,748.59, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $72,811.41, as proposed by the House.

On No. 85: Appropriates $104,178.75 on account of audited claims, as proposed by the Senate, and strikes out the authorization proposed by the Senate that employees of the Govern-ization proposed by the Senate that employees of the Government who were excused from work on November 11, 1921, shall be allowed pay for that day.

On No. 86: Makes section 3 of the bill section 4 thereof, instead of section 5 thereof, as proposed by the Senate.

The committee of conference have not agreed upon the following amendments of the Senate:

On No. 22: Relating to the appropriation for traveling and other expenses of the President.

On No. 24: Appropriating $400,000 on account of the United States Coal Commission.

On No. 36: Clothing the superintendent of the Washington Asylum and Jail with authority to execute the judgments of the law pronounced in capital cases, etc.

On No. 40: Appropriating $40,000 for the control of the boll

On No. 54: Appropriating $300,000 on account of expenses of additional district courts.

On No. 66: Appropriating $7,500 on account of the Seventeenth International Congress Against Alcoholism.
On No. 72: Relating to the relief of John R. Kissinger, late of Company D, One hundred and fifty-seventh Indiana Velunteer Infantry, and also late of the Hospital Corps, United States Army.

On No. 76: Appropriating $25,000 on account of expenses incident to holding an international shooting competition in the United States.

MARTIN B. MADDEN, D. R. ANTHONY, Jr., JOSEPH W. BYRNS. Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Now then, Mr. Speaker, I want to take this occasion to call to the attention of the membership of this House about a recent development in the Veterans' Bureau which I think will be of particular interest to Members of Every Member of this House necessarily has a great deal to do with the Veterans' Bureau, both in the districts and especially with the Washington office. The correspondence pertaining to claims for compensation, hospitalization, and training takes up a great deal of our own time and the time of our secretaries. Two or three years ago the Veterans' Bureau, then called the War Risk Insurance Bureau, organized a section for the purpose of handling congressional mail and claims presented through the various Members of Congress, including both House and Senate. The organizing of this congressional section proved to be very helpful and some very excellent hardworking young men have from time to time been in that section and have done very good work.

This congressional section has been located in the Veterans' Bureau building, a mile and a half from the Capitol. Many of us have had to take up the most difficult of our claims in person with the staff in charge of that congressional section. A trip down there necessarily consumes considerable time.

The other day I was informed that we were not getting as good service from the Veterans' Bureau as we had been getting. and I made inquiry as to just what had become of one of the men who had been doing such good work here in the congressional section. Much to my surprise, I was advised that about two and a half months ago this man had been placed in charge of an office of the Veterans' Bureau which was located in the Senate Office Building. I expressed surprise at this, and especially at not having heard of it before. I could not understand why special service of this kind should be provided for the Members of one branch of Congress. I could not understand why one branch should be favored over and above that of the other, and so expressed myself. I was then informed that this was placed there for the purpose of serving not only Members of the Senate but Members of the House as well. I questioned this, because up to that time I had never heard of any such special service located in either the Senate Office, the House Office, or the Capitol Building. I was assured that Members of both House and Senate had been notified and that I must in some way or other have been unintentionally overlooked.

With the idea that possibly I had been overlooked, I then presented the matter to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce at our next meeting. I found, as I expected to find, that not one member of that committee which has jurisdiction over all the legislation affecting the Veterans' Bureau had ever been advised by anyone of the existence of this special service which had been located some time before in the Senate Office Building.

Thereupon I advised the office of the acting director of the bureau just exactly what I, as one Member of this House, thought of the action of the Veterans' Bureau in discriminating and showing partiality in service between the Members of the House and the Members of the Senate. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, the Members of this House handle many, many more claims than do the Members of the Senate. We are equally Members of Congress and as such are entitled to the same consideration as the Members of the Senate. If the Veterans' Bureau deemed it to be advantageous either to themselves or to Members of Congress to provide a special office for special service, that service should be available to each and every Member of Congress regardless of whether he is at this or the other end of the Capitol.

Before acting upon any suggestion of this kind from one branch of this Congress they should have consulted the other branch. If such a service is maintained, it should be located not in the Senate Office Building or in the House Office Building but in this Capitol Building itself, so as to be equally available to the Members and their secretaries of both branches of Congress

The locating of this office and this service as it has been shows an utter lack of regard or of respect for the House of Representatives and its membership. As one Member of this House, I want to voice my protest upon this action of the Veterans' Bureau and to express the hope that the new director will take immediate steps to see that this action is rescinded and that the discrimination and partiality cease. If it is not done this House should, and I am sure will, find a way to end it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Can I have another minute? Mr. BARKLEY. I will yield the gentleman another minute, and ask him a question. [Laughter.]

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Yes.

Mr. RANKIN. I wanted to ask the gentleman who was responsible for establishing that branch office over there?

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. I am unable to answer, because when I made the inquiry the director was on the high seas. I do not know who was responsible other than that we hold the director responsible for the affairs of the bureau.

Mr. RANKIN. Is that the time he went abroad to resign? [Laughter.]

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Yes.
The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield to the gentleman another minute. It strikes me that that action on the part of the bureau is a com-pliment to the House in that it seems to presume that we understand the law, and they did not put a commission in our office to look into it.

office to look line it.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. The gentleman, of course, is stating the facts. But it is only another instance of the ignoring of the right of this great body here and of its Members by certain bureaus of the executive branch of our Government.

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Yes. Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. Perhaps the reason for that grows out of the fact that every particle of legislation that has been passed with reference to the Veterans' Bureau originated in the House of Representatives and was framed by our committee and was passed and sent over there. Not a single one of them was initiated by the Senate.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks in the RECORD on this bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the gentleman's request?

There was no objection.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker, I make the same request. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

Mr. CARTER. Under leave given me to print, I submit the following data, which have been prepared and checked up by a careful statistician:

THE WHEAT FARMER AND THE TARIFF.

1.122

1.048 1.012

May 1, 1921, While emergency tariff bill was under discussion, average farm price.

June 1, 1921, (After President Harding had signed the bill which was effective until the Fordney-McCumber bill was approved in 1922)

July 1, 1921, (After President Harding had signed the bill which was effective until the Fordney-McCumber bill was approved in 1922)

Aug. 1, 1921, (After President Harding had signed the bill which was effective until the Fordney-McCumber bill was approved in 1922)

Sept. 1, 1921, (After President Harding had signed the bill which was effective until the Fordney-McCumber bill was approved in 1922)

Nov. 1, 1921, (After President Harding had signed the bill which was effective until the Fordney-McCumber bill was approved in 1922)

Dec. 1, 1921, (After President Harding had signed the bill which was effective until the Fordney-McCumber bill was approved in 1922)

Dec. 1, 1921, (After President Harding had signed the bill which was effective until the Fordney-McCumber bill was approved in 1922)

Throughout the year of 1922, during all of which time eith .942

no tariff."

Now comes Senator Gooding (Republican), of Idaho, in the Congressional Record, page 4220. February 22, 1923, trying to fool the farmer again in the face of the figures given out by the Department of Agriculture under Secretary Wallace, as shown in the above table. He says: "Some branches of agriculture have been materially benefited through a protective tariff. The emergency tariff bill was a godsend to them; it was a life-saver. The permanent tariff bill has also been a mighty factor in helping some branches of agriculture. Even the wheat grower has been materially benefited, for he has received anywhere from 20 to 30 cents a bushel more for his wheat since the emergency tariff bill was passed than the Canadian farmer has received."

THE FARMER AND PREIGHT RATES

To-day the farmer is paying vastly more than his share on the up-keep and operation of our railroads. Under the horizontal increases of 65 per cent the farmer is paying 1.500 per cent higher freight rates on the market value of his products than is paid on manufactured articles. There is very little difference in the freight rates in all the Western States or the country generally on farm products:

Eighty thousand pound carload of wheat from Idaho to Chicago, the freight rate in 1914, $400, in 1921, $596; 24,000 pound carload of hay from Idaho to Chicago, the freight rate in 1914, $132.50, in 1921, $240; 24,000 pound carload of fruit from Idaho to New York, the freight rate in 1914, $300, in 1921, $500; 26,000 pound carload of cattle from Idaho to Chicago, the freight rate in 1914, $203.80, in 1921, $295.10; 24,000 pound carload of sacked wool from Idaho to Boston, the freight rate in 1914, $475.20, in 1921, $831.60; 32,000 pound carload of baled wool from Idaho to Boston, the freight rate in 1914, $475.20, in 1921, $831.60; 32,000 pound carload of baled wool from Idaho to Boston, the freight rate in 1914, $475.20, in 1921, $831.60; 32,000 pound carload of baled wool from Idaho to Boston, the freight rate in 1914, $475.20, in 1921, $800.

For instance, the farmers of the West and the country in general pay a freight rate to Chicago of 97 per cent of the market price on potatoes; 52 per cent of the market price on beans. They pay 53 per cent of the market price on hay to Kansas City and a freight rate of 9.3 per cent of the market price on wool to Boston.

For comparison it is found on manufactured goods that men's shoes pay a freight rate of 2½ per cent of the wholesale price from Chicago to the West; and on women's shoes 2 per cent. Men's suitings pay 1½ per cent, and on cotton goods pay a freight rate of 4 per cent of the wholesale price from Chicago to the West; and on women's shoes 2 per cent. Men's suitings pay 1½ per cent, and on cotton goods pay a freight rate of 4 per cent of the wholesale price from Chicago to the West; and on women's shoes 2 per cent. Men's suitings pay 1½ per cent, and on cotton goods pay a freight rate of 4 per cent of the wholesale price from Chicago to the West; and on women's shoes 2 per cent. Men's suitings pay 1½ per cent, and on cotton goods pay a freight rate of 4 per cent of the wholesale price from Chicago to the West; and on women's shoes 2 per cent. Men's suitings p

THE PARMER AND WHAT HE PAYS UNDER THE FORDNEY-M'CUMBER TARIFF

"To lay with one hand the power of the Government on the property of the citizen and with the other to bestow it upon favored individuals to aid private enterprise and build up private fortunes is none the less robbery because it is done under the forms of law and is called taxation."—Supreme Court of the United States, Marshall Case.

The following articles are a few of which there are no importations and upon which the farmers are forced to pay tribute to special interests:

Articles.	Production.	Im- ports.	Duty.	Reve- nue.	Cost of protection.
	* 		Per ct.		210 117 710
Cement	$208, 422, 920 10, 877, 001	None.	30 20	None.	$40, 445, 748 1, 812, 833
Wooden goods		None.	25	None.	4, 358, 652
		None.	334	None.	4, 794, 069
Belting and hose Knit goods (wool)	285, 255, 689	None.	90	None.	135, 121, 110
Knit goods (silk).	142, 627, 844	None.	60	None.	53, 485, 441
Blacking	25, 284, 072	None.	25	None.	4, 512, 34
Engines-steam, gas, and water	464, 774, 735	None.	20	None.	70, 917, 688
Hardware	154, 524, 888	None.	50	None.	47, 614, 668
Pumps	85, 401, 940	None.	25	None.	16, 304, 98
Stoves	211, 509, 992	None.	50	None.	66, 300, 092
Tinware	233, 964, 000	None.	20	None.	38, 242, 714
Shirts	205, 327, 133	None.	45	None.	63, 253, 903
Files	17, 616, 563	None.	50	None.	4, 144, 924

A representative of the Tile Trust taking an order for Spain, August 1, 1922, was asked: "How can you sell abroad?" "We can undersell the world." "Then why do you want protection?" "To maintain domestic prices." Here is the milk in the coconut in this Fordney-McCumber (robber) tariff law, in which the consumer, labor cost, or revenue was considered in hundreds of these items in this nefarious law. A case in point. A Chicago merchant imported 200 screws, pins, and other fittings for automatic revolvers. When landed in New York the invoice price was $3.79. Under a clause in the Fordney-McCumber (Republican) profiteers' tariff law he received from the revenue department a bill for $241.99 tax, which was several hundred per cent above the invoice price, making a total of $245.78 he had to pay for $3.79 worth of goods.

Bradstreet's price index of January 1, 1923, on commodities, including nearly everything the farmer has to buy, shows an increase of 20.4 per cent over January 1, 1922, and 29 per cent over January 1, 1921.

"The Payne-Aldrich bill was crooked, yet if it had not hurt the American people there would have been no such political revolution as followed. There is traver little difference between the Percent Marie.

cluding nearly everything the farmer has to buy, shows an increase of 20.4 per cent over January 1, 1922, and 29 per cent over January 1, 1921.

"The Payne-Aldrich bill was crooked, yet if it had not hurt the American people there would have been no such political revolution as followed. There is very little difference between the Payne-Aldrich bill and the duties as reported in this (Fordney) bill." Senator Lendor (Republican), in Senate, July 26, 1922.

"Upon an article like this (cotton gloves) used in every house in the land, we ought not to tax the American people more than 75 per cent." Senator Lendoot, June 30, 1922. On July 13, 1922, Senator Lendoot said, "Instead of such rates as this being something to the credit of the Republican Party they will tend to damn the Republican Party if they are put into the bill."

"So far as a high or low schedule may be concerned, the farmer probably has much more to lose by high tariffs on the things which he buys than he could ever hope to gain by any tariff on his own commodities. Our economists have all reported convincingly on that point. There may possibly be some exceptions to it." President J. R. Howard, American Farm Bureau Federation, 1922.

"This bill in its entirety is a more radical and more extreme measure so far as protection is concerned, than even the Payne-Aldrich law. I had hoped Mr. President that protection would not run mad as it has done. I never in all my life saw such a swarm of men as were around the Finance Committee while they had this bill before them, and most of them got their work in well." Senator Knutz Nelson (Republican), Congressional Record, August 11, 1922.

"No one single interest should be protected at the expense or to the detriment of other and greater interests. Protection ceases to be protection when it is carried to the extent of pampering an industry into slothfulness and beyond the whip and spur of competition." Col. Geo. Tichenor, at one time president Board of General Appraisers. (Mr. Tichenor framed the McKinley and Din

WAGES AND THE TARIFF.

The Republican Party has been committed since 1908 to the principle of the "difference in the cost of production here and abroad," with a fair addition for contingencies as the measure of a protective duty. The Republican Congress piedges itself to this, and then utterly defaults under pressure of the overprotected interests.

It enslaves the country to the moneyed interests and weakens the foundations of the Government.

What labor gets from each dollar of protection and the corresponding tariff rates.

Product.	Wage per dollar of product	Underwood tariff on each dollar imported.	Fordney tariff on each dollar imported.
Cotton goods. Silk goods. Woolens Hosiery Glassware Glucose Aluminum Cutlery Stamped ware. Gloves, leather Buttons Chinaware. Paints and varnishes. Cast-iron pipe. Wire. Glass bottles Oilcloth and linoleum	Cents. 162 183 183 172 304 6 6 172 32 173 33 41 7 14.8 184 80 114	Cents. 34 424 32 37 35 15 205 394 132 36 555 114 10 15 39 322	Cents. 51 57 68 67 333 50 45 1.82 40 50 99 69 28 20 28 60 35

The Fordney duties are more than three times the total wage cost, and wages constitute the only considerable difference between foreign and domestic cost of production.

DEATHS AND FAILURES.

The hearings before the Agricultural Committee of the Senate disclose the sad fact that in 1922 there were 30 suicides on the farms in Minnesota, 87 in North Dakota, 32 in South Dakota, and 15 in Montana, making 168 suicides that have taken place on the farms in those four States in the last 12 months.

The increase in business failures last year were surprising and the worst in the history of the country as recorded by Dun & Co., as follows: 1920, 8,881; 1921, 19,652; 1922, 23,995.

The prevalence of mortality in 1922 is among the smaller business firms and not among the larger ones as in 1921.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Huddleston].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Alabama is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. Speaker, the brief time allotted to me for the discussion of this measure does not permit of a full explanation of its provisions. I am forced to content myself with a very brief explanation of some of the changes made in the existing law.

SOLDIER MUST HAVE BEEN DISCHARGED BY COURT-MARTIAL,

The present law deprives a soldier of compensation and insurance benefits who was dismissed or discharged from the Army for misconduct. By the amendment it is made necessary that the dismissal or discharge must have been after trial by courtmartial in order to prevent an ex-soldier from receiving compensation for disabilities connected with his service or the benefits of the insurance which he paid for with his own money.

THREE YEARS FOR MENTAL DISEASES AND TUBERCULOSIS.

Perhaps the most important amendment proposed is the amendment to section 300 of the act. At present veterans developing mental diseases or tuberculosis within two years after discharge are held to have contracted same while in service and are granted compensation for such disabilities. The amendment extends the period to three years, within which, if such diseases are found to exist, same are held to be service connected and compensable.

SOLDIER PRESUMED TO HAVE BEEN SOUND WHEN ENLISTED.

Another important amendment to section 300 is the insertion of the word "conclusively" in the second sentence of said section. This sentence as it appears in the existing law is the substance of an amendment which I offered on the floor of the House and secured to be adopted as a part of the act of June 25, 1918. I had observed that soldiers developing disabilities while in service were frequently charged by the Army surgeons with having had the disability at the time they enlisted, although upon examination at that time no such disability had been found. It is the practice of the Pen-sion Office that where, even months after the soldier enlisted, an Army surgeon states on his record that he had the disability when he enlisted, although upon a searching examination at that time same was not disclosed, such statement is conclusive and defeats the soldier's right to pension. Such a practice was so unjust that I felt that it should not be applied to World War soldiers. In short, it was my feeling that if upon an examination by Army surgeons at the time he enlists the soldier is found to be sound in every respect it was unfair for the Government to refuse compensation for disabilities subsequently discovered merely because some Army doctor might say that he had no such disabilities at the time he enlisted. With this purpose in mind I introduced the amendment which provided that a soldier should be held as having been in sound condition when he enlisted except as to such infirmities as were then made of record by the examining officers.

My amendment seemed to make the law very plain. ever, the Veterans' Bureau in many cases has refused compensation to soldiers who were found sound by the examining surgeon at the time of enlistment, basing such refusal upon the ground that the soldier had a disability existing at such time which the surgeon did not discover. In order to place the law beyond such interpretation the word "conclusively" is now inserted before the word "held" as same appears in my previous amendment. It is hoped that by the use of this language the bureau will be prevented from going back of the finding of the examining surgeons who pronounce a man sound at the time he is enlisted.

BURIAL OF INDIGENT VETERANS OF ALL WARS.

Section 301 (g) (2), as amended by the pending bill, authorizes the bureau to pay $100 as the burial expenses of a veteran who may die without sufficient assets to pay for his burial. The most important aspect of this amendment is that it covers veterans of all wars, including Civil War, Spanish War, Philippine insurrection, and so forth. In other words, by this amendment for the first time is it recognized that there should be no discrimination among soldiers, all of whom have served honorably in various wars. True, this principle is now made applicable only to burial benefits, but I believe that it will eventually be extended to all other forms of soldier relief.

HOSPITALIZATION FOR SPANISH WAR VETERANS,

Section 302 (6) of the existing law extends to Spanish War soldiers suffering from tuberculosis and mental diseases the right to hospitalization in Veterans' Bureau hospitals. However, Spanish War soldiers have been discriminated against in that while they are treated at the hospitals the same as World War soldiers they are required to pay their own transportation to and from the hospitals, while such transportation is furnished free to World War soldiers. The amendment made by the pending bill will extend to Spanish War veterans desiring to enter bureau hospitals for treatment for said diseases the same free transportation which is now granted to World War veterans.

INSURANCE NOT LAPSED WHEN COMPENSATION DUE.

By section 408 of the present law, where an ex-soldier fails to pay premiums on his insurance at a time when there is due him for compensation for service-connected disabilities an amount in excess of the amount of his insurance premiums, and such ex-soldier subsequently dies from said disability "without collecting or making claim for said compensation," then his insurance shall be held not to have lapsed and benefits thereunder shall be payable to his beneficiaries. By this bill the law is amended by striking out the words "or making claim for," so that where a veteran has claimed the compensation which was due him, but has not been able to collect it from the bureau, his insurance is not lapsed. This amendment was adopted in the committee upon my motion. There are numerous cases in which veterans have been entitled to compensation and have claimed it, but the bureau has failed to allow their claims or has delayed payment until the veteran has died from his disability. Surely the mere fact of having "claimed" the compensation ought not to cause the lapse of the soldier's insurance.

The time at my disposal is too short for me to discuss the amendments further. I have mentioned merely the most im-There are numerous other amendments, all of which portant.

have my hearty approval.

It is my position that the war risk act should be amended in numerous respects not proposed by the pending bill. However, due to the parliamentary situation, no amendments are now permitted to be offered. This measure is being considered under a motion to suspend the rules, which makes it impossible for any amendment to be offered. Such a procedure can not be justified, except upon the ground that the present Congress is so near its end that there is not sufficient time for the regular and proper consideration of the bill.

EQUAL COMPENSATION BENEFITS FOR VETERANS OF ALL WARS.

Had the bill been offered under the usual procedure of the House permitting amendments, it had been my purpose to offer an amendment extending to Spanish War and Civil War veterans all compensation benefits now accorded to World War veterans. Upon numerous occasions I have protested upon this floor against the discrimination practiced against my former comrades of the Spanish War. I hold that it is fundamental that soldiers of equal merit and service who have served their country honorably in time of war should not be discriminated among merely because they served in different wars.

A soldier who served in the Civil War and was wounded in battle should receive the same compensation, pension, or whatever the relief may be called, as a soldier sustaining the same disability in the World War. The same principle is, of course, applicable to veterans of the Spanish War. It can justly make no difference whether a soldier lost his leg at Gettysburg, Santiago, or in the Argonne, and any system of soldier relief which makes such discrimination is fundamentally wrong and unjust. BASE RELIEF FOR SOLDIERS UPON JUSTICE. NOT POLITICAL INFLUENCE.

Under existing laws a totally disabled Civil War soldier receives a pension of $72 per month, a totally disabled Spanish War soldier gets only $30 per month, whereas a totally disabled World War soldier receives $80 a month, with an addition for his dependents. Again, the widow of a Civil War soldier is pensioned at $30, the Spanish War widow receives $20, while the widow of the World War soldier receives $25 monthly. How is it possible to justify such discrimination? Soldiers of all wars should be rewarded on the same basis, and their de-pendents should receive equality in treatment. The fact that those serving in the World War are more numerous and hence have greater political influence is no answer, although it is no doubt the real reason for the discrimination.

Upon several occasions upon this floor I have presented this same argument in behalf of equality of treatment of all soldiers. favor liberality toward all those who have sustained disabilities in their service of the country, but such liberality must be equal to all and without regard to the voting strength of the various groups.

I wish to serve notice on the House now that upon every occasion hereafter upon which legislation is presented in the House in such way as will make such an amendment permissible, I intend to offer an amendment which will extend to the veterans of all wars the same compensation and other benefits as are granted to World War soldiers. I shall expect support for such an amendment from all those who love justice and equality. Particularly, I shall expect the support of any former World War soldiers who may be in the House of Representa-tives. I feel that in appealing to them in behalf of justice for Civil War and Spanish War soldiers I will meet with a sympathetic response

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Alabama has expired.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Larsen].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Georgia is recognized.

Mr. LARSEN of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I believe the proposed legislation will prove advantageous and shall support it, but I am also deeply concerned as to the economical expenditure of appropriations made for the support of the Veterans' Bureau.

The papers of yesterday told us that Col. C. R. Forbes is no longer Director of the Veterans' Bureau and gave an account of many shiftings and changes of employees as well as recom-mendations made by the retiring director during the last few hours of his disgraceful administration.

Some of the changes recently made seem to indicate a purpose to provide as well as possible for those who have been his willing henchmen. Others indicate a desire to remove from the scene of questionable activities those who are supposed to possess and may be willing to disclose considerable information regarding the waste, extravagance, and mismanagement which characterized the Forbes reign.

Among the retiring director's recommendations is one proposing to increase the salary of certain bureau physicians to $20,000 per annum. Of course, we might have expected him to recommend or do something to divert public attention from the proposed bureau investigation which he pretends to court but has been so careful not to recommend.

If instead of wrecking his mind for some unnecessary, nonsensical recommendation for future operation of this discredited bureau he had endeavored to explain to Congress and to the public some of the apparently unwise if not shady and corrupt transactions of recent months with which his name is so closely linked, he would have commanded more respectful public attention.

If current rumors and press reports are to be regarded in the slightest degree, there are certainly many things which Mr. Forbes might explain. The public would be glad to have his statement concerning a contract for more than a million dollars which was awarded the Hurley-Mason Construction Co., of Tacoma, Wash., and of which he is reputed to have been a former vice president. He might tell the public whether this contract was let upon competitive bids, who the parties were that sub-mitted bids, and the amount of each bid. If he claims competitive bids were submitted, he might explain why the lowest bids were not accepted and why the particular company of which he was vice president should be awarded the contract without at least submitting as low a bid as anyone else.

His explanation of contract awarded to the W. N. Sutherland Building & Construction Co. for construction of a hospital at Tupper Lake, N. Y., would be of interest. If it were necessary to award the first contract of $42,000 to this party on competitive bids, he might also explain why he did not deem it necessary to require competitive bids for the additional $52,000 contract awarded this company.

The ex-director might do well to explain the contract that was awarded to J. W. Thompson, of St. Louis and Chicago, for construction of the North Hampton Hospital. Why should Mr. Thompson be awarded this contract at $163,000 if the Northeastern Construction Co. submitted a competitive bid offering to do the work for $27,000 less? If he should contend that the Northeastern Construction Co. is not reliable, he might explain how it is this same company is now doing construction work for the Government at Norfolk, Va.

If the War Department, disposing of surplus war material, received an average of 57 per cent for textiles sold, the public would certainly be glad to know why it was necessary for the Veterans' Bureau to sell such articles to the Thompson Kelly Co. for 204 per cent. In this connection he might also explain why he did not sell such goods as were sold to the Thompson Kelly Co. to other parties who offered 50 per cent more for them.

If 201 per cent, the price at which the bureau sold surplus war material to the Thompson Kelly Co., was a reasonably fair price for same, the ex-director might explain how it is that such staple articles as bed sheets, etc., were actually delivered over to this company for 17 per cent of the original cost or less. He might also explain how it is that practically all of said goods sold the Thompson Kelly Co. have been resold by said company—by auction or otherwise—at from three to five times the price paid the bureau for them. But, why should we sell articles necessary for operation of hospitals in the Veterans' Bureau when we are forced to rebuy such articles at approximately five times the price?

Mr. Forbes might also explain the mystery and reason which prevents officials of the Veterans' Bureau from advising Members of Congress or the public concerning original proposi-tion made by Thompson Kelly Co. to the Veterans' Bureau regarding sale of property about November 15 of last year; the letter which he wrote to C. R. O'Leary authorizing disposition of surplus war material; the letter O. K'd by O. E. Keogel, assistant counsel, authorizing the sale of such goods on or about November 15 last; the contract made by Thompson Kelly Co. with the Veterans' Bureau for purchase of surplus war material; the invoices covering shipments made to Thompson Kelly Co. by the Veterans' Bureau; the price paid by said company for goods, etc.; the letter of explanation written to the President of the United States regarding many items sold to Thompson Kelly Co. with claim of damage to said goods-its offer to return or resell said goods to the Government-and especially the letter of said Thompson Kelly Co. dated on or about February 11, 1923, withdrawing proposition to return or resell said goods; appraisal of goods made for the President with recommendation of the Veterans' Bureau showing cost of goods, sale price of goods in open market, and price at which similar articles were sold by the Army. Certainly Mr. Forbes knows that if these transactions with the Thompson Kelly Co. are honest and legitimate there should be no objection to giving individual Members of Congress information regarding them. If an investigation of the Veterans' Bureau be not objectionable, why do autocratic bureau officials hesitate to reveal or seek to cover up and conceal facts and information to which the public and its representatives are entitled?

Mr. Speaker, regardless of the desire of Mr. Forbes and bureau officials, why should Congress-the representative of the people-longer hesitate to order such an investigation as will fully advise the public as to true conditions regarding the bureau? Personally, I have made no charges against the bureau or individuals connected with it, but for almost 12 months have persistently insisted that the Congress should investigate and advise the public as to the truth or falsity of reports as to waste, extravagance, and mismanagement alleged to pervade almost every department of this great organization which was intended to ameliorate and relieve, so far as possible, the distressed conditions of our World War veterans. We are spending more than $425,000,000 annually—approximately $1,200,000 per day-of taxes collected from the public for this worthy cause, and the taxpayers are entitled to know that these funds are being economically and honestly administered.

A Senate committee has recommended a joint investigation of the Veterans' Bureau, and the membership of the House, I am sure, desires to participate in whatever investigation may be ordered. The Rules Committee of the House are to blame if we do not participate, and I trust that favorable action may not be longer delayed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Georgia has expired.

Mr. LARSEN of Georgia. The time was not limited, Mr. Speaker. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Barkley] simply yielded to me.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is advised to the contrary. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. LARSEN of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the gentleman's request?

There was no objection.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Connally].

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the committee, I want to express my hearty agreement with the attitude of the gentleman from Alabama with reference to discrimination in the matter of benefit compensation and other privileges as between veterans of the Spanish-American War and the World War. However, I desire to call the attention of the committee to another matter in connection with veterans' legislation. The Senate has recently had a subcommittee at work on the question as to whether or not the Veterans' Bureau and its branches should be investigated during the recess of Congress. The Senate is making provision to conduct the investigation alone unless the House expresses its desire to have an opportunity to take part in that investigation. The Senate desires a joint committee for that purpose, and I want to urge upon those in authority here, especially the Speaker pro tempore, that they permit the consideration of a joint resolution in order that the House may have a part in the proposed investigation, because the House is more vitally concerned than even the Senate by reason of the greater number of cases which pass through our hands. I trust those in authority will grant the appeal of the Senate when it asks the House to take part in the joint investigation. [Applause.]
Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. Speaker, how much time have I re-

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Kentucky has 10 minutes remaining.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN] three minutes.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I shall vote for this bill, for the reason that I want to see every man who was disabled in the service of his country during the World War amply taken care of; but at the same time I want to express my profound disappointment that after two years under the present system, after all the iniquities of decentralization of the Veterans' Bureau. the bill does not provide for recentralization of that great institution. If it had done so, it would have saved the Government enough money to pay every dollar of the additional cost which this bill calls for.

I agree with the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Connally] that we need a thorough investigation of the Veterans' Bureau. I sincerely trust, as he said, that the temporary Speaker of the House, the chairman of the Rules Committee, and other members of the committee will bring in a rule giving us the oppor-tunity to pass such a resolution, in order that the House of Representatives may take part in a thorough investigation of the Veterans' Bureau, which, in my opinion, is squandering not millions but hundreds of millions of dollars annually.

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. Yes.
Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. What power has this Congress to provide for investigation by another Congress that does not organize until next December?

Mr. RANKIN. It is not necessary to appoint newly elected men on the committee; we can select men who are holding over. Besides, we will have no trouble in getting the next Congress to ratify any authority we may attempt to give them, and at any rate the next Congress will be able to use such facts as the committee may be able to develop. You gentlemen who are going home to stay nine months will come back agreeing with me that we ought to recentralize the bureau and stop so much unnecessary waste of public money. In fact, a vast majority of you agree with me now.

Mr. SWEET. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. Yes.

Mr. SWEET. The other day I heard the gentleman on the floor make the assertion that there were two or three hundred million dollars squandered annually. That was his judg-

Mr. RANKIN. My honest opinion is that if it is not squandered it is extravagantly expended.

Mr. SWEET. And they should not receive the compensation and the insurance benefits.

Mr. RANKIN. I did not say that, and if the gentleman heard me, he knows I did not say it. I said I was in favor of taking care of every disabled ex-service man, but I am not in favor of taking care of every politician from the Great Lakes to the Gulf who wants to get on the pay roll of the Veterans' Bureau, not as disabled ex-service men but as porkbarrel appointees who want to get on, or hold on, at large salaries, which must come out of the pockets of the American

About 5,000,000 of these taxpayers are ex-service men who fought the country's battles in time of war and are now paying its taxes in times of peace, and they are not going to appreciate the wholesale waste and extravagance now being perpetrated by the Veterans' Bureau under the pretense of helping the ex-service men.

As every man present knows, I fought the decentralization of the Veterans' Bureau in the beginning, and I pointed out to you on the floor here that it would simply increase the red tape, remove relief at least one step further from the disabled soldier, promote delay, and vastly increase the expense without bringing about any of the advantages claimed for it by the friends of decentralization.

What is the result? You have scattered the records of this institution all over the United States, increased salaries, multiplied the number of employees, leased large office buildings at unreasonable costs, and piled up the expense of this one bureau until it is costing the American people more than $500,000,000 a year, or more than the entire Government was costing 15 years ago, and yet the ex-service man is being no better cared for than he was in the beginning-if as well.

How long do you expect the American taxpayers to stand for this extravagant policy? How long do you think the exservice men are going to stand for all this waste under the pretense of bringing relief to the boys who suffered disabilities as a result of their services during the war? I am told that in New Orleans they moved the branch office of the bureau out of the customhouse, where the rent was free, because the Government owned the building, and moved into the Hibernia Bank Building, where they are said to be paying $47,854 a year rent. I am told that in Boston they are paying $154,500 a year office rent, and approximately the same amount in New York, and possibly other places. If these are facts, they are outrages perpetrated against the taxpayers of America, if not with the consent of the American Congress, at least without a protest on the part of a vast majority of this august body.

If they are not facts, then you ought to give us a joint investigation of this bureau in order to clear these matters up. Whenever it is investigated thoroughly there will be uncovered, in my judgment, such an appalling amount of waste and extravagance that it will not only shock the American people but it will even astound the genial gentleman from Iowa [Mr.

[Applause.] SWEET].

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the committee, I am in favor of this legislation because it in the main will be beneficial to the veterans who are seeking compensa-I am very sorry it does not contain one or two other provisions which it strikes me ought to have been enacted some time ago. One is the provision entitling all veterans who are entitled to vocational training at all to train under section 2 of the war risk insurance act. It is very difficult, I know, to draw the line between those entitled to train under section 2 and those who are entitled to train under section 3. My judgment is that every veteran who is entitled to train at all ought to be entitled to train under section 2. Many of them can not take section 3 training for lack of funds.

However, the bill does not contain that provision, and we need not take any more time talking about it, except to express the hope that in the near future the committee will give serious consideration to the amendment of the law so as to give all veterans entitled to training at all training under section 2 rather than sections 2 and 3.

Mr. LONDON. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. BARKLEY. Yes.

Mr. LONDON. Does the gentleman think the proviso in section 411 is fair to the veterans where it says provided that a letter malled by the United States Veterans' Bureau to the insured at his last-known address informing him of the validity of his insurance shall be deemed a contest within the meaning of this section?

That is a provision that is dealing with young men who frequently change their place of residence.

The provision is not as favorable as we might desire, and if there was an opportunity to strike it out I should be glad to strike it out; but we know that under the rules we have to vote for or against this bill as it is.

Mr. LONDON. Is there a chance of the bill becoming a law? Mr. BARKLEY. There is a chance of it; yes.

Mr. LONDON. And the Senate will probably have as little time to consider it as the House?

Mr. BARKLEY. Probably so; but the gentleman knows that it does not take the Senate very long to consider anything, if it considers it at all.

Mr. SWEET. May I say that this is simply to terminate a

Mr. LONDON. Oh, it is to initiate a contest.
Mr. SWEET. Yes; but to terminate the matter. It is not detrimental to the service men.

Mr. JEFFERS of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JEFFERS of Alabama. The point the gentleman makes is that in the consideration of this bill under suspension of the rules we can not offer an amendment, but must say yes or no,

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes; it is. The bill must be adopted as it is, or we can not adopt it at all. As for the purported investigation of the bureau, Members of Congress received all sorts of complaints against the bureau, and when the act was passed creating the Veterans' Bureau and decentralizing it, it was generally believed that complaints that would come to Congress would be very materially diminished. Those complaints have not been diminished, and I know from my own experience that during the last two years the Veterans' Bureau has either materially reduced the compensation of many veterans who have theretofore been drawing compensation or has entirely eliminated their compensation, without ever going through the courtesy of giving them notice that the compensation has been reduced or discontinued, or giving them any explanation as to why the compensation was either reduced or discontinued.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Does this bill remedy that condition?

Mr. BARKLEY. No, it does not. I think as a matter of justice and common decency, whenever the Veterans' Bureau discontinuous or reduced. discontinues or reduces a veteran's compensation, the bureau owes it to the veteran to send him at the same time an explanation as to why the compensation is reduced or discontinued.

Mr. LARSEN of Georgia. Would it not be better to send it in advance?

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes, whenever they decide to discontinue or reduce a veteran's compensation, they ought to give him an advance notice of it rather than compel him to go through endless correspondence to find out why his compensation was reduced or discontinued.

With reference to the investigation that we hear so much about on the part of the Senate. I want to say that every law which has been enacted for the benefit of the World War veterans originated in the House of Representatives, in the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. The Members of this House know more about the history and origin of the war risk insurance act as it affects the World War veterans than the Senate of the United States can know or ever will know, because the thing originated here and all of the detail work of its preparation and enactment occurred upon the floor

If it is to be investigated-and I think it should be-if all of these various charges are to be sifted, and we are to find out whether there has been extravagance or incompetency on the part of the Veterans' Bureau in dealing with these veterans, I, as a Member of the House and as a member of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, desire to register my insistence that the House of Representatives shall have a share in that investigation. If the Senate shall pass that resolution, I hope the Speaker will, not only as the Speaker pro tempore but as the chairman of the Committee on Rules, see to it that we have an opportunity to amend it so that the House shall have representation on that committee. We are interested here in knowing whether the ex-service men are being properly treated by the Veterans' Bureau. We are interested in knowing whether there is incompetence, delays, and useless waste here in Washington in the bureau to the damage of the veterans for whom it was created. Congress has tried to provide the law necessary for the relief of the soldiers of the World War. That the law has been badly administered in many respects is well known. There has been a recent change in the person of the director of the bureau. change should have been made long ago. I hope the new director will be able to appreciate the viewpoint of the veteran as well as that of the Government. The Veterans' Bureau was created for the benefit of the veterans, and I hope there will be more promptness, more justice, more sympathetic consideration of the veteran's situation. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Iowa to suspend the rules and pass the

The question was taken, and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

REORGANIZATION OF EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENTS.

Mr. TEMPLE. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass Senate Joint Resolution 282, to amend the resolution of December 29, 1920, entitled "Joint resolution to create a joint committee on reorganization of the administrative branch of the Government," which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania moves to suspend the rules and pass the Senate joint resolution which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows: Joint resolution (S. J. Res. 282) to amend the resolution of December 29, 1920, entitled "Joint resolution to create a joint committee on the reorganization of the administrative branch of the Government."

Resolved, etc., That section 3 of the resolution of December 20, 1920, entitled "Joint resolution to create a joint committee on the reorganization of the administrative branch of the Government," is amended by striking out the words "the second Monday in December, 1922," and inserting in lieu thereof "July 1, 1924."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee, Mr. Speaker, I demand a

Mr. TEMPLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? There was no objection.

W. W. M'GRATH.

Mr. EDMONDS. Mr. Speaker, I present a conference report for printing under the rules, on the bill H. R. 2722

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that where a motion to suspend the rules has been made—
The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas is out of order. Mr. BLANTON. But, Mr. Speaker, I want to make a point of order that after a motion to suspend the rules has been made The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair overrules the point order. The gentleman from Pennsylvania presents a conference report on a bill of which the Clerk will report the title.

The Clerk read as follows: H. R. 2722. An act for the relief of W. W. McGrath.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Ordered printed under the

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 2722) for the relief of W. W. McGrath, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments.

G. W. EDMONDS, JAMES P. GLYNN, Managers on the part of the House. ARTHUR CAPPER. F. R. GOODING, Managers on the part of the Senate.

STATEMENT.

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 2722) for the relief of W. W. McGrath submit the following written statement explaining the effect of the action agreed on by the conference committee and submitted in the accompanying conference report

The amount is increased from $180.50 to $459.50.

G. W. EDMONDS, JAMES P. GLYNN Managers on the part of the House.

REORGANIZATION OF EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENTS.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Temple] is entitled to 20 minutes and the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Garriert] 20 minutes.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, before we go into that I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas makes the point of order that there is no quorum present. Evidently there is not.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House. The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will bring in absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

Faust Fenn Freeman Garner Goodykoontz Gorman Almon Lee, Ga. Linthicum Scott, Mich. Shelton Ansorge Linthicum Longworth
Luhring
McClintic
McFadden
Maloney
Michaelson
Montague
Moore, Ill.
Mudd
Olyn Bird Sinclair Slemp Bird Bland, Ind. Brand Slemp Smith, Mich. Sproul Stedman Steenerson Stiness Stoll Brennan Brooks, Ill. Brown, Tenn. Browne, Wis. Gould Hardy, Colo. Hardy, Tex. Hays Burton Byrnes, S. C. Cannon Cantrill Sullivan Taylor, Ark. Ten Eyek Henry Hukrlede Mudd Olpp Overstreet Paige Park, Ga. Parks, Ark. Patterson, Mo. Patterson, N. J. Pringey Rainey, Ala. Reber Hukrlede Jacoway Johnson, Miss, Jones, Pa. Kahn Keller Kelley, Mich, Kennedy Kindred King Kitchin Kleczka Kline, N. Y. Knight Lanham Larson, Minn. Carew Clark, Fla. Classon Clouse Thomas Thorpe
Treadway
Voigt
Walters
Ward. N. C.
Wheeler
White, Me.
Williams, Tex.
Wingo
Wise
Wood, Ind.
Woodruff
Wright Thomas Codd Codd Cole, Ohio Connolly, Pa. Copley Crowther Cullen Davis, Minn. Denison Reber Riddick Rodenberg Rose Rosenbloom Rucker Drane Larson, Minn. Lawrence Ryan Sanders, N. Y. Schall Dunbar Ellis Zihlman Fairfield Layton

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Three hundred and ten Members have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I move to dispense with further proceedings under the call.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Doorkeeper will open the

Mr. TEMPLE. Mr. Speaker, the question before the House is the adoption of Senate Joint Resolution 282, which, of course, has passed the Senate. In December, 1920, by joint resolution of the two Houses, a committee was created for the reorganization of the administrative branch of the Government. It provided that the committee should make its final report on the second Monday in December, 1922. When that date came the committee was not prepared to make its report, and it is not out that date—the second Monday in December, 1922—and inprepared now. The pending resolution provides simply to strike sert in lieu thereof another date—July 1, 1924. That gives t committee more time in which to prepare its final report. reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. TEMPLE. Yes; I will yield for a question.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I want to ask the gentleman if, as a matter of fact, this joint committee has had any real session or has done any amount of work, or has it not been done exclusively by Mr. Brown, its chairman?

Mr. TEMPLE. I am very glad to make a statement in regard to that. On May 5, 1921, a resolution was drafted by which the two Houses authorized the President to appoint a representative of the Executive to cooperate with this committee. Shortly after that the President appointed Mr. Walter F. Brown, of Toledo, Ohio, and he was made chairman by the committee. The committee then outlined very broadly certain principles upon which the executive departments, we thought, ought to be reorganized, and instructed the chairman, who was the President's personal representative, to consult the Presi-dent and the members of the Cabinet and the executive branches of the Government generally and find out for how much of the program we could get executive backing. The committee believed that it would hardly be worth while to make a report recommending legislation against which members of the Cabinet and bureau chiefs might be lobbying. In order to find out how much of a plan we could get through without adverse lobbying from persons connected with the executive branch of the Government, we asked that an executive plan be prepared. That plan was reported to the committee on reorganization and the committee is ready to begin its work

Mr. BANKHEAD. Well, up to the present time under that statement the joint committee, beyond the activities of the chairman, have done no actual and constructive work on this proposition. That is true, is it not?

Mr. TEMPLE. I think that is hardly a fair inference from the statement I made. The chairman of the committee has performed the duty we instructed him to perform. The gentleman who makes this inquiry may think it has taken him a long time to do it, but it has been done and the committee is ready to begin its consideration of this proposed plan. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the remainder of my time.

May I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska for a request? Mr. ANDREWS of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on Senate Joint Resolution 253.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Gernerd). Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The extension of remarks referred to is here printed in full as follows:

Mr. ANDREWS of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, I invite attention to Senate Joint Resolution 253. which passed the Senate on the 13th of February and was referred on the 14th of that month to the House Committee on Election of President, Vice President, and Representatives in Congress. It was returned to the House by that committee on February 22, 1923, with certain amendments, as explained in House Report No. 1690. The resolution as amended reads as

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of each House concurring therein), That the following article is proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which shall be valid to all intents and purposes as part of the Constitution when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States:

" ARTICLE

"ARTICLE —.

"SECTION 1. The terms of the President and Vice President shall end at noon on the 24th day of January and the terms of Senators and Representatives at noon on the 4th day of January, of the years in which such terms would have ended if this article had not been ratified; and the terms of their successors shall then begin. This section shall take effect on the 15th day of December following the ratification of this article.

"SEC. 2. The Congress shall assemble at least once in every year, and such meeting shall be on the 4th day of January, unless they shall by law appoint a different day.

"SEC. 3. If the House of Representatives has not chosen a President, whenever the right of choice devolves upon them, before the time fixed for the beginning of his term, then the Vice President chosen for the same term shall act as President until the House of Representatives chooses a President; and the Congress may by law provide for the case where the Vice President has not been chosen before the time fixed for the beginning of his term, declaring what officer shall then act as President, and such officer shall act accordingly until the House of Representatives chooses a President, or until the Senate chooses a Vice President."

If seems advisable to state as concisely as possible the

It seems advisable to state as concisely as possible the changes that would follow the adoption of this proposed amendment to the Federal Constitution.

The first and most important change would be the shortening of the period of 13 months which now intervenes between the election of a new Congress in November and its first regular session in December of the following year. Under existing provisions of the Constitution and statutes, the terms of Members begin and end on the 4th of March of the odd years. The proposed amendment would make the 4th day of January the date of the beginning and ending of the terms of Senators and Representatives and also the date for the convening of the new Congress in the absence of statutory provision to the contrary. This change would reduce that period of 13 months to 2 months. Thus, the Members elected to each Congress would have a period of two months only between the date of their election and the date on which they would begin active service. This change would also practically eliminate the necessities for special sessions of Congress.

Each regular session beginning on the 4th of January would have the period of an entire year before it for the transaction of the business of the country, pressing for consideration and action. To accomplish these results it is necessary to change the dates for the beginning and ending of the terms of President and Vice President, Senators and Representatives also.

As the length of their terms is fixed by the Constitution for four, six, and two years, respectively, with the 4th day of March as the date for beginning and ending of such constitutional terms, a constitutional amendment is necessary to change to January 4 for Senators and Representatives and January 24 for President and Vice President in order to inagurate the This change will affect the length of terms of Presinew plan. This change will affect the length of terms of President and Vice President and Representatives once and will affect three different groups of Senators.

If this proposed amendment should be submitted to the States at this session of Congress it is possible for it to become effective in 1925. It is probable, however, that it would not become effective before 1927 for Senators and Representatives and 1929 for President and Vice President. When the change is made it will be necessary to shorten the terms of certain retiring or incoming officials. The Members who may be serving in the closing Congress and will not be Members of the next Congress would have their terms shortened by two months under the terms of this resolution. Some have urged that the terms of incoming officials be shortened and that the terms of the outgoing officials should be extended to the full constitutional limit for which they were originally elected.

This resolution as passed by the Senate is based upon the latter principle, while the House committee recommends the adoption of the former. Your committee advocates the former principle, because it does not seem proper that outgoing Representatives, for instance, should be given an opportunity to organize the House in which they would serve only 60 days. An additional reason appears in connection with the election of a President. It would be possible that outgoing Members having been elected two years before the presidential campaign might wield the balance of power in the election of a President in the House if such an election were thrown into the House. Aside from these reasons, your committee might have found its way clear to concur in the view of the Senate upon this point.

It also seemed advisable to fix a definite date, December 15 following the ratification of the article, on which the proposed amendment would take effect. The fixing of these definite dates would remove many uncertainties and give exact recognition to the constitutional provisions fixing the terms of President, Vice President, Senators, and Representatives for exact periods of

The House amendment makes only a slight change in section 3 of the Senate resolution by indicating the 4th day of January as the definite date on which the Congress should assemble instead of saying the first Monday in January. Section 3 of the House resolution contains some additional matter which, in the judgment of your committee, might become very important in the event of failure on the part of the House to elect a President before the 24th of January, and also the failure of the Senate to elect a Vice President at the same time.

I need not quote section 3 in full, as you have it in the printed form that can be secured from the document room.

A request was made for a special rule under which this resolution could be considered at this session, and the cooperation of the majority leader was solicited in securing that rule. The chairman of the Committee on Rules refused to consider the granting of a rule. Mr. Campbell of Kansas was Speaker pro when the resolution was reached on the Unanimous-Consent Calendar and refused to recognize me to move a suspension of the rules for the passage of the resolution.

We were within reach of victory in this important reform. It means economy in a large measure and a direct and favorable response to the sentiment of the country. Agricultural organizations have requested it. Organized labor has requested it. Industrial interests in many lines have requested it, and the judgment of a vast majority of the thinking people of the United States stand in sympathy with the movement. The American Bar Association urges its adoption. The language of the House amendment eliminates ambiguity and has stood the test of all the criticism that has been turned upon it. Then why should the leadership of this House refuse considerasion of this proposition?

HOUSE REPORT NO. 1690.

Part 2 of House Report No. 1690, Sixty-seventh Congress, fourth session, was filed by Mr. BULWINKLE, of North Carolina, who assumed in his own name to represent minority views in relation to this resolution 253 and the report 1690 made thereon by the committee.

In reply to his criticism, let the fundamental fact be stated at the outset. A majority of the members of that committee were present at that meeting. The question of no quorum was resolution. Under the rules and practice of the House that committee meeting was regular and those who assert the contrary either do not know or deliberately disregard the rules and practice of the House. It would be helpful to him to acquaint himself with the rules of the House on the subject of a quorum.

On last Tuesday evening this House with a membership of 435 passed a deficiency bill with less than 50 Members present. That bill carried $154,000,000. It also passed a narcotic bill affecting our international relations. It also passed a revenue bill affecting our international relations. The majority and minority leaders were both on the floor of the House and participated in those transactions, and yet an uninformed Member presumes to record criticism against a committee that was transacting, in a regular manner, the business assigned to it by

We were advised in the beginning of our consideration of that resolution that the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BULWINKLE] claimed to be following the leadership of Washington and Jefferson. We discovered, however, toward the close that he had abandoned Washington and Jefferson and was following the leadership of the gentleman from Oklahoma

The central fact is this: The gentleman from North Carolina has sought to delay this resolution from the beginning by means of quibbles and unimportant suggestions. He was also designated as a member of a subcommittee to prepare a draft of amendments to the Senate resolution. So far as I am advised he never attended a single meeting and appeared only at such times as he could create embarrassments and delay the work of the committee.

When the gentleman speaks about giving serious deliberation bould remember that he has deto questions of this sort he should remember that he has deliberately refused as a member of the committee to give any deliberate consideration to this proposition.

The alleged minority views state that some questions may have escaped consideration. Nothing would have ever been considered on this or any other important question if your committee had been left to rely upon the gentleman from North

The criticism relative to the election of President and Vice President by the House and Senate, respectively, loses its force entirely in the light of the provisions of section 3 of the com-

The Tilden-Hayes contest would have no bearing whatever upon the orderly procedure of the Congress or the executive branch of the Government under the terms of the resolution reported by the committee.

The earnest hope that there will never be an interregnum in the executive branch of the Government does not remove the fact that such a contingency might arise. If the gentleman had studied the question far enough and learned his lesson well enough he would have recognized that fact and avoided the error he has made.

His conjectures in regard to the returns of election boards are purely imaginary and fantastic. The gentleman's suggestion with reference to "due and serious deliberation" is merely an argument for delay and the defeat of the proposed reform. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BULWINKLE], under the leadership of the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. Her-RICK), has deliberately sought to defeat even consideration of this proposition in committee and now comes with erroneous statements before the House in a printed document under the title "Minority views," and thus seeks to deny to the people of the country who are demanding this reform even a chance to secure an expression of the opinion of this House. If that is his view of representative government, he is welcome to it and can keep all of it for himself.

This statement is due the members of the committee who have worked diligently to discharge the duties assigned to them by

It is very unfortunate that the majority leader, Mr. Mondell, and the chairman of the Committee on Rules, Mr. CAMPBELL, should disappoint the country and oppose this reform. They have united with the gentleman from North Carolina, Mr. Bul-WINKLE, under the leadership of the gentleman from Oklahoma, Mr. Herrick, to defeat the passage of this resolution. ular demand for this reform should have warned the majority leader and the chairman of the Committee on Rules against such a political mistake as they have made in this case. They seemed to have been impressed with the idea that it was more important to pass bridge bills and create new offices in New not made by anyone. It was mentioned only informally. York City than it would be to deal with this nation-wide propo-Neither was there a dissenting vote cast against reporting the of governmental affairs. As we stand on the verge of victory we meet our disappointment and defeat at the hands of Mr. MONDELL and Mr. CAMPBELL-especially Mr. CAMPBELL.

Up to this hour neither of these gentlemen has pointed out a single objection to the wording of the resolution. That resolution has been examined by some of the best constitutional lawyers in the House and Senate and on the outside. Everyone to whom it has been submitted has approved it as a valid proposition. We have plead for its passage, not for personal reasons, but because it would lead to an important, enduring reform in Government business. When the leadership of the House denies the country the opportunity of a vote in the House upon this and similar questions we can understand why there were so many political casualties in the campaign of 1922.

Let those who believe in this reform take renewed courage and wage the battle in the next Congress and in the next if necessary, until this principle is adopted. This statement of facts is warranted by the importance of the measure involved and the loyalty and devotion of its friends. Let those who believe in the principles of this resolution renew their activities in the fight and wage the warfare until victory crowns their efforts.

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the bill H. R. 14438.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Speaker, Robert Morris is the one outstanding patriot of the Revolutionary War whose memory has been shamefully neglected by the United States Government and its citizens generally. Without the services so unselfishly rendered by this great "financier of the American Revolution" it may be seriously questioned whether our War of Independence would not have utterly failed.

Mr. Morris, a Welshman, was born in 1734 and died at the age of 73 years. He came to America at the age of 6. When 20 years old he organized the firm of Willing & Morris at Philadelphia, which lasted for 39 years and was recognized as the largest importing house in the Colonies.

During the first year of the Revolutionary War General Washington wrote Mr. Morris that he did not have enough money to keep the Army together. Morris, on his personal credit, borrowed the money, sent it to General Washington, and the victory at Princeton followed. Thereafter he was the confidential adviser of General Washington on financing the Army.

He was the financial backbone of the Revolution. He furnished more than $3,000,000 upon his own credit and from his private sources, without which all physical force would have been in vain. "Without Robert Morris, the sword of Washington would have rusted in its sheath."

Carlo Botta, a European, in his history of the American Revolution, says:

Certainly the Americans owed and still owe as much acknowledge-ment to the financial operations of Robert Morris as to the negotiations of Benjamin Franklin or even the arms of George Washington.

Upon his retirement from public life he speculated largely in unimproved lands. Through the dishonesty of others he was financially ruined, and closed his life in utter poverty. Government that he had carried on his own shoulders through adversity to prosperity allowed him to remain, from the 16th of February, 1798, until the 26th of August, 1801-a period of 3 years 6 months and 10 days-an inmate of a debtor's prison without raising a hand to help him, thus adding another link to the chain which proves that "republics are ungrateful.

He had an acute mind. He was a charming conversationalist and an excellent public speaker, with manners gracious and simple. He was never heard to complain of his misfortune, Charles Henry Hart closes an article on Robert Morris with this paragraph: "None of the many worthles of the Revolution stood higher in the esteem or approached nearer to the heart of Washington than Robert Morris," The pater patriae's adopted son, George Washington Parke Custis, says: "If I am asked, 'And did not Washington unbend and admit to familiarity and social friendship some one person to whom age and long and interesting associations gave peculiar privilege, the privilege of ' I answer that favored individual was Robert Morthe heart? In the fall of 1798, when Washington repaired to Philadelphia to superintend the organization of his last army, called together on the apprehension of war with France, "He paid his first visit to the prison house of Robert Morris. The old man wrung the hand of the chief in silence, while his tearful Well may we repeat eye gave the welcome to such a home."

What has the gray-haired prisoner done? Has murder stained his hands with gore? Not so; his crime's a fouler one, God made the old man poor, Robert Morris was of Welsh extraction. No better blood has entered the industrial, political, and religious life of America. The Americans of Welsh ancestry have given us our finest quality of industry, music, home life, and patriotism. No better type exists in America to-day than that evidenced by our present Secretary of Labor, Hon. James J. Davis. He sprang from poverty and by honesty and perseverance has reached his present position of prominence. His life furnishes a fine example to place before our youth of this and succeeding generations.

Last evening at Pittsburgh Secretary Davis delivered an address before "The American Gorsedd," an association of those born in Wales and their descendants. It is such a deserved tribute to the sons and daughters of Wales that I take pleasure in its reproduction here:

"To-day is the feast day of the patron saint of Wales. Wherever Welshmen are gathered together on this day as it recurs year after year they pay their measure of tribute to St. David, that first great exponent of those characteristics which have made the Welsh a great nation. Down through the ages the Welsh have carried high the torch of civil and religious liberty kindled by St. David in the dim past, marching in the forefront of civilization and progress. Long before the advent of the patron saint of Wales on this earth his native land became a refuge for those who were persecuted for conscience's sake, for no smoke from the burning victims of bigotry, or groans from bloody gibbets, ever rose in the pure air of Wales, for the truth was sacred to them, as exemplified in the druidic adage, 'Y Gwir yn Erbyn y Byd,' the truth against the world. No sublimer instance of courage in the face of death is recorded than that of John Rogers, a true Welshman, who was burned at the stake in Smithfield, England, when he exclaimed: 'I die for the truth; the truth of God.'

It was the Welsh who in the beginning of the thirteenth century made protest against the oppression of government under King John. It was our people who were largely responsible in getting from him at the Battle of Runnymede, in the year 1215, the great liberating document of the world, the Magna Charta, the forerunner of constitutional government, the benefits of which we acclaim.

"At a later period in England's history the Welsh led the people in a struggle for freedom and religion against their king. When Oliver Cromwell, whose real name was Williams, but when Onver Cromwen, whose real name was willams, but who followed the name of his mother's family for the purpose of acquiring her property, overthrew the dissolute Charles Stuart the Welsh were with him. John Jones, Thomas Harrison, Hugh Peters, and John Hunes were among the members of Parliament who voted the death of the dethroned King. They paid for their votes with their lives. President William Henry Harrison was a lineal descendant of the regicide Thomas Harrison, and Benjamin K. Butler, of New York, one-time Attorney General, was a direct descendant of John Jones. These Welshmen who followed Cromwell had the unwayering devotion to truth, that sublime courage, which has always been the characteristic of Cambria.

"St. David displayed similar courage when he proclaimed the truth of God in the age of darkness and superstition, when he condemned the wickedness of kings and false teachings and unjust administrators of the land. In this respect he was probably the greatest reformer, patriot, and philan-thropist Wales has ever produced. He blazed the way through the pathless thickets of ignorance and superstition and made possible what we behold to-day—a Bible-reading, law-abiding, and liberty-loving people wherever a Welsh community is found.

"The spirit of St. David was transplanted to America in its earliest period, and inspired Roger Williams, who was born in Wales, to establish the first democracy in this country at Providence 140 years before the Declaration of Independence. The religious freedom we enjoy to-day in this country is due in a great measure to this vallant Cymro and humble Christian, who was compelled to leave Great Britain because he had the moral courage to preach the truth. The benevolent spirit of St. David is further illustrated in the life, acts, and deeds of another illustrious son of Cambrian origin, William Penn. No two men have contributed more in paving the way for American freedom than these two men, whose patriotism was kindled at the altars of the early Britons.

"From the day Captain Jones landed the Pilgrim Fathers who came over on the Mayflower, four of whom were true Cambrians, the Welsh have been dominant factors in the development of America. As Senator John Sharp Williams stated in the Senate of the United States, 'No nation, in proportion to its population, has contributed more to the civil, religious, and industrial development of America than the Welsh.'

And this statement is based on facts, as attested in the part the Welsh people played in those days that tried men's souls—the revolutionary days. The man who wrote the Declaration of Independence—Thomas Jefferson—but reiterated the quintessence of what St. David preached in the sixth century when he declared that 'rebellion to tyrants is obedience to God.' His ancestors, who breathed the religious freedom of Wales in the very shadow of the mighty Snowden, the highest mountain in Great Britain, transplanted the seed to Virginia. Like the cedar of Lebanon of old, its roots scattered and twined themselves around the everlasting Rock of Ages, which weathered all storms, and proclaimed 'Liberty throughout the land unto all the inhabitants thereof.'

"While the author of this immortal document was a man who boasted of his Cymric ancestry, it is a matter of record, as verified in documents in Independence Hall, that he was but one of 18 men of Welsh blood who signed the Declaration of Independence, and I challenge any nation to produce so proud a record. The ground on which Independence Hall is located was formerly owned by a Welshman. Time will not permit me to enumerate all, but we must mention John Hancock, who presided at the convention when the Declaration of Independence was proclaimed; Samuel and John Adams, Francis Lewis, Stephen Hopkins, and William Williams, Lewis Morris, and John Penn, the three delegates from New York State, and that valiant patriot from Pennsylvania, Robert Morris, who placed his fortune on the alter of freedom that the fires of liberty might not be quenched.

"Two of those who affixed their signatures to that document which blazoned to the world a standard of government based upon the consent of the governed, were natives of Wales. They were Francis Lewis and Button Gwinnett.

"Washington publicly and repeatedly proclaimed his grati-tude to Robert Morris, the financier of the Revolution. Upon the shoulders of that sturdy, thrifty Welshman rested the whole burden of supplying funds for the Revolutionary Army in the darkest days of its struggle. While Washington was huddling his wearied, war-racked little force in the snow-bound huts of Valley Forge it was Robert Morris who, with his private fortune, rescued the patriots from despair and destruction. While the bare and bleeding feet of the Continentals stained the winter snows as they crept, famished and in tatters, about that miserable encampment, it was Robert Morris who tramped the streets of Philadelphia pledging his personal credit and borrowing the credit of his friends to bolster up the falling fortunes the embryonic American Republic. While men of more timid mold withheld their hands from the cause of the Revolution, which they believed was tottering to its fall, Robert Morris, single-handed, supplied the food, clothing, and munitions which kept Washington's little army in the field. After independence had been won, won because of the aid which Morris lent, estimated to be $3,000,000, the financier of the Revolution, ruined by the advances he had made, spent three years in a debtor's prison in Philadelphia. Broken in health and spirit, the creditor of a forgetful Republic died in abject poverty. is more than 100 years since Morris died, but the State of Pennsylvania has recently provided for a monument to commemorate his vital services to the young Republic. It is time the gratitude of the Nation to this Welsh martyr on the altar of American independence was fittingly evidenced. It is time that the whole United States atoned for more than a century of ingratitude to Robert Morris. It is time that there was erected in the Capital of the Nation a fitting memorial to the financier of the Revolution, whose unselfish devotion made American independence possible.

"In the Revolutionary Army Wales is worthily represented by 14 generals and 7 colonels, the most worthy of whom was 'Mad Anthony' Wayne, who captured Stoney Point by storm and filled the country with joy and admiration. He lies buried at St. Davids Church, within 17 miles of Independence Hall, but I question whether a worthy monument marks the sacred spot where he sleeps. Dr. John Morgan, the founder of the Philadelphia Medical School, was surgeon in chief of the American Army, and among the chaplains who looked after the spiritual welfare of the soldiers were three Welsh divines.

"Daniel Morgan, another Welshman, led that brigade of Virginia riflemen upon whom Washington placed great responsibilities. It was his cooperation with Greene in the campaign in the South which made possible the final triumph of the Revolutionary arms at Yorktown.

"How many Welshmen were in the rank and file of the Army of Washington is conjectural. But we can rest assured that the land that fostered freedom for ages contributed its quota. Its sons were found where the fighting was hottest, and to their everlasting credit it may be said that history does not record that one of them ever proved a traitor.

"From Captain Jones, of the Mayflower, to David Wark Griffith, the greatest motion-picture producer in the world to-day, the Welsh have played a great part in the development and growth of America. They were among the first to cross the Allegheny Mountains, and the first white child born west of the Allegheny Mountains was a little Welsh girl named Jones, who first saw the light of day in a log cabin on the banks of the Ohio River.

"Descendants of our good old patriarch have also occupied the presidential chair at Washington, including Jefferson, Adams, Monroe, Harrison, Lincoln, and Garfield. Despite that Washington, "the Father of his Country," occupied a singularly warm spot in the heart of America, it is a debatable question whether the warmth of the admiration exceeds that shown toward the great emancipator, Abraham Lincoln, who was Welsh on his mother's side. Our veneration for this great and illustrious exponent of liberty and freedom is like good wine, it improves with age. He was a much-maligned man in his day, and his enemies were numberless. Like, the Rock of Gibraltar, he stood surrounded when conscience dictated that man, despite his color, was created in the image of his Creator, and as such was privileged to enjoy that heavenly birthright, freedom. Search where you will, the world does not reveal his equal as an exponent of true civic and religious liberty. Though killed by an assassin's bullet, the spirit of this man among men, like that of old St. David, still lives and is an incentive to you and me to emulate his example and to cultivate that spirit of fairness and freedom that best reflects the God-given heritage to mankind.

"On the other side of that great conflict through which Lincoln safely steered the Nation there stood another Welshman. As a simple captain he halted the advance of the Mexican lancers at the Battle of Buena Vista and turned the tide of a battle that was decisive in our war with Mexico. Later he became a great Secretary of War. Still later he sacrificed his career to his convictions, and as President of the Confederate States he led the South in its struggle for a mistaken principle. He was Jefferson Davis, truly Welsh in his devotion to his cause.

"Turning from the fields of war to the fields of peace, we find the Welsh in America laying the foundation for the American system of education, the greatest in the world to-day. Hear the roll of honor: John Harvard, who founded Harvard College; Elihu Yale, who founded Yale University, and who to-day sleeps in a churchyard in North Wales; the Rev. Morgan Edwards and Dr. Samuel Jones, who established Brown University; and Colonel Williams, whose name lives on in Williams College. The great Phillips Academy at Andover, Mass., was founded by John and Samuel Phillips in 1878, and two years later John Phillips founded the Phillips-Exeter Academy. Every one of these great institutions lives to-day, a great monument to the services of the early leaders of the Welsh in America.

"Should we be permitted to deal with the present statesmen and diplomats of the present day we might refer to one who is playing a conspicuous part in the present administration—Charles Evans Hughes, the ex-president of the St. David's Society of New York and the son of a Welsh clergyman, whom some of you perhaps have heard in the Welsh churches of Pennsylvania and who preached in my native city, Tredegar. He is also imbued with that spirit of fairness and freedom that characterizes him as a man of keen and sound judgment, and with him at the helm our ship of state is in safe hands. Time will not permit me to mention the many Congressmen and Senators, members of State legislatures, and county and municipal governments who trace their ancestry to the little country of Wales.

"Before closing let us refer to one more son of 'gallant little Wales,' who is to-day perhaps the foremost defender of the faith of his fathers, whose unyielding courage in the darkest days of the late bloody war saved the freedom and civilization of the world. Emerging from a remote little village in north Wales, reared, like Abraham Lincoln, amid poverty and privation, when half an egg on Sunday was a feast to him, schooled in his youthful days by the village shoemaker, and acquainted with the grief that was the lot of those who were at the mercy of the merciless and arrogant land master, he climbed by sheer force to a position that dethroned despots and made kings tremble with fear. Though he has wielded a mightier scepter than that of a king, he, like the great emancipator that he patterns after, finds his greatest solace among the common peopler om which he was molded. Like Lincoln of old, when perplexed with problems of world-wide importance, he found his greatest relaxation not among the glittering throngs that congregate in palaces but in an obscure little Welsh church, among the countrymen of those who kept the religious fires burning for ages, where his sonorous voice blended with the common people in singing those glorious Welsh hymns that proclaim to the world that freedom of conscience and liberty of speech that is the heritage of free-born people. As long as Wales continues to rear sons of the caliber of this modern son of St. David freedom will never perish, for he has embodied, as no other has, the attributes that contribute toward the making of a life that is worth living. Perhaps some day historians will appraise him at his true worth, and when they do he will be adjudged the most spectacular figure of this age. In a world strewn with wreck, when thrones crumbled and empires quaked, this countryman of ours, this gallant son of Wales, David Lloyd-George, pointed the way to that port where only safe refuge is found.

"The pages of America's history are blazoned with the honors that have been won in America by the sons of Cambria. The virtues which they brought from the hills and vales of Wales have contributed no small share in the development of American character and American progress. Accustomed to wrest with mighty labor a livelihood from nature in her stubbornest mood, they have brought to this country the dogged determination developed in centuries of earnest toil. in America nature has put forth her most powerful obstacles to the development of our resources, there you will find the Welsh. Wherever progress must come through hand-tohand conflict with the primeval forces of earth, you will find the sons of Cambria foremost in this conflict. Deep in the gloomiest pits, they tear from nature's heart the coal that keeps America's millions of factories writing in smoke clouds across the sky the tale of industrial prosperity. labor they wrest from the confining rock the mineral wealth which past convulsions have imprisoned far beneath the soil. In roaring furnace and mill they wrestle with the familiar demons of iron and steel, and by sheer force of skill and muscle bend them to their will. Into the iron and steel that form the very bones of America's prosperity, frames of tall buildings that reach for heaven's height, rails that carry the thundering commerce of a continent, steel ships which go down to the seven seas, is wrought the very heart and soul and body of the Welsh in America. No man can fail to recognize the mark of the solid Welsh virtues in the growth of this Nation.

"But their material service, although great, has not been their greatest service. No nation on earth has contributed more to the development of the spirit, the soul of America. The Welsh brought from their iroa-bound hills to this country a religious fervor, a love of home, a love of music, an honest thrift, a heartfelt devotion to liberty under the law which has wrought itself into the very heart of the Nation.

"They more than any other group have caught the spirit of American institutions, the ideals of political, social, and economic liberty for which the forefathers of this country fought and died. The Welsh come to America to become true Americans. To-day they lead all nationalities in this country in the proportion of aliens who become citizens. Nearly 75 per cent of the aliens in America who were born in Wales are to-day naturalized citizens. This is a record no other nationality can boast. It is an index of the Welsh love for the equality of opportunity—the rights of the individual—which are vital in American institutions.

"We are to-day confronted with a serious problem in our alien population. We have 14,000,000 foreigners in America, 7,000,000 of whom are living among us without assuming the duties and responsibilities of American citizenship. We propose to enroll these aliens, to take an annual census of them, in order to provide for them the opportunity to learn what American means and what the privileges and duties of American citizenship are. We propose to Americanize the alien before he alienizes America. We propose to make him a citizen if he proves worthy of citizenship, and to send him whence he came if he proves unworthy. We propose to make easy the way to citizenship which has been traveled by 75 per cent of the Welsh-born inhabitants of this country.

Welsh-born inhabitants of this country.

"Never was America more in need of the sturdy, homely Welsh virtues than it is to-day. Evils arise around us and about us which will overwhelm and destroy us unless they are met by the stalwart heart of America in the spirit of honesty and honor.

"A blatant and cynical immorality is raising its head among us and it must be conquered by that grave respect for the sanctity of the home, the inviolability of the marriage tie, which is inborn in the Welsh character. We must drive homor of all America that the honor of the individual is the honor of the family, and the honor of the family is the honor of the State. We must sanctify our family life, for no nation can long endure which is based upon a foundation of broken families.

"From all the world there arises a miasma of foul political, economic, and social doctrine which breeds a fever of revolt against all law and order, a plague of hate and destruction. New and strange gospels based on selfish desires and personal greed are preached by new and strange apostles of discord. We live in a world of strife, and strange forces are moving nations toward chaos.

"In this new conflict America must hold fast to those eternal principles of right and justice laid down in our fundamental laws. American citizenship must have behind it, then, virtues of honest patriotism, love of liberty, and respect for law. We must stand firm on the principles enunciated at the birth of the Republic, the protection of life and property, the right of contract, and the right of free labor. We must pledge ourselves that representative government shall endure. We must summon to our aid those homely virtues that were summed up by the ancient Druids and by St. David in the motto of the Gorsed: 'Y Gwir yn erbyn y byd.'—'The truth against the world.'"

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. LONDON].

Mr. LONDON. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen, I sent to the library for a book of fables by a famous fabulist. I read it many years ago, and I am not sure that I remember the particular fable I have in mind. The fable is something like this: A mule, a goat, an ape, and a bear decided to organize a musical concert. The mule was the leader of the orchestra. After they had proceeded for some time they all reached the conclusion that the music was bad even for their unmusical ears and a motion was made that the orchestra be reorganized and that instead of the mule acting as leader the bear should assume charge of the situation. The bear assumed charge of the orchestra. They again held forth to the distress of all who heard them. The suggestion was then made that instead of sitting in a circle they should form a straight line. Many another change was made, but there was neither melody nor rhythm nor harmony. A passing nightingale was called in for advice. The advice was brief and to the point. "Friends, no matter what your sitting arrangements may be, you are not fit as musicians."

You have created a commission to reorganize the various branches of the administration, with the object of eliminating overlapping and duplication of authority and doing away with waste. With the principal offices at the mercy of the spoils system, with the most important positions being distributed not on the basis of merit but as rewards for political lieutenants, how can waste, inefficiency, and duplication be successfully avoided? The commission has not accomplished anything. It has been in existence more than two years without bringing any definite results. There is nothing to be gained by continuing this committee. There is no reason in the world why the time of the House should be wasted, with so many important matters pending, such as the teachers' pay bill, in which the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Blanton] is interested and a number of other good people are interested, the reclassification bill, the With the large number of nitrate bill, and similar measures. serious and important measures pending and not enacted, what is the use of wasting time with a committee that can not, in spite of the high character of the gentlemen composing it, possibly accomplish anything of value? I hate to say anything disagreeable in the expiring moments of a Congress, but I could not think of anything more apropos than that fable when I read the resolution.

Mr. BLANTON. Unless we pass this resolution there might be a little money left in the Treasury that otherwise might not be spent. [Laughter.]

Mr. LONDON. They have not done anything, and they do not expect to do anything. This Congress has been busy with bills with big titles and little meaning. Take, for instance, the maternity bill. In that bill there is nothing in the world that would help a mother any more than there would be in a bill relating to trade with China; yet they call it a maternity bill. [Laughter.]

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LONDON. Yes.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Does the gentleman know how many meetings this commission has had, as a commission, to do business in the first year?

Mr. LONDON. I assume that the meetings were along the line of the orchestra that I have just described. [Laughter.]

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. I have heard it said authoritatively that they had only one meeting in a year.

Mr. LONDON. Well, they will have another in 1924, and in 1924 they will present another resolution at the last moment, extending the time to 1927. [Laughter and applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from

New York has expired.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee rose.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas). The gentleman from Tennessee is recognized.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, when the movement began to have an investigation by a congressional committee of questions relating to a reorganization of the executive departments, which movement was initiated by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Moore] and later joined in by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. Reavis], I was in entire sympathy with it, and as a member of the Committee on Rules and a member of the House gave it my sympathetic and earnest support.

That resolution was passed in December, 1920, shortly before the adjournment of the Sixty-sixth Congress. On March 4, 1921, a new administration came into power, and one of the first acts of the President of the United States was to request-I am not sure but that he put it in the form of a demandthat he should be permitted to appoint a gentleman of his own selection as a member of this committee, with a view to his becoming the chairman of the committee.

When that occurred, I am frank to say, I began to lose interest in the movement. The President of the United States ought never to have made such a request. [Applause.] The Congress of the United States ought never to have abased itself by acceding to such a request. [Applause.] There has been no other instance that I know of in which the Executive has requested or in which there has been granted to him the power to appoint the chairman of a congressional committee.

I do not know how efficient Mr. Brown is. He may be one of the most efficient men in the United States, so far as I know; but I do know this, that however ingenious my friend from Pennsylvania [Mr. Temple] may be in his replies to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Bankhead] that congressional committee has never functioned a day since the Chief Executive laid his hand on it and put Mr. Brown in charge as chairman.

If this committee needs expert aid, there would be no objection to giving it the means to employ that expert aid. If they should desire to employ Mr. Brown, regarding him as an expert, that would be satisfactory. But when you permit the President to come into the legislative branch and appoint the chairman of a committee created by the legislative branch and then pay that man his salary, as it is being paid, out of the contingent funds of the House and Senate, you are treading upon extremely dangerous ground.

Why should the President have any more right to appoint the chairman of this committee created by the Congress, created by the legislative branches themselves, than he would have to appoint the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means or the chairman of Appropriations? Unless Mr. Brown has ability higher than the ability which the Members of the Senate themselves have the President added nothing to the ability of the committee by appointing him as a member of it. No better commission from this House has been appointed in my time than was appointed on this commission, including as it does the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Temple], studious, thoughtful, earnest; the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Moore], recognized everywhere as one of the ablest lawyers in the United States; and the distinguished and able gentleman from Washington [Mr. Webster]. Certainly Mr. Brown, however able he may be, added nothing to their ability.

If gentlemen are willing to put this resolution in a form whereby it can be a committee of Congress and controlled by the Congress, having a membership all of whom are responsible to the Congress, there will be no objection to it, I think, on the Democratic side of the House. [Applause.] But so long as you choose to make its work a farce by permitting the President to appoint its chairman I shall continue to resist it. bad precedent was fixed. There is an opportunity now to correct that error. The independence of the Congress, the different functions of the legislative and the executive branches of the Government, should be preserved. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. TEMPLE] to suspend the rules and pass the resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the

Mr. TEMPLE. Mr. Speaker, I yie gentleman from Virginia [Mr. MOORE].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Virginia is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I would say nothing about this matter except that I happen to be a member of the joint committee. There is force in much of what has been stated by my distinguished friend from Tennessee [Mr. GARRETT]. I was persuaded at the outset more than two years ago, and am still of opinion, that a good deal, perhaps a great deal, can be accomplished in the way of rendering the operations of the Government more efficient and less expensive by the reorganization of its departments and bureaus, and I think that is an opinion quite generally entertained. It seems to me it would be unfortunate not to carry on the effort that has been started in that direction. If this committee is not to be continued—and certainly I for one have no desire to engage in the very laborious work that will be incident to its continu-

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. MOORE of Virginia. I will.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Is not the chairman of the committee relieving the gentleman of all the laborious work?

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. In a moment I will come to that,
If this committee is not to be continued, I think some similar committee ought to be created. There is need to give more vigor to governmental activities and that is only possible by eliminating duplication and by regrouping where regrouping is desirable. My one dominating suggestion is that because there may be some discouragement, due to the fact that results have not yet been reached, the effort to secure a better condition should not be abandoned.

I said a moment ago that I concurred in much that had been said by the gentleman from Tennessee. I would like to say, although this is personal, that I did not seek a place on the com-

Mr. Clark, who was the leader of the House at the time the committee was formed, mentioned the matter to me and desired to know whether if appointed I would serve, and I answered in the affirmative, and that was the extent of my relation to the matter of my selection.

All supposed as soon as the committee was created that it would at once take up the work and carry it on actively. There was a powerful public sentiment favoring that course, and I think the backing and support of that sentiment would have been of great value to the committee if it had immediately gone forward. It is undoubtedly true, as my friend from Tennessee has said, that except for the intervention of the Executive there would have been no delay, and I think it very probable that a report or reports of the committee would have been made to Congress before this time, and that would doubtless have happened except for the action of the committee itself in selecting Mr. Brown as its chairman.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Virginia has expired.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. I will yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Virginia.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman is recognized for seven minutes.

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. It is lifting no veil of secrecy that ought to cover the history of the committee to say that the Senator who represents the minority and the Member of the House who represents the minority thought it was an illadvised step to select an outsider, not a Member of either House of Congress, the chairman of the committee. Of course, when he was made chairman the committee was largely in his control and subject to such policy as he might advise.

He became chairman in the spring of 1921. In June, 1921, there was a meeting, the only meeting during that year. letter was then presented from the President stating he would be glad to submit his suggestions to the committee and the committee replied that it would be glad to receive the suggestions of the President. Time passed-much time has passed since then-and only recently the chairman, who has been working apart from and independently of the committee, has submitted a plan, or rather it is submitted by the President. It has reached the committee within the last two weeks and covered, I believe, in a document printed under the order of the Senate. That is what has happened and the committee is now ready to take up the work which it should have engaged in actively heretofore. Whether the plan submitted is wise or unwise I can not say. I do not undertake to prejudge it.

It may be wise in some respects and not wise in other respects. It has got to be considered in general and in detail by the committee, if the committee is continued in existence. The plan is in the hands of the committee and the committee later on, if it is continued-I do not know how soon, but as soon as practicable-will take up the plan, hold hearings, so as to furnish an opportunity to all who desire to be heard, and reach conclusions after canvassing the whole subject to the extent of its ability.

I can not answer and I do not think those of the majority can answer the criticisms made by the distinguished gentleman from Tennessee. But aside from those criticisms I would be unfortunate to take any step now which would advertise to the country and which would mean that we are going to make no further effort to bring about a more efficient and less expensive organization of the Government services. [Ap-

Therefore, while I greatly regret to be compelled to differ with my valued friend, the leader of the minority, and perhaps with most of the gentlemen who sit about him, I believe we can better afford to make some sacrifice in the way of retaining an outsider in his connection with the committee and paying the comparatively small amount which that will involve, than to take the alternative course and abandon the entire project.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MOORE of Virginia, Yes, Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. I notice the last line of the resolution provides that the term of service of the committee shall be extended to July 1, 1924, a year from next July. Already it has been in existence approximately two years.

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. Yes.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. That would make three years and a half. Does the gentleman think there is any necessity now that a plan has been submitted to provide that it shall be considered for a year and a half? Mr. MOORE of Virginia. There must be hearings, and Congress is about to adjourn.

Mr. COOPER of Wiscousin. The Congress is about to adjourn and every member of the committee has been reelected to serve in the next Congress.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Virginia has expired.

Mr. TEMPLE, Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman one minute more

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Why can not that committee get together before next December when the Congress comes into session again? Why can not the work be done during the summer'

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. I would be willing to do that, but perhaps there are members of the committee who would be unwilling. Some of them are from sections remote from Washington and might find it most inconvenient to be here in the vacation of Congress.

I want to say this in conclusion: The position which I am taking, as I understand, is the position taken by all of the members-the two Republicans and one Democrat-who represent the Senate on the committee, for only the other day the Senate by a unanimous vote passed this resolution which is under consideration here now. [Applause.]

Mr. TEMPLE. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Fess].

Mr. FESS. Mr. Speaker, the statement of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Moore] that public sentiment is strongly backing a reorganization of the executive departments is a statement of fact that anyone who has followed the matter will recognize at once. For years preceding the effort here there has been great concern about eliminating duplications in the executive departments. Much has been said about it and written about it. So far as the criticism about an outsider being associated with the joint committee is concerned, I really think that that criticism can easily be answered by a mere statement that the organization to be affected is the executive departments and not the legislative, and since it is the executive department that is to be reorganized, it seems to me proper-and that was the opinion of the House-to have some one identified with the Executive in close association in advice, so that the committee could have that angle as well as the legislative angle. I offer that as a reply to the strictures on putting some one on the committee not identified with the Congress

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FESS. I yield to the gentleman,

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Does the gentleman think that he ought to have been elected chairman of the committee?

FESS. If it were the judgment of the committee that he should be made the chairman, and the committee did make him the chairman, I think it would be entirely proper for him to be the chairman.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Does the gentleman think, in view of the fact that the gentleman who happens to be chair- Britten man of this committee failed to be elected Senator in Ohio, that it is the duty of Congress to furnish him with a salary?

Mr. FESS. I think that is hardly a fair reference to any of the gentlemen to whom the gentleman refers. Certainly no one would state that the gentleman who is the chairman is seeking a mere office. His tireless energy in readjusting these departments is a service which is vastly important. Therefore it strikes me that it is hardly fair to refer to the gentleman in that way. I think the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Moore] has put the whole thing in a nutshell. Here is a tremendous work, vastly important. Whether it took undue time to bring it to this stage or not, I do not know.

I know it is a tremendous work, and it has just now reached the stage where we are ready for hearings in order to complete it, and it would strike me that it is a very unfortunate position to take that with the work brought up to the moment when we can do something to eliminate duplication and save waste in behalf of efficiency we should now throw it all overboard and say that it is all behind us, that it is worth nothing, and therefore we will abandon the work. It can not be done in six months. It is impossible to do this short of the time requested in the resolution, and if it is worth anything, as I feel certain it is worth a vast amount to the country, then let us go on with the work and at least refuse to confess that the Government does not need a reorganization in the executive departments; and while we are doing it, let us accept the counsel of the head of the branch of the Government that is to be reorganized, because no one is more concerned in an efficient reorganization than is the President. For that reason, why not have a representative of the executive department on the committee?

Mr. TEMPLE. Mr. Speaker, I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Wyoming is recognized for two minutes.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I shall consume those two minutes merely to remind the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GARRETT] that the present President of the United States never issues orders, except as he may issue them as Commander in Chief of the Army and the Navy. The gentleman from Tennessee must have been thinking of another administration when things were somewhat different.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MONDELL, Yes.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. President Wilson never sought to appoint our committees or our chairmen.

MONDELL. As was entirely proper, the President of the United States suggested that as this is a matter in which the executive departments are very greatly interested, one might I think almost say primarily interested, it is of the utmost importance that there be some one representing the Executive view; but the chairman of a committee does not run a committee like this. He is merely the moderator, and the men that the House and the Senate have placed on this committee will, of course, determine and decide what is to be done.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania to suspend the rules and pass the Senate joint resolution. The question was taken.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the opinion of the Chair, two-thirds having voted-

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a

The House again divided; and there were—ayes 114, noes 27. Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote because there is no quorum present. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman objects to the vote because there is no quorum present. Evidently there is no quorum present. The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will bring in absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll

The question was taken; and there were-yeas 167, nays 75, not voting 184, as follows:

YEAS-167.

Brooks, Pa. Cooper, Ohio Ackerman Favrot Anderson Andrew, Mass. Andrews, Nebr. Appleby Bacharach Barbour Burdick Burtness Crago Cramton Fish Butler Campbell, Kans, Campbell, Pa. Cantrill Dallinger Darrow Dempsey Dowell Fitzgerald Focht Fordney Foster Free French Frothingham Fuller Gensman Begg Bixler Blakeney Bland, Va. Chalmers Dunn Chindblom Christopherson Clarke, N. Y. Echols Edmonds Elliott Clouse Cole, Iowa Colton Bond Fairchild Faust Gernerd Glynn

Graham, Ill. Green, Iowa Greene, Mass. Greene, Vt. Griest Hadley Hardy, Colo. Haugen Hawley Hersey Hickey Hicks Hickey Hicks Hill Hoch Hogan Huck Huck Humphrey, Nebr. Humphrey, Nebi Husted Ireland James Johnson, Wash. Kelly, Pa. Retcham Kiess Kissel Klaczka Kline, Pa. Knutson Abernethy Aswell Bankhead Barkley

Bell Black Blanton Bowling

Briggs
Buchanan
Bulwinkle
Byrnes, S. C.
Byrns, Tenn,
Carew

Connally, Tex. Crisp

Carew

Collins

Kopp Kraus Kreider Lazaro Lea, Calif. Lee, N. Y. Lehlbach Lineberger Little Lorar Logan Lowrey Luce McKenzie McPherson MacGregor MacLafferty MacLafferty
Magee
Mapes
Michener
Miller
Mondell
Moore, Ohlo
Moore, Va.
Moores, Ind. Morin Murphy Nelson, Me. Newton, Minn. NAYS-75.

Davis, Tenn.

Deal Dominick Doughton

Drewry Driver Dupré Fisher

Fulmer

Griffin

Garrett, Tenn. Gilbert Goldsborough

Stephens Strong, Kans, Strong, Pa. Newton, Mo. Norton Parker, N. J. Parker, N. Y. Paul Perkins Strong, Pa.
Sweet
Taylor, N. J.
Temple
Thompson
Tilson
Timberlake
Tincher
Timkham
Underhill
Vaile
Vestal
Voigt
Volk
Volk Periman Petersen Porter Radcliffe Reber Reed, N. Y. Reed, W. Va. Ricketts Roach Robertson Robsion Volstead Walters Ward, N. Y. Rogers Rossdale Sanders, Ind. Scott, Tenn. Wason Webster White, Kans. Williams, Ill. Williamson Scott, Tenn, Shaw Siegel Sinnott Smith, Idabo Speaks Sproul Stafford Wyant Young Rucker

Jones, Tex. Kincheloe Sabath Kunz Lankferd Larsen, Ga. Lendon Smithwick Stevenson Sumners, Tex.

Summers, Tex Swank Tague Taylor, Colo. Ten Eyck Tillman Tucker Turner Tyson Tyson Upshaw Vinson Wright

Hammer Hooker Huddleston Hudspeth Jeffers, Ala. Johnson, Ky. NOT VOTING-184.

McSwain

Mead O'Brien Oldfield Oliver

Riordan Rouse

Quin Rainey, Ill. Raker Rankin

Almon Ansorge Anthony Arentz Atkeson Freeman Funk Gahn Gallivan Beck Beedy Benham Garner Garrett, Tex. Gifford Goodykoontz Bird Bland, Ind. Boies Brand Gorman Gould Gould Graham, Pa, Hardy, Tex, Hawes Hayden Hays Henry Herrick Brennan Brooks, III. Brown, Tenn. Browne, Wis. Burke Burton Cable Hull Montague Moore, III.
Humphreys, Miss. Morgan
Hutchinson Mott
Jacoway Mudd
Jefferis, Nebr. Nelson, A. P.
Johnson, Miss. Nelson, J. M.
Jones, Pa. Nolan
O'Connor
Kearne Cannon Carter Chandler, N. Y. Chandler, Okla. Clague Clark, Fla. Clark, Fia. Classon Codd Cole, Ohio Connelly, Pa. Cooper, Wis. Kearns Keller Kelley, Mich. Kendall Cooper, W Copley Coughlin Crowther Cullen Kennedy Kindred Kindred King
Kirkpatrick
Kitchin
Kitchin
Kline, N. Y.
Knight
Lampert
Langley
Lanham
Larson, Minn.
Lawrence
Layton Curry Dale Davis, Minn. Denison Dickinson

Leatherwood Lee, Ga. Linthicum Longworth Luhring Luhring Sanders, N.
McArthur Sanders, Ter
McClintic Schall
McCormick Scott, Mich.
McFadden
McLaughlin, Mich. Shelton
McLaughlin, Nebr. Shreve
McLaughlin, Nebr. Shreve
McLaughlin, Pa. Sinclair
Madden
Maloney Slemn Maloney Mansfield Martin Merritt Michaelson Nolan O'Connor Ogden Olpp Overstreet Paige Park, Ga. Park, Ga.
Parks, Ark.
Patterson, Mo.
Patterson, N. J.
Pou
Pringey
Purnell
Rainey, Ala.
Ramseyer
Ransley
Rayburn
Reece
Rhodes
Riddick

Rodenberg Rose Rosenbloom Ryan Sanders, N. Y. Sanders, Tex. Sisson Siemp Smith, Mich. Snell Snyder Steagall Stedman Steenerson Stiness Stell Stoll Sullivan Summers, Wash. Swing Taylor, Ark. Taylor, Tenn. Thomas Thorpe Towner Treadway Ward, N. C. Watson Weaver Wheeler White, Me. Williams, Tex. Wilson Wingo Wood, Ind. Woodruff Woods, Va. Woodyard Wurzbach

Zihlman

So, two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended, and the bill was passed.

The Clerk announced the additional pairs:

Until further notice:

Drane Dunbar

Dyer Ellis Fairfield

Mr. Longworth with Mr. Lee of Georgia.

Mr. Paige with Mr. Sears.
Mr. Woodruff with Mr. Carter.
Mr. Kendall with Mr. Weaver.
Mr. Fenn with Mr. Garrett of Texas.

Layton

Mr. Burton with Mr. Pou. Mr. Lampert with Mr. Sisson.

Mr. McLaughlin of Michigan with Mr. Fields.

Mr. Graham of Pennsylvania with Mr. Hayden.

Mr. Merritt with Mr. Steagall. Mr. Shreve with Mr. Woods of Virginia.

Mr. Madden with Mr. O'Connor. Mr. Langley with Mr. Drane.

Mr. Dickinson with Mr. Hardy of Texas.

Mr. Beedy with Mr. Gallivan.

Mr. Boies with Mr. Humphreys of Mississippi,

Mr. Rhodes with Mr. Wilson.

Mr. Cole of Ohio with Mr. Mansfield. Mr. Browne of Wisconsin with Mr. Stedman.

Mr. Ransley with Mr. Sanders of Texas.

Mr. Purnell with Mr. Linthicum.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. A quorum is present; the Doorkeeper will open the doors.

CONFERENCE REPORT-CREDITS AND REFUNDS.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I desire to present a conference report for printing under the rule.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Iowa presents a conference report on a bill, which the Clerk will report by title

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 13775) to amend the revenue act of 1921 with respect credits and refunds.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Ordered printed under the rule. TRIBUTE TO HON. W. BOURKE COCKRAN.

Mr. SIEGEL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record on the life and work of the late Hon. W. BOURKE COCKRAN.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The extension of remarks referred to is here printed in full

as follows:

Mr. SIEGEL. Mr. Speaker, in the fall of 1894 I had the pleasure of meeting the man who was later to become New York's and, in fact, America's leading orator of the present generation, Hon. W. BOURKE COCKRAN. I was a school boy then, and when a couple of weeks later my then school teacher, now associate superintendent of schools of New York City, Dr. William J. O'Shea, asked our class to write an essay on the three men best known in public life, I included the late Speakers Crisp, Reed, and our lamented friend W. BOURKE COCKRAN. Many times later, and particularly the time when I was first nominated for Member of the House of Representatives in 1914, he encouraged me in the ambition which he knew I had, to become a Member of the House before I was 35 years of age. Few men were gifted as he was. His fluency of language, depth of thinking, his wide knowledge of the history of the world and of its literature, stamped him as the exceptional man in America, because this country of ours was his adopted land. He feared no man. He showed his grit and courage by opposing the nomination for President of Grover Cleveland. He again displayed it when he refused to support Hon. William Jennings Bryan in 1896, and rallied to the cause of sound money. A year ago last Lincoln's Birthday, at my request, he delivered an address on the life, character, and accomplishments of Abraham Lincoln at the Institutional Synagogue Auditorium, of which I have the honor to be president. He held spellbound for over an hour and twenty minutes an audience of over 1,000 people. His hold on the people in New York City was seen that evening, when they came, regardless of a terrible snowstorm, which was accompanied by a terrific gale.

Many addresses have been delivered on Lincoln, but no man portrayed his character to the full extent which W. Bourke Cockean could and did. Volumes of praise will undoubtedly be sounded in the next few months by all those who knew him, and columns of comment on his most extraordinary career will be printed. He was a real American in all that the word implies. He never forgot that he had come to this country from Ireland when young in years and received all that America could give him in honor and fame, because he recognized his full obligations to this Republic of ours. He fought for the immigrant with all the strength at his command. He recognized that if the spirit of intolerance was permitted to grow here that it would bring division amongst loyal American citizens. He foresaw, as we have all recognized, that the only solution for many of the ills which nations are suffering is work and work only. Busy hands and busy minds keep individuals as well as nations out of trouble. He knew that he had won his success through the hardest kind of energetic work. He also bore in mind that it was the only way for any individ-ual to attain his goal. We New Yorkers, where he lived and grew greater year by year, will miss him. His passing away leaves a void in our city which for many years it will be impossible to fill. The Nation has lost a faithful public servant, a lawyer of eminence, and a statesman of real courage.

Mr. Speaker, practically all the newspapers of the United States have paid him glowing tributes. I feel, however, that the account of his leaving us, together with the editorial comment of the New York Times, the Washington Star, and Washington Post, just about express the deep affection and love with which he was held, not only by those of his own political faith, but by men and women of all faiths and factions. These articles are worthy of preservation for future posterity, and I therefore quote them in full.

[From the New York Times, March 2, 1923.]

W. BOURRE COCKRAN DIES AFTER ORATION—STRICKEN AT 69TH BIRTH-DAY CELEBRATION FOLLOWING SPEECH IN HOUSE—LAST WISH UN-FULFILLED—BLEW OUT 69 CANDLES ON CAKE, THEN EXPRESSED HOPE HE WOULD LIVE MANY YEARS.

(Special to the New York Times.)

HE WOULD LIVE MANY YEARS.

(Special to the New York Times.)

WASHINGTON, March 1.—Representative W. Bourke Cockran, of New York, one of the most eloquent orators in the House of Representatives in recent years, died this morning after a stroke of apoplexy.

Mr. Cockran was stricken shortly after 1 o'clock this morning after celebrating his 69th birthday at a dinner attended by a number of friends. The celebration was a double one, as it was the natal anniversary of Salisbury Field, his house guest.

Mr. Cockran was in excellent health and spirits during the dinner, but he seemed to be rather nervous. He appeared at the dinner after making an earnest speech of 45 minutes in the House against the rural credits bill. His speech was delivered about 6.45, and when he ended Mr. Cockran told one of his colleagues that he had the greatest difficulty in making it because of lack of preparation and the complexity of the subject. His physicians believe that this effort contributed to his death, as he had been warned against exercising his old-time vigor in his speeches. This he disregarded and was never more vehement than in his attack against the banking evils set up in the bill.

Two birthday cakes were placed on the dinner table last night, one for Mr. Cockran, the other for Mr. Field. Mr. Cockran succeeded in blowing out all the candles and "had his wish." As the flames flickered and his guests cheered Mr. Cockran turned to his guest at his right and said:

"I may tell you my wish. It is that I may live many years with my dear wife."

Two hours later Mr. Cockran was stricken as he was preparing for bed. Physicians were summoned, and while he was conscious for a few minutes, he died peacefully at 7.10 this morning.

Longworths among Callers.

LONGWORTHS AMONG CALLERS.

LONGWORTHS AMONG CALLERS.

As most of the guests were leaving last night Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth dropped in on the Cockrans to leave their birthday wishes, as has been their practice for many years, as the romance which united Alice Roosevelt and Nicholas Longworth and Mr. Cockran and Miss Ide had its inception on the famous trip to the Philippines, when Secretary of War Taft in 1905 took a party abroad. Both Mr. Cockran and Mr. Longworth, as Members of Congress, accompanied the party. At Manila Mr. Cockran met Miss Annie Ide, daughter of Henry Clay Ide, whose father was Governor General of the Philippines. A year later the wedding of both Members of Congress occurred and both families have been intimate ever since. Mr. Longworth said that Mr. Cockran last night was in a happy spirit and he told many stories of the past days of their courtships period in the Philippines.

A statement issued by Mr. Cockran's secretary said:

"Mr. Cockran had been feeling very well and working very hard. He made a speech in the House, and in the evening, it being his birthday, a few friends came in informally to dinner. He seemed in the best of health and spirits. He had been talking with Mrs. Cockran for about half an hour after the guests had gone, when, about 1 a. m., he suddenly said he had a terrible headache and soon after that became unconscious. Doctor Hardin immediately was summoned and the last rites of the Catholie Church were administered. Mrs. Cockran was at his bedside until he died."

A SHOCK TO THE HOUSE.

A SHOCK TO THE HOUSE.

Mr. Cockran's death came as a particular shock to the House, as his speech last night had made a strong impression on his colleagues. Mr. Cockran had planned to spend the rest of his life in Congress. He had made plans for taking the lead to revise the rules, and the Democrats were depending upon him in the next House to be one of their strongest advocates of reforms.

The House adjourned out of respect for his memory and appointed a committee to attend his funeral, which will be held at 10.30 Monday morning at St. Jean Baptiste Church, Lexington Avenue and Seventy-sixth Street, New York. The committee consists of Representatives Riordan, Mott, London, Carew, Siegel, Sullavan, Kline, Griffin, Ten Eyck, Fish, Mead, and Fairchild, of New York; Oliver, Alabama; Connally and Jones, Texas; and Sabaph, Illinois.

Representative Finis J. Garrett, Democratic leader, upon being informed of the death of Mr. Cockran, said:

"I am shocked almost beyond expression, Mr. Cockran has been not only a nationally known but an internationally known character for more than 30 years. He was one of the foremost orators of all the centuries. His political philosophy was broad and comprehensive, and his wonderful vocabulary and capability of expression enabled him to put his arguments in original and fascinating ways."

In his last speech, which he had not corrected, as was his invariable custom, Mr. Cockran inveighed against the rural credits bill and pleaded with his Democratic colleagues to vote against it. Among other things, he said in his speech, which probably brought on his attack:

"I am perfectly certain that my good friends around here are far from realizing the true character of this proposal. I know perfectly well that these Democrats would recoil from the idea of tolerating or encouraging a system by which one set of people are despolled for the benefit of others. They have been very quick to denounce the ship subsidy bill, and I agree with them. This is exactly the same character as the tariff. The character when it interferes with banking. Every attempt to enrich men by law means the despolling of some for the benefit of others.

"God knows whether the world will succeed in freeing itself from the calamiftes that are multiplying around it and the dangers that are constantly increasing in its pathway; but if it is to escape it can be by one way only—and that is by the employment of every pair of human hands with active industry on the soil or some product of the soil. You can not induce the employment of human hands in industry unless you guarantee to every man the peaceful and secure enjoyment of all that he produces. When the day dawns that any number of citizens are taught to believe that there is a more rapid road to prosperity, to wealth, to the possession of capital, than the employment of industry and the exercise of self-denial, and that a more rapid way is through the Treasury, by the complacence of or the connivance of politicians, then the knell of this country's prosperity is sounded."

PUBLIC CAREER OF 40 YEARS.

One of the last of American political orators, as he was one of the greatest, W. Bourke Cockan had a public career of nearly 40 years. Known as the "silver-tongued orator" of Tammany, he broke at least twice with that organization, once to support William McKinley, Republican, for President in 1896, and once to work for the election of Theodore Roosevelt, Progressive, to the Presidency in election of Theodore Roosevelt, Progressive, to the Presidency in 1912.

The speech which many consider to mark the peak of his oratorical efforts—the sound money speech for McKinley in Madison Square Garden in 1896—was made while he was outside the Democratic organization, to which he gave his allegiance during most of his life, Among his other famous speeches that opposing the renomination of Grover Cleveland at the Democratic National Convention in 1892, a masterpiece of irony but unproductive of any results in the convention, was perhaps the best known.

Mr. Cockran's brilliant speeches were numerous. Besides the two already mentioned those which were best known included his speech against Cleveland at the Democratic National Convention of 1884, when Cleveland was nominated for President and later elected, his "Gold Democrat" speech in Chicago in 1899 in a debate with William J. Bryan over standards of currency, his anti-Croker speech in the New York City Club on May 24, 1901, his pro-Irish speech before a committee of the United States Senate on August 29, 1913, his peace treaty plebiscite speech before the Cleveland Democracy in New York City of February 1, 1920, and his speech nominating Gov. Alfred E. Smith for Vice President at the Democratic National Convention at San Francisco in July of the same year.

HIS FIGHT AGAINST CLEVELAND.

HIS FIGHT AGAINST CLEVELAND.

Mr. Cockran was a delegate to the Democratic National Convention in 1884, and, like Kelly and the other Tammany delegates, was opposed to the nomination of Grover Cleveland for President. The convention was largely for Cleveland, and one Tammany speaker after another, with the exception of Kelly, who received a hearing, was howled down. When Cockran rose to speak he met a similar reception. He persisted and was able to make himself heard above the uproar. Interruptions became fewer and finally ceased. A round of applause when he had finished was evidence of his ability to speak in hostile surroundings.

In the turbulent scenes of the convention of 1892 Mr. Cockran also took a conspicuous part, and, although the Cleveland delegates were in the majority, Mr. Cockran's eloquence obtained from them a respectful hearing when he spoke against the nomination of Cleveland.

the majority, Air. Cockran's eloquence obtained from them a respectful hearing when he spoke against the nomination of Cleveland.

CAME TO AMERICA WHEN a BOY,

Mr. Cockran was born in County Sligo, Ireland, February 28, 1854. His parents, who were in moderately prosperous circumstances, intended him for the church, but the career of a priest was not to his liking, and he came to the United States when 17 years old to seek his fortune.

Mr. Cockran's first employment was as a clerk in the department store of A. T. Stewart. This, too, was distasteful to him and he became a tutor in a private school in Rutgers Street. Later he went to Tuckahoe as principal of a public school.

While teaching school, Mr. Cockran studied law. He was poor and could not then afford to buy the books he needed. During this period he made the acquaintance of Judge Abram R. Tappen, who took a fancy to the young Irishman and gave him access to his law library. Thus encouraged, Mr. Cockran worked the harder, teaching in the daytime and giving his nights to the study of law.

In 1876 he gave up teaching, was admitted to the bar and practiced for two years in Mount Vernon. He then moved to New York City and opened a modest law office on an upper floor of 178 Broadway.

For months Mr. Cockran was hardly able to earn more than enough to supply him with food and lodging. He had an easy audacity and a good nature that won him friends, among whom was Charles Strauss, who had a law office in the same building. Mr. Strauss had a client who had a friend accused of receiving stolen goods, and turned over the case to Mr. Cockran with the remark that if he could win it he would soon have a practice of $20,000 a year. Mr. Cockran did not win the case, as the evidence was too strongly against the accused, but he handled it ably, and went for a time into Mr. Strauss's office.

HE ENTERS POLITICS. HE ENTERS POLITICS.

After that Mr. Cockran's rise in his profession was rapid and he began to take an interest in politics. His eloquence was winning him friends among the politicians; the leaders of the Irving Hall Democracy, a faction opposed to Tammany, took him up and he attracted aftention as spokesman of that organization at the Democratic State Convention at Albany in 1881. In the following year he was appointed counsel to the sheriff of New York County, a lucrative Democracy, tracted attention as spokesman of that organization fracted attention at Albany in 1881. In the following year he was appointed counsel to the sheriff of New York County, a lucrative position.

John Kelly, then leader of Tammany, had watched Cockran's progress with interest and in 1883 invited him to join the Wigwam. Kelly had a high opinion of Cockran's ability and predicted a great future for him.

Mr. Cockran's status as one of the leading orators of Tammany was fixed by his first Chicago speech. He was again appointed counsel to the sheriff during the incumbency of Hugh J. Grant. When Grant became mayor a little later he wanted to appoint Mr. Cockran corporation counsel but the latter refused that; later he declined the nomination for judge of the court of common pleas. Although active in politics, Mr. Cockran after his start was never an office seeker.

In 1886 Mr. Cockran after his start was never an office seeker.

In 1886 Mr. Cockran was first elected to Congress, consenting to take the nomination largely because of the desire of the Tammany leaders to have a spokesman on the floor of the House of Representatives. Mr. Cockran was again elected to Congress in 1890 and 1892.

Decause of his refusal to support Bryan, he left the party and it was not until he supported the latter on the issue of "imperialism" in the 1900 campaign that he was restored to party regularity. He was elected to Congress in 1904 to succeed George B. McClellan, who resigned to become mayor of New York City, and served until the end of 1909, having in the meantime broken with Charles F. Murphy, who had become leader of Tammany Hall.

There followed another period during which Mr. Cockran was out of the Democratic Party. Mr. Cockran, a personal friend of the late Theodore Roosevelt, joined the Progressive Party in 1912, campaigned effectively for Roosevelt, and ran unsuccessfully for Congress in the Named Smith for YICE PRESIDENT.

NAMED SMITH FOR VICE PRESIDENT.

Mr. Cockran, after a period of comparative political inactivity returned to the Democratic Party in time to nominate Governor Smith for Vice President at the Democratic Convention of 1920. He was nominated for Representative later that year in the sixteenth congressional district to succeed Thomas F. Smith, secretary of Tammany, who declined renomination. He was elected by about 5,000 plurality and was reelected last fall.

During his last period of service in Congress Mr. Cockran had been outspoken in his condemnation of the prohibition amendment and the Voistead law, which he characterized as "fanaticism gone mad." Heled an unsuccessful attempt to write a wet plank into the Democratic platform at the San Francisco convention.

Mr. Cockran was a devout Roman Catholic and one of the most prominent laymen of that church in this country. The late Pope Leo XIII considered Mr. Cockran a friend and granted him repeated audiences. He held degrees from St. Francis Xavier's College, Georgetown University, Manhattan College, and St. John's College, Brooklyn.

Cockran was an outspoken opponent of divorce, which he characterized as "one of the worst blots upon our civilization." "If we are to choose between divorce and polygamy, give us polygamy," he said at one time.

Mr. Cockran throughout his public career had been the friend of organized labor, but always held that employer and employee could not prosper separately and at the expense of each other. He opposed compulsory arbitration, declaring it inconsistent with a condition of free labor.

Some of Mr. Cockran's most ardent admirers were accustomed to style him the "greatest orator of the age." Whether this is true or not, he was undeniably effective. With a big head set upon perad compulsory arbitration, declaring it inconsistent with a condition of free labor.

Some of Mr. Cockran's most ardent admirers were accustomed to style him the "greatest orator of the age." Whether this is true or not, he was undeniably effective. With a big head set upon broad, sturdy shoulders and of powerful physique, he had a commanding presence. His voice was clear and resonant and possessed just a tingle of Irish brogue. Burke was his favorite orator. After-dinner speaking he looked down upon as "vapid."

DEFENDED TOM MOONEY.

DEFENDED TOM MOONEY.

Although Mr. Cockran was best known as an orator, he was a lawyer of ability and distinction. In his early career he was counsel for the late Jacob Sharp, and more recently he defended Tom Mooney in the San Francisco bomb case.

Although thoroughly American, Mr. Cockran never forgot the land of his nativity and was always an advocate of Irish liberty. Many persons believed that it was largely through his efforts that the late King Edward signed the Irish land act, a great benefit to the people of Ireland, before his death 20 years ago.

Mr. Cockran was married three times. His first wife was the sister of the Reverend Father Jackson, who was pastor of St. Ann's Church in East Twelfth Street. His second wife was Miss Rhoda E. Mack, daughter of the late John Mack, a retired merchant.

His third wife, who survives him, was Miss Anne I. Ide, daughter of Gen. Henry C. Ide, former Governor General of the Philippines, Mr. Cockran was married to Miss Ide in November, 1906. Since their marriage, except for the time spent in Washington, Mr. and Mrs. Cockran have lived mostly at their home at Sands Point, L. I.

Teibutes of Party Leaders—Acting Mayor Hulbert, Governor

TRIBUTES OF PARTY LEADERS-ACTING MAYOR HULBERT, GOVERNOR SMITH, AND OTHERS COMMENT.

SMITH, AND OTHERS COMMENT.

John R. Voorhis, Grand Sachem of the Tammany Society, ordered the flag on Tammany Hall to be placed at half-mast as soon as he heard of the death of Representative W. BOURKE COCKRAN. Mr. Voorhis, who is also president of the board of elections, said that no special election would be necessary to elect a successor, because the next session of Congress probably would not begin until after the regular election next November.

"I have known BOURKE COCKRAN for years." Mr. Voorhis and the state of the service of the se tion would be necessary to elect a successor, because the next session of Congress probably would not begin until after the regular election next November.

"I have known Bourke Cockran for years," Mr. Voorhis said. "His great oratorial ability made him an invaluable asset in the cause of democracy. Bourke Cockran was Grand Sachem of the Society of Tammany from 1905 to 1908. There will be a meeting of the regular organization on Monday, and no doubt resolutions will be passed expressing the sorrow of the organization for one of its most distinguished members."

Other expressions on Mr. Cockran's death follow:

Acting Mayor Hulbert: "It was a great shock to the people of this city to learn to-day of the sudden death of Congressman W. Bourke Cockran, who for 40 years has been a prominent figure in the life of this city and for the greater part of that time in the Senate and Nation. He is known throughout the country for his distinguished forensic ability, and the splendor of his diction, the richness and variety of his imagery, and the boundless store of knowledge which he displayed was equaled by few Americans. Mr. Cockran, in response to the appeals of his party to reenter public life in order that the country might avail of his great ability in the reconstruction period following the World War, was elected to Congress from the sixteenth district and died at the close of his present term."

Judge Aired J. Talley, of the court of general sessions: "Bourke Cockran was the foremost orator of our times. I know of no other man who had such control of the magic in musle of the spoken word and his power never waned. He was never more eloquent than two weeks ago, when I heard him at the Catholic Club on Lincoln. He was a splendid gentleman of the highest probity and loftiest ideals. His death is indeed a loss to the country."

Justice Daniel F. Cohalan, of the supreme court: "In the passing of Bourke Cockran there has been lost a man of rare personality, admirable qualities, and breadth of culture."

United States Sena

had a fine vocabulary and the grandest command of the English language of any man who lived. He was charitable. His charity knew no limit."

District Attorney Charles J. Dood, of Brooklyn: "The sterling character of Congressman Cockran is best seen in his work. He gave the most valuable years of his life to the service of his country."

GOVERNOR SMITH MOURNS COCKRAN. (Special to The New York Times.)

(Special to The New York Times.)

Albany, March 1.—Governor Smith was greatly shocked when news reached him to-day of the death of W. Bourre Cockban, whom he had known for many years, and who on two occasions had eulogized the governor as sponsor for his nomination.

The first occasion was the Democratic National Convention in San Francisco in 1920, when he placed Mr. Smith in nomination for Vice President; and the second the Democratic State convention in Syracuse last year, when he seconded his nomination for governor.

"His passing from this life removes one of America's great men," said the governor. "The history of his life reads like a romance built upon early struggle and latter-day success. He was a forceful and vigorous character, and by sheer ability he fought his way from the humble schoolroom in which he taught on the lower east side of Manhattan to a position of prominence in the greatest Nation in the world; "His death is a distinct loss to the country, and one beyond measure to his personal friends, a distinction I enjoyed during his lifetime, because those fortunate enough to count him as such knew the warmth of his friendship and the strength of his loyalty and devotion."

The governor said he would attend Mr. Cockbany's funeral.

GOVERNOR SILZER'S TRIBUTE.

TRENTON, N. J., March 1.—Governor Silzer to-night, commenting on the death of Representative Cocknan, said:

"He was an American in the truest and best sense. He had great faith in the people and they in him. Both were right. I join with the people of the United States in mourning our loss, and in extending the deepest sympathy to Mrs. Cockran."

BOURKE COCKRAN.

[From the New York Times, March 2, 1923.]

[From the New York Times, March 2, 1923.]

The splendor of Bourke Cockran's gifts as an orator obscured, at times, at least among his adversaries, the real and solid talent and achievements that underlay his genius; and in politics a certain opportunism or facility of transition sometimes caused a suspicion or prejudice that he looked at public questions as briefs to be argued. Moreover, in some jaundiced eyes, his long connection with Tammany Hall, to which he emigrated from Irving Hall, was a subject of distrust. This was part of the penalty of his brilliance. He was a scholar and a student. He made himself thoroughly familiar with the money question, for example, and his speeches against the free coinage of silver were informed, logical, and clear. So, when any constitutional subject came up in Congress, he displayed a deep and accurate knowledge of it.

He was an acute lawyer, who came to reputation and fortune early; but it is as an orator, equally admired in popular and legislative assemblies, that he made the most vivid impression upon his contemporaries. He had the physical as well as the mental credentials required of that type of artist. Who that ever saw it can forget that tall, impressive figure, burly in his later years, the deep-set eyes with those curious curved, almost oriental eyelids, the powerful nose, the forchead crisscrossed with thought, the mobile face with something Spanish, Celtiberian as well as Celtie, something a little strange, anyway; wit flashing from the eyes to the lips; above all, the marvelous voice charged with mockery, with passion, always with music?

Perfectly self-possessed, if anything a little easier, more suave, more quiet, more dangereusly honeyed as he grew older: a conqueror of interruptions, a bland, swift, dangerous thruster with repartee, all his graces and forces mobilized; apparently always speaking extemporaneously, and, if not, hiding the labor of preparation with perfect art, he charmed even the most hostility in the audience was useful or necessary in brin incredible enconium of an orator—that people had rather hear him than eat.

Mr. COCKRAN's model was Edmund Burke. It would be cruel, of course, to compare him or anybody else to that great Irish philosophical thinker and orator, but it is something to choose the right model; and, physically, Mr. COCKRAN had endowments that Burke lacked. What is the secret of that communicable ardor between speaker and audience? Regarded mystically, or regarded in some direct or collateral relation to the modern germ theory, it is strange and wonderful. Something of this secret BOURKE COCKRAN possessed. The art of mystery seems to be dwindling in Ireland as well as here. Mr. COCKRAN was a considerable artist. It was artistically fit that he should speak and speak well in the House on his last night in it.

BOURKE COCKBAN.

[From the Washington Star.]

[From the Washington Star.]

Death of Bourke Cockean—he was always best known by his abbreviated name, and few would recognize him if styled William B. Cockean—revives memories of the days when he was in his best form as a political orator, days when he made the walls of convention halls ring with his eloquence, when his flowing mane would toss above the sea of heads like the crest of Neptune's horse above the waves, and his wonderful voice would ring even over the clamor of his delighted hearers. He had the gift of the silver tongue, the persuasive phrase, the felicitous harmony of tone and sentence that make the orator.

It seems a long time since Richard Croker used to go to the big political gatherings with his two spokesmen. BOURKE COCKEAN and John Fellows, antitheses in appearance, but brethren in the art of political expression. Croker was no speechmaker. He picked his men for that purpose, and in Fellows and Cockean had a remarkable pair. Each man had his specialty—Fellows in satire and Cockean in emotional eloquence. Between them they could hold any convention spellbound for hours if need be, and on the stump in campaigns they were marvels for hours if need be, and on the stump in campaigns they were marvels at votemaking.

But BOURKE COCKRAN'S abilities were not measured alone by his gift of speech. He was a legislator of ability. He had keen mind, a sharp intellect, with ability to analyze a subject thoroughly. When he spoke it was with information. He never went unprepared into the arena, and in a debate he was a formidable antagonist.

It has been said that BOURKE COCKRAN should have gone up the line to the Senate from the House, in which he sat on several returns for a good many years. But it is questionable whether he would have shown as brightly in the Senate as he did in the House. He needed the larger audience for his best effects. He liked close contacts with men. Though himself a man of dignity, he rather shrank from the more austere atmosphere of senatorial procedure.

His silver voice is stilled. It was heard only a few hours ago in the House in a ringing speech that showed no impairment of powers of reasoning or of expression, and those who knew and loved BOURKE COCKRAN as a frieud are glad to know that he went out with no slackening of his capacity, and that his last scene in life was a birthday party in celebration of his 69th year. He will be mourned as a good friend, and long remembered as one who left his mark on the records of American affairs.

RECALLS COCKRAN BATTLING STORM TO BEAT CLEVELAND. [From the Washington Post.]

(From the Washington Post.)

CHICAGO, March I.—Chicagoans who learned with sorrow of the death of Representative W. BOURES COCKRAN, in Washington, to day showered praise on the "silver-tongued orator." Many of Mr. Cockran's famous speeches were delivered in Chicago, and he had many friends here.

"I heard his greatest speech when he opposed the nomination of Cleveland," declared Federal Judge Alschuler. "It was a dramatic occasion which I have never forgotten. Cockran held the attention of the great audience at the convention when no other living man, in my opinion, could have done it. It was 2 o'clock in the morning. A terrible storm was raging. The rain was coming through the holes in the roof of the temporary structure in which the convention was being held. The crowd was against him and wanted to vote. The lightning flashed and the thunder crashed, yet Cockran made a speech which held the crowd spellbound. I shall never forget it."

Mr. MOORES of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I desire to extend my

Mr. MOORES of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I desire to extend my remarks in the RECORD by printing a selection from Macaulay, referred to by the Hon. W. BOURKE COCKBAN, for which he secured the consent of the House to be printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, that consent is granted.

There was no objection The remarks are as follows:

SPEECH OF HON. W. BOURKE COCKRAY, OF NEW YORK, MADE IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1923.

Mr. COCKRAN. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I took the liberty of propounding some questions to the chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency during his address, and on his answers I shall predicate what I have to say I asked him distinctly, and he answered with equal candor, if the purpose of this measure is to afford the farmers a chance to get more money on credit than they could obtain through the ordinary processes of commerce. Now, since every-one with money, including the banking business, is quite as anxious to loan as any borrower is to obtain, the only fair and sensible deduction from those statements is that the farmer, through this measure—I will not say the farmer, I mean the statesmen who are cultivating the farmer, I do not speak of the farmer who is cultivating the earth, but of those gentlemen who are cultivating the farmer-propose that he shall be able to obtain more money on his property than the property is worth.

SEVERAL MEMBERS, Oh, no.
Mr. COCKRAN. There can be no other meaning. repeat he will have no difficulty whatever in getting all the money that his credit is worth. Now, if this additional sum which it is proposed to give the farmer could be obtained like manna rained from heaven and could be picked up in some place where it would not be contributed by somebody else, I would join in acclaim to that proposal. Now, you propose to give the farmer, as much as I would like to see him get it, money without adequate security, and that money provided for in this bill must be supplied by some one. Naturally you inquire who is to be the victim, who is to make good this benevolence. It is going to be you and me. Nobody else. So I ask the careful attention of this committee to the character of the proposal, to consider and weigh the facts and see if there be any justification whatever for the attempt to take money from one set of citizens-in other words take it out of the Treasury-for the benefit of a particular class. Now, to begin with, I think it important, if the committee will bear with me, to give a brief history of banking and its functions. I want to remind you that it is, in English-speaking countries, a very recent institution, about 230 years old.

Macaulay, in his History of England, points out that in the reign of Charles II there was not a bank in England, and yet there was a growing industry, and that industry needed the very facilities which banking now affords. He points out that at that time there had been in operation for more than three or four hundred years the great Bank of Venice, and that bank had operated through all the mutations and confusions that marked the collapse of the old feudal system. As Macaulay says, it was receiving deposits and loaning money while there was a Christian emperor still in Constantinople. It was loaning money before Columbus directed his ships across the western ocean, and it was still loaning money when an Ottoman emperor prosided at the seat of the Cæsars, and while the discoveries ve Columbus had resulted in the erection of numerous communities beyond the seas.

And more than that, the Bank of Amsterdam, which was a more recent institution, had existed for 150 years, had gone through a period of confusion on the Continent that was never matched until these recent experiences through which the world is passing to-day. He points out that at the terrible time during the French invasion of Holland, when, as we all know, the dikes were broken down and the country was flooded as a measure of defense, and the white flags were flying from the residence of the stadtholder, there was one place where all was orderpeace, progress, and wholesome activity-and that was in the Bank of Amsterdam.

Now, these were so many private institutions; and he points out that the Government never interfered in banking when the interference has not worked disaster. The Bank of England practically gave banking facilities to the English market

And let me right here explain just what banking is, and when gentlemen realize it and fully appreciate it I think they will be able to form a fair judgment on the character of this proposal.

Banking is the means by which persons engaged in trade, in manufacture, or exchange of commodities can prosecute their business with less inactive capital than they would otherwise be compelled to employ.

Let me illustrate. If I am making tables or selling them I must, if I wish to remain in business, be ready at any moment to meet any demand that is made upon me, and I must meet it in the recognized currency of the country. If there were no banking facilities I would probably need to keep one half of my capital idle. But by the operations of banking I can deposit per cent of my capital in the bank, and a man engaged in selling tables, we will say, would deposit 10 per cent of his capital in the bank, and the man making shoes would deposit 10 per cent of his capital, and so on through all the multifarious branches of commerce and production. Men, by depositing small amounts of their capital, say 10 per cent, are able by their mutual accommodations to carry on business. If I need money to manufacture my tables I go to work and borrow, and when my tables are completed and sold I repay that loan, and that repayment not only discharges my indebtedness to the bank, but it supplies funds for the shoemaker or the furniture dealer, in case they desire to borrow.

Now, the very business of banking is to keep trade of every kind and character active, and if the farmer can produce credit, if he can produce property, and is engaged in an occupation that will guarantee with reasonable certainty that he will be able to meet his debt, the bank is as anxious to lend the money as he is to obtain it, by the very nature of the commercial conditions.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COCKRAN. No; I regret I have not the time. Chairman, I ask leave to extend in my remarks on this question the sketch that Macaulay gave of the success of the Bank of England.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the gentleman's request?

There was no objection.

Mr. COCKRAN. It was found that this was an enormously profitable business, this business of banking. But there is nothing new in folly. The cry went forth over the country, "Let us have a land bank! Let us have a bank for the conduct of all land transactions." And Macaulay says they undertook to represent to the people that the miracles of Egypt would not be more marvelous than the results of loaning money on land. But the very essence of banking is the facilitation and the interchange and production of commodities produced from the land, and there is a totally different field of employment for capital in dealing with the land itself. Long loans belong to a totally different field of transactions.

The land bank was started in England. It was to do everything that is claimed for the land bank here, and it resulted in collapse almost before it got under way. But the English land bank did not propose to take several hundred million dollars out of the Public Treasury, as does this measure, and therefore you will have this bank working as long as that money lasts. But following the suggestion of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Burton], let us assume that under the operation of this law large loans are made upon cattle and growing crops; I think they can loan up to 75 per cent of their value, and I have seen those values shrink over 50 per cent. What will be the security for those loans? How in the nature of things can these operations be prosecuted under the name of banking?

They are a permanent investment, a totally different branch of financial activity; they want to be encouraged, but when that is done they are conducted under the name and guise of banks to which they do not belong. Let us follow out the suggestion of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Burron] for a second. Let us assume that the money is loaned to a great extent upon what is called farm products, say 75 per cent of the value, or on a great herd of cattle in Arizona or New Mexico or Texas. and then assume the appearance of a blizzard. Where will the money to meet that loan come from? Where can it be found? What happens then? Do you come back and ask for more money? Why should not you? You have discovered a way to open the Treasury; you have discovered a way to levy on your neighbors and fellow citizens, because nothing can be taken out of the Treasury by appropriation until it is put in by taxation. Having obtained $60,000,000 in this manner, what is to prevent your coming back for $120,000,000?

You will come on the floor and ask if we are going to be the base, hard-hearted wretches who will actually emphasize and make more bitter the visitations of Providence, when all we have to do to protect the country is to shell out two or three hundred millions more. How long do you think that will last? The gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Parker] has made a powerful suggestion, one fraught with great significance in this discussion. Aside from the fact that you are already projecting into the financial system of the country a vast mass of tax-exempt securities, you are creating this condition: That just so soon as there shall be any collapse in the credit underlying the loans made under the operation of this law the Government can not fall back on its exemption from liability. Oh, it is reserved in this act, you say; but technically and nominally it has the right to declare itself free of liability. But can it? The Government is tied up in the mere declaration of liability in the statute. It is held to it by the very nature of the transaction. The Government itself is the bank, camouflage it as you may under the disguise of subscribing to the stock of a concern where it owns all the stock itself. It might as well come out and do this thing from the Treasury Department and have the credit, instead of skulking behind the dis-guise that takes away not only the title of its responsibility but at the same time conceals from the people the character of

Mr. Chairman, I am perfectly certain that my good friends around me here are far from realizing the true character of this proposal. I know perfectly well that these Democrats would recoil from the idea of tolerating or encouraging a system by which one set of people are despoiled for the benefit of others. They have been very quick to denounce the ship subsidy bill, and I agree with them. This is exactly the same character as the tariff. There is no way by which the Government can interfere in private business except to oppress. can not have a favorite appointed here without having a victim, because the Government has nothing of its own that it can Whatever it offers the farmer it must take from the rest of us. There is no magic source from which these enormous contributions can flow.

Mr. McSWAIN. I would like to know who are the victims of the Federal farm-loan associations.

Mr. COCKRAN. If there be default in these loans, as I believe there will be, we will all be their victims, including the farmers who borrow, because they get no good from having a bankrupt concern on their hands. Do you want to undertake to relieve them from the necessity for and exercise of caution in the enterprise they undertake? You tell them that in some way or other they are entitled to take from the Government to meet the ordinary necessities for productive energy and enterprise, and if there be not such an idea in this measure, then there is no sense in it at all. I appeal to gentlemen on both sides of the House to realize that Government never interferes in private business without disaster, and that disaster is always brought about most rapidly and is of the most extensive character when it interferes with banking. There is nothing on this earth that is not produced by the labor of human hands, nothing that man could hope to possess or enjoy that is not the product of labor exercised on the bosom of the earth or on some product of the earth. Every attempt to enrich man by law means the despoiling of some for the benefit of others. If this be a natural operation of commerce, you need no law, you need no interference of Government. The eagerness of men to supply their capital will supply all that it is safe to lend the farmer. They would never lend him 75 per cent of the value of his flocks and herds, because they know that would be risky, if not making certain disaster to the loan and to the enterprise, but they will lend him all that it is safe to lend him, and that means all that it is safe for him to borrow

The operations of commerce are regulated by laws as fixed as those that control the course of the seasons, and the amount a man may safely borrow is measured by two things. First, by his possessions, what he owns, what he has earned and saved, and second, by his character. When the amount of a loan can be determined by the pull-foregive me for using such a term, but it has a significance well understood-which an ambitious citizen can exercise upon the officers of a public institution, when the course of loans and business is controlled by the favoritism which a pull invites, then there is prepared for you disaster, the extent of which is difficult to measure. We are struggling away back now from a terrible condition. God knows whether the world will succeed in freeing itself from the calamities that are multiplying around it and the dangers that are constantly increasing in its pathway; but if it is to escape, it can be by one way only, and that is by the employment of every pair of human hands in active industry on the soil or some product of the soil. You can not induce the employment of human hands in industry unless you guarantee to every man the peaceful and secure enjoyment of all that he produces. When the day dawns that any number of citizens are taught to believe that there is a more rapid road to prosperity, to wealth, to the possession of capital, than the employment of industry and the exercise of self-denial, and that a more rapid way is through the Treasury by the complaisance or the connivance of politicians, then the knell of this country's prosperity is sounded.

My friends, I have not the slightest idea that having once tasted this blood, those whose appetites are keen can be diverted from the satisfaction of it. But I do implore you in the name of all that we hold sacred, in the name of all that we have achieved, in our hope of prosperity and safety for the future, to pause before you launch the Government to the extent of $600,000,000 into the domain of private industry, where it has never entered without producing extensive and sometimes irreparable injury

Mr. WINGO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman tell us whether he approves of the Federal reserve act?

Mr. COCKRAN. I will state that in many respects I do not. There are many features of it that I think are highly dangerous, and the worst one is that which tends to encourage a man of the high and lofty instincts and mental capabilities of the gentleman from Arkansas not only to support, but to father this proposal of socialism.

The CHAIRMAN, The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

| Quotation from Macaulay's History of England, vol. 4, pp. 402-504.]

"No sooner had banking become a separate and important trade than men began to discuss with earnestness the question whether it would be expedient to erect a national bank. The general opinion seems to have been decidedly in favor of a national bank; nor can we wonder at this, for few were then aware that trade is in general carried on to much more advantage by individuals than by great societies, and banking really is one of those few trades which can be carried on to as much advantage by a great society as by an individual. Two public banks had long been renowned throughout Europe, the Bank of St. George at Genoa, and the Bank of Amsterdam. The immense wealth which was in the keeping of those establishments, the confidence which they inspired, the prosperity which they had created, their stability, tried by panics, by wars, by revolutions, and found proof against all, were favorite topics. The Bank of St. George had nearly completed its third It had begun to receive deposits and to make loans before Columbus had crossed the Atlantic, before Gama had turned the Cape, when a Christian Emperor was reigning at Constantinople, when a Mahomedan Sultan was reigning at Granada, when Florence was a Republic, when Holland obeyed a hereditary prince. All these things had been changed. continents and new oceans had been discovered. The Turk was at Constantinople; the Castilian was at Granada; Florence had its hereditary prince; Holland was a Republic; but the Bank of St. George was still receiving deposits and making loans. That Bank of Amsterdam was little more than 80 years old, but its solvency had stood severe tests. Even in the terrible crisis of 1672-when the whole delta of the Rhine was overrun by the French armies, when the white flags were seen from the top of the Stadthouse-there was one place where, admidst general consternation and confusion, tranquillity and order were still to be found, and that place was the bank.

"Why should not the Bank of London be as great and as durable as the Banks of Genoa and of Amsterdam? Before the end of the reign of Charles the Second several plans were proposed, examined, attacked, and defended. Some pamphleteers maintained that a national bank ought to be under the direction of the King. Others thought that the management ought to be intrusted to the lord mayor, aldermen, and common council of the capital. After the revolution the subject was discussed with an animation before unknown. For, under the influence of liberty, the breed of political projectors multiplied exceedingly. A crowd of plans, some of which resemble the fancies of a child or the dreams of a man in a fever, were pressed on the Government. Preeminently conspicuous among the political mountebanks, whose busy faces were seen every day in the lobby of the House of Commons, where John Briscoe and Hugh Chamberlayne, two projectors worthy to have been members of that academy which Gulliver found at Lagado. These men affirmed that the one cure for every distemper of the State was a land bank. A land bank would work for England miracles such as had never been wrought for Israel, miracles exceeding the heaps of qualis and the daily shower would be full to overflowing. There would be no poor, would be no poor. The income of every landowner There would be no taxes; and yet the exchequer would be doubled. The profits of every merchant would be increased. In short, the island would, to use Briscoe's words, be the paradise of the world. The only losers would be the moneyed men, those worst enemies of the nation, who had done more injury to the gentry and yeomanry than an invading army from France would have had the heart to do.

These blessed effects the land bank was to produce simply by issuing enormous quantities of notes on landed security. The doctrine of the projectors was that every person who had real property ought to have, besides that property, paper money to the full value of that property. Thus, if his estate was worth £2,000, he ought to have his estate and £2,000 in paper Both Briscoe and Chamberlayne treated with the greatest contempt the notion that there could be an overissue of paper as long as there was for every £10 note a piece of land in the country worth £10.

Nobody, they said, would accuse a goldsmith of overissuing as long as his vaults contained guineas and crowns to the full value of all the notes which bore his signature. goldsmith had in his vaults guineas and crowns to the full value of all his paper. And was not a square mile of rich land in Taunton Dean at least as well entitled to be called wealth as a bag of gold or silver? The projectors could not deny that many people had a prejudice in favor of the precious metals, and that, therefore, if the land bank were bound to cash its notes it would very soon stop payment. This difficulty they got over by proposing that the notes should be inconvertible and that everybody should be forced to take them.

The speculations of Chamberlayne on the subject of the currency may possibly find admirers even in our own time. But to his other errors he added an error which began and ended with him. He was fool enough to take it for granted in all his reasonings that the value of an estate varied directly as the duration. He maintained that if the annual income derived from a manor were a thousand pounds, a grant of that manor for 20 years must be worth £20,000 and a grant for a hundred years worth a hundred thousand pounds. If, therefore, the lord of such a manor would pledge it for a hundred years to the land bank, the land bank might on that security instantly issue notes for a hundred thousand pounds. On this subject Chamberlayne was proof to ridicule, to argument, even to arithmetical demonstration. He was reminded that the fee simple of land would not sell for more than 20 years' purchase. To say, therefore, that a term of a hundred years was worth five times as much as a term of 20 years was to say that a term of a hundred years was worth five times the fee simple; in other words, that a hundred was five times infinity. who reasoned thus were refuted by being told that they were usurers, and it should seem that a large number of country gentlemen thought the refutation complete.

"In December, 1693, Chamberlayne laid his plan, in all its naked absurdity, before the Commons, and petitioned to be beard. He confidently undertook to raise £8,000 on every freehold estate of £150 a year which should be brought, as he expressed it, into his land bank, and this without dispossessing the freeholder. All the squires in the House must have known that the fee simple of such an estate would hardly fetch £3,000 in the market. That less than the fee simple of such an estate could, by any device, be made to produce £8,000 would, it might have been thought, have seemed incredible to the most illiterate fox hunter that could be found on the benches. Distress, however, and animosity had made the landed gentlemen credu-lous. They insisted on referring Chamberlayne's plan to a committee, and the committee reported that the plan was practicable and would tend to the benefit of the nation. But by this time the united force of demonstration and derision had begun to produce an effect even on the most ignorant rustics in the House. The report lay unnoticed on the table, and the country was saved from a calamity compared with which the defeat of Landen and the loss of the Smyrna fleet would have been blessings.

"All the projectors of this busy time, however, were not so absurd as Chamberlayne. One among them, William Paterson, was an ingenuous, though not always a judicious speculator. Of his early life little is known except that he was a native of Scotland and that he had been in the West Indies. In what character he had visited the West Indies was a matter about which his contemporaries differed. His friends said that he had been a missionary; his enemies that he had been a buccaneer. He seems to have been gifted by nature with fertile invention and ardent temperament and great powers of persuasion, and to have acquired somewhere in the course of his vagrant life a perfect knowledge of accounts. "This man submitted to the Government, in 1691, a plan of a national bank; and his plan was favorably received both by statesmen and by merchants. But years passed away and nothing was done till in the spring of 1694, it became absolutely necessary to find some new mode of defraying the charges of the war. Then at length the scheme devised by the poor and obscure Scottish adventurer was taken up in earnest by Montague. With Montague was closely allied Michael Godfrey, the brother of that Sir Edmondsbury Godfrey, whose sad and mysterious death had 15 years before produced a terrible outbreak of popular feeling. Michael was one of the ablest, most upright, and most opulent of the merchant princes of London. He was, as might have been suspected from his near connection with the martyr of the Protestant faith, a zealous Whig. Some of his writings are still extant, and prove him to have had a strong and clear mind.

"By these two distinguished men Paterson's scheme was Montague undertook to manage the House of Commons, Godfrey to manage the city. An approving vote was obtained from the committee of ways and means and a bill, the title of which gave occasion to many sarcasms, was laid on the table. It was indeed not easy to guess that a bill, which purported only to impose a new duty on tonnage for the benefit of such persons as should advance money toward carrying on the war, was really a bill creating the greatest commercial institution that the world had ever seen.

"The plan was that twelve hundred thousand pounds should be borrowed by the Government on what was then considered as the moderate interest of 8 per cent. In order to induce capitalists to advance the money promptly on terms so favorable to the public the subscribers were to be incorporated by the name of the governor and company of the Bank of England. The corporation was to have no exclusive privilege, and was to be retricted from trading in anything but bills of exchange, bullion, and forfeited pledges.

"As soon as the plan became generally known a paper war broke out as furious as that between the swearers and the nonswearers, or as that between the Old East India Co. and the New East India Co. The projectors who had failed to gain the ear of the Government fell like madmen on their more fortunate brother. All the goldsmiths and pawnbrokers set up a howl of rage. Some discontented Tories predicted ruin to the monarchy. It was remarkable, they said, that banks and kings had never existed together. Banks were republican institutions. There were flourishing banks at Venice, at Genoa, at Amsterdam, and at Hamburg. But who had ever heard of a Bank of France or a Bank of Spain? Some discontented Whigs, on the other hand, predicted ruin to our liberties. Here, they said, is an instrument of tyranny more formidable than the high commission, than the star chamber, than even the 50,000 soldiers of Oliver. The whole wealth of the nation will be in the hands of the tonnage bank-such was the nickname then in use-and the tonnage bank will be in the hands of the sovereign. The power of the purse, the one great security for all the rights of Englishmen, will be transferred from the House of Commons to the governor and directors of the new com-This last consideration was really of some weight and was allowed to be so by the authors of the bill. A clause was therefore most properly inserted which inhibited the bank from advancing money to the Crown without authority from Parliament. Every infraction of this salutary rule was to be punished by forfeiture of three times the sum advanced; and it was provided that the King should not have power to remit any part of the penalty.
"The plan, thus amended, received the sanction of the Commons more easily than might have been expected from the violence of the adverse clamor. In truth, the Parliament was under duress. Money must be had, and could in no other way be had so easily. What took place when the House had resolved itself into a committee can not be discovered; but, while the Speaker was in the chair, no division took place.

Speaker was in the chair, no division took place.

"The bill, however, was not safe when it reached the Upper House. Some Lords suspected that the plan of a national bank had been devised for the purpose of exalting the moneyed interest at the expense of the landed interest. Others thought that this plan, whether good or bad, ought not to have been submitted to them in such a form. Whether it would be safe to call into existence a body which might one day rule the whole commercial world, and how such a body should be constituted, were questions which ought not to be should be constituted, were questions which ought not to be decided by one branch of the legislature. The Peers ought to be at perfect liberty to examine all the details of the proposed scheme, to suggest amendments, to ask for conferences. It was therefore most unfair that the law establishing the bank should be sent up as part of a law granting supplies to the Crown. The Jacobites entertained some hope that the session would end with a quarrel between the Houses, that the tonnage bill would be lost, and that William would enter on the campaign without money. It was already May, according to the new style. The London season was over, and many noble families had left Covent Garden and Soho Square for their woods and hayfields. But summonses were sent out. There was a violent rush back to town. The benches which had lately been deserted were crowded. The sittings began at an hour unusually early, and were prolonged to an hour unusually late. On the day on which the bill was committed the contest lasted without intermission from 9 in the morning until 6 in the evening. Godolphin was in the chair. Nottingham and Rochester proposed to strike out all the clauses which related to the bank. Something was said about the danger of setting up a gigantic corporation which might soon give law to the King and the three estates of the realm. But the Peers seemed to be most moved by the appeal which was made to them as landlords.

"The whole scheme, it was asserted, was intended to enrich usurers at the expense of the nobility and gentry. Persons who had laid by money would rather put it into the bank than lend it on mortgage at moderate interest. Caermarthen said little or nothing in defense of what was in truth the work of his rivals and enemies. He owned that there were grave objections to the mode in which the Commons had provided for the public service of the year. But would their lordships amend a money bill? Would they engage in a contest of which the end must be that they must either yield or incur the grave responsibility of leaving the channel without a fleet during the summer? This argument prevailed; and on a division the amendment was rejected by 43 votes to 31. A few hours later the bill received the royal assent, and the Parliament was prorogued.

"In the city the success of Montague's plan was complete. It was then at least as difficult to raise a million at 8 per cent as it would now be to raise thirty millions at 4 per cent. It had been supposed that contributions would drop in very slowly, and a considerable time had therefore been allowed by the act. This indulgence was not needed. So popular was the new investment that on the day on which the books were opened £300,000 were subscribed; three hundred thousand more were subscribed during the next 48 hours; and in 10 days, to the delight of all the friends of the Government, it was announced that the list was full. The whole sum which the corporation was bound to lend to the State was paid into the exchequer before the first installment was due. Somers gladly put the great seal to a charter framed in conformity with the terms prescribed by Parliament, and the Bank of England commenced its operations in the house of the Company of Grocers. There during many years directors, secretaries, and clerks might be seen laboring in different parts of one spacious hall. The per-sons employed by the bank were originally only 54. They are The sum paid yearly in salaries amounted at first It now exceeds £210,000. We may, therefore, to only £4,350. fairly infer that the incomes of commercial clerks are, on an average, about three times as large in the reign of Victoria as they were in the reign of William III.

"It soon appeared that Montague had by skillfully availing himself of the financial difficulties of the country rendered an inestimable service to his party. During several generations the Bank of England was emphatically a Whig body. It was Whig not accidentally but necessarily. It must have instantly stopped payment if it had ceased to receive the interest on the sum which it had advanced to the Government, and of that interest James would not have paid one farthing. Seventeen years after the passing of the tonnage bill Addison, in one of his most ingenious and graceful little allegories, described the situation of the great company through which the immense wealth of London was constantly circulating. He saw public credit on her throne in Grocers' Hall, the great charter over her head, the act of settlement full in her view. Her touch turned everything to gold. Behind her seat bags filled with coin were piled up to the ceiling. On her right and on her left the floor was hidden by pyramids of guineas. On a sudden the door flies open. The pretender rushes in, a sponge in one hand, in the other a sword, which he shakes at the act of settlement. The beautiful queen sinks down fainting. The spell by which she has turned all things around her into treasure is broken. The moneybags shrink like pricked bladders. piles of gold pieces are turned into bundles of rags or faggots of wooden tallies. The truth which this parable was meant to convey was constantly present to the minds of the rulers of the bank. So closely was their interest bound up with the interest of the Government that the greater the public danger the more ready were they to come to the rescue. In old times when the treasury was empty, when the taxes came in slowly, and when the pay of the soldiers and sailors was in arrear, it had been necessary for the Chancellor of the Exchequer to go hat in hand up and down Cheapside and Cornhill attended by the lord mayor and by the aldermen and to make up a sum by borrowing a hundred pounds from this hosier and £200 from that ironmonger. Those times were over. The Government, instead of laboriously scooping up supplies from numerous petty sources, could now draw whatever it required from an immense reservoir which all those petty sources kept constantly replenished. It is hardly too much to say that during many years the weight of the bank, which was constantly in the scale of the Whigs, almost counterbalanced the weight of the church, which was as constantly in the scale of the Tories.

"A few minutes after the bill which established the Bank of England had received the royal assent the Parliament was prorogued by the King with a speech in which he warmly thanked the Commons for their liberality. Montague was immediately rewarded for his services with the place of Chancelior of the Exchequer."

[This was Mr. Cockran's last speech. He began at 5.55 p. m. and spoke for about 30 minutes with great vigor and earnestness to a most attentive House. Although he seemed to be in perfect health, he was stricken that night and died early the next day, without having revised his remarks, which are printed as they were delivered.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. LONDON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? Mr. STAFFORD. Reserving the right to object—Mr. LONDON. It is on the subject on which I just spoke. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Craven, its Chief Clerk, announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 14408) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923 and prior fiscal years, to provide for supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, and for other purposes.

AUTHORIZING SALE OF REAL PROPERTY NO LONGER REQUIRED FOR MILITARY PURPOSES.

Mr. McKENZIE. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill S. 4216 with the amendment from the Committee on Military Affairs.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Anderson). The gentleman from Illinois moves to suspend the rules and pass the bill. which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

An act (S. 4216) authorizing the sale of real property no longer required for military purposes.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized to sell or cause to be sold, either in whole or in two or more parts as he may deem best for the interests of the United States, the several tracts or parcels of real property hereinafter designated, or any interest therein or appurtenant thereto, which said tracts or parcels are no longer needed for military purposes, and to execute and deliver in the name of the United States and in its behalf any and all contracts, conveyances, or other instruments necessary to effectuate such sale.

Maine: Fort Baldwin, Sabine Head, Popham Beach; Fort Edgecomb, Edgecomb; Fort Knox, opposite town of Bucksport on the Penobscot River; Fort Machias, Machiasport, about 25 miles west of the Canadian border: Fort McClary, Portsmouth Harbor, opposite Fort Constitution, on Piscataqua River; Fort Popham, Phippsburg, Hunnewells Point, west bank of Kennebec River; St. Georges (Robinsons Point), St. George, eastern side of St. Georges River, Knox County; Sugar Loaf Islands, known as North and South Sugar Loaf Islands, at the entrance to the Kennebec River, near Bath.

New Hampshire: Portsmouth, reservation at, locally known as Sagamore Reservation; Portsmouth gun house.

Massachusetts: Gloucester gun house, Back Street; Salisbury Beach, near mouth of Merrimac River, Salisbury; Fort Standish (old), Saquish Neck, northern entrance to Plymouth Harbor, 4 miles by water from Plymouth.

Rhode Island: Fort Mansfield, Napatree Point, near Watch Hill, Washington County.

Connecticut: Lighthouse Point, East Haven, about 5 miles from New Haven.

New York: Plumb Island Reservation (often called Plumb Beach), near the eastern border of Sheepshead Bay, being part of the east end of Plumb Island, in the town of Gravesend, Kings County; Fort Tyler, Gardiners Point (Gardiners Island), near Sag Harbor, Long Island Sound, Suffolk County.

THIRD CORPS AREA.

Maryland: Fort Armistead, Hawkins Point, Anne Arundel County; Fort Carroll, Sollers Point Flats, in the Patapsco River, about 4 miles from Baltimore; Fort Foote, Roziers Bluff, Prince Georges County, 8 miles below Washington on the left bank of Potomac River. Virginia: Ferry Point, on Elizabeth River, Norfolk County; Fort Nelson, on the Elizabeth River near Mosquito Point, in Norfolk County; Pumping Station reserve, Fort Monroe (Phoebus), about 1 mile from the fort; Fort Powhatan (often called Fort at Hoods), Hoods, south bank of the James River between Wards Creek and Flower de Hundred Creek, in Prince George County; Willoughby Spit Reservation, Willoughby Bay, Norfolk County; Fort Humphreys (approximately 2,000 acres only), on right bank of Potomac River, about 20 miles south of Washington.

FOURTH CORPS AREA.

North Carolina: Beacon Island, Ockrakoke Inlet, an entrance to Pamileo Sound, near the mouth of the Neuse River, Carteret County; Fort Macon, Old Topsail Inlet, 2 miles from Beaufort and Morehead City, Carteret County.

South Carolina: Fort Fremont, St. Helena Island, near Fort Royal, Beaufort County; Fort Winyaw, Blythes Point, at the mouth of Sampit Creek or Georgetown River, Georgetown Harbor, in Georgetown district. Georgia: Americus Air Intermediate Depot and Souther Field. 4 miles north of Americus; Fort Jackson, old (formerly Fort Oglethorpe), Savannah, on west bank of Savannah River, about 1 mile below city; Point Peter, near St. Marys, mouth of St. Marys, River, Camden County, Florida: Chapman Field, near Benson, 14 miles south of Miami; Fort Clinch, on the north end of Amelia Island in Nassau County, 3 miles from Fernandina and 50 miles north of St. Augustine, 500 acres only; balance, 194.5 acres, will be returned to the Department of the Interior; St. Johns Bluff, near Mayport, Duval County.

Loulsiana, Fort Livingston, west end of Grand Terre Island, in the parish of Jefferson, at the entrance of Grand Pass to Barataria Bay, 90 miles south of New Orleans; Fort St. Philip, east bank of the Mississippi River, parish of Plaquemines, nearly opposite Fort Jackson, about 70 miles below New Orleans.

FIFTH CORPS AREA.

Kentucky: Camp Knox surplus areas, Stithton. SEVENTH CORPS AREA.

Minnesota: St. Paul Army Building, Second and Roberts Streets, EIGHTH CORPS AREA.

Texas: Love Field septic tank site, Hawes, 5 miles north of Dallas. NINTH CORPS AREA.

Washington: Lagoon Point, opposite Marrowstone Island, on the east side of Admiralty Inlet, in Island County; Nodule Point, on west side of Admiralty Inlet, in Island County; Nodule Point, on west side of Admiralty Inlet, in Island County; Nodule Point, on west side of Admiralty Inlet, Jefferson County; Port Madison (Agate Passage), on Agate Passage to Port Orchard, Kitsap County.

Utah: Ogden Observatory, Ogden.

SEC. 3. In the disposal of the aforesaid properties the Secretary of War shall in each and every case cause the same to be appraised, either as a whole or in two or more parts, by an appraiser or appraisers to be chosen by him for each tract, and in the making of such appraisal due regard shall be given to the value of any improvements thereon and to the historic interest of any part of said land.

SEC. 4. After such appraisal shall have been made and approved by the Secretary of War, notification of the fact of such appraisal shall be given by the Secretary of War to the governor of the State in which each such tract of land is located, and such State or the county or municipality in which such land is located shall in the order named have the option at any time within six months after the approval of such appraisal to acquire the same, or any part thereof which shall have been separately appraised, upon payment within said period of six months of the appraisal value: Provided, houcever, That the conveyance of said tract of land to such State, county, or municipality shall be upon the condition and limitation that said property shall be limited to use for public-park purposes and upon cessation of such use shall revert to the United States without notice, demand, or action brought.

SEC. 5. Six months after the date of approval of said appraisal, if the option given in section 4 hereof shall not have been completely exercised, the Secretary of War shall sell or cause to be sold each of said properties at public sale, at not less than the appraised value, after advertisement in such manner as may be d

War.

SEC. 7. The expense of appraisal, survey, advertising, and sale shall in each case be paid from the proceeds of the sale, whether made in accordance with section 4 or section 5 of this act, and the net proceeds thereof shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of "Miscellaneous receipts."

SEC. 8. The authority granted by this act shall not repeal any prior legislative authority granted to the Secretary of War to sell or otherwise dispose of lands or property of the United States.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded? Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second. Mr. McKENZIE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that second be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. McKENZIE. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, I shall not take the time of the House to make a speech on this bill other than to say that some two years ago the Committee on Military Affairs of the House of Representatives undertook to have an inventory made of all the real estate under the jurisdiction of the War Department. The work was conducted for months, and finally we got a splendid inventory. After having the inventory made we began to endeavor to have the War Department dispose of all the real estate property no longer necessary for military purposes, and this omnibus bill represents the first installment for sale of property for which the War Department no longer has use. There is one peculiar thing about this bill. It is intended to turn money into the Treasury rather than to take money out of the Treasury, and it provides further that it can not be sold for less than the appraised value, the States and municipalities having the right to buy at the appraised value if they take it within six months.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. McKENZIE. I will.
Mr. BLANTON. What is the appraised value? What is the meaning of that term?

Mr. McKENZIE. Well, the gentleman has been a judge on the bench, he is a good lawyer, and it is unnecessary for me to explain to him what the appraised value of a piece of property is.

Mr. BLANTON. Is that all the distinction the gentleman can make as to appraised value?

Mr. McKENZIE. I think that is sufficient.

Mr. BLANTON. I think the gentleman should reflect on that a little bit.

Mr. McKENZIE. I think I know what the gentleman has in mind, and I can simply say to him that as amended it is provided that the Secretary of War shall have this property appraised, and I think it is fair to assume that the appraisement will be an honest and fair appraisement.

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. May I interrupt the gentleman? Mr. McKENZIE. Yes. Mr. MOORE of Virginia. I wish to ask the gentleman a question simply for the purpose of emphasizing for the consideration hereafter perhaps by the War Department a feature of this matter which I think is important. The bill is framed so as to give the War Department full discretion to sell any tract of land it describes. There is no limitation put upon the War Department in that regard. If the department deals with a tract there, say, of 2,000 acres, it can divide it into two parcels or into a hundred parcels and sell it. I suppose the committee did that to give the local people who may wish to purchase an opportunity?

Mr. McKENZIE. Following the usual custom in selling real estate by order of court if they can sell to better advantage by selling in parcels they can do it that way instead of selling it as whole.

Mr. STAFFORD. Can the gentleman give us an estimate of the amount of property that the War Department proposes to retain as compared with the amount that is no longer needed for War Department or governmental purposes and which they propose to sell?

Mr. McKENZIE. I will say to the gentleman that any estimate I might attempt to give would be a prejudiced one, because I feel that there are thousands and thousands of acres that are still under the control both of the War Department and the Navy Department that ought to be sold, and therefore I can not give the gentleman any definite information as to that.

Mr. STAFFORD. What rule did the committee follow in determining that question? I know it has been agitated for years and years that some of the old, abandoned forts in Ne-braska, for example, ought to be sold, as they are no longer needed.

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. These are just those very things, Mr. GRISP. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. McKENZIE. Yes.

Mr. CRISP. I am very much in favor of this bill, as the gentleman knows. I have no desire to consume any time in the discussion of it. The gentleman has made a motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill. Does his motion embrace any amendments to the bill, or is the bill to be passed just as it was passed by the Senate?

Mr. McKENZIE. My motion was to suspend the rules and pass the bill with the amendment attached thereto, as recommended by the Committee on Military Affairs.

mended by the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. STAFFORD. Does this bill include any of the old abandoned forts out in Nebraska?

Mr. McKENZIE. No.

Mr. STAFFORD. Has the committee considered the sale of any of those old frontier forts which the Military Establishment still has possession of?

Mr. McKENZIE. We certainly have, and we hope to bring in further bills for that purpose.

Mr. STAFFORD. This is a forerunner of authorizations to sell useless property now held by the War Department?

McKENZIE. Yes. That is the policy of the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, this proceeding illustrates the futility of the House trying to pass sane legislation under suspension of the rules in the closing hours of a Congress. may be a wise measure. But under the rules it can not be changed even to the extent of the dotting of an "i" or the crossing of a "t," although there may be great need for making a change in some of these provisions,

We here, in the closing hours of Congress, with just a few Members present, are considering a bill that embraces seven pages of printed matter, providing that in 18 different States 49 pieces of Government property which in the years gone by the people's money has bought and paid for, shall be sold and disposed of. How? The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. McKenzie] says upon its appraised value. I asked him a pertinent I asked him what "appraised value" meant in this question. bill, and he said I knew. I do know what it usually means, But the things that it means to my mind are not provided for in this bill. The usual definition of appraised value is not in this bill.

The bill provides that the Secretary of War shall have somebody appraise the value of the property. It does not direct him to appraise it at its fair market value. It leaves it to some little second lieutenant under the direction of the Secretary of War to go there and say what he thinks it ought to be sold for, irrespective of its fair market value, irrespective of what it ought to be sold for, and what it should bring in the markets of the United States. That is my main objection to the bill.

Is not that a good objection? I submit that question to the business men of this House, as there are a few of them here.

I know there is an attempt to add to our number. I just learned this afternoon some information. Under the law of the State I come from, and of the Nation, Texas is entitled to only 18 Congressmen. Yet the great Governor of the State of Texas has just certified to the Clerk of this House and sent a commission here under the seal of my State that a nineteenth Congressman had been duly elected from Texas. I want the Congressional Record to show that he has been elected to an office that does not exist. There is no such position under the existing law as "Congressman at Large" from the State of Texas, and the gentleman who is seeking to have his name placed on the roll is going to be disappointed, because the Clerk of the House and the Sergeant at Arms will pay no attention to his commission, even though it has been executed by the governor of the State.

But, even if we do not increase our number, it behooves us who are on the job, who have proper commissions from our States, to watch these matters.

I want to submit to you gentlemen this proposition: Do you think we should in the closing hours of this Congress pass an omnibus bill of this kind, to dispose of 49 valuable pieces of Government property in 18 different States, and let the Secretary of War direct some little subofficer under his command to go there and tell him what it should bring without some direction as to how it shall be appraised?

We can not change this bill one letter or by one mark of Under the motion made by my friend from Illinois [Mr. McKenzie] to suspend the rules and pass this bill, we have got to accept it word for word as it is written, punctuation and all. If there should be, as has been the case in many instances, a misspelling of a word, we could not correct that misspelling. If there should be improper punctuation, we could not change it or correct it. If there should be a mistake in the bill, we could not rectify it under this motion to suspend We have to sit here like a cage full of mocking birds the rules. and swallow it with our mouths open, because under the rules of the House we have got to vote it up or down,

There is a majority of 169 Republicans, I am sorry to say, There is a majority of 16st Republicans, I am sorry to say, in this House and the leader can put anything over on the American people he wants to by hollering administration and getting the whip and the assistant whip to get the boys in line and make them vote as he wills. Is it right or is it fair to the American people? I do not blame our distinguished colleague from Michigan, Governor Kelley, for wanting to quit us. He has seen so much of this going on here that he has become disgusted. I wish sometimes I was going with the governor next Sunday.

Mr. CLARKE of New York. The gentleman has got nothing on me.

Mr. TILSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. Yes.

Mr. TILSON. I move to strike out the word "old."

Mr. BLANTON. I am going to attend to that when I come to revise my remarks. I meant old in the sense that he has been here a long time and is onto our ways. [Laughter.] The wise fox is an old fox, and the gentleman from Michigan is

Mr. LOWREY. Would not the gentleman accept the word "bald" instead of "old"?

Mr. BLANTON. No; I will not let that go in. I am going to protect him up to the last minute, because we all like him and are sorry he is going to leave.

But, gentlemen, is it right to take these important matters up at such a time as this? Why do not you recess until to-morrow. Everybody is tired out; we have been working night I understand the Speaker pro tempore is going to recognize Members to suspend the rules and pass numerous just such measures as this is-not for the benefit of the people of the United States. I wish some of you men could find out just what these 49 pieces of property have cost the Government in the aggregate. You would find out possibly that they have cost millions of dollars; that they were hard to acquire; that it took expensive condemnation proceedings to get possession of some of them for the Government. Now we are disposing of them in an omnibus bill in the closing hours of Congress with 20 minutes' debate.

You are going to answer for it and so am I, but I am registering my feeble protest against it now. I am hoping that the steering committee of this House will get together in a few minutes and decide for the people of the United States that we ought to adjourn to-night and get a fresh start to-morrow. We will sit up all night to-morrow if it is necessary. I am thankful for one thing—that the President of the United States has promised to relieve the American people of the weight it is carrying in having Congress in session with a vacation of nine months beginning next Sunday. Thank the Lord, when we are not in session we can not pass any bad legislation.

We will then let the new majority whip, Brother CLARKE, go home and find out what his people are demanding and what they want, so that when he comes back and such measures as this come up for passage, instead of whipping them into line the wrong way, he can whip them into line the right way. He will then be a valuable whip to you and a valuable adjunct to his State and Nation. Gentlemen, that is all I want to say, as I have been trying merely to kill 20 minutes. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Illinois to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

AMENDING THE CHINA ACT.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass House Joint Resolution 455, to amend the China trade act, with an amendment recommended by the Committee on the Judiciary

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 455) to amend the China trade act.

Resolved, etc., That subdivision (b) of section 9 and subdivisions (a) and (b) of section 21 of the China trade act be, and are hereby, amended by striking out the words "resident in China" wherever they occur in said subdivisions.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. BLANTON. I demand a second, unless some one else

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that second may be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Minnesota is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, we passed the China trade act last fall, and since then the Secretary of Commerce has been trying to encourage the creation of corporations under it for the purpose of aiding our trade in China. In that act we sought to relieve to some extent such corporations from the corporation taxes but not of any other tax. It is impossible for our people who seek to engage in that trade to operate successfully in the Chinese business unless they can be put upon an equality with the Europeans who are now engaged in trade there. It is not sought in this act to relieve from the tax the individual; that tax is left exactly the same as if he was incorporated under some other act.

Nor is it to relieve any corporation that may own any of the stock of a corporation formed under this act; it would get no exemption whatever. It is only the individual that owns stock and only income that is relieved at all is from profits derived from business in China itself.

Mr. BLANTON. But the gentleman's bill does do this. It relieves an individual who owns stock from paying the excess profits tax.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. No; it does not do that. He pays both the normal and excess-profits tax, and to prevent anyone from accumulating a fund in China that might be exempt, we in effect provide that the dividend must be paid every year.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. VOLSTEAD. Yes. Mr. BLACK. If this bill does not relieve the corporation from the corporation income tax-

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Oh, no; it relieves the corporation income tax on profits derived wholly from sources in China as to Americans and Chinese and not anyone else.

Mr. BLACK. That is the only tax that this bill is designed to relieve the taxpayer of—that is, the corporation income tax?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Yes; that is all; and not all of that, but only as to income derived from sources in China.

Mr. BLACK. That is what I meant to convey by my question. We will suppose that a citizen owns a certain number of shares of stock in a Chinese corporation, and he gets, for example, $1,000 in dividends. Is he relieved from adding that to his income tax?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Oh, no; he has got to pay the tax on that just the same. The idea is simply this; You can incorporate now, for instance, under the English law or the Japanese law, and, of course, we would get no corporation tax whatever out of such corporation. We simply intend to furnish a means to the American people to carry on their business just the same as though they were incorporated under some foreign law. If you do not grant this exemption, you will not get the tax anyway, because our people will simply incorporate under some foreign law. It does seem to me it would be a decided advantage to us in trying to build up trade in that country to grant this relief. We have tried to make this limitation just as small as we dared to make it, so as to put our people on anything like an equality with foreign corporations. I reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Stafforo].

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, this is a bill that seeks to amend the Dyer China Trade Act, which in its main purpose sought to relieve American citizens doing business in China from the effect of the surtaxes and the excess-profits tax.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Oh, no; it does not relieve them of this.

Mr. STAFFORD. Oh, yes.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Oh, no; it does not.

Mr. STAFFORD. What is the purpose of the Dyer Act except to relieve them of the surtaxes, so that they could engage in this China trade in competition with nationals of other countries who are exempted from the effect of their local income taxes?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. The gentleman is entirely mistaken. There is no such thing in the bill at all. It simply relieves the tax upon the corporation.

Mr. STAFFORD. Am I right in the position that I take that this is an amendment to the Dyer China Trade Act?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Yes. Mr. STAFFORD. Am I right in the position that the Dyer China Trade Act sought to relieve American citizens doing business in China from the payment of the taxes imposed on American citizens doing business in the United States?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. No; the gentleman is not right about that, Mr. STAFFORD. I will leave that to the judgment of the House, because it was bitterly contested here whether we should include in the policy of relieving American citizens from taxation because they were engaged in business in China, where those nationals came in competition with the nationals of other countries, which other countries exempted them from the effect of the tax laws of their own countries.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. The gentleman's statement is entirely too general. It does not relieve the tax on the individual at all.

Mr. STAFFORD. What does the Dyer Act do?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. The Dyer Act simply relieves the tax on the corporations from sources in China as to Chinese and Americans resident in China, and this seeks to strike out the word "resident."

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STAFFORD. Yes.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. Does not the gentleman remember, as I do, that the trouble was that if we taxed a corporation in China they could not get Chinese people and others to join in the corporation, and they were to be relieved? The purpose was to relieve the American citizen.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. The Secretary of the Treasury and the

Mr. VOLSTEAD. The Secretary of the Treasity and the Secretary of Commerce both say that this will not lose the Government one penny of tax, and they ought to know.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, what is the Dyer China Trade Act? What was the condition that it sought to relieve? Great Britain, France, perhaps other countries—but I know those two countries—relieved their nationals who did business in China from the payment of the taxes on profits derived from business arising from trade in China. We saw that condition and wanted to meet that, so as to enable American citizens and capital to go there on an equal plane. We could not expect American capital to compete with foreign capital if the American capital was going to pay a heavier tax.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin has expired.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes more to the gentleman.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, this seems to be a very interesting discussion, and I think we ought to have a quorum

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Alabama makes the point of no quorum.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, under certain representations which have been made to me privately, I withdraw the point.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. STAFFORD. Yes. Mr. FORDNEY. The gentleman is in error when he says that the bill that we passed before, which is now a law, placed our citizens on a level with the citizens of other countries in China.

It does not do that. The citizens of other countries that live, say in England, doing business over there, are treated entirely different from what our people are. Our citizens must be citizens of China in order to receive the benefits of existing law, but an Englishman can live where he pleases and he is exempt.

Mr. STAFFORD. Will the gentleman, who is an expert on tax matters, inform the House what was the purpose of the Dyer China Trade Act?

Mr. FORDNEY. The purpose is to enable citizens of the United States to do business in China on the same principles and the same terms as people of Great Britain do.

Mr. STAFFORD. As to taxation?
Mr. FORDNEY. Yes. Now, the law does not treat them the same.

Mr. STAFFORD. What this bill seeks to do, gentlemen, is that under the Dyer Act it would extend the protection to American citizens and relieve them from the burdens of American taxation if they were engaged in business in China if they are residents of China. This bill seeks to throw the protecting arm of exemption over American citizens who engage in trade in China regardless of whether they are residents there or not, providing their profits arise out of business in China. the principle of this bill. I again repeat, under existing law the only protection of exemption under the original Dyer China Trade Act applies merely to American citizens who are doing business in China and are residents therein. posed to exempt them from the income-tax measure of our country if they are engaged in business there, regardless of whether they are residents there or not.

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. In other words, the corporation and individual, also, become Americans?

Mr. STAFFORD. It is for the purpose of allowing an American corporation, although the stockholders may not be residents of China, to still have the protecting arm of exemption from taxation and be on an equality with those of other Governments. I am in favor of the measure, so, Mr. Chairman, I did not object to this bill yesterday when it was called up under unanimous consent. [Applause.]
Mr. ROSSDALE. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order there is no quorum present. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the point.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, if to-morrow and next day were not the last two days of the congressional experience of our distinguished friend from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY] he would hardly permit this bill to come before the House under a report from the Committee on the Judiciary, because he used to be very jealous of his rights. This bill affects taxation. It seeks to relieve certain Americans living in this country from paying certain taxes.

Mr. FORDNEY. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. BLANTON. I will yield.
Mr. FORDNEY. Brother, let me say to you when the original bill first came up it carried two features, one the taxing feature and the other legislation. There was a question—
Mr. BUANTON. The gentlemen let it go by under protest.

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman let it go by under protest. Mr. FORDNEY. No. Our committee decided to refer the Mr. FORDNEY. whole matter to the Committee on the Judiciary that carried the provisions because they could not be separated.

Mr. BLANTON. The distinguished gentleman then over-looked a very valuable bet. When the China trading act first came before the House some of us then objected to it because we tried to show then that it would let certain Americans escape taxation, and the answer came from our distinguished friends in charge of the bill that it only exempted certain men in China, residents of China, and they then stated that we could not reach them anyway to collect the taxes. That was their excuse—that we could not collect it anyway—and it was just as well to exempt them, because we were not losing anything. But now the Committee on the Judiciary, that has nothing to do with the taxation of the country, comes in with an amendment-

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. BLANTON. In a moment—amending this act, and they seek now to extend the exemption to individuals of this country, and I want to say that is true, and I want to read it from the report. How many of you have seen this bill? None of you.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington, Yes; we have. Mr. BLANTON. Not until about five minutes ago. How many of you have got a copy?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. BLANTON. Oh, the chairman of the Committee on Printing sees everything and knows everything. He is like Pathé.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. No; he does not. But may I suggest that we Members on the Pacific coast, that has a little trade with Japan and foreign countries, trying to increase our foreign trade, are hoping we will not lose what we have got. I have read the bill carefully.

Mr. BLANTON. I can not yield further. Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Thank you. Mr. BLANTON. But I am going to show you by the report that the bill will exempt certain Americans from certain taxes, but when I asked the distinguished chairman of the Judiciary Committee if that was not the case he differed with him.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. If the gentleman will pardon me, it does not exempt the individual from any tax levied against the individual on the individual at all.

Mr. BLANTON. But it exempts American citizens engaged in trade in China from the payment of tax imposed on their business such as other Americans pay on their business, and I am going to show you by their report.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. That is because Hongkong is a world market.

Mr. BLANTON. I hope the gentleman will not interrupt me further. If the Chair will tell me whether I have the floor, or somebody else, I would be glad. I am going to read the report. If we can not depend upon the report and count on what the English language means, how can we consider the bill properly? I tried to get a copy of this bill from the Clerk, but I could not get one. It was not available. Yet the bill is taken up here under suspension of the rule, where it can not be amended, and with 20 minutes of debate. I had to get a copy of the report from the Clerk's desk. This report says:

The amendment sought by this resolution eliminates the requirement contained in section 9 of the act that a majority of the directors and of the officers holding the office of president, treasurer, or secretary must be residents of China, and provides that such majorities must be citizens of the United States. The present law requires that citizens of China and of the United States, to secure the limited exemption from taxes allowed under it, must be residents of China. The resolution eliminates this requirement and allows such exemption to citizens of China and of the United States.

Let me read a little further. I read:

If it is to get the exemption, it must distribute that saving among citizens of the United States and China.

Let me read a little further still:

It does allow exemption on income derived from sources wholly within China to the two classes, American citizens and citizens of China, but it allows no exemption of that tax if the stock is held by a corporation. It is only the individual who can secure any exemption.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. You are not reading that aright.
Mr. BLANTON. Let us see. "It is only the individual that can secure any exemption." In what way have I not read it right?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Read the whole of it.
Mr. BLANTON. That is a sentence by itself, and the gen-Mr. BLANTON. That is a sentence by itself, and the gen-tleman wrote it. He can not deny his own words. It is the handwriting on the wall, and the handwriting some day is going to appear here, Mr. Speaker, on the wall before you, "Mene, mene, tekel upharsin," and you are then going to have to answer the condemnation,

Here is what the distinguished Secretary of Commerce is supposed to have said:

I read from the report: Under the China trade act total exemption is granted, but in order for an individual stockholder to get any share of the special dividend, which is provided in the act and which represents the amount of the corporation income-tax exemption, he must be a bona fide resident of China. This has been found to be a drawback, as the amount of American capital represented by ownership residence in China is comparatively small.

Then they proceed to extend the exemption from such taxation to American citizens.

Mr. RICKETTS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for question?

Mr. BLANTON. Yes; I wish the gentleman's party had as sound judgment on all matters as the gentleman from Ohio himself has. I follow him on very many questions.

Mr. RICKETTS. Who signed that report?

Mr. BLANTON. It purports in the report to be signed by Mr. BLANTON. It purports in the report to be signed by the Secretary of Commerce; but when you get down to the signature, the signature is missing. What became of the signature? I want to ask that question of the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary. That is just an unsigned letter which has come to him from the Secretary of Commerce, but it has not got the words "Herbert Hoover" down there. It is blank where the signature should be inserted. That is exactly the kind of authority our friends have here for most of their legislation-blank authority and blanket bills under blank authority.

As one humble Democrat I am going to meet you Republicans on the hustings next year, and I am going to ask you to answer these questions before the voters of the country. I am going to ask you to render an account respecting this legislation to the people of the United States. You can not do it by continuing to exempt certain persons from taxation. The American people do not mind paying taxes when taxes are equitably distributed among all alike. But when you exempt some in favor of others, in rank discrimination, the people of this country do not like it.

That is what you are doing by this bill. That is what you intended to do by the ship subsidy bill. That is what you have done and attempted to do by other bills. That is what you did by your sugar bills that you passed. That is what you have done by this action and by that action. You take the burdens from the shoulders of the rich and place them upon the shoulders of the poor people who are unable to bear them.

I want to say that the American people are waking up on this question. They are posted. When you go home and go down the main street of your town your constituents are going to surround you, and they are going to ask you questions that you can not answer. They are going to ask you questions that are going to embarrass every one of you. They are going to ask you questions that will make you wish you were back in Washington where you could write evasive letters in reply to their interrogatories. But they are not going to take evasions. They are going to pin you down and have you answer "yes' or "no," and make you explain your action here in Washington. [Applause.]

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, I just want to take a little time to explain this matter. Here is the situation: This does not exempt any individual from tax upon any dividend that he may get. Both the normal tax and the surtax are to be levied just as though this measure did not pass. But, so far as the corporation tax is concerned to the extent that its income is derived from sources in China, an exemption is allowed. These corporations can only be organized for business in China; this permits exemption to the individual person.

Mr. RICKETTS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Yes.

Mr. RICKETTS. Were not these-provisions carried in the original Dyer bill?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. The Dyer bill was a good deal more liberal. Mr. RICKETTS. Were not these provisions eliminated by a vote of the House?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. They were stricken out in the Senate.

Mr. RICKETTS. Did not the House vote on them and elim-

Mr. VOLSTEAD. No. The House passed it, and it was struck out in the Senate, and came back to the House from conference with the present exemption. Here is the situation: Suppose you do not pass this bill. How are you going to get this tax? You will not get this tax at all, because no one is willing to incorporate under the law as it stands.

Only two small concerns have been incorporated. What our people will do is to incorporate under some foreign law. We can not get any tax from a foreign corporation. Mr. RICKETTS. The purpose is to have the American people incorporated under an American law?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Yes; if they incorporate under the British law, it is controlled by English officers, because under the English law the majority of the officers must be English. They do everything they can to encourage English exports. The object is to furnish the American people in China with an in-strumentality by which they can compete with foreign people in that country. The Secretary of the Treasury says that it is his opinion that instead of losing taxes by this exemption we will gain in taxes, and it seems to me that we ought to take the judgment of the Secretary of the Treasury on that point. The Secretary of Commerce is very anxious that something of this kind shall be passed, so that we can secure some of that business. China is a vast, undeveloped country with immense resources just awakening, and it seems to me that we ought to be willing to give our people a chance to compete on equal terms with the foreigner. Mr. Speaker, how much time have I remaining?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman has 12 minutes remaining

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY].

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Speaker, when the Dyer bill was first introduced it carried two features of legislation-one affecting the revenues of the Government and the other the enactment of a law. It was found that the two provisions of that bill could not be separated, and because there was some discussion back and forth as to which of the two committees the bill should go to the Committee on Ways and Means decided to permit the whole matter to be considered by the Committee on the Judi-ciary, and that committee did handle the bill. That is exactly the situation with reference to the bill before us to-night.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. The Committee on the Judiciary then submitted to the Ways and Means Committee the tax provision feature for its recommendation, and did so in this instance.

Mr. FORDNEY. That is correct. The information that came to the Committee on Ways and Means this time before the matter was agreed to be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary is that the existing law does not permit American citizens to be placed upon an equal footing in China with people of other countries, and especially with people of Great Britain, and Great Britain to-day is capturing the trade in China on imported goods. Our beloved friends on the Democratic side, especially the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Blanton], do not be-lieve in a protective tariff for the reason that they believe that it will lessen our exports.

Mr. BRITTEN. Is it not a fact that unless legislation of this kind is enacted most of the American corporations in China now will go under British registry?

Mr. FORDNEY. Absolutely. They will have to do it, but my friend from Texas [Mr. Blanton] does not want a protective tariff for the reason that in his opinion it will interfere with our exports. That is right, is it not?

The gentleman has said so many times here. his action right now will prevent Americans from exporting American goods and selling them in China, but the Republicans want to place American citizens on a plane with the English in disposing of American goods in China.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORDNEY.

Mr. BLANTON. Is that the reason the distinguished gentleman reduced the surtaxes on all of the multimillionaires of the United States?

Mr. FORDNEY. Oh, nonsense.

Mr. BLANTON. That is a hard question.
Mr. FORDNEY. No; it is not. You talk about going out on the platform next year and making it unpleasant for Republicans. Great Scott, man, that is exactly what you would like here. Why are you warning us against mistakes? That That is not what you are after. You are using an argument here that you think will befog the minds of men in this House who want to do the right thing for American citizens. That is what we are here to legislate for. You do not look beyond your nose, my friend, with your free-trade ideas.

Mr. BLANTON. But I am not a free trader.
Mr. FORDNEY. Broaden out a little bit—get a few protective ideas into your head—and then you can deal honestly, justly, and equitably with your citizens, but you can not do it with your limited ideas. The very thing that you want now is exactly what you have been fighting against ever since you have been a Member of this House. Open your eyes and see beyond the limits of your own particular district, which you have the honor to represent, and it is a very great honor for any man to represent a great constituency. I yield back the remainder of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Minnesota to suspend the rules and pass House Joint Resolution 455, as amended.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. BLANTON) there were—ayes 122, noes 22.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote upon the ground that there is no quorum present, and I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Mississippi makes the point of order that there is no quorum present. Evidently there is not. The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will bring in absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were-yeas 160, nays 73, not voting 193, as follows:

Ackerman Anderson Andrew, Mass. Andrews, Nebr. Appleby Aswell Atkeson Barbour Begg Bixler Boies Bond Bowers Britten Burton Butler Campbell, Kans. Campbell, Pa. arter halmers Christopherson Clarke, N. Y. Clouse Cole, Iowa Colton Cooper, Ohio Crisp Curry Dallinger Darrow Dempsey Dupré Dyer Echols Edmonds Elliott Fairchild Faust

Abernethy Bankhead Bell Bland, Va. Blanton Bewling Box Briggs Buchanan Bulwinkle Byrnes, S. C. Byrns, Tenn. Carew Collier Collins Connally, Tex. Cooper, Wis. Davis, Tenn. Deal

Almon Ansorge Arentz Bacharach Barkley Beck Beedy Benham Bird Black Blakeney Bland, Ind. Brand Brennan Brooks, Ill.

YEAS-Favrot
Fitzgerald
Focht
Fordney
Foster
Free
Frothingham
Fuller
Gensman
Gifford
Glynn
Graham, Ill.
Green, Iowa
Greene, Vt.
Griest Kline, Pa. Knutson Knutson Kraus Kreider Lazaro Lea, Calif. Leatherwood Lee, N. Y. Lehlbach Lineberger Lineberger
Luce
McLaughlin, Mich,
McPherson
MaeGregor
MacLafferty
Madden
Magee
Mapes
Michener
Miller
Mills
Mondell
Moore, Ohio
Moorgan
Murphy
Newton, Minn. Griest Hardy, Colo. Haugen Hawley Hayden Hersey Hickey Hicks Hill Hogan Huck Hukriede Hukriede Hull Humphrey, Nebr. Humphreys, Miss. Husted Ireland Newton, Minn. Newton, Mo. Norton Ogden Parker, N. J. Ireland
James Jefferis, Nebr.
Johnson, Wash.
Kearns
Kelley, Mich.
Kelly, Pa.
Kendall Ketcham
Sissel Parker, N. Paul Perkins Perlman Petersen Pringey Radcliffe Raker Ramseyer Ketcha Kissel Rayburn

NAYS—73. Lee, Ga. Logan Lowrey Dominick Doughten Drewry Driver Driver Fields
Fulmer
Garrett, Tenn.
Goldsborough
Griffin
Hammer
Hooker
Jeffers, Ala.
Johnson, Ky.
Jones, Tex.
Kincheloe
Kunz Lyon McDuffie McDume McSwain Mead Moore, Va. Nelsen, J. M. O'Connor Oliver Quin Rankin Ricketts Riordan Rouse Sabath Sandlin Lampert Lankford Larsen, Ga Kunz Sinclair

NOT VOTING-193.

Brooks, Pa.
Brown, Tenn.
Browne, Wis.
Burdick Burke Burtness
Cable
Cannon
Cantrill
Chandler, N. Y.
Chandler, Okla. Clague Clark, Fla. Classon Codd Cole, Ohio

Connolly, Pa. Copley Coughlin Crago Cramton Crowther Cullen Dale Davis, Minn. Denison Dickinson Dowell Drane Dunbar

Dunn

Ellis

Walters
Wason
Watson
Webster
White, Kans.
Williams, Ill.
Williamson
Winslow
Zihlman Smithwick Steagall Sumners, Tex. Taylor, Colo. Ten Eyck Tillman Tucker Turner Tyson Upshaw Vinson Voigt Weaver Wilson Wingo

Reed, N. Y. Reed, W. Va. Rhodes

Sanders, Ind. Scott, Tenn. Shaw

Siegel Sinnott Smith, Idaho

Snell Speaks Stafford Stephens Strong, Pa.

Strong, Pa.
Sweet
Swing
Taylor, N. J.
Temple
Tilson
Timberlake
Tincher
Underhill
Vaile

Vestal Volk Volstead Walters

Roach Robertson Rogers Rossdale

Shreve

Fairfield Fenn Fess Fish Fisher Frear Freeman French Funk Gahn Gallivan Garner Garrett, Tex. Gernerd Gilbert Goodykoontz

5993

Larson, Minn. Lawrence Layton Linthicum Little Park, Ga. Parker, N. Y. Parks, Ark. Patterson, Mo. Patterson, N. J. Gorman Gould Graham, Pa. Greene, Mass. Stevenson Stiness Stoll Strong, Kans. Sullivan Summers, Wash. Linthicum Patterso
London Porter
Longworth Pou Purnell
McArthur Rainey,
McClormick Ransley
McKenzie McLaughlin, Nebr. Riddick
McLaughlin, Nebr. Riddick
McLaughlin, Pa. Robsion
Maloney Rodenbe
Martin Rosenblo
Merritt Rucker
Michaelson Montague Sanders,
Moore, Ill. Sanders,
Morln Schall
Mudd Sears
Nelson, Me. Shelton Hadley Hardy, Tex. Patterson, N Porter Pou Purnell Rainey, Ala. Rainey, Ill. Ransley Reber Tague Taylor, Ark. Taylor, Tenn. Hays Henry Herrick Himes Thomas Thompson Thorpe Tinkham Himes
Hoch
Huddleston
Hudspeth
Hutchinson
Jacoway
Johnson, Miss.
Johnson, S. Dak.
Jones, Pa.
Kahn
Kaller Tinkham
Towner
Towner
Treadway
Ward, N. Y.
Ward, N. C.
Wheeler
White, Me,
Williams, Tex.
Wise
Wood, Ind,
Woodyard
Woodyard
Wright
Wurzbach
Wyant
Yates
Young Riddick Robslon Rodenberg Rose Rosenbloom Rucker Rucker Ryan Sanders, N. Y. Sanders, Tex. Keller Kennedy Kiess Kindred Scott, Mich. Sears King Kirkpatrick Kitchin Mudd Nelson, Me. Nelson, A. P. Nolan O'Brien Oldfield Shelton Sisson Slemp Smith, Mich. Kleczka Kline, N. Y. Knight Kopp Langley Lanham Snyder Sproul Stedman Steenerson Olpp Overstreet Paige

So, two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the joint resolution was passed.

The Clerk announced the following additional pairs:

Until further notice:

Mr. Graham of Pennsylvania with Mr. Woods of Virginia.

Mr. Thompson with Mr. Sisson. Mr. Woodruff with Mr. Tague. Mr. French with Mr. Wright.

Mr. Beck with Mr. London. Mr. Dowell with Mr. Ward of North Carolina. Mr. Cramton with Mr. Rucker.

Mr. Longworth with Mr. Barkley, Mr. Merritt with Mr. Gilbert. Mr. Kless with Mr. Black Mr. Wyant with Mr. Huddleston, Mr. Porter with Mr. Pou. Mr. Coughlin with Mr. Wise.

Mr. Little with Mr. Stevenson. Mr. Fish with Mr. O'Brien. Mr. Bacharach with Mr. Cantrill.

Mr. Young with Mr. Oldfield.

Mr. Wurzbach with Mr. Fisher.

Mr. Greene of Massachusetts with Mr. Hudspeth.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded. The SPEAKER pro tempore. A quorum is present. The Doorkeeper will open the doors.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record on the legislation just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The extension of remarks referred to is here printed in full as follows

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, this resolution should be adopted, as it will improve the China trade act, 1922, in one important particular.

I recently made a trip to China to give study to the China trade act, 1922, in so far as it met the demands for legislation of this character. I find that there are a number of amendments that must be agreed to by the Congress before the law can be workable to the best interests of citizens of the United States. The associated American Chambers of Commerce of China had a committee working upon amendments needed. They submitted a report to me through Mr. Carl L. Seitz, its chairman. The following are their recommendations:

Report of the special committee appointed by the American Chamber of Commerce of Shanghai, China, to consider amendments necessary in the China trade act of 1922 to adapt same to the conditions obtaining in trade in China.

This clause is to be amended as follows:

"The location of its principal office. The corporation shall maintain in the District of Columbia an accredited agent with power to accept service."

EXPLANATION.

It is to be assumed that the purpose of the China trade act is primarily to enable companies to be formed to operate in China under United States Federal laws. This means that the principal offices for the control of the companies' working must exist in China.

It is believed that the purpose of the original working of this clause in the China trade act of 1922 was to have a registered representative within the District of Columbia who would represent the company with such power that the company could be sued there. The clause as amended, therefore, covers this requirement.

SEC. 4(b) 6. (The articles of incorporation shall state)—

"The names and addresses of individuals, a majority of whom are ettizens of the United States and at least one of whom is a resident of the District of Columbia, to be designated by the incorporators, who shall serve as temporary directors:"

This clause is to be amended as follows:

"The names and addresses of individuals, a majority of whom are citizens of the United States, who shall serve as temporary directors:"

EXPLANATION.

EXPLANATION.

EXPLANATION.

The provision of having a resident of the District of Columbia as a director appears unnecessary from a common-sense standpoint and only makes matters more difficult for purposes of incorporation. The act has not clearly put it whether said director in the District of Columbia is to be maintained there always or whether he is only to be considered as a temporary director for purposes of incorporation and thereafter may be dropped from the board of directors, in which case the nomination would be a farce.

As it is desired to have the incorporation laws for operation under the China trade act as simple and clean-cut as possible, it is thought desirable to delete this provision as to a resident director in the District of Columbia as being unessential in the operation of companies under the act.

SEC. 4 (b) 7. (The articles of incorporation shall state)—

"The fact that an amount equal to 25 per cent of the amount of the authorized capital stock has been in good faith subscribed and paid in cash..."

This clause is to be amended as follows:

cash "";
This clause is to be amended as follows:
"The fact that an amount equal to 25 per cent of the amount of the authorized capital stock has been in good faith subscribed and will be paid in cash within 90 days after issue of certificate of incorporation " "";

EXPLANATION.

The requirement under the act that 25 per cent of the capital stock must be paid in cash upon application for incorporation works an unnecessary hardship on incorporators, for the reason that it is expected it may be several months at times before incorporation papers will be granted by the Secretary of Commerce. In the case of a company with a large proposed capital to go into industrial development, it might be difficult to get incorporators to put up a large cash payment before incorporation, when it might not be certain that the Secretary would grant incorporation papers.

Since the working of the China trade act providing for the Secretary would grant incorporation papers.

Since the working of the China trade act providing for the Secretary to be represented by a registrar maintained in China, who will investigate the proposals for any corporation to be formed, and it is assumed that he will accompany any applications referred to Washington with his statements to the Secretary as to opinion of the proposed undertaking and its plan of incorporation it would seem that it can be safely left to the registrar to satisfy himself that if incorporation certificate is granted the capital will be pald in cash within 90 days after issue of certificate for the amount of 25 per cent of the authorized capital stock.

SEC. 5 (c). (The Secretary shall * * issue a certificate of incorporation * * if * * *)—

"He finds that such corporation will aid in developing markets in China for goods produced in the United States."

This clause is to be amended as follows:

"He finds that such corporation will aid in developing trade between China and the United States."

EXPLANATION.

It is obvious that companies may be formed under the China trade act for the development of industrial activities shinning etc. in China for the development of industrial activities shinning etc.

EXPLANATION.

It is obvious that companies may be formed under the China trade act for the development of industrial activities, shipping, etc., in China which will serve only indirectly as a medium for development of markets in China for goods produced in the United States. The Secretary may take a liberal view at pleasure as to the intent of this clause in issuing certificates of incorporation, but it would seem desirable to have it definitely corrected to what should be the phrasing.

It is held that any development in China of trade under the China trade act incorporation laws will undoubtedly help to promote, directly or indirectly, markets in China for goods produced in the United States of America, and that therefore there can be no objection to plainly stating that so long as trade generally is promoted between the United States and China the justification for incorporation under the act exists.

United States and China to, so act exists.

Section 6 (b) reads (a China trade act corporation):

"may have a corporate seal and alter it at pleasure."

This clause is to be amended as follows:

"Shall have a corporate seal registered with the Secretary and may alter it with the approval of the Secretary."

EXPLANATION.

Report of the special committee appointed by the American Chamber of Commerce of Shanghai, China, to consider amendments necessary in the China trade act of 1922 to adapt same to the conditions obtaining in trade in China.

SEC. 4. (a). Strike out the word "five" and substitute in place thereof "three," so that said clause will read: "Three or more individuals (hereinafter in this act referred to as 'incorporators')"

EXPLANATION.

In order to enable companies to be incorporated which practically constitute private partnerships, it is desirable to permit three individuals to incorporate a China trade act company. This would mean that it would be necessary, in order to have a majority of citizens of the United States, that two of the incorporators would have to be Americans and the third might be a Chinese or alien.

SEC. 4 (b) 2. (The articles of incorporation shall state:)

"The location of its principal office, which shall be in the District of Columbia."

EXPLANATION.

In China the seal of a corporation is regarded as highly important in documents connected with contracts, titles, mortgages, etc. The Chinese and set seal of chops of very much more importance than is customary in business in America. It is therefore obviously necessary for a corporation to possess a corporate seal.

It is highly undesirable, and might leave an opening for fraud at times, if a corporation could change its seal at pleasure, and a provision to have the seal of a China trade act corporation registered with the Secretary, and only to be altered with the approval of the Secretary, is characteristic private partnerships, it is desirable to permit three individuals to incorporate a China trade act corporation may then verify name at the office of the Thickes of the Chinese or alien.

SEC. 4 (b) 2. (The articles of incorporation shall state:)

"The location of its principal office, which shall be in the District of China trade act corporation shall be issued at par value only."

This clause is to be amended to read as follows:

"Each share of the original or any subsequent issue of stock of a China trade act corporation shall be issued at not less than par value." EXPLANATION.

It is obvious that corporations under the China trade act may desire to issue stock at above par value, and it would not seem reasonable to have provisions under such act to prevent them from doing so.

Sec. 9 (b). (The by-laws may provide):

"The number, qualifications, and manner of choosing and fixing the tenure of office and compensation of all directors, but the number of such directors shall not be less than three, and a majority of the directors and a majority of the officers holding the office of president, treasurer, or secretary, or a corresponding office, shall be citizens of the United States resident in China:"

This clause is to be amended as follows:

"The number, qualifications, and manner of choosing and fixing the tenure of office and compensation of all directors; but the number of such directors shall not be less than three. The president and a majority of the directors, as also the treasurer or any corresponding officer, shall at their place of residence be persons subject to the laws of the United States."

EXPLANATION.

EXPLANATION.

It is highly desirable that the president and treasurer or equivalent officers of any China corporation under the China trade act shall at their place of residence be persons subject to the laws of the United States in order that companies shall be at all times subject to the control of the United States Court for China, or the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, or the Federal district court of any district in which the corporation may have its principal office. This might not be the case if the president or treasurer or the equivalent officers were Chinese resident in China and sought to evade such control, thereby creating complications which might adversely affect American business generally.

It is also just as desirable that a majority of the directors of a China trade act corporation shall at their place of residence be persons subject to the laws of the United States.

SEC. 10. (a) "Within six months after the issuance of the certificate of incorporation of a China trade act corporation there shall be held a stockholders' meeting either at the principal office or a branch office of the corporation. Such meeting shall be called by a majority of the directors named in the articles of incorporation and each stockholder shall be given at least 90 days' notice of the meeting, either in person or by mail. The holders of two-thirds of the voting shares shall constitute a quorum at such meeting authorized to transact business. At this meeting or an adjourned meeting ihereof a code of by-laws for the corporation shall be adopted by a majority of the voting shares represented at the meeting."

This clause is to be amended to read as follows:

"Within six months after the issuance of the certificate of incorporation of a China trade act corporation there shall be held a stockholders' meeting at the principal office of the corporation. Such meeting shall be called by a majority of the directors mimed in the articles of incorporation, and each stockholder shall be given at least 90 days' notice

EXPLANATION.

ENPLANATION.

It would be highly undesirable to have any stockholders' meeting held at a branch office, as it might result in acts which would possibly injure interests of stockholders and be prejudicial to American business as represented by China trade act corporations.

The provision that two-thirds of the voting shares shall be represented at the first stockholders' meeting to be held under this clause is sound, but it should provide also that if the stockholders themselves can not be present they may be represented by authorized representatives. This is necessary because it is quite conceivable that a company may be formed with one-half of the stock owned in the United States and the other one-half in China, in which case a corporation could not hold a stockholders' meeting with the holders of two-thirds of the voting shares present, and, therefore, provision must be made that they can have authorized representatives at such meeting.

SEC, 12 (a). "For the purposes of this act the fiscal year of a China trade act corporation shall correspond to the calendar year. The corporation shall make and file with the registrar, in such manner and form and at such time as shall be by regulation prescribed, a report of its business for each such fiscal year and of its financial condition at the close of the year. The corporation shall furnish a true copy of the report to each of its stockholders,"

This clause is to be amended by adding after the last word, "stockholders," the words: "duly audited by approved auditors as prescribed by the Secretary."

EXPLANATION.

EXPLANATION.

In the China trade act no provision is made for proper audit of accounts of companies operated thereunder, and it is hardly to be expected that the registrar will have at his disposal machinery whereby he can verify the correctness of accounts published by China trade act companies or statements with him concerning accounts of such companies.

If, however, duly accredited auditors, appropriate the content of the content of panies.

If, however, duly accredited auditors, approved by the Secretary or by the registrar, verify to the correctness of the accounts of the companies, the registrar may in the ordinary course of working be justified in accepting same as bonn fide.

This provision will also serve to deter unscrupulous corporation officials from issuing financial statements which do not represent a true condition of affairs.

Sections 21 to 27, dealing with matters coming under the revenue act of 1921, are so complicated in their provisions as to be practically unworkable from a business standpoint in handling the affairs of any corporation working under the China trade act in China. As expert knowledge of the revenue act of 1921 is necessary in order to formulate amendments, it is simply proposed to put it to Mr. L. C. Dyen to have the clauses amended by experts in Washington, so as to make China trade act companies free of income taxation on profits earned in China.

to have the clauses amended by experts in Washington, so as to make China trade act companies free of income taxation on profits earned in China.

The original provisions in bill H. R. 16043, which were incorporated into bill H. R. 4810, and which passed the House of Representatives on two separate occasions by a considerable majority, contained satisfactory provisions regarding freedom from income taxation. A copy of said provisions is hereto appended.

It is desirable to have these provisions which were passed on the basis of the revenue act of 1918 amended to fit the revenue bill of 1921, but otherwise to endeavor to carry through said provisions as per bill H. R. 4810, section 23.

Features in the phrasing of section 23, H. R. 4810, which need explanation are:

First. The requirement that the corporation shall declare dividends yearly to an amount equal to one-third of net income.

EXPLANATION.

This provision is to prevent injustice being practiced on minority stockholders, who may be Chinese, in that, for instance, a group of business men in the United States might join with Chinese to develop business in China. When such business proves successful, the American stockholders have the majority, control the voting on the basis of "one share one vote," might decide to freeze the minority stockholders out by withholding declaration of dividends, leaving the profits to accumulate in China free of taxation.

This would also be unfair to the interests of the United States Government in that the Treasury would be deprived of the income tax which it should be able to collect from the income paid in the form of dividends to citizens of the United States or to corporations in the United States of America which might hold stock in a China trade act corporations.

In the ordinary working of trade in China it can be considered that corporations wusuly set aside one-third of their profits in good years to meet possible losses during bad periods of trade. About one-third of profits earned, especially in industrial enterprises, are reinvested in improving their plant and equipment, thus leaving approximately one-third of the profits to be paid in cash in dividends to stockholders. It is noted that the minimum requirement is one-third to be paid in dividends out of profits earned and that it is open to companies to declare larger dividends out of profits.

Second. It is provided that less than 5 per cent of gross income of China trade act companies be derived from sources within the United States.

EXPLANATION.

The theory of operation of corporations under the China trade act is that they shall do business in China, and whilst they may have connections or offices or agents in America for the purchase of goods from the United States of America, or other services, the scope of such representation within the United States of America, the hard a China trade act corporation will not be enabled to camonflage as operating in China whilst actually earning its profits in operations in the United States of America, thereby evading payment of income taxation by having the benefit of incorporation under the China trade act. This was the reason for the 5 per cent limitation noted and which was simply taken as an arbitrary permissible percentage of profits earnable in the United States of America on business done.

Third. Under the bill H. R. 4810 there is a very definite provision made that the corporation shall render a correct return to the registrar of its payments of dividends, stating the name and address of each stockholder and number of shares owned by him and the amount of dividends paid to him.

EXPLANATION.

EXPLANATION.

The intention of this provision is that whilst the corporation is freed from paying income tax, it shall be open to the income-tax department of the United States Treasury to obtain from the registrar facts pertaining to dividends paid to stockholders who may be subject to income taxation. Therefore it will lie with the Treasurer to collect income tax due under the revenue act, so far as dividends to American stockholders are concerned.

income tax due under the revenue act, so far as dividends to American stockholders are concerned.

[Extract from bill H. R. 4810, concerning income-tax provisions of the China trade act.]

Sec. 23 (a). That section 231 of the revenue act of 1918 is amended by striking out the period at the end thereof, inserting in lien thereof a semicolon, and adding a new subdivision to read as follows:

"(15) A corporation organized under the China trade act, 1921, but only if and with respect to any taxable year for which (a) it files a return at the time and place provided in section 241, made in the manner provided in section 239, and containing such information as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury may by regulation prescribe; (b) it declares dividends during the taxable year in an amount equal to one-third of its net income, the payment of which not later than 60 days after the close of such taxable year is assured in such manner as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, may require; (c) it derives less than 5 per cent of its gross income from sources within the United States; and (d) the Secretary of Commerce certifies to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue that during the taxable year the corporation in all respects has complied with the provisions of the China trade act, 1921, and regulations made thereunder. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, shall make all regulations made thereonder. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, shall make all regulations mecessary for the determination of such exemption and of the liability of shareholders or members to taxation in respect to dividends paid by such corporation."

(b) Section 1 of the revenue act of 1918 is amended by adding at the end thereof a new paragraph to read as follows:

"A corporation organized under the China trade act, 1921, shall not be deemed to be a follows:

"SEC. 254. That every corporation subject to the tax imposed by this title, every personal-service corporation, and every corporation organized under the China trade act, 1921, shall when required by the commissioner render a correct return, duly verified under oath, of its payments of dividends, stating the name and address of each stockholder, the number of shares owned by him, and the amount of dividends paid to him."

[NOTE.—The sentence in italic, reading "not less than 60 days after the close of such taxable year," is to be deleted, in view of the fact that under the China trade act the business year must end on December 31. In China most business actually is figured to be closed out around Chinese New Year, which is somewhere between the end of January and the middle of February, as a rule. It takes about a month thereafter to wind up accounts of any company operating in China, and usually the annual meeting to pass accounts and declare dividends is held in April/May for the financial year supposedly ending the previous 31st of December.]

Memorandum of suggestions to the Secretary for admendments to the regulations to be observed by the Department of Commerce officials and registrar in China governing corporations in operation under the China trade act, 1922.

the China trade act, 1922.

Whilst various minor alterations will necessarily have to follow in the set of rules which have been drawn up in consequence of amendments which the Hon. L. C. Dyra may succeed in carrying through in the China trade act, it is especially recommended that the Secretary or registrar shall exercise authority in the matter of appointment of auditors for the auditing of accounts of China trade act corporations. In this respect it is suggested that clause 12 (a) of the regulations under item 10 shall be amended by making same read: "Duly audited annual report of companies operating under this act." * * Section 12 (b) to be called 12 (c), and in place thereof section 12 (b), item 11, to read: "The authorization for any auditor to certify accounts of companies filing returns as required under section 12 (a), item 10, shall be approved by the Secretary at Washington, D. C., or by the registrar in China, and such authorization may at any time be revoked."

EXPLANATION.

It is open, therefore, for any qualified auditor or firm of auditors to submit record of their qualifications to the Secretary at Washington or the registrar in China to empower them to audit and certify accounts of China trade act companies.

It is naturally to be expected that such authority will not be unreasonably withheld by the Secretary or the registrar, and that such authority would not be revoked without just cause.

I also had valuable help and suggestions touching my work in China from Mr. Frank Rhea, who is the registrar of the China trade act. He submitted some suggestions, which are as follows:

PROPOSED AMENDMENTS OF THE CHINA TRADE ACT, 1922.

(By Frank Rhea, registrar.)

(By Frank Rhea, registrar.)

While there has been a considerable number of criticisms of the China trade act, after a careful study of the act the writer feels that the law as a piece of initial legislation is really very much better than is generally appreciated, and that the act is along proper lines fundamentally. Further, it is felt that amendments to the act as it now stands should be largely along constructive lines which will keep in mind the two following principal objects:

First. For the purpose of putting American interests engaging in business in China on an equality with other nationals from the standpoint of individual and corporation taxation.

Second. For the purpose of making the act more workable for all classes of corporations engaging in business in China, and thus extending its usefulness and simplifying its enforcement as compared with some of the provisions which, from this standpoint, will entail a handicap on American interests doing business in China.

AMENDMENT NO. 1.

AMENDMENT NO. 1.

SEC. 4 (a). "Three" (instead of "five") or more individuals (hereinafter in this act referred to as "incorporators"). * *

This amendment is desirable to enable smaller concerns to incorporate without taking in unnecessary incorporators who would in many instances be, in effect, dummies. Such an amendment will require only one class of China trade act corporations.

The British corporations are divided into two general classes, one class coming under the Hongkong companies ordinances, which class of companies comes under the control of the British colony of Hongkong. The other class is known as British China companies, and while provision is made for them under the Hongkong companies ordinances they are registered in Shanghal and come under the jurisdiction of the British officials and courts at Shanghal.

In the working of the China trade act we are more interested in the British Orders of Council and the regulations controlling British China companies than we are the working of the Hongkong Ordinance's compandes. British China companies can be divided into three general classes when compared with corporations which are authorized under the China trade act. These are as follows:

1. The larger concerns are known as "public companies," which require seven or more participants and such British China companies may make a public offering of their shares and issue a prospectus therefor.

2. The smaller concerns are known as "private companies," which require 2 but not more than 20 narticipants and such British.

fcr.

2. The smaller concerns are known as "private companies," which require 2 but not more than 20 participants, and such British China companies are not allowed to make public offerings of their shares or to issue a prospectus therefor.

3. Another class of British China companies can be termed "non-profit companies." An example illustrating this class is the incorporating of clubs and other similar institutions to give the members and owners the protection of incorporation.

It is felt, if the China trade act is amended as above, it will take care of to the best advantage various classes of American concerns undertaking to do business in China.

AMENDMENT NO. 2

SEC. 4. (b) * * *. The articles of incorporation shall state—
"(2) The location of its principal office. The corporation shall maintain in the District of Columbia an accredited agent with power to accept legal service."

pt legal service."
Instead of ("which shall be in the District of Columbia").

REASONS FOR AMENDMENT

There may also be China trade act corporations which may find it more advantageous to maintain their principal office in New York, San Francisco, Scattle, or some other place coming under the jurisdiction of American courts. Therefore to make the China trade act the greatest benefit to concerns engaging in business within China such a handicap as requiring such companies to have their principal office in China or the District of Columbia should not be imposed.

AMENDMENT NO. 3

SEC. 4. (b). * The articles of incorporation shall state—
[Note.—The part in brackets and in Italic to be cut out.]
"The names and addresses of individuals, a majority of whom are citizens of the United States [and at least one of whom is a resident of the District of Columbia, to be designated by the incorporators], who shall serve as temporary directors.

REASONS FOR AMENDMENT.

The present reading of the act does not make clear whether this is a temporary requirement for the purpose of incorporation or whether such a director in Washington is to be permanent. In either event no advantage to anyone is attained by a China trade act corporation having its principal office and a resident director in the District of Columbia which can not be attended to by any accredited agent in the District of Columbia which ean not be attended to by any accredited agent in the District of Columbia, but the maintaining of its principal office and a resident director in the District of Columbia would unduly handicap China trade act corporations engaging in business within China in competition with other nationals which are not so restricted by being required to maintain such unnecessary officers and directors.

AMENDMENT NO. 4.

SEC. 4. (b) * * The articles of incorporation shall state—
"(7) The fact that an amount equal to 25 per cent of the amount of the authorized capital stock has been in good faith subscribed and will be paid in cash within 90 days after issue of certificate of incorporation * * *."

REASONS FOR AMENDMENT.

In the development of China trade act corporations it no doubt will be a handicap at times to call for the full payment of the initial capital before completion of incorporation and the issue of a certificate of incorporation. This in instances would make difficult the raising of the initial cash capital. It would mean at times the tieing up of capital for periods before such capital would be needed in the development of the project. This would result in a handicap to American interests competing with other nationals in China. There seems no good reason why regulations could not be promulgated so such an arrangement for the complete payment of the initial capital when permissible could not be fully safeguarded.

In connection with the above suggestion, an alternative arrangement, which in some instances would have considerable advantage to the incorporators, would be the issuing of a preliminary certificate of incorporation, and after the incorporators had compiled with prescribed regulations the final Issue of certificate of incorporation by the secretary would be made conditional on the full payment of the initial capital. This would be particularly advantageous in cases of companies which were reincorporating, necessitating the liquidation of the original corporation, which in some instances may take a considerable period:

AMENDMENT NO. 5.

AMENDMENT NO. 5.

SEC. 5. (c) "The Secretary shall . issue a certificate of incorporation . if . he finds that such corporation will aid in developing trade between China and the United States."

will aid in developing trade between China and the United States."
Instead of—
"he finds that such corporation will aid in developing (markets in China for goods produced in) the United States."
Again referring to the entitlement of the act as "An act to authorize the creation of corporations for the purpose of engaging in business within China" is certainly a much broader aspect than "the development of markets in China for goods produced in the United States."
Some of the other nationals are doing a very considerable variety of business in China, and American interests should be accorded the same opportunity under an equality of opportunity.

AMENDMENT NO. 6.

SEC. 6. (b) Shall have a corporate seal registered with the Secretary and may only alter it with the approval of the Secretary.

Instead of—

"May have a corporate seal and alter it at pleasure."

REASONS FOR AMENDMENT.

A corporation's seal is a matter of importance in properly viseing a corporation's documents. This is particularly the case in transacting business in China. "Chops," as seals are usually called in China, have more importance attached to them than in the United States. It is therefore desirable that a China trade act corporation's seal should not be changed except when the corporation shows valid reasons for such change, and such changes should then be made in accordance with reasonable regulations which can be complied with without any handicap on the corporation's operations.

The regulations for Hongkong ordinance companies and British China companies have the following regulations regarding the use of a company's seal:

"The seal of a company shall not be affixed to any instrument except by the authority of a resolution of the board of directors, and in the presence of at least two directors and of the secretary or such other person as the directors may appoint for the purpose; and those two directors and secretary or other person as aforesaid shall sign every instrument to which the seal of the company is so affixed in their presence."

AMENDMENT NO. 7.

AMENDMENT NO. 7.

SEC. 7. Each share of the original or any subsequent issue of stock of a China trade act corporation shall be issued at not less than par value * *.

REASONS FOR AMENDMENT.

The reason for this amendment is that it is thought to be a proper restriction that a company shall not issue its stock at less than par value, but there appears to be no good reason why a China trade act corporation should not be allowed to sell its stock at a premium if it is able to do so. This may especially apply to concerns already established in China who, it is presumed, will not be allowed to include intangible values such as "good will" or "going concern" in their property-value statements. This, however, brings up the question as to China trade act corporations issuing prospectuses as to sale of their shares. There is no doubt that the issuing of a prospectus of a China trade act corporation for the sale of its shares should conform to reasonable regulations prescribed by the Secretary, as is the case with prospectuses issued by British China companies in connection with the inviting of the public to subscribe for the purchase of their shares. Shares when sold at a premium should, of course, be accounted for in the corporation's balance sheet according to conventional accounting regulations, such as, for example, as prescribed by the Interstate Commerce Commission in their railway accounting regulations.

SEC. 9. (a) The by-laws shall (instead of may) provide:
(b) "The number, qualifications, and manner of choosing and fixing the tenure of office and compensation of all directors; but the number of such directors shall not be less than three, and a majority shall be citizens of the United States. The president and the treasurer or equivalent officer or officers shall be citizens of the United States or shall at their place of residence be persons subject to the laws of the United States."

Instead of—

" a " a, and a majority of the directors (and a majority of the officers holding the office of president, treasurer, or secretary, or a corresponding office, shall be citizens of the United States resident in China:)"

REASONS FOR AMENDMENT.

In my opinion, it is imperative that the head and treasurer of a China trade act corporation, regardless of how the positions may be entitled, be persons amenable to the laws of the United States. This is necessary for the reason that business in China to a great extent is handled by what is known as the No. 1 man. Such No. 1 men dominate and control the policy of such concerns. Therefore it is essential that such officials, together with the treasurer of China trade act corporations, be amenable to the laws of the United States. The point may be made that such positions should be limited to citizens of the United States, but it is felt that this in some instances may be an undue restriction and that with proper regulations and supervision this additional restriction need not prevail.

AMENDMENT NO. 9.

AMENDMENT NO. 9.

-Part in italic to be added, and part in brackets

SEC. 10. (a) [NOTE.—Part in italic to be added, and part in brackets in italic to be eliminated.]

"Within six months after the issuance of the certificate of incorporation" of a China trade act corporation there shall be held a stockholders meeting [cither] at the principal office [or a branch office] of the corporation. Such meeting shall be called by a majority of the directors named in the articles of incorporation, and each stockholder shall be given at least 90 days' notice of the meeting either in person or by mail. The holders of two-thirds of the voting shares, or their authorized representatives, shall constitute a quorum at such meeting [authorized] to transact business. * * *."

REASONS FOR AMENDMENT.

The occasion for this amendment is that the act as it now stands provides that the stockholders' meeting may be held at the principal office or a branch office. It is felt that the stockholders' meeting should be held at the corporation's principal office wherever that may be located.

The law also apparently provides only for voting of stock by actual owners, whereas concerns of the wide holding of stock, which no doubt will prevail in cases with China trade act corporations, will make it extremely difficult to get together at the principal or any other office the actual holders of two-thirds of the voting shares. Therefore it is felt that as a practical working proposition proxy voting of shares should be authorized.

AMENDMENT NO. 10.

AMENDMENT NO. 10.

Sec. 12 (a) " * * . The corporation shall furnish a true copy of the report to each of its stockholders duly audited by approved auditors, as prescribed by the Secretary."

REASONS FOR AMENDMENT.

REASONS FOR AMENDMENT.

The act as it now stands does not provide for the auditing of the annual reports of China trade act corporations. An audit of annual reports is definitely provided for in connection with British China corporations. As pertinent to this situation, attention is called to Treasury Department Order 3408, approved November 2, 1922, and reading in part as follows:

"Every taxpayer carrying on the business of producing, manufacturing, purchasing, or selling any commodities or merchandise, * * * shall for the purpose of determining the amount of income under the revenue act of 1921 keep such permanent books of accounts or reference, including inventories, as are necessary to establish the amount of gross income and deductions, credits, and other information required by an income-tax return * * * of the revenue act of 1921 * * * "."

It is obvious that a China trade act corporation's annual return should be properly audited, but I feel, as registrar, that it would be neither desirable or practical to have this audit a part of my work. An audit in some instances may be inconvenient to China trade act corporations, but with reasonable regulations I do not think would be a sufficient hardship to warrant it not being required. The reports of British China companies are required to be audited by approved accountants who are British subjects. A regulation which would require China trade act corporations. Therefore it is felt that the secretary should be given rather broad authority as to the approval of accountants for auditing annual returns of China trade act corporations.

AMENDMENT NO. 11.

SEC. 21. That section 231 of the revenue act of 1921 is amended by striking out the period at the end thereof, inserting in lieu thereof a semicolon, and adding a new subdivision to read as follows:

"(15) A corporation organized under the China trade act, 1922, but only if and with respect to any taxable year for which (a) it files a return at the time and place provided in section 241, made in the manner provided in section 239, and containing such information as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, may by regulation prescribe; (b) it declares dividends during the taxable year in an amount equal to one-third of its net income the payment of which is assured in such manner as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, may require; (c) it derives less than 5 per cent of its gross income from sources within the United States; and (d) the Secretary of Commerce certifies to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue that during the taxable year the corporation in all respects has compiled with the provisions of the China trade act, 1922, and regulations nade thereunder. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, shall make all regulations necessary for the determination of such exemption, and of the liability of shareholders or members to taxation in respect to dividends paid by such corporation."

If American business in China is to be put on an "equality of opportunity" basis with the business of other nationals, particularly British, this part of the act will have to be amended to relieve China trade act corporations from taxes as corporations on business done within China, as is the case with British China companies.

If the above statement is correct, what is, then, the correct test for immunity from Federal corporation taxes by China trade act corporations to attain the above "equality of opportunity"?

As far as China trade act corporations' immunity from Federal corporation taxes is concerned, this "equality of opportunity" can be attained under the revenue act of 1921 by amending section 231 of that act as above suggested, which is identical with the provisions of House of Representatives bills 4810 and 16043, except part (b) is changed to cut out the part inclosed in brackets and underscored as follows:

"(b) It declares dividends during the taxable year in an amount equal to one-third of its net income the payment of which [not later than 60 days after the close of such taxable year] is assured in such manner as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, may require."

In making the above suggestion I am aware that this amendment would require the regulations for the enforcement of this part of the act to be prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury rather than conforming to the other parts of the China trade act, 1922, putting the regulations in the hands of the Secretary of Commerce. As this part of the law, however, deals directly with Federal taxation, it would no doubt be better that the regulations be prescribed by the Treasury Department to be carried out in cooperation with the Department of Commerce, as was apparently the intent of the framers of this part of the act in House bill 4810. Further, I see no reason why, by proper cooperation between the Treasury Department and the Departme

Sec. 21. (This amendment in reality would be an addition to the act, and no draft is submitted.)

While amendment No. 11 would put China trade act corporations as corporations on an equality with British China companies as corporations, it would not put shareholders, either individuals or corporations, on an equality with shareholders, either individuals or corporations, of British China companies.

If the above is true, then there is a further test needed for "equality of opportunity" as between shareholders of China trade act corporations and shareholders of British China companies. First, it is necessary to determine what immunity from income taxes is accorded shareholders, either individuals or corporations, of British China companies. The liability of shareholders in British China companies to British taxation can be epitomized as follows:

"Shareholders, either individuals or corporations, in British China companies, not resident in the United Kingdom, are not chargeable with income tax on dividends paid by such companies.

"Shareholders in British China companies, individuals or corporations, when resident in the United Kingdom, are chargeable with income tax on dividends paid to them irrespective of whether such dividends be remitted to the United Kingdom or kept elsewhere."

If the above statements are correct, then it would appear that the proper test of incidence of the tax is—

"Where does the recipient reside?" and not "Where are the profits kept?"

In my study during the past two years of what arrangements could

If the above statements are correct, then it would appear the proper test of incidence of the tax is—
"Where does the recipient reside?" and not "Where are the profits kept?"

In my study during the past two years of what arrangements could be made for encouraging American interests to engage in business within China I have become fully convinced of the necessity of, according to American interests, rellef from Federal taxation which would put them on an equality with British interests engaged in business within China. To assure myself, however, that my understanding of the situation was correct, I took the liberty of asking Consul General Cunningham, of Shanghal, to secure for me information from sources to which I knew he had access, regarding the incidence of income tax of British shareholders in China companies, and he answered me in the following cogenity stated summaries:

(a) A British "China" company, not being resident or carrying on business in the United Kingdom is, as a company, not chargeable with income tax on the compony's annual net profit.

(b) British subjects, shareholders in British China companies, not resident in the United Kingdom are not chargeable with income tax on dividends paid by such companies.

(c) British subjects resident in the United Kingdom are chargeable with income tax on dividends paid to them as shareholders in China companies irrespective of whether such dividends be remitted to the United Kingdom or kept elsewhere.

The test of incidence of the tax is, "Where does the recipient reside?" and not "Where are the profits kept?"

It is therefore obvious that if American business interests engaging in business in China are to be put on an equality with British interests engaging in business in China are to be put on an equality with British interests engaging in business for amendment No. 11."

It is felt the statement is warranted that the present revenue act of 1921 already provides that Federal income taxes will be collected from shareholders of China trade-act corporation act corporations and also so that Federal income taxes will not be imposed on the shareholders (individuals or corporations) of China trade-act corporations resident in China.

AMENDMENTS NOS. 13 TO 18.

If amendments equivalent to those suggested by Nos. 11 and 12 are to prevail, then it will be necessary to amend sections 22 to 27 to conform with the China trade act so amended and the various sections of the revenue act of 1921.

In order that it may be plain as to just how the amendments proposed may affect the China Trade Act, 1922, I am including a copy of that law so that those interested may be able to make comparisons in their study of the recommendations herein made:

CHINA TRADE ACT, 1922. [Public-No. 312-67th Cong.]

An act (H. R. 4810) to authorize the creation of corporations for the purpose of engaging in business within China.

Be it enacted, etc., That this act may be cited as the "China trade act, 1922."

DEFINITIONS. SEC. 2. When used in this act, unless the context otherwise indi-

(a) The term "person" includes individual, partnership, corporation, and association;
(b) The term "China" means (1) China, including Manchuria, Thibet, Mongolia, and any territory leased by China to any foreign government; (2) the Crown Colony of Hongkong; and (3) the Province of Macao;
(c) The terms "China trade act corporation" and "corporation"

of Macao;
(c) The terms "China trade act corporation" and "corporation" mean a corporation chartered under the provisions of this act;
(d) The term "Federal district court" means any Federal district court, the United States Court for China, and the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia;
(e) The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Commerce; and
(f) The term "registrar" means the China trade act registrar appointed under section 3.

REGISTRAR.

SEC. 3. The Secretary is authorized to designate as China trade act registrar an officer of the Department of Commerce. The official station of the registrar shall be in China at a place to be designated by the Secretary. All functions vested in the registrar by this act shall be administered by him under the supervision of the Secretary, except that upon appeal to the Secretary, in such manner as he shall by regulation prescribe, any action of the registrar may be affirmed, modified, or set aside by the Secretary as he deems advisable.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION.

SEC. 4. (a) Five or more individuals (hereinafter in this act referred to as "incorporators"), a majority of whom are citizens of the United States, may, as hereinafter in this act provided, form a District of Columbia corporation for the purpose of engaging in business within China.

(b) The incorporators may adopt articles of incorporation which shall be filed with the Secretary at his office in the District of Columbia and may thereupon make application to the Secretary for a certificate of incorporation in such manner and form as shall be by regulation prescribed. The articles of incorporation shall state—

(1) The name of the proposed China trade act corporation, which shall end with the legend "Federal (Inc.) U. S. A.," and which shall not, in the opinion of the Secretary, be likely in any manner to mislead the public; shall end with the legend "Federal (Inc.) U. S. A.," and which shall not, in the opinion of the Secretary, be likely in any manner to mislead the public;

(2) The location of its principal office, which shall be in the District of Columbia;

(3) The particular business in which the corporation is to engage;

(4) The amount of the authorized capital stock, the designation of each class of stock, the terms upon which it is to be issued, and the number and par value of the shares of each class of stock;

(5) The duration of the corporation, which may be for a period of not more than 25 years, but which may, upon application of the corporation and payment of the incorporation fee, be successively extended by the Secretary for like periods;

(6) The names and addresses of individuals, a majority of whom are citizens of the United States and at least one of whom is a resident of the District of Columbia, to be designated by the incorporators, who shall serve as temporary directors; and

(7) The fact that an amount equal to 25 per cent of the amount of the anthorized capital stock has been in good faith subscribed and paid in cash, or, in accordance with the provisions of section 8, in real or personal property which has been placed in the custody of the directors.

(c) A China trade act corporation shall not engage in the business of discounting bills, notes, or other evidences of debt, of receiving deposits, of buying and selling bills of exchange, or of issuing bills, notes, or other form of banking business; nor engage in any other form of banking business; nor engage in any form of insurance business.

SEC. 5. The Secretary shall, upon the filing of such application, issue a certificate of incorporation certifying that the provisions of this act have been complied with and declaring that the incorporators are a body corporate, if (a) an incorporation fee of $100 has been paid him, (b) he finds that the articles of incorporation and statements therein conform to the requirements of, and that the incorporation is authorized by, this act, and (c) he finds that such corporation will aid in developing markets in China for goods produced in the United States. A copy of the articles of incorporation shall be made a part of the certificate of incorporation and printed in full thereon. Any failure, previous to the issuance of the certificate of incorporation, by the incorporation, to conform to any requirement of law which is a condition precedent to such Issuance, may not subsequent thereto be held to invalidate the certificate of incorporation or after the legal status of any act of a China trade act cusporation, except in proceedings instituted by the registrar for the revocation of the certificate of incorporation.

GENERAL POWERS.

SEC. 6. In addition to the powers granted elsewhere in this act, a China trade act corporation—

(a) Shall have the right of succession during the existence of the corporation;

(b) May have a corporate seal and alter it at pleasure;

(c) May sue and be sued;
(d) Shall have the right to transact the business authorized by its articles of incorporation and such further business as is properly connected therewith or necessary and incidental thereto;
(e) May make contracts and incur liabilities;
(f) May acquire and hold real or personal property, necessary to effect the purpose for which it is formed, and dispose of such property when no longer needed for such purposes;
(g) May borrow money and issue its notes, coupon or registered bonds, or other evidences of debt, and secure their payment by a mortgage of its property; and
(h) May establish such branch offices at such places in China as it deems advisable.

SHARES OF STOCK.

SHARES OF STOCK.

SEC. 7. Each share of the original or any subsequent issue of stock of a China trade act corporation shall be issued at par value only, and shall be paid for in cash or in accordance with the provisions of section 8 in real or personal property which has been placed in the custody of the directors. No such share shall be issued until the amount of the par value thereof has been paid the corporation; and when issued, each share shall be held to be full paid and nonassessable; except that if any share is, in violation of this section, issued without the amount of the par value thereof having being paid to the corporation, the holder of such share shall be liable in suits by creditors for the difference between the amount paid for such share and the par value thereof.

SEC. 8. No share of stock of a China trade act corporation shall, for the purposes of section 7 or of paragraph (7) of subdivision (b) of section 4, be held paid in real or personal property unless (1) a certificate describing the property and stating the value at which it is to be received has been filed by the corporation with the Secretary or the registrar in such manner as shall be by regulation prescribed, and a fee to be fixed by the Secretary or the registrar, respectively, to cover the cost of any necessary investigation has been paid, and (2) the Secretary or the registrar, as the case may be, finds and has certified to the corporation that such value is not more than the fair market value of the property.

Sec. 9. The brighter way needs

BY-LAWS.

SEC. 9. The by-laws may provide—

(a) The time, place, manner of calling, giving notice, and conduct of, and determination of a quorum for the meetings, annual or special, of the stockholders or directors;

(b) The number, qualifications, and manner of choosing and fixing the tenure of office and compensation of all directors; but the number of such directors shall be not less than three, and a majority of the directors and a majority of the directors and a majority of the officer holding the office of president, treasurer, or secretary, or a corresponding office, shall be citizens of the United States resident in China; and

(c) The manner of calling for and collecting payments upon shares of stock, the penalties and forfeitures for nonpayment, the preparation of certificates of the shares, the manner of recording their sale or transfer, and the manner of their representation at stockholders' meetings.

STOCKHOLDERS' MEETINGS.

SEC. 10. (a) Within six months after the issuance of the certificate of incorporation of a China trade act corporation there shall be held a steckholders' meeting either at the principal office or a branch office of the corporation. Such meeting shall be called by a majority of the directors named in the articles of incorporation and each stockholder shall be given at least 90 days' notice of the meeting either in person or by mail. The holders of two-thirds of the voting shares shall constitute a quorum at such meeting authorized to transact business. At this meeting or an adjourned meeting thereof a code of bylaws for the corporation shall be adopted by a majority of the voting shares represented at the meeting.

(b) The following questions shall be determined only by the stockholders at a stockholders' meeting:

(1) Adoption of the by-laws;

(2) Amendments to the articles of incorporation or by-laws;

(3) Authorization of the sale of the entire business of the corporation or of an independent branch of such business;

(4) Authorization of the voluntary dissolution of the corporation

and (5)

and

(5) Authorization of application for the extension of the period of duration of the corporation.

(c) The adoption of any such amendment or authorization shall require the approval of at least two-thirds of the voting shares. No amendment to the articles of incorporation or authorization for dissolution or extension shall take effect until (1) the corporation files a certificate with the Secretary stating the action taken, in such manner and form as shall be by regulation prescribed, and (2) such amendment or authorization is found and certified by the Secretary to conform to the requirements of this act.

(d) A certified copy of the by-laws and amendments thereof and of the minutes of all stockholders' meetings of the corporation shall be filed with the registrar.

DIRECTORS.

SEC. 11. The directors designated in the articles of incorporation shall, until their successors take office, direct the exercise of all powers of a China trade act corporation except such as are conferred upon the stockholders by law or by the articles of incorporation or by-laws of the corporation. Thereafter the directors elected in accordance with the by-laws of the corporation shall direct the exercise of all powers of the corporation except such as are so conferred upon the stockholders. In the exercise of such powers the directors may appoint and remove and fix the compensation of such officers and employees of the corporation as they deem advisable.

REPORTS AND INSPECTION OF RECORDS.

REPORTS AND INSPECTION OF RECORDS.

SEC. 12. (a) For the purposes of this act the fiscal year of a China trade act corporation shall correspond to the calendar year. The corporation shall make and file with the registrar, in such manner and form and at such time as shall be by regulation prescribed, a report of its business for each such fiscal year and of its financial condition at the close of the year. The corporation shall furnish a true copy of the report to each of its stockholders.

(b) The registrar shall file with the Secretary copies of all reports, certificates, and certified copies received or issued by the registrar under the provisions of this act. The Secretary shall file with the registrar copies of all applications for a certificate of incorporation and certificates received or issued by the Secretary under the provisions of this act. All such papers shall be kept on record in the offices of the registrar and the Secretary, and shall be available for public inspection under such regulations as may be prescribed.

DIVIDENDS.

Sec. 13. Dividends declared by a China trade act corporation shall be derived wholly from the surplus profits of its business.

REVOCATION OF CERTIFICATE OF INCORPORATION.

SEC. 13. Dividends declared by a China trade act corporation shall be derived wholly from the surplus profits of its business.

REVOCATION OF CREATPICATE OF INCORPORATION.

SEC. 14. The registrar may, in order to ascertain if the affairs of a China trade act corporation are conducted contrary to any provision of this act, or any other law, or any treaty of the United States, or the articles of incorporation. The registrar, whenever he is satisfied that the affairs of any China trade act corporation, investigate the affairs of the corporation. The registrar, whenever he is satisfied that the affairs of any China trade act corporation are or have been so conducted, may institute in the United States of the corporation of the corporation. The court may revoke such certificate if it finds the affairs of such corporation have been so conducted. Pending final decision in the revocation proceedings the court may, at any time, upon application of the registrar or upon its own motion, make such orders in respect to the conduct of the affairs of the corporation as it deems advisable.

Provided the corporation of the registrar or upon its own motion, make such orders in respect to the conduct of the affairs of the corporation as it deems advisable.

In the registrar by this act, he may require, by subpena issued by him or under his direction, (1) the attendance of any witness and the production of any book, paper, document, or other evidence from any place in China at any designated place of hearing in China, or, if the witness is actually resident or temporarily sojourning outside of China, at any designated place of hearing within 50 miles of the contrary of the provided prov

SEC. 17. (a) The Secretary is authorized to make such regulations as may be necessary to carry into effect the functions vested in him or in the registrar by this act.

(b) That the Secretary is authorized to prescribe and fix the amount of such fees (other than the incorporation fee) to be paid him or the registrar for services rendered by the Secretary or the registrar to any person in the administration of the provisions of this act. All fees and penalties paid under this act shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States as miscellaneous receipts.

PENALTIES.

SEC. 18. No stockholder, director, officer, employee, or agent of a China trade act corporation shall make, issue, or publish any statement, written or oral, or advertisement in any form, as to the value or as to the facts affecting the value of stocks, bonds, or other evidences of debt, or as to the financial condition or transactions, or facts affecting such condition or transactions, of such corporation if it has issued or is to issue stocks, bonds, or other evidences of debt, whenever he knows or has reason to believe that any material representation in such statement or advertisement is false. No stockholder, director, officer, employee, or agent of a China trade act corporation shall, if all the authorized capital stock thereof has not been paid in, make, issue, or publish any written statements or advertisement, in any form, stating the amount of the authorized capital stock without also stating as the amount actually paid in a sum not greater than the amount paid in. Any person violating any provisions of this section shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned not more than 10 years, or both.

SEC. 19. No individual, partnership, or association, or corporation not incorporated under this act or under a law of the United States shall engage in business within China under a name in connection with which the legend "Federal Inc. U. S. A." is used. Any person violating this section shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not more than $1,000 for each violation.

JURISDICTION OF SUITS AGAINST CORPORATION.

SEC. 20. That the Federal district courts shall have exclusive original jurisdiction of all suits (except as provided by the act entitled "An act creating a United States court for China and prescribing the jurisdiction thereof," approved June 30, 1906, as amended) to which a China trade act corporation, or a stockholder, director, or officer thereof in his capacity as such, is a party. Suit against the corporation may be brought in the United States Court for China, or in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbla, or in the Federal district court for any district in which the corporation has an agent and is engaged in doing business.

FEDERAL TAXATION.

Sec. 21. Title II of the revenue act of 1921 is amended by adding at the end thereof a new section to read as follows:

"CHINA TRADE ACT CORPORATIONS.

"CHINA TRADE ACT CORPORATIONS.

"Sec. 264. (a) That for the purpose only of the tax imposed by section 230 there shall be allowed, in the case of a corporation organized under the China trade act, 1922, a credit of an amount equal to the proportion of the net income derived from sources within China (determined in a similar manner to that provided in section 217) which the par value of the shares of stock of the corporation owned on the last day of the taxable year by individual citizens of the United States or China resident in China bears to the par value of the whole number of shares of stock of the corporation outstanding on such date: Provided, That in no case shall the amount by which the tax imposed by section 230 is diminished by reason of such credit exceed the amount of the special dividend certified under subdivision (b) of this section.

"(b) Such credit shall not be allowed unless the Secretary of Commerce has certified to the commissioner (1) the amount which, during the year ending on the date of filing the return, the corporation has distributed as a special dividend to or for the benefit of such individuals as on the last day of the taxable year were citizens of the United States or China resident in China and owned shares of stock of the corporation, (2) that such special dividend was in addition to all other amounts, payable or to be payable to such individuals or for their benefit by reason of their interest in the corporation, and (3) that such distribution has been made to or for the benefit of such individuals in proportion to the par value of the shares of stock of the corporation owned by each, except that if the corporation has more than one class of stock, the certificate shall contain a statement that the articles of incorporation provide a method for the apportionment of such special dividend among such individuals, and that the amount certified has been distributed in accordance with the method so provided.

"(c) For the purposes of this section shares of stock of a corporation vided.

"(c) For the purposes of this section shares of stock of a corporation shall be considered to be owned by the person in whom the equitable right to the income from such shares is in good faith vested.

"(d) As used in this section the term 'China' shall have the same meaning as when used in the China trade act, 1922."

SEC 22. Subdivision (b) of section 230 of the revenue act of 1921 is amended to read as follows:

"(b) For each calendar year thereafter 12½ per cent of the amount of the net income in excess of the credits provided in sections 236 and 264."

SEC 23. Subdivision (f) of receive 286.

25. Subdivision (f) of section 238 of the revenue act of 1921 amended by adding after the figures "262" the word and figures is amended by adding after the figures "262" the word and figures "or 264."

SEC 24. Subdivision (c) of section 240 of the revenue act of 1921 is amended by adding at the end thereof a new sentence to read as follows: "A corporation organized under the China trade act, 1922, shall not be deemed to be affiliated with any other corporation within the meaning of this section."

SEC 25. That section 2 of the revenue act of 1921 is amended by adding at the end thereof a new paragraph to read as follows:

"(12) A corporation organized under the China trade act, 1922, shall, for the purposes of this act, be considered a domestic corporation."

shall, for the purposes of this act, be considered a domestic corporation."

Sec. 26. Subdivision (b) of section 213 of the revenue act of 1921 is amended by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (12) thereof and inserting in lieu thereof a semicolon, and by adding after paragraph (12) a new paragraph to read as follows:

"(13) In the case of an individual, amounts distributed as dividends to or for his benefit by a corporation organized under the China trade act, 1922, if, at the time of such distribution, he is a citizen of China resident therein and the equitable right to the income of the shares of stock of the corporation is in good faith vested in him."

Sec. 27. Subdivision (a) of section 216, paragraph (6) of subdivision (a) of section 235, of the revenue act of 1921, are amended by inserting in each after the word and figures "section 262" a comma and the words "and other than a corporation organized under the China trade act, 1922."

PERSENTATION OF RIGHT TO AMEND.

SEC. 28. The Congress of the United States reserves the right to alter, amend, or repeal any provision of this act.

Approved, September 19, 1922.

While my trip to China was primarily in the interest of the China trade act, 1922, other matters were called to my attention by Americans resident in China. I include statements given to me by the American Association of China and the Associated American Chambers of Commerce of China. They are as follows:

THE AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF CHINA, Shanghai, February 6, 1923.

Hon. L. C. Dyer, M. C., Washington, D. C.

Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir: The American Association of China, cooperating with the American Chamber of Commerce, is preparing data on United States consular buildings and property in China, and in the course of a few months this information will be placed before every Senator and every Member of Congress in pamphlet form.

Knowing of your peculiar Interest in American effort in China, we desire to call to your attention certain facts which will be included in this pamphlet. We are sure that the appended information which sets forth the deplorable condition of American consular buildings, the disadvantages under which consular officials labor, and the advantages enjoyed by other powers with diplomatic representation will convince you of the crying need for legislation to provide sufficient funds whereby the United States of America can take her place with other countries. Since you have been in China you have been struck with the inadequate provisions made for our diplomatic representatives. You have seen the disgraceful structures which house our American consular offices.

Since you have been in China you have been struck with the Inadequate provisions made for our diplomatic representatives. You have seen the disgraceful structures which house our American consular offices.

The United States maintains 20 consular stations in China. Of the 20, the buildings which house the staff for 8 stations are a positive disgrace to the richest country in the world. The Japanese, British, and even the German consular representatives are luxuriously housed and have ample property and conveniences for their diplomatic representatives.

There is no need to emphasize to you who have been in contact with the nations of the Orient the impression made on a people such as the Chinese by dignified and imposing consular buildings. Prestige or "face" in the Orient, even more than in the western world, is valued by dollars and cents. The Government's policy of providing no adequate quarters for use in China is as near-sighted from a standpoint of business as of statesmanship. In every old consular district enough money, and in some cases several times enough, has been paid out as would suffice to purchase a strategic site and erect dignified buildings. Shanghai: In Shanghai the Government owns property. The location and the buildings compare favorably with the consulates of other powers in this most important commercial center, but the buildings are so defective that it is very difficult to find anything stable enough to tie in the walls. The brickwork is cracked all over and plastering is falling off, due to a rupture in the main brick wall of the exterior of the building is unsuitable and even unsafe. The building would probably be condemned by the Shanghai municipal building inspector's office as not complying with the city regulations if same came under its inspection and supervision.

Canton: In Canton, the oldest station in China, the consular premises are about the least creditable, whereas American interests are very extensive, and special political considerations exist which make it particularl quarters.

Hankow: The Hankow consular district aggregates an area of 950,000 square miles, equivalent to that of the United States east of the Mississippi River. The population of the district is 90,000,000, or twice that of all South America. The total trade of Hankow in 1920 amounted to $210,000,000, United States currency, and is exceeded only by Shanghai. The consular building in Hankow is quite old and will probably have to be rebuilt soon, as the main walls have become unsafe. The annual rental is gold $3,750, and the lessor pays all the municipal probably have to be rebuilt soon, as the main walls have become unsafe. The annual rental is gold $3,750, and the lessor pays all the municipal taxes.

There are no other suitable quarters that can be rented for the Government's use. The property occupied is the only available one on the water front, and there is no other district where the Government offices could be advantageously situated. Land values have been steadily advancing, and the cost of building and labor is constantly increasing. There are five properties available for purchase, and it would be necessary to erect buildings thereon for offices and residence of staff. We recommend that Congress appropriate $150,000 for a site and buildings in Hankow, in order that we may be represented properly in that city, where, if anywhere, money spent by the Government in upholding the national character will insure good returns. Here, as in other cities, the Chinese often judge the strength, worth, and dignity of a nation by the offices and residences of its representatives.

Tientsin: The large residence and office building occupied by our Government's representative at Tientsin, now under lease to 1930, should be purchased. We have the most creditable and imposing consulate in Thentsin, and if the property was secured it would represent an investment which the United States Government would be fully justified in making.

Hongkong: In Hongkong it is not practicable to have consular offices and the residence of the consul general and his staff in the same building owing to the topography of the island on which it is built. The need here is for a consular building as the residence of the consul general and his staff in the same building owing to the topography of the island on which it is built. The need here is for a consular building as the residence of the consul general suitable sites are available and land and grading would cost $15,000. The building could be erected at a cost of $55,000, Hong-kong currency. The representative of the United States Governme

Amoy: At Amoy purchase of the land just back of the consulate establishment is essential, for, if sold to Chinese, the present consular quarters would become untenable. Purchase of land, now consular quarters, the demolition of the present establishment, and terracing and reconstruction of retaining walls could be done for $35,000 or $40.000 gold.

reconstruction of retaining walls could be done for $35,000 or $40,000 gold.

Foothware at Foothow the present consular premises have been provided as a Art Foothow the present consular premises have been provided as a Art Foothow the present consular premises have been provided as a Art Foothow the present consular premises and or foreign and our fovernment would have done will be a present them, which it could have done up to within a year ago when they were sold to the director general of posts. They must be vacated on the suitable. The best plan would be to buy land and build suitable consular buildings, which could be obtained for $30,000 gold.

A suitable place, provided it could be leased at all, would command a directory money at 5 per cent, and if another 1 per cent could be added for insurance, the investment would be exactly the same as if we rented, which we would still be the owner.

Government live in a low-class Chinese house. The immediate surroundings of the consular eart the most miserable of coole houses consular present live in a low-class Chinese house. The immediate surroundings of the consular terpes premises are owned by Japanese and are rented at a yearly lease. The commissioner of the Chinese and are rented at a yearly lease. The commissioner of the Chinese maritime enstoms, an official ranking below the consular representatives spent for the land upon which it was built. The Japanese consulate spent for the land upon which it was built. The Japanese consulates which will cost 300,000 yen for the building alone. The present incumbent has been able to procure one of its practically impossible to build a foreign house, as the contractors only know native construction. The British, French, and Japanese occupy rented quarters in Chinese-style buildings, and the British and translate plot of ground, as innais a report of the present alvess of the land. Now is the time to spent the procure of the present has purchased an excellent afte, approximately 40 movements and the procure of the prese

THE AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF CHINA. Dr. W. T. FINDLEY, President.

ADDRESS OF MR. J. HAROLD DOLLAR, PRESIDENT OF THE ASSOCIATED AMERICAN CHAMBERS OF COMMERCE OF CHINA, DELIVERED AT A LUNCHEON IN SHANGHAI IN HONOR OF CONGRESSMAN DYER ON JANUARY 17,

Mr. Dollar's speech, in part, was as follows: It is needless for me to say that all commercial interests in China are glad to welcome Mr. DYER back to China. Although we are not residents of Mr. Dyra's home district in St. Louis, we all feel he is really our Representative in Congress, because of the great amount of work which he devoted to the China trade act in our behalf. We are perfectly frank in stating to you, Mr. Dyra, that we do not believe the China trade act could have ever become a law had you not devoted so much of your time and energies to it.

Although the act has not been in force long enough for us to be able to express an expert opinion regarding its workings, we do know that it constitutes the legislative foundation for a new development of American commerce in this part of the world.

It is now more than two years since you were in China, and in view of the fact that you have returned to investigate the American trade situation here, with a view to introducing further legislation in Congress for the development of commerce between this country and the United States, I am sure you will be interested in a brief recital of some of the activities of the American Chamber of Commerce of China.

Last October we held a meeting in Shanghai of representatives of the American Chambers of Commerce of Hankow, Tientsin, and Peking and formed a central organization representing all American commercial interests in China, which is known as the Associated American Chambers of Commerce of China. We hope that this has placed us in a better position to make our voice heard in Washington and in commercial circles in the United States.

Although you come to China with introductions from President Harding, Secretary Hughes, and Secretary Hoover to investigate matters arising under the operation of the China trade act, we are going to take advantage of the great opportunity presented to us by your presence to acquaint you with a number of other matters affecting American business interests at this time.

The first matter that we desire to bring to your attention is the China trade act and to urge upon you the necessity of certain amendments which we believe necessary to make the act of the Shanghai.

The other matters which we desire to bring to your attention arise through the carrying into force of the various treaties and resolutions adopted at the Washington conference. The first is the matter of extraterritoriality. You are probably familiar with the fact that the American Government made a treaty with China several years ago whereby we agreed to relinquish our extraterritorial rights when China has developed a judiciary system which we feel would provide ample protection for American interests. Other nations have similar treaties.

At the Washington conference, a resolution whereby we agreed to reiniquish our extraterritorial rights when China has developed a judiciary system which we feel would provide ample protection for American interests. Other nations have similar treaties.

At the Washington conference a resolution was adopted providing for an international commission of jurists to visit China in the fall of this year for the purpose of making investigations. Since the relinquishment of our extraterritorial rights is a matter of tremendous interest and importance to every American citizen residing and having property in this part of the world, we want to urge upon the administration the importance of sending to China a man of the very highest qualifications in order that he may be both competent and free to make an impartial investigation of this subject, which will carry weight with the American Government.

The next matter which we desire to bring to the attention of the American Government is the special tariff conference which is to be held in China this spring in order to revise the Chinese tariff. Practically all of China's foreign financial obligations are secured upon the revenues of the maritime customs, and as a result the customs is administered largely by European nationals holding the obligations. Since the revision of the tariff will result in China's receiving additional revenue, we believe that this offers an opportunity for placing American obligations and finance in China upon a surer footing than is now the case. For this reason we are also recommending that our Government send to China the strongest possible commission to represent the interests of our merchants upon the conference which will revise the customs revenues.

The Chinese Government, owing to the unsettled political situation, has defaulted upon American loans and obligations for equipment supplied to the extent of probably (Mexican) $50,000,000 or $60,000,000, and unless the United States Government psys closer attention to the situation here we are afraid that American begins and we hope, M

The total amount of the American share of the Boxer Indemnity was approximately $24,000,000, but in 1906 the American Government returned $10,000,000 of this, which China has used in the education of her young men and women in American colleges and universities. This policy, we believe, has been of tremendous benefit both to China and the United States, and for this reason we believe that the balance of the indemnity should be returned to China for educational purposes. We believe, however, that the return of this money should be accompanied by a very definite understanding with the Chinese Government covering the expenditure of the money, possibly under the direction of an American committee in order that we may be assured that it will be used for the purpose intended and not used in military adventures.

We also believe that the return of the balance of the American share of the Boxer indemnity offers an opportunity for the American Government to enter into a definite understanding with the Chinese Government covering American financial obligations in this country, to the end that we may have protection such as that given by China to other outside nations.

Mr. Dyen, as you are probably aware, China is now in a serious condition owing to the unsettled political situation. At the Washington conference friendly nations did everything possible to help China in the organization of a stable government. In addition to the action of the various nations at the conference, the American Government has itself done practically everything possible to assist in the reunification of the country. One special matter in this connection is an American embargo upon the shipment of arms and munitions of war into China. This regulation is being strictly enforced, and we are hoping that other nations will take similar action, to the end that Chinese people may settle their internal affairs in their own way, without outside interference, as speedily as possible.

Our Government also have a well-established policy that no American loans be extended to China for political purposes. This policy meets with the hearty approval of the Chinese people, as well as of the American residents in this country, and we trust our Government will maintain it.

There is a number of other matters which our committee will probmaintain it.

There is a number of other matters which our committee will probably bring to your attention before you leave, but this is sufficient to give you some idea of how we intend to take advantage of your welcome presence here.

In addition to members of the American Chamber of Commerce of Shanghai, we also have present to-day the officers and many of the members of the American Association of China, the oldest American organization in this part of the world. The activities of the American association are along the same lines as those of our own organization except that the chamber is naturally more interested in purely business questions. The two organizations are cooperating fully upon all the matters which we have presented to you to-day.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the timely and interesting subject of lame ducks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Connecticut asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD on the subject of poultry. [Laughter.]

Mr. BLANTON. Reserving the right to object, how many hundred pages will it take in the RECORD?

Mr. TILSON. It will not take more than one.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Speaker, a few days ago this House considered and rejected a bill for the protection of migratory game birds. It was not altogether clear just what was the controlling reason for its rejection, but it may have been because of a gross discrimination against a certain well-known species of migratory game birds. I have read the bill quite carefully and find no reference to "lame ducks." Surely they are migratory, the greatest migration from this region occur-ring about March 4 in each odd year of the calendar, and usually they are quite game.

As a rule no impediment is perceptible in their movements, and to the casual observer they are not readily distinguishable from the rest of the species. They are, however, readily singled out by newspaper sports and other would-be sports, and there is no closed season for them until the last one has disappeared.

Only a few years ago there were occasional isles of safety and other places of refuge from which there seems to be a present tendency to exclude them, so that they now need and deserve more protection than any variety of migratory game birds included in the bird bill.

Politically speaking, a "lame duck" is a person who, while holding an elective office, tries for a reelection and is defeated. Of late years there seems to be growing a decided tendency to regard anyone who has been defeated for reelection as having been weighed in the balance and found wanting; as having been repudiated upon his record and permanently discredited.

As a corollary to this it is assumed that his selection for an appointive position would be a gross impropriety, in effect an affront to the people as a whole, because he has failed to receive a plurality vote of a particular constituency. This theory is built upon the false assumption that the majority is always all-wise and all-good and that the individuals composing the majority cast their votes with complete knowledge and perfect understanding. A bare statement of such a proposition is sufficient refutation of it.

I take the broad ground that failure to receive a reelection has no necessary connection with or relation to qualifications or fitness for the position held or for any other position of public trust. We have only to let our minds run back over the list of those who have failed to secure reelection during our respective terms of service in this House and compare them with their successful competitors to realize that in fully an equal number of instances the one elected is in no wise the superior of the one defeated. Comparisons are said to be odiousberry said they are odorous-so I shall not attempt to furnish instances for comparison, but shall leave that to be done individually by my hearers and am willing to risk my case upon the outcome of such a comparison.

What are the reasons in the vast majority of cases for the defeat of public officials seeking reelection? Let us run over in our minds the cases we are most familiar with and see whether we can not dismiss fully half of them as instances where neither the record nor the qualifications of the one seeking reelection were a controlling factor. Local conditions or a general trend in no wise related to the individual official most concerned will in a very large proportion of cases be found to be

Take the two congressional elections of 1920 and 1922 as In 1920 an unusual number of strong, capable Democratic Members of Congress were defeated for reelection. No one can fairly say that individually they were responsible for it. In most cases they ran ahead of their ticket, Indicating that they were dragged down to defeat by the ticket. We all know that this was true in a great number of cases.

The election of 1922 is almost as good an illustration. There was the usual reaction of an offyear following a landslide. Even more potent were local conditions, where extraneous issues were brought in, which in a large number of cases proved decisive, but which were in no legitimate way connected with the election or rejection of Members of Congress. Again candidates for reelection were defeated in unusual numbers; this time mostly Republicans, for there were few Democrats left in 1920; but an examination of the election returns reveals the very interesting fact that in a large proportion of these cases defeated candidate for Congress received more votes than his ticket, indicating that local conditions and a general trend were decisive against him, in spite of the fact that a substantial number of discriminating voters, by singling him out for an increased vote, recognized the qualifications of the one seeking reelection. It is also obvious that party considerations, regardless of the individual, must always cut a major figure. Ours is a Government by parties. If there is to be the cohesive solidarity so necessary for the effective carrying out of party programs, each individual is but a unit in the party organization and his political fortunes are largely, if not entirely, determined by those of his party. In fact, it may be said generally that the voters themselves, as a rule, do not mean to discredit the individual who fails of reelection.

Assuming, however, that in each case a majority of the voters in each constituency deliberately willed and intended to decide by their votes that a new man should be substituted for the incumbent, do they mean thereby to discredit the latter? By There may be some particular service apparently no means. paramount at the moment which they believe that the new man can perform more effectively than the incumbent. Often the voters are mistaken as to this, and upon coming to realize it often show their regret by reversing their decision at the first opportunity. Often the voters are misled by promises so at variance with any possibility of performance that the successful candidate making them ought to be prosecuted criminally for ebtaining goods under false pretenses. Talk about defeat under such circumstances discrediting a man! The people who prove themselves so gullible as to swallow such bait are the ones who are discredited.

One of the best illustrations of the fact that defeated candidates are not really discredited and that the people in general do not so regard it occurred since some of us have been Members of this House. In all fairness the prize for being the lamest duck that ever swam in the pond should be awarded to my own most distinguished constituent, our present able and beloved Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. By all the absurd rules of the game which are now being taught Mr. Taft should have been considered the most discredited man who ever held high office. After an overwhelming victory in 1908 he ran for a second term in 1912 and received the electoral vote of only 2 small States out of the 48 States. Did the people of the country take the view of it that he was utterly and forever discredited? Emphatically they did not, for they realized the conditions that then prevailed. He was a good sport, taking his defeat philosophically. The result was that from the moment he left the presidential chair no one in America was more loved, honored, and respected or so much in demand as a public speaker as was he, and it was worth more than the price of admission to hear his inimitable chuckle in referring to the decisiveness of his defeat.

The position he had filled was so exalted and his ability so conspicuous that there was no danger of its failing to be recognized, as it has been so signally and deservedly. In the case, however, of less conspicuous public servants, equally faithful and capable in their sphere, there is always grave danger that the silly cry of "lame duck" and the false inference It carries may not only do injury to the one toward whom it is directed, but there is a greater danger that the public interests may suffer even more by being deprived of the services of able men to whom conspicuous previous experience has given superior training and qualifications.

Our history is filled with instances of "lame ducks" not only recovering from their lameness but later soaring to even greater heights of useful service. To mention only a few comparatively recent instances: McKinley was a "lame duck 1890, and elected President in 1896. Grover Cleveland went politically lame in 1888, but was returned to the White House in 1892. Our much revered colleague, Uncle Joe Cannon, who now retires by his own volition, was only slightly interfered with in his record length of distinguished service in this House by two slight attacks of political lameness. beloved former colleague, the late Speaker Clark, died a "lame thus terminating an illustrious record and depriving the country of further notable public service which he would doubtless have rendered had he lived. Does anyone think for a moment that he was discredited by the American people by reason of his defeat in 1920? If so, that person should think again and think more intelligently. Champ Clark will ever stand out as one of the great characters in American history.

It has often been said that republics are ungrateful, and in many cases this doubtless is true; but ingratitude reaches the point of absurd folly as well as cruelty when those who have served the public faithfully and well in high positions of responsibility are singled out, without reason, for exclusion from further public service. Bills of attainder are specifically prohibited by the Constitution of the United States, and yet it is sought to impose some of the pains and penalties of attainder upon those who merely fail, with or without good cause or reason, to receive a plurality of the votes of those who happen to go to the polls on election day. It is not often that I rise to commend the public deeds of former President Wilson, but he deserves commendation for his courage in not permitting the inane cry of "lame duck" to frighten him or prevent the appointment, in the face of adverse verdicts at the polls, of men considered by him as capable.

In our very proper zeal in the defense of the people we should not ascribe to them attributes which none of them would claim for themselves. We need not attempt to deny that the people do make mistakes. If the voice of the people were really the voice of God, the problem of popular government would be solved, but we know that this is not true. If one individual made so preposterous a claim for himself he would be laughed at and his claim regarded as blasphemous. Then why should the voice of one more than half of those who happen to vote at a particular election be deemed divine?

In an absolute monarchy the king can do no wrong, because the might of his word makes it right. In the same way the majority in a popular government is always right, for it is for the time being the court of last resort; but just as history has reversed the decisions of monarchs so the sovereign people of free republics do not wait for history, but frequently reverse themselves, as I have pointed out.

When we consider the many and various reasons which may and do cause the defeat of candidates for reelection, we ought to dismiss once and for all any thought that such candidates have been in any wise discredited or that their qualifications for the position to which they failed of reelection or for any other position of public service have been thereby even brought

The fact is that service in Congress or in any other capacity of grave public responsibility is the best possible training for other public service, whether it be legislative, executive, or judicial. Being elected to high office and performing the duties of that office brings one into vital touch with an ever-widening circle of his fellows, and can not fail to help give him that breadth of vision and of human sympathy that one for the highest and best character of public service.

Realizing the fickleness of political fortune, let us be fair to "lame ducks." So far as those who are so soon to go from among us are concerned, we know that they have served here faithfully and well. As they take their flight our best wishes go with them. We wish for them whatever may be best of their hearts' desire. If it be surcease from the vicissitudes of political conflict, may they have it, and may they enjoy a wellearned rest. If it be to again take up the fight to come back here or soar to higher altitudes of service, we are with them so far as our party affiliations will permit. Everyone must surely admire a "comeback," As they go, those of us who are left all join in wishing for them good health, happiness, and prosperity, with their full share of all the choicest blessings that Heaven may bestow.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Craven, its Chief Clerk, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the following titles:

H. R. 14050. An act to amend the revenue act of 1921 in respect to income tax of nonresident aliens; and

H. R. 13810. An act to continue the improvement of the Mississippi River and for the control of its floods.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the reports of the committees of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses to the bill and joint resolution of the

H. R. 13775. An act to amend the revenue act of 1921 in respect to credits and refunds; and

H. J. Res. 422. Joint resolution permitting the entry free of duty of certain domestic animals which have crossed the boundary line into foreign countries.

AUTHORIZING TRANSFER OF CERTAIN VESSELS FROM THE NAVY, ETC. Mr. BUTLER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill S. 4137.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania moves that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill which the Clerk will report.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a division. I was on EVERAL MEMBERS. Regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair remembers very distinctly the gentleman from Texas did not demand a division.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order there is no quorum present.

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. I make the point of order—— The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas is out of order.

Mr. BLANTON. I appeal from the decision of the Chair. The SPEAKIGR pre tempore. The ayes have it, and the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. TILSON] will take the chair.

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill S. 4137, with Mr. Tilson in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole

House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the Senate bill-

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman-

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman from Texas rise?

Mr. BLANTON. I rise to a question of constitutional privilege. I guess I was about as loud as the Chair was.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman can not raise that question in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BUTLER].

Mr. BLANTON. I make the point of order there is no quorum present.

The CHAIRMAN. It is perfectly evident there is a quorum present.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. Chairman, I would ask the Clerk to read.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 4137) to authorize the transfer of certain vessels from a Navy to the Coast Guard.

MARINE BAND.

MARINE BAND.

Sec. 14. That the band of the United States Marine Corps shall consist of one leader, whose pay and allowances shall be those of a captain in the Marine Corps; one second leader, whose pay shall be $200 per month and who shall have the allowances of a sergeant major; 10 principal musicians, whose pay shall be $150 per month; 25 first-class musicians, whose pay shall be $125 per month; 20 second-class musicians, whose pay shall be $120 per month; and 10 third-class musicians, whose pay shall be $55 per month; such musicians of the band to have the allowances of a sergeant: Provided, That the second leader and musicians of the band shall receive the same increases for length of service and the same enlistment allowance or gratuity for reenlisting as is now or may hereafter be provided for other enlisted men of the Marine Corps: Provided further, That the pay authorized herein for the second leader and the musicians of the band shall be effective from July 1, 1922, and shall apply in computing the pay of former members of the band now on the retired list: Provided further, That in the event of promotion of the second leader or a musician of the band to leader of the band, or both, shall be counted in computing longevity increase in pay: And provided further, That hereafter during concert tours approved by the President, members of the Marine Band shall suffer no loss of allowances.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the When we passed the Army pay bill that adjusted the pay, not only of the Army, but the Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Geodetic and Coast Survey, and Health Service, it was the intention of Congress that the salaries so fixed should remain fixed for a considerable length of time and that there should be the same rate of pay in all those respective services. This is the first attempt apparently that is being made to change the pay as laid down in the Army and Navy pay bill. Prior to the enactment of that measure there had been different rates of pay in the respective services, and one of the main purposes accomplished by the joint committee that brought in this Congress the reorganization pay bill was to have harmony in all the respective services for the same character of work. Now, in this omnibus naval affairs bill we have the first attempt to invade the Army and Navy pay bill by singling out the Marine Band for preferential consideration, giving them higher salaries than what the pay bill provides, which would be a warrant for the band of the Military Academy or a warrant for any band in the Army to have increases. Now, I think that is bad practice, and I do not think it should be followed.

Mr. DARROW. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STAFFORD. I will yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. DARROW. When the joint committee was considering the pay bill they put a proviso in there "that nothing in this act shall operate to change in any way the existing laws or regulations made in pursuance of law giving pay and allowances to the Marine Band," the object being to keep their pay exactly as it was. Under a ruling of the comptroller certain allowances which they have been receiving were taken away from them, and this provision is simply to restore the band to the same pay, practically, they were receiving.

Mr. STAFFORD. Oh, this provision goes further. It does not say, as the pay bill provided, that no salary of any officer should be reduced from that which he was then receiving. That was fundamental. It was also fundamental to the pay bill. Now you are attempting to change for all time the salaries of these respective officers of the Marine Band.
Mr. BUTLER. No.
Mr. DARROW. I will say—
Mr. BUTLER. We are rewriting the law in order to get away from a decision of the comptroller that took pay from this band, and it was specially written in the law referred to that nothing in this act shall operate to change existing laws or regulations made in pursuance of law governing the pay and allowances of the Marine Band. I think the Committee should pass this; that will save $85 a year.

Mr. STAFFORD. I would like to have some mathematician from the Committee on Naval Affairs to explain how you are going to save $85 a year when you are going to increase the pay of the second leader to $200 a month and 10 principal musicians to $150 per month and 25 first-class musicians to $125 per month and 20 second-class musicians to $100 a month.

Mr. DARROW. They are going to save $85.66 a month.
Mr. BRITTEN. The gentleman in his opening remarks referred to the pay bill of June 10, 1922. Of course, that pay bill established certain salaries throughout the Army and Navy-and Marine Corps, but the comptroller's decision, rendered directly thereafter, reduced the pay of musicians in the Marine Band. This merely restores the pay they had prior to June 10, 1922, with the exception of $85. There is nothing in the act that was intended to reduce their pay, but the comptroller's decision reduced it.

Mr. STAFFORD. This is to apply not only to those who are now in the band, but those who succeed in the service will receive the pay as here established. This bill provides for all time, not for the respective men only now holding the positions.

Mr. DARROW. Mr. Chairman, this provision is simply intended to restore to the band the pay that its members were receiving prior to the passage of the act of June 10, 1922. However, as a matter of fact, it reduced their pay $85.66 per month.

These losses could only be made up in two ways: First, by a law to restore, item by item, the compensation lost to the members of the band through faults in previous laws; second, by a fixing of absolutely new rates and pay for the members of the band. Of the two methods, it seems best to adopt the latter. Accordingly, a law was drafted fixing new basic rates of pay and providing for increases of pay for length of service. In fixing the basic rates the following points were kept in mind: First, to provide a basic rate of pay which with longevity increase would be about the same musicians can earn in civil life; and, second, to bring the pay up to about the same as the band was receiving prior to the passage of the act of June 10.

Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto be now closed.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania moves that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto be now closed.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I offer to amend that.

Mr. STAFFORD. I offer to amend it and make it 10 minutes. The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Wisconsin moves to amend the motion to close debate in 10 minutes. The question is on agreeing to the amendment to the motion.

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the motion as amended

The motion as amended was agreed to.
Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, I move to amend the bill by striking out the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas moves to strike out the paragraph.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, it does not make any difference what we have been paying to this band. The question that vitally concerns us and the American people to-night is, that vitally concerns us and the American people to-night is, What are we providing for in this bill as to their pay? I want to call attention to the provisions of the bill. We provide a Marine Band of 67 men. The leader gets the same compensation as a captain in the Marine Corps. How much is that? Why do they not put it in the bill? He gets $3,600, at least, and maybe $4,000 a year. That is what he gets. The assistant gets $200 per month, with the allowances of a sergeant major in addition. There are 10 principal musicians, who get $150 per month: 25 first-class musicians who get $125 per month. per month; 25 first-class musicians, who get $125 per month; 20 second-class musicians, who get $100 per month; and 10 third-class musicians, who get $85 a month.

That is what we are providing for in this bill.

What is the service that they render to your constituents and mine? I know. In a few days, when springtime comes, every Wednesday afternoon in front of the Capitol, all during the summer months, they will render pleasant concerts for your ears and mine, and for the ears of the Senators and their friends, and for the ears of the favored citizens of Washington. That is what they will do for us once a week. Then the state receptions come. They furnish splendid music on the White House lawn and they furnish music at other state entertainments.

I know there is a disposition to say, "Blanton, you are rather close when you object to that." There are fine bands in every State in the Union; but they are not kept up by the

Mr. ROSSDALE. Will the gentleman yield? Mr. BLANTON Not now. I want to say this, that the taxpayers of this Nation ought not to maintain anything from which they themselves do not derive some benefit. Tell me what benefit your constituents at home receive from this band?

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? Mr. BLANTON. If the gentleman can tell us what benefit his constituents receive I will yield.

Mr. FOSTER. My constituents received great benefit when this band participated in the burial of the unknown soldier.

Mr. BLANTON. Oh, I would not unload that on the unknown soldier. There is more money wasted, there is more money misspent, there is more money needlessly taken out of the people's Treasury in the name of patriotism and in the name of our soldiers in the country than almost anything else. Why do you not come out and say, "We want these concerts"? Why do not you come out and say, "It is a diversion"? Why do you not come out and say, "It is pleasant to our ears"? Why do you not come out and say, "We want it and we are going to take it and make the Government pay for it "?

Mr. MacLAFFERTY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON.

Mr. MacLAFFERTY. Do you not think we are all getting nervous on the last day of the session? [Laughter.]

Mr. BLANTON. I am trying to keep from getting nervous. I have been working for about 18 hours out of every 24 for the last two weeks.

Mr. MADDEN. Then why do you not go home and go to bed and get a rest? [Laughter.]
Mr. BLANTON. Because I want to stay here and watch you fellows. I want the distinguished gentleman from California, who was the famous three-minute man on the western coast, to go home and tell his people that when he and his friends were in Washington they heard the pleasant strains coming in through the front windows of the Capitol every summer's Wednesday, for which they paid this money of the people, and ask them if they believe in it.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. Chairman, I am not particularly fond of music. This band is as old as the Republic. It is the leading band in America, and provides music for every American whether he likes music or not. [Applause.] This is the band of the Republic that attends any concert or function to which it is invited, whether North or South. It belongs to us all alike and we are proud of it. When the pay bill was written we saw to it that provision was made that the salary of the members of that band would not be disturbed, for the reason that we had deprived them of going out and making money on the side playing for concerts and parties. It was written in the pay bill that nothing therein should operate to change in any way the then existing law governing the pay and allowance of the Marine Band.

The comptroller held for some reason or other, construing the acts of Congress, that the pay of the bandsmen should be reduced, and practically the pay has been cut in two. There is nothing in this bill except to restore the pay as it was before the passage of the law except that in the aggregate the pay of the bandsmen is about $85 per month. The whole scheme is laid out here in this pamphlet and anyone can find the details in the hearings if he wishes to know all the facts. It is the pay that they have had for years, and all we wish to do is to restore to this famous musical company the salary that they had prior to the joint military services pay act.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired. All time has expired. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected. The Clerk read as follows:

TEMPORARY RANK.

SEC. 15. That all officers of the Navy and Marine Corps who while holding temporary rank were examined for retirement and found physically incapacitated in the line of duty, and whose temporary appointments were revoked, shall, in all cases where the department has recalled and canceled the letter revoking the temporary appointment, be considered as having been retired in the temporary rank held by them at the time of examination by the retiring board, and shall be entitled to pay on the retired list computed on the pay of such temporary rank from the day their retirement was effective.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. Chairman, we have discovered, or the Naval Affairs Committee has discovered, after making an examination, that there is some doubt as to the wisdom of this section, and, not to impose on the committee, we are going to move to have it stricken from the bill, so that a further examination may be made. We do not know what it may lead to, and therefore I move to strike it out.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment,

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 16, strike out section 15.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to. The Clerk read as follows:

REIMBURSEMENT TO CERTAIN FIRMS, ASSOCIATIONS, AND CORPORATIONS FOR MONEY ADVANCED.

SEC. 17. That the Paymaster General of the Navy is hereby authorized, in his discretion, to make reimbursement to any individual, firm, association, company, or corporation for money advanced on behalf of the Government during the late war to any officer or enlisted man of the naval service on account of pay, if upon presentation of evidence satisfactory to himself it is established that such individual, firm, association, company, or corporation has not heretofore received reimbursement in any way for the money so advanced: Provided, That the total amount for the purpose of reimbursement shall not exceed the sum of $35,000. sum of $35,000.

Mr. KRAUS. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amend-

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 18, at the end of line 9, change the period to a colon and add the following: "Provided further, That any amounts thus allowed shall be payable from the appropriation for pay of the Navy granted at the time of settlement."

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I understand that, heretofore, they credit the account to pay officers where they disburse money not authorized by law; but what does this seek to do?

Mr. KRAUS. This does not seek to credit the account of pay officers. By referring to the hearings gentlemen will observe that something over 200 vessels, commercial vessels, had radio operators and gun crews assigned to them; these men were separated from their regular organization. During that period under instructions from the Navy Department—informal in-structions—these men from time to time were given small amounts of money as a part of their pay. I think there were 160 vessels of the Shipping Board that made small advances. More than 90 per cent of the amount will go to the Shipping Board to reimburse for expenditures made by captains of its Mr. STAFFORD. Now that the gentleman has stated the real purpose I recall the report that justifies my opinion of this provision.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to. The Clerk read as follows:

TRAINING DUTY, NAVAL RESERVE FORCE.

SEC. 18. That officers and men of the Naval Reserve who may, upon their own application, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Navy may prescribe, perform training duty for periods of less than 15 days each, may be furnished subsistence in kind or commutation therefor at the rate fixed by law.

That enrolled men of the Naval Reserve may hereafter, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Navy, be confirmed in the lowest enlisted ratings of the naval service without first performing the minimum amount of active service required in the act approved August 29, 1916, entitled "An act making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, and for other purposes."

Mr. CHINDBLOM. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. CHINDBLOM: After the last paragraph add a paragraph to read as follows:

"That on and after July 1, 1922, the retainer pay of all men who were on that day transferred members of the Fleet Naval Reserve or the Fleet Marine Corps Reserves shall be computed on rates of pay authorized for enlisted men of the naval service by the act approved June 10, 1922: Provided, That the retainer pay of such reservists shall be not less than that to which they were entitled on June 30, 1922, under decisions of the Comptroller of the Treasury in force on that day." that day.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order on the amendment.

Mr. CHINDBLOM, Mr. Chairman, by the act of June 10, 1922, the pay bill for the Army, the Navy, the Marine Corps, the Coast Guard, and so forth, it was provided that nothing contained therein should operate to reduce the pay then being paid to any transferred member of the Fleet Naval Reserve, On that day, June 10, 1922, and on July 1, 1922, when that act went into effect, the transferred members of the Fleet Naval Reserve were getting certain pay, which for a long time had been approved by the Comptroller of the Treasury as well as the Comptroller General's office. Subsequent to July 1, 1922, the Comptroller General, in an opinion to the Secretary of the Navy, held that there had been errors in the prior holdings of the Comptroller of the Treasury. The Comptroller of the Treasury had been passing the payments, and notwithstanding this provision in the act of June 10, 1922, these transferred members of the Fleet Naval Reserve found their pay cut down approximately 25 to 33 per cent. Great hardship was worked, and the persons thus affected have appealed to the Naval Affairs Committee as well as to other Members of Congress. Chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs is thoroughly familiar with the subject, and he tells me that he believes the proposition is meritorious.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. Chairman, the effect of this provision is exactly the same as that with respect to the Marine Band. It was expressly provided in this pay bill that the pay should not be cut. The Comptroller General has cut these men from a third to a half in pay. If you adopt this amendment proposed by the gentleman from Illinois, it will restore these reserve men to the places on the pay roll they held prior to the act of 1922.

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. What is the provision of the amendment?

Mr. CHINDBLOM. That they shall get the same pay they received on June 10, 1922.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the reservation of the point of order.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. Under the permission granted me to extend my remarks, I want to refer to the remarks which I made on this amendment on February 16, 1923, when I offered this amendment to another section of the bill. Those remarks are on page 3813 of the Congressional Record for this session.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SETTLEMENT OF ACCOUNTS OF DISBURSING OFFICERS OF THE NAVY.

Sec. 19. That the Comptroller General of the United States is hereby authorized and directed to allow in the settlement of accounts of disbursing officers of the Navy amounts credited, prior to his decision of May 20, 1922, as the "highest pay of his grade" to the officers detailed as assistants to the chiefs of Bureaus of Supplies and Accounts and Medicine and Surgery.

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. What is the purpose of that amendment?

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. STEPHENS] will make that explanation to the gentleman.

Mr. STEPHENS. Mr. Chairman, this applies to two or three officers who were assistant chiefs of the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts and the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery. Under the law the assistant chiefs of those bureaus are allowed the highest pay of their grade. The officers who were serving as assistant chiefs of the bureau were Pay Director Leutz, Medical Director Pleadwell, Medical Director McCullough. all had the rank of captain. However, in the grade of pay director there were rear admirals of the upper grade, and in the grade of medical director there were rear admirals of the upper half, and, therefore, in the grades of pay director and medical director the highest pay was being paid to these officers as rear admirals of the upper half. They were given the pay of rear admirals for several years, but the Comptroller General decided that the law mount the pay of their rank as well as decided that the law meant the pay of their rank as well as their grade, and he disallowed all that had been paid to them, and on his decision they had to draw the pay as captains in the Navy. He decided that that was then their grade instead of getting pay within their rank, which should be the pay of a rear admiral.

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. As I understand it, from statements made to me by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Britten], it amounts to a requirement that these officers make a refund to the Treasury of certain amounts.

Mr. STEPHENS. Yes; but I did not get along that far.

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. The gentleman has gone far enough to satisfy me.

The Clerk read as follows:

COMMANDER CHARLES O. MAAS.

SEC. 21. That the Secretary of the Navy is authorized to supplement the military record of the late Lieut. Commander Charles O. Maas, Naval Reserve Force, to show the voluntary service performed by said Lieutenant Commander Maas, and accepted by the Navy Department subsequent to the date upon which he was placed on inactive duty, and that such acceptance may be treated as a recall to active service: Provided, That no back pay or allowances of any kind shall accrue as a result of the passage of this section.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, what is the purpose of the great Committee on Naval Affairs in incorporating in this omnibus bill a provision for the relief of a certain individual?

Mr. SWING. Mr. Chalrman, I will undertake to answer the gentleman and thank him for the compliment to the committee.

This is not an absolutely necessary section without which the Navy can not function, but the Committee on Naval Affairs, great as the gentleman is kind enough to say it is, feels that no injustice to a worthy Navy officer, no matter how small it may be, ought to be permitted to pass unnoticed. These are the circumstances which seemed to us to warrant a correction of the record of this excellent officer.

He enlisted as soon as the war broke out and joined the naval intelligence and was then assigned as naval attaché to our embassy in Paris, where he was doing excellent service; in fact, so excellent that the American Red Cross in France drafted his services and asked the Navy Department to relieve him, so they might have him as their chief counsel. For that purpose the Navy Department put him on the inactive list and he assumed the duties of chief counsel of the Red Cross, but in addition to performing those duties he continued working at night and at odd times with the naval work on which he was engaged at the time he was put on the inactive list, which was writing the history of the naval attachés at the embassy at Paris. He kept a desk in the office of the American Embassy and continued at this official work down to the time of his death.

Mr. STAFFORD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SWING. I will. Mr. STAFFORD. This is virtually a private act for the benefit of this man-

Mr. SWING. It is an act to repair what would be an injury and injustice to this officer.

Mr. STAFFORD. And many private bills are reported from the gentleman's committee. Why single out this one and incorporate such a private bill in this omnibus bill?

Mr. SWING. Because we think it is meritorious.

Mr. STAFFORD. Is any relative of this man living in the gentleman's district?

Mr. SWING. No; there is no relative living in my district at l. I am interested merely in seeing justice done.
Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. What is there in the record all.

of the gentleman that you desire to correct by this legislation?

Mr. SWING. It is simply to have it entered in his record that he was actually engaged in the same official work for the Navy that he was engaged in prior to his going to the Red

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. Let me understand. He went into the Red Cross service. Did he die while in that service?

Mr. BUTLER. Let me say

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. Do you want the record to show that he was in the service of the Navy? If he died in the service of the Red Cross he is not performing the other

Mr. SWING. He had his desk in the office of the naval attaché, where he was doing a valuable service for the Navy at the time of his death.

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. Wait a minute. Was he in the service of the Navy Department at the time he died?

Mr. SWING. He was performing this official service, not Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. Was the man in the Navy Department?

Mr. BUTLER. He only held this Red Cross position about two weeks

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. What is the object in saying the man died in the service if he was performing service for the Red Cross? Is it to merely gratify what might be called a whim of his widow?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin has expired.

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the paragraph.

Mr. BUTLER. I do not think the gentleman would do that if he will let me make an explanation. I do not know this man, but I do know that the record shows that he did a splendid service for his Government during the Great War. He was assigned, against his protest, to service with the Red Cross. He was recalled for active duty in the Navy, but before that could be formally done he died, and therefore this is simply to give him the status which he would have had had death not intervened. It is only a bit of sentiment; we provide here that no pay or allowances shall be given him. We would like to do something that really touches the soul of men and that is the reason we reported it. This was brought out simply to have the record corrected to show that this man really died in the service in which he enlisted, and a good sailor he was, too, if he was a man of wealth, and therefore I hope the committee will not strike this section out. The reason is, as I have stated, that it is something that does not touch the pockets of men but their souls. This widow desires to have this record corrected and I ask you to do it.

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 20, line 3, strike out section 21.

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I have no interest at all in this amendment, but there is not a man on the floor who does not know this to be true. This man was either in the service of the Navy or he was, not in the service of the Navy. No man will state that he was in the naval service. You are asking by this paragraph to say that the man was in the active service of the Navy when the committee says he was not in the service of the Navy. Adopt this and you will find that during the next Congress you will have many requests to have legislation enacted here to correct military records to show that something is true which in fact is not true. Now, what reason exists for this provision? This man died while in the service of the Red Cross. Why correct this record?

One gentleman on the Committee on Naval Affairs said it is to satisfy the whim of the widow. Now, I would love to do that, but if a man dies in the service of the Red Cross he could die in no more honorable service, and his widow should be proud of the record showing that he died in the service of the Red Cross. Why correct the record here and certify that he was in the active service of the Navy, when the chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs tells you he was in the service of the Red Cross?

Mr. BUTLER. The gentleman has not got it correct.

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. If I have not stated it correctly, I would like the gentleman to explain in what respect I have not.

Mr. BUTLER. The order for this man's recall from the Red Cross back into the service of the Navy, in which he The order for this man's recall from the enlisted, had been made, but before the record was made up he found himself back in the Navy, where he enlisted, and then he died. I certainly am right on that. I do not think I can be mistaken. Those must be the facts. Of course, it is possible that I am mistaken; but I do not think I am.

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. That does not change the premise upon which the argument is made to strike out the paragraph. The order was issued before it took effect, the fact had not been performed under it, and you are asking to certify a record that was not yet made.

Mr. BUTLER. If there had been a record, we would not

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. Yes; if he had died while in the Navy, the record would show it, and we would not be asked to correct it. This gentleman was in the Naval Reserve; he went into the Red Cross service; and in 1919, about six months after the armistice, died, and you are asked to correct the record and show he was in the active service of the Navy.

Mr. BUTLER. It is nothing but sentiment to me. only a bit of sentiment, that the records may show that this man died in the service of the Navy. He was detailed to the Red Cross.

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. If he was in the service of the Navy, we would not have to correct his record, because the record would show it. You ask us to make the record state that which is not so. If it is done in this case, there is no reason why we should not make similar corrections in

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] to strike out the

The question was taken, and the Chairman announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. Chairman, I ask for a division. The CHAIRMAN. A division is demanded.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 58, noes 74.

So the motion was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

UNITED STATES NAVY BAND.

Sec. 22. That hereafter the band now stationed at the navy yard, Washington, D. C., and known as the Navy Yard Band, shall be designated as the United States Navy Band, and the leader of this band shall receive the pay and allowances of a lieutenant in the Navy: Provided, That all service as an enlisted man in the naval service shall be counted in computing longevity increases for pay of this leader: Provided further. That no back pay or allowances shall be allowed to this leader by reason of the passage of this act: And provided further, That hereafter during concert tours approved by the President members of the United States Navy Band shall suffer no loss of allowances.

Mr. UPSHAW rose.

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman from Georgia rise?

Mr. UPSHAW. I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Georgia moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. UPSHAW. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I got into the Hall just as the debate concerning the Marine Band was closing. I feel like I do not want to let an occasion like this pass without declaring my honest conviction that the spirit that would cauterize the activities and the influence of the Marine Band is only the beginning of that spirit that would stop throwing the light on the beautiful dome of the Capitol every night because of the expense attached thereto. [Applause.]

I am uneasy about the man that inveighs against sentiment. I have never looked upon that light at night on the Capitol without thinking how some men might go back to their constituents and make a campaign for some office on the question of the expense we are put to by throwing light on the Capitol, when it adds nothing perhaps to anybody's bread. It is a high, splendid, sacred, inspiring sentiment that this great Government must not forget. "It was sentiment that bathed Marathen and Platse in blood. It was sentiment that gave Sparta her living walls." "It was sentiment that bathed Marathon and Platea It was sentiment that inspired Luther to preach and Wyckliffe to die. It was sentiment that rang the Liberty Bell and fired the shot at Lexington. It is sentiment, heroic, unselfish sentiment, that has given to the world its freedom and its religion. [Applause.]

We can not afford to be cheap in this great Government concerning those who are trying to instill wholesome sentiment into the minds and hearts of our growing citizenship. This sentiment ought not to stop and this session of Congress ought not to close until we vote adequate salaries for the underpaid teachers of Washington at this time. [Applause.] They are the basic builders of our civilization. [Applause.]

And one other thing: This Congress and this Government can not afford to be little about anything. [Applause.] This Congress can not afford to be little in salaries toward those who work for its uplift and efficiency. As I see these crowded galleries [laughter], and as I see these Members here staying at their posts of duty from 11 o'clock this morning until bedtime. I am increasingly convinced that the bill that I have introduced to-day increasing the salaries of Congressmen and Senators to $10,000 a year ought to be passed.

[Laughter and applause,

I will tell you this: I came here to Washington with the idea—the virtuous idea—that I would "salt down" half of my salary and save it for future eventualities. I heard Frankin K. Lane say, when I protested against his leaving the Cabinet of President Wilson, "You Congressmen are cowards if you do not raise your salaries." [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Georgia has expired.

Mr. UPSHAW. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Georgia asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

Mr. BLANTON. I object.

The Clerk, continuing the reading of the bill, read as follows: SEC. 24. That any officer of the Marine Corps now in the service shall be credited for all purposes with the actual time served prior to the passage of this act as chief clerk of the commandant of the Marine Corps previous to being commissioned: Provided, That no back pay or allowances of any kind shall be allowed as a result of the passage of this section.

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. In section 24 you are asking Congress to do something that is strictly in violation of the joint pay bill. You are asking that military credit be given for civilian service. This section is intended to advance the retirement of a very able officer, but in doing so you are setting an expensive precedent and one that should not now be established, especially since you have so recently passed a joint pay bill dealing with this whole subject, in which you lay down a uniform rule applicable to all the military services. Congress was very liberal in that bill in allowing officers then in service to claim for every kind of military service, whether actual or constructive.

We wisely refused to allow to any officer credit for civilian service for any purpose, but now you are offering to let civilian service advance an officer for increased retirement pay. Is not that correct?

Mr. BUTLER. Yes; as usual, the gentleman is right.

But I would like very much to have this become a law. It affects only one officer, who is the chief of the bureau in the Marine Corps. I have a feeling for him. He and I began together. He has been 41 years in the service, including the service as chief clerk. He has been 26 years a soldier and has distinguished himself, not only as a quartermaster general, but he made an able soldier on the firing line and has been decorated for bravery in action.

I agree with my friend that it might impinge on four years of the service of General McCauley. I will say that I am going to add an amendment to keep entirely in line with my friend who helped to write the fee bill. I feel like saying to the committee that if General McCauley sees fit to retire, having been 41 years in the service, 26 as a military man-if he sees fit to retire it will bring into the Marins Corps the most efficient man I have ever known in military life, Cyrus Radford, of Kentucky. If General McCauley sees fit to retire it will bring into this bureau a man who has made all the acconterments which the Marine Corps has had for many years. I repeat that no better business man have I ever seen in the marine or civil life than Cyrus Radford.

This is not without precedent before the pay bill was passed. There are several instances I have had collected similar to this, where officers have had the advantage of serving as chief clerk in the bureau and navy yard and in the departments. If the pay bill passes, this is the only man that can be affected.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Alabama has expired.

Mr. OLIVER. I ask for three minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection? There was no objection.

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. Chairman, I felt that the House should have its attention called to what this section really does. The joint pay bill provides that after July, 1922, no officer in the Navy, Army, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Geodetic Survey, or Public Health Service shall claim for the purpose of pay, promotion, or retirement any but commissioned service. You gave to officers in the service prior to July, 1922, credit for military service other than commissioned service, but you did not go so far as to give any officer credit for civilian service. I submit that since Congress has so recently established a uniform law on this subject for all officers it would be very unwise to begin making individual exceptions to that law, no matter how worthy the officer you seek to favor. The fact that General McCauley has had about 26 years' active service in the Marine !

Corps and further service as a civilian clerk should not authorlze credit for the civilian service in order that he may be retired now on increased pay. This section will retire him at the maximum pay of his grade, although under the joint pay bill he would be required to serve four years longer in the military service.

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. If we give credit for civilian service to one officer, is there any reason why it should not be given to every other officer who rendered civilian service?

Mr. OLIVER. None whatever. Let me say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BUTLER] there sits on his right a young man named Pugh, who knows more about naval matters and who has saved to the Nation more money than almost any civilian I know of, and when he retires you will not give him military retirement for civilian service. There is in the Navy another young man, named Reed, whom the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Kelley] and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BUTLER] know to be a most valuable man, and he is also serving in a civilian capacity; but you will not and should not serving in a civilian capacity; but you will not and should not retire him on military pay.

Mr. BUTLER. Oh, let me testify to their value.

Mr. OLIVER. You could not justify retiring those men as military officers, no matter how valuable their services are; and yet that is what this section 24 proposes to do for one officer who in years gone by performed some civilian service. It is wrong, and I therefore move, Mr. Chairman, to strike out section 24 tion 24.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. OLIVER: Page 21, beginning with line 13, strike out section 24.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Byrnes of South Carolina) there were—ayes, 51; noes, 77.

So the amendment was rejected. Mr. CHINDBLOM. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD upon the amendment that I offered a short time ago.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?
There was no objection.
Mr. BUTLER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to return to page 16, line 13, for the purpose of offering an amendment which I send to the desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent to return to page 16 for the purpose of offering an amendment. Is there objection?

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, let us hear what the amendment is.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the proposed amend-

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. BUTLER: Page 16, line 13, after the word "list," insert "and who have been retired since June 30, 1922."

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amend-

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. In reading the bill section 11 was passed over, having been read, and an amendment to strike out the section pending, offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. GRAHAM

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following preferential amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have

The Clerk read as follows:

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. Britten: Page 11, line 23, strike out the whole of section 11 and in lieu thereof insert the following:

"Sec. 11. That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to make thorough investigation of the merits of the claims (including claims for release from Government claims for liquidated damages but excluding claims increases where a full, final, qualified, or unqualified release has been given the United States) which may be submitted to him in writing and verified under oath for any loss alleged to have been caused to any of such claimants in the performance of any fixed price (including fixed unit price) contract with the United States, through the Secretary of the Navy or the Navy Department, from April 6, 1917, to November 11, 1918, inclusive, or in the performance of that portion of any such contract previously entered into which remained uncompleted on April 6, 1917, which loss was occasioned by the action of any Government agency by reason of prior orders for material or transportation, commandeering of property or material, or other order of Government authority not authorized by the contract on or between the dates above mentioned.

"The Secretary of the Navy shall submit estimates of appropriations required to satisfy such of the claims as he may investigate under this authority as may be found to possess merit, accompanied by a comprehensive presentation of the facts in each case, but such findings so communicated shall not be construed as imposing any obligation upon the Government or releasing any claims or rights of the Government.

"No claim shall be considered under this authorization for alleged losses on account of increases in wages until a claimant shall have established proof to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Navy that he actually paid his employees the award ordered by the Macy Board or other Government boards, and that his entire volume of business with the Government during the period covered by the claim did not viold a net profit with the Government during the period covered by the claim and not yield a net profit.

"In the performance of the duties imposed by this section the Secretary of the Navy is authorized to summon witnesses and examine them under oath, to require claimants to exhibit their books and papers, and to have access to and the right to examine pertinent income-tax returns and other financial reports of such claimants as may be in the custody of the Secretary of the Treasury."

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Chairman, when section 11 of the bill was read and before the committee last week, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. GRAHAM] offered an amendment to strike out the section. The amendment which I have now offered is a preferential amendment and I suggest to the committee that the language in this amendment now before the House was drafted in the committee room of the Committee on Appropriations, that it takes out of the bill the language that was offensive to the gentleman who opposed section 11, as it appears in The amendment I think now is quite clear, in that it the bill. directs the Secretary of the Navy to make an investigation of claims and then to report those claims to the Committee on Appropriations or to Congress, and to do nothing else. It does not bind the Government or Congress. It merely authorizes the Secretary to make an investigation and to report to the Congress

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, does not the gentleman think there should be some limitation of time within which these claims should be presented to the Secretary of the Navy for his consideration? Mr. BRITTEN. Yes. In the original section 11 it was provided that the claim should be presented within six months.

Mr. STAFFORD. Then I suggest that that provision should be incorporated in this amendment.

Mr. BRITTEN. If I may speak for the committee, I can see no objection to that.

Mr. STAFFORD. Then, Mr. Chairman, I move to amend by inserting in line 5 of the amendment, after the word "writing," the words "within six months after the passage hereof.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment will be modified in the manner suggested by the gentleman from Wisconsin. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. Chairman, I am not going to take the Mr. MADDEN. time of the committee further than to say that it is perfectly safe to pass this substitute for section 11. It gives the Secretary of the Navy authority only to investigate. It lays down the lines under which he must investigate. It provides that when he reaches conclusions and finds the facts, that these conclu-sions are not a binding obligation upon the Government; that he must submit the findings to the Committee on Appropriations of the House, and then that committee will further investigate, and if the committee finds the case to be justified It will refer it to the House. So that I think you can not do less than to pass this. It is fair; it is clean; and it ought to be agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois.

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois having been agreed to, the amendment of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Graham] falls.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. Chairman, this is the last work this committee will have to do during this session of Congress. It becomes necessary for all of us who have sat together to separate. I want within the brief time which you have so graciously given me to express my gratitude to those men who have sat on this committee and have aided so greatly in There is no man in America better acquainted with the aviation service than FRED HICKS, of New York, our esteemed friend. [Applause.]

With a relish for work, which he naturally possesses, he set out to learn all that was necessary to be known in order that his usefulness might be increased. Free Hicks has laid up his store of learning until at this hour he is recognized among military men, as he is recognized here, as an authority on the Aviation Service of the Navy. While he specialized along this line, he did not flee from other responsibilities which were given him, until he became known in this House as one of its leaders, a man of wisdom, a parliamentarian of marked ability, and altogether a most desirable companion who will be long remembered as one of the favorites of the House.

knew him before he came here; we were friends, and this separation will be only in name.

There is not any man in public fire, in any public or private, has a more conscientious devotion to duty, public or private, has a more conscientious devotion to duty, public or private, has a more conscientious devotion to duty, public or private, has a more conscientious devotion to duty, public or private, has a more conscientious devotion to duty, public or private, has a more conscientious devotion to duty, public or private, has a more conscientious devotion to duty, public or private, has a more conscientious devotion to duty, public or private, has a more conscientious devotion to duty, public or private, has a more conscientious devotion to duty, public or private, has a more conscientious devotion to duty, public or private, has a more conscientious devotion to duty, public or private, has a more conscientious devotion to duty, public or private, has a more conscientious devotion to duty, public or private, has a more conscientious devotion to duty, public or private, has a more conscientious devotion to duty, public or private, has a more consciention to duty, public or private, has a more consciention to duty, and has a more consciention to duty and has a more consciention to duty. fine analytical mind, with an industry that is not outranked among workingmen, he has applied himself to the work of this committee with but one object—to do justice to the Government and to individuals seeking relief from dlsadvantages which they complained their Government had imposed upon them. His complete success is proven by the records of this House. which not only attest the confidence in which his judgment is held but the wisdom of his conclusions. It is his own record, made by the constant employment of his two prominent characteristics, intelligence and fairness.

MCARTHUR goes away with the regrets of this House following him. His contributions to the service in the committee room, as well-as in the House, has singled him as one of its important legislators. Oregon appreciates him as his colleagues here have appreciated him. Young and energetic, the public will not lose sight of him as he wins his way toward the goals which may attract him.

Mr. McPherson, with his training as a lawyer, which accompanied him when he came, has done much faithful and distinguished work for his Government for which that training had given him a great advantage. Like the other men with whom I have labored, he deserves the gratitude of this House as he will have the gratitude of his Government.

Allow me to include in this list Mr. KLINE of New York and Mr. Copp, of Michigan, who have labored with us with the view of impressing this House with the desire of the whole committee to win the confidence of the House, to report only those measures for the good of the naval service alone. I very greatly regret to see these men go from the Congress, and I wish that you join with me in tendering them the very best wishes we have within us. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with the amendments, with the recommendation that the amendments be agreed to and the bill as amended do pass.

The question was taken and the motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore having resumed the chair, Mr. Trason, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee, having had under consideration the bill S. 4137, had directed him to report the same back to the House with sundry amendments, with the recommendation that the amendments be agreed to and that the bill as amended do Dass.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The previous question is or-dered under the rule on the bill and all amendments to final passage. Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment?
Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I demand a separate vote on the amendments. How many are there?
The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Wiscon-

Mr. BUTLER. There are 23.

Mr. STAFFORD. We considered this under a special rule which gives permission on each amendment made to the section. There are only two amendments. I demand a separate vote on section 24.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. Speaker, I would like to move that these sections be renumbered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Let the Chair understand the amendment upon which the gentleman from Wisconsin demands a separate vote.

Mr. STAFFORD. The last section of the bill, section 24.

Mr. SANDERS of Indians. I do not understand the rule makes the provision suggested. The rule only deals with the question of the separation of the amendments by sections in the committee.

Mr. STAFFORD. The very purpose of the rule was to overcome that very objectionable practice which has grown up here of committees reporting many sections as amendments.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, there is only one separate vote demanded.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. And that is on section 24. a separate vote demanded on any other section? If not, the Chair will put them in gross.

The question was taken, and the other amendments were agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to section 24.

Mr. OLIVER. May we have section 24 reported before we

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is in some doubt as to just what is left upon which a separate vote could be had. Mr. BUTLER. Section 11 had an amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That has been agreed to. Section 24 is part of the amendment which was agreed to.

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Speaker, section 24 was not amended in the committee.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Then there is nothing further before the House except the vote on the committee amendment as amended

The question was taken, and the committee amendment as amended was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the third reading of a Senate bill

The bill was ordered to be read the third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the bill.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I make a motion to recommit. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Will the gentleman send his motion to the Clerk's desk?

Mr. BLANTON. I make the motion to recommit the bill to the Committee on Naval Affairs with instructions to strike out the section providing for-

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas will send his motion to the Clerk's desk in writing.

Mr. BLANTON. Well, that has not been done heretofore.

SEVERAL MEMBERS. Regular order. Mr. BLANTON. I ask for time to prepare it. SEVERAL MEMBERS. Regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Regular order is demanded. Mr. BLANTON. It will not take but two minutes. [Cries of "Vote1"]

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. The gentleman is entitled to the time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas will reduce his motion to writing.
Mr. CHINBLOM. Mr. Speaker-

The SPEAKER pro tempore. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. CHINDBLOM. To call attention to a point of order, that having adopted an amendment to the entire bill, a motion to recommit, striking out a portion of the amendment, is not

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I move to recommit the bill and report the same back forthwith with an amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas moves to recommit the bill with instructions to report the same back with an amendment. The Clerk will report the motion of the gentleman from Texas.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Blanton moves to recommit the bill to the Committee on Naval Affairs with instruction to that committee to report the same back forthwith, striking from the bill section 8.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the gentleman's motion is out of order. We have adopted the section referred to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Section 8 is part of the amendment which was agreed to by the House.

Mr. BLANTON. That was also in the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That is part of the amendment to which the House has just given its assent.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. Speaker, it was decided by the present Speaker pro tempore that such an amendment was not in order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the bill. The question was taken, and the Speaker announced that the "ayes" ayes" appeared to have it. Mr. BLANTON. I ask for a division, Mr. Speaker. The SPEAKER pro tempore. A division is demanded. The House divided; and there were—ayes 210, noes 9.

So the bill was passed. Mr. BUTLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the title be amended in accordance with the text.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent that the title be amended in accordance with the text. cordance with the text. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

INVESTIGATION OF REFORESTATION PROBLEMS.

Mr. HAUGEN, Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass House Joint Resolution 456, with an amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Iowa asks unanimous consent to suspend the rules and pass House Joint Resolution 456, with an amendment. The Clerk will report the amended resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 456) authorizing the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture to appoint a subcommittee to consist of not more than eight members of the Committee on Agriculture to join with a like committee of five heretofore appointed by the Senate to investigate problems relating to reforestation, and for other purposes.

Senate to investigate problems relating to reforestation, and for other purposes.

Resolved, etc., That the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture is hereby authorized to appoint a subcommittee to consist of not more than eight members of the Committee on Agriculture of the House of Representatives, five from the majority party and three from the minerity party, to join with a like committee of five here-tofore appointed by the Senate, and of which he shall be an ex officis member, to investigate problems relating to reforestation, with a view to establishing a comprehensive national policy for lands chiefly suited for timber production in order to insure a perpetual supply of timber for the use and necessities of citizens of the United States. The joint committee shall make a final report of its investigations with recommendations to the Congress not later than April 4, 1924. For the purposes of this resolution the committee is authorized to sit and act at such times during the sessions or recesses of the Sixty-seventh and Sixty-eighth Congresses and in such places within the United States to hold such hearings as it deems necessary, and to employ such clerical and stenographic assistants as it deems necessary, the cost of such stenographic service to report the hearings shall not be in excess of 25 cents per folio. The committee is further authorized to send for persons, books, and papers, to administer oaths and to take testimony. The expenses of the joint committee shall be paid from the contingent funds of the House of Representatives and the Senate of the United States, and shall not exceed $5,000 from said funds of the House. All such expenses to be paid upon vouchers duly approved by the chairman of said joint committee.

Mr. STAFFORD. I demand a second.

Mr. STAFFORD. I demand a second. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Wisconsin demands a second.

Mr. BLANTON. I make the point of order, Mr. Speaker, that when a second is demanded by two Members and one demand is from the majority, on the same side that the motion comes from, and the other demand is from the minority side, especially when the minority side is against the bill, the Member making the demand from the minority side under the rules shall be recognized.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Wisconsin demands a second.

I am opposed to the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the gentleman from Wisconsin opposed to the bill?

Mr. STAFFORD. I am not opposed to it. Mr. BLANTON. I am opposed to the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas demands a second.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I object, Mr. Speaker, to a second being ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. Blanton] and the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HAUGEN] will take their places as tellers.

The House divided; and the tellers reported-ayes 132, noes 4. The SPEAKER pro tempore. A second is ordered. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HAUGEN] has 20 minutes and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Blanton] has 20 minutes.

Mr. HAUGEN. Mr. Speaker, the object of the resolution is to investigate problems relating to reforestation, with a view to establishing a comprehensive national policy. Togicle the to establishing a comprehensive national policy. Legislation has been suggested that will entail considerable expense. There is about 156,500,000 acres of land in the national forests and about 557,000,000 board-feet of lumber, which would seem to be of enough importance to warrant an investigation. About $10,000,000 is appropriated annually for our Forest Service.

Mr. McSWAIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?
Mr. HAUGEN. Yes.
Mr. McSWAIN. Will the gentleman tell us whether the proposed national-forestry policy relates only to the public do-main or proposes to consider the matter of forestry within the exclusive jurisdiction of the States as well as the public domain?

Mr. HAUGEN. It includes forestry within the jurisdiction of the States.

Mr. McSWAIN. If that is true, what is the constitutional warrant for the proposition of interference with forestation within the States by the National Government? What is the warrant for that?

Mr. HAUGEN. That is a matter that is being considered and will be considered in proposed legislation, cooperating with the States. A bill has been prepared which provides for reforestation and for timber lots and various things suggested to improve the Forest Service, for planting trees and carrying an annual appropriation of $4,500,000. As I stated, the appropriation now amounts to about $10,000,000, and so far the service has not been self-supporting. The suggestion is to make a thorough investigation.

As I said, there are about 157,000,000 acres and about 557,-000,000 board feet of lumber. A like committee has been appointed by the Senate, and it has been suggested that we shall have a joint committee to investigate, consisting of eight Members of the House and five Members of the Senate. lution carries an appropriation of $5,000. That is made payable from the contingent fund of the House. No limit is placed upon the expenditures to be made by the Senate.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. HAUGEN. Certainly.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Would the gentleman be willing to have an amendment offered to this resolution limiting the investigation to forests on the national domain, and cutting out any interference with State policies on this question?

Mr. HAUGEN. This resolution is drafted in terms identical with that of the Senate, and the wording of it is practically the same, except as to the limitation of $5,000.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Under the Senate resolution does not the President of the Senate appoint the members of the commission, whereas under this the chairman of the committee appoints them?

Mr. HAUGEN. Yes.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Why do not you provide that the Speaker of the House shall make the appointment?

Mr. HAUGEN. This resolution is drawn as other resolutions have been drawn.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Where the chairman of the committee is appointing the members?

Mr. HAUGEN. Yes. In the Joint Commission on Rural Credits the members were appointed by the chairman of the House committee and the members of the Senate by the chairman of the Senate committee. That, as I understand, is the usual procedure.

Mr. McSWAIN. Will the gentleman yield?
Mr. HAUGEN. Yes.
Mr. McSWAIN. Does not the gentleman really think that the Chief Forester and his assistant can tell the committee more in 30 minutes than the committee could learn by traveling 50,000 miles?

Mr. HAUGEN. No: I spent nearly four weeks in the forests and traveled pretty much night and day, and I never spent days and weeks to any better advantage. No one has any comprehension of the Forest Service unless he makes a personal investigation, and to make a thorough investigation of 156,000,000 acres would require more time than any eight Members can give during a summer. I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. IRELAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 15 seconds.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to address the House briefly. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. IRELAND. Mr. Speaker, I want to state to the Members of the House who are to be Members of the Sixty-eighth Congress that their telegraphic franks are ready for them in the Committee on Accounts, and it will save the Government the trouble of mailing them if they will call for them. The reelected Members to the Sixty-eighth Congress and the newly elected Members of the Sixty-eighth Congress can secure the telegraphic franks, for which they may have use during the vacation.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, our Republican friends are shrewd and I take my hat off to them. When they appoint commissions that settle $4,000,000,000 debts to this country they do not offer us Democrats any position thereon. It was only when we get up here before the people and demanded it that they finally gave us a say-so. But, when they want to pass a congressional junketing resolution, like the one now before us, in order to get votes from our side, they offer us three reservations in drawing rooms, to catch our votes.

[Here Mr. Blanton uttered some words that were objected to and were subsequently stricken out.]

Mr. UPSHAW. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the gentleman from Texas has made a personal reflection and imputed to me motives that are absolutely not borne out by the

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That is not a point of order, but the gentleman from Texas will proceed in order.

Mr. UPSHAW. Under the rules of the House, Mr. Speaker, the gentleman is not permitted to mention my name with an aspersion upon my honor. I never cast a vote that did not comport with manhood and patriotism. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. According to the rules of the House no Member is permitted to mention by name another

Mr. UPSHAW. I move to expunge the remarks. I demand that the words be taken down.

The Clerk read the words objected to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair holds that the language objected to is a violation of the rules of the House.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I move that the words of the gentleman from Texas be stricken out.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Illinois, to strike out the words that were objected to.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it. Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. Is it in order now to move that the gentleman from Texas may proceed in order?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It is.
Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. And that motion must be made some other gentleman than the gentleman from Texas?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It must be.
Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. I was not going to make the motion; I just wanted to know.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I ask recognition in opposi-tion to the motion to move to suspend the rules.

Mr. UPSHAW. Mr. Speaker, I move that the gentleman from Texas be allowed to proceed in order and only in order. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Georgia that the gentleman from Texas be allowed to proceed in order.

The question was taken and the motion was rejected. Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I ask recognition to oppose the resolution now pending. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the gentleman from Alabama opposed to the resolution?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I am.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Alabama recognized for the remainder of the time.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it. Mr. MADDEN. How much time is remaining for the gentleman from Alabama?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Alabama is recognized for 16 minutes, the remainder of the time, in opposition to the resolution.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, I am entirely consistent in my attitude in opposing the pending resolution. As I have taken occasion to state heretofore when resolutions of similar import were pending, especially those creating commissions for various purposes, it has been my observation, and I believe the candid experience of most Members of the House who have given the matter any reflection, that we spend annually thousands, tens of thousands, hundreds of thousands of dollars out of the Treasury for purposes of investigation like this, without any real resulting good to the people of the country. I opposed the resolution pending to-day upon the coal commission, increasing the appropriation for that purpose, and I did it upon that theory. Now, on the last day of the session a motion is made to suspend the rules and put upon its passage a resolution creating a select committee of eight Members to be appointed by the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture to investigate the question of reforestation. That is proposed naturally upon the assumption that the expenditure of this money and the subsequent investigation of this question will result in securing information for the benefit of the Congress of the United States. Yet I deliberately assert, and I do not believe that the chairman of this committee who is proposing this resolution can successfully contradict it, that there is already on file and available to the Congress of the United States at this hour, and available to the Committee on Agriculture at this hour, down here in the Department of Agriculture all of the information in every particular and in every detail touching this question of reforestation that this select committee of eight members of the Committee on Agriculture are to undertake to bring back to this Congress after this recess.

Mr. J. M. NELSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?
Mr. BANKHEAD. Yes.
Mr. J. M. NELSON. Does not the gentleman think that the committee itself, which deals with this problem, being on the ground, will be benefited to the extent of $5,000 by taking this trip?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Is the gentleman in favor of this resolu-

Mr. J. M. NELSON. I am. Mr. BANKHEAD. Do I understand that the gentleman's position is based upon the theory that if by having the actual visual sight of the land involved these distinguished ranking members of the Committee on Agriculture will be able to bring back to this House some very beneficial, scientific, and practical information on this question of reforestation?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Let me finish this thought and then I will yield to the gentleman. What is the justification or excuse that is offered frequently, if not always given, to these so-called junketing expositions—and I do not desire to use that ferm in any offensive sense at all and do not mean it in any offensive sense, but merely as a matter of description-they have always argued that if you let us go and get first-hand information it will be more valuable, and there may be something in that. But my main objection to this question is that it is an entirely unnecessary expense to be levied out of the Treasury of the United States and will not accomplish anything that can not be accomplished by another method which would not involve the expenditure of a single dollar.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I know the gentleman from Alabama is earnest and sincere in what he says, but I want to ask him if he has stopped to think that the United States itself owns from 40 to 75 per cent of the area of 11 Western States and that the problems of the Forest Service are handled by this great Agricultural Committee? Time and again I have spoken on the floor about the situation. I have begged that some Members be placed on that committee who had seen or knew of the timber assets of the Government in these great reserves in this

Mr. BANKHEAD. I want to see the gentleman from Washington transferred to the Committee on Agriculture.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I wish I could serve on another committee

Mr. BANKHEAD. There ought to be somebody there who knew something about it. The gentleman's question brings up another objection to this resolution which I think is a very fundamental one. That is the reason I rose to my feet to inquire of the chairman of the committee when he presented the resolution if he would agree to the offering of an amendment to limit the activities of this commission to the public domain of the United States. Now that presents a very serious constitutional question. Every State has rights under its reserved powers to deal with this question on its own initiative. gentleman does not set up in this resolution that this shall be made along lines of Federal cooperation-

Mr. SNELL. If the gentleman will yield-the basic object of the legislation that has been considered by the Agricultural Committee in the last three or four sessions of Congress has been cooperation in the Federal Government and the different States. It is all based on cooperation. That is the actual fact.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Is the gentleman from New York now advocating cooperation of the Federal Government and the States in their activities?

Mr. SNELL. In some certain ones.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I am glad— Mr. SNELL. When the Federal Government owns 75 per cent of all the timber there is.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Let me ask the gentleman from Washington. He paid me a compliment by saying that he thought I was sincere and frank.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I have great admiration for the gentleman.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Does not the gentleman from Washington honestly believe at the present time that the experts of the Agricultural Department and Bureau of Forestry and these other bureaus that have been taking cognizance of this question and made investigation-does he not believe they are in possession of all the information Congress needs on this question?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Government officials may have it, but members of the committee have to write the necessary legislation. I believe if I could get members of the Committee on Agriculture into these forest reserves that the Government owns in the North Pacific States I could show them where the Government can save great sums of money. The information is down here in the department, but it does not make legislation. The Forest Service and Congress are becoming more and more in harmony.

Mr. SNELL. The Forestry Department itself has information but the trouble is that the legislation must come from Members of the House, and in order to legislate properly they really ought to know a little more about this than they do. I am not going on the trip.

Mr. BANKHEAD. In other words the logical conclusion of that statement is that if we send out these gentlemen you will have legislation on this problem?

Mr. SNELL. The logical conclusion is, I hope they are right about it and we will get some legislation. This is one of the most important matters before the Congress at the present time in which people are really interested.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I respect the gentleman's attitude on this question, but my opposition to it is based upon my objection to these interminable and oft-reiterated propositions with which we are confronted here of bringing in in every Congress, especially along toward the close of the Congress, a proposition to appoint commissions and special committees, every one of them entailing expenditures out of the Treasury of the United States. I want to spend every dollar of the people's money necessary to have an intelligent and patriotic administration of our Government, but, gentlemen, surely we are going to reach a time some time in the history of our Government where we have got to stop these unnecessary expeditions for the purpose of acquiring information that we have already obtained, and I hope this proposition will be defeated.

Mr. Speaker, I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Sumners].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Alabama yields back the remainder of his time-six minutes-to the gen-Texas.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I do not think six minutes are The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Bankhead] started at 22 minutes after 10 and it is now 25 minutes to 11.

Mr. SNELL. He had only 16 minutes

Mr. DUPRÉ. Mr. Speaker, is the gentleman from Illinois in favor of this thing? I would like to have an answer.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is advised that the

The SPEARER pro tempore. The Chart is advised that the time remaining is six minutes, and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Sumners] is recognized for that time.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, it will not take six minutes. I agree with the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Bankhead] that in regard to most of these propositions we have enough information now, but the difficulty consists in applying what we know.

When the Commission on Agricultural Inquiry was createdand I would not object to a committee being appointed if they sat here in Washington, or if they wanted to travel if they would travel at their own expense—I did that on the Commission on Agricultural Inquiry, and I am a poor man. I made two trips to the South at my own expense and one trip to the two trips to the South at my own expense and one trip to the West at my own expense. That commission sat for seven menths, and I do not believe one dollar was expended. I believe the chairman took one trip.

This is a long vacation that we have in sight, and if the gentlemen on the Committee on Agriculture want to go out through the West and get some first-hand information, let them go. But I do not believe, gentlemen, that as a sound governmental policy we ought to encourage the expenditure of money in order to send people out over the country to make investigations. Under some circumstances that is all right and I would approve of it, but there is nothing in regard to forestation and timber in the country for Congress to legislate upon that needs such travel as is proposed in this investigation. People talk about growing trees and talk about going out to look into it at public expense. If you cut down one tree, you can rest assured that unless it is replaced by another of its own accord you have to replant.

Now, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Madden] seems to be in a hurry, and I will yield back the remainder of my time. [Applause.]

Mr. HAUGEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. TINCHER].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Kansas is recognized for three minutes.

Mr. TINCHER. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, I am a member of the Committee on Agriculture, but I am not going on this trip, because I have engagements for the summer which are inconsistent with such a trip. But I want to say that this proposed investigation can in no sense be called a junket, and for the House of Representatives to vote down this proposition to-night would be a serious mistake.

In our committee in the past few years we have had before us propositions for a definite forestry policy for this Government. There could not be a more important question for future generations than that policy. We are appropriating $1,000,000 every year to prevent forest fires in the national forests, and those fires, whenever they start, do not know any difference between Government land and privately owned land and State reserves. The bureau for which this committee legislates has the responsibility of policing these forest reser-

I am somewhat familiar with the national forests, because at my own expense I have bought cattle from them for years. I have reason to believe that the $5,000 proposed to be expended in this resolution would be money well expended if we were sending the committee out to study that situation alone, I want the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], who

I know is earnest in his conviction, to consider this: The Senate is sending out a committee. Congress at some future time will adopt a national policy with respect to forestry. The bill adopting a national forest policy will come from the House committee. I do not think they ought to be hindered in procuring first-hand information. I think they ought to have every advantage given them. The Senate has already appointed its committee. I do not think any Member who makes this investigation will think that he has made a junket.

As I said, I am not going. I do not think that this ought to be dubbed a junket. If a man spends next summer in investi-gations for the benefit of his country and in determining what should be our permanent policy as a Nation toward reforestation and toward the protection of our forests from fire, he will be performing a public service for which he will not deserve criticism here. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HAUGEN] to suspend the rules and pass the joint resolution.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. BLANTON and Mr. BANKHEAD), there were—ayes 178, noes 37.

Mr. BANKHEAD.

there is no quorum present.

Mr. BLANTON. I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. BLANTON. I ask for the gentleman from Texas is Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote because

Mr. BANKHEAD. What was the vote, may I ask the Chair? The SPEAKER pro tempore. One hundred and seventyeight ayes and 37 noes. A quorum is present.

Mr. BLANTON. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman is not recog-

Mr. BLANTON. I appeal from the decision of the Chair. I have a right to ask for the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman can not be recognized for any purpose until he has the permission of the

Mr. BLANTON. Then the Republican majority can keep my district unrepresented?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will take his

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the gentleman from Texas is entitled to recognition for the purpose of demanding the yeas and nays. I have not examined the precedents.

Mr. MONDELL. Will the gentleman yield to me? I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Texas

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. No, Mr. Speaker; it is not a question of unanimous consent.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is of the opinion that the matter should be decided now.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. It ought not to be decided as a matter of unanimous consent but as a matter of right. As to whether the gentleman would be entitled to the floor for debate I am not speaking now, but the gentleman from Texas arose to ask for the yeas and nays. The gentleman from Texas represents a congressional district; he is within his rights in demanding the yeas and nays. I think it would be extremely dangerous in holding that because the gentleman was called to order for the words spoken in debate and was required to take his seat, so far as the debate was concerned, that he could not rise and demand the yeas and nays.

Mr. Speaker, I think it is clear that so far Mr. TILSON. as speaking again during the period in which this matter was being considered, when he was called to order, that he can not be recognized again until he has the consent of the House. But I agree with the gentleman from Tennessee that for the purpose of demanding the year and nays, which is a constitutional right, the gentleman from Texas was clearly within his rights, and should be recognized for that purpose.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I assume that the purpose of the rule in denying a Member who has infringed the rules of debate by using unparliamentary language and not allowing him to proceed further until the House gives him the privilege is to protect the House from the further use of language on the matter under consideration, which might allow further use of similar unparliamentary language. But, until the House takes some action of censure or expulsion, every Member of the House has the privilege of voting, and has the privilege of exercising his rights in demanding the year and nays or offering amendments. [Applause.]

There has been no motion made for a censure; all that was done was that the House expunged the remarks from the RECORD, and refused to allow the gentleman from Texas to proceed further in debate. But that does not carry the proposition that his right to vote or his right to demand the yeas and nays or his right to offer an amendment have been cur-They are fundamental. The question is whether the gentleman from Texas is still a Member of the House or not?

[Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is ready to rule. The Chair has invited this discussion because the precedents are very vague as to when the gentleman from Texas or any gentleman, having been refused the right to participate in debate, as was done in this case, might again be heard on the floor. In order to get the matter before the House, the Chair has assumed the responsibility of calling the attention in this way in order that a decision might be had. The Chair believes that a reasonable construction of the rule would be that the Member called to order would be called to order only for the period required for the consideration of the matter that was then under consideration. The Chair thinks that is a reasonable construction, although it has not been so held. It appears from decisions that a Member was precluded if the motion was not made until the following day. With that construction the Chair does not agree. The Chair is glad of the opportunity at this time to decide that the Member from Texas is in the exercise of his rights at the conclusion of debate in demanding the yeas and nays. [Applause.] The Chair sustains the point of order made by the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and nays. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas demands the yeas and nays. All those in favor of taking the vote by yeas and nays will rise and be counted. [After counting.] Nineteen Members have risen, not a sufficient number; the yeas and nays are refused, and the bill is passed.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. RICKETTS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles, when the Speaker signed the same H. R. 8086. An act to prohibit the shipment of filled milk in interstate or foreign commerce; H. R. 11477. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Freeburn Toll Bridge Co. to construct a bridge across the Tug Fork of Big Sandy River, in Pike County, Ky.; H. R. 7851. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to provide for the appointment of a district judge, district attorney, and marshal for the western district of South Carolina, and for other purposes," approved September 1, 1916, so as to provide for the terms of the district court to be held at Spartanburg S. C.

H. R. 13205. An act for the relief of the American Trust Co.;

H. R. 11939. An act to amend section 5219 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

The SPEAKER pro tempore announced his signature to enrolled bills of the following titles:

S. 4235. An act granting consent of Congress to the Charlie Bridge Co. for construction of a bridge across Red River between Clay County, Tex., and Cotton County, Okla.; S. 4122. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Interstate Toll Bridge Co. for construction of a bridge across Red River between Montague County, Tex., and Jefferson County, Okla.;

S. 4387. An act to authorize the building of a bridge across the Tugaloo River between South Carolina and Georgia;

S. J. Res. 240. Joint resolution authorizing the erection on public grounds of a memorial to the late Joseph J. Darlington;

S. 574. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to save daylight and to provide standard time for the United States," as amended:

S. 1076. An act establishing standard grades of naval stores, preventing deception in transactions in naval stores, regulating traffic therein, and for other purposes;

S. 2703. An act to allow the printing and publishing of illustrations of foreign postage and revenue stamps from defaced

S. 3123. An act to amend section 1 of the act entitled "An act providing for the location and purchase of public lands for reservoir sites," approved January 13, 1897, as amended;

S. 3892. An act authorizing the State of California to bring suit against the United States to determine title to certain lands in Siskiyou County, Calif.;

S. 4146. An act permitting the State of Wyoming to reconvey certain lands to the United States and select other lands in lieu thereof and providing for the patenting of certain lands to Natrona County, Wyo., for public-park purposes; S. 4211. An act authorizing preliminary examination and survey to be made of the Intracoastal Waterway in Louisiana and

Texas:

S. 4469. An act to extend the time for the construction of a bridge or bridges and trestles over the navigable channels of the mouth of the Mobile River in the State of Alabama; S. 4536. An act to authorize the building of a bridge across the

Peedee River in South Carolina;

S. 4548. An act declaring Bear Creek in Humphreys, Leflore, and Sunflower Counties, Miss., to be a nonnavigable stream; and S. 4552. An act to incorporate the Belleau Wood Memorial Association.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION-CONFERENCE REPORT.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report upon the bill (H. R. 14408) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, and prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, and for other purposes

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will read the conference report.

The Clerk read the conference report.

[For conference report see pp. 5196-5198.] Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, as explanatory of the provisions of the bill as it was returned from the Senate, and as it has come from the conference, I insert the follow	ing:

Bill as passed by House carriedBill as passed by Senate carried	$154, 582, 240, 35 156, 835, 086, 46
Senate increase	2, 252, 846, 11
From this increase the Senate receded from The House conferees yielded on There is involved in amendments in disagreement	157, 709, 32 1, 322, 636, 79 772, 500, 00
	2, 252, 846, 11
And the conferees of both Houses yielded on	117, 635, 00
Of the sum involved in amendment in disagreement it is proposed to yield on	572, 500, 00
which will be proposed is concurred in bill will carry Bill as passed by House	156, 359, 742, 14 154, 582, 240, 35
Or an increase over bill as passed by House of_	1, 777, 501, 79
Amounts already yieldedAmounts on which it is proposed to yield	1, 322, 686, 79 572, 500, 00

1, 777, 501, 79 The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from Illinois yield? Mr. MADDEN. Yes.

Less amendment No. 21_____

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. I would like to ask the gentleman with reference to the provisions on the top of page 51, $300,000, inserted by the Senate. Do I understand that that remains in the bill?

Mr. MADDEN. That has been agreed to.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. The Post Office Department has been cutting down the service. Do I understand that with this provision it will permit them to take care of the demands for the increase in the carrier service between now and the 1st of

Mr. MADDEN. This is all they ask; and if it does not take care of them, we are not to blame.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. And it is the full amount recommended by the Bureau of the Budget?

Mr. MADDEN. Yes.

Mr. DALLINGER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MADDEN. Yes. Mr. DALLINGER. Why were amendments 59 and 60 dropped? Mr. MADDEN. The Senate receded. That is the first reason, and the next reason is that they did not apply to anything in the bill. Amendment 59 reads as follows:

Provided, That no part of the moneys appropriated in this paragraph shall be used or expended for making such changes in private establishments or for the purchase or acquirement of any article or articles that at the time of the proposed changes, purchase, or acquirement can be made, manufactured, or produced in any of the Government navy yards of the United States, if time and facilities permit.

There is not a dollar appropriated in the paragraph to which the amendment was added, so the amendment would be just so much waste paper. The reason why amendment No. 60, a similar amendment, was not adopted, is that it applies to a provision in the bill merely to pay matters that have already been closed, where the work has been stopped. There was no rhyme or reason in the amendments. They did not apply to anything.

Mr. DALLINGER. Is the gentleman aware that on page

5002 of the Congressional Record it is stated that the amendments were agreed to?

Mr. MADDEN. It does not make any difference what the RECORD shows. We are dealing with the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the first amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 22: Page 8, after line 14, insert:

" OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT.

"The appropriation of $25,000 for traveling and other expenses of the President of the United States for the fiscal year 1923 is hereby continued and made available for the same purposes until expended."

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to recede and concur. Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield to me for five minutes?

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I do not want to appear ungracious, but I do wish to enter my earnest protest against the adoption of this amendment. I am sure I need not say that my opposition is neither personal nor political. The House will remember that traveling expenses for the President were first provided during the term of President Taft. It is provided that $25,000 be appropriated, to be used by the President during the year for which it is appropriated, and that at the end of the fiscal year the amount unexpended be turned back into the Treasury. And this year for the first time this fund was made available for official entertainment as well as traveling, which is entirely unjustifiable. The President of the United States draws a salary of $75,000 a year, and these traveling expenses are provided in addition.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield? Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Yes. Mr. MADDEN. Of course, the gentleman from Tennessee knows that for the first time in the history of the United States the President of the United States is required to pay $18,000 of income tax out of his salary.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. That is true, and every Member of Congress and every public official of the United States is required to pay an income tax upon his salary as well.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Except judges.
Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. This amounts to simply this:
I understand there is some $18,000 unexpended up to the present time out of the traveling expenses appropriated for the President during the present fiscal year. Just how much of that unexpended balance will be expended between now and July 1 of course no one knows, but next year the President has been provided with the usual appropriation of $25,000, and whatever is unexpended will be added to that amount.

It is increasing the expenses of the President for the next fiscal year by whatever amount is unexpended, and I think at this time, when the taxpayers are being burdened by expense after expense, when we are adding new burdens as we did awhile ago with reference to the committee to be appointed from the Committee on Agriculture, there ought to be a time when we should stop adding to the heavy expenses of government and practice a little economy. We ought not to appropriate this additional money for the next year. I am in favor of the President of the United States going around among the people of the country. I am in favor of giving him every opportunity and giving to the people of this country every opportunity to see the President. It was for that reason that the $25,000 was originally appropriated, but surely $25,000 each year is sufficient for that purpose, and I am opposed to this amendment. It may not be sufficient for a large party of invited guests, but the appropriation was never intended for It will surely be sufficient for the President and a reasonable number of guests for his trip to Alaska and through the West, which I understand is contemplated this summer.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, just a word. I simply wish to say that Mrs. Harding has been very ill for almost all of the last year. The President has not traveled much during the period of her illness. He anticipates leaving here on the 5th of March with Mrs. Harding in order to enable her to recuperate. Later on the President is going to travel across the continent to Alaska, where he hopes to be able to acquire information beneficial to the people of the United States. He will be unable to pay the expenses of the travel which he proposes out of the $25,000 for next year. He will have an unexpended balance out of this year's travel allowance of perhaps ten or twelve thousand dollars. Surely nobody in the United States would ask the President to travel on Government business at his own expense. It is true that this is equivalent to an additional appropriation, as the gentleman from Tennessee says, but under all of the circumstances I think we ought to do what is proposed in this amendment, and I hope the House will agree to the recommendation which we make, namely, transfer the unexpended balance of the President's 1923 travel appropriation to 1924 and make it available for expenditure by the President during 1924.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to

the amendment.

The question was taken, and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. BLANTON. I ask for a division.

The House divided; and there were-ayes 158, noes 32.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ANDREW of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on farm

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The extension of remarks referred to is here printed in full

as follows

Mr. ANDREW of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, the procedure of the House in the handling of this bill reflects no credit upon our reputation as a deliberative body. In fact, the methods by which it is being jammed through the House and Senate scarcely seem possible were they not matters of fact. The bill as reported by the committee was only agreed upon in committee three days before it was brought up for discussion on this floor and only six days before this session of Congress is bound to close. No copy of it was available to Members of the House more than 24 hours before it was introduced under a special rule which not only limited the time of debate upon but made it impossible to consider it section by section. There has been no adequate opportunity for Members not on the Banking and Currency Committee to study the various provisions of the 98 pages of the bill. There has been no opportunity under the rule by which the bill has been considered to amend it in detail.

This measure if it becomes law marks one more step in the substitution of Government money for private capital and Government ownership for private management. It proposes to establish 12 new Government banks with a capital drawn from the taxpayers' pockets of $60,000,000, and to allow these banks to issue bonds to the extent of $600,000,000, for the payment of which the Government will be morally if not legally liable. It has been said that what this country needs is less Government in business and more business in Government. And in line with that policy the railroads, which had been taken over by the Government during the war, were returned to private management. The adoption of this measure means, however, a direct repudiation of that policy. And it is hard to see where in the future this will lead us. If we are to use the taxpayers' money to support farming and shipping, we might quite as reasonably use it to support fishing, manufacturing, and the railroads. If we are to have Government banks created to lend money to the farmers, ought we not also to create Government banks to lend money to automobile manufacturers, to the shoe industry, or to mining companies?

Only a fortnight ago the House expressed its opinion by a large majority against further issue of tax-exempt securities, the existence of which is practically nullifying the graded income tax, yet this bill authorizes the issuance of $600,000,000 additional tax-exempt securities.

But what is even more deplorable, the banking principles involved in the act, as the Secretary of the Treasury has pointed out, are fundamentally dangerous and unsound. Propointed out, are fundamentally dangerous and unsound. Pro-vision, for instance, is made for the loan of money for consider able periods of time upon perishable products subject to un-predictable fluctuations in price and which are peculiarly undependable for realization. In the already existing farmloan banks loans are authorized upon mortgages only up to 50 per cent of the value of the land and 20 per cent of the permanent insured improvements, but, according to the provisions of this bill, the proposed new Government banks will be able to lend up to 75 per cent of the value of warehouse certificates and live stock, which are far less stable in value than mortgages upon land. It is not at all unlikely, if these banks are established, that some time in the not distant future when violent declines occur in the prices of produce upon which one or another of these institutions have loaned money, Congress will be called upon to make good the losses. Our Government will naturally be held responsible for the solvency of institutions of which it is the sole and only owner.

I am opposed to this measure because I am opposed to the further intrusion of Government in the field of private business. I am opposed to it because it will use the taxpayers' money and the Government's credit to subsidize a particular line of business. I am opposed to it because it will add very substantially to the sum of tax-free securities and render still less fruitful our taxes upon income. And I am even more opposed to it because it contains provisions that are financially unsound and certain to lead to financial disaster.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 24: Page 10, after line 2, insert:

UNITED STATES COAL COMMISSION.

To continue and conclude the investigation under the act entitled "An act to establish a commission to be known as the United States Coal Commission for the purpose of securing information in connection with questions relative to interstate commerce in coal, and for other purposes," including personal services in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, $400,000, to remain available until September 22, 1923, or until December 31, 1923: Provided, That the President, if he deems the continuance of the work of the commission essential to the public interest, may, by Executive order, continue the commission in force to a date not later than December 31, 1923.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to recede and concur with an amendment.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order against the motion, that the amendment that the gentleman asks to recede and concur in is not authorized by law unless the bill we passed this afternoon is approved by the President.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I wish to say that the point of order made by the gentleman—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair was going to ask the gentleman from Alabama the grounds upon which he makes the point of order.

Mr. BANKHEAD. That there is not authorization of law. The SPEAKER pro tempore. This is a Senate amendment, the Chair is advised.

Mr. MADDEN. Will the gentleman from Alabama yield to me?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Yes.

Mr. MADDEN. The item presented to the House would have been subject to a point of order at the time this bill was passed by the House.

SEVERAL MEMBERS. It was stricken out.

Mr. MADDEN. No; it was not in the bill. It was put in the bill by the Senate, and the rules of the House distinctly provide that a matter subject to a point of order in the House

Mr. BANKHEAD. I confess my error in misunderstanding the facts and I withdraw the point of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman withdraws the point of order. The Clerk will report the motion of the gentleman from Illinois to recede and concur with an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Madden moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 24, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following:

"UNITED STATES COAL COMMISSION,

"For carrying out the provisions of the act entitled 'An act to establish a commission to be known as the United States Coal Commission for the purpose of securing information in connection with questions relative to interstate commerce in coal, and for other purposes,' approved September 22, 1922, as amended, including personal services in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, fiscal years 1923 and 1924, $400,000."

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order that there has been no amendment to the act of September, 1922; that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois is not in order. There is no such amendment to that act.

Mr. MADDEN. The House has passed the bill. Mr. BLANTON. But it has not been signed by the President and has not become the law.

Mr. MADDEN. We do not say anything about having become the law. The House has passed a bill extending the life of the commission and increasing the limit of cost. It is only a matter of description, anyway, and it is not subject to the point of order.

Mr. BLANTON. The point of order is that no act can be amended unless it is a law signed by the President of the United States. There was no such act passed and signed by the President of the United States to the act of September, 1922

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, the question, as I view it, is whether the amendment is germane to the legislative proposal of the Senate. The House has authority to vote money for expenditure under existing law or for something that may be provided in the future. The only question for the decision of the Chair is whether the proposed amendment is germane, and, of course, it is germane. We are not proceeding, so far as this provision is concerned, under the rules of the House, when the bill is first considered in the House, that you can not report any legislation on an appropriation bill. The one question for decision by the Chair is whether the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois is germane to the provision inserted by the Senate, and it being legislation, why, of course, any germane amendment is in order.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Speaker, I think it is entirely immaterial whether the bill passed by the House and Senate becomes a law or not. If it is inaccurate in description, it should be amended by the House as it sees fit, but so far as the Chair has to decide it is a matter immaterial whether it has actually been passed or not. Whether it becomes a law or not, it makes no difference for the decision of the Chair.

Mr. MADDEN. It is simply descriptive.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair thinks the only question to be decided at this time is whether or not the amendment is germane to the Senate amendment, and about that there is no question. The other is mere surplusage, and the Chair overrules the point of order.

Mr. MADDEN. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS] in this connection.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I am in favor of the adoption of this amendment. This matter was very thoroughly discussed during the afternoon. As a matter of fact $200,000 has been heretofore appropriated for the coal commission, and about one-half of that amount has been expended. Your committee had before it the chairman of the coal commission and the Secretary, and they were very positive in the statement that unless an additional appropriation was made the money already expended would be wasted, and the amount unexpended had as well be turned back into the Treasury. The House by an overwhelming vete, consisting of much more than two-thirds, passed a bill this afternoon continuing this coal commission, the life of which expires in September of this year. I want to call the attention of the House very briefly to some of the statements which were made before the committee as to just what is being done and what it is proposed to do with the money which is sought to be appropriated by the Senate amendment. Mr. Hammond, who is chairman—and, by the amendment. Mr. Hammond, who is chairman—and, by the way, I want to say that the members of the commission are composed of Mr. John Hays Hammond as chairman; ex-Vice President Thomas R. Marshall; Mr. Clark Howell, editor of the Atlanta Constitution; Dr. George Otis Smith, Director of the Geological Survey; Mr. Edward T. Devine; Mr. Charles P. Nelll, whom we all remember was former Labor Commissioner.

Mr. Hammond stated, in response to a question by the chairman, as follows:

I feel very confident, Mr. Chairman, that we can justify this appropriation simply from the recommendations of a practical nature that we can make regarding improvement in mining methods alone, in the relations between the operators and the employees, the miners, and in a good many respects in details which in themselves are of no great import, but which cumulatively are of great importance in reducing the costs of operation. I do not like to go into that matter at much length here because it is a lengthy subject, and I know you are pressed for time, but I am confident that simply from the engineering recommendations we will justify this appropriation many times over yearly. The industry is the worst conducted industry, from an engineering point of view, that I have ever seen.

Now, we all know Mr. Hammond. We know that he is one of the most prominent and foremost mining engineers in this country, and I am quite sure that every one of us has confidence in his judgment and opinion. Now, in addition to that the chairman asked this question:

Is the commission unanimous in their request for this appropriation?

Mr. SMITH. Yes, sir; and also unanimous in the belief that it would not be worth while to continue this investigation after the 4th of March unless this additional appropriation is allowed, but that we should stop the investigation then and save what they can of the appropriation already made.

The CHAIRMAN. The commission is unanimous in the belief that the investigation will result in something worth while, if the additional money is appropriated?

Mr. HAMMOND. We will guarantee it.

Mr. SMITH. I would like to add the fact that the commission believes that it has had something to do, or a good deal to do, with settling the labor difficulties, so that we are already assured, and were assured a month ago, that there would be no strike on April 1, with the result that the coal market—that is, the soft-coal market—has been very much softened, and the result is that in four weeks. I think, as if figured it for the chairman, the average price for bitminious coal has gone down 84 cents, which means a material saving to the Government itself.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Tennessee has expired.

Mr. MADDEN. I yield to the gentleman two minutes more. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Tennessee is recognized for two minutes more.

Mr. MADDEN. By the way, if the gentleman will yield there, I wish to say that some public officials came before our committee and stated that their price that they paid for coal had fallen about 84 cents a ton.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Yes. I think a great deal of credit is due to this coal commission for that fact, and as stated I think a great deal of by Mr. Smith, this coal commission had a great deal to do with averting a strike on April 1 and with settling the difficulty between the operators and the miners.

Now what more? The Chairman asked:

The CHAIRMAN. Do you think the commission contributed to that Mr. SMITH. We have been blamed for it by some of the coal operators.

Mr. Hammond. I think the operators themselves admit that. Of course, we are abused because we despoiled some of them of their

Mr. SMITH. Ordinarily that labor situation is not settled until just on the eve of April 1, if it is settled at all.

The CHARMAN. Is it settled now?

Mr. SMITH. Practically all the districts have signed up.

Now, gentlemen, I think in view of what this coal commission has done, and in view of what has been promised us by Mr. Hammond, the chairman of the commission, and in view of the fact that there has been a reduction already in the price of bituminous coal, this appropriation ought to be granted, because certainly if by granting this appropriation we can secure a further reduction in the price of soft coal to the consumers of this country and avert a coal famine and prevent a high price for coal in the winter, this amount of money is a mere bagatelle compared with what it will mean to the people of this entire country.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I think it safe to say that there has never-been a commission of men better equipped to do a job than the men who compose this coal commission. From all the information that our investigation discloses I have reached the conclusion that the investment of the $200,000 previously appropriated and the $400,000 here proposed to be appropriated will yield a greater return than any other money ever expended from the Public Treasury. I hope the House will concur in the

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the motion to concur in the Senate amendment.

The question was taken, and the motion was agreed to. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next Senate amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 36: Page 18, line 4, insert the following: SUPERINTENDENT OF THE WASHINGTON ASYLUM AND JAIL.

"The superintendent of the Washington Asylum and Jail appointed by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia is hereby directed, authorized, and required to execute the judgments of the law heretofore pronounced and hereafter to be pronounced in the District of Columbia by the courts thereof in all capital cases, and the power and authority heretofore given to and now vested in such commissioners to appoint such superintendent and all appointments to the postion of such superintendent made by such commissioners are hereby ratified and confirmed; and any failure on the part of Congress, either heretofore or hereafter, to make a specific appropriation for the salary or compensation of such superintendent shall not be construed either as an abolition of such position of superintendent of the Washington Asylum and Jail or as a repeal of the power and authority of such commissioners to appoint such superintendent."

Mr. MADDEN, Mr. Speaker, in order that the House may

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, in order that the House may understand what this means, it seems that a man was con-victed of murder in the District; he was adjudged guilty; he was ordered to be executed; but because a specific appropria-tion had not been made to the superintendent of the Washington Asylum and Jail, the court held that there was no man in official authority authorized to execute the judgment of the court. They suspended sentence until some action could be taken. This action is to meet that situation.

Mr. MacGREGOR. Will the man be hanged now? Mr. MADDEN. Yes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. What is the gentleman's motion?

Mr. MADDEN. My motion is to recede and concur in the Senate amendment

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois moves to recede and concur in the Senate amendment. The question is on agreeing to that motion.

The motion was agreed to.
The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next Senate amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 40: Page 34, line 9, insert the following: "To enable the Secretary of Agriculture, In cooperation with the Secretary of War, to investigate and develop the use of the airplane as a means of distributing insecticides for the control of the boll weevil and other cotton insects, including the employment of persons and means in the city of Washington. D. C., and elsewhere, and all other necessary expenses, to remain available until expended, $40,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary."

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to recede and concur with the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows

Mr. Madden moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 40, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: "In lieu of the word 'expended' in the matter inserted by said amendment, insert the following: 'June 30, 1924'."

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I wish to say that experiments have been made by the airplane for the elimination or eradication of certain insects which affect agricultural crops and it has been a great success. The people of the South, many of them in the cotton-raising belt, want to try the airplane method to do away with the boll weevil, and from what information I have it leads me to conclude that the experiment is worth while. If it succeeds, it will save hundreds of millions of dollars to the cotton-raising business.

The question is on the motion The SPEAKER pro tempore.

of the gentleman from Illinois.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will read the next amendment.

The Clerk read Senate amendment 54, as follows:

MARSHALS, DISTRICT ATTORNEYS, CLERKS, AND OTHER EXPENSES OF UNITED STATES COURTS.

Expenses of additional district courts: For expenses of courts held in any judicial district pursuant to assignment under the act approved September 14, 1922, or other laws, of a judge from without that district, to be immediately available and to remain available until June 30, 1924, $300,000: Provided, That this appropriation shall be construed as additional and supplementary to the several appropriations for the judiciary, for the fiscal years 1923 and 1924, for the employment and expenses of assistant district attorneys, deputy marshals, deputy clerks, and all other officers and employees of the courts, the payment of rent of court rooms, fees of witnesses and jurors, pay of bailiffs, and all other necessary expenses connected with or incident to the holding of court in any judicial district by a judge other than the judge or judges appointed for the judicial district in which the court is held: Provided further, That expenditures shall not be required to be made directly from this appropriation, but the expenses of courts held in any judicial district by a visiting judge shall be determined by the Attorney General from time to time, under such regulations as he may prescribe, his determination of the amount of such expenses in any case to be conclusive, and to the extent that he finds any expenses are so incurred he may direct payment from such regular appropriations and the transfer thereto from this additional appropriation of the amount of such expenses: Provided further, That so much as may be necessary of this sum may be used, under the direction of the Supervising Architect of the Treasury, in providing additional court rooms in public buildings already erected to accommodate the additional judges recently appointed in holding court therein.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to recede and concurrity to the fellowing accommendate.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to recede and concur with the following amendment:

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Madden moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 54, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amend-ment insert the sum "$100,000."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Illinois.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will read the next amendment.

The Clerk read Senate amendment 66, as follows:

SEVENTEENTH INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS AGAINST ALCOHOLISM.

For expenses of delegates, not exceeding 10 in number, to be designated by the President to the Seventeenth International Congress Against Alcoholism, at Copenhagen, Denmark, to be held in 1923, including the cost of secretarial and stenographic work and transcription of the report, $7,500.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, for over 17 years the Government of the United States has participated in these conventions. I move to recede and concur.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Illinois.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Blanton) there were—ayes 173, noes 17.

So the motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will read the next amendment.

The Clerk read Senate amendment 72, as follows:

The Clerk read Senate amendment 72, as follows:

That the Secretary of War be authorized and directed to continue on the rolls of the War Department the name of John R. Kissinger, late of Company D. One hundred and fifty-seventh Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and also late of the Hospital Corps of the United States Army, and continue to pay him the sum of $100 per month during his natural life pursuant to the act of Congress approved February 15, 1911, notwithstanding the fact that certain payments of pension money may have heretofore been made to said John R. Kissinger under a special act of Congress approved March 2, 1917; and that return of such sums as have been paid contrary to law to said John R. Kissinger under said act of March 2, 1917, shall not be demanded, nor shall any deduction on account of such payment be made from moneys due and payable to him under said act of February 15, 1911.

Mr. Maddden Mr. Sneaker I move to recede and concur-

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to recede and concur.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read Senate amendment No. 76, as follows:

INTERNATIONAL SHOOTING COMPETITION,

To meet the expenses incident to holding on international shooting competition in the United States in connection with the national matches, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War, to be immediately available, and to remain available until December 31, 1923: Provided, That the rifles, pistols, equipment, ammunition, and personal effects of the visiting riflemen from foreign countries be admitted to the United States without the imposition of duty, $25,000.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to recede and concur.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record explanatory of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the Record in the manner indicated. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that no quorum is present.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 11 o'clock and 37 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until to-morrow, Saturday, March 3, 1923, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows 1026. A letter from the Postmaster General of the United States, transmitting claim of James E. Simpson, postmaster at Collinsville, Ill., for credit on account of Government property to the value of $14,051.93 committed to his care and lost through the burglary of the post office at Collinsville, Ill., on December 18, 1920; to the Committee on Claims.

1027. A letter from the Postmaster General of the United States, transmitting claim of J. Walter Payne, postmaster, Paris, Ky., for credit on account of public funds and property of the value of $11,572.06 committed to his care and lost through the burglary of the post office on March 2, 1921; to the Committee on Claims.

1028. A letter from the chairman of the Colorado River Commission, transmitting report of the proceedings of the Colorado River Commission and the compact of agreement entered into between the States of Arizona, California, Colorado, Nevada, New Mexico, Utah, and Wyoming respecting the apportionment of the waters of the Colorado River (H. Doc. No. 605); to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII,

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. H. R. 14429. A bill granting the consent of Congress to the reconstruction, maintenance, and operation of an existing bridge across the Red River between Grand Forks, N. Dak., and East Grand Forks, Minn.; without amendment (Rept. No. 1752). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. H. R. 14428. A bill granting the consent of Congress to the reconstruction, maintenance, and operation of an existing bridge across the Red River between Moorhead, Minn., and Fargo, N. Dak.; without amendment (Rept. No.

Minn., and Fargo, N. Dak.; Without amendment (Rept. No. 1753). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. SWEET: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. H. J. Res. 296. A joint resolution authorizing and directing the accounting officers of the General Accounting Office to allow credit to the disbursing clerk of the United States Veterans' Bureau in certain cases; with amendments (Rept. No. 1754). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows

Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania: A bill (H. R. 14458) to provide for the construction of a waterway from the Ohio River to Lake Erie; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. KLINE of New York: A bill (H. R. 14459) to credit crews of Harvard and Yale with service performed; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. BRITTEN: A bill (H. R. 14460) to amend the act of August 29, 1916 (ch. 47, pp. 578-579, United States Statutes at Large, 64th Cong., 1915-1917, vol. 39, pt. 1); the act of May 22, 1917 (ch. 20, p. 86, United States Statutes at Large, 64th Cong., 1917-1919, vol. 40, pt. 1); and the act of July 11, 1919 (ch. 9, p. 39, United States Statutes at Large, 66th Cong., 1919-1921, vol. 41, pt. 1), relative to the promotion of officers of the line of the Navy by selection; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. JEFFERS of Alabama: A bill (H. R. 14461) to establish the McClellan national forest in the State of Alabama; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. FRENCH: A bill (H. R. 14462) establishing a Naval Reserve Force; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. BURTON: A bill (H. R. 14463) for the purchase of site and the erection of a Federal building at Willoughby, Ohio; to the Committee on Public Bulldings and Grounds.

Also, a bill (H. R. 14464) for the purchase of a site and the erection of a Federal building at Bedford, Ohio; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. HILL: A resolution (H. Res. 572) directing the Federal Prohibition Commissioner to transmit to the House of Representatives copies of all rules and regulations issued by that office in the enforcement of the national prohibition act; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By the SPEAKER (by request): Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Idaho, urging Congress to enact into law the Norris-Sinclair farmer aid bill; to the Committee on Agricul-

Also (by request), memorial of the Legislature of the State of Idaho, recommending that Congress by appropriate legislation provide for proper coordination between the Interstate Commerce Commission and the wage board; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also (by request), memorial of the Legislature of the State of Montana, petitioning Congress to enact such legislation as will provide for a Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway project; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce

By Mr. KISSEL: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Oregon, petitioning Congress to amend the Federal grain standards act; to the Committee on Agriculture.

MONDELL: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Wyoming, requesting Congress to complete the St. Lawrence tidewater project; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. FITZGERALD: A bill (H. R. 14465) granting a pension to Margaret E. McNair; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FOCHT: A bill (H. R. 14466) granting a pension to Barbara Ellen Baker; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Barbara Ellen Baker; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HOGAN: A bill (H. R. 14467) for the relief of Frederick D. W. Baldwin; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. RIORDAN: A bill (H. R. 14468) for the relief of Thomas G. Patten; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. WYANT: A bill (H. R. 14469) granting a pension to Maggie K. Cline; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 14470) granting a pension to Mary C.

Derby; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

7495. By the SPEAKER (by request): Petition of the Priors, urging speedy passage of the amendment to the United States Constitution prohibiting child labor; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

7496. Also (by request), petition of bishop of New Hampshire, Edward M. Parker; Mrs. Percy C. Pennybacker; Mrs. O. S. Lamson; Stanley White, of Armenia America Society; H. M. Bremer; Mrs. Chas. F. Pope; Robert L. Dickinson, of 438 West One hundred and sixteenth Street, New York City; Emily M. Ferry; and Harold Hatch, urging passage of refugee immigration bills now before Congress; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

7497. By Mr. APPLEBY: Petition of consistory and congregation of St. Paul Reformed Church, of Milltown, N. J., urging the passage of the so-called Newton bill; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

7498. By Mr. BURTNESS: Petition of 73 citizens of Lawton, N. Dak., requesting Congress to fix a minimum price on wheat and other farm products to cover cost of production plus a reasonable profit to the producer; to the Committee on Agricul-7499. By Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee: Petition of residents of Trimble, Tenn., opposing House bill 9753 or any other Sunday bill; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

7500. By Mr. GREEN of Iowa: Petition of Adam Schmitz and others, urging extension of relief to the people of the German and Austrian Republics; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

7501. By Mr. GRIFFIN: Petition of the Taxpayers' Alliance of the Borough of the Bronx, calling attention to the coal emergency and urging immediate Government control of the situation; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

7502. By Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania: Petition of Buena Vista (Pa.) Council, Order of Independent Americans, protesting against increase of 3 per cent quota plan of immigration; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

7503. Also, petition of Turtle Creek Council, Fraternal Patriotic Americans, praying for restriction of immigration; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

7504. By Mr. KISSEL: Petition of Bedford and Park Avenues Board of Trade, of Brooklyn, N. Y., favoring the establishment of a national police bureau; to the Committee on the Judiciary 7505. Also, petition of Flatbush Chamber of Commerce (Inc.), New York City, N. Y., approving Senate bill 4202, creating a national police bureau; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

7506. Also, petition of William W. Hasseck, United States Public Health Service, Hospital No. 80, Fort Lyon, Colo., asking for home treatment of veterans with pay through legisla-tion; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

7507. By Mr. MEAD: Petition of Scott & Williams, New York, N. Y., urging the passage of the Sterling-Lehlbach bill; to the Committee on Reform in the Civil Service.

7508. By Mr. ROUSE: Petition of 124 citizens of Campbell County, Ky., protesting against the enactment of any legisla-tion toward the change of the present immigration laws that will permit admission of aliens other than provided by present laws; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

7509. By Mr. SABATH: Petition of Jesse M. Yonan, M. D., Ira A. David, D. D. S., Rev. Haidow Ablahat, Rev. S. David, Rev. Raiel S. Newey, Rev. George Azoo, Mr. Andrew D. Ur-Rev. Raiel S. Newey, Rev. George Azoo, Mr. Andrew D. Urshan, Mr. Jonothan S. Colla, all of Chicago, Ill., urging an increase in the Assyrian immigration quota; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

7510. By Mr. SMITH of Idaho: Petition of the board of directors of the Gem Irrigation District, Homedale, Idaho, on February 6, 1923, urging a reduction in freight rates; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

7511. Also, petition of the board of directors of the Oakley Canal Co., Oakley, Idaho, urging the reduction of freight rates; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

7512. By Mr. TINKHAM: Petition of Massachusetts Commandery of the Military Order of Foreign Wars of the United States, favoring the construction of an archives building; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

7513. Also, petition of Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, Massachusetts Department, favoring the enactment into law of Senate bill 1565; to the Committee on Military 7514. Also, petition of Oriskany Unit, Boston Branch, of the Steuben Society of America, favoring a conference of nations being called of those nations involved in the war to write a new treaty of peace; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.